TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE
The Earl of EGLINGTON,
Mercy and Peace through Jesus Christ.

My right Noble Lord,

The reason of my sending forth of this piece, under your Lordships name, is, that by this means I may pay home before I die, the old debt which I owe to your Lordship, and to the whole noble family, for countenancing and encouraging me openly in my Ministry, all the while I was in Irwin near your Lordship, full twenty yeares.

And the reason why I do confess my debt now, and go about to discharge some part of it, at this time of your Lordships restraint in England, is, because when I call to minde the time of my restraint about some thirty yeares ago, (when the High Commission Court of Prelates procured my confinement within a little village in the North beyond Aberdein, in regard I could not give them satisfaction by receiving the yoke of some Popish ceremonies, imposed then then upon the Minifttry, ) I cannot forget how comfortable your Lordship was to me then, and what paines and travel you endured summer and winter without wearying, until they who at that time had power to loose me from my confinement, being made sensible, some of them of the iniquity, and all of them of the inexpediencie of keeping me in bonds, I was restored to the free and full use of my Miniftry. Wherefore I do esteem it a part of due gratitude, to do what in me lieth, to be comfortable to your Lordship in this your present condition; and do heartily pray to God that your exercise and trouble, may prove a meanes of your happiness. It is true indeed, that happiness without this meanes were to be wished, if so it were Gods pleasure; but unto God onely (in whose hands alone it is to make men blessed, and in whose friendship and favour through Christ only men are really blessed) it doth belong, as to choose the man to whom, so also to choose the meanes whereby, and the manner how he will communicate the right and possession of true blessedness. If happiness were at mens wish and carving, no man would choose God for his chief good, nor Gods way to bring his felicity about; for the multitude of men do say, Psal. 4. 6. Who will shew us any good?

The good which God doth shew unto them, and the way how by reconciliation with himself, and walking humbly and uprightly before him, they may have God to be their rich reward, is not the thing they love to have; but corn and wine and oile, and whatsoever may best please their fleshly fancy, is their desire. And of this the Lord
The Epistle Dedicatory.

Lord doth complain, Psal. 81. 11. My people, faith he, would not hearken to my voice, and Israel would none of me. And what was it which they did preferre unto God? they loved to have their own will in this world, whatsoever should befall them after death; they loved rather to have their own earthly desires satisfied, then to have the friendship of God: and their choice was given unto them to their owne destruction. So (faith the Lord) I gave them over to their owne hearts lust, and they walked in the counsell of their owne heart. Few, when they look upon the course which the world doth runne after, yea very few do preferre the fellowship of God reconciled to them in Christ, before riches, honour, and sensual pleasure: For, Who will shew us any good? is that which many do say, Psal. 4. 6. but, Lord, lift thou up the light of thy countenance uppon us, is the petition of the few opposed to the multitude; and even those few godly would wish to go to heaven with ease, and to be free from trouble in their journey, if it were the Lords will, as we may see in the prayer of Jabez, 1. Chron. 4. 10. Who called on the God of Israel saying, Oh that thou wouldest bless me indeed, and enlarge my coast, and that thine hand might be with me, and that thou wouldest keep me from evil, that it may not grieve me. But our loving and wise God, who knoweth perfectly what is fittest for every man, doth crosse and correct those natural desires of his children. And howsoever he will now and then possibly grant the prayer of Jabez to some of his people, yet he hath appointed this to be the ordinary road-way to heaven, which the the Apostle pointeth forth to us, \textit{Acts 14. 22.}
\textit{We must through much tribulation enter into the Kingdom of God.}

And this course of carrying of God's children through many afflictions, doth no ways hinder their happiness; for how many soever their crosses be, yet this holdeth alwayes fast, \textit{Psal. 65. 4.} \textit{Blessed is the man whom thou choosest, and causest to approach unto thee.} If therefore by plurality of chastisements, the Lord shall draw, and drive them to seek remission of sinnes and reconciliation with himself, and the renewed sense thereof through Christ, and shall by the rod hedge them within the way of walking with him in a friendly communion: they lose nothing except their lusts, and do gain eternal blessedness. And certainly there is so much reliques of natural corruption, so strong inclinations unto sinne, so many actual outbreaks, and grosse transgressions to be found in the most precious Saints, that there is no wonder the Lord should visit their trespasses with the rod, and their iniquity with stripes; but all the wonder is, that he will not take his loving kindnes utterly from them. There is also so great need of loosing their affections from what seemeth love-worthy in this world; so great need of raising the hearts of the heires of Salvation unto the seeking of a Kingdom, which cannot be shaken, and of a crown uncorruptible; as all reason doth call for the mixture of troubles with earthly comforts, left the sweetnesse of temporary vanities should prove unto them poisionable. Moreover, the experience of the Saints set down in Scripture, and especially ally in the Psalms, doth make it manifest, that by the variety of outward and inward troubles the faith of God's children hath been tried, and trained to farther strength. Their love, hope, and patience, and all other spiritual graces in them have been fostered and augmented, as they have been made joyfully and thankfully to subscribe this truth, Psal. 94. 12. Blessed is the man whom thou chastenest, O Lord, and teachest him out of thy Law. This is the language of the Lord's present dispensation toward his people, and the lesson which his Providence doth recommend to us all, that we may learn it to our good: whereunto if this piece shall contribute any thing for the edifying of those who shall be pleased to read it; and in special, if it shall be acceptable to your Lordship, this shall do much more then recompence the labour of

Your Lordships obliged servant
in the Gospel,

DAVID DICKSON.
Christian Reader,

He acceptance which the former fifty Psalms have found, doth give me encouragement sufficient to offer thee other fifty to thy view also, and to give thee the last fifty so soon as the Lord shall enable me: I am still sparing of thy time, and do strive to point forth, not all the Doctrines which may be deduced from the words; but so many only as being joined together and compared with the Text, may give unto thee both the sense and the use thereof. It is not possible to express grave purposes sufficiently without a volume; nor to open mysteries in few words, unto thy satisfaction, who canst not choose but wish to have more of the purpose, whereof thou lovest to hear much, and findest but a little of it hinted at. No sort of writing, except that of the Scripture, hath all perfections; but this advantage thou hast by this mould, thou shalt not read long till thou meet with matter worthy of thy meditation; and whenever thou meetest with a word spoken in season, or fit for thy condition, thou mayest close thy reading for the time, without losing any long discourse, and feed upon what thou hast found till it be digested; and then return when thou wilt, and seek for as much as may be another morsel. For the reading of many diverse doctrines, without some interlaced meditation, is like eating of mawrow without bread, and cannot but cloy thee for the time, or give thee a surfeit of wholesome food; which evil, if it befal thee, may be helped for after-time by short ejaculations of a word of prayer whilst thou art reading, a cording as the purpose calleth thee to seek the Lords blessing unto that which thou readest, whose presence that thou mayest finde comfortable, is the prayer of

Thy servant in the Gospel,

DAVID DICKSON.

The mistakes in the printing which have escaped the Press in the former pieces, and may possibly also escape it hereafter, I pray thee excuse; because I am at such a distance, as I can neither timely prevent them, nor mark them as Errata that thou mightest correct them.
A BRIEF EXPOSITION

Upon the other fifty Psalms.

PSAL. LI.

To the chief Musician. A Psalm of David, when Nathan the Prophet came unto him, after he had gone into Bathsheba.

He Psalms in the said sense of his guiltinesse, prayeth for remission of sinne, with an eye to the Lords large mercy, ver. 1, 2, and followeth his petition with a deep and hearty confession of his sinfulnesse, ver. 3, 4, 5, 6. He prayeth the second time for remission of sinne, with an eye toward the blood of the Messiah, ver. 7, and followeth it with another petition for comfort to his afflicted spirit, ver. 8. He prayeth for remission of sins the third time, ver. 9, and followeth it with another petition for renewed comfort of the holy Spirit, and for removal of felt wrath, with a promise of making use thereof, to the edification of Gods people, ver. 10, 11, 12, 13. He prayeth for remission of sinne the fourth time, and namely of that particular sinne, wherewith for the present his conscience was most troubled, ver. 14, and he followeth it with another petition for enabling of him for a more spiritual & sincere manner of serving God hereafter, renouncing all confidence in the external ceremonies of the Law, ver. 15, 16, 17. And last of all, he prayeth for mercy to the Church, ver. 18, 19.

From the Inscription, Learn, 1. How soone the most mortified lust may be kindled and break forth like fire in the embers, when it meeteth with powder; how frail the strongest of the Saints are in themselves, when they are tempted to sinne; and what need he who standeth hath to take heed left he fall: for the holy Prophet, the sweet singer of Israel is here fouly defiled by his going into Bathsheba. 2. How fast asleep in sinne, even the most watchful watchman may fall, and that he cannot at all awake of himself, till God of his grace (who in love pursueth fugitives) by some means of his own chusing stir up his conscience, as here is evidenced in the case of the Psalmist, who did lie still in his sin secure, till Nathan the Prophet came unto him. 3. How faithful Ministers ought to be in their proper charges, reproving sinne, even in greatest personages, when God doth call them unto it: and how acceptable their reproof should be to the honest heart, as Nathan the Prophet, David's Seer, his coming unto David, and rebuking him after the open knowledge of his sinne; and David's acceptance of this office at his hands; and the honourable mention made of his fidelity here do teach us. 4. How little a true penitent doth stand to shame himself, when his sin hath dishonoured God, and he feeth that the confession of it may glorifie God; and how far the Pen-men of holy Scripture do differ in this point from the writers of humane histories, as David in the Inscription of this Psalm doth give proof.

Ver. 1. H ave mercy upon me, O God, according to thy loving kindness: according unto the multitude of thy tender mercies blot out my transgressions.

2. Wash me throughly from mine iniquity, and cleanse me from my sin.

In this first affectionate prayer for remission of sins, Learn, 1. As the conscience, till it be awakened by God, cannot apprehend how displeasent sin is to God; how it meriteth wrath, and how unsupportable a burden it is to the sinner, when he is charged sied when thou speakest, and be clear when thou judgest.

5. Behold, I was flapen in iniquity: and in sinne did my mother conceive me.

6. Behold, thou desirest truth in the inward parts: and in the hidden part thou shalt make me to know wisdom.

Here he maketh confession of his sin and sinfulness, and aggravateth his guiltinesse, from the very root of original sinne, and subscribeth whatsoever God hath spoken of mans sinful nature, and deserved punishment in the Scripture, approving himself for the sincerity of his confession unto God. Whence learn,

1. Whosoever would have mercy and pardon of his sin from God, must acknowledge his sin and debt, and must take part with God, and with justice against himself, because the Psalmist here giveth this for a reason of his hope of pardon, for I acknowledge my transgression.

2. Albeit God hath pardoned sin to a penitent soul, and albeit his Ministers have made declaration of the pardon to him, yet the conscience will not pronounce the sentence of absolution, but still present the sin as unpardoned, till God make it quiet by his immediate intimation; for David after that Nathan had told him from the Lord, that his iniquity was pardoned, still findeth the conscience pursuing for the guilt, my sinne is ever before me.

3. The dividing of the grant of pardon from the effectual intimation thereof unto the conscience, is done in Gods wisdome and mercy towards his child for good: for here it ripeneth repentance, and bringeth forth this deep confession, I acknowledge mine iniquity, and my sinne is ever before me.

4. It is most suitable for true repentance, to pitch upon some particular sin, in the vileness whereof the evil of other sins may be taken up and lamented against thee have I done this evill; he meaneth the particular whereof Nathan charged him in the matter of Uriah.

5. The material injury and hurt of a sinful action may resolve upon a creature, but the formall obliquity of the action resolverth upon the law or command of God, and upon his soveraigne authority which gave the law; against thee, thee have I sinned.

6. If the injury done to the creature, could be severed from the offence done to God, the conscience would not be so much troubled for the first as for the last; or if the injury done to God against so many obligations, be compared with the injury done to the creature; the injury done to God is so high, as it comprehender all the challenge which the creature could make for its part, and leaveth nothing to the creature to say besides: Therefore faith he, against thee, these only have I sinned, and done this evil in thy sight. 7. Albeit no man should challenge for a wrong done by one man to another, and in particular for a wrong done to a subject by a Prince or Ruler, yet will the Lord challenge for it, and bring the man to an account for it, against thee, these only have I sinned. 8. How closely, likewise, the circumstances of a sinful action be conveyed, that men should not see the wilfulness thereof; yet before God all the matter is plain: I have done this evil in thy sight, faith he. 9. The conscience rightly wakened in the sense of any cannot but justify what God hath spoken in his Word of man's iniquity; and of whatsoever God hath done, or shall do in the punishing of sin: for David maketh this deep confession of his against himself, that God may be justified when he speaketh, and clear when he is judged. 10. Although presumptuous man will not stand to examine, judge, and pass sentence upon God, and his words, and his works; yet shall no man be able to bear a blot upon God; but every conscience when awake, shall be found to blame the man, and to justify God in all his words and proceedings, as David is forced to blame himself here, that God may be justified when he speaketh, and clear when he is judged. 11. As original sin is common to all men by natural propagation from their parents, so it is not abolished out of the most holy in this life; and as it is found to utter itself by actual transgressions, in the children of God, so must the evil thereof be acknowledged by them, and that not to extenuate, but to aggravate their sin thereby, as David sheweth here, saying, Behold, I was shapen in iniquity; and in sin did my mother conceive me. 12. No confession of sin, nor any other part of God's worship giveth ease to the minde, or is acceptable to God, except it be done in sincerity and truth, and when it is done in spirit and truth, it is acceptable to God, and giveth ease to the conscience; Behold, faith i. 21. After his deep confession thou dost rest, truth in the inward parts. 13. The last operation of God's grace in us, is worthy to be observed, acknowledged, and made use of, as an evidence that God hath some work in us, wherein he taketh pleasure; Behold (faith, David to God) thou dost rest, or delightest in truth in the inward parts. 14. When a man hath found some peace of grace in himself, he may expect to finde yet more grace from God, as David after this observation of grace given unto him, to make a sincere confession of his sin, doth expect that God shall effectually teach him more wisdom, or wise behaviour, in his sight. In the hidden part thou wilt make me to know wisdom; that is, thou wilt make my conscience judge yet more impartially of my native sinfulness, and wilt teach me to walk more circumspectly before thee, in the sense of my sinfulness.

Ver. 7. Purge me with hysope, and I shall be clean: wash me and I shall be whiter then snow.

8. Make me to hear joy and gladness: that the bones which thou hast broken may rejoice.

He prayeth for remission of sin the second time, with an eye to the blood of the Messiah Christ, and joyneth with it, a petition for comfort to his afflicted spirit. Whence learn, 1. No lefle loathsome then leprous is the light of sin, when it is looked upon as unpardon'd; and nothing lefle then the blood of Christ signified by the blood of the clean bird slain to cleanse the leper, can purge a man of it, for David doth look unto the manner of cleansing the leper, as it is set down, Levit. 14. Where two birds were taken, and one of them slain, and the living bird being dipped with hysope in the blood of the slain bird, was let fly away, to signifie the leprous sinners deliverance from perdition by the blood of that cleanly bird Jesus Christ; purge me with hysope, faith he. 2. Whatsoever application hath been made to a man of Christ's blood in justification of his person, it doth not hinder, but rather doth open a way unto the renewed acts of application thereof, according as new sins do draw on new guiltiness: for here justified David prayeth to be yet again purged with hysope. 3. Renewed acts of remission of sin granted, by new application of the virtue of Christ's blood, cleanseth the conscience of the guilt of sin, and cleareth the man before God's justice, purge me with hysope, and I shall be clean, faith he. 4. Howsoever remission of the guilt for Christ's sake, be inseparable from the imputation of righteousness for Christ's sake, yet may these two be distinguished, and distinctly looked upon for the believers comfort; for here David looking on the removing of the guiltiness of sin by Christ's death, faith, purge me with hysope, and I shall be clean: and looking upon the imputation of Christ's righteousness, or obedience even unto the death, he faith, Wash me and I shall be whiter then snow.

Now
Now that these two branches of this mercy are distinguishable, may appear from this, that as to be freed from eternal torment is one benefit, put case a man were annihilated in his loosing from it; and to be not only freed from eternal torment, but also made blessed by the gift of eternal life, is another and a greater benefit: So removing the guilt of sin, in relation to the removing of punishment is one thing, and the assignation of Christ's righteousness in relation to eternal life is another thing; and these two benefits both of them are purchased by Christ's perfect obedience unto the death, and are helden forth; Levit. 14. for after the delivery of the leper from death (figured and symbolized by the letting go of the living bird, dipped in the blood of the slaine bird) the cloathing of the leper with righteousness, is figured and symbolized by the washing of the man, and putting clean cloaths upon him. Now it is not the mans personal sanctification inherent, (which in every man is joyned with much pollution) that maketh him clean, but the imputation of Christ's righteousness; This maketh him whiter then snow... As we must not neglect the Ordinances of God, but must use them carefully for obedience unto God, and for strengthening of our faith, so we must not rest upon them, but seek in unto the signification, substance, and end of them, which is Christ; as here David seeketh perfect pardon by Christ's blood, perfect purging and cleansing through him under the terms of purging with hypos and washing. 6. The grief and torment which followeth sinne, and is felt by a wounded spirit, even in the children of God, in the time of their repentance, is greater then ever the pleasure of sin was to them, as David sheweth here, who, speaketh of his vexation, and wounded spirit, as of the painfulllest trouble which can fall upon the body: for by the bones which thou hast broken, he meaneth the chastisement of his spirit, inflicted of God. 7. Nothing can heal this wound of the spirit, save the hand that made it; nothing but God's lively application of his word of Grace and pardon to the guilty sinner can do it; for David will not rest with what Nathan had spoken, till God speak the same effectually unto him; make me to hear joy and gladness. 8. As there is no sorrow so deep, as the sense of God's displeasure, so there is no joy to refreshing as the inward consolation of God's Spirit; for Davids broken bones will rejoice, if God will speak peace to his soul: make me to hear joy and gladness; then the bones which thou hast broken, may rejoice.
Ver. 9. Hide thy face from my sins, and blot out all mine iniquities.

10. Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me.

11. Cast me not away from thy presence; and take not thy holy Spirit from me.

12. Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation, and uphold me with thy free Spirit.

13. Then will I teach transgressors thy ways, and sinners shall be converted unto thee.

He prayeth for remission of sin the third time, ver. 9. And joyneth therewith a petition for rectifying his sad condition; first by renovation of that grace which was decayed, and as it were lost in his senses, ver. 10. Secondly, by preventing his deserved and feared separation from God, & from communion with his Spirit, ver. 11. Thirdly, by repairing and restoring of his some-time gracious condition, and setting him therein by the Spirit of adoption, ver. 12. And then he promiseth to make good that thereof for the comfort and edification of other sinners, ver. 13. Wherefore learn, 1. Sin is soon committed, and guiltiness and misery soon drawn on, but not soone and easily removed; many a cry to God may be uttered in the sense of felt displeasure of God, and fear of more and more evill following on it, before the soul finds freedom from it, as this frequently repeated petition for pardon, and these expressions here let down do make evident. 2. Earnestness of affection maketh often repetition not to be babbling, and when that which most pleaseth us is most pressed, and insisted upon by us in our prayer, it is no vain repetition or idle multiplication of words, as here is to be seen. 3. Sin seen in its own shape, is a loathsome sight to God, and horrible to the sinner; which loathsome sight nothing can remove, save the Lords voluntary forgiving of it, and his not setting it before his own face, to be pursued in severe justice, Hide thy face from my sins. 4. As one sin doth waken up the conscience of many other sins, so nothing can quiet the conscience about that one sin, except both it and all other sins be forgiven, therefore faith he, Blot out all mine iniquities. 5. A sincere penitent is no lesse de tous of renovation and sanctification then he is of forgivenes de of sin, for with blot out all mine iniquities, iniquities, he joyneth create in me a clean heart, and renew a right spirit within me. 6. Albeit sin against the conscience in a renewed man, defileth it throughly, and deface the work of the holy Spirit, openeth the flood-gate of natural corruption, to the pollution of the whole frame of a holy heart; openeth the way unto, and strengthens the work of an evil and deluding spirit; yet no principle of grace in the renewed man is able to remove this evil; but the removing and remedying of it must be by the immediate work of God’s own omnipotent hand. This work is no less: then creation, therefore faith he, create in me a clean heart, and renew a right spirit within me; that is, it is not in my power to clear my conscience, and my polluted heart; or to set my perverted spirit in a right frame again, but thy creating and renewing power, which borroweth nothing from the creature, must do it: create in me importeth this. 7. Albeit a renewed soul cannot be utterly cast off from God, nor be bereft utterly of saving grace once bestowed on him; yet if he grieve the Lord’s Spirit by presumptuous sinning, his assurance of standing in God’s favour may be mightily brangled, and he put in fear of losing the possession of what is behind of the saving work of God’s Spirit in him, especially when he considereth that his profession doth deserve no less at God’s hands. Therefore faith he, cast me not away from thy presence, and take not away thy holy Spirit from me. 8. Nothing is so terrible to a renewed soul which hath been sometime sensible of God’s favour, and sure of the presence of his Spirit, as to be shut out from God’s favour, and severed from the communion of his Spirit, as this prayer reflecteth, cast me not away, &c. 9. As a believer may come to assurance of his own salvation, and when he keepeth a good conscience, may sweetly rejoyce therein; so when he seeth that the pleasure of sin hath marred this joy unto him, he cannot rest nor be quiet till he recover the assurance he had, and his wonted joy be joyned therewith. Therefore David after prayer to have the joy of God’s salvation restored unto him, fearing lest he should lose it again if he were left to himself, doth add another prayer, uphold me with thy free Spirit. 10. The godly by their fall, should learn sensibly to acknowledge their own weakness, and their need of the supporting strength of God’s Spirit, and to account the bonds of God’s Spirit, keeping them in order, and in God’s obedience, to be their only freedome. Therefore David, after prayer to have the joy of God’s salvation restored unto him, fearing lest he should lose it again if he were left to himself, doth add another prayer, uphold me with thy free Spirit. 11. As the end of seeking mercy to our selves, should be this, that we may be enabled to be in...
Instruments of glorifying God, and saving of others: so the sensible feeling of mercy which is sought after, doth greatly encourage a man to the work: Then will I teach transgressors thy ways. Then, that is, when the joy of God's salvation is restored to me, and I confirmed somewhat in the grace of God. As the way which God keepeth in manifesting his justice against transgressors, and his mercy to self-condemned sinners flying to him in Christ, is not known by nature to sinners, so long as they go on in their evil course, or before they be effectually taught to know both; so none is so fit to teach and persuade them of this mystery, as they who by frequent experience are acquainted with the ways of God: Then will I teach transgressors thy ways. 13. The communicating the knowledge and experience of God's justice and mercy, according to every man's place and calling, is a good means of converting of others who know no such thing: I will teach others thy ways, and sinners shall be converted unto thee.

Ver. 14. Deliver me from blood-guiltiness, O God; thou God of my salvation: and my tongue shall sing aloud of thy righteousness.

He prayeth the fourth time for remission of sin, and namely of that fearful and bloody transgression in the matter of Uriah, which now did most trouble his conscience. Wherefore learn, 1. As the conscience doth pass upon particulars in the midst of confused challenges for multitudes of sins; so doth it press some particulars more eagerly than other some, according as it is set on work: as here the guiltiness in the matter of Bathsheba and Uriah, presseth David: deliver me from blood-guiltiness. 2. Though sin seem pleasant at the beginning, yet at length it is found a devouring enemy, from which none can deliver a soul; save God alone: Deliver me from blood-guiltiness, O God. 3. Upon the general grounds of the Covenant of Grace made with us for salvation through Christ, must a soul seek to have particular mercies; Deliver me, thou God of my salvation. 4. The righteousness of God, which standeth in the remission of sin, and imputation of Christ's obedience unto us, through faith according to God's promise, is the matter of our joy and song of praise to God: which song, a soul being in thraldome by feel guiltiness can hardly sing, but after the intimation of pardon will sing it cheerfully,
Ps. 37. Be careful: Deliver me from blood-guiltinesses; then shall my tongue sing aloud of thy righteousness.

Ver. 15. O Lord open thou my lips, and my mouth shall shew forth thy praise.

16. For thou desirest not sacrifice, else would I give it: thou delightest not in burnt-offering.

17. The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit: a broken and contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise.

He pursueth this fourth petition for remission of sin, with a request for enlivening of his heart, and furnishing him with matter and ability for praising of God; wherein he sincerely renounceth all confidence in external ceremonies of the Law, or in any thing else which he could performe. Wherein he doubteth, and doth not desire, howsoever proud spirits think that they can do any thing they please in God's service, yet a humbled soul under exercise knoweth that it is God that giveth both to will and to do of his good pleasure; such a man knoweth that the habit of grace is a gift, and the bringing forth of the habit to exercise, is another gift, he knoweth that when one hath gotten grace, to will to praise God; he must have grace to put this will to act effectually: This the Psalmist doth acknowledge and prayeth; open thou my lips; and my tongue shall shew forth thy praise.

3. Whosoever holy ordinances and outward services God doth prescribe to his Church, they are not required for satisfaction of his justice, nor are they the main thing he is pleased with, but they are means only to lead men to himself in Christ, in whom onely justice findeth satisfaction, and man findeth strength to go about the worship, that to God himself may have all the praise of our services: Therefore David giveth it for a reason of his former petition, for thou desirest not, or thou hast not pleasure in, sacrifice.

4. That which God aimeth at, we should most intend; and what he is well pleased with, we should most endeavour; Thou desirest not sacrifice, else would I give it.

5. The main intent of the sacrifices under the Law was, that a man in the sense of his sin and deserved judgement, and in inability to satisfy for his faults, should come and empty himself before God, and betake him to that onely one propitiatory sacrifice, represented in those external sacrifices. The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit; that is, the right way of sacrificing, is that a man's spirit be emptied of its own self-confidence when it cometh to offer unto God the external sacrifices, which otherways God regardeth not.

6. The man who most renounce eth his own works, worth, or merits, and despiseth all his own doings, as a broken earthen vessel is most acceptable in his approaches to God's free grace in the Mediator: a broken and a contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise; and that not for any worth in the matter of contrition, but because by contrition is expelled all conceit of self-worth, and so the man is most fit for receiving grace and free pardon from God.

Ver. 18. Do good in thy good pleasure unto Sion, build thou the walls of Jerusalem.

19. Then shalt thou be pleased with the sacrifices of righteousness, with burnt-offering, and whole burnt-offering: then shall they offer bullocks upon thine altar.

In the last verse David prayeth for the Lord's people; that what breach had been made in the walls of God's protection about them, by his sins and theirs, might be repaired; and God more holily and heartily worshipped, both by himself and by them in time coming. Whence learn, 1. As every true member of the Church should bear in heart the condition of the body, and put it up to God, whatsoever be the man's own private condition; so in special he that hath by his sins provoked God to withdraw his protection from the incorporation wherein he is, should most earnestly intercede for the good of the body, as David doth here: do good in thy good pleasure unto Sion, build thou the walls of Jerusalem. 2. The rich grace of God, his free love and unchangeable good will to his people is the cause of all the welfare of the Church: do good in thy good pleasure unto Sion. 3. Whosoever have been most instrumental in the building of God's Church, must some way be emptied of the glory of this work, that it may be all ascribed unto God alone, who is the only builder of his own Church; as David here emptieth himself of this honour, & ascribeth it to God, saying, Build thou up the walls of Jerusalem. 4. When God purerth out upon his people his Spirit of grace and supplication, and other proper effects of his good will to them, then, and not till then, are they fit to do him service acceptably: do good in thy good pleasure to them; then shalt thou be pleased with the sacrifices, &c. 5. No sacrifice is acceptable to God, save the sacrifices of righteousness; Now the sacrifices of righteousness are first, the propitiatory sacrifice of Christ, whereunto every believer must have respect, as offered in his Name when he cometh to God; and next the sacrifices of thankfulness, and new obedience offered up by virtue of Christ's sacrifice, to be accepted: The first sort of sacrifice was represented most specially by burnt-offering, and whole burnt-offering; and the other sort by peace-offerings and other oblations: Then shalt thou be pleased with the sacrifices of righteousness, with burnt-offering, and whole burnt-offering. then shall they offer bullocks upon thine Altar.

PSAL. LII.

To the chief Musician, Maschil. A Psalm of David: when Doeg the Edomite came and told Saul, and said unto him, David is come to the house of Abimelech.

The scope of the Psalmist is to shew that Doeg his enemy had no reason to glory in the favour of the Court, purchased by his false and cruel calumnies against him and the Lords Priests, which he proved by four reasons: First, because God's kindness could not be taken away by Doeg's cruel calumnies. ver. 1. Secondly, because God should root out Doeg out of the world for his wicked calumnies, ver. 2, 3, 4, 5. Thirdly, because Doeg should be made a laughing-stock and matter of derision to the godly, ver. 6, 7. Fourthly, because maugre his malice, David should be blessed as a believer in God, and a true worshipper of him, ver. 8. Whereupon he concludes with praise to God, ver. 9.

From the Inscription, Learn, 1. It is no new policy of wicked men, to seek to be great in Court, and in the favour of Princes, by maligning the godly, and fostering the displeasure of Princes against them, for Doeg of old did climb in Court this way. 2. Such practices are most suitable to false brethren: for this Doeg is an Edomite of the posterity of Esau. 3. When the wicked come to be in power and credit with Kings, for their very enmity against God's people, it is a narrow trial, and a fore tentation to the godly, as here in David's case with Doeg, is to be seen. 4. In this case there is nothing so needful as to go to God for direction and consolations, for so David did, and came back with a Maschil, or Psalm for instruction, to himself and others. 5. It is no advantage to a claw back Calumniator, to pretend that he told nothing but truth, and said no more then what he saw: for it is true, that David came to the house of Abimelech, but the telling of this to Saul, imported much mischief upon the matter, even all the evil which fell forth, and all this is laid on Doeg. presupposing he had said no more then is expressed here, that is, that he told Saul, David is come to the house of Abimelech.

Ver. 1. Why boastest thou thyselfe in mischief, O mighty man? the goodness of God endureth continually.

David chargeth Doeg with the vanity of his gloriation, that he was now made so mighty a man, for his ill service done against the Lords servants, and refuteth his folly, because he would not take the kindnesse of God from the godly so easily as he might steal their good estimation from them among men. Whence learn, 1. Prosperity and success following upon a wicked course, doth hide the sin and mischief which is in it from the sinner, as we see here, how the favour which foolish Doeg found at Court for his calumniating David and the Lords Priests, did puffe him up. 2. There is small reason for a wicked man to glory in his wickednesse, whatsoever profit or preferment it doth bring unto him, for after examination he will not be able to give a reason of his vain boasting; Why boastest thou thy self of thy mischief, O thou mighty man? 3. Albeit the wicked do think that God forgetteth his simple and silly servants, yet it is not so; and altho' the Lord doth alter the exercise of the godly, and changeth their prosperity into adversity, yet he changeth not his affection to them, this remaineth fast for ever, whatsoever seem to the carnal spectator, of the Lords dealing with his people; The goodness of God endureth continually. 2. So long as Gods unchangeable kindnesse endureth, the wicked have no cause to insult over the godly, nor have the godly cause to faint or be discouraged; for this goodness of God David doth oppose, both to Doegs boasting, and to his own tentation; The kindnesse of the Lord endureth for ever.
Ver. 2. Thy tongue deviseth mischiefs: like a sharp razor working deceitfully.

3. Thou lovest evil more than good, and lying rather than to speak righteousness. Selah.

4. Thou lovest all devouring words; 0 thou deceitful tongue.

The next Argument of refuting Doegs folly, is, because this cruel calumny should bring Gods vengeance on Doeg, and root him out from all felicity; and here he first sets down his ditty in these three verses, before he sets down his doom, ver. 5. Whence learn, 1. The tongue when it is abused, is a world of wickedness, setting the world on fire, as it self is set on fire from hell by Satan: for whatsoever mischief the devil can suggest, or a wicked heart can devise, the tongue will serve to vent it; therefore is the tongue charged with devising of mischiefs: Thy tongue deviseth mischief. 2. The smooth convey of a wicked device doth not hide the mischief of it from Gods sight, nor extenuate the mans fault, but rather doth help on the mischief more cunningly and powerfully: like a sharp razor working deceitfully. 3. When a man speaketh no more of a tale of his neighbour, but what may serve to the mans hurt and prejudice, and keepeth up the relation of that part of the tale which might clear the mans innocency, or might give a right construction of his doing, albeit that part of the tale told be true, if all the rest of the tale had been told with it, yet being told alone as if it were the full history, it is evil, it is false lying; It is a murthering and devouring speech, and full of deceit; and doth argue the Speaker such a one as Doeg was, in the particular at least, to whom David saith; Thou lovest evil more than good, and lying rather then to speak righteousness; Thou lovest all devouring words, 0 thou deceitful tongue. 4. The more wit, deliberation and affection is in a sin: the heavier is the guilt, and challenge for it more just. Doegs devising mischief, Doegs chusing evil, and not good; chusing lying, and not righteousness; loving these evil and all-devouring words, maketh his ditty most fearfull.

5. God shall likewise destroy thee for ever, he shall take thee away, and pluck thee out of thy dwelling place, and root thee out of the land of the living. Selah.
Now followeth his doom; Whence learn, 1. As any wicked man is instrumental for bringing temporal destruction on the godly, so is he instrumental in drawing everlasting destruction upon himself from God's hand. God shall likewise destroy thee for ever. 2. He that seeketh to settle himself, to enlarge himself, to root himself in the earth, and to prolong his standing in the world, by wrong means, and in special, by hurting the godly, and their good name and cause, shall finde the event quite contrary to his desire, designe and expectation, as David did, whose doom was destruction, for his evil offices done at Court against David and the Lords Ministers. God shall take thee away and pluck thee out of thy dwelling place, and root thee out of the land of the living.

Ver. 6. The righteous also shall see and feare, and shall laugh at him.

7. Lo, this is the man that made not God his strength, but trusted in the abundance of his riches, and strengthened himself in his wickedness.

The third Argument of refutation of Doeg's vain-boasting, is, that his wisdom should be seene to be ridiculous folly; and his boasting to be the matter of his shame and disgrace. Whence learn, 1. The notable enemies of God's children and servants may expect to be notably punished, and that they who did see their sin, shall see also God's vengeance on them: The righteous shall see it. 2. As the godly are the only wise observers of God's work, and dispensation of his mercy and justice: So also are they the only persons that do make spiritual advantage thereby: The righteous shall see it and fear. 3. As the good of godliness is seen and felt by the godly in their own experience of God's blessing upon themselves, so is it seen and observed also in the contrary evils which befall the ungodly; Lo, this is the man that made not God his strength, (lay they) but trusted in the abundance of his riches, and strengthened himself in his wickedness.

The fourth Argument for refutation of Doeg's foolish boasting, is, because, I. faith David, shall flourish in God's favour, in despite of Doeg; Whence learn, 1. Whatever may befall the godly godly by the malice of their enemies, it shall not hinder their felicity, when their enemies are running to their own destruction, it shall be well with the godly, they may be persuaded of it, for the Psalmist's example doth encourage to it: But I am like a green Olive-tree. 2. As the Olive-tree, being planted in a fertile ground, draweth in moisture, whereby it is nourished and groweth up: so doth the believer, being planted in the Church, draw spirit and life from God by the holy ordinances, whereby he groweth up: I am like a green Olive-tree in the house of God. 3. The wisdom of the godly, and the ground of their true blessedness is this, they make fast work of their everlasting felicity by faith in God, and this maketh them like green Olives all the days of their life; for I trust in the mercy of God for ever and ever, is given here for a reason of his happy growing in the house of God.

Ver. 9. I will praise thee for ever, because thou hast done it: and I will wait on thy Name, for it is good before thy Saints.

He closeth the Psalm comfortably, with resolution to praise God, and to depend upon him. Wherefore learn, 1. Victory over temptations obtained by faith, is very glorious, for faith doth make a man as sure of what is to come, as if it were perfected, and filleth him with praise for the certain hope of the performance of Promises; I will praise thee for ever (faith David,) because thou hast done it. 2. Faith being solidly fixed, bringeth forth hope and quiet expectation of what is promised, I will wait on thy Name. 3. As the Christian patience of one of the Saints, is a matter of good example, and great encouragement unto all the rest that behold it: so the consideration of the good which may redound to others, who shall be witnesses of our patient attending upon God, should stirre us up to this duty of patient hope in God, I will wait on thee, for it is good before thy Saints.
To the chief Musician upon Mahalath Maschil. A Psalm of David.

As in the fourteenth Psalm, so here David comforteth himself, and the rest of the godly in their sad sufferings which they felt from godless men lying in the miserable condition of nature, ver. 1, 2, 3. The grounds of comfort are three; the first, because God was engaged in the sufferings of his own, and would plead their controversy against the wicked, ver. 4. The next, because God's judgments were to come on all the persecutors of the godly, ver. 5, and the third, because there is hope of full salvation of the godly in Christ, ver. 6. Comparing this Psalm with Psalm 14. wherein the enmity of the wicked against the godly, and the comfort of the godly in that case, in this place are the same which are set down there; We learn, That as the godly may fall oftener then once, in one case, under one and the same temptation, some sort of hard exercise and grief; so may they, and should they make use of the same comforts, and bring to memory the same doctrines for that end, as the Church is taught to do, Psalm 14. and here in this Psalm.

Ver. 1. The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God; corrupt are they, and have done abominable iniquity; there is none that doth good.

2. God looked down from Heaven upon the children of men, to see if there were any that did understand, that did seek God.

3. Every one of them is gone back, they are altogether become filthy; there is none that doth good, no not one.

From the description of the miserable condition, wherein the world and every unrenewed man within the Church visible do lie;
5. There are none that do good, no not one; It is no wonder, that the image of God appearing in his children, be ill entertained by natural men, and that God's children expect no good fruits from such ill trees, as all men are by nature, for this doctrine is delivered to quiet the hearts of the godly, when they are molested by the men of this world. It should yield comfort to the godly, to behold the miserable condition wherein all men are by nature, and themselves called forth of this miserable estate, and converted for this doctrine offereth ground for the comparison and consolation.

Ver. 4. Have the workers of iniquity no knowledge who eat up my people as they eat bread; they have not called upon God.
The first direct Argument for the comforting of the godly under their persecution by the wicked among whom they live, is, that God confideth their case, and will plead their cause. Whence learn, 1. The Lord observeth every point of enmity which the world carrieth against his People; he taketh their case to heart, and will plead their cause, and this is a solid ground of comfort to his People in all their sufferings; Have the workers of iniquity no knowledge? that eat up, &c. 2. Grounds of differences between the unrenewed, and the renewed or reconciled, offered in this opposition of the one sort to the other, are these: First, the unrenewed, all of them are called workers of iniquity; but they that are reconciled, howsoever they are not free of sin, yet they are not counted by God to be workers of iniquity. Again, the Lord doth own the regenerate and call them his own People, but doth disclaim the other, as in effect not his people, but his enemies. And lastly, the unregenerate do not call upon God, to wit, in earnest, or in truth, but the regenerate by the opposition made are presupposed here to call on God, and to depend upon him in truth. 3. Nothing doth more evidence the blindness and beastly besetting of the conscience of sinners, than the perfecuting of the Saints; it will not suffice the ungodly to live a godless life themselves, except they maligne and most unreasonably oppose Piety in others; Have the workers of iniquity no knowledge? that they eat up my People, as they eat bread. 4. To vex, bear down, and destroy the godly, is as great a pleasure to the wicked, as to eat their meat; They eat up my People as they eat bread.

Ver. 5. There were they in great feare, where no feare was; for God hath scattered the bones of him that encamped against thee: thou hast put them to shame, because God hath despised them.

The next ground of comfort to the godly against persecution, is, because Gods judgements shall overtake the troublest of Gods People, when they do least fear it. Whence learn, 1. As persecution doth cauterise the conscience, and maketh it senseless of sin: so also doth it make the Persecutors senseless of judgement, when they do eat up the People of God as bread without feare; For there, saith he, no feare was. 2. The more secure a sinner is, and in special a Persecutor of Gods People, the the more terrible shall his wakening be, when God's judgement cometh on him; There were they in great fear where no fear was. 3. The enemies of God's Church make it their study and main work, to overthrow the godly, and to compasse them as it were by way of laying siege about them, that they escape not; They encamp against thee, faith the Psalmist, speaking as it were to every one of God's People. 4. Wrath pursueth the Persecutor, both living and dead, and caeth not to follow him so long as there is any thing of him capable of punishment, for God not only raiseth the siege, and destroyeth the enemy, and consumeth his flesh, but also he hath scattered the bones of him that encampeth against thee. 5. When there is nothing left of the Persecutors substance unpunished in the world, the wrath of God pursueth his name and memory; and the wrong done to the innocent, is the Persecutors greatest disgrace: Thou hast put them to shame. 6. As true honour, and the conferring of respect from men upon any, is the gift of God, who honoureth them that honour him; so deserved shame and disgrace for sin committed, when it is poured out, as the effect of God's justice maketh them who dishonour him to be lightly esteemed; Thou hast put them to shame, because God hath despised them.

Ver. 6. O that the salvation of Israel were come out of Sion! When God bringeth back the captivity of his people, Jacob shall rejoice, and Israel shall be glad.

The last ground of comfort to the persecuted godly, is the hope of compleat salvation to the Church of God, and of every true member thereof in Christ. Whence learn, 1. There is no solid consolation against persecution, or any other grievance, save in the salvation which is to be had in Christ; He is the Saviour and salvation of Israel. 2. As Christ's coming, to accomplish salvation by part and part, in his own order and time, is most certainly to be beleived and hoped for; so is it most earnestly to be wished, longed after, and prayed for; as the example of the Lords People here (longing for his coming to Sion, in his incarnation and manifestation of his grace; and then in the spreading forth of his grace and salvation out of Sion to Gentiles and Jewes,) doth teach us; O that the salvation of Israel were come out of Sion. 3. As the captivity of God's People doth remain in any degree and measure, which may make Christ's coming to be so much the more desirable, and to be the the object of wishes, and matter of Prayer; so shall every sort and degree of captivity at last be removed from God's People, till Redemption be compleatly fulfilled; God shall bring back the captivity of his People. 4. As of all People, whoever had the name of God's People, the miseries and captivities of the Israelites. because of their provocation against God, have been the most conspicuous and signal: So of all the People on the earth, and of all the Nations which have been honoured with the title of God's People, the deliverance of Israel from captivity shall be most eminently and conspicuously comfortale; for when God shall bring back the captivity of his People, then Jacob shall rejoice, and Israel shall be glad.

PSAL. LIV.

To the chief Musician on Neginoth Maschit. A Psalm of David, when the Ziphims came and said to Saul, Doth not David hide himself with us?

David being betrayed by the Ziphims; First, doth make his Prayer to God for delivery, ver. 1, 2. Secondly, he strengtheneth his faith by some reasons, ver. 3. Thirdly, he is confident of his own delivery, and of God's judgement on the Ziphims, whereunto he subscribes, ver. 4, 5. And last of all, he promiseth praise to God for his own assured deliverance, ver. 6, 7.

From the Inscription; Learn, 1. Particular straits and particular deliveries should be particularly remarked, as David here remembereth the danger he was in by the treachery of the Ziphims. 2. Mighty men will finde readily more friends in an evil cause, then the godly do finde in a good cause: As Saul hath the Ziphims to offer their service to his cruelty, when David was in straits. 3. The wicked are very hearty to do an ill turn, and glad to finde occasion of it: Doth not David, (say they) hide himself with us? as if this had been good and blest newes.
Ver. 1. Save me, O God, by thy Name, and judge me by thy strength.

2. Heare my Prayer, O God, give eare to the words of my mouth.

From David's Prayer; Learne, 1. The godly can never be so surprized with trouble, but they should fly to God for deliverie, as David doth here; and it is a rare vertue not to forget this relief in depth of distresse. 2. When men believe that God is all-sufficient and answerable to what is spoken of him, they have great encouragement to go to him in difficulty, Save me by thy Name, faith David: God's name gave him ground to pray and hope for deliverance. 3. Albeit no man should rashly call God to give judgement, yet in a good cause, against a strong Party, an upright man may call for and expect assistance from God; Judge me by thy strength, faith he. 4. In fervent prayer, the very voice hath use, as with the supplicant to express his earnestness, and his faith in God, and to stir him up, and hold him fixed to his supplication; so with God also hath it use in regard it is an express invocation of him, and a signe of dependance upon him, and of expectation of a good answer from him; Heare my Prayer, O God, give eare unto the words of my mouth.

Ver. 3. For strangers are risen up against me; and oppressours seek after my soule, they have not set God before them. Selah.

The reasons supporting his faith in his Prayer, are taken from the unkindnesse, unnaturalnesse and cruelty not only of his Countrey-men, but also of his father in law, and of his old acquaintance, slippery Courtiers, who sometime professed friendship. Whence learn, 1. No strangers are more strange then they who cast off the bands of civility and nature, wherein they were bound: false Countrey-men, false brethren, false friends, false alliance, are those of whom men may expect least in their need, for David findeth such men to be his greatest enemies; Strangers are risen up against me, faith he. 2. When they who should protect a man, do him most wrong, God will hear the plaints put up against such men; oppressours seek after my soul or life. 3. When the fear of God is laid aside, there is nothing to be expected.
expected of the godlesse man but the worst of evills which he is able to do, there is no aw band to restrai'n him, for they have not set God before them. 4. The leffe hope there be of mans mercy, the more hope is of Gods help; the more unkinde and cruel men be, who should be friends, the more may the Lords kindnesse and comfort be expected for supply of inlacks, as here the drift of Davids argument holdeth forth.

Ver. 4. Behold, God is mine helper: the Lord is with them that uphold my soul.

5. He shall reward evil unto mine enemies: cut them off in thy truth.

In the third place he is assured of help to himself, and to his friends, and of vengeance to his enemies. Whence learn, 1. Fervent prayer hath readily a swift answer, and sometimes wonderfuliy swift, even before a man have ended speech, as here David findeth in experience, Behold (faith he) God is my helper. 2. The sight of faith is very clear, and piercing through all clouds, when God holds forth the light of his Spirit unto it, it can demonstrate God present in an instant, ready to help in greatest traits: Behold, God is my helper. 3. There is more joy in Gods felt presence, then grief, in felt trouble; for, Behold, God is my helper, is more comfort then his friends unkindnesse, and strangers malice was grievous. 4. Such as do comfort and help a man in time of his tentation, are not onely helpers unto him in the matter of his temporal life, but also instruments to save his soul, which by tentation is like to be drawn into sin, and so to destruction; for David faith of such men, they uphold my soul. 5. Such as take part with the persecuted Saints, God will take part with them: The Lord is with them that uphold my soul. 6. As God is a friend to the friends of his distressed children, so is he a foe to their foes, and their foes shall smart for their enmity in due time: He shall reward evil to my enemies. 7. The doome of the wicked enemies of Gods children, is set down in Gods word, his truth is the wicked mens terror, and the godly mans strength: Cut them off in thy truth. 8. Albeit we may not without clear warrant pray against particular persons, yet we may subscribe to Gods Word set down in Scripture against his obstinate enemies, and our enemies for his cause: Cut them off in thy truth.

Ver. 6. I will freely sacrifice unto thee, I will praise thy Name (O L O K D) for it is good.
7. For he hath delivered me out of all trouble; and mine eye hath seen his desire upon mine enemies.

In the last place he promiseth praise to God for the certainty he had of his deliverance, whereof he was no lesse assured, then if he had seen it with his eyes. Wherefore learn, 1. Promisefed and hoped for deliverance is able to affect the heart, as a mercy present and already past, as here it doth David: I will sacrifice to thee, and praise thee. 2. Readiness of heart to glorifie God, and liberty of spirit, with occasion granted to praise him for a benefit, is another new benefit super-added, and greatly to be esteemed of, as David doth account of it: I will freely sacrifice unto thee and praise thy Name, for it is good; that is, not only is thy name good, but to have a heart sincerely to serve thee, and liberty to express thy praise before others is good. 3. Then is an action good, when it is done, because it is a good action, and is not gone about for by-ends; I will praise his name, for it is good, faith he. 4. In one experience of one deliverance man may have a foresight of full delivery out of every evil or trouble wherein he can fall, as here David speaketh of hopes for full delivery, he hath delivered me out of all troubles. 5. The same light of God's Word, made lively by God's Spirit, is able to shew a man, both the destruction of his wicked enemies, and his own deliverance from them; and as a man may rejoice in God's mercy towards himself, so also may he rejoice in God's justice against his enemies, provided he be free of private revenge: mine eye hath seen thy judgements upon mine enemies.

PSAL. LV.
To the chief Musician on Neginoth, Maschil. A Psalm of David.

This Psalm containeth this doctrine, That albeit Christ and his followers may be in great straits by the treachery of their pretended friends, yet through God's favour they shall be delivered, as David felt in experience. The use of which Doctrine is subjoined in the end of the Psalm, which well agreeeth with the Psalmists condition in the time of Absaloms and Achitophels conspiracie.

The parts of the Psalm we may make these three. In the first is set down his sorrowful supplication to ver. 16. In the next, his comforting of himself in the Lord his deliverer, to ver. 22.
In the third, the use of this experience, in the two last verses.

In his supplication he prayeth in the first place for a gracious hearing, because of the calumnies and cruelty of his enemies, ver. 1, 2, 3. In the next place he setteth down his pitiful condition of mind, ver. 4, 5. making him to wish to be farre from the company of these conspirators, which were combined against him, ver. 6, 7, 8. In the third place, he prayeth to God to confound their counsels, because the whole City was in an uproare against him, ver. 9, 10, 11. In the fourth place he condescends upon a more particular reason of his prayer for confounding their counsels, because the plotter of the conspiracy had been most intimate in his familiarity, and deep upon his counsel, ver. 12, 13, 14. Whereupon in the last place by way of prayer he prophesieth of the curse of God to come upon them, ver. 15.

In the second part of the Psalm he comforteth himself in God: First, by his resolution constantly to depend upon God, and hopefully to pray, ver. 16, 17. Secondly, by his former experiences of deliverances granted to him before, ver. 18. Thirdly, because he was assured God should take order with his enemies for their treacherous breach of Covenant, and plaistring of their malicious designs with fair pretences, and deep dissimulation, ver. 19, 20, 21.

In the third part of the Psalm are the uses of this experience, ver. 22, 23.

Ver. 1. Give eare to my prayer, O God, and hide not thy self from my supplication.

2. Attend unto me, and hear me: I mourne in my complaint, and make a noise.

3. Because of the voice of the enemies, because of the oppression of the wicked: for they cast iniquity upon me, and in wrath they hate me.

From his address unto God for relief in this, as in his other sad conditions; Learn, 1. Many grievances are the godly subject unto, but in none of them all is there any ease for them, till they go to God and lay out their case before him: Give care to my prayer, O God. 2. As it is ease of heart to suppliants to have any signe of the acceptance of their supplication; So not to find Psalm LV.

Find access in prayer doth add much weight to their trouble. Hide not (faith he) thy self from my supplication. 3. When a sad heart is fixed on God, and findeth what to say to him, it may expect that its words shall not be misregarded of God, but punctually taken knowledge of: attend unto me, and hear me. 4. Though a childe of God were never so stout-hearted naturally, yet when God exerciseth his spirit with trouble, he shall be made to weep before God as a childe, and must not be ashamed to be thus humbled before him: I mourn in my complaint, (faith he) and make a noise. 5. A mourning suppliant shall neither lose his prayers nor his teares, for I mourn, is brought for a reason of his hope, that God shall attend and hear him. 6. When the godly fall into persecution and trouble from men, their lives, their estate, and their good name, readily come altogether to be in danger at once; as it befell David, when the conspirators made head against him, they traduced his former government, as if he had been a wicked man, and sought to bear him down, and to have his life; because of the voice of the enemy, there is their railing; because of the oppression of the wicked, there is their violent robbing him of his estate; they cast iniquity upon me, there are their flanderous traducings of him, and charging him with faults falsely; In wrath they hate me, there is their cruel seeking to kill him.

Ver. 4. My heart is sore pained within me: and the terrors of death are fallen upon me.

5. Fearfulness and trembling are come upon me, and horror hath overwhelmed me.

In this pitiful condition of minde; Learn, 1. It is not a thing inconsistent with godliness to be much moved with fear in time of danger; natural affections are not taken away in conversion, but sanctified and moderated: My heart is sore pained within me. 2. Natural wit, and courage are not sufficient to bear a man out in a great streesse, for they will fail him, and if a man have not stronger supporters then his natural parts, he is undone, for here the terrors of death are fallen upon me; and horror hath overwhelmed me. 3. The godly have an advantage above all natural men; for when natural strength and courage doth fail them, they have nothing behind, but the godly have faith in God, to open a fountain of fresh supply of wisdom, courage and strength to them, when parts natural do fail them; for David being now emptied of natural furniture, hath wisdom and strength strength to go to God, and hope of heart to be helped by him.

Ver. 5. And I said, O that I had wings like a Dove; for then would I flee away, and be at rest.

7. Lo, then would I wander farre off, and remaine in the wildernesse. Selah.

8. I would hasten my escape from the windy storme and tempest.

Whereas he wished to have been out of the reach and society of such wicked enemies; Learn 1. When a man may escape a present hazard of life, with a good conscience, he may lawfully fleie and eschew the danger, as David here wished he could have escaped; O if I had wings, then would I flee away. 2. A godly man may be in such peril as it seems to him, he cannot without a miracle be delivered, as David saw no way to escape the conspiracie, save this way: O that I had the wings of a Dove; and yet God may so dispose, as he may be delivered in an ordinary way, as here David was. 3. It is better to be in the Wildernesse in some cases, then to be in the company of the wicked: Lo, I would wander farre off, and remaine in the wildernesse. 4. The way to eschew the fury of a sudden insurrection of a tumultuous multitude, is not to come forth and appease them with words, but to decline their present furie by going out of the way; if God offer occasion: I would hasten my escape from the windy storme and tempest.

Ver. 9. Destroy, O LORD, and divide their tongues: for I have seen violence and Strife in the city.

10. Day and night they go about it upon the walls thereof: mischief also and sorrow are in the midst of it.

11. Wickednesse is in the midst thereof, deceit and guile depart not from her streets.

In the third place he prayeth to confound the counsel of the enemies, because they had put the whole City in a confusion, and set the citizens upon a course of cruelty and violence, Whence learn, 1. A visible Church may at sometime be in so sinful a condition, as a godly man shall not know what to do, or to whom he may have recourse, or where to hide him; as here the condition of the holy City, the City of Jerusalem is described. 2. The prayers of the godly are more able to disappoint the plots plots of cruel enemies, then all humane policy: Destroy, O Lord, and divide their tongues. 3. The believer should make use of such courses as God hath taken before for disappointing wicked enterprises, for supporting of his faith in his need, as here David maketh use of God's dissolving the conspiracy of Corah, Dathan and Abiram, and of the proud enterprise of the wicked in building Babel; Destroy, O Lord, and divide their tongues. 4. A man should be very sure, that such as he doth pray against, and complaineth of unto God, are in a wicked condition, and upon a mischievous course; for David giveth for a reason of his imprecation, that he had seen violent and fierce in the city. The Rulers of the city diligently watching for his life to do mischief; day and night going about the walls, mischief; so row, wickedness, deceit, guile in the midst of it, and openly avowed in the streets.

Ver. 12. For it was not an enemy that reproached me, then I could have borne it; neither was it he that hated me that did magnify himself against me, then I would have hid myself from him.

13. But it was thou, a man, mine equal, my guide, and mine acquaintance.

14. We took sweet counsel together, and walked unto the house of God in company.

In the fourth place he condescendeth upon a more special reason of his imprecation, because Achitophel and other like Traitors, (fit types of Judas) had treacherously abused their trust and familiarity which they had with him, whose ingratitude grieved him more then the injuries of others; Whence learn, 1. It is not a strange thing for the godly to finde such as should be their friends to become their greatest foes, especially in a good cause; this doth Davids experience make evident. 2. The worst that a professed enemy can do against the godly in a good cause, is more tolerable then treachery against us, or the forsaking of us by a professed friend; for that importeth a reproach in the Party forsaken, as having an evil cause, or being unworthy to be assisted; It was not an enemy that reproached me, then I could have borne it. 3. The injuries of a suspected enemy, are not so unavoidable before they be done, nor so piercing when they are done, as the injuries of one whom a man suspecteth not, or as the injuries done to us by a professed and trusted trusted friend; Neither was it be that hated me, then I could have bid myself from him. 4. The disappoiting of us by a friend in a good cause, much more the open opposition, and most of all the treachery of a trusted friend against us in a good cause, doth carry with it a vilifying and despising of our person and cause; and importeth our ill deferving at their hand, our ill carriage in the cause, and our delivering to be forsaken, and faith in effect, that the false friend or traitor hath reason to be avenged on us, and to oppose us in that cause; and what can be heavier to a godly persecuted person? for this is a very exalting of the Traitor against us: Neither was it be that hated me that did magnifie himself against me. 5. Amongst many friendly neighbours, it hath been the custom of godly and wise men to chuse some to be their most intimate friends, whom they would use most familiarly and freely, whose counsel they would take, and most readily follow; It was thou, O man, mine equal, my guide, and my acquaintance. 6. To finde a godly and wise man, with whom we may be free in all cases of minde or conscience, wherein we may fall, to whom we may freely open our minde, and be strengthened by him in the service of God, it is a notable refreshment, and part of happiness and contentment: We took sweet counsel together, and walked unto the house of God in company. 7. A godly and wise man may be deceived in his choice by the close carriage of an hypocrite, who because he hath no sound principles of steadfastnesse in a good cause, may both disappoint his friend, and deceive himself also, and so do that which he did not at first intend to do. This disappointment to the godly is a very heavy affliction: But it was thou, a man, mine equal, my guide.

Ver. 15. Let death seise upon them, and let them go down quick into hell: for wickednesse is in their dwellings, and among them.

From his Prophetical imprecation against his enemies, such as Achitophel was to David, and Judas to Christ, and such like, togther with their followers and complics; Learn, 1. Swift destruction is the reward of the enemies of Gods servants, and specially of treacherous Apostates from a good cause, as Architophel's and Judas's latter end gave example: Let death seise upon them, and let them go down quick into hell. 2. Such as give entertainment and lodging to wickednesse, shall have hell for their their lodging, where wickedness lodgeth; for here it is given for a reason why the wicked shall go down to hell, because wickedness is in their dwellings, and among them. 3. What the Lord hath revealed to be his righteous decree, the godly may warrantably subscribe unto it; Let death seize on them, &c.

Ver. 16. As for me, I will call upon God: and the Lord shall save me.

17. Evening and morning, and at noon will I pray and cry aloud, and he shall hear my voice.

In the second part of the Psalm, he comforteth himself in his resolution, constantly to depend on God, and his confidence to finde access in worship. Whence learn, 1. The right use of God’s judgements on the wicked, for their wickedness is to draw near to God, to worship him and depend upon him, as David here resolved; As for me, I will call upon God. 2. A man may be sure to be saved in drawing near to the Lord whatsoever shall befall the wicked, I will call on God, and the Lord shall save me. 3. He who resolveth to live upon God’s good will and furniture, and hopeth to be saved at last, must resolve also to be constant, fervent and importunate in his daily worship and attendance on God; Evening and mornmg will I pray and cry aloud. 4. As it is needful upon all occasions to watch unto Prayer, and to entertain a frame of Spirit fit for supplication: so is it fit for giving of our selves more specially and fully to this work, to have (albeit not fixed canonick hours,) yet set times every day, at or about which we may follow religious worship, such as are morning, evening and noon, or any other time most fitting for the work; all circumstances being compared, as here David’s resolution and example doth teach us.

Ver. 18. He hath delivered my soul in peace from the battle that was against me: for there were many with me.

His next encouragement is taken from the experiences of former deliveries given to him by God. Whence learn, 1. Then do we make good use of experiences, when we stir up our selves, thereby to beleive the more for them in God, and to call on him in all conditions, as David here giveth this, He hath delivered my soul, as a reason of his former resolution. 2. In the midst of war the Lord can keep a man as safe as in the time of peace.
peace, and in extreme perils preserve him from danger; He hath delivered my soul in peace from the battle that was against me. He that depends upon God in the time of trouble, albeit he had an hoste against him, yet hath he more with him when God is with him, then can be against him: He hath delivered my soul, for there are many with me.

Ver. 19. God shall hear and afflict them, even he that abideth of old. Selah: because they have no changes, therefore they fear not God.

20. He hath put forth his hands against such as be at peace with him: he hath broken his Covenant.

21. The words of his mouth were smoother than butter, but war was in his heart: his words were softer than oile, yet were they drawn swords.

His third encouragement is taken from assurance, that God should punish his enemies for their godless security, breach of Covenant, and deep dissimulation. Hence learn, 1. Upon the complaint of the oppressed servants of God, not only are they delivered themselves, but also their enemies are punished; God shall hear and afflict them. 2. Gods eternity and immutability is a sufficient ground of the manifestation of his mercy to his own people, and justice against their enemies from generation to generation; God shall hear me, and afflict them, even he that abideth of old. Selah. 3. The more gently the Lord deals with the wicked in not exercising them with so many crosses, outward and inward, as he doth his own, the more godless are they, the more secure are they; and the more godless and secure they are, the more certain is their vexation coming; He will afflict them for, because they have no changes; therefore they fear not God. This is one reason of the Lords pursuing the wicked. 4. Whoever he be that maketh a breach in the peace between himself and others, shall have God for his Party, who shall not fail to afflict the Peace-breaker, he shall afflict them, and namely the chief Ring leaders; Who have put forth their hands against such as be at peace with them: and this is another reason of the Lords punishing of the enemies of his People. 5. The Lord will make a quarrel, and pursue for the breach of Covenant in special, because this is a most solemn confirmation of peace, and wherein God hath specially interest to see it performed, or the breach of it punished; He hath broken his Covenant; and this is the third reason of Gods punishing false brethren, pretended friends to Gods people, but in effect most pernicious foes. 6. The bosome-enemies of the Church, and underminers of the Lords people, and of his work in their hands, do make fairest pretences, when their vilest plots are in hand, then they are at Haile Master, and at offering of kissles, when they are about to betray; The words of his mouth were smoother then butter, but warre was in his heart: his words were softer then oile, yet were they drawn swords; and this vile dissimulation is the fourth reason of the Lords avenging the persecution of false brethren.

Ver. 22. Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and he shall sustain thee: he shall never suffer the righteous to be moved.

23. But thou, O God, shalt bring them down into the pit of destruction: bloody and deceitful men shall not live out half their days; but I will trust in thee.

The use of this experience he setteth forth; first, by giving counsel to the oppressed, to cast their burden upon the Lord, when they are over-burdened, and by making promises for encouraging them thereto. Secondly, by giving assurance of the perdition of the treacherous enemies of the Church. Thirdly, by setting forth his own resolution to keep confidence in God: Whence learn, 1. The use of the experience which godly persons have had, of comfort in, and deliverie out of trouble, is the encouragement of us to take the same course, which the godly followed before us in seeking our relief in God only; Cast thy burden on the Lord. 2. Whosever do roll over themselves upon God in their weighty troubles, shall never sink under them; Cast thy burden on the Lord, and he shall sustain thee. 3. Though the godly be troubled and tossed, yet because they continue to seek God, and to walk in the way of righteousness, they shall never be driven from their anchor-hold, they shall not be loosed at the root, their building shall be found still in its own place, upon the rock; He shall never suffer the righteous to be moved. 4. As on the one hand the Lord shall hold up the believer, how low soever he shall be brought, that he perish not: so shall the Lord still bring down the wicked to perdition, how high forever, how fixed forever his state appear, believe this who will: God will not suffer the righteous to be moved, but thou, O God, shalt bring them down into the pit of destruction. 5. Treacherous and cruel adversaries of the Lord's people shall be cut off, before they accomplish their bloody plots, they shall never die full of days, but wrath shall take them away, when they would leave; bloody and deceitful men shall not live half their days. 6. Whether such as do trouble the godly live longer or shorter, they will breed exercise to the godly, so long as they live; and the only rest that godly hearts can have against all the trouble they feel or fear from their enemies, or other ways, is to stay themselves on the Lord; for so resolveth the Psalmist. But I will trust in thee, faith he, and so closeth.

PSAL. LVI.

To the chief Musician upon Jonath Elem, Rechokim, Michtam of David, when the Philistines took him in Gath.

David flying from Saul to the country of the Philistines, (as we read, 1 Sam. 21. 13.) is apprehended, he prayeth to God, and is delivered. There are two parts of the Psalm: In the former part there are three conflicts of David's faith with his trouble and temptation, and three victories. The first conflict is in prayer, laying forth his enemies carriage against him, ver. 1, 2. And his first victory by faith, ver. 3, 4. The second conflict is in his complaint he maketh against his enemies, ver. 5, 6. And his second victory by faith, ver. 7. His third conflict is by laying forth his mournful condition before God, with hope to be regarded, ver. 8. And his third and greatest victory by faith, ver. 9, 10, 11. In the latter part of the Psalm is David's obligation, thankfully to acknowledge his merciful delivery, with a petition for grace to persever in the course of obedience, under God's protection, ver. 12, 13.

From the Inscription; Learn, 1. When once God's children are entered on their trials, they meet with new and unexpected difficulties, as David here flying from one enemy, falls in the hands of another enemy. 2. These means of safety which God's children do devise themselves, readily prove snares; David flying out of the holy land, doth fall in the hands of his adversaries: The Philistines take him in Gath. Ver.
Psalm LVI. Ver. 1. Be merciful unto me, O God, for man would swallow me up, he fighting daily oppresseth me.

2. Mine enemies would daily swallow me up; for they be many that fight against me, O thou most High.

His first wrestling in prayer is with the check of his conscience, whether for his daily sins, or in particular for casting himself in so apparent danger, as to have ventured without probable security had, to seek shelter among the enemies of the people of God, whose blood he himself had shed abundantly; for this rashness or other sins he beggeth mercy, and layeth out before God, the pressing tentation from Saul and his Country-men's cruelty, which drive him to this poor shift. Whence learn,

1. There is no fence for challenges of conscience for by-gone sins meeting with trouble drawn on by our folly, but flying to the mercy and rich grace and pity of God, as David doth here: Be merciful to me, O God. 2. When all men and means do fail us, and we see none but wolves and lions ready to devour us, there is hope of help in God's mercy; Be merciful to me, O God, for man would swallow me up. 3. Continued tentations and renewed dangers, do over-see the strength of a frail man, till he go to God to have relief from the tentation, or new strength; He fighting daily oppresseth me. 4. Whate'er inconveniences the godly do fall into by flying from persecution, they are all charged justly upon the Persecutor, and the chief Authors of their trouble: He fighting daily oppresseth me; saith David of Saul, who drive him to these straits. 5. Bloody persecutors follow hard after the chase of God's servants, without intermission, as dogs or lions do their prey, with as great desire to have their blood, as hungry beasts have after their food; Mine enemies would daily swallow me up. 6. One ring-leader in the persecution of the godly, will find a multitude to run with him; Many are they that fight against me. 7. There is one above all, who can and will take order with all the enemies of his people, who only can ease their hearts, when they do complain of their foes: Many are they that fight against me, O thou most High.
Ver. 3. What time I am afraid, I will trust in thee.

4. In God I will praise his Word, in God I have put my trust, I will not fear what flesh can do unto me.

Here faith gets the victory, by setting God's Word against all difficulties, within or without him, whereupon he defieth what man can do unto him. Whence learn, 1. Albeit the godly be not so stout in their trials, as not to feel their own infirmity, or not to be afraid, yet they are kept from fainting in their fear, by faith in God; What time I am afraid, I will trust in thee. 2. Albeit faith doth not always put forth itself, yet when fear doth assault most, then faith in God doth most evidently manifest its force; for then especially by directing of the man's eye towards God, it seteth a troubled mind, strengtheneth weak courage, and relieveth the oppressed heart; What time I am afraid, I will trust in thee. 3. The experience of the sweet fruit of faith endeareth the Lord to a soul, and strengtheneth a man to the employing of faith, come what can come, as David's affectionate resolution here teacheth us: What time I am afraid, I will trust in thee. 4. Faith grows valiant in fight; albeit it begin like a coward, and stagger in the first conflict, yet it groweth stout, incontinent, and pulls its adversaries under foot; In God I have put my trust, I will not fear what flesh can do unto me. 5. When faith prevaileth, fear ceaseth, and all opposition of enemies is despised; I will not fear what flesh can do unto me. 6. The best hold that faith can have of God, is to take him by his Word, however his dispensation seem to be, this will give satisfaction at length; for, In God I will praise his Word, is as much as, albeit he withhold comfort and deliverance from me, that I cannot finde what I would, yet let me have his Word, and I will give him the glory of all his attributes.

Ver. 5. Every day they wrest my words: all their thoughts are against me for evil.

6. They gather themselves together: they hide themselves, they mark my steps when they waite for my soule.
His second conflict is with the malice of his crafty and cruel enemies: of whom he complaineth that they misconstrued his actions, words and deeds, as smellung only of treason and rebellion, whether he stayed in the countrey, or fled out of it, and whatsoever expressions fell from him at any time for his own clearing, all was wrested to another meaning. 2. They devised each of them how to bring mischief upon him. 3. What they could not make out severally, they sought to ripen by consulting one with another. 4. They covered all their plots with faire pretences, and dissembled their intentions. 5. They observed narrowly every one of his steps, to make out something against him by their observations, for which it might seem justice to kill him. 6. They thought to double out their course, by more and more iniquity against him, for which he prayeth the Lord to execute justice against them. Whence learn, 1. Let the godly say or do whatsoever they can, how justly, how innocently soever they carry themselves, yet their adversaries will put another face upon their words and deeds, then what is right; Every day they wrest my words. 2. The Persecutors of Gods people do spend their wits in devising some harme or other against them; All their thoughts are against me for evil. 3. What the wicked cannot make out against the godly by themselves severally, they labour to make out by mutual counsel and concurrence; They gather themselves together. 4. Though the wicked reveal themselves one to another in their plots and designs against the godly, yet before others they use to put a veil over their malice, and some faire pretence what they minde to do; They hide themselves. 5. The wicked take occasion of forging their Pretences from observation of some passage of the carriage of the godly, that they may make them odious, and cut them off; They mark my steps, they wait for my soul.

Ver. 7. Shall they escape by iniquity? in thine anger cast down the people, O God?

The second victory of faith, is in his foresight of the punishment of his enemies approaching, howsoever they feared no such thing. Whence learn, 1. Sinners see no way to hide the mischief of their actions, save by doing more mischief, and in special by colouring their injuries with calumnies against the persons whom they injure, and by pretending law for what they do;
do; They think to escape by iniquity. 2. Howsoever the wicked may by their false pretences deceive their own eyes, & others like themselves, and so escape mans punishment, yet shall they not eschew the vengeance of God; but rather be so much the more liable unto it, as they do multiply iniquity, to hide iniquity; Shall they escape by their iniquity? cast them down. 3. Neither high place, nor multitude of people following wicked men in an evil course against Gods servants, shall save them from the wrath of God: In thine anger cast down the people, O God.

Ver. 8. Thou tellest my wanderings, put thou my teares into thy bottle: are they not in thy book?

The third Conflict, wherein he layeth out his mournful condition before God, with hope to find pity. Whence learn, 1. When faith hath gotten victory, it will finde new assaults: though faith overcometh a tentation, the Tempter will make head again; though faith overcame one tentation, another will enter the lists, & set on, as conflict after conflict here maketh evident. 2. Many a tear may the godly shed before their trial be ended, when once it is begun, and many uncouth paths may they tread, who are forced to flie the cruelty of Persecutors, before they finde rest; multitude of wanderings had David, and large measure of tears shed he, before he was delivered. 3. The looking back upon many and long continued troubles, being laid together in a heap, or put in order one after another, do muster terribly, and make a great assault against a mans faith and patience, as here the multitude of Davids wanderings and tears did shew themselves together before him. 4. God hath so great compassion on his servants in trouble, that he doth reckon even the steps of their wandering and pilgrimage, and doth number all their tears, and keep the count thereof, as it were in a register; and therefore every troubled servant of God, when they look upon their sufferings, should look upon God also, taking as particular notice of their troubles, as they themselves can do: Thou tellest my wanderings, put thou my teares into thy bottle, are they not in thy book?

Ver. 9. When I cry unto thee, then shall mine enemies turn back: this I know, for God is for me.
10. In God will I praise his word: in the Lord will I praise his word.

11. In God have I put my trust; I will not be afraid what man can do unto me.

The third and compleat victory of faith. Now he is confident to rout all his enemies by prayer, and to subdue all mortels by faith in God's Word. Whence learn, 1. Laying forth our cares and fears before God in prayer, is a way to get a satisfactory delivery by faith, before the bodily delivery do come; When I cry unto thee, then shall mine enemies turn back. 2. Faith goeth upon solid grounds, and is not a fallible conjecture: but a sure knowledge; This I know, faith he. 3. A reconciled man praying to God in a good cause, for victory over his Persecutors, may be assured that God will own his quarrel, and give him the victory; This I know, because God is for me. 4. The special attribute of God, wherewith faith doth meet, and whereby it attaineth unto rest and contentment in God, is his truth and fidelity in his promises: In God I will praise his Word; albeit there be no appearance of performance, God's Word is sure enough to fix upon. 5. The grounds of faith are the more sweet and satisfactory, the more they be examined and looked upon, and compared with their effects; for David is not content once to lay, In God I will praise his Word; but with comfort and confidence reneweth the commendation of God's Word, and the benefit he hath by it; I will not be afraid what man can do unto me. 6. As it is necessary for our justification to believe in God; so is it necessary for our consolation to observe that we have believed; for then may we promise to our selves all the blessedness which belongs to the believer: In God I have put my trust, I will not be afraid; for when we thus resolutely do set to our seal to God's truth, believing, and asserting our believing; then he setteth his seal to our faith, in confirming and relieving us.

Ver. 12. Thy vows are upon me, O God: I will render praise unto thee.

13. For thou hast delivered my soul from death: Wilt not thou deliver my feet from falling? that I may walk before God in the light of the living.
In the latter part of the Psalm, having now obtained delivery in his spirit by faith, he obliges himself to thankfulness, willing to be preferred and enabled of God for that end. Hence learn, 1. As God puts the duty of glorifying him upon the suppliant, when he promises delivery to him: so may the suppliant put the obligation of glorifying God upon himself, when he is praying for delivery out of his trouble, as David giveth us to understand he did, while he faith, Thy vows are upon me. 2. An honest heart is no lesse desirous to perform the duty of praise to God after delivery, then he was ready to make his vow and promise before his delivery; yea the conscience of the twofold obligation, is a burden upon his spirit, till he go about the payment of his twice due debt; Thy vows are upon me, O God, I will render praises to thee. 3. As deep dangers do serve to discover our weakness, and our need of God's help; so a well-seen danger maketh clear the greatness of the delivery; and the greatness of the delivery deciphereth the wisdom, power and goodness of God to us, and of our obligation unto him; I will render praises unto thee, for thou hast delivered my soul from death. 4. The right use of by-past dangers and deliveries, is to prepare for new dangers and difficulties, (for when one danger is past, all perils are not past,) and to renounce our own wisdom and strength as insufficient to preserve us from ruine either of soul or body, and to give up ourselves to God's guiding and preservation, and to depend upon God, and steadfastly to hope to be directed and preserved by him, all this is imported in David's words; Thou hast delivered my soul from death, wilt thou not preserve my feet from falling? 5. The end of our desires to have deliveries and benefits from God, should be, that we may spend our life, and the gifts bestowed upon us sincerely in the service of God, for the edification of his people; Wilt thou not preserve my feet from falling? that I may walk before God in the light of the living.
To the chief Musici in Al-taschith, Michtam of David, when he fled from Saul in the cave.

This Psalm of David, as many other his Psalms, doth represent the condition of his spirit, both in the time of his trouble, and after the delivery: what was his exercise in the Cave, and what was his condition after he was delivered out of that danger, whereof we read, 1 Sam. 24. There are two parts of the Psalm, the first containeth his prayer for deliverance, which is pressed by five arguments, all serving to strengthen his faith; the first, because he trusted in God, ver. 1. The second, because he resolved to insist in prayer till he were heard, ver. 2. The third, because he hoped certainly to finde notable delivery from this extraordinary danger, ver. 3. The fourth, because his enemies were beastly cruel, ver. 4. The fifth, because this mercy might contribute much to the glorifying of God, ver. 5. The sixth is, from the low condition whereunto his spirit is brought, by their crafty and cruel pursuit of him, ver. 6. In the rest of the Psalm is his thanksgiving, consisting of five parts; The first is the acknowledgment of the mercy and delivery granted, ver. 6. The next is his fixed resolution to praise God for it, ver. 7. The third is the upstirring of tongue and hand, and the whole man to praise God, ver. 8. The fourth is a promise to transmit the knowledge of God's mercy unto other Nations, ver. 9. The fifth is the acknowledgment of the glory of this mercy, with a wish that it might be more and more seen and acknowledged by giving new experience of it, ver. 10, 11.

From the Inscription, Learn, The godly may be involved in a deadly danger (as David was when he fled from Saul in the Cave) and yet not perish. Now he was as a man ready to be buried quick; for the Cave was as a grave, and the army of Saul at the mouth of the Cave, was as the grave-stone; let then the army of Saul know only that he is there, and keep him in, and he is gone; yet God blinded them, brought David out, and so delivered him.

Ver. 1.
Ps. L. lvii.

Ver. 1. Be merciful unto me, O God, be merciful unto me, for my soul trusteth in thee: yea, in the shadow of thy wings will I make my refuge, un\tfi\ntill these calamities be overpast.

From his prayer for deliverance, and first argument taken from his trusting in God, Learn, 1. The only refuge of a man in trouble, is the mercy of the Lord; be it sin, be it misery, be it peril or pressing evil; in mercy onely is the relief of one and all sad conditions: and in this case must a soul double its petition in the Lords bosom; Be merciful to me, O God, be merciful to me. 2. As it is not trouble simply which maketh prayer to be fervent, but solid faith pressed with trouble, which doubleth petitions unto God: so where faith in trouble, lieth unto God, it cannot but speed; Be merciful, O God, for I trust in thee. The force of the reason is, the Lord cannot for\tfake the soul which hath committed it self to him. 3. The Lord offereth relief and protection in Christ to miserable sinners, in as warme a manner as the similitude of a hen gathering her chickens, or the type of the stretching of the wings of the Cer\nubims about the Mercy-feat could express; and faith doth creep no leffe warmly in unto this offer in time of straits, then this similitude doth import; yea, in the shadow of thy wings will I make my refuge. 4. The use of Gods protection and warme love, is best known in time of trouble, and faith also is best set on work, to make use of Gods love and protection in time of troubles: In the shadow of thy wings will I make my refuge, until these calamities be overpast.

Ver. 2. I will cry unto God most High: unto God that performeth all things for me.

From the second argument which he useth for strengthening his faith, Learn, 1. Faith in God and invocation of his name, are graces inseparable; and resolution to persevere in believing is unseparable from resolution to persevere in praying unto God: and he that findeth in his heart such resolutions, may also be confident to speed in his requests made to God: for the Psalmist, as he did resolve to beleive in the former verse: so here he addeth, I will cry unto God: and hereby expecteth that God shall be merciful unto him. 2. It is needfull for the sup\nplicant in his straits, to keep in his sight the Lords Supremacy and and Omnipotency, for encouraging himself in hope to speed; I will cry to God most High, faith he. 3. The consideration of the Lords constant going on in the perfecting of the work of grace, which once he beginneth graciously in us or for us, doth serve much to strengthen our faith in prayer: I will cry to God who performeth all things for me.

Ver. 3. He shall send from heaven, and save me from the reproach of him that would swallow me up. Selah. God shall send forth his mercy and his truth.

From the third argument and prop of his prayer, taken from his hope to be helped; Learn, 1. Albeit faith be no help on earth, yet it looketh for help in heaven; and if ordinary means do fail, it assureth itself of God's working wonders, for perfecting of his promises; He shall send from heaven, and save me. 2. The godly man's making God his refuge, is a matter of meekness to the wicked; which mocking God will certainly refute, by making the godly finde the fruit of their flying to him; he will save me from the reproach of him that would swallow me up. 3. The mercy and truth of God, whereupon faith doth fix itself, do remove all impediments, and set on work all the means of the salvation of the believer, and that effectually: God shall send forth his mercy and his truth.

Ver. 4. My soul is among lions, and I lie even among them that are set on fire: even the sons of men: whose teeth are spears and arrows, and their tongue a sharp sword.

From the fourth reason of his prayer taken from the beastly cruelty of his enemies; Learn, 1. The condition of the people of the Lord in this world may be oft-times like sheep in peril of their lives, compassed about with ravenous beasts; My soul is among Lions. 2. Yea, they may be so desolate, as having no assistance from without themselves to fly or fight, they shall be forced like damned birds, chased by the hawke; or like bound sheep, to clap close down to the ground: I lie, faith he, among them. 3. The desolate condition of the godly, doth not move their persecutors to pity; deadly malice is most ready then to break forth, and to devour; I lie even among them that are set on fire. 4. Gracious men destitute of the fear of God, are fit enough instruments for the persecution of God's children, and his dear servants, servants; if they be no more, but yet in nature, even the children of men. 5. The flanders, mockings, lies, calumnies, reproaches and aspersions cast upon the godly by godless men, are no little part of their cruel persecution, of cutting and piercing the Lords people very deeply: whose teeth are spears and arrowes, and their tongue a sharp sword.

Ver. 5. Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens: let thy glory be above all the earth.

From the fifth reason of his petition; Learn, 1. When the godly are born down, and the wicked do carry all matters before them, the glory of the Lord is obscured and eclipsed in some sort among men, therefore saith he; Be thou exalted, O God. 2. In what measure Gods children are helped by him, and his enemies are born down; in that measure is he gloriously manifest ed to be the ruler of heaven and earth; Be thou exalted above the heavens, and thy glory above all the earth. 3. However the wicked do obscure the glory of the Lord, and how little evidence ever Gods children do see of his appearing for their relief, yet they ought to glorifie him in their heart, and not onely beleue his soveraigne power, able to set all things in order; but also to profess their hope that he shall manifest himself from heaven, to be Lord over all his enemies and adversary powers of the world; Be thou exalted above the heavens, and thy glory above all the earth.

Ver. 6. They have prepared a net for my steps, my soul is bowed down: they have digged a pit before me, into the midst whereof they are fallen themselves. Selah.

From the last reason of his supplication, Learn, 1. Great flight and subtilty do the wicked use to overtake the godly in some snare, one or other; They have prepared a net for my steps. 2. The godly mans strength will soone fail him in time of straits if the Lord do not give supply; yea, the Lord for the clearer manifestation of his glory, both before the godly and before the wicked also, doth suffer his children to come to so low a condition of spirit, that they are ready to succumb, if he do not help; My soul is bowed down. 3. When the enemies are at the highest of their plots, and the godly at the lowest step of their humiliation, then is the Lords time to turne the chafe, and to fall upon his enemies, and that oft times by that same very means whereby they were
Ver. 7. My heart is fixed, O God, my heart is fixed, I will sing and give praise.

In the rest of the Psalme he prosecureth his thanksgiving, and this is the second part of it, wherein he professeth his fixed purpose to praise the Lord for his delivery: Hence learn, 1. Renewed sense of God's favour, and fresh experience of his mercy towards his children, and of his justice against his and their enemies, doth much refresh, quiet, and settle the hearts of his people, and confirmes their faith; My heart is fixed. 2. It is a part of our thanksgiving unto God, to acknowledge the fruit of his gracious working for us, felt upon our spirits, whencesoever our hearts are cheared up by him, after any sad exercise: My heart is fixed, O God, my heart is fixed. 3. As it is needful to labour on the heart, that it may be fitted and prepared, fixed and bended for God's worship; so in special, for the work of praise, whereunto naturally we are most dull and indisposed; then shall the work go on more cheerfully: My heart is fixed, I will sing and give praise.

Ver. 8. Awake up, my glory: awake, psaltery and harp; I my self will awake early.

From the third part of this thanksgiving, wherein he stirs up himself by all means within and without himself, to set forth his sense of God's mercy, and of God's glory in bestowing of it; Learn, 1. A well-imployed tongue for praising of God, and edifying others, is indeed a mans commendation, and glory above other creatures: Therefore David directing his speech toward his tongue, after the manner of Orators affectionate speaking, faith, Awake, my glory. 2. Albeit the abolition of the Ceremonial Law hath taken away the roome, which musical instruments once had in the stately, publick, instituted worship of God in the congregation, yet neither is the natural private use thereof taken away, nor the signification of that typical ordinance to be forgotten, to wit, that we of our selves are dull and unapt to holy things, things, and that the Lords praises are above our power to reach unto them or express them: and that we should stir up all the faculties of our soul unto this holy service, as David here insinuateth to be the moral signification thereof; for after he hath said, Awake, Psaltery and Harp, he subjoyneth, I my self will awake. 3. As he, who in earnest is wakened up to glorifie and praise God, will finde himself short in abilities to discharge this work of praise: so will he finde the choicest time of the day, when the body is best refrehed, most deservedly bestowed upon this exercise: I my self will awake early.

Ver. 9. I will praise thee, O LORD, among the People; I will sing unto thee among the nations.

From the fourth part of his thanksgiving, wherein he promises to let all the world know the mercy bestowed upon him; Learne, 1. The Spirit of God, who indited this Scripture, made his Pen-man know, that the Gentiles should have the use of his Psalmes; I will praise thee amongst the People. 2. David was a type of Christ in sufferings, exercises spiritual, and in receiving of deliveries, for this promise is fulfilled in Christ, and this undertaking is applied unto Christ, Rom 15. 9. 3. Then do we seriously minde the praise of God, when according to our place we labour to make others also know God, as we know him: I will praise thee among the People.

Ver. 10. For thy mercy is great unto the Heavens, and thy truth unto the clouds.

11. Be thou exalted, O God, above the Heavens: let thy glory be above all the earth.

From the last part of his thanksgiving, wherein he confesseth that the excellency of the glory of God doth transcend his reach and capacity, and that he can follow it no further then by wishing the Lord to glorifie himself; Learne, 1. The matter of the joy of the Saints, and of their sweetest Songs, is the goodness of God, which appointed and promiseth such and such mercies unto them: and the faithfulness of God, which doth bring to passe his gracious purpose and promises made unto them; For thy mercy is great, and thy truth, faith he. 2. There is no possibility of taking up the greatness of Gods mercy and truth, they reach so farre as our sight cannot overtake them; Thy mercy is great unto the Heavens, where mortal eyes cannot come to see what is there: And thy truth unto the clouds, through which mans eye cannot cannot pierce. 3. Seeing the Lord's glory is greater than heaven or earth can contain, and God himself only can manifest his own glory; it is our part when we have said all we can, for glorifying of God, to pray him to glorify himself, and to make it appear, to all that his glory is greater than heaven or earth can comprehend; Be thou exalted above the Heavens, and let thy glory be above all the earth.

PSAL. LVIII.

To the chief Musician Al-taschi, Michtam of David.

The Psalmist being oppressed by the calumnies of the Courtiers of King Saul, and by the Senators of the Courts of Justice, who should have provided against the oppression of the subjects, chargeth them in the first part of this Psalm, as most guilty of injustice done to him, ver. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. In the second part, he prayeth against them, that God would execute judgement upon them, ver. 6, 7, 8. And in the third part, he pronounceth the sentence of their deserved destruction, ver. 9, 10, 11. From this experience of the Prophet, we may see what strong Parties, and hard opposition the godly may meet with in the defence of a good cause, and how necessary it is in such trials to exercise our faith, and to exalt God above all opposite powers, that we may be borne out, and get consolation and victory in the Lord.

2. Yes, in heart you work wickedness: you weigh the violence of your hands in the earth.

3. The wicked are estranged from the womb, they go astray as soon as they be born, speaking lies.

4. Their poison is like the poison of a serpent, they they are like the deaf Adder, that stoppeth her ear.

5. Which will not hearken to the voice of Charmers, charme never so wisely.

In the first part he chargeth the Council and Senate, or Congregation of the Judges; first, for not giving our righteous decrees or sentences, ver. 1. Secondly, for their resolved, violent, oppressing decrees, ver. 2. Thirdly, for their inveterate wickednesse, and falsehood from the wombe, ver. 3. Fourthly, for their incorrigible wickednesse, which they will not for any admonition or advertisement amend, ver. 4. 5. Whence learn, 1. There is a Congregation of Rulers, whose office it is to administer justice to the people; who presuppose they be the supreme Court in authority and place, above the body of the people; yet are they subject to Gods challenge, which he doth send unto them by the hand of his messengers, when they do wrong, as here we see; Do ye indeed speak righteousness, O Congregation? 2. When the just cause of the righteous cometh before the Judge, whosoever be pursuer, were he as great a Party as King Saul pursuing David, the Judge should defend the righteous and absolve him, without fearing mans face: and if he do not, he shall be called to a reckoning for it before God: Do ye judge uprightly, O ye sons of men? 3. The Lord looketh to the affections, purposes and conclusions of a mans heart, and what ill turn a man is resolved to do, for that is a done work before God: and the man is so much the more guilty, as his sin is deliberate: Yea, in heart you work wickednesse. 4. A wicked Judge doth not stand to give out a decree for as much oppression as he is able to put in execution: You weigh the violence of your hands in the earth; and when he is thus oppressing men, he will labour to seem to make his decree no lesse agreeable to the law, then the equal scales of the Merchants balance do in a just weight answer one to another; You weigh the violence of your hands. 5. An unrenewed man is a born stranger to God, to good men, and all goodness; The wicked are estranged from the wombe. 6. Mens wicked actions do prove the wickednesse of nature, or mens original sin doth augment the ditty and condemnation of unrenewed men for their actual sins: They are estranged from the wombe, is made here a part of their challenge. 7. Errour, falsehood and lies are kindly homes to men, they break out early, and continue long, long, and do draw on guiltiness the longer, the more: They go astray as soon as they be borne, speaking lies. 8. There is as great natural enmity in the wicked against the godly, as there is in serpents against mankind; and they are as ready to vent their deadly hatred against them, as serpents are to spue forth their deadly venom: Their poison is like the poison of a serpent.

9. That which filleth up the measure of the sins of the wicked is this, they are obscured in their sins; they are incorrigible, and will not receive instruction, admonition or correction from the Word of God: They are like the deaf Adder that stoppeth her ears.

10. Albeit holy Scripture useth to compare the best things in some points unto the worst things, for clearing the purpose in hand by a similitude, yet doth it not therefore justify the wicked thing, by borrowing a similitude from it, as here the admonition and reproof of sinners is compared to charming of an Adder, and yet for that comparison the damnable not charming is not the lesse damnable; nor is the duty of reproof and admonition of sinners the more, or lesse laudable for the comparison, for it is a challenge: They are like the deaf Adder that stoppeth her ears, which will not hearken unto the charmer, charming never so wisely.

Ver. 6. Break their teeth, O God, in their mouth:
break out the great teeth of the young lions, O LORD:

7. Let them melt away as waters which run continually: When he bendeth his bowe to shoot his arrowes, let them be as cut in pieces.

8. As a snail which melteth, let every one of them passe away: like the untimely birth of a woman that they may not see the Sun.

In the second part of the Psalm he maketh imprecation against them, by special warrant of the Spirit of God, who endited this Psalm unto him, that judgement might be executed against them unto destruction. Whence learn, 1. The Lord shall in due time disable the wicked from doing the harme they intend to do against God's people; for this prayer is a prophecy and promise to the Churches comfort: Break their teeth, O God, in their mouth. 2. Were the wicked never so potent and refolute to execute their cruelty, God shall break their power in pieces: Break out the great teeth of the young Lions, O Lord.

3. When once God entereth in judgement with the enemies of his people, he shall bring upon them a constant daily consumption and wasting of their power and abilities till they be abolished: Let them melt away like water that runs continually.

4. The chief plots of the wicked shall miscarry, in the very point of their putting them in execution: When he bendeth his bowe to shoot his arrowes, let them be as cut in pieces. 5. How strong forever the foundation of the enterprises of the wicked against the godly seem to themselves to be, yet the event shall prove them to be weak, feeble and effectlesse devices: As a snail which melteth let them passe away, as the untimely birth of a woman, that they may not see the Sun.

Ver. 9. Before your pots can seele the thornes, he shall take them away as with a whirlwinde, both living and in his wrath.

10. The righteous shall rejoice when he seeth the vengeance: he shall wash his feet in the blood of the wicked.

11. So that a man shall say, Verily there is a reward for the righteous: Verily he is a God that judgeth in the earth.

In the last part of the Psalm he pronounceth the sentence of deserved destruction upon the wicked and unrighteous Potentates, oppressors of the godly, as an answer from God to the former imprecation against them, and that for the consolation of the godly, and clearing of Gods justice among men. Whence learn, 1. Howsoever the ungodly do hope to make themselves good cheer by their works of iniquity, and do rejoice a while in their hopes, yet before they finde any ripe satisfaction by their ill deeds, suddenly are they destroyed, and as it were swallowed up quick, and taken away by the fierce wrath of God against them: Before your pots can seele the thornes, he shall take them away as with a whirlwinde, both living and in his wrath. 2. It is lawful for the godly to rejoice in Gods justice against the obstinate enemies of his people: provided their joy be indeed in Gods justice, not in the destruction of the creatures but in the manimanifestation of God's just avenging hand: The righteous shall rejoice when he seeth the vengeance. 3. The punishment of the wicked should reach the Lords people to be more holy in all their ways, for this is one of the ends of God's punishing the wicked in their sight; The righteous shall wash his feet in the blood of the wicked. 4. When the Lord executeth judgement against the wicked, then men who knew not what to think of God's providence, when they saw the godly oppressed, and the wicked high in power shall come to a right judging of matters: So that a man shall say, Verily there is a reward for the righteous. 5. No man serveth God for nought, in following the course of friendship with God, and walking in obedience unto him, fruit certainly will be found: Verily there is a reward for the righteous. 6. Albeit the Lord doth not set down his Court for executing justice so soon as men would, yet he failes not to shew himself Ruler of the affairs of men, and a righteous Judge, as to relieve the oppressed, so also to take order with oppressors: Verily he is a God that judgeth in the earth.

PSAL. LIX.
To the chief Musician Al-taschith, Michtam of David: when Saul sent, and they watch't the house to kill him.

David in present danger of his life by Saul, (who having David inclofed within the City and within his own house, thought surely to have killed him, as we read, 1 Sam. 19. 11.) he prayeth to God for deliverance, ver. 1, 2. and for a reason of his prayer, maketh a complaint against his enemies, ver. 3, 4. In the next place, he prayeth the second time for delivery to himself, and judgement against his enemies, ver. 5. and complaineth of them the second time, ver. 6, 7. In the third place, he declareth his confidence to be delivered, ver. 8, 9, 10. In the fourth place, he maketh imprecation against his enemies for their wickedness, ver. 11, 12, 13, 14, 15. And in the last place, he promiseth thanks to God for his delivery, whereof he was assured before it came, ver. 16, 17.

From the Inscription, Learn, 1. No common bands of nature or civil relations can secure the godly from the persecution of the wicked; for Saul, Davids father in law senteth to kill David. 2. Gods children cannot be in so great straits, nor the diligence of the wicked be so great to overtake the godly in a strait, but God can deliver a supplicant; They watched the house to kill him, yet he escaped and did write this Psalm: by what means he escaped he doth not tell here, for he attributeth the delivery to God, from whom he did seek it by prayer.

Ver. 1. Deliver me from mine enemies, O my God: defend me from them that rise up against me.

2. Deliver me from the workers of iniquity, and save me from bloody men.

From his prayer; Learn, 1. Whatsoever means God shall offer for escaping out of a trouble, Prayer is our best weapon against our enemies, and the best of all means, and first of all to be used for a delivery; Deliver me from mine enemies. 2. Time of trouble and difficulty doth put believers to make use of the Covenant of grace, and of Gods friendship and power for their deliverance; O my God, defend me from them that rise up against me. 3. When wicked, and powerful, and blood-thirsty men do turn Persecutors of the godly, no power but divine can be looked unto for a relief; Deliver me from the workers of iniquity, and save me from bloody men.

Ver. 3. For lo, they lie in wait for my soul: the mighty are gathered against me, not for my transgression, nor for my sinne, O Lord:

4. They runne and prepare themselves without my fault: awake to help me, and behold.

From his complaint against his enemies, and reason of his prayer; Learn, 1. Desperate-like dangers arising from the power and craftiness of enemies, must not discourage the godly, but sharpen their prayer to God, with whom is power and wisdom to deliver them: For lo, they lie in wait for my soul. 2. It is no new thing, to see them who are in greatest power, to be the chief in the persecution of Gods children; The mighty are gathered there being together against me. 3. A good conscience, especially in the particular for which a man is pursued, giveth greatest comfort in the time of trouble. Not for my transgression, nor my sin, O Lord. 4. Albeit the Persecutors of the godly cannot finde a fault in them, for which they may pursue them; yet will they device some challenge, and make a great business to accomplish their designe; They run and prepare themselves, not for my fault.
5. The Lord will let the plot go on, and the danger of the godly grow, as if he minded not to take notice of it, that he may first put his children to prayer, and then appear in the fit time:
Awake to help me, and behold.

Ver. 5. Thou therefore, O LORD God of hostes, the God of Israel, awake to visit all the heathen: be not merciful to any wicked transgressors.
Selah.

6. They return at evening: they make a noise like a dog, and go round about the City.

7. Behold, they belch out with their mouth, swords are in their lips: for who, say they, doth beare?

From his repeated prayer and complaint presented the second time; Learn, 1. In time of strait we should set our eyes most upon those stiles of God, which most serve to strengthen our faith, especially such as hold forth his power and good will to employ his power for us; Thou therefore, O Lord God of hostes, the God of Israel, awake. 2. Counterfeit Professors, and professed Pagans are all one before God in effect, and the counterfeit Professor will be as ready an instrument to persecute the godly as a professed enemy; for so is Saul and his followers na-mmed here; Awake to visit all the Heathen. 3. Although the Lord beare with the wicked a while, he will at last take order with hypocrites, and obstinately malicious transgressors; Awake to visit all the Heathen, be not merciful to any wicked transgressor. 4. From the time that Persecutors have once resolved cruelty, they cease not to pursue their purpose, but like bloody dogs they run to and fro till they catch their prey; they are bume all the day, and set watches in the night to hurt the man they would have; They return at evening, they make a noise like Resolved obstinacy in sinne taketh away all remorse of conscience, all feare of God, and shame before men, and maketh men openly avow their wickednesse; yea and their cruel hearts will vent their bloody purpose, when they think they are sure to accomplish their designe; Behold, they belch out with their mouth, swords are in their lips; for who (say they) doth heare?

Ver. 8, But thou, O LORD, shalt laugh at them; thou shalt have all the heathen in derision.

9. Because of his strength will I wait upon thee; for God is my defence.

10. The God of my mercy shall prevent me: God shall let me see my desire upon mine enemies.

In the third place, he declareth his confidence to be delivered, and doth make sweet use of his faith for keeping up his heart under his trouble. Wherefore learn, 1. The first fruit of an humble Prayer, is a spiritual delivery of a mans oppressed spirit, granted to him by faith and assurance of an outgate, as here, and many times elsewhere appeareth. 2. When faith seeth God to be a friend, it scorneth all opposition of whatsoever enemies, few or many; all is one to the clear-sighted believer; But thou, O Lord, shalt laugh at them, thou shalt have all the heathen in derision. 3. How weak soever the believer finde himself, and how powerful soever he perceive his enemy to be, it is all one to him, he hath no more to do, but to put faith on work, and to wait till God work; because of his (that is, the enemies') strength, I will wait upon thee, faith he to the Lord, for God is my defence. 4. When faith gets up the head, it seeth its own deliverance, and the overthrow of the enemy, both at once in the proper cause thereof, to wit, the fountain of over-running mercy, engaged unto it by Covenant; The God of my mercy. There is the fountain of everlasting mercy, whereof God is called God, because he is the believers God for ever, and therefore the God of all mercy, consolation and salvation to the believer; He (faith he) shall prevent me; that is, he shall give manifest deliverance before I succumb; it shall come sooner then I could set it a time, Then, for his enemies, he faith, God shall let me see upon mine eneenemies; to wit, what I could lawfully desire, or what should satisfy me.

Ver. 11. Slay them not, lest my people forget: Scatter them by thy power, and bring them down, O Lord, our shield.

12. For the sinne of their mouth, and the words of their lips, let them even be taken in their pride: and for cursing and lying which they speak:

13. Consume them in wrath, consume them, that they may not be: and let them know that God ruleth in Jacob unto the ends of the earth. Selah.

14. And at evening let them returne, and let them make a noise like a dog, and go round about the City.

15. Let them wander up and down for meat: and grudge if they be not satisfied.

In the fourth place, he prayeth to God to glorifie himself in the manner and measure of his just judgement on his obstinate enemies; which in effect is a Prophecy of the punishment of Persecutors of the righteous, and of the wrath to come upon the enemies of Christ, of whom David in his trouble and unjust sufferings was a type. Wherefore learn, 1. Sometime the Lord will delay the cutting off of wicked enemies of his people, for a curse to them, and a benefit to his people: Slay them not, lest my people forget. 2. The Lords people are subject to forget the Lords doing for them, and punishing of their enemies, except the Lord did renew the evidence of his care he hath of them, by often renewed, or long continued judgement on their enemies, whose misery is made more to them, by lingering judgements in the sight of men, then if they were cut off more suddenly; Slay them not, lest my people forget; 3. In praying against our wicked enemies that persecute us, we must take heed that we be not found pleading, not our own particular revenge, but the common cause of the Church, and the Lords quarrel; Slay them not, lest my people forget; scatter and bring them down, O Lord, our shield.
It is the good of the Lords people, and the glorifying of God which is in his eyes. 4 Albeit the Lord do not at first cut off the troubleurs of his Church, but do suffer them to live for the exercise of his people; yet it is mercy worthy to be prayed for, if God disable them, and break their power, that they prevale nor over the righteous; Scatter them by thy power, and bring them down, O Lord, our shield 5. Albeit the Persecutors do not accomplish their purpose against the righteous; yet their pride, their brags, their lies, their flanders, their curses against the godly, are a sufficient ditty for damnation, and wrath to come upon them; For the sin of their mouth, and the words of their lips, let them even be taken in their pride, and for cursing and lying which they spe k. 6. After the keeping alive of the wicked for a time, to the excusing of their misery, at length utter destruction come upon them; Consume them in wrath, consume them, that they may not be 7. By the judgements of God upon the adversaries of his people, the knowledge of his sovereignty over, and Kingly care for his Church is made more known to the world, the encrease of which glory of the Lord should be the scope of the prayers of the Saints against their foes; And let them know that God ruleth in Jacob unto the ends of the earth. 8. It is suitable to Gods just ce, and no strange thing to see such as have been messengers, servants, officers of persecuting powers, or searchers out of the godly, as beagles or blood hounds, to be made beggars, vagabonds, and miserable spectacles of Gods wrath before they die, roving to and fro like hungry and masterlesse dogs; At evening let them return, and let them make a noise like a dog, and go round about the City, let them wander up and down for meat, and grudge if they be not satisfied.

Ver. 15. But I will sing of thy power; yea, I will sing aloud of thy mercy in the morning; for thou hast been my defence and refuge in the day of my trouble.

17. Unto thee, O my strength, will I sing; for God is my defence, and the God of my mercy.

In the last place, he promiseth thanksgiving for the mercy which he felt in the day of his trouble, and fixed his faith on God, as his mercifull Protector, and only strength, whereon he was was to lean in every condition wherein he could fall. Whence learn, I. Wha for ever mischief fall upon the wicked, the Lord's children whom they maligne, shall have reason to rejoice and to praise God for supporting them in their trials, and delivering of them out of troubles: But I will sing of thy power. 2. When the godly do compare the Lords putting difference between them and the rest of the wicked world, pitying them and pardoning their sins, when he justly pursueth the sins of others, they cannot but rejoice and proclaim Gods mercy with earnest affection: Tea, I will sing aloud of thy mercy in the morning. 3. The shining light of one late experience of Gods care of a man, serveth to bring to remembrance, and to illuminate the whole course of Gods by past care, and kindnesse to him, and to raise a song of joy and praise to God for altogether; For thou hast been my refuge and defence in the day of trouble. 4. What God hath been unto us (being looked on rightly) may serve to certify us what God is unto us, and what and what shall be to us, and and what we may expect of him: For from, thou hast been my defence and my refuge, he inferreth hope of joyful experience of the same mercy for time to come; Unto thee, O my strength, will I sing. 5. When a man is sure of God engaged to him by good will and Covenant, and proof given for letting out to him protection and mercy, as his sou needeth, he cannot choose but have a heart full of joy, and a mouth full of joyful praises unto God: Unto thee, O my strength, will I sing, for God is my defence, and the God of my mercy.

PSAL. LX.

To the chief Musician upon Shushan-Eduth Michtam of David, to teach. When he strove with Aram Naharaim, and with Aram Zobab, when Joab returned and smote of Edom in the valley of salt, twelve thousand.

This Psalm is a prayer for the victory of Israel over their enemies intided unto the Prophet when Israel was fighting with the Syrians and Edomites. It may be divided into three parts; in the first whereof the Psalmist prayeth for help more largely, v. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 In the second part David is made confident of the victory, ver. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10. In the third part he repeateth his prayer.
prayer more briefly, and his confidence of having the victory, ver. 11, 12.

From the Inscription; Learne, 1. The children of God must not think it strange, to be put to wrestling, striving and fighting for a promised Kingdom, before they be settled in possession, as David was; yea, the Church of Christ must resolve for such like exercises; for this Psalm is given to the publick Ministers of the Church for use in all ages. 2. The Church must make use of her prayers, as well when she is furnished with a regular army, as when she wanteth bodily arms, as David teacheth the Church here. 3. There is hope of victory, when God by prayer is more relied upon, than the army in the fields; for with the Psalm the mention of the victory of the Lord's host is set down, and the slaughter of the enemy recorded; That Joab smote of Edom twelve thousand.

Ver. 1. O God, thou hast cast us off, thou hast scattered us, thou hast been displeased, O turn thyself to us again.

Of the larger prayer there are three branches; the first is for reconciliation with God, ver. 1. The second for reparation of the decayed state of the Kingdom, ver. 2, 3. The third for delivery and victory in the conflict with the enemy, ver. 4, 5.

In the first branch of his prayer he acknowledgeth by-gone judgements, as the fruit of God's displeasure, and of the peoples provocation of God to wrath, and so he prayeth that God would turn again and be reconciled to his people. Whereupon learn, 1. Terrible evils may befall the Lords people, or the visible Church, when they by their sinne do provoke him to wrath, as was seen in the time of the Judges, and in Saul's time; O God thou hast cast us off, thou hast scattered us. 2. When God doth plague a whole Kingdom, or the body of the visible Church, it is not a matter of simple exercise or trial (as when he bringeth trouble on some of his dear servants, in the time of their upright carriage,) but it is for their sins, and provocation of the eyes of his glory; Thou hast been displeased. 3. Such as would have plagues removed, must acknowledge their sin, and seek to be reconciled with God, and in this way may they expect to finde favour; O turn
4. Whatsoever sins the visible Church and incorporation of Professors have done against God, or whatsoever injuries they have done against the godly, in assisting of persecuting powers against them; yet the godly must not only not separate from them, but also be ready to receive them into favour, be reconciled with them, forgive their former injuries, joyned in Church and Camp-fellowship with them being reconciled, share with them by compassion in calamities, interceded with God for them, as for themselves, as being all of one incorporation, as David, the type of Christ's moderate and merciful governing, and a parent to all the godly, did forgive those that persecuted him, fought against him under King Saul, and stood longest out against him, when Saul was dead, for David here doth lay with, and for the people; O God, thou hast scattered us: O turn thy self again to us.

Ver. 2. Thou hast made the earth to tremble, thou hast broken it: heal the breaches thereof, for it shaketh.

3. Thou hast showed thy people hard things: thou hast made us to drink the wine of astonishment.

When Saul did reign, all things went wrong, the wicked abounded, and vile men were exalted, and God plagued the land; therefore in the second branch of his prayer, he prayed for restauration of the dejected state of the Kingdome: the calamities whereof he layeth forth, both before and after the petition. Whence learn, 1. When people will not stand in awe of God, and fear him, he will strike them with the fear of his wrath, and sense of sore judgements; Thou hast made the earth to tremble. 2. Warre, and in speciall civil and intestine war, is most able to ruine a Kingdom, and like an earthquake to make ruptures and breaches in it, to the renting of it in pieces: Thou hast made the earth to tremble, thou hast broken it. 3. It is a Christian and royal vertue, to seek the union of the subje&s among themselves, and to remove divisions of the Kingdome, without the removing whereof the State can never be setled: But it is a divine power to work this union effectually: therefore doth he pray to God for it: Heal the breaches thereof, for it shaketh. 4. When people will not see nor take knowledge of their their sins against God, and their obliged duties to him, he will let them see sad spectacles of bloody warres, forreign and intertine: Thou hast shewed thy people hard things. 5. When people have belotted themselves in their sin, and have not beleevd what God hath threatened against them, no wonder they know not what hand to turn them unto, and be stricken with astonishment in the execution of his judgements, which when they fall upon a people, either suddenly or more heavily then they could have expected, they put mens minde in a confusion, as if they were drunk; for sudden, sore and lasting judgements confound the thoughts of secure sinners, so as they can make little use of the Word of God, or of their wit, or any other means of relief, more then a drunken man overcharged with wine; Thou hast made us to drink the wine of astonishment.

Ver. 4. Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee: that it may be displayed, because of the truth. Selah.

That thy beloved may be delivered, save with thy right hand, and heare me.

In the third branch of his prayer, he seeketh delivery and victory over the enemy, and that because God had begun to give some hope of changing the face of affairs, by raising a banner in Davids hand for the Lords cause and people; Whence learn, 1. When the godly are opprest, the truth of Religion, and of Gods promises doe lie at under, like a fallen Standard; and when God raiseth up instruments of their protection and comfort, as here he did in bringing David to the Kingdome, it is like the lifting up of an Ensign in the hand of a valiant Standard bearer; Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee. 2. It is for the godlies cause that mercy is shewn to a whole land, Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee. 3. When the godly get up their head, all their endeavour, according to the utmost of their power, should be to advance true Religion and the practice of it: Thou hast given a banner, that it may be displayed, because of the truth. 4. As nothing is respected by God in a land so much as his Elect that fear him; so nothing can encourage us to seek and hope for mercy to a land, so much as the Lords love to them that fear him in it: that thy beloved may be delivered, save. 5. When God hath begun to appear for his Church, then in special should we follow a begun blessing with prayer, that God would work out the benefit; Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee, that thy beloved may be delivered, save. 6. Whatsoever difficulties appear in the way of the Churches delivery, we must oppose the omnipotency of God to them all, and sustain our faith in prayer by looking to his love toward his Church, and power to do for her; That thy beloved may be delivered, save with thy right hand, and hear me.

Ver. 6. God hath spoken in his holiness, I will rejoice; I will divide Shechem, and mete out the valley of Succoth.

7. Gilead is mine, and Manasseh is mine: Ephraim also is the strength of mine head; Judah is my Law-giver.

In the second part of the Psalm is set down David's confidence to have the victory over his enemies, and to have his Kingdom both settled at home, ver. 6, 7. and enlarged abroad, ver. 8, 9, 10.

By David's prayer, the word of promise that he should be established King, is made lively unto him, whereupon he is comforted, and made confident of the accomplishment thereof in all points; Whence learn, 1. As faith helpeth up prayer, so by prayer faith is settled and strengthened, as here is evidenced.

2. The word of promise is a more sure evidence then begun possession, for David was not so sure of the Kingdom now, because he had begun to reign, as because God had spoken. 3. Then is the Word of God setted on, and rejoiced in, when it is received as his Word, when his holiness is taken as a pawn for performance; God hath spoken in his holiness, I will rejoice. 4. Whatsoever resteth unperfected, of what is promised to us by God, shall be fully put in our possession, as David here assureth himself, to exercise the supreme government in those parts of his Kingdom, on the one, or other side of Jordan, which yet were not brought unto subjection, or settled under him; I will divide Shechem, and mete out the valley of Succoth, &c. 5. Whatsoever strength or increase of number the Kingdom of Israel was to have from the plurality of Tribes, and their strength, yet the union of the sons of Abraham, and stability of the Kingdom of Israel, consisted in their joint subjection to the Law-giver, and government of Judah, out of which Tribe Christ came, who is the true Law-giver and King of Israel, towards whom the Church of old was to direct their eye, through their typical governors, Judah is my Law-giver.

Ver. 8. Moab is my washpot, over Edom will I cast out my shoe: Philistia triumph thou because of me.

9. Who will bring me into the strong city? who will lead me into Edom?

10. Wilt not thou, O God, which hadst cast us off? and thou, O God, which didst not go out with our armies?

Here he is assured by the Lords word, not onely of the establishment of his Kingdome at home, but also of the enlarging of it abroad, by the subduing of such as had been enemies to Israel before. Whence learn, 1. When the Lord doth unite his people under the government of Judah, and giveth them grace to take the true Ruler of the Tribe of Judah for their Law-giver, then shall the enemies of Israel be brought low, and either used contemptibly, as they did sometimes use the Lords people, or else shall professe themselves happy in their subjection to the King of Israel; for after that David, as the type of Christ, had endited a Song to the Church, wherein he should acknowledge Judah their Law-giver, then he as the type of Christ, doth give them to sing this also; Moab is my washpot, that is, Moab shall serve me in the basest service I shall put them unto; Over Edom will I cast out my shoe, that is, I shall subdue them, and trample them under my feet as I passe through them; Philistia triumph thou, because of me; that is, instead of thy triumphing over my people; thou shalt be made to professe thy joy, to be under my government. 2. The beleever when he promiseth to himself great things, must neither be senselesse of the difficulties of opposition which he is to meet with, nor of his own inability to overcome difficulties, but being sensible of both must look to God for assistance, and furniture to overcome; for when David considered the strength of the fenced royal Cities of the enemy, he faith, Who will bring me into the strong city? Who will lead me into Edom? Wilt not thou O God? 3. It is Gods absence from, or gracious presence with a people, which maketh the success of the warres of his people against their enemies worse or better, and their bad success in former time, or by-past judgements on them; for sinne must be so farre from marring the con-confidence of a people turning home to God; and seeking to finde help from him, that on the contrary, the judgements inflicted upon them in their impenitency, serving for confirmation of the threatenings of Gods Word, and evidence of his justice, must be made arguments of confirmation of faith in Gods promises, of merciful assistance, when they are turned towards God; for so reasoneth David, Who will bring me into Edom? Wilt not thou, 0 God, which hadst cast us off, and thou, 0 God, which didst not go out with our armies?

Ver. 11. Give us help from trouble: for vain is the help of man.

12. Through God we shall do valiantly: for he it is that shall pull down our enemies.

In the last part he briefly resumeth his prayer, and confidence to be heard; Wherefore learn, 1. The certainty of hope should not make us the more slack, but rather the more earnest and fervent in prayer; for after this professed assurance, David insisteth in prayer; Give us help from trouble. 2. Seeing God onely is the strength and furniture of his people, and he cannot endure that they should relie upon any means, which they may and must use, but upon himself onely; Therefore the lesse confidence we put in the creature, the more may we be confident of help from God; Give us help from trouble, for vain is the help of man.

3. A self-denying and humbled believer may go with courage and hope of success to the use of the meanes, and may encounter with whatsoever opposition of enemies; Through God we shall do valiantly. 4. The praise of valour and gallantry of victorious soldiers must not be parted betwixt God and the victor: but whatsoever God doth in us, or by us, must be no lesse wholly ascribed unto God, then if he had done all the work without us; for both the valour of the instrument, and the victory are the works of the Lord, the motions of body and soul of the victor are the work and upshurting of God within him, and the operation and effects wrought by the instrument, are the works of God, without the victor; for he it is that shall tread down our enemies.
To the chief Musician upon Neginah. A Psalm of David.

David now in his exile maketh his address to God in a sad condition, ver. 1, 2, 3. And is comforted in the Lord, and persuaded of his present and future happiness, ver. 4, 5. And of the perpetuity of the Kingdom of Christ, represented by him, to the comfort of all Christ's subjects in all ages, ver. 6, 7, 8.

Ver. 1. Hear my cry, O God: attend unto my prayer.

2. From the end of the earth will I cry unto thee, when my heart is overwhelmed: lead me to the rock that is higher then I.

3. For thou hast been a shelter for me, and a strong tower from the enemy.

In his sad supplication he prayeth for a comfortable receiving of his request, and for a comfortable rest of his soul on God himself through Christ, hoping to be heard, because he was resolved to look toward God, and to continue praying, whatsoever condition of spirit he should be in, and in what ever part he should be; and also because he had experience of God's help in his straits in former times; Whence learn, 1. The best expedient for a sad soul, is to run to God by prayer for comfort, and to insist earnestly, albeit God should seem not to attend; Hear my cry, O God, attend unto my prayer. 3. When the godly are driven from their countrie, and fellowship with the Saints, and from exercise of the publike ordinances, no wonder they fall in perplexity of spirit, for David forced to flee to the ends of the land, finds his heart overwhelmed within him. 4. It is exile indeed to be secluded from the liberty of publike ordinances, and it is our home, to be where God is publicly worshipped, for David counteth himself cast out unto the ends of the earth; when he is debarred from the Temple of the Lord. 5. Albeit a man were never so farre banished from the free society of the Church, and communion.

6. There is a rock of refuge for safety and comfort to the exiled and perplexed Saint, which is able to supply all wants, and to sweeten all sorrows, and this is the Rock of God's self, friendship in Christ from heaven, represented by the visible rock of Zion, where the Tabernacle and mercy-seat was situate, the appointed trysting-place, where God did receive the prayers of his people, and did answer them from heaven; when David could not come to the typical mount or rock, he prayeth to have access to the thing signified: lead me to the Rock that is higher than I. Sensible and comfortable communion with God, is a mystical spiritual, which man's wisdom or power cannot discover, nor bring unto him: but God himself must reveal, and must renew the revealing of himself to a soul in trouble, and must make a man's soul to apply it self to him powerfully, else a man cannot feel this comfortable fellowship with God, more then a blinde man can finde out what is removed from him, or a weak childe can go nor being led, or a man can reach up to a steep high place, not being lifted up unto it: Therefore must the Lord himself draw us near to himself, and lift us unto himself: lead me to the rock that is higher than I. 8. This spiritual self communion with God is able to put a man farre from the reach of any enemy, and doth make a soul quietly to rest itself from fear of trouble, how great soever the external danger can be, as David many times felt by experience: for thou hast been a shelter unto me, and a strong tower from the enemy. 9. A believer's resolution for depending on God, and praying to him in hardest conditions, and his present use making of former experiences, as they do serve much for strengthening of his faith in prayer: so they are the nearest means that can be for coming by a renewed sensible comfort, as here we see: for David resolveth, from the ends of the earth I will cry and prayeth, Lead me to the rock, and faith, Thou hast been a strong tower to me, and to comfort doth follow quickly after this preparation, as the next verse doth shew.

Ver. 4. I will abide in thy Tabernacle for ever: I will trust in the covert of thy wings. Selah.

5. For thou, O God, hast heard my vows: thou hast given me the heritage of them that fear thy Name.

Here he is comforted in his exile, and made to be at home in his spirit, by reason of the present sense of God's favour to him; and of his confirmed hope of the performances of the promises made unto him: \textit{Wherefore learn,} 1. The Lord can give such satisfaction to a sad heart in the time of its trouble, that the trouble may turn to be no trouble, even while it lieth on still, as here is to be seen in David's comfort, who speaketh as if he were restored, while he is yet in exile. 2. Spiritual consolations in temporal troubles, do both give satisfaction to a soul for the present, and for time to come, for everlasting happiness; \textit{I will abide in thy Tabernacle for ever:} his hope is, that not only he shall be restored to the fellowship of the Saints, at the Tabernacle in Jerusalem, but also that he shall be in God's company, in heaven, represented by the Tabernacle, and that for ever. 3. True consolation standeth not in earthly things, but in things heavenly, and things having nearest relation thereto, for David's comfort was not so much that he should be brought to the Kingdom, as that he should be brought to the Tabernacle, and to heaven by that means; \textit{I will abide in thy Tabernacle.} 4. Sincerity setteth no term-day to God's service, or to the seeking of communion with him: \textit{I will abide in thy Tabernacle for ever.} 5. The ground of all spiritual consolations is in the mercy and grace of God offered to us in Christ, represented by the wings of the Cherubims stretched out over the mercy-seat; There faith findeth a rest and solid ground, able to furnish comfort abundantly; \textit{I will trust in the covert of thy wings.} 6. Access to God in prayer, and approbation of the conscience, and the sincere pouring forth of the heart, melting with present felt sense of God's love, do strengthen greatly the assurance of everlasting communion with God; \textit{for thou, O God, hast heard my vows.} 7. As spiritual comfort in time of trouble granted to a believer, is indeed earnest of everlasting life, so should they to whom ever the heirship is given, make reckoning that by this heiress the inheritance is confirmed unto them by way of possession begun; \textit{thou hast given me the heritage of those that fear thy Name.} 8. The inheritance of the chief of God's servants, and of the meanest and weakest of them, is one; the right of every believer is alike good, albeit the hold laid upon the right by all, is not alike strong, and what the strongest of the godly do believe for their own consolation and salvation, the weakest may believe the same to belong to every believer that feareth God, as \textit{David doth here, }\textit{Thou hast given me the heritage of those that fear thy Name.} Ver. 6. Thou wilt prolong the King's life: and his years as many generations.

7. He shall abide before God for ever: O prepare mercy and truth, which may preserve him.

8. So will I sing praise unto thy Name for ever, that I may daily perform my vows.

In the third place, he prophesieoth not simply of the stability of the Kingdom in his own person and posterity, but under the type namely he speaketh of the perpetuity of the Kingdome of Christ, the true King of Israel, for which end he prayeth that mercy and truth may be forth-coming to the subjects of Christ, that his Kingdom may be prolonged, and so David in his time, and all the Saints in their time, may joyfully praise God continually. Whence, learn 1. It is not unusual with God, together with present consolation, and the light of future salvation in Christ, to reveal also and give assurance of great things concerning Christ's Kingdome, as here and elsewhere in the Scripture is to be seen: Thou wilt prolong the King's life, and his years, as many generations. 2. The glory of Christ, and perpetuity of his Kingdome is every subjects good and comfort, for this is comfort to David, that Christ shall live for ever, that he shall abide before God for ever. 3. The Kingdome of Christ, and government of his subjects; in his Church shall be allowed of God, and be protected of God, and blessed of God for ever, however it be opposed by men in the world: he shall abide before God for ever. 4. The perpetuity of Christ's Kingdom, and preservation of the subjects in this life, till they be poselied of heaven, is by the merciful remedying the misery, and removing of the sin which they are subject unto, and by performing of what he hath promised and prepared through Christ to bestow upon them; O prepare mercy and truth, which may preserve him. 5. The best retreat that can be made after wrestling and victory over troubles, is prayer and praises, as here David after his exercise prayeth, O prepare mercy and truth, and then faith, unto thee will I sing. 6. As the main matter of our vows is the moral duty of rejoicing in God, and hearty praising of him: so renewed experience of Gods mercy and truth towards his people in Christ, is the main matter of our joy in him and praise unto him; O prepare mercy and truth, &c. so will I sing praise unto thy Name, that I may daily perform my vows.
To the chief Musician, to Jeduthun. A Psalm of David.

This Psalm is the issue of a sore conflict, and inward combate, which David felt from the strong opposition of his irreconcilable adversaries, and from the lasting troubles which he sustaine by their persecution and by his friends forsaking of him, whereby he was put hard to it what to think or what to do: at length faith in God giveth him victory, and maketh him first to break forth in avowing of his faith, and hope in God, ver. 1, 2. Next, to insult over his enemies as dead men, because of their sinful course, ver. 3, 4. Thirdly, to strengthen himselfe in his faith and hope, ver. 5, 6, 7. Fourthly, to exhort all men to trust in God, and to depend on him, for reasons set down, ver. 8, 9. And not to trust in oppression and robbery, for reasons set down. ver. 10, 11, 12.

Ver. 1. Truly my soul waiteth upon God: from him cometh my salvation.

2. He only is my rock and my salvation: he is my defence, I shall not be greatly moved.

From this abrupt beginning of the Psalm, declaring that he hath had a sore dispute and wrestling with temptations within him, and out of which this is the first coming forth; Learn, 1. Albeit strong faith be put to a conflict, when trouble and temptations do set on, yet when it locketh on God and his promises, it gets the victory, and putteth the soul to a submissive attendance on God, and a quiet hope of compleat deliverance: Truly my soul waiteth upon God: from him cometh my salvation. 2. Then is faith well tried, and approved, when being stript of all supporters except God, it doth content it self with him alone, as all-sufficient, he only is my rock and my salvation. 3. Faith findeth as many answers in God's sufficiency, as temptations can make objections against: he is my rock and my salvation: he is my defence. 4. As a man resolves th to believe and follow the course of sound faith, so he may may assure himselfe of establishment and victory over all temptations, notwithstanding his own weakness: I shall not greatly be moved, doth David conclude from his resolution to rest on God.

Ver. 3. How long will ye imagine mischief against a man? ye shall be slain all of you: as a bowing wall shall ye be, and as a tottering fence.

4. They only consult to cast him down from his excellency, they delight in lies: they bless with their mouth, but they curse inwardly. Selah.

In the second place, he insulteth over his enemies, and layeth before them the danger of their wicked ways. Wherefore learn,

1. So soon as a man hath fastened himself on God, he may reckon with all adversary powers and insult over them; for the seeing of God helps discovers to the Believer the vanity of all opposition; how long will ye imagine mischief against a man? 2. As the godly when they fall under persecution, may lie long under it, and must resolve patience at the while on the one hand; so on the other hand, persecutors are unreasonably carried on in the course of persecution, like madmen, who cannot give over the pursuit, albeit they see God against themselves, and with the godly whom they pursue; how long will ye imagine mischief against a man? 3. Persecutors shall not have their will against the godly, but by their persecution shall draw upon themselves compleat sudden and irrecoverable destruction: ye shall be slain all of you, as a bowing wall, and a tottering fence; that is, you shall perish suddenly, as when a bowing wall and tottering fence rusheth to the ground in a moment. 4. As the standing fast in the faith and service of God in a good cause, is the excellency of the Believer; so is it the eye-sore of his adversaries, which they of all things can least endure in the godly, and therefore do bend all their wit and forces most unto, to break them off their holy carriage and course; They only consult to cast him down from his excellency. 5. Not truth and light, but darkness, error, falsity and deceit, is the pleasure of the wicked; They delight in lies. 6. When the wicked do minde their worst against the godly, then will they speak fairest words unto them, to see whether by falsity or force they can prevail most, to draw them off their good course: they bless with their mouth, but they curse inwardly.
Ver. 5. My soul, wait thou only upon God: for my expectation is from him.

6. He only is my rock and my salvation: he is my defence, I shall not be moved.

7. In God is my salvation and my glory: the rock of my strength, and my refuge is in God.

In the third place, he strengtheneth his faith and his hope, that he may be able to endure trouble till the sin of the wicked be ripe, and their judgment be executed: Whence learn, 1. Our resolution patiently to keep silence, in waiting on God, and our putting of resolution to practice, do differ: our practising is so short of our resolution, that we had need to be stirred up, and to stirre up our selves to our duty. And as Satan is still moving new perturbations; so have we need of, and must study to have new confirmations; My soul, wait thou only upon God 2. They that do expect their help from God, must not expect help from any other art, no not when they shall use all means lawful for their delivery, but the success must be without haste making, patiently waited for from God alone; Wait thou only on God, for my expectation is from him. 3. The grounds of confidence are able to abide new assaults, and must be brought forth and averred, so oft as they are opposed: for he eunuto the new stirrings of the same tentations, he opposeth this over again; He only is my rock: he is my defence and my salvation. And whereas he said before, I shall not greatly be moved; now he faith more confidently: I shall not be moved: and yet more, he triumphs in the Lord: he is my salvation and glory, which he speakest in regard of hope to have all good which he needed. And lastly in regard of supply in whatsoever wants, and delivery from all evil: he faith, He is the rock of my strength, and my refuge is in God: and so his faith doth settle it self, and tentations are overcome.

Ver. 8. Trust in him at all times, ye people, pour out your heart before him: God is a refuge for us. Selah.

9. Surely men of low degree are vanity, and men of high degree are a lie: to be laid in the balance, they are altogether lighter then vanity.

In the fourth place, he exhorteth all men to place confidence upon upon God, partly because God is able to give deliverance, as a place of refuge; and partly because men whether great or small, few or many, cannot but deceive, and disappoint the man that trusteth in them. Whence learn, 1. The duty of the comforted and victorious believers, is to communicate the fruit of their experience, for strengthening their brethren, and edification of others, as their calling permitteh them, as David doth here: Trust in him at all times, ye people. 2. Whosoever condition, how hard soever, we fall into, the grace of God, and grounds of confidence in God must not be lost, but always made use of; Trust in him at all times. 3. As a guilty conscience, heavy trouble, misbelief and suspicion of God's good will, do lock up the heart in sorrow: so any measure of faith in God, going to him by prayer, doth ease the heart, and layeth the burden of grief down before the Lord; ye people, pour out your heart before him: God is a refuge to us. 5. The way to place our confidence in God, is to lift our confidence off all creatures, and in special off men of superior or inferior ranks: and the way to lift our confidence off the creature, is to consider the inability of men to help us, except God make them do it; and that without God they are nothing worth to us: men of low degree are vanity. 6. Whosoever do trust on men higher or lower, are sure to be deceived of their expectation, and of whosoever mans help can promise: and if we will not be deceived, the voice of God, and experience of his Saints may give us certainty of the truth of the doctrine; for our experience David saith, Surely men of low degree are vanity, &c. 7. Carnal confidence is not onely unable to help a man, when he hath most need, but also bringeth damage unto him; and makes him to finde God in his jealoufie an adversary and just Judge to plague and to curse him; and so if the matter be well weighed, creature-help, and creature-comfort, when it is relied upon, is worse then no help; Being laid in the balance, they are altogether lighter then vanity.

Ver. 10. Trust not in oppression, become not vain in robbery: if riches increase, set not your heart upon them.

11. God hath spoken once; twice have I heard this, that power belongeth unto God.

12. Also unto thee, O Lord, belongeth mercy: for thou renderest to every man according to his work.
The other part of the exhortation doth forbid to trust in oppression, or riches, or power, or greatness of place, because God disposeth of all things as he pleaseth, shewing mercy to such as do trust in him, and rendering to every man according to his work, Whence learn. 1. There are many more idols then one to draw away a man's heart from God; for when trusting in men of high degree and low degree is cast down, then oppression, robbery, riches stand up, and take God's room in the heart, as here we see. 2. It is more hard to avert a man from confidence in himself, and what is in his own power, then to draw him from confidence in men of higher or lower degree. Therefore after casting down of carnal confidence in men, high or low; he discharges confidence in whatsoever a man is able to do by himself, as might, and riches, and authority of high place: Trust not in oppression; if riches increase &c. 3. Whatever is confidence, by his own strength and might to debate his business against any man, and to do his adversary two wrongs for one, shall finde himselfe to have disobeyed God, and to have beene proud in a matter of nothing: Trust not in oppression, become not vain in robbery. 4. It may stand with godliness and trusting in God, to be rich; but not to have our heart set upon riches, either to gather or keep them, either to rejoice in them, or to be proud because of them; If riches increase set not thy heart thereon. 5. Nothing is able to settle mans confidence in God, and to keep his heart from idols, or carnal confidence in creatures, or to bear in upon others this twofold duty, save the powerful impression of the unchangeable Word of God; therefore saith he, God hath spoken once. 6. Albeit one testimony of Scripture for a ground of faith, or rule of life, rightly considered be abundantly sufficient, to settle our faith in that point, and to warrant our obedience; yet God will inculcate that truth oftener, and have us to receive it oftener, and more firmly; and as it is the Lords kindnesse to us, and care of us, to cause his once spoken Word, to be oftener repeated unto us, oftener cleared, and confirmed unto us by repeated experimental evidence of the certainty thereof: so it is our duty, to receive it more and more heartily, so oft as it is repeated and inculcated, and to meditate and consider of it, and to take a deeper and a deeper impression of it: God hath spoken once, twice have I heard it. 7. The property of authority and power to do all and everything, is the Lords only; and as for the power of the creature, it is but lent, and derived to it, at Gods pleasure. The creature can neither hurt us, nor help itselfe or us, but as God is pleased to use it as an instrument;
Argument: Twice have I heard this, that power belongeth to God.

8. To induce a soul to trust in God only, it is necessary, that it so look to his power, as it also look to his mercy, and lay hold on both; faith hath need of both, as of two wings, to carry it up to God above all vain enticements, and terrors, and temptations, and as props whereon to settle and fix it self joyntly.

Also unto thee, O Lord, belongeth mercy.

10. As the man that puts his trust in God, and studyth to obey his Word, shall finde God's mercy to pardon his transgression, and God's power to sustain him in all his difficulties, and to perform all the promises made to his servants: so the man that trusts not in God, but in himself, or in some creature without himself, thinking to work his own happiness by his own ways, shall finde the fruit of his wicked course, according as God hath forewarned: For thou renderest to every man according to his works.

Psalm LXIII.

A Psalm of David, when he was in the wilderness of Judah.

We have in this Psalm David's exercise in his banishment, when he was hiding himself from Saul in the wilderness of Judah; wherein is set down his lingering and prayer, after the benefit of the publick ordinances, ver. 1, 2. And the fruits of a gracious and comfortable answer given to his prayer, in number foure. The first, is a resolution to follow spiritual duties, and in special to praise God, ver. 3. and to be a constant supplicant depending on God, ver. 4. and to take his contentment in God, and in his praisings, ver. 5, 6. and joyfully to trust in God's mercy, ver. 7. The second fruit is the acknowledgement of God's power, sustaining him in his adherence unto God, practiced by him for time past, and purposed for time to come, ver. 8. The third fruit is: confidence of the destruction of his enemies, ver. 9, 10. The fourth, is assurance that he shall receive the Kingdom promised unto him, to the confusion of all such as did slander him as a traitor.

From the Inscription: Learn, 1. Such of God's children as dwell most stately and commodiously among their neighbours, may be driven sometimes to hide themselves in a wilderness, as

David
David was. Banishment from among friends cannot banish a man from God, but may serve rather to drive him toward God. Troubles are grievous when they are present, but may prove a matter of a joyful song, when called to remembrance: A Psalm of David, when he was in the wilderness of Judah.

Ver. 1. O God, thou art my God, early will I seek thee: my soule thirsteth for thee, my flesh longeth for thee, in a dry and thirsty land, where no water is.

2. To see thy power and thy glory, so as I have seen thee in thy sanctuary.

From his prayer; Learne, 1. The Lord is the only ease of a distressed minde, and there is no speedier relief then to go to God in prayer, as the Psalmist did, saying, O God. When we would speak unto God to purpose, we should fasten our hold on the Covenant; O God, thou art my God. 2. Troubles will sharpen a man in the use of the means, and route him out of nasyt security; Early will I seek thee. 4. It is good to fasten duties on our selves by resolution, and to strengthen our resolution by shewing it to the Lord; Early will I seek thee. 5. A lively soul will be no less desirous of spiritual comfort from God, then the body for natural food after long fasting; My soul thirsteth for thee. 6. Spiritual affections, when they are strong, will affect the body with impressions answerable thereto; My flesh longeth after thee. 7. It is a barren place to a godly soul, where the publike exercises of Religion cannot be had: for this cause mainly did God call the wilderness, A dry and thirsty land, where no water is. 8. Because the power and glory of God is nowhere so clearly seen, as in publike ordinances, therefore should the ordinances be loved, sought after, and haunted, that we may finde communion with God in them; My soule thirsteth to see thy power and thy glory. 9. The more good a man hath found in the publike exercises of Religion, the more will he esteem of them, and in special when he is deprived of them; My soule thirsts to see thy power and glory: so as I have seen thee in thy sanctuary.

Ver. 3. Because thy loving kindnesse is better then life: my lips shall praise thee.

4. Thus
4. Thus will I bless thee while I live: I will lift up mine hands in thy Name.

5. My soul shall be satisfied as with marrow and fatness: and my mouth shall praise thee with joyful lips.

6. When I remember thee upon my bed, and meditate on thee in the night-watches.

7. Because thou hast been my help; therefore in the shadow of thy wings will I rejoice.

Here the Lord giveth to his servant a gracious answer, and sweeteneth his condition in the wilderness, making him no lesse glad then ever he was in the publike exercise of Religion, by granting him the comfort of his holy Spirit, as the fruits of the answer of his prayer do make manifest. The first whereof is shewn in sundry holy resolutions, to praise the kindnes of God, to bless God, and to call on his Name in all conditions, to take contentment in God, and to trust in him. Whence learn,

1. When a man, who loveth the publike ordinances is debarrd from them and maketh use of private exercises of Religion, God can and will supply unto him what he wanteth, and be a little sanctuary unto him, as here appeareth.

2. The felt kindnesse of God, and shedding abroad of his love in the heart of a believer, is joy unspeakable and glorious, able to supply all wants unto him, and to sweeten all troubles unto him, and to give him more comfort, then what is most comfortable in this world, yea, to make life itself without the feeling, or hope of feeling this love to be little worth to him; Thy loving kindnesse is better then life.

3. Rich experiences of the felt love of God in the use of the meanes, deserve to be brought forth to the praise of God, when it may glorifie him; Because thy loving kindnesse is better then life, my lips shall praise thee.

4. One proof of God's loving kindnesse towards us, is reason abundant for us to bless God for ever thereafter, and to acknowledge him the fountain of blessings, even to ourselves, whatsoever change of dispensations we shall meet with; Thus will I bless thee while I live.

5. As our assurance of God's love unto us, and of his purpose to bless us, doth serve to prepare us for straits and difficulties hereafter: so also for praying to God with confidence to be helped, in whatsoever change of condition we may fall into afterwards; Thus will will I bless thee while I live, I will lift up my hands in thy Name; to wit, as a man engaged to depend upon thee, to call upon thee as my need requireth, and a man particularly encouraged by thee, and confirmed by experience from thy former helping of me, that I shall have a good answer from thee, who hast manifested thyself unto me by Word and works. 6. The spiritual life of the soul hath its own food, as well as the bodily life of nature: and the life of the godly is not so barren, so sad and uncomfortable as the world doth believe: They have their hid Manna, and the water of life, solid and satisfactory consolations, and joy in the holy Spirit, wherewith strangers do not intermeddle, of which joyes the sweetest morsels of delicate banquets are but shadowes; My soule shall be satisfied as with marrow and fatnessse. 7. Such as do hunger and thirst after communion with God in Christ, and do resolve to spend their life in Gods service, may promise to themselves that they shall feel sweet satisfaction in this course, and with David say, My soule shall be satisfied as with marrow. 8. Spiritual joyes are not like carnal joyes, which end in sadness, but they resolve in glorifying, and do make the very outward man partaker of the benefit; therefore doth the Psalmist add: And my mouth shall praise thee with joyful lips. 9. The way to finde refreshment spiritual, is beside publike ordinances, to give our selves to spiritual exercises in secret, at such times as our necessities civil and natural may best space, and then and there to recall to minde what we have heard, seen or felt of God's Word or working, and to keep up our thoughts upon this holy subject, by prayer, soliloquie and meditation, as David sheweth to us the example: When I remember thee upon my bed, and meditate on thee in the night-watches. 10. As one experience should call another to remembrance, so the calling of experiences to our memory should oblige and encourage us in all conditions, joyfully to make use by faith, of Gods standing offer of grace to us in Christ, shadowed forth by the wings of the cherubims stretched out alwayes over the mercy-seat; Because thou hast been my helper, therefore in the shadow of thy wings will I rejoice; for here, and here only is the remedy of all sinne and misery.

Ver. 8. My soule followeth hard after thee: thy right hand upholdeth me.
From the second fruit of the gracious answer given to David's prayer, that is, from his giving the glory of the acts of grace which he did unto God the furnishers thereof; Learn, 1. The Lord useth to exercise the souls of his own children with sense of defertion, and withdrawing of his presence one way or other. This is presupposed in David's following after the Lord, when he felt him retiring himself, as it were. 2. A believer in God cannot endure a thought of separation from God, nor forbear to seek after God, when he miseth his presence, but will use all means to recover the sense of his presence which he hath felt before; My soul followeth hard after thee. 3. It is our wisdom to reflect upon, and acknowledge the grace of God in us, and upon the acts of our faith and love toward God, for our own strengthening, as David doth here, saying, My soul followeth hard after thee. 4. Although the exercise of gracious habits be our acts, yet the enabling of us to bring these acts forth, is the Lord's work, who giveth us both to will and to do of his own good pleasures; and as it is our duty to acknowledge this, so is it the fruit of our feelings of God's help to protest it; My soul followeth hard after thee, but by what power, strength and furniture doth he this? Thy right hand upholdeth me.

9. But those that seek my soul to destroy it, shall go into the lower parts of the earth.

10. They shall fall by the sword; they shall be a portion for foxes.

The third fruit of the answer of his prayer, is assurance given that his enemies shall be destroyed, for it is revealed to him, that Saul should be slain by the sword; he knew by revelation that his carcase should lie in the fields, a prey for foxes and wilde beasts. Whence learn, 1. The deadly and unreconcilable enemies of God's people, hating them for a good cause, do draw destruction on themselves; Those that seek my soul to destroy it, shall go down to the lower parts of the earth. 2. It is agreeable with God's justice, that bloody enemies of God's people be punished by their bloody enemies; God can raise up the wicked against the wicked, to avenge the wrongs done to his children: They shall fall by the sword, they shall be a portion for the foxes. 3. The Lord, to ease the hearts of his oppressed children, doth sometimes before hand make them forefie the deceit.
Of their adversaries, whether by teaching them in an ordinary way to apply the general sentences of the Scripture unto them, or in a more special way revealing his mind, as he seeth fit, as here: They shall fall by the sword, &c.

II. But the King shall rejoice in God: every one that sweareth by him shall glory: but the mouth of them that speak lies shall be stopped.

The last fruit of his prayer, is assurance that he shall be King, and that all the godly shall be comforted by this means, and that his righteousness shall be cleared against all the calumnies of the wicked. Whence learn, 1. Howsoever it may go hard with the righteous, and their enemies may prosper for a time, yet their lot shall be changed to the better at length: and when their enemies are born down, their head shall be lifted up; and whatsoever is promised unto them, they may be as sure of it as if they had possession of it, yea they may stile themselves by the title which God's Word hath given unto them, as David doth in his particular, calling himself King, now when he was a banished man in the wilderness of Judah: The King shall rejoice, saith he. 2. The true ground of a believer's joy, is not the gift he receiveth from God, how great soever it may be, but the good will of the giver, even God himself; The King shall rejoice in God. 3. Every true worshipper of God, (whose property is truly to fear the true God, and the cognisance of whose sincerity is his conscience making of an oath) shall have matter of gloriation, after a while patient suffering in time of trial: Every one that sweareth by him shall glory. 4. The born-down righteousness of the godly, and of their cause, by the lies, flanders and calumnies of the wicked, shall be brought to light in due time, and the wicked made ashamed of their lies; The mouth of them that speak lies shall be stopped.
PSAL. LXIV.

To the chief Musician. A Psalm of David.

This Psalm hath two parts: In the former is David's heavy complaint unto God against his deadly enemies, laid forth before God in sundry particular evidences of their malice, ver. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6. And in the latter part is the Lord's comfortable answer unto him, by giving him assurance of God's judgement coming on them, to their own and others astonishment, and to the comfort of the godly, ver. 7, 8, 9, 10.

Ver. 1. Hear my voice, O God, in my prayer: preserve my life from fear of the enemy.

2. Hide me from the secret counsel of the wicked: from the insurrection of the workers of iniquity.

In his prayer he requesteth first in general, for delivery of his life from the secret plotting and often-practising of his enemies against him Whence learn, 1. Present danger is able to force our cries to God, and such earnest prayers poured out in extreme necessity, shall not want an answer; Hear my voice, O God, in my prayer. 2. The danger cannot be so great, wherein help may not be had from God; he is so near to a suppliant, so powerful, and so ready to save the man who hath made God his refuge; Preserve my life from fear of the enemy. 3. God can so overrule and outwit the devices of our enemies, that they shall either not light upon the meanst whereby they might overtake us, or shall make them misfe of their intent in case their device be probable; Hide me from the secret counsel of the wicked. 4. What the wicked cannot do against the righteous by craft, they will pursue with open violence: but God, as he is wiser in counsel and able to befoul them, so is he stronger in power, and able to break them: Hide me from their insurrection. 5. That we may have the greater confidence to be delivered from our enemies, we had need to be sure we are in a good cause, and that our adversaries have a wrong cause: Hide me from the workers of iniquity.
Ver. 3. Who whet their tongue like a sword, and bend their bowes to shoot their arrowes, even bitter words:

4. That they may shoot in secret at the perfef: suddenly do they shoot at him, and fear not.

5. They encourage themselves in an evil matter: they commune of laying snares privily, they say, Who shall see them?

6. They search out iniquities, they accomplish a diligent search: both the inward thought of every one of them, and the heart is deep.

Here he complaineth of his enemies, and layeth forth several degrees of their desperate wickednesse before God, as so many arguments to strengthen his faith, and hope for delivery from them. Whence leerne, 1. The benefit of a good cause, and of a good conscience appeareth best in a strait, when nothing can help a man against his enemies, save God alone, as here appeareth in David's case. 2. Calumnies and flanders against the godly are very cruel weapons: for not only hurt they the estimation of their good cause, and personal good behaviour, but also do stirre up all men to take their lives. They whet their tongue as a sword, and bend their bowes to shoot their arrows, bitter words.

3. There is no fear against a privy slander, a man is wounded ere he is aware, and no mans innocency or integrity of life can be a guard against the shot of a calumniators tongue, they shoot in secret, at the perfef, suddenly do they shoot at him. 4. Because only God can heal the wound of a slander, and sustaine the man in the conscience of his good cause and carriage, till he clear him, the righteous must content himself to referre the matter to God, as David doth here. 5. Godlesse men are dangerous enemies, for they fear not God, and so have no powerful restraint within them from doing any mischief, and the more they sinne, they take the greater boldnesse to sinne more; they encourage themselves in an evil matter. 6. The wit and wickednesse which is within themselves, will not suffice their devillish intention, therefore they seek all help they can finde from without; They commune of laying snares privily. 7. They seek how they may overtake the mans person, after they have killed his good name and cause with calumnies and bitter aspersions. Yea
Satan so blindeth them, that they neither look to God the avenger of such plots and practises, nor do they consider that God teeth them, and they think their pretences before men are so thick a covering, that no man can see through them; They say, Who shall see them? 8. If there hath been any slander of the upright man's misdemeanour in any former time, which for the falseness of it is evanished, they make search after it, to waken it up again: and if there be any possibility to devise new inventions, with any probability, they go about it busily, yea they search hell itself to finde out how to bring a mischief upon the upright; They search out iniquities, they accomplish a diligent search. 9. Last of all, their wickedness is unsearchable, the uncontrolled bent of their wicked wit and will assisted with what Satan can suggest, furnish, and stirre up, all is employed, and it is hard to say whether their wit or will be most wicked, and do draw nearest to hell; but it is sure to say of both, Both the thoughts of every one of them, and the heart is deep.

Ver. 7. But God shall shoot at them: with an arrow suddenly shall they be wounded. 8. So they shall make their own tongue to fall upon themselves: all that see them, shall flee away. 9. And all men shall fear, and shall declare the work of God; for they shall wisely consider of his doing. 10. The righteous shall be glad in the LORD, and shall trust in him; and all the upright in heart shall glory.

In the latter part of the Psalm is set down his prayer and confidence of justice to be executed against his enemies, and mercy to be shown to him, and to all the godly. Whence learn, 1. The godly want not a friend to avenge their quarrel: God will shoot against wicked archers, and not misle the mark; But God shall shoot at them; with an arrow shall they be wounded. 2. Where desperate malice is seen, there sudden mischief may be foreseen, that it shall light upon the malicious: suddenly shall they be wounded. 3. The wicked adversaries of God's people are destroyers of themselves, by their opposition unto them; for as they thought to do unto God's children, God doth to them; So they shall make their own tongue fall upon themselves. 4. Sometimes times God will make the wicked spectacles of his judgement to the affrightment of all that knew them, and do see their plague;
All that see them shall see away. 5. The judgement of the wicked should be all men's lesson, and all sorts of people shall learn by their plagues to know God's justice and terror; and all men shall feare and declare the works of God. 6. Not every spectator of God's work giveth glory to God, but they only, who compare his Word with his works, and through the vaile of means and instruments do look to God the righteous Judge of the world; They shall declare the work of God, for they shall consider wisely of his doing. 7. When wo and wrack doth come upon the wicked, then doth joy and comfort come to the godly, not so much for the dammage of the wicked, as for the manifestation of the glory of God: The righteous shall be glad in the Lord.
8 As the Lords mercies do confirm the faith of the righteous, so also do the works of his justice; They shall be glad in the Lord, and shall trust in him. 9. The delivery of one of the godly, is a pledge of the like delivery to all in the like case: and as one so all and every one of the righteous and upright in heart shall triumph at length over all enemies; and make their boast of God:
All the upright in heart shall glory.

PSAL. LXV.

To the chief Musician. A Psalm and Song of David.

This Psalm is all of God's praises. The Proposition, that he is to be praised, is set down, ver. 1. The reasons of his praise unto the end, are nine. The first whereof is, because he heareth prayer, ver. 2. The second, because he mercifully par-doreth fins, ver. 3. The third, because of his gracious purpose, and powerful prosecution of the decree of election of his own re-demed ones, ver. 4. The fourth, because of his defending of his Church in all places, ver. 5. The fifth, is from his strength manifested in the framing and setting of the mountains, ver. 6.
The sixth, from his wise and powerful over-ruling of all unruly and raging creatures, ver. 7. The seventh, is from his preventing of troubles, which are coming to his Church, by terrifying all Nations at the beholding of the tokens of his displeasure against the enemies of his people, ver. 8. The eighth argument is taken from the joyful peace, granted sometime to his people, Ver. 8. The ninth Argument of God's praise, is from the rich plenty of all necessary food from year to year, which God provideth for maintenance of man and beast, and specially of his people Israel in their land, ver. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13.

Ver. 1. Praise waiteth for thee, O God, in Sion: and unto thee shall the vow be performed.

From the Proposition, concerning his purpose to spend this Psalm only in praising of God; Learn, 1. Although prayer and praises do always agree well, yet some time may call for praises, and for the work of praise only, and may take up the whole man for a time, as here. 2. How mournful a condition soever the Lords people may be in, yet God is preparing thereby matter for his own glory; Praise waiteth for thee. And whatsoever matter of praise be seen, or whatsoever measure of praise be given unto God by his people, more is due to him, and more is making ready for him; Praise waiteth for thee. 3. Although the rest of the world be senseless of Gods benefits, yet his Church must set about the work of his praises, and shall be enabled to give him praise; Praise waiteth for thee, O God, in Sion. 4. As it is the duty of every man, who doth seek deliverance from trouble, or any other benefit from God, to oblige himself, to praise God for it: so it is the Lords manner to gain to himself praise by granting prayers, and to purchase the performance of praises promised unto him; Unto thee shall the vow be performed.

Ver. 2. O thou that hearest prayer! unto thee shall all flesh come.

From the first reason of the Lords praise; Learn, 1. The hearing and granting of prayer is the Lords property, and his usual practice, and his pleasure, and his nature, and his glory; O thou that hearest prayer! 2. The readiness of the Lord to hear prayer, doth open the door of access to all sorts of people, who are sensible of their own frailty and necessities, and do know his readiness to relieve them, Gentiles as well as Jews shall come unto him; O thou that hearest prayer! all flesh shall come unto thee.
Ver. 3. Iniquities prevail against me: as for our transgressions, thou shalt purge them away.

From the second reason of the Lords praise; Learn, 1. Sin is a sore adversary, and many times prevails over us, and draws on troubles on us, which makes us know the ill of it better, then we knew before the committing of it; Iniquities prevail against me. 2. Whateverybe the sins of the people we live amongst, let us make special acconpt of our own guiltiness in the point of confession, as David doth here, when he faith, Iniquities prevail against me. 3. Our sins should be looked upon, not to chace us from God, but to humble us, and drive us to seek pardon and purgation from the Lord, whose free grace only can take sins away; Iniquity prevails over me: as for our transgressions, thou shalt purge them away. 4. The holy Prophets, and Pen-men of Scripture have no grounds of hope for pardon of sin, save those which are common to the meanest of Gods people; for David in his confession cometh in by himself alone aggravating his own sins most; Iniquities prevail against me, faith he. But in the hope of pardon, he joineth with the rest of Gods people, saying, As for our transgressions, thou shalt purge them away.

Ver. 4. Blessed is the man whom thou choosest, and causest to approach unto thee, that he may dwell in thy Courts; we shall be satisfied with the goodness of thy house, even of thy holy Temple.

From the third reason of the Lords praise; Learne, 1. God hath made election of some out of the rest of mankind, on whom he doth effectually bestow blessedness; Blessed is the man whom thou choosest. 2. All those whom God doth effectually call, and reconcile to himself, and draweth into communion and society with himself, are elected and blessed persons; Blessed is the man whom thou choosest, and causest to approach unto thee. 3. It is the free good will of God, which putteth the difference among men; and maketh some to be partakers of blessedness, and not other some; Blessed is the man whom thou choosest. 4. The power and glory of the work of conversion, reconciliation, and drawing near to God, for communion with him, him, of so many as are converted, is the Lord's power and glory, no less; then election is his free choice and glory; Blessed is the man whom thou choost, and whom, thou causest to approach unto thee. 5. The man elected, effectually called, reconciled and drawn in Society with God, is a true member of his Church, a constant member thereof in this life, and one who shall be a member of the Church triumphant, in the life to come, and so effectually blessed; He shall dwell in thy Courts, faith the text in the original. 6. Whatsoever is sufficient for begetting and entertaining the life of grace, and of true blessedness in God's elect, is to be found by the means of publick ordinances in the Church of God; We shall be satisfied with the goodness of thy house, even of thy holy Temple. 7. Whosoever do finde in themselves the proper effects or consequents of election, in special, a powerful drawing of them to the Covenant with God, and unto a nearer and nearer approaching unto God, in the way of obedience unto the publick ordinances of his house, may be assured of their election, of their effectual calling, of the blessedness, and of their interest in all the goodness of God's house to their full contentment, for after the general doctrine, he applieth, We shall be satisfied with the goodness of thy house, even of thy holy Temple.

Ver. 5. By terrible things in righteousness wilt thou answer us, O God of our salvation, who art the confidence of all the ends of the earth, and of them that are afar off upon the sea.

The fourth reason of the Lord's praise is taken from the defending of his Church in all ages and places; and saving of his people by giving terrible answers to their prayers against their enemies, for the performance of his own word, and confirmation of the faith of his own people, in whatsoever part of the earth, unto the end of the world. Whence learn, 1. As the love of God to his people doth not exempt them from the molestation of enemies, because the Lord will have the faith of his people by this means exercised, and them put to pray unto him, and complain of the injuries done unto them; so his love to them will not suffer their prayers to want an answer in their troubles, to the amazement of their adversaries; By terrible things wilt thou answer us. 2. In the Lord's relieving of his people, and destroying their enemies, he will have the work looked upon as the performance of his Word, wherein he hath promised to be a friend to the friends of his people, and a foe to their foes; By terrible things in righteousness, wilt thou answer us. 3. The reason of particular deliveries of Gods people from their enemies, is, because these deliveries are appendices of the Covenant of grace, established for giving to them everlasting life; Thou wilt answer us O God of our salvation. 4. What the Lord hath promised and done to his Church of old, is a sufficient ground of confidence to the people of God, in all times and places, to expect and finde the like mercy, unto that which they of old did expect and finde; O God of our salvation, the confidence of all the ends of the earth, and of them that are afar off, upon the sea; that is, thy people, whether dwelling in the Continent, or in isles, or sailing on the sea.

Ver. 6. Which by his strength setteth fast the mountains, being girded with power.

The fifth reason of the Lords praise is, from his strong power, whereby he is able to do all things, as appeareth by his framing and setting the mountains; Whence learn, 1. The power of God manifested in the work of Creation, is a prop to the faith of his people to believe the promises, and a pledge of the performance thereof unto them; By his strength he setteth fast the mountains. 2. Whosoever great work the Lord hath done, he is able and ready to do a greater work, if need be, for his people; He is girded with power.

Ver. 8. Which stilleth the noise of the seas: the noise of their waves, and the tumult of the people.

From the sixth reason taken from his wise and powerful over-ruling all commotions of unty creatures of whatsoever sort; Learn, 1. There is nothing so turbulent and raging, and reasonless in the whole world, which God doth not rule and bridle, and make quiet as he pleaseth: He stilleth the noise of the seas, the noise of their waves. 2. As the commotions of people, their seditions, their insurrections and conspiracies against Gods people, within and without the visible Church, are no lesse raging and reasonless, then are the commotions of the sea: so God hath the ruling of them, as well as of the seas, and by his stilling the noise of the seas, the noise of the waters thereof, he giveth an evidence of his power and purpose to bridle the fury and rage of reasonless men, who threaten trouble and destruction to his people; He stilleth their waves, and the tumult of the people.

Ver. 8. They also that dwell in the uttermost parts, are afraid at thy tokens: thou makest the outgoings of the morning and evening to rejoice.

From the seventh reason of Gods praise, taken from the affright
ing of all the world by his judgements against the enemies of his people, lest they should attempt the like; Learn, 1. As the Lord can still the tumults of the people, when they rage most; so he can by his terror prevent their commotions against his Church, by shewing them his terrible judgements executed on others, which are the tokens of the power of his displeasure against all who shall dare to be adversaries to his people; They also that dwell in the uttermost parts, are afraid at thy tokens.

The eight reason of Gods praise is, from the joyful tranquillity and peace, which he when he pleaseth, giveth to his people, after he hath settled their enemies rage and power against them;
Whence learn, As the Lord doth sometime exercise his people, with trouble and persecution from their enemies; so also he can,
and doth give them some breathing times, some comfortable seasons, as it were fair days from morning to evening; yea sundry full fair days, one after another, so that his people are made to rejoice before him from day to day; Thou makest the outgoings of the morning and evening to rejoice.

Ver. 9. Thou visitest the earth, and waterest it:
thou greatly enrichest it with the river of God which is full of water: thou preparest them corn, when thou hast so provided for it.

10 Thou waterest the ridges thereof abundantly:
thou setteth the furrowes thereof: thou makest it soft with showers, thou blestest the springing thereof.

11. Thou crownest the year with thy goodness, and thy paths drop fatnesse.

12. They drop upon the pastures of the wildernesse:
and the little hills rejoice on every side.

13. The pastures are clothed with flocks; the valleves also are covered over with corn; they shout for joy, they also ring.

The ninth reason of the Lords praise is, from his plentiful furnishing of food yearly for man and beast; but in special for his making making the promised land fruitful unto his people Israel, when his shall give them rest from their enemies, and peace therein, after their being exercised with troubles. What may be prophetical, in this whole Psalm, as touching the Israelites, we will not here enquire; nor how far the Prophet did look beyond his own and Solomon's time, when he said, Praise waiteth for thee in Sion, &c. Only, Hence learn general doctrines. 1. The Lords blef-fing of the ground, and making it fruitful, is his coming as it were to visit it; Thou visitest the earth, and waterest it. 2. Gods providence is then best seen, when particular parts are looked upon one after another; Thou waterest it, thou enrichest it, thou preparest them corn, &c. 3. The sending of timely rain, and plenty of it, and after that abundance of victual, should not be slightly passed over, but well and carefully marked; for the husbandry is all the Lords: Thou preparest them corn, when thou hast so provided for it. 4. Second causes, and the natural course of conveying benefits unto us, are not rightly seen, except when God, the first and prime cause, is seen to be nearest unto the actual disposing of them for producing the effect: Thou waterest the ridges thereof abundantly, &c. Thou blestest the springing thereof.
5. From the one end of the year to the other God hath continual work about the bringing forth of the fruits of the ground, and gloriously doth perfect it once a year; Thou crownest the year by thy goodness. 6. Every one of the footsteps of God's providence, for the provision of his people's food, hath its own blessing, as appeareth in the profitable use of the straw and stubble and chaffe, and multiplication of the seed; Thy paths drop fatness.
7. The Lord hath a care to provide food, not only for man, but also for beasts; and not only for tame beasts, which are most useful for man, but also for wilde beasts in the wilderness, making his rain to fall on all parts of the ground: They drop upon the pastures of the wilderness, and the little hills rejoice on every side.
8. Albeit temporal benefits be inferior to spiritual, yet because unto Gods children they be appendices of the spiritual, they are worthy to be taken notice of; and that God should be praised for them; as here the Psalmist sheweth, praising God for spiritual blessings, in the beginning of the Psalm; and here in the end, for temporal benefits. 9. The plurality of God's creatures, and the comparison of God's benefits set before our eyes, are the scale, musick book, and noted lessons of the harmony and melody which we ought to have in our hearts, in praising him: yea these benefits do begin and take up the song in their own kind, that we may follow follow them in our kinde; The pastures are clothed with flocks, the valleys also are covered over with corn, they shout for joy, they also sing.

PSAL. LVI.
To the chief Musician, A song or Psalme.

This Psalm being all of praises, may be divided into three parts. In the first, the Psalmist exhorteth all the earth to praise God, ver. 1, 2, 3, 4. and that because of the works which God did of old for his people, ver. 5, 6. and because he is able to do the like when he pleaseth, ver. 7. In the second part, he exhorts the Church of Israel living with him in that age, to praise God for the late experience of Gods goodnesse towards them, in the delivery granted to them out of their late trials, troubles, and sore vevations, ver. 8, 9, 10, 11, 12. In the third place, the Prophet expresleth his own purpose of thankfulnesse unto God for the large experience which he had in particular of Gods mercies to himselfe, from ver. 13. to the end.

Ver. 1. Make a joyful noise unto God, all ye lands.

2. Sing forth the honour of his Name: make his praise glorious.

From this urgent exhortation to praise God: Learn, 1. As the duty of praise is most necessary, and most spiritual: so are we more dull, and indisposed thereto, then to any other exercice spiritual, and had need to be stirred up thereunto; therefore faith he, Make a noise, sing forth, &c. 2. The Prophets of old had it revealed unto them, that the Gentiles should be brought to the knowledge of God, and made to worship him; as, Make a joyful noise unto God, all ye lands, importeth. 3. The praise of the Lord is a task for all the world to be employed about, and a duty whereunto all are bound, seeing they all do see his works, and all do hold what they have of him, but specially those that hear of him by his Word, to whom most specially the Word doth speak, Make a joyful noise all ye lands. 4. Men ought to go about the work of praising God to cheerfully so wisely and so avowedly, as they who do hear his praise spoken of, may understand his Majesty, magnifimagnificence, goodnesse, power, and mercy: *Make a noise unto God, sing forth the honour of his Name; make his praise glorious."

Ver. 3. Say unto God, How terrible art thou in thy works? through the greatness of thy power shall thine enemies submit themselves unto thee.

4. All the earth shall worship thee; and shall sing unto thee, they shall sing to thy Name. Selah.

Here the Psalmist, as the Lords pen-man, doth furnish matter and words of praising God unto the hearers; and prophesieth that the fulnesse of the Gentiles shall concurre in his worship, and take part in the song of his praise; *Whence learn, 1. Because we can do nothing of our selves in this work of the Lords praise, God must furnish to us matter & words; Say unto God, How terrible, &c. 2. As the work of the praise of God should be done in love and confidence, and sincerity, and in his own strength: so may it be directed to him immediately, and that without flattery; (otherways then men are praised) for praise properly is due to God only, and no man can speak of him, except in his own audience; Say unto God, How terrible art thou in thy works? 3. The works of the Lord, every one of them being rightly studied, are able to affright us, by discovering the incomparable, dreadful, and omnipotent Majesty of the worker thereof; How terrible art thou in thy works? 4. When the Lord is pleased to let forth his judgements on his adversaries, and to let them see what he can do, none of them dare stand out against him; but if they be not converted, yet will they be forced to feign submission unto him; Through the greatness of thy power shall thy enemies submit themselves to them? 5. Over and above what is already accomplished of this prophetic concerning the conversion of the Gentiles, a higher measure is yet to be expected in the bringing in of that number of them, which the Scripture calleth the fulnesse of the Gentiles; and the making all the Kingdomes of the earth to become the Lords, and his Sonne Christes; for this word in a greater measure than yet is come to passe, must be fulfilled; All the earth shall worship thee, they shall sing unto thee; they shall sing unto thy Name: Which word doth import the revealing of the glad tidings of Jesus Christ unto them, and their joyful acceptation of the Gospel, and glorifying of God for it. 6. As Ver. 5. Come let us see the works of God: he is terrible in his doing toward the children of men.

6. He turned the sea into dry land: they went through the flood on foot, there did we rejoice in him.

7. He ruleth by his power for ever, his eyes behold the nations: let not the rebellious exalt themselves.

Selah.

He pointeth out in especial the Lords works, already wrought for his people; Whence learn, 1. Albeit the Lord doth work for the delivery of the Church, and his own glory, yet men are so careless to observe his works, that they can neither make use thereof for their own profit, nor for Gods praise: so that there is much need to revive up our dulness, to observe them and make right use thereof; Come and see the works of God. 2. Whosoever do observe the works of God, which he hath wrought for his people, they shall be forced to fear and admire his wonderful Acts for them, and his respect unto them; He is terrible in his doing toward the children of men. 3. The work of redemption of his Church out of Egypt, is a work one for all worthy to be made use of to the end of the world; and sufficient to shew, that if need be, God will invert the course of nature for the good of his people, and for their delivery out of difficulties; He turned the sea into dry land. 4. As the Lord will work wonders for the deliveries of his people out of misery: so will he work wonders for performing of promises to them, and for bringing them to the possession of what he hath given them right unto; for the drying of the river Jordan, that his people might go in to possess the promised land, was a pawn and evidence of this his purpose for all time coming; They went through the flood on foot. 5. As all the people of God are one body, and that which is done in one age to one generation doth concern all and every one to make use of it in their generation: so every one in after-ages should reckon themselves one body with the Lords people in former ages, and make use of Gods dealing with them, as if they had been present.
sent then with them, as here the Church in the Psalmist's time joyneth it selfe with the Church in Joshua's time, rejoicing in God with them, at their entering into Canaan; There did we rejoice in him, say they. 6. Whatsoever the Lord hath done for his people in any time by-past, he is able and ready to do the like for his people in any time to come; He ruleth by his power for ever, and for this cause his former Acts, are perpetual evidences and pledges of like Acts to be done hereafter, as need is. 7. Nothing is done in any place, which the Lord is not witness unto; no plot or motion against his people, which he seeth not: His eyes behold the Nations. 8. Albeit there will be from time to time a generation, who will not submit them selves to this sovereign Ruler, but will stand out against him, and maligne his Church, yet shall they not long prosper, nor have cause of glorification in their rebellion; Let not the rebellious exalt themselves.

ver. 8. O bleffe our God, ye people, and make the voice of his praise to be heard.

9. Which holdeth our soul in life, and suffereth not our feet to be moved.

10. For thou, O God, hast proved us: thou hast tried us, as silver is tried.

11. Thou broughtest us into the net; thou layedst affliction upon our loines.

12. Thou hast caused men to ride over our heads, we went through fire, and through water: but thou broughtest us out into a wealthy place.

In the second part of the Psalm, the Psalmist exhorts the Church in his time, to praise God for preserving them from extirpation in the time of their fiery trial, and some affliction under the tyranny and oppression of their enemies. Whence learn, 1. The Lords people in every age, besides all the reasons they have to praise God for his former works, want not their own particular reasons for his care, providence, and kindnesse to themselves in their own time to stirre up one another to bleffe his Majesty; O bleffe our God, ye people. 2. It is the Churches proper priviledge, and her glory, above all other incorporations and societies beside, to have special interest in God, as her own; O bleffe our God. 3. It is not sufficient that the Lords people acknowacknowledge inwardly the mercies of God to themselves; but it is their duty in an orderly way to bring others on to the knowledge of God, and to shew to others how praise-worthy he is: make the voice of his praise to be heard. 4. Albeit the Lord takes many things away from his people, when he is pleased to exercise them, yet he keeps life in their soul; some sweet communion of spirit between himself and them: and doth not suffer all his people to be extirpate, and rooted out from the earth; Which holdest our soul in life. 5. It is great mercy to be kept from desperate courses in the time of sad calamities, and to be supported under burdens, that we sink not; and to be prevented from denying of God, or of his truth in time of persecution: He suffereth not our feet to be moved. 6. One end of the troubles of the Church, among others is, the trial of the graces of his people, and purging them from their corruptions: for which cause the Lord useth to bring on one trouble after another, as metal is put in the fire oftener then once; For thou, O God, hast proved us, thou hast tried us, as silver is tried. 7. When God doth bring his Church into trial, there is no escaping; we must look for affliction, and not dream of declining it by our own wit or skill; Thou broughtest us into the net, thou laidest affliction upon our lines. 8. It is wisdom and justice and goodness in God, to make his people know some time, whether his service or men's service be most ease; Thou hast caused men to ride over our heads. 9. When God's service and men's service are compared, the service of men is a beastly bondage in comparison: for the enemies of the Church will abuse God's people like beasts, when they fall under their power; Thou hast made men ride over our heads. 10. There is no sort of affliction, nor extremity of affliction, from which the godly may secure themselves, after the time of their entering into their trials, till God's time come, wherein their trial is to end; We went through fire, and through waters. 11. After troubles and trials, the Lord giveth ever an event, and a gracious delivery to his own, which bringeth as much comfort with it, as their trial had grief in it; But thou broughtest us out into a wealthy place.
Psalm LXVI.

Ver. 13. I will go into thy house with burnt-offerings: I will pay thee my vows. 14. Which my lips have uttered, and my mouth hath spoken, when I was in trouble.
15. I will offer unto thee burnt-sacrifices of fatlings, with the incense of rams: I will offer bullocks with goats: Selah.

In the third and last part of the Psalm, the Psalmist sheweth forth his thankfulnesse for the favours shewed to himselfe in particular: and first, he promiseth to acknowledge his obligation to God in the place of publick worship, as the Lord had required in the ceremonial law, ver. 13, 14, 15. Secondly, he declareth his particular experience of Gods mercy, testifying his hearing of his prayer by his acceptance of it, ver. 18, 19. And last of all, he begetteth the Lord for the gracious answer of his prayer, ver. 20.

From the promisè, which he maketh of publick acknowledge ment of the mercy according to the prescript of the Lords appointment; Learn, 1. In common favours and deliveries granted to the visible Church, each true member have their own special mercies bestowed upon them, besides the common: for which in particular, and for the common mercies also, they ought publickly to be thankful, as the Psalmist is here, saying, I will go into thy house with burnt-offerings. 2. As it is a token of lively faith in desperate troubles to trust in God, and to hope for his deliverance, and to promise him praise before the delivery come: so is it a token of an upright heart, to be as willing to perform promises after the benefit received, as it was ready to make promises, before the benefit received; I will pay thee my vows which my lips have uttered, and my mouth hath spoken when I was in trouble. 3. As our persons and best service are polluted, except they be cleansed by the sacrifice of Christ: so in our approaches unto God we should acknowledge the sinfulness of our persons and performances, and the need we stand in of Christ's mediation, and the riches of grace bestowed upon us through him, who perfumeth our persons, and prayers, and praises, as was shadowed forth in the ceremonies of the law; for this was the Prophets meaning, when he said, I will offer unto thee burnt-sacrifices of fatlings, with the incense of rams: I will offer bullocks with goats, which were appointed in the law to be offered, partly for sin, and partly by way of thanksgiving.

Ver. 16. Come and hear all ye that fear God, and I will declare what he hath done for my soule.
17. I cried unto him with my mouth: and he was extolled with my tongue.

From his declaration of his lately felt experience of God's mercy to him: Learn, 1. A spiritual man, as he will not neglect outward rites of commanded publick worship: so will he not rest on them, but will go about the real glorifying of God before others, as the Psalmist doth here; Come and hear what the Lord hath done for my soul. 2. The true disciples of God's grace, who can best discern of God's works, and of the experience of others, and who will be most ready to praise God with us, are those that fear God; Come and hear, all ye that fear God; I will declare what he hath done for my soul. 3. It is no lesse needful for the glorifying of God, and edification of others, to make the way of our coming by a benefit manifest to others, that it was by the use of holy ordinances, then to make mention of the benefit it selfe; I cried unto him, faith he; that is, I was in instant in prayer for the benefit. 4. There are cases wherein the uttering of words in prayer, do serve much, not only for our own up-stirring, and fixing of our minds, and for others edification; but also concerneth God's glory, on whom we profess dependance, and in whom we acknowledge power and goodness to dwell; And he was extolled with my tongue.

Ver. 18. If I regard iniquity in my heart: the Lord will not hear me.

19. But verily God hath heard me: he hath attended to the voice of my prayer.

From the clearing of his sincerity in prayer: Learn, 1. Sincerity of heart should be joined with the supplication of the mouth, and with self examination, that we may be sure we pray sincerely: for, If I regard iniquity in my heart, imports so much in the Psalmist's practice. 2. He is an upright man in God's account, who doth not entertain affection to any known sin, but doth oppose it sincerely in God's sight; for this the Psalmist bringeth for the proof of his sincerity, that he did not regard sin in his heart. 3. Those onely are the sinners, whose prayer God will not hear; who live in the love of known sins, and pray for having satisfaction to their corrupt lusts, If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me. 4. The lawful prayer of the upright upright heart, shall be granted in substance, and it may be just as it was desired; which as it is no small mercy, so should it be well marked, as the return of our prayer; But verily God hath heard me, he hath attended to the voice of my supplication.

Ver. 20. Blessed be God, which hath not turned away my prayer, nor his mercy from me.

He closeth with thanksgiving for this particular experience, as an evidence of the running of the fountain of God's mercy toward him. Whence learn, 1. As it is no small mercy, that our prayers are not rejected of God, albeit he should delay to answer us for a long time; so when he delayeth not to answer us, the mercy is the greater, and ought to be acknowledged in both respects: Blessed be God, which hath not turned away my prayer. 2. The gracious answer of an upright supplication, evidenceth ready access prepared yet more for the suppliant, to the fountain of God's mercy; and this is yet more mercy: He hath not turned away my prayer, nor his mercy from me.

PSAL. LXVII.

To the chief Musician on Neginoth. A Psalm or Song.

This Psalm is a prophetical prayer for a blessing upon the Church of the Jews, for the good of the Gentiles, and enlarging of the Kingdom of Christ among them. The petition is propounded, ver. 1, 2. In the next place, is an acclamation with the Gentiles, glorifying of God at their in-bringing, now foreseen that it should come most certainly, ver. 3, 4. In the third place, the Church of the Jews do applaud the second time the conversion of the Gentiles, and their praising of God, promising to themselves that by that means the increase of God's blessing on them shall follow, and the enlarging of the Kingdom of God, through all the world, ver. 5, 6, 7.

Ver. 1. God be merciful unto us, and bless us:

and cause his face to shine upon us. Selah.

2. That
2. That thy way may be known upon earth; thy saving health among all nations.

This is the blessing which the Lord commanded the children of Aaron to pronounce upon the people of Israel, Num. 6. 22, 23, which here the people do turn into a prayer, for the drawing-in of the Gentiles into God's service. Whence learn, 1. It is the turning of God's offers, promises, and forms of blessing of his people into prayers; we are sure so to pray according to God's will, as the Church doth here; 2. It is the duty of every citizen of the Church, as lively members of that body, to pray for the blessing of God upon all his peoples; God be merciful unto us, and cause his face to shine upon us. 3. Then are the Lord's people blessed, when God doth make them instrumental to enlarge his Kingdom, and to propagate the true Religion, that is, the doctrine of man's salvation, and God's service: and this should be the aim, we should shoot at, in seeking any blessing to his people, That the Lord may be known upon earth, thy saving health among all the nations. 4. The world is ignorant of true Religion, till God, by his own instruments reveals it; and no way of Religion will please God, nor profit him, save God's way only, wherein he will have men to walk in the course of faith and obedience; and wherein he revealeth how he will deal with us, and how we must change our selves toward him; Therefore say they, That thy way may be known upon earth, thy saving health among all nations.

Ver. 3. Let the people praise thee, O God; let all the people praise thee.

4. O let the nations be glad, and sing for joy: for thou shalt judge the people righteousness, and govern the nations upon earth. Selah.

The Psalmist foresaith by the revelation of God's Spirit, that the Gentiles shall be converted, and shall rejoice in God, and praise him, and therefore will have the Church of the Jewes to welcome them, and to join in acclamation of praise to God with them, because of Christ's reigning among them, and ruling them by his most holy lawes. Whence learn, 1. The manifestation of God's freely gifted salvation in Christ, and the revealing of his manner of dealing with people, and how he will have people deal with him, and one with another, is a matter of unspeakable praise.
to God, and joy to men, to whom this grace is revealed, that thy saving health may be known among all nations: let the people praise thee, O God. 2. True converts unto Christ, besides the joy they have of their own salvation, have also daily new accession of joy at the conversion of others; as they come in and ought to bless and praise God heartily with them, when they behold their conversion. Let all the people praise thee: do they say twice, and hereafter also the third time. 3. The conversion of the Gentiles was not a thing only wished for by the Church of the Jews, but also prophesied of unto them clearly: O let the nations be glad, and sing for joy, for thou shalt judge the people righteously, &c. 4. The Spirit which did endite the Psalms, did not degrade the promised Messiah, Jesus Christ from his Godhead, for his future incarnation; but speaketh of him, and to him, as God blessed for ever; that is, the true God, to the Jewish Church, before his coming: and true God, to the converted Gentiles after his coming in the flesh, one with the Father and holy Spirit; for six times in this Psalm he is called God, and acknowledged here to be the fountain of mercy, and blessing to men, and of manifested reconciliation with men; and the object of all divine honour and praise, and God the Lord, and Law-giver of the converted Gentiles; Thou shalt judge the people righteously, and govern the nations upon earth. 5. The doctrine and discipline of Christ, whereby he judgeth and governeth his Church, is most holy and righteous, and in as far as particular Churches and Christians submit themselves to his Lawes, Doctrine, and Government, they are his true subjects, and shall finde the fruit of his governing and judging; For these shall he judge righteously, unto these shall he do the part of a Governour, even on earth; He shall govern the nations upon earth.

Ver. 5. Let the people praise thee, O God, let all the people praise thee.

6. Then shall the earth yield her increase, and God, even our own God shall bless us.

7. God shall bless us, and all the ends of the earth shall fear him.

In the last place, the Jewish Church giveth a second acclamation to the incoming of the Gentiles, and do promise to themselves by that means Gods blessing more abundantly dantly upon themselves, as now being one body with the Gentiles, in the same Covenant of grace with them. Therefore learn, 1. As the conversion of the Gentiles was esteemed by the Jews, a matter worthy to be oftener presented to God, and prayed for, and earnestly pursued by all that loved God; so was it foreseen to be a matter of growing and lasting joy to men, and growing and lasting praise to God, and to Christ, who is God, the Converter of them, and the Governor and Teacher of them effectually, to know his Name and salvation; Let all the people praise thee, O God, let all the people praise thee.

2. The Spirit of God gave the Church of the Jews to understand, that the conversion of the Gentiles, especially the conversion of the fulness of the Gentiles, (which here is prayed for, when he faith, Let all the people praise thee) was to be a means or a mercy antecedent unto, or nearly joined with the bringing in and blessing of the Jewish Church, and possibly in their own land; Then shall the earth yield her increase, and God even our own God shall bless us: for by the earth he meaneth the promised land of Canaan, which hath been, and is accrued, during the time of their ejection out of it. 3. When God shall be gracious to the Jews, after the conversion and bringing in of the Gentiles, and shall renew the Covenant with them in Christ, it shall fare the better with true Religion, and with the Christian Churches among the Gentiles; it shall be to them as a resurrection from the dead, in regard both of the purity of Doctrine and Worship, and of the multiplication of persons converted unto Christ in all places; God shall bless us (saith he then,) and what more? And all the ends of the earth shall fear him.
His Psalm is very suitable to that time, when David having gotten the victory over his enemies round about, did assemble all Israel, and carried the Ark of God, now returned from the land of the Philistines, triumphantly out of the house of Obed-Edom, into the City of David, as a type of Christ's ascension after the work of Redemption in the world. In which Psalm after the manner that Moses prayed unto God, or to Christ who was to be incarnate, when the Ark did march; David prayeth here first against the Lords enemies, ver. 1, 2. And then for the Lords people, ver. 3. In the next place, he exhorts all the Lords people to praise God, ver. 4, and giveth twelve or thirteen reasons for it; First, because of his mercy to the de-sole and afflicted, ver. 5, 6. Secondly, because of his wonderful-ness and terribleness in delivering of his people out of bondage, as appeared in his bringing of his people out of Egypt, and through the wilderness, ver. 7, 8. Thirdly, because of his fatherly care to entertain his redeemed people as did appear in his nourishing of his Church in Canaan, ver. 9, 10. Fourthly, because of the victories which he giveth usually to his people, when their enemies do invade them, ver. 11, 12. Fifthly, because of the delivery which he will give to his people out of their most sad calamities, as he hath oftentimes given proof, ver. 13, 14. Sixthly, because his Church is the most glorious Kingdom in the world, being compared therewith, ver. 15, 16. Seventhly, because Christ the King of the Church, hath all the Angels at his command to serve him: and having ended the work of Redemption, was to ascend gloriously, for sending down gifts to his Church, and ruling of it, ver. 17, 18. Eighthly, because of Gods bounty to his people, in daily renewed mercies, till he perfect the work of their salvation. ver. 19, 20. Ninethly, because of his avenging of himself upon all his enemies, ver. 21. Tenthly, because God hath undertaken to work over again in effect, as need shall require, what he hath done in bringing his people out of Egypt, and in giving them victory over the Canaanites, ver. 22, 23.
whereof whereof the experience of his power, already manifested for Israel, was a proof and pledge sufficient, v. r. 24, 25, 26, 27.
Eleventhly, because it was decreed by God, to establish his Church, and to make her strong, by making Kings to become converts, ver. 28, 29. and that partly by treading down some of her enemies, ver. 30. and partly by making others, even some of her greatest enemies, to seek reconciliation with God, even her God. ver. 31. Twelfthly, he exhorteth to praise God, because of his omnipotent power, in conversion of Kingdomes, ready to be let forth for the defence of his people, ver. 31, 32, 33, 34.
and ready to overthrow their enemier, and all for the strengthening of his Church: for all which he exhorteth all to bless the Lord, ver. 35.

Ver. 1. Let God arise, let his enemies be scattered:
let them also that hate him, flee before him.
2. As smoke is driven away, so drive them away:
as waxe melieth before the fire, so let the wicked perish at the presence of God.
3. But let the righteous be glad: let them rejoice before God; yea let them exceedingly rejoice.

In David's prayer against his enemies, and for God's people; Learn, 1. Such prayers as the Spirit hath endited unto the Saints in Scripture, it is lawful and expedient for strengthening of our faith, to use the same or the like words in the like case; for David prayeth here, as Moses prayed at the marching of the Ark, Numb. 10. 35. Let God arise, &c. 2. As the Ark was amongst the Israelites, so is Christ amongst his people: and what ground of confidence the Church had, because of that pledge of God's presence at the Ark; we have the same, and a more sure ground of confidence in Christ's incarnation, represented thereby; that upon every appearance of his beginning to stirre against the enemies of his work, we may say, Let God arise. 3. The enemies of the Church are the enemies of God, and esteemed haters of him, because they are haters of his people; with whom, albeit the Lord doth bear for a while, yet will he take order, when he pleaseth; it will not cost him much labour: on y, Let God arise, and let his enemies be scattered. 4. Although all the enemies of God make head against his people, yet will they not prevail, prevail, when God appeareth, they will turn back; Let them also that hate him, flee before him. 5. Whosoever strength of forces or number the enemies of God's people have in appearance, it is nothing before God, but like a smok before the vide, and waxe before the fire, As smok is driven away, as waxe melteth before the fire: so let the wicked perish at the presence of God. 6. Albeit the Lord exercise his people with affliction, and with grief for a while, yet he alloweth unto them comfort and joy, whatsoever become of their enemies: But let the righteous be glad. 7. The only true matter of the Saints' joy is God himself, and his manifested presence; and he will not be pleased, except his children lift up their hearts, and comfort themselves in him above and against all grief and sense of whatsoever enemies opposition; Let them rejoice before God, yea let them exceedingly rejoice.

Ver. 4. Sing unto God, sing praises to his Name; extoll him that rideth upon the heavens, by his Name J A H, and rejoice before him.

From his exhortation of the Church to praise God with the joyful voice of singing; Learn, 1. Vocal singing of praises unto God, is a moral duty, and a part of his holy worship, frequently called for in Scripture; Sing unto God, sing praises to his Name. 2. Our thoughts of God should not be base, but high and heavenly, lifting his Name up above the most glorious creatures; all they being but his servants, as he pleaseth to make use of them: Extoll him that rideth upon the heavens. 3. The Lord is onely and properly worthy of praise, because he onely hath his being of himself, and giveth being to all things, which are beside himself; His Name is J A H. 4. The Lords praises are his peoples advantage, and the true matter of their confidence and joy; Sing praises to him, and rejoice before him.

Ver. 5. A Father of the fatherlesse, and a Judge of the widows is God in his holy habitation. 6. God setteth the solitary in families: he bringeth out those that are bound with chaines; but the rebellious dwell in a dry land.

From
From the first reason of the exhortation to praise God; Learn.

1. The Lord's highness above the heavens doth not hinder him from taking notice of the lowest of his poor people; yea, the most helpless and desolate among men, are the first objects of his warmest love; A Father of the fatherless, and a Judge of the widows is God. 2. Albeit the Lord be infinite and incomprehensible by any place, yet hath he appointed a trusting place where his people shall find him by his own ordinance, to wit, the assembly of his Saints, his holy Temple, shadowing forth Christ to be incarnate, who now is in heaven, now is incarnate, and sitting at the right hand of God, in whom dwells the Godhead, here, here is God to be found: God in his holy habitation.

3. It is the Lord's nature, pleasure, and ordinary practice, to make up, the wants, and to change to the better, the disconsolate condition of his own humbled and emptied children; God setteth the solitary in families. 4. The souls that are most sensible of bonds and bondage, do heareth the seeking of the fruit of his redemption; yea, none in bonds have made of shall make use of God the Redeemer, but his bonds and fetters hindering him from freedom of God's service, and from attaining of felicity, have been and shall be loosed off him: the bringeth out those which are bound in chains. 5. Such as will not be ruled by his Word, according as they are disloyal rebels to him, so shall they be dealt with as rebels; that is, they shall neither have God's blessing joyned with any benefit which they seem to possess, nor any spiritual comfort in their afflictions, when their calamity cometh upon them: but the rebellious dwell in a dry land.

Ver. 7. O God, when thou wentest forth before thy people, when thou diddest march through the wilderness. Selah.

8. The earth shook, the heavens also dropped as the presence of God, even Sinai itself was moved at the presence of God, the God of Israel.

From the second reason of praising God, Learn. 1. It is expedient for our upstirring unto thankfulness, to cast our eye upon some particulars wherein the Lord's goodnesse to us, and our obligation to his love, may appear, as here the Psalmist doth lead us by the hand unto the Lord's particular work of redemption of Israel out of Egypt. 2. That one work of the Churches delivery out of Egypt, representing the redemption of his people from from the misery of sin, and Satan's bondage, is a sufficient proof for ever of the Lord's love, care, power, and faithfulness, to deliver his own out of all their misery, which the Church, and every member thereof should a wayes make use of unto the end of the world; or, as it is a representation or paine of the spiritual delivery of his people, this work should we often look upon, and still hold it up unto God; 0 God, when thou wentest forth before thy people, when thou didst march through the wilderness.

Ver. 9. ThoU. O God, didst send a plentiful raine, whereby thou didst confirme thine inheritance, when it was weary.

10. Thy Congregation hath dwelt therein: thou, O God, hast prepared of thy goodness for the poor.

From the third reason of God's praise: Learn, 1. The ordinary sustaining of God's people, bodily and spiritually in the possession of any benefit temporal or spiritual given unto them, should be observed, as well as the bestowing of any benefit in an extraordinary way, as here the ordinary sustaining of Israel in Canaan is made a part of the song of praise, no less than their miraculous delivery out of Egypt; Thou, O Lord, didst send a plentiful raine, whereby thou didst confirme thine inheritance, when it was weary. 2. The people who are in Covenant with God externally, are the Lord's own peculiar, more nearly and properly then any other society in the world; therefore Israel here is called by the Prophet speaking to God, Thy Congregation. 3. It is for the Churches caule, that the land wherein his people dwelleth, is blessed at any time by God; Thy Congregation hath dwelt in it. 4. The blessing bestowed upon the Church, or the place wherein they dwell, is not given for any goodness in his people, but for the goodness, grace and good will of God to them; Thou, O God, hast prepared of thy goodness for the poor.
Ver. 11. The Lord gave the word: great was the company of those that published it.

12. Kings of armies did flee apace: and she that carried at home divided the spoile.

From the fourth reason of praise; I ezen, 1. The Lord will sometime exercise his Church with warres, afflictions and trials, when he doth not intend to punish them, but to give them the victory over their enemies, and that for his own glory, as in Joshua's time and David's, whereunto the text doth relate. The matter of joyful newes, or the word of the Churches victory over her foes, whencesoever it is, proceeds from the Lord, who furnisheth matter for, and words, and utterance of joy to his people, and praise to himself: The Lord gave the word. 2. When God will glorifie himself by comforting his Church, he shall not want Heraulds of his praise; Great was the company of those that published it. 3. Were the enemies of the Church never so powerful, and Gods people never so farre inferior unto their enemies in power, yet shall the enemy not be able to stand, when God begins to fight for his people: Kings of armies did flee apace. 4. It is cause for the Lord to make them a prey to the weakest of his people, who do set themselves to make havock of the Church, yea and to enrich his people with the spoil of such adversaries: She that carried at home, divided the spoile.

Ver. 12. Though ye have lien among the pots, yet shall ye be as the wings of a Dove, covered with silver, and her feathers with yellow gold.

14. When the Almighty scattered Kings in it, it was white as snow in Salmon.

From the fifth reason of praise; Learn, 1. As the Lord sometimes doth beautifie his people with victories and wealth: so also at other times for just reasons, he will da k'en all their outward glory, and make them look as blacked scullions in the kitchen: Though ye have lien among the pots, &c. 2. The Lord after the trial and hard exercises of his people for a time, will give them so glorious an event and delivery, as shall take off all the igno- miny of their former affliction, and make up all their losses, yea he will cause their former deform ing affi c tions, to serve for washing-balls of hope, to make them so much more beautiful; Though ye have lien among the pots, ye shall be as the wings of a Dove, covered with silver, and her feathers with yellow gold.

3. Experiences of mercies shewen to the Lords people, are pawns and evidences of like mercies in time to come, as here, When the Almighty scattered Kings in the land, it was made white, is made a proof of the Promise made, ver. 13. 4. As a dark, duskie mountain, whereupon groweth no green thing, but black heath, is made white, when covered with snow; so is a disgraced, shamed, impoverished, enslaved land made glorious again by a mercif ul manner of delivery manifesting the Lords kinde respects unto it; When the Almighty scattered Kings in Judea, it was made white as snow in Sal man.

Ver. 15. The hill of God is as the hill of Bashan, an high hill as the hill of Bashan.

16. Why leap ye, ye high hills? this is the hill which God desireth to dwell in: yea, the LORD will dwell in it for ever.

From the sixth reason of praise; Learne, 1. The Kingdomes of this world, especially some of them of more eminent fort, do seem very rich and glorious in comparison of the outward appearance of the Kingdom of Christ in his Church, as the great, high, and fruitful hill of Bashan seemed to be more glorious then the hill of Sion; yet all things being compared, in special the spiritual priviledges of the one with the temporal priviledges of the other, the Church of God will outrech the most glorious Kingdom on the earth: The hill of God is as the hill of Bashan, an high hill as the hill of Bashan. 2. Although the Kingdomes of the world rejoice in their Prerogatives, and despise the Kingdom of Christ in his Church, yet have they no cause to exalt themselves: Why leap ye, ye high hills? 3. This one priviledge of the Church, that it is the place of Gods residence, wherein he will manifest himself familiarly and comfortably to his own, may oversway all the excellency of all the Kingdomes of the world; no Kingdom which hath not Gods Church in it, can say the like; This is the hill which God desireth to dwell in; yea, the Lord will dwell in it for ever.
Psalm LXVIII. 107.

Ver. 17. The chariots of God are twenty thousand, even thousands of Angels: the Lord is among them, as in Sinai, in the holy place.

Ver. 18. Thou hast ascended on high, thou hast led captivity captive, thou hast received gifts for men; for the rebellious also, that the Lord God might dwell among them.

From the seventh reason of praise: Learn, 1. No Kingdom hath such defence, so potent and so numerous armies to fight their battles as the Church hath; The chariots of God are twenty thousand, even thousands of Angels. 2. The defence of Angels is made fast to his Church, and their power made sure to be for her, because God is in his Church, even the Lord whom all Angels do serve and attend upon. Is in his Church, as at his giving of the law upon Mount Sinai did appear; The Lord is among them, as in Sinai. 3. The Lord is no less terrible against his foes in Sion, then in Sinai; and whatsoever error the Lord did shew to his Church in Sinai against the violaters of his law, he will manifest it for the comfort and defence of his people, who heartily embrace his Gospel: The Lord is among them, to wit, these chariots and Angels, as in Sinai, so in the holy place. 4. The Ark was not more gloriously conveyed from the house of Obed-edom unto the city of David, then God, that is, Christ, who is God, who descended to assume humane nature, that he might therein perfect the work of Redemption, did gloriously ascend into heaven, after the price of Redemption was paid by him; Thou hast ascended on high, Eph. 4, 8, 9, 10. 5. The praises of God, and joy of the Church are perfected in Christ; no satisfaction in the shadows, till Christ the substance be looked unto; therefore here the Lord's Spirit led his people to look through the shadow of the ascending of the Ark toward the city of David, unto the ascending of God incarnate (represented by the Ark) into heaven: Thou hast ascended on high. 6. Christ did not enter into his glory without a battle going before, and that with strong and many enemies: and in his fighting he carried the victory; and after his victory he did triumph, first in the Cross, and then in his Ascension, over sin, Satan, the world, hell, grave and all: He led captivity captive. 7. Christ as Mediator and King of his Church, was fully furnished with all things needful, for gathering his Church, for edifying, governing and perfecting of it: Thou hast received gifts for men; even those gifts which the Apostle speaketh of, for the gathering and edifying of the body of the Saints, Eph. 4. 11, 13. 8. The gifts which Christ hath received and given forth, are not for the Jews only, or Gentiles only; for the poor only, or rich only; but for men indefinitely: Thou hast received gifts for men. 9. As he hath received gifts for bringing on to life those that are reconciled: so also to conquer, subdue and bring in rebels, and to reconcile enemies: Thou hast received gifts for men, yea and for the rebellious also. 10. The end of Christ's Ascension, and receiving and sending down gifts among men, is to gather and preserve, and establish unto God a Church in the world, wherein he may make himself manifest, and dwell and rule in the midst of his enemies: Thou hast received gifts for men, that the Lord might dwell among them. 11. Yea whatsoever gifts are bestowed upon unregenerate men within the visible Church or without it, which may any way be serviceable to the Church, they are all bestowed on them in favour of the Church, that God may dwell in his visible Church, which by those gifts is edified: Thou hast received gifts for men, yea for the rebellious also, that the Lord God might dwell among them.

Ver. 19. Blessed be the Lord, who daily loadeth us with benefits, even the God of our salvation. Selah.

20. He that is our God, is the God of salvation: and unto GOD the Lord belong the issues from death.

From the eighth season of praise; Learn, 1. Where the Lord will be merciful, he will be merciful, and not weary in doing good to his people in a current course of bounty; the observation whereof should stirre up our hearts to thankfulness: Blessed be the Lord, who daily loadeth us with benefits. 2. The favours and benefits which God doth bestow upon his people, do come in greater number and measure unto them, then they are able to acknowledge, make use of, or be thankful for, and so in a sort do burden the spirits of the truly godly: Blessed be God, who daily loadeth us with benefits. 3. As all benefits do flow unto God's children, from the covenanted kindness of God
God for giving unto them eternal salvation; so should all benefits confirm their faith in the Covenant, and lead them to the hope of receiving after all other benefits, salvation also. 3. Blessed be the Lord, who daily loadeth us with benefits, even the God of our salvation. 4. Albeit the Covenant of salvation were sincere, yet are we slow to believe it, and weak in our laying hold of it; and have need to have the stamp and impression of it set deep upon our hearts, as here the Psalmist teacheth the Church by inculcating this point: He that is our God, is the God of salvation. 5. Temporal things which men do idolize, may serve a man in this life; but at death, in death, and after death he can have no good by them: It is God only who can deliver from death, and give an issue out of it: Unto God the Lord belong the issues of death. 6. Let a man be once settled in the faith of his salvation, then he shall be comforted against all the troubles and dangers wherein he can fall, yea even against death itself; if he can say, He that is our God, is the God of salvation, he may also say with confidence and application to himself, and comfort, Unto God the Lord belong the issues from death.

Ver. 21. But God will wound the head of his enemies: and the hairy scalp of such a one as goeth on still in his trespasses.

From the ninth reason of God's praise; Learn, 1. How great soever be the majesty of God, and the riches of bounty and grace offered in Christ, yet will men be found even within the visible Church, who will wickedly refuse his grace, and oppose his Kingdom, but all to their own shame and damage: But God shall wound the head of his enemies. 2. The character of God's irreconcilable enemies is, that they cease not to follow the course of sin: He goeth on still in his trespasses. 3. Though God spare his enemies long, and suffer them to grow old in the course of enmity against him, yet shall shameful, sudden and irrecoverable judgements overtake them in their old days; But God shall wound the hoary scalp of such a one as goeth on still in his trespasses.

Ver. 22. The Lord said, I will bring again from Basban, I will bring my people again from the depths of the sea.

25. That thy foot may be dipped in the blood of thine enemies, and the tongue of thy dogs in the same.

From the tenth reason of praise, wherein the Prophet promiseth in the Lords Name, that God shall work over again such works of delivery to his people, and such works of victory over their enemies, as he had wrought before; Learn, 1. The Lords Word is certainly sufficient for performance of his promises, and ground of comfort and confidence, and thanksgiving and praise to God even before the work be wrought; The Lord said, I will bring again, &c. 3. As the Lord will have the memory of former dangers and deliveries of his Church kept in remembrance for his own glory: so will he have former dangers for his peoples good to be looked upon as advertisements of what straits his Church may be cast into, and his former merciful deliveries looked upon as pledges and pawns of the promises of like mercies in time to come, as need shall require: I will bring again from Basban, I will bring my people again from the depths of the sea, doth import thus much. 3. As the Lord will give as great deliverances to his Church, when they are in straits as ever he did before: so will he give as terrible blows to his adversaries as ever he did, according as the Churches need or good shall require, I will bring again from Basban, &c. that thy foot may be dipped in the blood of thy enemies. 4. Albeit neither the Lord nor his people do delight in bloodshed, yet will he let his people and all men see, in the bloodshed of their enemies, how terrible he is in justice, especially against the enemies of his Church, and how dear his people are to him, and that rather then they should be overthrown, he will destroy Nations for their safety; and give unto his people in their own defence against their oppressors, notable victories; so that thy foot may be dipped in the blood of thine enemies. 5. When the Lord thinks it fit, not to make his own people instrumental in their own delivery, then can he yoke the enemies among themselves, or raise up profane dogs like themselves to avenge the quarrel of the Lords people upon their enemies: That the tongue of thy dogs may be dipped in the same; that is, in the blood of thine enemies.
Ver. 24. They have seen thy goings, O God, even the goings of my God, my King, in the sanctuary.

25. The singers went before, the players on instruments followed after; amongst them were the damo-sels playing with timbrels.

To confirm what is promised, he bringeth forth old experiences acknowledged by the enemies, registered in the Word of the Lord, and read in the Temple. Whence learn, 1. The Lord useth to work so evidently for his people, and against his enemies, that both his people and their enemies are made witnesses, and are forced to acknowledge the Lord's work; They have seen thy goings, O God. 2. It is the glory of a people, when God worketh, as he is seen to be their God, their leader, their defender, and all as in covenant with them: They have seen thy goings, O God, even the goings of my God, faith he. 3. That God's honour may be seen, mans honour should be laid down at his feet; and put case a man were the greatest King, yet is it greater glory and matter of contentment to have God for his King, then to be a King without God; They have seen thy goings, O my God, my King, (faith David, now setted in the Kingdom.) 4. The most clear, sure and profitable sight of the Lord's work and ways, is to be had in the use of publick ordinances, where his Name, Nature, Covenant and course he keepeth with all men, together with the causes, use and ends of his works are to be seen; They have seen the goings of my God in the sanctuary. 5. Where all the people receive a benefit, it becometh all the people publicly and solemnly, and with their best expression of affection, as God doth appoint, to praise God, and in his worship to see that all things may be done orderly, as Israël did, when they came through the red sea, and at other times as the Lord gave occasion: The singers went before, the players on instruments followed after, amongst them, in the middle-ward, the Damo-sels playing with timbrels. 6. All the powers of our souls and bodies should concurre each of them in their own order with the best harmony of knowledge, affections and expressions, which can be attained unto, for setting forth the Lords praises, and our obligation to him for his goodness to his people, and so should we march on all the days of our pilgrimage and warfare, till we come to the promised rest: for this did the external ceremonies used under the pedagogue of the Law, teach. Which cerceremonies although they be abolished now, yet the substance and intended duties painted in them, being moral, do still remain; The fingers went before, players on instruments followed after, &c.

Ver. 26. Bless ye God in the Congregations: even the Lord from the fountain of Israel.

27. There is little Benjamin with their Ruler, the Princes of Judah, and their Council, the Princes of Zebulun, and the Princes of Naphtali.

As the Psalmist did clear the doctrine of God's dealing for his Church, and against their enemies by experiences of old; so he points here at experience later, as was to be seen by all, at the glorious triumphing of Israel over all their enemies, when they were now assembled in their several tribes, the least as well as the greatest, the most remote tribes, as well as those that were nearest hand; all of them conveying the Ark of God unto the City of David, which was the type of Christ. God incarnate, ascending after his victories into heaven. Whence learn, 1. The mercies of God to his people, in special the great work of Redemption, and victory over all enemies obtained by Christ in favour of his people, are abundant matter and cause to praise God, and to bless him in all the assemblies of the Church; for here it is a commanded duty: Bless ye God, even the Lord from the fountain of Israel. 2. Whatsoever be the part of others in discharging of this duty, it is expected most at the hands of every kindly Israelite, who draw their original from the fountain of Israel, whether they be of the natural stock of Jacob, descended of him, as water out of a fountain, or have their descent of the same Spirit of regeneration with him: Bless ye God, even the Lord from the fountain of Israel. 3. Examples and practices of God's children at any time, are the encouragements of his people at all times thereafter: There is little Benjamin with their Rulers, &c., set forth here for example. 4. The Piety of Governors, and their precedence before, or joyning with others in the Lord's service, is more honourable unto them then their places of dignity, or their gifts of wisdom and power: There were the Princes of Judah, with their Council, the Princes of Zebulun, and the Princes of Naphtali. 5. In the exercise of God's worship, and in privileges spiritual, the Lord doth joyn the smallest with the
the greatest, the lowest with the highest; that the lowest may glory in their exaltation, and the highest in their humiliation: There was little Benjamin with Judah, the people with their Princes and Rulers.

Ver. 28. Thy God hath commanded thy strength: strengthen, O God, that which thou hast wrought for us.

29. Because of thy temple at Jerusalem, shall kings bring presents unto thee.

From the eleventh reason of God's praise: Learn, 1. Not in Kings, or Rulers, or any thing else, but in the Lord and from the Lord, is the strength of his Church, which she may expect always to be furnished with by virtue of the Covenant; Thy God hath commanded thy strength, saith David to the Church. 2. As the Lord hath decreed to establish his Church: so hath he means and instruments in every age and place prepared for this purpose, and hath given out order by actual providence; which is always going about the work in all ages; Thy God hath commanded thy strength. 3. The Lord's decree and the order given forth to accomplish it, consisteth well with the Churches using of all lawful means to further that end, and in special should be joyned with thankful acknowledging of what the Lord hath begun to do, or done already for it, and with earnest prayer for accomplishing of what is to be further done: so teacheth David's example and prayer here: Strengthen, O God, that which thou hast wrought for us. 4. The Lords known presence in his Church, maintaining and blessing of his publick Ordinances, shall move kings at last to do homage to God incarnate; that is, to Christ represented by his dwelling in the Temple of Jerusalem: Because of thy temple at Jerusalem, shall kings bring presents unto thee.

Ver. 30. Rebuke the company of spearmen, the multitude of the bulls, with the calves of the people, till every one submit himself with pieces of silver: scatter thou the people that delight in warre.

31. Princes shall come out of Egypt, Ethiopia shall soon stretch out her bands unto God.
How this man came to paine, he meweth; to wit, partly by breaking the power of some of them, when they make opposition; partly by powerful conversion of other some. Whence learn, 1. It is not against the precept of love, to pray against publick enemies of the Church, when private spleen is not the motive, but zeal to the glory of God; Rebuke the company of spearmen. 2. The leaders of armies, parties, and factions against Gods Church and cause, and the followers of such leaders, are all of them a company of beasts; Rebuke the multitude of the bulls, with the calves of the people. 3. God is adversary to all who do oppose his people, and his cause in their hand, and can as easily repulse them really, and overturn them, as reprove them verbally: Rebuke the spearmen, &c. 4. The end of the Churches prayer against her enemies, is, that God may be glorified, and people at least brought to outward obedience unto God, which may be a means to real conversion in Gods time; Rebuke them, &c. till every one of them submit themselves, with pieces of silver; that is, till they offer to contribute to Gods service. 5. The punishing of some of Gods enemies, may be a means to move others to offer obedience, and submit to God, when people that delight in warre are scattered; For Princes shall come out of Egypt. 6. God will draw into subjection unto himself; some of his most open and inveterate enemies; Princes shall come out of Egypt, Ethiopia shall soon stretch out her bands unto thee.

Ver. 32. Sing unto God, ye kingdoms of the earth: O sing praises unto the Lord. Selah.

33. To him that rideh upon the heavens of heavens, which were of old: to, be doth send out his voice, and that a mighty voice.

34. Acribe ye strength unto God: his excellency is over Israel, and his strength is in the clouds.

35. O God, thou art terrible out of thy holy places: the God of Israel is he that giveth strength and power unto his people: blessed be God.

From the last reason of praising of God, taken from his Almighty power, in conversion of Kingdomes of Gentiles, ready to be put forth for the preservation of his Church gathered, and for the overthrow of his enemies. Learn, 1. The time shall shall come, when the kingdoms of the earth shall turn Christians in profession, in a greater measure than yet hath been seen, for, Sing unto God, ye kingdoms of the earth: is not a simple telling of their duty, but a prophecy of their joyful joying in the worship of God; and that they shall have cause of joy within themselves to praise him; O sing praises to the Lord.
2. True Converts will renounce Idols and false gods, and revercently worship the omnipotent Creator and Governor of heaven, the eternal God: Sing praises to God that rideth upon the heaven of heavens, that were of old. 3. As the glorious government of heaven doth shew the Lords power; so the thunder also doth shew his power and terror, the consideration whereof is needful to dispose our stupid minds to praise him; Lo, be doth send forth his voice, even a mighty voice. 4. The right use of Gods great, and sensible, and daily seen works, is to make us to glorify the power of God, who is able to work whatsoever he pleaseth; Ascribe strength unto the Lord.
5. The Lords glory in his Church is more excellent then all that is to be seen in the works of Creation: His excellency is over Israel. 6. The true worshipper must study the power, and all other properties of God, both by what he hears in the society of the Church, and by what he seeth in his visible works; as well daily transient works, such as the clouds are, as constantly enduring works, such as the heavens are: His excellency is over Israel, and his strength is in the clouds. And surely it is no small power, which doth bear up such weight of mountains of snow, and seas of water, and doth make them faile as it were, and flee with wings in the aire, which God doth dissolve by little and little, as we daily behold. 7. Wheresoever God sheweth his presence, whether in heaven, or in his Church, in any place of the earth, there and from thence doth he shew himself a dreadful God to such as fear him not; O God, thou art terrible out of thy holy places.
8. Albeit there were no man to hear us glorifie God, or no man to take his praise of our hand, we should acknowledge his greatness in our heart, and before himself, who will take true worship of our hand; for David here turneth his speech to God in the end of the Psalm, saying to him, O God, thou art terrible out of thy holy places. 9. The Lord hath an everlasting interest in the people of Israel, and they in him, for the elections cause; and every true Israelite hath an everlasting interest in God, he is the God of Israel. 10. What the Lord hath, is forth-coming to his peoples furniture, as they have need: The God of Israel is he that giveth strength and power to his people. 11. It is reason that at all the several remembrances of God's mercy to us, we should acknowledge his blessedness, and his blessing of us, and this is all we can do, and that also can we not do, except he strengthen and enable us for praise; for, blessed be God, saith the Prophet, for this very reason, after he hath spoken of his giving power to his people.

PSAL. LXIX

To the chief musician upon Shoshannim. A Psalm of David.

David, as a type of Christ, earnestly dealeth with God for a delivery from his perplexed condition, and from the malice of his adversaries; and doth finde a comfortable event. There are three parts of the Psalm. In the first, is his prayer, six times presented, and strengthened with new reasons, to ver. 22. In the second part of the Psalm, is his imprecation of ten plagues against his enemies, with some reasons added for the justice of the inflicting the plagues, mentioned to ver. 29. In the third part, are four evidences of his victory, from ver. 29 to the end. In all which, whatsoever is proper to the type, is to be referred to the type only; and whatsoever is fit also to be applied unto Christ the Antitype, must be referred to him only, in that sense which is suitable to his Majesty.

His prayer at first, is propounded in few words; Save me: the reasons are four. The first, from the danger he was in, ver. 1, 2. The next, from his long and patient waiting for an answer to his prayer, ver. 3. The third, from the multitude, and malice, and iniquity of his enemies, ver. 4. The fourth is by way of attestation of God, that he was innocent of that whereof he was charged by his enemies, joyed in with his humble acknowledging of whatsoever other sins justice could charge upon him in any other respect, ver. 5.

Ver. 1. Save me, O God; for the waters are come in unto my soul.

2. I sink in deep mire, where there is no standing: I am come into deep waters, where the floods overflow me. His
His first Petition is to be saved; and the first reason of it is, because of the danger he was in; Whence learn, 1. A childe of God may in his own sense be very near to perishing, and yet must not in the most desperate condition cease to pray, nor cease to hope for delivery prayed for: Save me, O God. 2. With danger of bodily death, a childe of God may have in his spirit a fore conflict with the sense of wrath, like to swallow up his soul, as deep waters do a drowning man; The waters are come in unto my soul. 3. The condition of a soul exercised with the sense of wrath, threateneth no lesse then perdition, certain, inevitable, without any event, and endless; whereof the bodily danger of a drowning man is but a shadow: I sink in deep mire, where there is no standing: I am come into deep waters, where the floods overflow me.

Ver. 3. I am weary of my crying, my throat is dried: mine eyes faile while I wait for my God.

The second reason of the first Petition is, because he had long and patiently waited on God. Whence learn, 1. Faith in hard exigences doth not give over for appearances of perdition, knowing that what is impossible to mans appearance, is not impossible to God, for David, as a believer, and a type of Christ, prayseth still for all this, although he finde no delivery: I am weary of my crying. 2. Prayer put up in faith to God, keepeth in life, and is like a mans drawing breath in the water when the head is lifted up above the floods; for here, although the floods overflowed the Psalms, yet he is able to shew this to God, and to cry till he be weary of crying. 3. For exercising of faith, and making patience to have the perfect work, it is no strange thing for God to delay relief unto an earnest supplicant, till he be like to give over, till his case seem desperate, and his relief hopeless; Mine eyes faile, while I wait for my God. 4. Though the flesh of the regenerate man be weak, yet the spirit is ready, and will never give over calling on God, depending on him, holding fast the Covenant, and the hope of deliverance; for it will make this a new ground of speech unto God, that it is not able to speak any thing, and a new ground of laying hold on God, and hoping for help from him, because its hope is failing, as here: I am weary of my crying, my throat is dried; mine eyes faile, while I wait for my God.

Ver. 4. They that hate me without a cause, are more then the haires of my head: they that would destroy me, being mine enemies wrongfully, are mighty: then I restored that which I took not away.

The third reason of the first Petition is, because his enemies were many, mighty, and malicious. Whence learn, 1. Holiness, and integrity cannot ward off the enmity of a wicked world: for the enemies of David, who was a well-deserving man, and Christ (whose type he was) much more beneficent to men, had foes innumerable; They that hate me without cause, are more than the haires of my head. 1. Albeit many do aggravate their own grief foolishly, when they suffer hurt of them whom they did not injure or provoke; yet the conscience of harmlessness toward such as with harm to them, is a great support of their confidence, when they are injuriously dealt with; They hate me without a cause. 3. It is no strange matter to see truly godly men to be out of credit and affection with men who are in power and authority in the world; They that would destroy me, being mine enemies wrongfully, are mighty. 4. He that is most just, may be troubled and hated without a cause, and may be dealt with as a thief, being verily an honest man; Then I restored that which I took not away.

Ver. 5. O God, thou knowest my foolishnesse, and my sins are not hid from thee.

The fourth reason of the first Petition is, because God was witness to his disposition and carriage. Whence learn, When we are condemned of men unjustly, we have God to appeale unto; and although there may be sins upon us in our private reckoning with God, yet being free of what men do lay to our charge, we may appeal to God in the controversy betwixt our enemies and us; and when we have acknowledged what sins are in reckoning betwixt God and us, our supplication to God shall not be cast back for our sins; for this is the force of the Psalmists reasoning, for the strengthening of his own faith in prayer, saying, O God, thou knowest my foolishnesse, and my sins are not hid from thee; that is, whether I be so foolish and injurious to my persecutors, as they lay, or not, thou Lord knowest; and whatsoever other sins may be imputed unto me upon any other score, I refuse not to reckon for them, but I am free, thou knowest, of what I am charged with: and this is applicable also in some sort unto Christ, who was most free of what men did lay to his charge, although in another another reckoning all the iniquities of the elect were charged upon him by imputation, according to his transaction with the Father about our debt.

Ver. 6. Let not them that wait on thee, O Lord GOD of hostes, be ashamed for my sake: let not those that seek thee, be confounded for my sake, O God of Israel.

The second Petition is, that the godly may not be hurt by his manner of exercise, which he strengthens by four reasons; First, because his sufferings were for God's cause, ver. 7. Secondly, because he was cast off by his friends, ver. 8. Thirdly, because he did take God's honour deeply to heart, ver. 9. Fourthly, because his holy and religious carriage was mocked: and both by high and low, by honourable and base rascals he was opposed and persecuted, ver. 10, 11, 12.

From the second Petition learn, 1. The property of the godly is to seek communion with God, and patiently to attend his answer for the time, manner, and measure of it; for they are here described, They that wait on thee, O Lord, those that seek thee. 2. When one of God's children is persecuted for righteousness' sake, all the rest are waiting to see the event, and it cannot chuse but be a great dath to them, to see the righteous lie under, or a good cause to lie long oppressed, which inconvenience we should request the Lord to prevent; Let not them that wait on thee, be ashamed; let not those that seek thee, be ashamed. 3. It is a kindely mark and property of a godly person to be a lover of the good of all God's children, and to be careful that no cause or occasion of stumbling be furnished unto them by him; Let them not be ashamed for my sake; let them not be confounded for my sake. 4. Faith sets its eyes in prayer upon those titles of God, which do serve most for its purpose; as here the Psalmist hath to do with enemies, O Lord God of Hosts, will do his turn against them; he is praying for the good of God's children, and, O God of Israel, speakest to that point.

Ver. 7. Because for thy sake I have borne reproach: shame hath covered my face.

The first reason of the second Petition is, because his sufferings were for God's cause. Whence learn, 1. Though suffering 14 for God's cause in maintenance of his truth, be a glorious sort of suffering, wherein a man may go unto God confidently; yet it may be accompanied with shame from men of this world, and the godly for a time may be so delayed in the point of relief, that they know not what to say to their scorers, but may be forced to hang the head for a while; for thy cause I have borne reproach.

2. He that suffers shame for God's cause, shall neither have cause at length to be ashamed of his suffering, nor shall any other have cause to be ashamed for him; let them not be confounded for my sake, because for thy sake I have borne reproach.

Ver. 8. I am become a stranger unto my brethren, and an alien unto my mothers children.

The second reason of the second Petition is, because his friends had cast him off; hence learn, 1. In affliction for God's cause friends will more readily forlake a sufferer, then in his affliction for a civil cause; I am become a stranger to my brethren. 2. The power of Religion in the godly, is stronger then the bonds of blood with their kinmen, and it will make them cleave to God, when their kindred do cast them off: I am an alien unto my mothers children.

Ver. 9. For the zeal of thine house hath eaten me up: and the reproaches of them that reproached thee, are fallen upon me.

The third reason of the second Petition is, because he was deeply affected with the dishonor done to God. Hence learn, 1. It is not enough to love God, and his ordinances, and kingdom, and his peoples good; but it is required also that we be zealous here: The zeal of thy house hath eaten me up. 2. Spiritual affections and passions will no lesse affect and trouble the body, then natural affections and passions: The zeal of thy house hath eaten me up. 3. Injuries done to God and Religion, and to the godly, should affect us no lesse nearly, and be laid to heart, then injuries personally concerning us: The reproaches of them that reproached thee, have fallen upon me.

Ver. 10. When I wept, and chastened my soul with fasting, that was to my reproach.

11. I made sackcloth also my garment: and I became a proverb to them.

12. They that sit in the gate, speak against me, and I was a song to the drunkards.
The fourth reason of the second Petition is, because he was greatly mocked of all sorts for his holy carriage. \textit{Whence learn,}

1. True zeal is ruled with knowledge, joined with humility in the mans self, and tempered with the love to men, even toward persecutors; such was Davids zeal: but Christs zeal was perfectly such: \textit{I wept and chastened my soule.} 2. Fasting in earnest is not so much the abstinence from meat, as it is the afflicting the soule; \textit{When I chastened my soul with fasting.} 3. The godly behaviour of the righteous, is subject to horrible misconstruction, yet must they not desist from duties for all this; \textit{Fasting was to my reproach. I made sackcloth also my garment, and I became a proverb to them.} 4. It is a sore affliction to the godly, to be condemned by Magistrates and Judges, and yet the truly religious, even Christ and his followers were, and are subject to this exercise; \textit{They that sit in the gate (or in the Courts of Justice, which were erected at the entry of the parts of Cities) do speak against me.} 5. Righteousnesse and truth is not the worse by its being condemned by civil Judges; God will not disclaime his own cause for that, but will hear such complaints as this is, in this case: \textit{they that sit in the gate, speak against me.} 6. When Magistrates do disconceavenance true Religion, then it becometh a matter of derision to rascals, and to every base villain without controlment, and a table talk to every tipler; \textit{I was a song of the drunkards.} 7. The shame of the Croffe is more grievous then the rest of the trouble of it: This is the fourth time that the shame of the Croffe is presented unto God, in these foure last verses; \textit{I was a song of the drunkards: after complaining of his being reproached, and being made a proverb.}

\textbf{Ver. 13. But as for me, my prayer is unto thee, O LORD, in an acceptable time: O God, in the multitude of thy mercy hear me, in the truth of thy salvation.}

This is the third petition for deliverance, or for granting his prayer, or the third time he presenteth it; whereunto he addeth reasons taken from the time of presenting of it, and multitude of Gods mercy and truth of his promises or Covenant of salvation. \textit{Whence learn,} 1. The best way to bear out the persecution of the mighty, and the mokage of the base multitude, is to be frequent in prayer to God for our part; \textit{But as for me, my prayer is unto thee, O Lord.} 2. So long as God doth offer a gracious care to suppliants, fupplicants, a man may be confident that petitions of grace shall have ready access and answer; my prayer is unto thee in an acceptable time. 3. The largenesse of Gods mercy is a sufficient encouragement for the afflicted to come and take the benefit thereof; In the multitude of thy mercies hear thou me. 4. When besides the mercifulnesse of God, we have also his Covenant and promise of salvation, we may upon these two pillars leane and roll over, and rest our faith: hear me in the truth of thy salvation.

Ver. 14. Deliver me out of the mire, and let me not sink: let me be delivered from them that hate me, and out of the deep waters.

15. Let not the water-floods over-flow me, neither let the deep swallow me up, and let not the pit shut her mouth upon me.

The fourth petition for delivery, or fourth time he presenteth it, whereunto he addeth reasons taken from the danger he was in. Whence learn, 1. Faith useth to correct the expressions of sense; and as faith doth gather strength, a mans condition growth clearer; it was the expression of sense, ver. 2. I sink in deep mire, and here the fear is something lesstened, because faith is something more cleared; deliver me out of the mire, let me not sink. 2. The man who loveth truth better then worldly prosperit, and maketh the Lord his refuge, shall not faint under persecution, but shall be borne through all troubles, and be delivered; let me be delivered from them that hate me, and out of the deep waters. 3. Faith in God giveth hope to be helped, and is half a delivery, before the full delivery come, for the Psalmit is now with his head above the water, and not so feared as when he began the Psalme; for here he faith, Let not the water floods over-flow me, neither let the deep swallow me up. 4. As the sense of danger sharpeneth prayer, so the greatnesse of it is a ground of hope, that the evil which is feared shall not prevail over us; for albeit the Lord suffer the danger to be great, yet will he not leave us in a case desperate; let not the pit shut her mouth upon me.

Ver. 16. Hear me, O LORD, for thy loving kindnesse is good: turne unto me according to the multitude of thy tender mercies.

17. And
17. And hide not thy face from thy servant, for I am in trouble: hear me speedily.

The fifth petition for delivery, or fifth time he presenteth it, whereunto he addeth reasonstaken from the multitude of God's mercies, conscience of his uprightnesse, and greatnesse of his trouble. Whence learn, 1. Albeit God should give no answer for a time, faith will still presse for an answer, for it knoweth it hath to do with the hearer of prayer: hear me, said he before, and hear over again, Hear me, O LORD. 2. Faith seeth what is in God's heart, whatsoeuer it doth finde or misle in his hand, it fastens on love, and draweth hope and life from that: hear me, for thy loving kindnesse is good. 3. Though a beleeving soul finde it self deterred of God in some respects, yet while it holds fast on his merciful nature, it may be sure to meet with a change of dispensation more comfortable; turne unto me according to the multitude of thy tender mercies. 4. When a beleever is persecuted by man for righteousness, and friends and familiars do turne their backs upon him; it is not strange that God for the mans trial, should seeme to hide his countenance from him also, which exercise the beleever counteth more heavie then all the rest, and can be content to want all the creatures kindnesse, so he may finde the Lords kindnesse, for he cannot endure long to want Gods presence: Hide not thy face from thy servant. 5. The conscience of endeavour to serve God, giveth hope of comfort in time of trouble and that so much the sooner, that the trouble be great, and petition apparently near; Hide not thy face from thy servant, for I am in trouble: hear me speedily. 6. An upright servant, albeit he be troubled for Gods cause, and do misle comfort from God, yet will he not change his Master, nor despaise of his favour; Hide not thy face from thy servant, for I am in trouble. 7. It is no limitation of God, to presse his hafting to help, when trouble presste us so sore as we seeme near to perish: if he speedily prevent not: hear me speedily.

Ver. 18. Draw nigh unto my soul, and redeeme it: deliver me because of mine enemies.

19. Thou hast known my reproach, and my shame, and my dishonour: mine adversaries are all before thee.

20. Reproach hath broken my heart, and I am full of of heaviness: and I looked for some to take pity, but there was none; and for comforters, but I found none.

21. They gave me also gall for my meat, and in my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink.

In the sixth petition, or sixth time he prayeth for obtaining delivery: whereunto he addeth reasons taken from the inhumanity, and cruelty of his enemies, and desertion of his friends, and want of comfort from all men. Wherefore learn, 1. As straits do serve to drive the godly more and more near-hand to God: so do they serve to prepare men for renewed sense of communion with God, or for God’s sensible drawing more near-hand to them; draw near unto my soul, saith he. 2. A new manifestation of God’s love to a soul, is present relief and delivery, whatsoever be the trouble; draw near to my soul, and redeem me. 3. In the delivery of God’s children from the hand of persecutors, the Lord doth look not only to the necessity of his children, but also to the insolent pride of the enemies, in case they should prevail; deliver me, because of mine enemies. 4. The consideration of God’s being witness to all the sufferings of the Saints, is a ground of patience under trouble, and of hope to be delivered; Thou hast known my reproach, and my shame, and my dishonour: mine adversaries are all before thee. 5. Before a believer once entered in sufferings, and put upon his trials, be delivered, he shall be made very sensible of the weight of trouble, specially of reproaches, and of his own weakness to bear the burden of the cross alone; Reproach hath broken my heart, and I am full of heaviness. 6. As a persecuted Saint may possibly be deprived of all common comfort, pity and help from men; so the less their comfort be on earth, they may look for the more and readier comfort from God; I looked for some to take pity, and there was none; and for comforters, but I found none. 7. As the wicked are ready to add affliction to affliction unto the godly: so must the godly ever look for it: yea, they must not think it strange to finde the meanes of natural life, and ordinary refreshments of the body, made bitter to them by persecution: They gave me gall for my meat; hat is, they made my natural refreshments tasteless, yea and bitter to me: they gave me cause of grief, instead of comfort, to me. 8. As all the sufferings of the Saints are but shadowes of the sufferings of Christ: so are they all mitigated and sanctified.
sifted in the sufferings of Christ, upon whom all the sufferings mentioned in this Psalm were foretold that they should fall, for expiation of the sin, and sanctifying the crosses of all his followers; In my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink, was a Prophecy of Christ's suffering on the Cross.

Ver. 22. Let their table become a snare before them: and that which should have been for their welfare, let it become a trap.

23. Let their eyes be darkened that they see not; and make their loines continually to shake.

24. Pour out thine indignation upon them, and let thy wrathful anger take hold of them,

25. Let their habitation be desolate, and let none dwell in their tents.

This is the second part of the Psalm, wherein the Prophet, as a type of Christ, by way of imprecation against his malicious enemies prophesieth of the vengeance of God against all obstinate adversaries, and malicious persecutors of him, whether in his own person, or in his members; and denounceth ten plagues, or effects of God's wrath to come upon them for their wickedness. The first whereof is this, God shall curse all the comforts of this life unto the obstinate adversaries of Christ, and of his followers: all these comforts shall serve to harden their hearts in sinne, and lengthen their life therein, till they fill up the measure of their iniquities; let their table become a snare before them. The second plague, all the means appointed for men's conversion and salvation shall turne for the aggravating of their sinne, and just damnation: and as all things work together for the good of those that love God, so shall all things work for the wo and wrack of God's enemies; That which should have been for their welfare, let it become a trap: The third plague, they shall not perceive the true intent of God's work, nor consider the day of their visitation; let their eyes be darkened, that they see not. The fourth plague, there shall be no peace to the wicked, but as even in laughter their heart shall be sorrowful; so also their conscience for fear shall never dare to abide the light of the Lord's Word, to be examined by it; and even in their greatest prosperity they shall have perpetual secret fear, smother it as they will: Make their loines loines continually to shake. The fifth plague, the threatened wrath of God shall be fully executed against them, and never depart from them when it is once poured out; Power ut thy indignation on them, and let thy wrathful anger take hold of them. The sixth plague is, the curse of God shall be on their houses and posterity, and the place they have dwelt in shall be abhorred: Let their habitation be desolate, and let none dwell in their tents.

Ver. 26. For they persecute him whom thou hast smitten, and they talk to the grief of those whom thou hast wounded.

He giveth a reason of those fearful imprecations on Christ's adversaries, because they are cruel in their persecution of him, and of the godly, even in the time of their affliction otherways sent by God. Whence learn, 1. It consisteth well with the love of God to his children, (even his only begotten Son) not being excepted) to exercise them with sad calamities, for bringing to passe the work of man's Redemption by Christ, and for perfecting of the sanctification and salvation of the redeemed by Christ; of all of whom now and then it may be said to God, Thou hast smitten him, and they are those whom thou hast wounded. 2. Whosoever may be the reason of the Lords smiting and wounding his own children, yet their wicked enemies have no just reason to maligne them, or to trouble them, and therefore their troubling of God's children is persecution; They persecute him whom thou hast smitten. 3. The very talking and venting of ill speeches, to the prejudice of Christ's cause and truth, and true holiness in his Saints, especially when they are under sufferings & afflictions whatsoever, is a high provocation of God's wrath: They talk to the grief of those whom thou hast wounded. 4. The persecution of God's children for righteousness, is a sufficient date for all the forenamed damnation in the preceding verses; this is the reason of the justice of the imprecation: For they persecute him whom thou hast smitten. 5. The Church without breach of duty to men, may sing and rejoice in these fearful imprecations against the malicious enemies of Christ and his Church; first, as lovers of God more then of men: secondly, as followers, not of their own quarrel, but of the controversy of the Lord of hosts, whose soldiars they are against all his enemies whatsoever: thirdly, as as subscribers to the justice of God, who will not suffer malicious cruelty to be unpunished: and fourthly, as rejoicers in Gods love to his people, who owes the wrongs done to his Church and servants therein, as done to himself, and will be avenged upon their adversaries, and having decreed doom against the adversaries of his Church, will have his children to be ministers under the great Judge, to pronounce the sentence against his and their enemies; and as it were, to give out order for execution of the sentence, saying, Let their table, let their eyes, let their habitation be so and so disposed of.

Ver. 27. Adde iniquity unto their iniquity, and let them not come into thy righteousness.

28. Let them be blotted out of the book of the living, and not be written with the righteous.

The seventh plague of the enemies of Christ and his Church, is this: howsoever ignorant Zealots, some of them may finde mercy; yet malicious persecutors of truth and piety grow worse and worse, and being entered in the course of persecution, cannot go off, but do draw deeper and deeper in guiltinesse, and that in Gods righteous judgement, punishing sin by sin: Adde iniquity unto their iniquity. The eighth plague is, they are given over to a reprobate sense, so as they cannot lay their own sins to heart, and so cannot see the necessity of the remission of sin, nor put a price upon the purchase of Justification unto sinners by Christ the Redeemer, nor be found among the persons justified by faith in him: Let them not come into thy righteousness. The ninth plague is this: albeit the enemies of Christ and his people may pretend to be among the number of his friends, and to have their names written in great letters, in the Catalogue of the visible Church; yet God shall disclaim them one day as none of his, and thrust them from him as workers of iniquity: Let them be blotted out of the book of the living. The tenth plague is this: as the visible Church hath an open book, wherein all within the external Covenant are written, as Saints by calling, and Covenanters with God for life and salvation, out of which book God dasheth out the names of his wicked enemies: so God hath a secret book & roll as it were, wherein he enrolleth all the regenerate, all the justified; and among the names of this sort, or among the names of the true members of the invisible Church
Church of the regenerate, none of the names of Christ's malicious enemies shall be written; Let them not be written with the righteous.

Ver. 29. But I am poor and sorrowful: let thy salvation (O God) set me up on high.

The third and last part of the Psalm wherein is set down the glorious event of this sad exercise in four evidences of victory of his faith over this assault. The first whereof is in his confident prayer, not only to be delivered, but also to be exalted, ver. 29. The second evidence is, in his hearty promise of thanksgiving, ver. 30, 31. The third evidence is, in a prophecy of the fruit of this exercise, which the believers shall have by it, ver. 32, 33. The fourth is a thanksgiving for mercies foreseen, which shall come to the Church, and in special to the Church of Israel, ver. 34, 35, 36. All which, in as farre as they concern David the type, are but little in comparison of Christ the Antitype. From the first evidence of the victory of his faith, appearing in his confident prayer; Learn, 1. It is no strange thing to see poverty of spirit and sad afflictions joyned, the one to help and leaen the other; But I am poor and sorrowful. 2. There is as sure ground of hope of an event out of every trouble wherein the children of God can fall, as there is ground of hope of the overturning of the most settled worldly prosperity of their enemies; for the forenamed curses shall come on the enemies of the godly, but the children of God in the mean time may expect salvation, and to be set on high, which he confidently prayeth for; But I am poor and sorrowful, let thy salvation, O God, set me up. 3. The conscience of humiliation under God's hand, is a great evidence of delivery out of whatsoever trouble, if a man in a righteous cause be emptied of self-conceit and carnal confidence, and brought down to poverty of spirit, and affected with the sense of sins and misery following upon it, and withal go to God in this condition, he may be sure to be helped, the poor in spirit are freed from the curse; But I am poor and sorrowful, faith the Psalmist here, let thy salvation set me up on high. 4. The man afflicted and persecuted for righteousness, humbled in himself, and drawn to God for relief, shall not only be delivered, but also shall be as much exalted after his delivery, as ever he was cast down; Let thy salvation, O God, set me up on high. 5. The kindly sufferer of righteousness, will have have no deliverance, but such as God will allow him, as God shall bring unto him: and as he doth not look for delivery another way, so he doth look for a glorious delivery this way; Let thy salvation, O God, set me up on high.

Ver. 30. I will praise the Name of God with a song, and will magnifie him with thanksgiving.

31. This also shall please the Lord better then an ox or bullock that hath horns and hooves.

From the second evidence of his victory of faith in his promised thanksgiving; Learn, 1. When the Lord comforts the heart of a sufferer for his cause, he can make him glad before the delivery come, by giving him the assurance that it shall come, and can engage his heart to solemn thanksgiving in the midst of trouble; for poverty of spirit will esteem the farre foremost of delivery at last, as a rich mercy, and matter of a song: I will praise the Name of God with a song. 2. The Lord in the delivering of his children out of their troubles, will give evidence of his greatness, as well as of his goodnes of his power, as well as of his mercy to them, that he may have the more glory & thanks for his work; I will magnifie him with thanksgiving.

3. Moral worship offered in Spirit and truth, in the meanest degree of sincerity, is more acceptable to God, then the most pompous ceremonial service, which can be done to him without Spirit and truth; This also shall please the Lord better then an ox and bullock, that hath horns and hooves; that is, which is perfect and wanteth nothing in the external part of commanded service. 4. That which we know shall be most acceptable to God, we ought to study and follow that most, that we may walk before God unto all well-pleasing, in special to praise him in affliction, and to praise him from a contrite spirit: This also shall please the Lord better then, &c.

Ver. 32. The humble shall see this and be glad: and your hearts shall live that seek God.

33. For the Lord heareth the poor, and despiseth not his prisoners.

From the third evidence of the victory of his faith, in the prophecy of the fruits of his sufferings, mainly as he was a type of Christ,
Christ, who here is most intended; Learn, 1. The exercise of the Saints, set down in Scripture, and namely the exercise of David, and of Christ represented by him, was foretold, that it should be of great use to the Church of God in after-times, as now we see it in effect: The humble shall see this and be glad. 2. The humble soul is most capable of divine knowledge and comfort; The humble shall see this. 3. The escape of our Lord Jesus out of his sufferings for us, and the escape of his afflicted children out of their sufferings through faith in him, is a matter of instruction, comfort and joy to every humbled believer: The humble shall see this and be glad. 4. As such who are pure in spirit and truly humbled, do live upon God's almes, and are daily at his doores for relief of their necessities, and for communion with his gracious goodness: So shall they thrive well in this trade; Your heart shall live that seek God. 5. The Lords children have a life beyond the children of men, which is able to quicken them in their deepest troubles, and to make them blessed in their delivery out of troubles; a life moral and spiritual, whereby their conscience is comforted; Your heart shall live that seek God. 6. The right way for the godly afflicted to have the benefit of the troubles and events which Christ and his followers have had experience of, is to comfort themselves in hope of the like event and success in seeking God as they did: The humble shall see this and be glad, and your heart shall live that seek God. 7. As the Lords poor men are much in prayer, so shall they be rich in good answers; For the Lord heareth the poor. 8. Whoever in defence of any point of God's truth are put to trouble, either in body or minde, by men, or Satan, or both; they are all sufferers for God; they are all prisoners, who howsoever they be misregarded by men, shall be of much price in God's eyes: He despiseth not his prisoners.

Ver. 34. Let the heaven and earth praise him, the seas, and every thing that moveth therein.

35. For God will save Sion, and will build the Cities of Judah, that they may dwell there, and have it in possession.

36. The seed also of his servants shall inherit it, and they that love his Name shall dwell therein.

From the last evidence of the victory of faith, set down in a prophetical thanksgiving for the foreseen mercies which were to come to the Church by Christ's procurement, and specially to the Jews; Learne, 1. Large sense of troubles maketh way for large observation, and sense answerable of mercies; The evil of deepest afflictions the Lord can recompense with highest consolation, as the beginning and ending of this Psalm giveth evidence. 2. The soul that seeth the mercy of God toward it self, doth see also the mercy of God upon the same grounds to all others, his people in Sion, his Church in every place and time; and he seeth the benefits of Christ's sufferings to be matter of praise unto God, able to fill the whole world; and he seeth his own insufficiency for the praising of God also, and that all the creatures are all few enough, when they all concur in this Song; Let the heaven and the earth praise him, and the seas and every thing that moveth therein. 3. Whatsoever condition of Gods people can be represented by the various condition, motion, settlement or commotion of heaven, earth and seas, and things therein, cannot but furnish matter of joyful praise to God, and come up to contribute to Gods praises; Let the heaven and earth, the seas and every thing that moveth therein, praise him. 4. Every delivery of every believer, and above all the delivery of Christ as man from his expiatory sufferings, is earnest and pledges of the delivery of the Church militant out of all its troubles; For God will save Sion, faith the Psalmist, being now delivered out of his trouble. 5. As the Lord will ever maintain his Church, his Sion and his Judah; so hath he a purpose to give a special evidence of this his care among the Jews, how farre soever they may at some times be from all appearance of his respect to them; for in the promise he keepeth in expressely the Name of Judah: He will build the Cities of Judah. 6. What outward testimonies of Gods respect to the Jews for Christ's sake shall be given unto them, after the destruction of their Cities, here presupposed, we must leave it to God, to be in due time by his own works interpreted; and to be made out according to what here is said; That the Cities of Judah shall be builded, that they may dwell there, and have it, (to wit, the promised land,) in possession, the seed also of his servants shall inherit it, and they that love his Name shall dwell therein: Only let us observe, that the duty of the true Citizens of the Church is, to transmit true Religion to their posterity, and that this is the best and only way to transmit all the blessing of God, and the constant possession thereof unto them.
The seed also of his servants shall inherit it, and they that love his Name, &c.

PSAL. LXX.

To the chief Musician. A Psalm of David, to bring to remembrance.

This Psalm is almost one in words with the latter end of Psalm 40, wherein David being in present danger of his life by his enemies, prayeth first, for speedy delivery, ver. 1. next, for shameful disappointment to his enemies, ver. 2, 3. and thirdly, for a comfortable life to all the godly, ver. 4. from which condition albeit he himself was very farre for the present, yet he professeth he doth relie on God by faith, and prayeth for a timous delivery, ver. 5.

From the Incription; Learn, 1. Our most notable dangers and deliveries should most carefully be observed and remembered, and made use of; This is a Psalm to bring to remembrance. 2. What hard condition we have been in before, we may fall into the like again; and the same gracious means we have used before, in seeking our relief of God, we should use again; and what words of prayer we have used before, we may use again, without any either needless affectation of other words, or superstitious tying of our selves to the same words, as the example of David teacheth us, when we compare the end of the 40. Psalm with this Psalm.

Ver. 1. Make haste, O God, to deliver me: make haste, to helpe me, O LORD.

From the first petition; Learn, 1. Though death or danger of it were never so near, God can come quickly and prevent it; and prayer is a swift messenger, which in the twinkling of an eye can go and return with an answer from heaven, as this abrupt beginning of his prayer doth teach us; O Lord, to deliver me. These words, make haste; are not expressed in the Original.
Ver. 2. Let them be ashamed and confounded that seek after my soule: let them be turned backward, and put to confusion, that desire my hurt.

3. Let them be turned back for a reward of their shame that say, Aha, aha.

From the second petition; Learn, 1. The more that the enemies of God's people do promise to themselves certainly to destroy such of the Saints as they do pitch upon when their plot shall be ripe and fixed, when God doth disappoint them they are the more confounded and ashamed; Let them be ashamed and confounded, who seek after my soule, or my life. 2. All the enemies of God's children, shall at last think shame of their injuries done to them, and evils which they have wished unto them, to wit, when they shall know whose children they are, and what interest God hath in them, then at last shall they flee, and hide themselves for shame; Let them be turned backward, and put to confusion, that desire my hurt. 3. The damage of the godly is the delight of the wicked; and an enemy to the godly, is he that laughs and scorns at the misery of the godly; They say, when they see them in trouble, Aha, aha. 4. Albeit what shame the wicked do put upon the godly for righteousness, or for their sufferings for righteousness, is not the shame of the godly, but the shame of the enemies, who do what they can to expose the godly to shame, yet shall the enemies have shame yet more for their pains, and the terrible wrath of God shall chase them out of God's presence; Let them be turned back for a reward of their shame, that say, Aha, aha.

Ver. 4. Let all those that seek thee, rejoice and be glad in thee: and let such as love thy salvation, say continually, Let God be magnified.

From the third petition; Learn, 1. Whatsoever be our own hard condition at any time, we should seek the welfare and prosperity of the rest of God's children, and it is the property of each each of the godly in their trouble, to wish all the rest to be partakers of the blessedness which their own soul doth seek after, but not to be like to them in trouble or bonds: Let all those that seek thee, rejoice and be glad in thee.
2. If one of the godly be delivered out of his troubles, all the rest, who did pray for the delivery should rejoice in God also, as for a benefit given to themselves; Let all those that seek thee, rejoice and be glad in thee.
3. The godly do not desire deliverance to themselves or their fellows except in God's way, in a cleanly and holy way: and the more of God is seen in the delivery of his servants, the more are they glad in the Lord; They are those that love God's salvation.
4. It is a most suitable service for the Saints, to be always praising God; Let those that love thy salvation, say continually, The Lord be magnified.

Ver. 5. But I am poor and needy, make haste unto me, O God: Thou art my help and my deliverer, O LORD make no tarrying.

From the fifth petition; Learn, 1. Albeit we be not in such a condition, as we wish all the godly were in, yet let us lay out that condition before a pitiful God, and submit our selves to him in the condition wherein we are; But I am poor and needy.
2. The sense of a hard condition, is a preparation and a ground of hope to be brought out of it to a better; I am poor and needy, make haste unto me, O God.
3. Whosoever dispensation we shall meet with, we should hold fast the claim of faith, and of our interest in God; Thou art my help, and my deliverer.
4. Having settled our dependance upon God, we may without being mistaken of God, speak all our desires to him; and having done so, should leave our supplication and case at his feet with confidence: O Lord, make no tarrying.

PSAL. LXXI.

This Psalm is a Prayer of David in his old age, requesting for delivery from the conspiracy of Absalom, wherein he wrestleth with the Lord by fervent supplication in seven petitions; all tending tending to this purpose, that he may be delivered, to ver. 14. and from ver. 14. to the end, we have his confidence to be delivered, set forth in foure evidences thereof. Absalom here is not named, nor is the particular case set down, otherwise then in general expressions, that so it may serve the better for the larger use of the Church of God, and of the particular members thereof, in their afflictions.

Ver. 1. IN thee, O LORD, do I put my trust; let me never be put to confusion.

The first petition is general, wherein he professeth his confidence in God, and prayeth that he be not put to confusion. Whence learn, 1. As long as a childe of God doth live in the world, he must look for new afflictions, as here the experience of the Psalmist, tossed in his old age, doth warn us. 2. Look how many new troubles do befall Gods servants, so many new messengers are sent of God to call them to him; so many new errands are furnished unto them; so many new petitions are put in their mouth; and so many pressing necessities are sent to make them earnest in their supplication, and frugal in making use of their interest in God by faith, as here and elsewhere doth appear. 3. He that cometh to God must believe in him, and fasten his faith on God, and avow it, how weak soever he finde it to be; In thee, O Lord, do I put my trust. 4. Albeit such as believe in God, may have many tentations to distrust God, and great feares that they shall be disappointed of their hopes, and for a time may seem to be disappointed and put to confusion, yet it shall not be for ever; if they do not take shame unto them by distrust, they shall never have cause to be ashamed; Let me never be put to confusion.

Ver. 2. Deliver me in thy righteousness, and cause me to escape: incline thine ear unto me and save me.

The second petition is more special, for safety and delivery from his enemies. Whence learn, 1. The righteousness of God is a pawning unto the godly, that their lawful petitions shall be granted, and specially when they seek delivery from their ungodly adversaries; Deliver me in thy righteousness, and cause me to escape. 2. When the Lord giveth a heart to a believer to pray, he will also grant him audience, and a good answer; Incline thine ear unto me, and save me.

Ver. 3. Be thou my strong habitation, whereunto I may continually resort: thou hast given commandment to save me, for thou art my rock, and my fortress.

The third petition is, that the Lord would shew himself to him in effect, what he hath engaged himself to be unto believers according to the Covenant. Whence learn, 1. What the Lord is to his people by Covenant, he will be to them the same effectually and in deed, as their need shall require; and as they shall implore him; Be thou my strong habitation. 2. The goodness of God covenanted to his people, is not for one good turn, but for every good which they need; not for one day, but for daily use-making, and constant enjoying of it; Be thou my strong habitation, whereunto continually I may resort. 3. As the Lord hath all means, all second causes, all creatures at his command, being Lord of hostes, to execute whatever he doth give order for to be done; so hath he really set his active providence on work, to accomplish what he hath covenanted to every believer; Thou hast given commandment to save me, for thou art my rock and fortress: he giveth his believing in God, who is his rock, as a reason of his saying, that God was about to save him.

Ver. 4. Deliver me, O my God, out of the hand of the wicked, out of the hand of the unrighteous and cruel man.

5. For thou art my hope, O Lord God: thou art my trust from my youth.

6. By thee have I been holden up from the womb: thou art he that took me out of my mother's bowels, my praise shall be continually of thee.

The fourth petition for delivery is strengthened by reasons taken from the wickedness of the enemy, ver. 4, from his own con-confidence in God, ver. 5: and from his long experience of God's kindness unto him in time past, ver. 6. Whence learn, 1. It is a great advantage to be a Confederate with God, when we have to deal with his enemies and ours in any debate; Deliver me, O my God, (faith he) out of the hand of the wicked. 2. The integrity of the believer in a good cause, and the iniquity of their adversaries in their ill cause, are good tokens of the believers victory over them; Deliver me out of the hand of the unrighteous and cruel man. 3. Confidence in God, avowed against all temptations in God's presence, and especially when it is of long standing, is so strong an argument of being heard in a lawful petition, that it may persuade the believer he shall speed; Deliver me, for thou art my hope, O Lord God, thou art my trust from my youth. 4. True thankfulnesse will not passe by common benefits, and true faith will read special love in common and ordinary favours, and make use thereof among other experiences for strengthening of faith; By thee have I been holden up from the wombe, thou art he that took me out of my mothers bowels. 5. The forming of us in the belly, and the common benefit of birth and bringing forth quick into the world, is a smothered wonder, and so glorious a work of God, that he doeth perpetual praise from us for that one work; Thou art he that took me out of my mother's belly.

Ver. 7. I am as a wonder unto many, but thou art my strong refuge.

8. Let my mouth be filled with thy praise, and with thy honour all the day.

The fifth petition is strengthened with reasons taken from his hard condition, and from the opportunity of God's having glory by his delivery out of it. Whence learn, 1. The exercise of the Lords children is sometimes so strange to the beholder, as the world doth wonder at them; I am as a wonder unto many. 2. Knowledge of Gods Word and wayes, and faith in his Name maketh a believer not think strange, whatsoever fiery trial come upon him, but to rest on God's will whatsoever befall him; I am as a wonder unto many, but thou art my strong refuge: For faith doth not judge of it self, as the world judgeth, but as God hath judged and spoken of it in his Word. 3. The more strange the exercise of the godly be, the more glorious
The sixth petition is strengthened with reasons taken from his own old age and weakness, and from his enemies' malice. Whence learn, 1. Such as have been the Lords' servants in their youth, may be sure to find God a good and kind Master to them in their old age; Cast me not off in the time of old age. 2. Infirmities in God's children shall not move loathing and casting off, but pitying and cherishing of them, that they may be supported in their weakness; Forsake me not when my strength faileth. 3. The world conceiveth that God doth cast off his children, when he doth bring them under any sad calamity, and by this means do think that they have not to do with God's children, when they persecute his dearest servants; yea, and they encourage themselves to persecute them the more that God doth afflict them; Mine enemies speak against me, and they that lay wait for my soul take counsel together: saying, God hath forsaken him, persecute and take him, for there is none to deliver him. 4. The misconstructions of the world, their plots and conspiracies against the godly, their evil speeches of them, their resolved cruelty to undo them, are so many arguments of good hope that God shall deliver them; Forsake me not, for mine enemies speak against me, &c.

Ver. 12. O God, be not farre from me: O my God, make haste for my help.
Let them be confounded and consumed, that are adversaries to my soul: let them be covered with reproach and dishonour, that seek my hurt.

The seventh Petition for delivery and disappointing of his enemies, is strengthened with reasons taken from the Covenant between God and him, and from the glory which God shall have by shaming his enemies. Whence learn; 1. When temptations are most, dangers are greatest, and the assault is strongest, then doth the believer draw nearest unto God, and hold him most closely; O God, be not farre from me, &c. 2. Relying upon, and avowing of the Covenant between God and the soul of a believer, is able to bear the greatest stress, whereunto temptations and troubles can drive him; O my God, make haste for my help. 3. God for the glory of his justice against the wicked, and the glory of his grace to his own, shall pour confusion, consumption, reproach, and dishonour upon persecutors of righteousness, and adversaries of his suffering servants; Let them be confounded and consumed, that are adversaries to my soul: let them be covered with reproach and dishonour, that seek my hurt.

But I will hope continually, and will yet praise thee more and more.

My mouth shall shew forth thy righteousness, and thy salvation all the day: for I know not the numbers thereof.

I will go in the strength of the Lord God: I will make mention of thy righteousness, even of thine only.

In the latter part of the Psalm, is the Psalmist's confidence to be delivered, set forth in four evidences thereof. The first is his resolution to persevere in hope to be helped, and in praising of God, and relying only on the Lord's power and righteousness, and not on his own strength. Whence learn, 1. He that is resolved to persevere in hope, may be sure of a gracious event out of his trouble: But I will hope continually. 2. Resolute hope comforteth, enlargeth, and stirreth up the heart unto more and more praising and thanksgiving; I will hope continually, and I will yet praise thee more and more. 3. The matter of the continual tinual praise of God, is partly his righteousness, whereby he keepeth his promise, not only according, but also above condition, and giveth also remission of sins, which did deserve wrath, and partly his deliverances, which he giveth to his children, out of danger of body and soul: My mouth shall show forth thy righteousness, and thy salvation all the day; for I know not the numbers thereof. 5. Because in troubles a man's own strength will fail him, and fail him also in commanded duties, therefore the believer must renounce confidence in his own ability in both cases, and lean to the furniture of God; I will go in the strength of the Lord God. 6. Because the conscience of sins and sinfulness still doth stare the Believer in the face, and all to discourage him, the Believer must renounce all confidence in his own holiness, and relie upon the imputed righteousness of Christ only, which is called the righteousness of God by faith, being witnessed unto both by the Law and Prophets, Rom. 3. 21. I will make mention of thy righteousness, even of thine only; for in the point of justification, and ab solving of us from sin, this righteousness of God only hath place.

Ver. 17. O God, thou hast taught me from my youth: and hitherto have I declared thy wondrous works.

18. Now also when I am old and gray-headed, O God, forsake me not: until I have shewed thy strength unto this generation, and thy power to every one that is to come.

The second evidence of the Prophets confidence to be delivered, is the experience of God's kindness for time past, making him with comfortable assurance of being heard to pray for the continuance of that same kindness for time to come. Whence learn, 1. We are all of us ignorant of God and his ways, till he teach us by his Word, and by his Spirit, and by his giving to us experimental knowledge thereof; O God, thou hast taught me from my youth. 2. The conscience of sincere endeavour to make use of God's gifts to us for the glory of God, and edification of others, according to our place; is very sweet and comfortable in the day of trouble, and giveth much encouragement in approaching to God; Hitherto have I declared thy wondrous works. 3. He that hath had long experience of God's mercy to himselfe, and thankfully doth acknowledge the same; may assure himselfe himselfe that the course of Gods kindnesse to him shall not be broken off: O God, thou hast taught me from my youth, now also when I am old and gray-headed, for sake me not, O Lord. It is a noble designe for a man who hath received gifts, whereby he may glorify God and edify his people, to destinate all the days he hath to live, to serve his own generation, and the posterity, in the communicating to them what he knoweth of the Lords all-sufficiency, and not to love to live in this world, except for this end; For sake me not until I have showed thy strength to this generation, and thy power to every one that is to come.

Ver. 19. Thy righteousness also, O God, is very high, who hast done great things: O God, who is like unto thee?

20. Thou which hast shewed me great and sore troubles, shalt quicken me again, and shalt bring me up again from the depths of the earth.

21. Thou shalt increase my greatness, and comfort me on every side.

The third evidence of his confidence to be delivered, is his looking to the unsearchable fountain of Gods wisdom, faithfulness, and omnipotency, and his expecting from this well-spring, that as large consolation shall come forth to him, as he hath had a large measure of troubles. Whence learn, 1. Albeit the effects of Gods wisdom, faithfulness, and omnipotency, be near unto us, and do fall under our sense in his daily operations, yet the fountain thereof, which is Gods own perfection, is unsearchable, incomprehensible, and incomparably great; Thy righteousness, O God, is very high, who hast done great things: O God, who is like unto thee? 2. That which we see of the Lords works, may lead us up to know what is not seen in relation to difficulties, and power of men, and to see what he is able to do; and when we see the invisible God, we cannot choose but admire his Majesty, and exalt him as Sovereign over all, and then, and not till then that we give him the honour of omnipotency and faithfulness, can the heart rest and be quiet: Thy righteousness, O God, is very high, who hast done great things: who is like unto thee? 3. He that acknowledgeth Gods justice and wisdom in his troubles, may look to see Gods power and grace no lesse evident in his delivery.
livery and consolation: and he who in trouble hath seen his own infirmity, emptiness, and death, may look to see God's power and life in raising of him out of the grave of his trouble; Thou which hast shewed me great and sore troubles, shalt quicken me again, and shalt bring me up again from the depths of the earth. 4 As trouble humblyeth and abaseth a man before the world: so the Lords delivering of him, and shewing his respect to him, honoureth the man again, and exalteth him before men; Thou shalt increase my greatness. 5 As no trouble doth come alone, but multitudes of troubles joyned together, when the Lord will humble and try a man; so no comfort cometh single or alone, when the Lord will change the man's exercise, but a multitude of comforts joyned together; Thou wilt comfort me on every side. 6 Losses are made lighter, and comforts weightier, when God is seen and acknowledged in them: Thou which hast shewed me sore troubles, (it is but a view of trouble what we have felt when troubles are seen to come from God's hand,) thou shalt increase my greatness, and comfort me on every side.

Ver. 22. I will also praise thee with the Psaltery, even thy truth, O my God: unto thee will I sing with the Harp, O thou holy One of Israel.

23. My lips shall greatly rejoice when I sing unto thee: and my soul, which thou hast redeemed.

24. My tongue also shall talk of thy righteousness all the day long: for they are confounded; for they are brought unto shame that seek my hurt.

The fourth and last evidence of his confidence is his promise of joyful thanksgiving, by way of a begun song, and that for the forsight of his own delivery, and of his enemies overthrow. Whence learn, 1. Faith is so satisfied with God's promise, that it can praise heartily for what is promised, before it finde performanee: I will praise thee with the Psaltery, even thy truth. 2. It is our interest in the Covenant, which makes us to have interest in particular promises: I will praise thy truth, O my God. 3. A soul sensible of God's kindness, and sure by faith of the performanee of his faithful promises, cannot satisfy it selfe in praising of God, it hath so high estimation of his fidelity, power, and love: Therefore after he hath said, I will praise thee, he addeth, unto thee will I sing with the Harp. 4. How hardly soever a soul hath been exercised with troubles for a while, so soon as it feeth by faith the Lords prepared event; It will justify all the passages of Gods providence, as just, and wise, and good, and in a word, as holy in all respects. To thee will I sing, O holy One of Israel. 5. Singing with our voice unto the Lord, is a part of moral worship, as well as prayer with the voice, when his honour, and our upspring, and others edifying calleth for it; My lips shall greatly rejoice when I sing unto thee. 6. As the work of praising God requireth sincerity, earnestness, and cheerfulnesse; so the work thus done, becometh not only honourable to God, but also refreshful to the worshipper; My lips shall greatly rejoice when I sing unto thee. 7. Dangers and distrefses, how grievous soever they be for the time, yet do they furnish matter of praise to God, and joy to the party troubled afterward when the delivery cometh: My lips shall rejoice, and my soue which thou hast redeemed. 8. Beside, singing of Psalms unto God, speaking of his praise in all companies, and upon all occasions, is a part of our bounden duty of thankfulnesse, for making his word good to us in the overthrow of our enemies, and delivering of us: My tongue also shall talk of thy righteousness, all the day long. 9. The overthrow of the enemies of the godly is as certain to come, as if we saw it with our eyes already come to passe. The same Word of God, the same light and persuasion of spirit, manifesteth the delivery of the godly, and the destruction of their enemies: For they are confounded, for they are brought to shame, that seek my hurt.

PSAL. LXXII.

A Psalm for Solomon.

IN this Psalm under the shadow of King Solomon's reigne, Christ's gracious government is praised; and first, the Church is taught to pray for a blessing on King David and his sonnes government, including Christ's, ver. 1. Next, the answer is given by the spirit of the Lord in a prophecie of the blessedness of the Reign, and Kingdom of Christ the Sonne of David, from ver. 2. to ver. 18. Thirdly, the use hereof is set down in thanksgiving.
giving unto God, ver. 18, 19. and herein is the accomplishment of all the desires of David, obtained by this satisfactory answer, ver. 20.

From the inscription and prayer; Learn, A King may command within his kingdom many things; but he cannot command a blessing on his own government; he must make suit for this to God: He may leave a kingdom to his child; but because a kingdom is nothing without God's blessing, he must pray for this blessing, and seek the assistance of the prayers of the Church for this intent: and this duty Kings may crave of the Church, and God's people should not refuse it; A Psalm for Solomon.

Ver. 1. Give the king thy judgements, O God, and thy righteousness unto the king's son.

From the prayer of the Church; Learn, 1: Gifts from God are necessary to fit a man for an office; and it is not every gift, which doth make fit for a particular office, but such gifts specially as are for the discharge of the place a man hath, and those must be asked from, and granted by God, and by this means sanctified; Give the King thy judgements, O God. 2. Nothing is more conducive to make a King's government prosperous and blessed, then equity and justice, according to the revealed will of God; Give the King thy judgements, and thy righteousness to the King's son.

Ver. 2. He shall judge thy people with righteousness, and thy poor with judgement.

3. The mountains shall bring peace to the people, and the little hills by righteousness.

4. He shall judge the poor of the people, he shall save the children of the needy, and shall break in pieces the oppressour.

5. They shall fear thee as long as the Sun and Moon endure, throughout all generations.

6. He shall come down like rain upon the mown grass; as showers that water the earth.

7. In his days shall the righteous flourish, and abundance of peace so long as the Moon endureth.

8. He
8. They shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river, unto the ends of the earth.

9. They that dwell in the wilderness shall bow before him, and his enemies shall lick the dust.

10. The kings of Tarshish and of the Isles shall bring presents: the kings of Sheba and Seba shall offer gifts.

11. They all kings shall fall down before him; all nations shall serve him.

12. For he shall deliver the needy when he crieth, the poor also, and him that hath no helper.

13. He shall spare the poor and needy, and shall save the souls of the needy.

14. He shall redeem their souls from deceit and violence, and precious shall their blood be in his sight.

15. And he shall live, and to him shall be given of the gold of Sheba, prayer also shall be made for him continually, and daily shall he be praised.

16. There shall be an handful of corn in the earth upon the top of the mountaines; the fruit thereof shall shake like Lebanon, and they of the city shall flourish like grass of the earth.

17. His Name shall endure for ever: his Name shall be continued as long as the Sun: and men shall be blessed in him, all nations shall call him blessed.

The Prophetical answer given here to the Churches prayer, promiseth above twenty benefits of Christ's government, all of them tending to the glory of the King, and good of the subjects; the shadow whereof was to be seen in David's and Solomon's reign, joyned with many imperfections; but the real accomplishment is only in Christ. The first is, Christ's subjects shall have good rules how to carry themselves in all duties, how to behave themselves righteously, and how to be made righteous, by his direction and conduct; He shall judge thy people with righteousness: The second benefit or commendation is, Christ will set the necessities of his subjects, his humble ones, his afflicted ones, to be supplied supplied most discreetly, and the wrongs done unto them repaired;
He shall judge thy poor with judgement, ver. 3. The third benefit is, Christ is not to take away civil Governors, nor Potentates places, nor the several orders and ranks of greatness of superior and inferior powers, Rulers and Judges; all these are to be fixed rather by him, for the good of the people: The superior as mountains, and the inferior as little hills, shall stand in their place for him. The fourth benefit is, Christ shall make such Magistrates as do embrace him, for their Lord and Governor, a blessing to the people under them; for by their righteous government the people shall live quiet and safe in God's service under them: The mountains shall bring peace to the people, and the little hills; but how shall the mountaines and little hills do this? By righteousness, ver. 4. The fifth benefit is, albeit Christ do suffer his subjects to be brought low in the sense of their own weakness, and in danger of being swallowed up by their persecutors, yet shall he take their controversy to his cognition, and deliver his people out of the hands of their adversaries; He shall judge the poor of the people: he shall save the children of the needy, he shall break in pieces the oppressors, ver. 5. The sixth benefit, Christ the true King of Israel, shall never want a kingdom, he shall never want subjects, but shall always have a Church of such as shall worship and fear him, and do homage unto him, so long as the world doth stand, amidst all changes and revolutions that can come: They shall fear thee as long as the Sunne and Moon endure, throughout all generations. ver. 6. The seventh benefit, whatsoever sad condition his people shall be in, how farre soever spoiled of their lustre and glory in the world, or in any other respects whatsoever, they shall be made as a mowned down medow possibly; yet Christ by his Word, Spirit, and effectual blessing shall revive and recover them: as grass cut down being watered by rain, is made to grow again: He shall come down like rain upon the mown grass, as showers that water the earth, ver. 7. The eight benefit, all the true subjects of Christ are justified persons, and devoted in their hearts to righteousness, in the obedience of God's will, and such as do endeavour to abound in the fruits of righteousness: The righteous shall flourish in his days. The ninth benefit, Christ's justified subjects and students of holiness, shall have peace with God, peace abounding and passing all understanding, lasting peace, without end, in all revolution of conditions: They shall flourish, and have abundant peace, so long as the world endureth. v. 7. The tenth benefit of Christ's government is the the enlargement of the Church, and number of his subjects, according to the length and breadth of God's promises made to his people Israel, whether Israel in the letter, or in the Spirit: He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth, ver. 9. The eleventh benefit of Christ's gogernment is more special; whomsoever he pleaseth to make subjects unto himself, how wilde and savage soever they be, yea how great enemies soever they have been to his Kingdome, he shall tame them, bring them in subjection to himself, and to most humble submission unto his commands: They that dwell in the wildernesse shall bow before him, and his enemies shall the dust, ver. 10. The twelfth benefit is yeet more special; The Kings and Rulers of the Gentiles shall finde it a blessing to themselves, and to their dominions, to be under Christ's government, and shall effectually contribute their riches, power, and authority, to advance the Kingdome of Christ, their soveign Lord and protector: The kings of Tarshish, and of the Isles shall bring presents: the kings of Sheba and Seba shall offer gifts;

ver. 11. The thirteenth benefit of Christ's government, is to great an enlargement of his Kingdome, by bringing of all King-domes and Nations some way under his Scepter, that the Prophecie of Job the Divine, Rev. 11. 15. shall be acknowledged to be fulfilled; All the kingdoms of the earth are become the Lord's and his Sonne Christ's, how improbable soever this may seem:

for answerably hereunto is it said here, Yea all kings shall fall down before him, all nations shall serve him, ver. 12. The fourteenth benefit serving for the commendation of his government, is by way of giving a reason of the marvellous enlargement of his Kingdome, from his care of the meanest of his subjects, from his effectual pity toward them, love and estimation of them. The care Christ hath of his subjects is such, that there is not one so mean in all his Kingdome, of whom, and whose necessities, and of whose particular petitions he doth not take most particular and exact knowledge, whose petitions being presented, in the sense of their need, he doth not grant: He shall deliver the needy, when he crieth. There needeth no Mediator between him and his subjects; He heareth the needy when they cry. The man that hath nothing within him or without him to commend him to Christ, to assist, help, relieve, or comfort him in heaven or earth, is not despised by Christ, but delivered from that which he feareth: He shall deliver the poor also, and him that hath no helper; and this he doth by teaching his subjects to bear troubles, by strengthen-

ing them for the burden; by comforting them in their griefs; by giving a delivery to their spirits by faith, and a full delivery at last, v. 13. The fifteenth benefit and commendation of Christ's government: he doth not exact any thing of his subjects, but that which he offereth to furnish and enable them to discharge: he lets none be tempted above his strength; he taketh small beginnings in good part, he spareth the rod in a great measure, mitigates the correction, and in midst of wrath he remembereth mercy: He shall spare the poor and needy, whatsoever hard exercise he put them to, he will give them their soul for a prey: They shall not perish, who in the sense of their need depend upon him: He shall save the souls of the needy, ver. 14. The sixteenth benefit and commendation of Christ's Kingdom, albeit the Lord suffer his subjects to be tried with heresies and seducers, by oppressors and persecutors, yet he will assist them in the trial and bring them out of it: He shall redeem their soule from deceit and violence, and if for his own glory he put any of them to lay down their life for his cause, it shall be a point of special honouring of them, as of precious sonsnes, whom he esteemeth much of, both living and dead; Precious shall their blood be in his sight, ver. 15. The seventeenth benefit and commendation of Christ's government is from his everlasting endurance; albeit other Kings die, and leave their kingdom to their successor, yet it is not so with Christ, he indureth for ever: his death for paying the ransom of our sins, did not interrupt his reign, but made way for his more glorious reigning, after his resurrection; he hath life in himselfe, as in the fountain; He shall live, he shall live conquering, and bringing in moe subjects, who shall pay tribute unto him; To him shall be given of the gold of Sheba. The eighteenth benefit and commendation of Christ's Kingdom is this, Christ shall be well beloved of all his subjects, whose exercise it shall be to wish and pray for the prosperity of his Kingdom, Church, and mystical body, and who shall commend and praise his glorious and lovely Majesty; Prayer also shall be made for him continually, and daily shall he be praised, v. 16. The nineteenth benefit & commendation of Christ's government is, that a little seed of his precious Word sown among men, of whose conversion there might be least hope, like a handful of corn sown upon the mountaines or most barren ground, shall have a glorious increase of the conversion of many notable Saints, like as corn in a barren place should grow up like Cedar-trees; There shall be an handful of corn in the earth, on the top of mountains, the fruit thereof shall shake like like Lebanon: and this blessing of the Gospel he can make it to be without prejudice of the manured land of Churches already planted, which are as cities inhabited; those he can bless and will bless at his pleasure, with the abundant growth of grace amongst them; And they of the City shall flourish as the grass of the earth, ver. 17. The last commendation and benefit of Christ's government, summeth up all that can be said in these four generals; 1. That Christ's Name, fame and honour, shall be perpetuated from one generation to another, for the running of his benefits to his subjects, and for the course of his judgements on his enemies: His name shall endure for ever; his Name shall be continued as long as the Sun. 2. His Gospel shall spread further and further among men, to deliver his own from the curse due for Sin, to make them partakers of the blessing of full felicity; Men shall be blessed in him. 3. It shall be in vain to seek blessedness any where, except in him only, who is the procurer, applier and maintainer of true blessedness; the way whereunto is, to come to God in and through Christ: In him men shall be blessed. And 4. Such a fulness of converted Gentiles at length shall be brought in, that the blessedness of the Gospel of Christ, and of spiritual communion with him, and the riches of his goodness and grace shall generally be acknowledged in all the world; All Nations shall call him blessed.

Ver. 18. Blessed be the LORD God, the God of Israel, who only doth wondrous things.

19. And blessed be his glorious Name for ever, and let the whole earth be filled with his glory. Amen, and Amen.

After this gracious answer of the Churches prayer in so glorious a prophecy of Christ, thanksgiving and praise is ended unto the Church, to be offered up to God for this mercy. Whence learn, 1. When the heart hath believed what the ear hath heard of the blessedness to be found in Christ, the mouth should be opened to praise and bless God; Blessed be the Lord God, the God of Israel. 2. As the keeping of the race of David till the coming of Christ, distinct from other families, in so many revolutions of affairs, as were between David's reign and Christ's coming, is very wonderful: so the enlarging of the Kingdom of Christ, since he came, is full of wonder also, whether we look to the King, or to the subjects converted, or the way of converting them, by the preaching of his Word, or the preservation or continuing of Christ's Kingdome in the world amongst so many Devils and wicked adversaries, all his subjects being to weak and sinful as they are; It is a matter of great wonder indeed: Blessed be the God of Israel, who only doth wondrous things. There are no wonders like the wonders done in the Redemption of men by Christ, yea there is no other who can work any wonders, but Christ alone. 3. As the blessings of Christ are everlasting, so should the thanksgiving for them be; and no lefse can content the heart of a true believer, who, the more he thinks of Christ, the more glory feeth he in him; and blessed be his glorious Name forever, faith he. 4. Before Christ do put an end to his work, and give up the Kingdome to the Father, his glory shall shine in all the parts of the world, for the prayers endited to the Church, are not vanishing wishes, but real promises, and certaine prophecies; Let the whole earth be filled with his glory. 5. As faith sets to its seal unto the truth of God's Word, in special what concerneth the salvation of men, and the glory of God in Christ;
so love to both the glory of God, and salvation of souls sets to its seal also; or both faith and love do subscribe the same truth of God in both respects, again and againe: Amen and Amen.

Ver. 20. The prayers of David the sonne of Jesse, are ended.

This closure of the Psalm is added by the Psalmist David himself, and is a part of the text; serving first, to shew that this was the last of the Psalms, endited by the Spirit to him a little before his death, when Solomon was now reigning; howsoever in the order of providence it be not in the hindmost place of this book of the Psalms. And next, it serveth to shew, that in this ans wer made to his prayer set down in this Psalm, all his desires were granted, both concerning himself and his house; for he could wish no more. And thirdly, it serveth to shew his mean estimation of himself, notwithstanding the Lords lifting of him up so high, that so the grace of God in him may be the more conspicuous; for which causes he calleth himself, The sonne of Jesse. Whence learn, 1. As a man liveth, so readily he dieth: David was a worshipper of God all his life, and now when he hath given over the Kingdom to his Son, and is go-Palmes, for God's glory and edification of his Church. 2. The meditation of Christ, contemplation of his glory, seeking after and foreseeing the enlargement of Christ's Kingdom, is a noble and comfortable closing of a man's life, as here we see it. 3. It is the note of true humility and sincere love to God, to abase our selves, and acknowledge our low condition, wherein God did finde us when he did let forth his love to us, that thereby we may commend the riches of God's goodness and grace unto us, as appeareth here in David.

PSAL. LXXIII.
A Psalm of Asaph.

The Psalmist setteth down here the doctrine of God's goodness to the faithful, however he seem to deal with them, ver. 1, and cleareth it by his own experience: Wherein first, after he had stumbled to see the wicked prosper in the world, comparing his own calamities with their prosperity, ver. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12. he was like to be overcome with the tentation, and to forsake the course of godliness, ver. 13, 14. Next, with this tentation he wrestles, ver. 15, 16. And thirdly he getteth the victory, by consulting the Word of God, ver. 17, 18, 19, 20. In the last place, he maketh a fourefold use of this experience; the first whereof is, the acknowledging of his own weakness under the tentation, ver. 21, 22. The next is, the confessing of God's kindness to him in the time of tentation, ver. 23. The third is, the confirming of his own faith for time to come, ver. 24, 25, 26. The fourth is, his resolution to draw more near to God hereafter, ver. 27, 28.

Ver. 1. Truly God is good to Israel, even to such as are of a clean heart.

The doctrine set down in this verse, is the result of his sad exercise, after he had gotten the victory of the tentation, which did call in question the blessedness of believers, whencesoever their outward condition should be found more miserable than the condition of the wicked. Whence learn, 1. As the tentations of Satan do aim at the weakening of our believing of saving doctrine, so our exercises, our experiences of conflicts against tentation, and our victories over it, should strengthen our faith so much the more, to hold fast that truth which the tentation did oppose; After this experience the Prophet not only holds forth this doctrine, That God is good; but also prefixeth unto it, truly, yet, or notwithstanding. 2. However the Lord seem to deal more hardly with humble believers, and worship-ners of him, then with the wicked, yet is his dispensation toward them always for their welfare: Truly God is good to Israel. 3. Those persons are true Israelites, who not only do cleanse their conscience by the blood of the Lamb of God, but also study to be holy in soul and body in the sincerity of their heart: This is the cleanliness of heart which the Scripture teacheth; God is good to Israel, even to such as are of a clean heart.

Ver. But at as for me, my feet were almost gone: my steps had well nigh slippt.

3. For I was envious at the foolish, when I saw the prosperity of the wicked.

The Psalmist compareth his late carriage under a tentation unto the rule of this doctrine, and doth acknowledge that he did not hold it so firmly as he should have done, but was almost driven from the maintaining of it. Whence learn, 1. In the time of adversity a believer may prove weak in the faith of that truth, which was not questioned by him in prosperity, and be near-hand unto the quitting and renouncing of it; But as for me, my feet were almost gone, my steps had well nigh slippt. 2. Albeit the Lord so farre decipher the weakness of his own children, as to let them be brought to the very brink of misbelieving of a necessary and saving truth, yet he preventeth their quitting of it altogether; they may be very near the fall, and not fall altogether: My feet were almost gone, my steps had well nigh slippt. 3. The godly will not stand to counsel to their owne shame their own weakness, when it may serve to strengthen others, and give warning to prevent the fall of others, or any way prove profitable to others, as in this example we see. 4. The measure of our faith or love to God and to Religion, the measure of our faith to obey known truth, is best known in time of tentation, when the object is in our eye, and the tempter is making
Ver. 4. For there are no bands in their deaths, but their strength is firme.

5. They are not in trouble as other men: neither are they plagued like other men.

6. Therefore pride compasseth them about as a chaine: violence covereth them as a garment.

7. Their eyes stand out with fatnesse: they have more then heart could wish.

8. They are corrupt and speak wickedly concerning oppression, they speak loftily.

9. They set their mouth against the heavens: and their tongue walketh through the earth.

10. Therefore his people return hither, and waters of a full cup are wrung out to them.

What was the prosperity of the wicked, which stumbled him, he setteth down in particular in these verses, Whence learn, 1. Albeit the great multitude of the wicked are subject to such outward mileries, as others are, yet to some of them, yea and to some of the worst of them, God for his own holy ends useth to give health of body, long life, little sickness, and a quiet death, when the time of it is come, and in their death to keep them from many troubles, which others are subject unto: and yet God doth not love them, nor approve any whit more of them for this: There are no bands in their death, but their strength is firme; they are not in trouble as other men, &c.

2. The more liberally the Lord deals with the wicked, they are the more insolent and proud, and vain-glorious; they are the more unjust and violent oppressors of others: their prosperity doth blinde them, and serveth to encrease their wickednesse; Therefore pride compasseth them as a chaine; violence covereth them.
them as a garment. They glory in their oppression. 3. Albeit God bestow riches on the wicked, and more then they could reasonably wish, and do give them health of bodies to make use of their riches as they please, so as they swell for fainthefs, (which abundance should oblige a man to serve the Lord more heartily) yet the recompence they render to God is this, they become more and more vicious in their own persons, and do threaten more and more injuries to their neighbours; They are corrupt, and speak wickedly concerning oppression: They stand in awe neither of God nor man, but openly in their speeches they despise all authority over them; They speak loftily: They scoffe and mock religion, and speak blasphemously of God and his providence: They set their mouth against the Heavens: They speak as they please of all things, and all men, not caring against whom they speak, or what they speak to any mans prejudice; Their tongue walketh through the earth: not caring whom it tread upon, or whom it abuse. 4. The prosperity of the wicked, and their thriving in an ill course, doth enflare many inconsiderate people, even members of the visible Church, and moveth them to follow the evil ways of the openly wicked, and to make defection from their own professed duties; Therefore his people return bither, faih he. 5. When men stumble at righteousness because of trouble, and follow the coarse of the wicked for love of worldly advantage; it is righteousness with God, to give both the bait for a while to such changelings, and the hook also, for hardening them in their own wicked choice; And waters of a full Cup (faith he) are wrung out unto them: that is, they finde some worldly commodity by their defection. 6. There is a threefold entation to draw a man from the course of holines unto looseness and profanity; one, when the wicked are observed to prosper in the world; another, when multitudes turn off a good course, and follow the example of the wicked: and a third, when those backsliders also seem to prosper after their defection, as here. 1. The wicked do calumniate every good course, and they prosper. 2. Gods people return bither for love of prosperity. 3. Then waters of a full cup are wrung out unto them. All these things may concurre, and the way mean time is most damnable notwithstanding.

Ver. 11. And they fay, How doth God know? and is there knowledge in the most High?
12. Behold, these are the ungodly: who prosper in the world, they increase in riches.

Here he bringeth in the poor deluded people defending their defection, and their following the example of the ungodly, and hardening themselves in their evil course, laying in substance, that if God disliked the ungodly, he would not let them prosper so in the world, and heap riches upon them as he doth: and this is in substance to blaspheme God as an ignorant Governor of the world, or a misregarder how men do carry themselves. Whence learn, 1. When men are once insnared in an ill course, they will seek reasons to justifie themselves; those thoughts which did insnare them, do also hold them; for they to whom waters of a full cup are wrung out, do say, How doth God know? 2. Men are ready to reproach the Lord, if he do not guide the world to their fancy, yea and to blaspheme God, rather then blame themselves for their faults, as these words do import: How doth God know? that is, how can it be, that God taketh notice of such mens wayses as wrong, seeing he doth prosper them? 3. To think that God is well-pleased with the way of the wicked, because they prosper; and that he respects not his Saints, because he doth afflict them more then the wicked, is as much as in effect to say, The Lord is not wise that doth so well to his foes, and dealeth so hardly with his friends; for so here is it interpreted by the Lord: Is there knowledge in the most High? 4. It seemeth very reasonable to carnal reason, that if God hate ungodliness, he should not suffer the ungodly to prosper in the world: and if he will suffer them to prosper, then he doth not hate ungodliness; and therefore when it is clear to all men that the ungodly do prosper, they conclude that God knoweth not; taketh no notice of ungodliness, or is not displeased with it, for here is their proof; Behold, (say they) these are the ungodly who prosper in the world, they increase in riches. 5. The thing that deceiveth the ungodly and the unbelieving world about Gods dispensation, is, that they look only to that which is done by God in this world; no punishment after death, or felicity after death do they think upon: These are the ungodly (say they) who prosper in the world. 6. In the very tentation whereby the wicked is insnared, the worme of their gourd, and the staine of their felicity is discovered: their felicity is but in riches, and their prosperity is but in this present world; They prosper in the world, say they.

Ver.
Ver. 13. Verily I have cleansed my heart in vain, and washed my hands in innocency.

14. For all the day long have I been plagued, and chastened every morning.

Here is the well near slipping of the Psalmists feet, let down, in his begun yielding unto the devil's tentation, forcibly born in upon him, and repeated over by him, after the manner of a resolute conclusion, condemning all his former course of godliness upon this one poor pretence, because he seemed to himself more miserable then the wicked were. Wherefore learn, 1. A tentation sometime may be so powerfully born in upon the spirit of a child of God, as it may seem to be admitted, yielded unto, and subscribed unto as truth, as here we see; Verily I have cleansed in vain, &c. 2. The true course of sanctification consists in the study of cleansing a man from all pollution both of soul and body, or in cleansing the heart and the hands, as here is set down: The heart is cleansed by the blood of the expiatory sacrifice laid hold on by faith, and by the begun works of the Lord's Spirit manifested in the hearty resolution, purpose and study of holiness: the hands are cleansed by a blameless and harmless conversation or course of life and actions: I have cleansed my heart and hands in innocency. 3. When a man is under a tentation, or in a fleshly temper of spirit, for the present he puttheth a high price upon any good he hath done, and forgetteth by what strength he did it; he forgetteth God's part, and his glory in it; for the Psalmists part, was the consenters part, the instruments part, and he was in the point of action only a subordinate agent and co-worker at the best by a borrowed strength; and yet as if all the work had been his work alone; In vain (faith he) have I cleansed my heart, and washed my hands in innocency. 4. That which is the break-neck of the wicked, may readily be a stumbling-stone for a time to the godly: that which is the irrecoverable deadly sickness of the wicked, may be the hot fever or distemper of the godly for a season. In special, as the wicked man at all times doth look only to this present world, and to what may make him prosperous or miserable in this present life: so it may befal the godly man also in a fit, at a time, to look only upon temporal prosperity and trouble, as here we see the Psalmist looketh only to his present troubles; For all the day long I have been plagued; never a word here of his sweet consolations and manifold manifold benefits bestowed on him. 5. To find some new crosses daily, either from God immediately, or from the world, or from Satan, or from our own corruption, is no strange thing to the godly; All the day long I have been plagued, and chastened every morning, faith the Psalmist: even while he was daily cleansing his heart, and washing his hands: so doth divine wisdom see it fit for the good of his children, and glorifying of his own Name.

Ver. 15. If I say, I will speak thus: behold, I should offend against the generation of thy children.

Thus have we seen his tentation. In the next place, we have his wrestling with it, by bringing this conclusion suggested by Satan to a further examination: and first, of humane reason, whereby he perceiveth, that if this conclusion should be maintained, then the Church of God in all ages, and all the godly from the beginning of the world should be condemned as miserable souls: which consequence he thinketh to be a rash condemning of the constant resolution of the godly wife, in all ages past. Wherefore learn, 1. Tentations driving at the subversion of faith in Christ, and holiness of life, do finde resistance in the heart of a renewed man, how farre forevver they seem to prevail at first: The seed of God remaineth in him, the principles of spiritual life, the infused habits of saving graces, the new creature by Gods up-stirring do make opposition, as in this example we see.

2. The way to take up and decipher Satans tentations, is to consider what they aim at, tend unto, drive at, what may be the consequence thereof; If I say, I will speak thus, then such a thing will follow. 3. So long as a tentation remaineth under dispute, and is not come to a settled decree and resolved practice, it hath not obtained full victory; it is with the Psalmist here, for all that was suggested and seemingly yielded, no more yet, but, If I say I will speak thus. 4. Whosoever doth condemn piety and holy conversation, because the world doth so, or because trouble doth follow such a course, he doth a high injury to all the Saints from the beginning of the world, and to God the Author of all holiness; If I should speak thus, behold, I should offend against the generation of thy children. 5. The godly are not the authors of their own spiritual being, the making them new creatures is the work of God, they are the children of God, begotten.
begotten of him, by his Word and Spirit, and do resemble their Father in wisdom and righteousness; so doth the Psalmist style them, in the time of his hard exercise here, The generation of God's children. 6. In our disputing with temptations by the weapons of reason, we shall do well to make God Moderator of the disputants, and to look to God in our reasoning, that we may by his testimonies rectify every thing, lest we reason amiss, as here the Psalmist doth; I should offend against the generation of thy children. 6. We ought to reverence the judgement of the godly, and the more universally their judgment is one, and agreeing together in a point of controversy, the more fear should we have to dissent from them, as the Psalmists example teacheth us.

Ver. 16. When I thought to know this, it was too painful for me.

17. Until I went into the Sanctuary of God, then understood I their end.

18. Surely thou didst set them in slippery places, thou castest them down into destruction.

19. How are they brought into desolation as in a moment? they are utterly consumed with terrors.

20. As a dream when one awaketh: so, O Lord, when thou awaketh, thou shalt despise their image.

In the third place, finding himself not yet satisfied, he consulteth the Oracle of God, revealed in his Scripture and ordinances of his house, and so he findeth his doubt resolved, and victory over his bitter temptation granted unto him. Whence learn,
1. When a man doth see himself in a mist, and out of the Lords way, he is not able by himself to finde it again; for the strongest of humane testimonies will not settle him and make him quiet; When I thought to know this, it was too painful.

2. The last refuge of brangled faith, is God himself manifesting his will in his Word and Ordinances; no settling or satisfaction of doubts in Divinity, but by the Scriptures; It was too painful for me, until I went into the Sanctuary of God; that is, till I consulted the Scriptures, and considered what God had revealed in in his Church by his Ordinances; this did satisifie and settle him. 3. The Lord hath revealed in Scripture what shall be the end and close of mens course, who study not to walk according to his direction, how prosperous soever they may seem to be: and because the felicity of men is not to be known by Gods outward dispensation of worldly comforts or roffes, therefore the mans end must put the difference; Then understood I their end. 4. Whansoever alterations and changes the godly man be subject unto in his temporal condition, bodily or spiritual, yet his felicity is settled unto him on the rock; but the felicity of the wicked is builded on the sand; the higher they are lifted up in that felicity earthly, which only they do affect, the more near are they to a fall and fearful ruine: Thou hast set them upon slippery places. 5. Whansoever may seem to the wicked themselves, or to the world, or to the godly who look upon the wicked, how little appearance soever there be of their fall; yet it is decreed it shall be; for notwithstanding of all appearance it is said, Surely thou hast set them in slippery places. 6. As the wicked do not arise unto any greatness or power in the world by themselves, but the Lord is he that seteth them up for his own glory; so they do not fall of their own accord, but the Lord doth cast them down: beside their own weight, they have the throw of the right hand of the Lord, who sheweth his power in their overthrow, and doth drive them to more deaths then one; Thou castest them down into destruction. 7. The wicked perish suddenly, when neither they themselves nor others are looking for their ruine, in a way much more wonderful then their lifting up was; They are destroyed, how are they brought into desolation, as in a moment? 8. The destruction of the wicked is full of terror; how senselessly soever some of them go away, all their riches, honour and prosperity is pulled from them, and in great wrath they are sent out of the world, never to see any token of favour again; they are adjudged to irrecoverable perdition of soul and body for ever: They are utterly consumed with terrors. 9. When the wicked are flourishing in wealth, ease and honour, men do think that God is as it were sleeping; but the truth is, both the wicked themselves, and all who look upon them, and do judge them to be happy, are in a dream, as they shall see when the Lords time is come to execute judgement on them; for then all their riches, honour, pleasure and contentment shall be found nothing but a despicable picture of these things; As a dream when one awaketh: so, O Lord, when thou awaketh, thou shalt despise their image.
Ver. 21. Thus my heart was grieved, and I was pricked in my reins.

22. So foolish was I and ignorant: I was as a beast before thee.

In the fourth place, he maketh a six-fold use of this experience. The first is this, that by it he is taught how weak and foolish he is in himself, and how unable to stand in time of trial and temptation.

Whence learn, 1. Hardly will a man discern a powerful temptation, when he is under it. The best sight to be had of the danger of a temptation is, when it is overcome and gone and look how well pleased a man is, when the temptation is beautified with specious colours of carnal reason, so much will he be displeased with it, when it is seen, and discerned by spiritual light, as here we see in the Psalmist's experience.

2. Much trouble do we bring to our own spirits, when we examine God's dispensations by carnal reason, and not by the Scripture; and we may thank our selves for the mercy which we draw upon our selves, as here the Psalmist doth. Thus my heart was grieved, and I was pricked in my reins.

3. So soon as the godly can perceive their own error, they will no longer maintain it, and no man will more sharply censure them for their fault then they will do themselves: This is a part of their uprightness, and ingenuous honesty of heart; So foolish was I and ignorant.

4. The sin of envy, and male-content with God's afflicting of us, and sparing of the wicked, hath its own judgement bound upon the back of it: for as a soure-leavened vessel, turneth all things into it unto fourness, so doth envy of the prosperity of others make all the good that the Lord doth to our selves, uncomfortable, and unpleasant unto us: for the Word My heart was grieved; is in the force of the original, My heart was imbittered, made sour, and leavened.

5. Perplexity of mind, rising upon the mistaking of God's providence, is like the pain of the gravel in the reins, very troublesome till we be rid of it; I was pricked in my reins, is a similitude borrowed from the bodily pain of the gravel.

6. Carnal reason not corrected by God's Word, is beastly ignorance: it may bear some shew of reason among foolish men, but indeed it is nothing before God, but brutish folly; I was as a beast before thee.

Ver. 23. Neverthelesse, I am continually with thee: thou hast holde me by my right hand.
The second use of this exercise, is the acknowledgment that his standing in grace, and God's obedience, depended only upon the Lord, by whose powerful sustaining of him he was kept from being utterly overcome by the temptations of Satan, and from falling from the way of God by the temptation. Whence learn, 1. The perseverance of the Saints is not of themselves, but of the Lord; who doth not forsake them, when they of themselves are ready to forsake him, but by his power secretly uphold them, and keep them fast to himself: This doth the Psalmist here acknowledges; Nevertheless I am continually with thee. 2. When we have gotten proof of our own folly, and weakness, and ill deserving, then do we most clearly see and confess God's grace and power in preserving of us; Thou hast holden me by thy right hand.

Ver. 24. Thou shalt guide me with thy counsel, and afterward receive me to glory.

The third use is the confirmation of his faith and hope in God for time to come. Whence learn, 1. The Believer, how sensible forever he be of his own weakness, may be persuaded of his own perseverance, by looking on God's constancy, and felt experience of his work of grace in him in time past; Thou wilt guide me with thy counsel, &c. 2. There is an inseparable connexion between walking by God's direction in the time of this life, and our receiving into heaven after this life: and he who is resolved to walk by the rule of God's direction, may promise to himself to be received into glory immediately after his journey in this life is ended; Thou shalt guide me with thy counsel, and afterward receive me to glory. 3. Albeit the Believer may meet with many doubts and difficulties in his way, yet lieth he a guide to direct him, and a rule to walk by; to wit, the Word of God revealed in the Church or Sanctuary, whereby he may be advised effectually how to walk on his way to heaven: Thou wilt guide me with thy counsel.

Ver. 25. Whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is none upon earth that I desire besides thee.

26. My flesh and my heart faileth: but God is the strength of my heart, and my portion for ever.

The fourth use of this exercise is, the settling of his affection.
and confidence on God, as the matter of his satisfactory contentment, and upholding, when all creatures failed him. Whence learn, 1. As nothing can give true contentment, except God:
lo God will have us to loose our heart from all creatures, and expect no contentment in any of them, but in himselfe; Whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is none on earth whom I de-sire besides thee. 2. He that seeth Gods sufficiency, seeth also the emptiness of the creatures, and nothing to be in them, but what they have of God. A Believer may see that he needeth nothing in heaven or earth, but communion with God, to make him fully blessed; Whom have I in heaven but thee, and there is none on earth that I desire besides thee. 3. As to finde all things to faile us, except God, in the time of trial, doth serve to loose our affections and confidence off them: so to finde help in God when all things do faile, serveth to tie the heart of a Believer strongly to the Lord; My heart and my flesh faileth me, but God is the strength of my heart. 4. When the Believer hath seen his own strength fail him, and yet not the least doth believe in God, he shall finde his failing heart and fainting courage upheld, and his own exhausted strength supplied with a greater strength from God: My heart and my flesh fail me, but God is the strength of my heart. 5. Every man seeketh something for his portion; some one thing in the creature, some another, but the believers portion is the Lord himselfe, and no leffe will content him: The Lord is the strength of my heart, and my portion. 6. This is the Believers' advantage above all that do seek their blessedness in the creatures; for his portion is the eternal God, and he is made an everlasting enjoyer of him: God is my portion for ever.

Ver. 27. For lo, they that are farre from thee, shall perish: thou haft destroyed all them that go a whoring from thee.

The fifth use, is his resolution to draw nearer unto God: the reasons of which resolution are two; one, because they perish, who do not draw near to God: ver. 27. The other is, great advantage is to be had by drawing near to him, ver. 28. Whence lea n, 1. The Lords childe doth profit by harshest exercises, and his tentations being resisted by faith, do leave him in better case then they did finde him: his knowledge of Gods ways, his faith, his love to God, and hatred of wicked courses are augmented, as in this Psalm LXXIII.

163

This example is to be seen. 2. They whose confidence and actions do run toward, and cleave unto the creature, do depart from God more and more; for here they are said to be farre from God: and they that depart from God, do draw near to eternal perdition: They that are farre from thee, shall perish. And howsoever this truth be not believed; yet it is as sure and certain, as if it were seen with our eyes; For to, they that are farre from thee, shall perish. 3. A chaste soul hath no choice, no love, to delight itself in contentedly, except God: no confidence to rest itself upon, but God. And howsoever do seek their delight and satisfaction in the creature, especially if they be members of the visible Church, in Covenant with God, they are adulterers: They go a whoring from God: and they shall not finde felicity in the creatures; but perdition no lesse certainly, then if it were already past: Thou hast destroyed all them that go a whoring from thee.

Ver. 28. But it is good for me to draw near to God: I have put my trust in the Lord God, that I may declare all thy works.

In this verse, he giveth the other reason of his adherence unto God, from the advantage he findeth by so doing, and closeth the Psalm with the sixth use of his experience, which is the fixing of his faith on God, that his experiences may be more and more frequent, and he may be a fitter instrument to glorify God. Whence learn, 1. The right use of the perishing of the wicked, is to be more holy, and to seek nearer communion with God, as our only blessedness, how many soever depart from him: They shall perish who are farre from thee, but it is good for me to draw near to God. 2. No man is so near in communion with God in this life, but there is a further degree to be aimed at, and possibly to be found; as there are degrees of departing from God, so also degrees of coming near unto him; and the better for us, the nearer we draw: It is good for me to draw near to God. 3. The use of all assaults against our faith, is more and more to fixe our faith and confidence on God; for this is the use the Psalmist doth make of the assault spoken of in this Psalm: I have put my trust in the Lord God. 4. None but a Believer can discern the Lords working, it is only faith that giveth a right construction unto all the Lords works, only faith makes men fit instruments to glorify God; I have put my trust in the Lord God, that I may declare all thy works. works. 5. As the Believer is the best observer of God's works, and fittest to set them forth before others; so he is the man of greatest experience; and he of all men is filled with most matter of God's praise: for the Lord never disappoints the believer, but makes him have new proofs of his wonderful wisdom, power, and goodness: so doth the Psalmist lay his reckoning: I have put my trust in the Lord God, that I may declare all thy works.

PSAL. LXXIV.
Maschil of Asaph.

Of this Psalm there are three parts. In the first the pitiful lamentation of the Church presented unto God, because of the destruction of Jerusalem, and burning of the Temple by the Chaldeans, to ver. 11. In the next is the strengthening of the faith and hope of God's people, that God would send a delivery, to ver. 18. In the third, there are many petitions for relief of his people, restitution of his own work, and suppression of his enemies, to the end of the Psalm.

Ver. 1. O God, why hast thou cast us off for ever? why doth thine anger smok against the sheep of thy pasture?

2. Remember thy congregation which thou hast purchased of old, the rod of thine inheritance which thou hast redeemed, this mount Sion, wherein thou hast dwelt.

In the first part of the Psalm there is a lamentation and prayer for relief in general; ver. 1, 2. Secondly, a complaint against the enemy, laying forth before God the desolation which the Chaldeans had made, especially in destroying the Temple, ver. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9. And thirdly, a prayer unto God for vengeance upon them for their paines, ver. 10, 11.

From the lamentation and prayer for relief in general; Learne, 1. In all judgements inflicted by whatsoever instruments, the Lords people must look first to God; and albeit wrath, and fear of
of utter wrath do stare them in the face, as hardly it can be otherwise, when God putteth hand in his own Temple, and taketh away all the tokens of his presence from among a people, and seemeth to cast them utterly off; yet must they make their address to God, how angry soever he seem to be; as here the Church under this sad judgement doth saying, O God, why hast thou cast us off? 2. In the point of casting off, and fear of casting off for ever, the Lord craveth no yielding or submission to the pressing thoughts thereof, but will allow us to call in question every appearance of any such purpose of God, and to debate that point with him, and not to endure utter casting off, yea and to say, Why hast thou cast us off for ever? whether it be our own particular case, or the case of the visible Church, ours and others with us, who cannot endure to be separate from God. 3. When the wrath of the Lord is kindled against his people, all that they do see, doth seem to be but the beginning of more wrath, as smoke is but the beginning of burning: Why dost thine anger smoke against thy sheep? 4. Albeit we by our sins have provoked the Lord to fall upon us, as his enemies; yet must we not quit the least relation, no not of the external Covenant, between God and us, but make use of it for supporting of our faith in him, as here; Why dost thine anger smoke against the sheep of thy pasture? that is, thy Church and people, the care of whom, thou hast taken, as a shepherd over his flock. 5. The Believers asking, Why? is no quarrelling; nor is any speech of the Saints unto God, a quarrelling, which endeth or resolveth in petition and supplication, as this doth wherein after their asking, Why? they turn themselves to supplication, and do pray, Remember thy congregation. 6. Let the Lord do to his people what he pleaseth, they must pray unto him, and make use of all the bonds between him and them, as here the Church doth, pleading, That they are by outward Covenant his church, consecrated unto him; Remember thy congregation. And 2. That they are his purchase by paying price, and conquest: Thy congregation which thou hast purchased. And 3. That they have been in his possession for a long time; Which thou hast purchased of old. And 4. That the Lord had taken them into manuring, as a piece of land measured out by line or rod, and his inheritance not to dispose, or put away: The rod of thine inheritance. And 5. That he had granted deliverances out of straits before; The inheritance which thou hast redeemed. And 6. That he had taken up house amongst them in his publick ordinances: This mount Sion where-in thou hast dwelt.
Ver. 3. Lift up thy feet unto the perpetual desolations: even all that the enemy hath done wickedly in the sanctuary.

4. Thine enemies roar in the midst of thy congregations: they set up their ensignes for signes.

5. A man was famous according as he had lifted up axes upon the thick trees.

6. But now they break down the carved work thereof at once with axes and hammers.

7. They have cast fire into thy sanctuary, they have defiled by casting down the dwelling place of thy Name to the ground.

8. They said in their hearts, Let us destroy them together: they have burnt up all the synagogues of God in the land.

9. We see not our signes, there is no more any prophet, neither is there among us any that knoweth how long.

In the complaint he desir eth the Lord to come and see, and to take order with the desolation made by the enemies in his land, and specially in the Temple, ver. 3. What insolent domi neering of them was over his people, yea over God himselfe, so farre as their lifted up banner against him could do, ver. 4. Each of them thinking it as great matter of commendation to them, to throw down the Temple, as ever it was for any man to build it, or prepare materials for it, ver. 5, 6. How they had burnt and demolished the Lords house, ver. 7. with a resolution to root out his people, according as they had burnt all their Synagogues in the land, ver. 8. And how there was no appearance of comfort or delivery from this calamity, ver. 9. Whence learn, 1. All the evils which the enemy doth unto Gods Church, proceed from the Lords desertion of, and departing from his people, who have provoked him to wrath; for this prayer, Lift up thy feet, or come and see, doth import his departure, and leaving his people naked without his protection. 2. Albeit the Lord doth seem to turn his back, & depart far away from his own people, when they do provoke him to anger, and to let their enemies do unto them, what they please; yet will he be entreated by his his people to come again, and see, and pity the defolation brought upon them, and punish the instruments of it; Lift up thy feet unto the perpetual defolations: that is, Lord, come speedily, and see what defolations thy enemies have made amongst us, and pity and relieve us by thy manifested presence. 3. Amongst all the calamities of Gods people, nothing doth afflict them so much, as the insolent profanation of the worship and Name of God amongst them; for here in the first petition, they lament the abusing of the Temple, Even all that the enemies have done wickedly in the Sanctuary; and then do insult most upon this. 4. When the wicked are free loose upon Gods people, they are most insolent, cruel and savage in their carriage toward them; Thy enemies roar in the midst of thy congregations. 5. It will not suffice the enemies of the Church to insult over Gods people, but they will insult over their way of religion, and over God whom they worship: They set up their ensignes for signes; they display their banner upon the ruins of the Temple, as signes of their victory over that religion which is professed there; and over Gods worship there. 6. When Gods people do abuse religion, and do mock God in their profession of worship, and do dishonour him by their carriage and conversation; it is justice with God to give over his people, and all the means of religion into the hands of his enemies, to be abused by them, rather then to suffer his own people to mock him continually, as in this example is to be seen. 7. It is a matter of a mans commendation, to contribute any way to the setting up of Gods worship and ordinances in a land; A man was famous according as he had lifted up axes upon the thick trees: that is, as he had cut down timber out of Lebanon wood, to build the Lords Temple withall. 8. When the Lord is provoked by his peoples evil carriage towards him, no wonder he let the work of edification or reformation of religion go as fast down amongst them, as ever it rose up, as the Church of the Jewes did feel by experience, when now the enemies did break down the carved work of the Temple at once, with axes and hammers, much more speedily then it was builded; They have cast fire into the Sanctuary, they have defiled by casting down the dwelling place of thy Name to the ground. This the Lord chused to permit, rather then to suffer his people still to mock religion, and still to abuse the Temple, and make it a shelter for them to trust in against all Gods threatnings, so long as it did stand. 9. Albeit the Lords minde he onely to correct his people, by letting them see their provocation in the judgements brought upon them: yet the enemies whom he useth as instruments in their correction, do minde their utter destruction, and the rooting of them out of the world: They said in their hearts, Let us destroy them. 10. When the enemies of religion cannot kill all the worshippers of God, yet will they labour to mar the means of their assembling for publick worship, so farre as they can: for after they have said, Let us destroy them together, it is subjoined, They have burnt up all the Synagogues of God in the land: that is, all the houses built for the weekly assembling of the people unto publick worship, in their several divisions, through the land. 11. Houses built for meeting of the Lords people to publick worship, albeit they be not typically holy, as the Temple of Jerusalem was; yet do they belong to God, as means dedicate for maintaining his service, and when they are marred, it is a wrong done to God, and a cause of complaint to God against the sacrilegious spoilers thereof, as here we see. 12. External troubles are much lighter, when the publick ordinances and signs of Gods presence in a land may be had for spiritual comfort; but when those are removed, every trouble is the more heavy: We see not our signs, there is no more any Prophet, ne ther any among us, that knoweth how long: that is, publick means, ordinary and extraordinary, which may give us comfort, do now cease. If it be asked, how can this be applied unto the time of the captivity, seeing Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Daniel, and the Prophet who did write this Psalm by inspiration, were living at the beginning of the captivity, and after the burning of the Temple? It may be answered, that Jeremiah was carried away to Egypt, and the people could not have use of his ministry; Ezekiel and Daniel were carried away to Babylon, and the poor which remained in the land had none of the Prophets to comfort them; yea Ezekiel and Daniel were but now and then employed of God to utter their prophecies, and the multitude of the captives, who were to make use of this Psalm, were scattered in sundry places; and could not have the benefit of their or of any others ministry, as they were wont to have; and this in speciall maketh the lamentation to have a ground, that the table was drawn from the children: the people had not that acclisse, which they enjoyed before: unto means either extraordinary or ordinary; they had not their former allowance; and howsoever in the copies of Jeremiah's prophecy, 70. yeares was determined for the peoples captivity, yet none of the Prophets at the time of writing this, told, or could tell them, how long time should passe before their desolation should be repaired; how long it should be Ver. 10. O God, how long shall the adversary reproach? Shall the enemy blaspheme thy Name for ever?

11. Why withdrawest thou thy hand, even thy right hand? pluck it out of thy bosom.

After the lamentation is subjoined an imprecation against the enemies, that God would not deferre to punish them. Whence learn, 1. Mens patience is much short of Gods long-suffering and forbearance; for here it is the speech of a suffering people: O God, how long shall the adversary reproach? when with God it is not yet time to fall upon them. 2. The Lords long-suffering patience doth greatly harden the adversaries in their inolent mocking of Gods people; for instead of saying, Lord, how long wilt thou bear with them? he faith, O God, how long shall the adversaries reproach? 3. The truly godly can endure their own troubles better then they can bear the open dishonouring and blaspheming of God, by occasion of their trouble: Therefore this expression, from the deepest sense of his heart, doth break forth, Shall the enemy blaspheme thy Name for ever? 4. Albeit temptations from carnal sense do represent God as if he were idle when he suffers his enemies to trample on his people, and on his glorious Name; yet faith will not admit of such a thought, but dealeth with God by prayer, to let his strength and power be so manifest, that the world may not think his hand is in his bosome; Why withdrawest thou thy hand, even thy right hand? pluck it out of thy bosome. This he believeth the Lord shall do, and giveth reasons for his hope, in that which followeth.

Ver. 12. For God is my King of old, working salvation in the midst of the earth.

13. Thou didst divide the sea by thy strength: thou brakest the heads of the Dragons in the waters.

14. Thou brakest the heads of Leviathan in pieces, and gavest him to be meat to the people inhabiting the wildernesse.

15. Thou didst cleave the fountain and the flood: thou driedst up mighty rivers.

16. The day is thine, the night also is thine: thou hast prepared the light and the sun.

17. Thou hast set all the borders of the earth, thou hast made summer and winter.

In the second part of the Psalme, the Psalmist doth confirm his own and other believers faith, that God would undoubtedly deliver his people, and take order with their enemies; First, from the interest they have in God, and God in them. Secondly, from the experience of sensible deliveries past of his people, ver. 12. Thirdly, from the great work of redemption of his people from Pharaohs tyranny, ver. 13, 14. Fourthly, from the Lords feeding his people in the wildernesse, ver. 15. Fifthly, from the Lords sovereignty, and disposing of all creatures in the world, ver. 16, 17. Whence learn, 1. Relations between God and his Church, and in special this, that he hath made himselfe King thereof, are pawns of Gods defending his Kingdom and injured subjects, and punishing of his enemies; for here the Church giveth it for a reason of their hope of delivery; God is my King. 2. The more time is past since God did avow himselfe King of his Church, the more confident may later generations of the Church be to finde new evidences of his royal actions for them, and against their enemies; God is my King of old. 3. New troubles must not make us forget old mercies, but rather call them to memory, to be made use of afresh as pledges that what he hath done before, he will do the like again; God is my King of old, working salvation in the earth: that is, such deliverances of his Church, as all the earth was witness of. 4. The delivery of Israel out of Egypt, and the destruction of the Egyptians, is a pawn unto the Church in every age after, that God will destroy their enemies how strong and terrible soever they be, and will deliver his Church: Thou didst divide the sea by thy strength, thou brakest the heads of the Dragons in the waters. 5. As all the enemies of the Church are no lesse cruel and savage against the Lords people, then unreasonable Sea-beasts, and Sea-monsters: so can he make their carcasses a prey to unreasonable beasts, as he made Pharaoh.
and his Captaines to become food to the beasts of the wilderness, when the Sea did cast up their carcases on the shore, like sea-wrack; Thou brakest the heads of Leviathan in pieces, and gavest him to be meat to the people inhabiting the wilderness.

6. The Lord will not fail to provide consolation to his Church in her necessity, though no probable means do appear, as he furnished his people drink from the flinty rock in the wilderness: Thou didst cleave the fountain.

7. The Lord can and will remove all difficulties and impediments out of the way of his people, which may hinder them from the possession of promises, as he did to Israel: Thou didst cleave the fountain and the flood, thou driedst up mighty rivers.

8. Faith is so thrifty, as not to let the works of creation, and common providence passe by, without use-making thereof: The day is thine, the night also is thine, &c.

9. As God hath appointed vicissitudes of day and night, light and darkness, summer and winter; so hath he no less resolvedly, wisely, and graciously appointed vicissitudes of dangers and deliverances, of grief and consolation to his people, for their good: The day is thine, the night also is thine: thou hast prepared the light and the Sun.

10. As the Lord hath set bounds to the sea, bounds and borders to every Kingdom, to summers heat, and to winters cold: so can he do, and so hath he done, and so will he do unto all the troubles of his owne, to all the rage, power, plots and purposes of their enemies: Thou hast set all the borders of the earth, thou hast made summer and winter,

Ver. 18. Remember this, that the enemy hath reproached, O Lord, and that the foolish people have blasphemed by Name.

19. O deliver not the soul of thy turtle-dove unto the multitude of the wicked: forget not the congregation of thy poor for ever.

20. Have respect unto the covenant: for the dark places of the earth are full of the habitations of cruelty.

21. O let not the oppressed return ashamed: let the poor and needy praise by Name.

22. Arise, O God, plead thine owne cause: remember how the foolish man reproacheth thee daily.

23. Forget
23. Forget not the voice of thine enemies: the tumult of those that rise up against thee, increaseth continually.

In the third part of the Psalm, he returneth to prayer, and redoubleth his requests for delivery to the Church, taking arguments; first, from the injuries done to God by the enemy, ver. 18. Secondly, from the danger and weakness of God's people, ver. 19. Thirdly, from covenanted help in time of need, ver. 20. Fourthly, from the Lords interest in his own quarrel against the growing insolency of his despightful enemies, ver. 22, 23. Whence learn, 1. Although sins, especially persecution of God's people, and blasphemy against God, be not presently punished, yet shall they not be forgiven: Remember this, that the enemy hath reproached, O Lord. 2. All sins, but in special blasphemy of God's Name, are aggravated by the naughtiness of the sinner, and excellency of God: The foolish people have blasphemed thy Name. 3. The Church of God, in comparison of her many and strong enemies, is like a solitary, weak, desolate turtle-dove, harmless, meek, lowly, patient in desolation, and eas'ing her griefs by sighing, and exposed to a multitude of ravenous birds; O deliver not the soul of thy turtle-dove. 4. How weak soever the Church be, and how many and strong enemies she be, yet cannot they all devour the Church, except the Lord should deliver his Church over into their hands, against which evill the Church hath ground of confidence to pray, O deliver not the soul of thy turtle-dove unto the multitude of the wicked; for he hath given his Church wings, and a hiding-place too, as the comparison importeth, if he please to give her the use thereof also. 5. The Church is the Lords hospital, where his poor ones are sustained upon his provision and furniture, and he will not neglect them; O forget not the congregation of thy poor for ever. 6. Albeit the Lords people delerue to be secluded many times from the Covenant of grace, yet the Lord will never depraze them from their right unto it, when they in their need draw near to him, and plead for the benefit of it: Have respect, (faith he) to the Covenant. 7. Such places as want the light of the Lords presence in his Ordinances, are but dark and uncomfortable places, where there is no leffe hazard for the people of God to remaine, then for sheep to be in the midst of the dennes of cruel lions and ravenous beasts: And when it pleaseth God to cast his people by captivity or exile in such places, there is much need to make use of God's Covenant for preservation: Have respect unto the Covenant; for the dark places of the earth are full of the habitations of cruelty. 8. The emptied suppliant coming to God, especially when over-loaden with troubles, shall finde comfort, and shall not bee disappointed of his hope; O let not the oppressed return ashamed. 9. The sense of need and emptinesse, is the best disposition for prayer, and best preparation for praises also: and such as are poore in their prayers, shall be rich in their praises; Let the poor and needy praise thy Name. 10. The Churches cause is the Lords cause; for the wicked do not maligne the godly for their sinnes, but for righteousness, and so the quarrel is the Lords, which he will and must maintain, though he seem to sit still a while: Arise, O Lord, plead thine own cause. 11. The Lords enemies are all foolish men; for they beat out their braines upon the Churches bulwark; because the Lord forbeareth for a time, they go on to blaspheme him daily to his face, but shall finde at length that God hath all their reproaches upon record: Remember how the foolish may reprocheth thee daily. 12. Every sinne, and in special enmity against God and his Church is fearful; but open gloriation therein is worse, which God will take knowledge of, and punish: for so much is imported in this prayer, forget not the voice of thine enemies. 13. Sinne, and in special persecution gloried in, doth grow daily more and more; and the growing of sinne, and in special of persecution, doth hasten the delivery of the godly, and the destruction of the enemies: The tumult of those that arise against thee, increaseth continually.
To the chief Musician Al-taschith. A Psalm or Song of Asaph.

His Psalm doth well agree with the time of David's entry into the Kingdom after Saul's death, before he was established King over all the tribes, wherein he with the Church: First, doth thank God for bringing him wonderfully to a begun possession of a part of the Kingdom, ver. 1. Secondly, he promiseth, that when the Lord shall give him the rest of the Kingdom in possession, to employ his power for righteous governing and setting of it, after it shall be put once in a right frame, ver. 2, 3. Thirdly, he begins to triumph over the wicked that followed Saul, bringing to their mind the advertisement he had given them, not to be proud in their places, ver. 4, 5. partly, because God had the disposing of preferments in his own hand, ver. 6, 7 and partly, because albeit God gave to all his own children a taste of troubles, as he saw fit, yet the dregs of wrath were reserved for the wicked, ver. 8. Fourthly, he promiseth to praise God continually, for casting down the wicked, and exalting of the godly, ver. 9, 10.

Ver. 1. V

unto thee, O God, do we give thanks; unto thee do we give thanks; for that thy Name is near, thy wonderous works declare.

From his thanksgiving; Learne, 1. The Church of God should take out of his hand every beginning of mercies and deliverances with affectionate and frequent thanksgiving: Unto thee, O Lord, do we give thanks, unto thee do we give thanks. 2. As the Lord is described in his Word, so will he be found in his works, to wit, near at hand, and ready to help his people as they stand in need; We do give thanks, because thy Name is near; for this is the neerness of God's Name, when his powerful, gracious felt presence is answerable to what is said of him in his Word. 3. Whencever the Lord doth shew himself for his Churches
Ver. 2. When I shall receive the congregation, I will judge uprightly.

3. The earth, and all the inhabitants thereof are dissolved; I bear up the pillars of it. Selah.

From David's undertaking to govern the Kingdom well, when it came all in his power; Learne, 1. Possession in part of promises made to us, doth give good hope to have the whole of what is promised in possession also; for, When I shall receive the congregation, presupposeth his certain hope and expectation to have it. 2. He that is advanced to a civil Kingdom, consisting of people in Covenant with God, he hath gotten charge to nourish the Church, and to procure whatsoever a King civilly can procure to a Church, that his subjects may be all of them God's Church; therefore David saith not, When I receive the Kingdom, but when I receive the Congregation, or the Church. 3. Fore sight of a charge, whereunto a man is likely to be called, should make him prepare himself, and resolve beforehand for doing the duties of that calling, as David did before he was possessed in the Kingdom; When I shall receive the congregation, I shall judge uprightly. 4. When a land is defective of godly and gracious Governours, the whole country is left loose, both in the matter of Religion, and of civil Justice, as was seen in Saul's time before David was seated; The earth and all the inhabitants thereof are dissolved. 5. Kingdomes and Common-wealths have their pillars whereupon they should stand, to wit, religious and righteous government; for, I will judge uprightly, in the second verse, is as good as, I will bear up the pillars thereof, in the third verse. 6. Those that mind the reformation of a land, should be sensible of the desolation of it, and have not only will, but also skill and place of power to set matters in a right frame, as here the Psalmist, after saying, The land and all the inhabitants thereof are dissolved, addeth, I bear up; or shall bear up the pillars of it. And here, whatsoever David speaketh or could say, was but a shadow of what is to be found in Christ, of whom he is a type: For the Kingdom and Countrey is ill guided, where Christ doth not reign; but when people do subject themselves to him, he sets the Kingdom or Countrey upon true pillars, and sustainteth all by his power.

Ver. 4. I said unto the fools, Deal not foolishly: and to the wicked, Lift not up the borne.

5. Lift not up your borne on high: speak not with a stiffe neck.

In the third place, he calleth to minde his own prophecy of the change of affairs, and advertisement given by him before to his adversaries, not to behave themselves so insolently as they did. Wherefore learn, 1. Even in time of trouble, the godly, by the light of Gods Word, may be enabled to foresee and prophesie of the overturning of the wicked from the top of their preferment; I said unto the fools, Deal not so foolishly, faith the Psalmist. 2. When the prophesie uttered according to Gods Word, is like to take affect, it is no small comfort for believers to call to remembrance acts of their believing before-hand, what they do see in their own time; I said to the foolish,Deal not so foolishly, is a sort of triumph over his enemies here. 3. Such as are acquainted with true wisdom, do justly account all wicked men to be fools, forakers of Gods teaching, and followers of their owne wit and will, to the ruine of their own bodies, soules, houses and fame; I said unto the fools. 4 The fruit of a wicked mans prosperity is pride, vain-glory, audacious boasting against the godly, wherein they grow more and more insolent against all warnings of Gods Word, as this reproof importeth; Deal not foolishly, Lift not up the horn: Lift it not on high, speak not with a stiffe neck.

Ver. 6. For promotion cometh neither from the East, nor from the West, nor from the South.

7. But God is the Judge, he putteth down one, and setteth up another.

From the first reason of his admonition unto the wicked; Learne, 1. As the cause of mens pride in a wicked course, is the forgetting of God, and of his government in the world on the one one hand, and a strong conceit of their own ability, to compass their designs by their own wit, power and industry on the other hand: so the way of wisdom to remedy the evil, is to consider that God doth govern the world, and that men are nothing but what he pleaseth to make of them; Promotion cometh neither from the East, nor from the West, nor from the South: that is, howsoever, or from whencesoever preferment to places of power in the world seemeth to come, yet the disposing of places is from a higher hand. 2. Places of power and preferment are disposed of only by the wise and righteous pleasure, and determination of the supreme Ruler of the world; But God is Judge. He opposeth God the Judge his determination unto all the appearances from second causes. 3. As God hath a mind for the glory of his grace, to try, or to correct, or to comfort and employ some men in his service, so he putteth them down, or setteth them up, and as he hath a mind to have the glory of his justice on other some, so he setteth them up, or putteth them down; God is Judge, he putteth down one, and setteth up another.

Ver. 8. For in the hand of the Lord there is a cup, and the wine is red: it is full of mixture, and he poureth out of the same: but the dregs thereof all the wicked of the earth shall wring them out, and drink them.

From the second reason of the admonition given to the wicked; Learn, 1. As the Lord doth wisely distribute his benefits and temporal comforts among men, to testify his goodness to his creatures: so also afflictions and calamities are measured out by him unto men, to testify his justice and indignation against sin; For in the hand of the Lord is a Cup; that is, a measure of affliction proportioned unto them, for whom it is prepared. 2. This measure of affliction ordained for each man, is prepared for the time appointed, like drink, ready for the mouth of him to whose head the cup shall be put; it is a cup with wine in it, in God's hand, ready to be set to any man's head he pleaseth. 3. The affliction is like strong wine, quickly piercing through all the man's veins who drinketh it, and cleaving fast unto him; The wine is red. 4. The Lord hath as it were both hot and cooling waters, whereby he doth mitigate the Cup of calamities to some, and increaseth the sense of his fiery indignation.
178  PSAL. LXXV.

tion unto others; It is full of mixture: or it is perfectly mixed, as the cale requir eth. 5. What is each man's measure of calamities, how mixed when it is executed, all is in God's dispensation; He pouereth forth of the same into the mouth and belly of every person, as he pleaseth. 6. The calamities of the wicked do follow oft-times after that the godly have drunk the first draughts of the Lords Cup; It is toward the bottom and dregs when the wicked drink; the hottest wrath, and heaviest indignation is reserved for them, and none of them shall escape, how long soever their judgement shall be delayed; But the dregs thereof all the wicked of the earth shall drink 7. The wicked shall be no lesse accedory to the drawing on of their own calamities, then he that wringeth the dregs, to draw out more liquor for himself to drink; is accedory to his own drunkenness and damage; The dregs thereof all the wicked of the earth shall wring them out, and drink them; their vanity, pride, greediness, lust, ambition, envy, and pleasant courses of sinning, wherein they delight themselves, while they are drinking in iniquity as an ox doth water, shall be their destruction, as in the point of merit, so also in the point of means of their own overthrow.

Ver. 9. But I will declare for ever, I will sing praises to the God of Jacob.

10. All the bornes of the wicked also will I cut off, but the bornes of the righteous shall be exalted.

In the last place, he promiseth to make this holy and wise dispensation of justice upon the wicked, and mercy toward the godly, the matter of his song in God's praise. Whence learn, 1. However matters seem to go, how deep soever the godly drink of the cup of calamities, yet the believers in God shall ever have matter of joy in God, and praising of him: But I will declare for ever, (faith the Psalmist) I will sing praises to the God of Jacob; yea sanctified affliction shall be a part of their joy, and their praising of God. 2. It doth delight the godly to be in the same Covenant, and of the same faith with those that are commended by God in the Scripture; I will sing prai ses, (faith he) to the God of Jacob. 3. As a sincere heart doth resolve, never to weary in God's service, so may it be assured never to want matter of great joy in God's service; for after he hath hath said; I will declare for ever: then he addeth, I will sing praises to the God of Jacob. 4. It is the Magistrates part, as they have authority in their supreme or subordinate places, to cut short the power of wicked men; All the horns of the wicked also will I cut off, saith David; which promise he did not cease to execute, by turning every man indifferently, whom he did not judge to be regenerate, out of his place; but by taking course how every man, whom he found in place, should be bound to apply his power for the good of Religion and Justice; as the history of Scripture doth shew; and by this means especially did David reform the Church of Israel; and this was the way of his true policy, to cut off all the horns of the wicked; not to kill, or banish, or forfeit, or put from all place of power and trust, all those leading men, who did oppose and maligne him under King Saul; but by causing them all to concurre with him to set up true Religion, and bring up the Ark to Mount Sion, and to administer justice unto the subjects in their several places. Thus by binding all men to Religion and Justice, and ordaining that wickedness should have no horn or power for it, but all bound to be against it; He cut off all the horns of the wicked; And because the civil Magistrate or Ecclesiastical Governours are able to do in their Courts externally not so much as were need, the real effecting of what here is undertaken by David belongeth to the Antitype Christ; for he only can say, and make his words good; All the horns of the wicked will I cut off. 5. The godly shall be victorious over all their wicked opposers, and righteousness shall bear them better out, and shall purchase more help and power unto them, then any course the wicked do take to have their power established against them; The horns of the righteous shall be exalted.

PSAL. LXXVI.

To the chief Musician on Neginoth; A Psalm or Song of Asaph.

This is a Psalm of praise, given forth upon occasion of some great deliverance of the Church, such as was that when Sennacherib's hoste was destroyed, or some other like overthrow given to the enemy.
The summe of the Psalm is this, the Lord is glorious in his Church, and greatly to be praised by his people, let down, ver. 1, 2. The reasons given for this are six; the first, ver. 3. the second, ver. 4. the third, ver. 5, 6. the fourth, ver. 7. the fifth, ver. 8, 9. the sixth, ver. 10. the use whereof, with a reason for it, is let down, ver. 11, 12.

From the Inscription; Learn, 1. The visible Church hath need to be stirred up to the work of thanksgiving unto, and praising of God, no lesse then to any other duty; for this duty is no lesse needful, no lesse spiritual, no lesse difficult and disagreeing with our carnal and corrupt natural inclination, then any other duty, and usally is more neglected and more slighted then any point of worship, although frequent occasion and cause be given unto it; therefore it is oftest called for of any. If we compare this title with others, this is a Song, a Psalm, taught to the Church, to stir her up to the praising of God. 2. God had more Psalmists, more sweet Singers in Israel then one; Davids name is not prefixed here, and the matter is most suitable to a latter time then his. 3. We are not to be curious about the Penmen of Canonick Scripture. The first Author is he, to whom we must look most and rest upon him: For concerning all the Hebrew Bible, we are taught by Christ and his Apostles that it was all given by inspiration, and that the holy Writers spoke as they were moved by the holy Spirit; for here it is not certain whether Asaph was the name of the Writer of it, or whether Asaph be the name of the order of such of Aarons posterity, as were Predecessors unto the Church; and had the charge of the Musick, to whom this Psalm was committed for the Churches use, as many more Psalms in Davids time, and after it also were; A Psalm or Song of Asaph or to Asaph: the words may beare both alike.

Ver. 1. In Judah God is known: his Name is great in Israel.

2. In Salem also is his Tabernacle: and his dwelling place in Sion.

From the summe and scope of the Psalm set down here; Learn, 1. Albeit God be in some sort known in all the world, because of the works of Creation, manifesting some way the invisible visible excellencies of God, yet is he most of all made manifest to his visible Church, where his Word doth abound, and his Works are best interpreted; In Judah God is known. Where the knowledge of God's Name is most revealed, there should he of duty be most glorified: for albeit Israel many times did not understand, did not acknowledge him, but were more ignorant and neglective of him, then the one or other were of their Owners and Masters' crib, yet daily among them he manifested his great majesty, and sometime he made them all acknowledge it, and of duty always they should have magnified his majesty, and so his Name is great in Israel. The Lord doth provide always a place, where his Church may visibly profess his Name, and worship him: he will not want a place, where he hath a people in Covenant-bond unto him; In Salem is his Tabernacle. It is a great glory to the place where God is worshipped, for there also doth he make his residence: In Salem also, or Jerusalem is his Tabernacle, and his dwelling place in Sion. 5. It is not for the worthinesse of any people or place, that the Lord is among them, or manifested there; but it is his own free choice, among whom and where he will reside. The place where the vile Canaanite had been, and the place longest possessed and abused by the Canaanite, will he choose for his chief dwelling; he will turn the Canaanites Salem to be Jerusalem: and the strong hold of the Jebusites to be the place of his Temple; therefore, faith he, In Salem, (rather then Jerusalem) is his Tabernacle, and his dwelling place in Sion.

Ver. 3. There brake he the arrows of the bowe, the shield, and the sword, and the battel. Selah.

The first reason of God's praise is taken from the Lord's fighting at Jerusalem against the enemies of the Church, and discomfiting of them. Whence learn, 1. The greatest overthrow given to armies, will be found in their fighting against Gods Church: There (in special manner) brake he the arrows of the bowe, &c. 2. In the deliverance of the Church the Lord will be seen to do all the work; There brake he the arrows. 3. As there is no means or instrument fit to destroy men which the enemy will not make use of against the Church, so there is no weapon formed against her which shall prosper, when the doth relieve on her Lord: There brake he the arrows of the bowe, the shield, and the sword, and the battel.
The second reason of God's praise is, because he is more glorious than all the Kings and Kingdomes of the world, wherein the cruel and beastly raging enemies of his Church have their strength and strong holds. Whence learn, 1. Those Kingdomes and Powers which do not subject themselves to God or Christ the King of Saints, are to be esteemed as mountains where wild and ravenous beasts do lie, every one of them according as they are more mighty, oppressing the weaker; for they are called here, Mountains of prey or Powers maintaining all oppression, as mountains give shelter to ravenous beasts which live upon prey. 2. Whateuer excellency is to be found in the Kingdomes of the world, wherein men do glory, as wisdom, riches, strength, multitude, courage, or what else can be imagined, is all nothing to the matter of gloriation, which the Church hath in God; Thou (faith the Psalmist unto God) art more glorious then the mountains of prey.

Ver. 4. Thou art more glorious and excellent then the mountains of prey.

The stout-hearted are spoild, they have slept their sleep, and none of the men of might have found their hands.

6. At thy rebuke, O God of Jacob, both the chariot and horse are cast into a dead sleep.

The third reason of God's praise is, because he did evacuate, and make of no use unto the enemy, whatsoever they did put their confidence in. Whence learn, 1. Whateuer strength, courage, wit, or any other point of perfection any man hath, God who gave it, can take it away when he pleaseth; yea, can make it a means of hardening his heart in carnal confidence, to engage him in a business for a mischief to him, that he may lose all whereunto he leaned; The stout-hearted are spoild, they have slept their sleep, and none of the men of might have found their hands; that is, God hath made the courageous and strong to be found feeble and weak, and unable to have their own goods or lives. 2. Albeit the Church hath no strength in her self, yet the Lord can with a word of his mouth do all her work, and defeat her enemie; At thy rebuke, O God of Jacob, they are cast in a deep sleep. 3. The more powerful, wiser, and stout the enemies of God's Church be, the more should the Church rely upon God, and the more glory doth the Lord get in overthrowing them; Therefore the stout-hearted men of might, chariots and horses are here mentioned.

Ver. 7. Thou, even thou art to be feared; and who may stand in thy sight when once thou art angry?

The fourth reason of God's praise is, because he is so terrible that none can stand before him when he is angry. Whence learn, 1. When the Lord doth smite the wicked, he doth warn his own people to stand in awe; therefore doth the Church make use of what is set down before; Thou, even thou art to be feared.

2. Only God is to be feared left we offend him, and no man's anger is to be feared in comparison of provoking God to anger; Thou, even thou art to be feared; and no regard unto, nor mention of any other to be feared in comparison of him. 3. Man against man may stand, and wicked men in the time of God's patience may stand: but when the time cometh of God's judging and letting forth his wrath upon his enemies, none can escape his hand; Who may stand in thy sight, when once thou art angry? 4. The terror of the Lord against his foes, is the comfort of his people, and the matter, as of his praise, so of their singing and rejoicing, as here is to be seen.

Ver. 8. Thou didst cause judgement to be heard from heaven: the earth feared and was still, 9. When God arose to judgement, to save all the meek of the earth. Selah.

The fifth reason of God's praise is, from the experience of fearful judgements on God's enemies, when he was about to deliver his people from their oppression. Whence learn, 1. Late mercies and deliverances given to the Church, should renew the thankful memory of old deliveries, as here is done. 2. When ordinary meanes and advertisements do not make the Persecutors of the Church to cease, God hath extraordinary judgements from heaven, whereby he will speak unto his adversaries.
didst cause judgements to be heard from heaven. 3. If by one sort of more milde advertisement or rebuke men cannot be brought in order; by another, and more terrible rebuke they shall be made quiet: Thou didst cause judgement to be heard from heaven; the earth feared and was still. 4. The property of the Lords people is to be so acquainted with afflictions, and so sensible of their own sinfulness, that they do not impatiently fret at Gods dispensation, even when they are oppressed by men; but do study submission unto God, and commit their cause to him; therefore are they called The meek of the earth. 5. When the Lords meek ones are in danger to be swallowed up, and destroyed by their oppressors, the Lord, who is the sovereign Judge to decide controversies, and to determine who is in the wrong, albeit he be silent for a while, yet will arise in due time, and speak from heaven by judgements, to the terrifying and silencing of proud oppressors; The earth feared and was still, when God arose to judgement to save all the meek of the earth. 6. When the Lord ariseth to save the meek in one place, and of one generation, it is an evidence and earnest, that he shall arise to save at length all and every one of the meek in every place, in all times after; for his arising for his people, which was now past, is said here to be for to save all the meek of the earth.

Ver. 10. Surely the wrath of man shall praise thee, the remainder of wrath shalt thou restrain.

The sixth reason of Gods praise is; that he shall make the malice of the adversaries of his people to contribute to his glory. Whence learn; 1. Albeit the rage and cruelty of men against the Lords meek ones, may seem for the present to obscure Gods glory, and to tend to his dishonour; yet when he hath humbled, tried, purified his own, and done his work in Mount Sion, all the rage of persecutors shall turn to Gods glory undoubtedly; Surely the wrath of man shall praise thee. 2. When God hath glorified himself in the purging of his Saints, and punishing their persecutors, yet the enmity of the wicked world against Gods people will not cease, there will be still, as here is presupposed, a remainder of wrath. 3. Let the wrath of the wicked against the godly be never so great, inveterate, lasting and unquenchable, yet it shall vent itself only as the Lord sees fittting; he shall moderate the out-lenting of it, as he seeth expedient for his peoples good; it shall not break out to the destru-
Ver. 11. Vow and pay unto the LORD your God, let all that be round about him bring presents unto him that ought to be feared.

12. He shall cut off the spirit of Princes: he is terrible to the Kings of the earth.

The use of the former doctrine is, to teach God's people to give unto God that respect and praise which is due to him from them; and to exhort all Nations without the compass of the visible Church to submit themselves unto him, lest he cut off fearfully the chiefest of them. Whence learn, 1. The use of the Lords deliverances of his Church, which the people of God should make, is to call on God in their troubles, engage themselves to glorifie him in word and deed for his mercies, and to entertain the conscience of their obligation; Vow and pay unto the Lord. 2. It is not enough to discharge a promised duty to God in outward formality, as the Philistines made their offering to the Ark of God, but the godly must do what service they do to God, as to their God, reconciled unto them, and in Covenant with them; Vow and pay unto the Lord your God. 3. The Lord is to be feared and honoured of all that are near to him in Covenant or Profession, yea or in vicinity of place unto his people and Church, where the Lord manifesteth himself in his ordinances; Let all that be round about him, bring presents unto him that ought to be feared. 4. How terrible forever the power of Princes and great men seem unto the Lords people, when they engage themselves and their subjects against the Church; yea ere they bring forth the ripe grapes of their designs and plots against God's people, God can and will cut off their wisdom, courage and life, as easily as the branches of a Vine-tree; He shall cut off the spirit of Princes. 5. There is greater cause why Princes should be afraid of God, then why God's people should be afraid of Princes: Princes cannot do so much to any one of God's people, as God can do to the highest Princes on earth: God can make their fall great according to the height of their place; he can root them out and their posterity, not only from all place of power, but also from all being on the earth; he can make them a terror to themselves; he he can destroy them soul and body; yea, he useth to do this to his adversaries: He is terrible to the Kings of the earth.

PSAL. LXXVII.

To the chief Musician, to Jeduthun. A Psalm of Asaph.

This Psalm doth express the deep exercise of the Psalmist troubled with the sense of God's displeasure, and how he wrestled under this condition, and had deliverance from it, which is summarily propounded, ver. 1. and made plain more particularly in the rest of the Psalm; for first, he setteth down his trouble of minde, ver. 2, 3, 4. Secondly, his wrestling with the sense of felt wrath, ver. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9. Thirdly, his begun victory by faith, ver. 10, 11, 12. Fourthly, the settling of his minde by consideration of God's manner of dealing with his Church of old, to the end of the Psalm.

Ver. 1. I cried unto God with my voice: even unto God with my voice, and he gave ear unto me.

In this summary Proposition of his sad exercise of spirit, and of his delivery out of that condition; Learn, That as there are many troubles whereunto God's children are subject (whereof this is one of the most heavic, to be under the sense of the wrath of God, and fear of final cutting off:) so God hath set down examples of this exercise in some of his dear children, for preparation of those who have not yet been acquainted with the like, and to teach patience, and furnish consolation to those who are under such exercises; for here is one of the Saints telling us, 1. That his own trouble in this kinde was so preffing, as it made him cry. 2. And shewing the course he took; He cried to God, and did put the whole powers of soul and body to a besefal, in his seeking of God; I cried to God with my voice. And, 3. That he saw there was no remedy for this evil, save God above, to whom he made his addressse with resolution to hold unto God only; Even unto God with my voice I cried. And, 4. That at length he did prevale and receive his request, graciously granted unto him; And he gave ear to me: and so he was relieved.
Ver. 2. In the day of my trouble I sought the Lord; my sore ran in the night, and ceased not: my soul refused to be comforted.

3. I remembered God, and was troubled: I complained, and my spirit was overwhelmed. Selah.

4. Thou holdest mine eyes waking: I am so troubled that I cannot speak.

He declareth this his sad exercise more specially; and first, how great his trouble was. Whence learn, 1. The fearing and feeling of the sense of God's wrath and displeasure, is of all troubles the chief, and doth challenge to it self most deservingly the name of trouble, or straitening affliction, as if the Psalmist had never known any trouble in comparison of this. 2. Although the sense of God's wrath and displeasure while it doth last, doth seem a sort of eternity, as, Shall I never be remembered? and such like expressions do declare; yet when the trouble is gone, it is counted but a short time, but a day; In the day of my trouble, faith he, now being relieved. 3. As in this trouble most of any God's face or comfortable presence is withdrawn; so nothing in this case can content a godly soul, till he finde the Lord reconciled, and his gracious face to shine again toward him; In the day of my trouble I sought the Lord. The wicked in such a case they will either not seek God at all, but some earthly comfort; or but take an essay what they can have by calling on God, they will not make it their work to seek him. 4. The sense of wrath giveth a sore wound unto a man's spirit, like to a wound in the body, which is like to bleed unto death; My sore ran in the night. 5. Trouble of conscience, as it is like a deadly wound; so is it also like a filthy boile, venting rotten issue; for many are the sins which the conscience doth cast up in this case, which do cause pain and loathing to look upon: My sore, or my plague, my stroke by a hand, ran in the night. 6. There is no healing of this wound, no easing of this sore, no cleansing of the conscience, no quieting of a man's spirit, till God whom the soul seeketh, shew himself Physician; the evil continuest still and growtheth; My sore ran in the night and ceased not. 7. Where misery seemeth remediless, there the sad soul fitteth it selze to endless sorrow: and as it is hopelesse of relief, so it is heartlesse to seek comfort, yea what earthly comforts are offered for the reliefe of a spiritual wound, are but a burden to a broken spirit; My soule refused to be comforted. Nothing can satisfy a soule which is sensible of God's displeasure, save the sense of God's favour. 8. A troubled spirit hath many thoughts; for it runs out in meditation, calleth for the records of the memory, but can finde nothing to fixe upon, save God himselfe; I remembered God. 9. It is possible that the matter of most comfort at some time may give no ease; the sweet promises of grace, when a soule is not able to apply them, yea the thought of God himselfe, and his goodnesse, may augment grief, when the conscience doth present his abused favours, as the cause of God's present felt wrath: I remembered God, and was troubled. 10. Lamentation and complaints, when vented and not eased with following comfort, do but double the grief; I complained, and my spirit was overwhelmed. 11. Redoubled thoughts of a perplexed soule, do cast it over in a confusion, and a sort of wound; I complained, and my spirit was overwhelmed. 12. A wounded spirit is able to bereave a man of the nights rest, and affect the body with a share of its miserable condition; Thou boldest mine eyes waking. 13. When a soul could possibly desire to ease its grief with a little forgetting of it, and seek a sleep when the body is now weary; it may fall out, that even thus much ease, may be refused to a Saint for a time, which must be looked on as God's hand, for the further exercise of the Lords sick childes; Thou boldest mine eyes waking. 14. Trouble not lenified, nor mitigated, groweth to such a height, as it stops the use of natural powers: I am so troubled that I cannot speak. The sorrowes of a soul sensible of God's wrath, are unspeakable, neither can the tongue utter them, nor the mind endite to the tongue, what it feeleth.

Ver. 5. I have considered the dayes of old, the peers of ancient times.

6. I call to remembrance my song in the night: I commune with mine own heart, and my spirit made diligent search.

7. Will the Lord cast off for ever? and will he be favourable no more?

8. Is his mercy clean gone for ever? and doth his promise fail for evermore?
9. Hath God forgotten to be gracious, hath he in anger shut up his tender mercies? Selah.

In the second place, he setteth down his wrestling, and how after he was overwhelmed, he fell again about the using of all means to be relieved, considering the Lords work of old with others his children, and his own experience, and what could be the cause of the change, ver. 6. and how the Lords unchangeable-nesse in his loving kindnessse towards his own, might help him, ver. 7, 8, 9. Whence learn, 1. Were our case never to despe-rate, yet must we not give over, but gather strength after swooning, and use all means of relief, as the Psalmit here doth. 2. It is one chief means of comforting a troubled sinner, and of strengthening the faith of a weak w提示er, to cast an eye upon the Lords manner of dealing with his Saints, mentioned in Scripture, as the Psalmit did, who had the books of Moses and Job, at least to make use of; I have considered the days of old, and the years of ancient times. 5. It is also a good means for gathering strength and comfort for a soul under the sense of wrath, to call to minde his own experiences of deliveries and consolations received after trouble, and his own observations made upon his own experiences: I call to remembrance my song in the night. 4. It is a third holy means for deliverance from the straits of a troubled conscience, to search our ways, and to seek out diligently, what cause in us we can finde, which might procure such a desertion and sense of wrath, as we do lie under; I communed with my own heart, and my spirit made diligent search. 5. Albeit it be possible when all the former means are used, and diligent search is made by our conscience, what may be the reason of our hard exercise, that for all that, we finde no consolations, no ease, nor event; yet the use of these means will witness for our wise and upright dealing, and be evidences of our endeavoure and diligence in duties, as here we see the Prophet to make mention of his diligence for this end. 6. Albeit it be no strange thing for a a wounded spirit to have suggestions cast in for overthrow of faith, yet to have sense of wrath speaking no lesse then what the tentation unto desperation doth allledge; yet the nature of faith is such, that it cannot yield, but must fight against the tentation, as a thing which cannot be true, cannot be admitted, as this disputation of the Psalmit doth give evidence; Will the Lord cast off for ever? and will he be favourable no more? 7. The Lord may seem so cast a man off, and to stop the course of his wonted favour toward him; but this exercise is only for a time: It is not possible that God should cast off for ever the soul that cannot endure to be thrust from him: It is not possible that God should not be favourable to such as have had experience of his favour, and do long to have new proofs thereof: Will the Lord cast off for ever? will he be favourable no more? Which question, Will he do so and so? is thus much in effect, as if he had said, it is not possible that the Lord should do so, albeit it seem he will do so. 8. When the conscience of sin doth make objection against faith, then faith makes its defence in God's mercy, and the constancy of the course of mercy, where grace is begun to run, yea faith will not yield to a contrary thought: Is his mercy clean gone for ever. 9. The troubled conscience hungering after the sense of mercy, hath not only God's merciful nature, and God's constancy in his good will, but also his promises to lean unto, for supporting of it selfe. Therefore after mention made of God's favour and mercy, he mentioneth here his promise also. 10. It is possible, that for a time no promise doth occur to a wounded spirit, which is fit for its present condition; or at least, no promise, which it dare or is able to apply, yea it is possible that the conditional frame of the promises being made to such as are so and so qualified, may seem to pertain nothing to the troubled conscience; yet faith will not quit its interest in the pro-promise, but will expect good according to the promise at last; Doth his promise fail for evermore? 11. As it is the Lord's nature to be gracious to such as come to him in the sense of their unworthinesse; so faith layeth hold on him, as gracious, and will never, admit a suggestion of any change in him, whatsoever seem to be in his dispensation; Hath God forgotten to be gracious? this is to faith an absurdity and impossibility. 12. The compassions of God toward the miserable when they come before him, are like a running fountain, that cannot restrain itself, yet may it seem to be shut up, and wrath and displeasure to run in the place thereof, when God is pleased to exercise his childe with the sense of wrath against sin; but faith will not admit this seeming for a certainty: Hath he in anger shut up his tender mercies? This is a saying which a Believer must abhorre to give way unto, and yet may be assaulted with, and brangled, and weakened by the tentation of it.

Ver. 10. And I said, This is mine infirmity: but I will remember the yeers of the right band of the most High.

11.
11. I will remember the works of the Lord: surely I will remember thy wonders of old.

12. I will meditate also of all thy works, and talk of thy doings.

In the third place is set down the begun victory of faith, where-in the believer checketh himselfe for hearkening so much unto sense, for admitting the suggestions of disbelief to come unto a disputation, and relieveth to make use of the grounds of faith, and of his former comfortable experiences, ver. 10. and of the wonderful dealing of God with others his Saints before, ver. 11. and to settle his faith on Gods Word, confirmed by his works, and to set himselfe to give glory unto God, ver. 12. Whence learn,

1. In the inward exercise of Gods children, after a while darkness, cometh light; after grief, comfort; and after wrestling, cometh victory, as here we see. 2. The trouble and disquietness which cometh from fear of utter rejection from God, is from the root of natural unbelief, and in lack of the strength of faith; This is my infirmity, faith he, as being now assured, that matters were not as they seemed to him, concerning Gods merciful affection to him. 3. Weakness of faith, and fear of utter wrath, is a sickness whereunto Gods children are subject; but a sickness whereof they will certainly recover: a sickness not unto death: This is my infirmity. 4. Our event from inward trouble, and our victory over it, doth begin at a right sight of our own weakness, of our own faults, and of a right judging of ourselves for them: And I said, This is my infirmity. 5. The remembrance of the experience of former changes, which we have found wrought by Gods great power, doth serve to make us both patient under a sad condition, and hopeful to come out of it: I will remember the years of the right hand of God. 6. Albeit we do not see how our comfort delivery and event, from trouble shall come, yet may we finde solid ground to expect that it shall come, if we consider aright Gods sovereignty over all creatures, that he is most High, and the omnipotency of his right hand; and his continuance, being the eternal, unchangeable one, and the same from year to year, from age to age; I will remember the years of the right hand of the most High; From this ground he doth expect, that he shall have experience yet again of the omnipotency of a Sovereign and constant God, working for his consolation. 7. When faith beginneth to recover after its infirmity or sickness, fickleness, it will make use of memory, meditation, judgement, and speech, which were all bound up before; I will remember, meditate, and talk. 8. We must not think to come out of perplexity, out of sense of wrath, out of trouble of conscience, out of hard exercises of faith, by having great consolations, high and ravishing joyes of the Spirit at the first hand; but must be content to come creeping out of our trouble by little and little; for here the Psalmist, under the deepest sense of God's displeasure, must use all ordinary means, and wrestle with bitter temptations, till he come to such height as is expressed, ver. 7, 8, 9, and for an event, must begin and reprove his owne misbeliief, dispute for the help of his faith, taking arguments from his experience from God's power and good will, and God's dealing with others before him. 9. The works of God, when they are looked on curiously, or lightly past by, cannot be discerned, but when they are well considered, they will be found wonderfull; I will remember the works of the Lord; surely I will remember thy wonders of old. 10. It is good for a soul in a hard exercise, to raise it self from thinking of God and of his works, unto speaking unto God directly; no case or reliefe will be found, till address be made unto himselfe, till we turn our face toward him, and direct our speech unto him, as here the Psalmist doth, from the midst of the eleventh verse to the end of the Psalm. 11. Estimation of any of God's works, and good gotten by meditation on some of his works, is able to engage the heart to a deeper consideration of all his works; I will meditate also of all thy works, faith he. 12. He that would have profit by God's works, must bridle the levity of his own minde, which cannot stay fixed in the consideration, till it be tied in meditation; I will meditate of all thy works. 13. When we have fed our own souls upon God's works, we should study to make use of what we have learned thereby to the good of others, and glory of God: I will meditate of all thy works, and talk of all thy doings.

Ver. 13. Thy way, O God, is in thy sanctuary: who is so great a God as our God?

14. Thou art the God that doest wonders, thou hast declared thy strength among the people.

In the last place, he confirmeth his faith, and seteth his minde, by consideration of the Lords dealing with his people, recorded In holy Scripture, whereof he speaketh first, in general, ver. 13: 14. Then more specially, of the bringing of his people out of Egypt through the wilderness, terribly discomfiting their enemies, and tenderly leading them, as his own flock, by weak and few instruments. Whence learn, 1. When the heart of a man is turned toward the Lord, then the vale of darkness, confusion, and disbelief is removed; he can justify the Lord in all that he doth, as most holy and just; as here we see in the Psalmist, who since he began to direct himself toward God, can now lay to him, Thy way, O God, is in the Sanctuary. 2. There is no understanding of God's dealing with us, nor can any right construction be made of his exercising of us, except we come to the Lord's Ordinances, where his Word, his Oracles of Scripture do expound his works perfectly, Thy way, O God, is in the Sanctuary. 3. When the works and ways of God are looked upon by the light of the Word, in his Sanctuary, or Church, and God is looked unto, through his works and Word, then is a soul forced to admire his holiness, and wisdom, and justice, and power, and goodness, above all comparison, Who is so great a God as our God? 4. The exercise of the believers conscience with fears and suspicions of God's affection unto him, endeth in admiration of God in exaltation of God, in believing more firmly in God, in magnifying the grace of his being in Covenant with God, in acknowledging his own blessedness, and the blessedness of all other believers, for having God for their God; Who is so great a God as our God? 5. So much in general may be seen of God's dealing with his people, as may quiet a man in his own particular, who is troubled about God's dispensation toward him: for when Israel in Egypt was put to such straits, as they saw nothing but rooting of them out with cruelty and oppression, God did work so well, so wisely, so powerfully, and so graciously for them, as all their hard exercise was turned to their greater comfort, and God's greater glory. This in general is the use that the Psalmist maketh of God's dealing with his people, and doth finde it applicable to his own conditions; Thou art the God that doest wonders. 6. When we cannot see how it is likely or possible we can be extricated out of the difficulties we are cast into, especially in our spiritual condition, we are obliged to give unto God the glory of doing above all things we can conceive, for the good of those that desire to be his subjects; Thou art the God that dost wonders. 7. What God hath convinced the world of already, concerning what he can do for his people, may satisfy every particular soul of his wisdom, power, and and goodness toward itself, when it doth draw in toward him, as one of his people, for this use doth the Psalmist make of God's doing for his people: Thou hast declared thy strength among thy people.

Ver. 15. Thou hast with thine arm redeemed thy people, the sons of Jacob and Joseph. Selah.

16. The waters saw thee, O God, the waters saw thee: they were afraid, the depths also were troubled.

17. The clouds poured out water, the skies sent out a sound, thine arrows also went abroad.

18. The voice of thy thunder was in the heaven: the lightnings lightned the world; the earth trembled and shook.

He descendeth more specially to the consideration of the Redemption of Israel out of Egypt, (which is a representation of the spiritual Redemption of his people) whom at the time when they were in the deepest misery, and least able to help themselves; were most oppress'd by the enemies: and for their own disposition, were in a most sinful condition; and in a desperate mood against the means and instruments of their delivery; God did deliver and remove all the difficulties which might hinder their event and escaping from misery: from whence the Psalmist might strongly reason for his own comfort, that God would not fail to deal graciously with his soul, who was seeking favour from God, and a renewed sense of reconciliation with him. Hence learn, 1. That no soul can be under such sense of wrath and desolation, but he may draw comfort from the great work of Redemption of lost sinners: for if when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Sonne, much more being reconciled, we shall be saved from wrath by his life. And this spiritual Redemption was figured by the bodily delivery of Israel out of Egypt; Thou hast with thine arm redeemed thy people, the sons of Jacob and Joseph. 2. It is by reason of the Covenant that people receive deliverances, and consolations, and proofs of God's power working for them: Therefore doth he stile the sons of Jacob from their interest in God, and God's interest in them by Covenant: Thou hast redeemed thy people. 3. No obstacle how great soever, can stand in the way of the delivery and comfort of God's people, but God can and will remove the were it as the red sea, so soon as he manifests himself, it will get out of the way as after sighted at his Majesty; The waters saw thee, O God, the waters saw thee, they were afraid, the depths also were troubled. 4. The commotions which God hath made in heaven by rain, hailstone, thunder, fire, and lightnings, when he would shew himself for his people, and against their enemies, do testify sufficiently what God can and will do for his own children, who draw near unto him, and how he will rebuke every adversary power which is against them; The clouds poured out water, the skies sent out a sound; thine arrows went abroad, the voice of thy thunder was in heaven; the lightnings lightened the world, the earth trembled and shook. Whether we referre these words to what God did in plaguing Egypt, before he brought out his people, or after when he shewed his anger in pursuing the Egyptians in their flight, when they were seeking to escape out of the red sea: or to what the Lord did in fighting for his people against the Canaanites, they teach the same doctrine to us.

ver. 19. Thy way is in the sea, and thy path in the great waters: and thy footsteps are not known.

20. Thou ledest thy people like a flock: by the land of Moses and Aaron.

He closeth his meditation with two observations; one is, that the Lords wayes are past finding out, and this he insinuath by making a way through the red sea, where never one went before, and never one could follow after. The other observation is, that God can live his people by how few and weak instruments he pleaseth. Whence learn, 1. The Lord draweth deep in the working out of the delivery and salvation of his own people, bringing them first unto extremity of danger, and then making a plain and clear escape from all their straits; Thy way is in the sea, where no man can wade, except God go before him, and where any man may walk, if God take him by the hand, and lead him through.

2. What God is in working, when he engages his children in dangers, and which way he is going, when he leads them into overflowing troubles and deep waters; they cannot understand till he hath done his work; Thy path is in the great waters. 3. A particular reason of every thing which God doth, can no man find out; for he which causeth the Lord craveth submission of all his children in their exercises, as he did of Job; Thy footsteps are not not known. 4. Whether men do see reasons of God's dealing with them or not, the Lord hath a care of his weak and witless people, as a shepherd hath of his flock, and is a gracious leader of his people that follow him: Thou ledest thy people as a flock. 5. The Lord hath his means and instruments of whose ministry he maketh use: and those, albeit they be few and weak, yet shall he do his greatest works by them, according as he doth employ them; Thou ledest thy people as a flock, by the hand of Moses and Aaron.

PSAL. LXXVIII.

Maschil of Asaph.

IN this Psalm, the Lord's Spirit doth stirre up his people to make a right use of the Lord's works of justice and mercy set down in holy Scripture, and to this end he giveth account of God's dealing very mercifully with his people, and never in justice, but when mercy was abused; and he sheweth also the people's dealing with God unthankfully, deceitfully, whether he dealt mercifully or in justice with them.

The Psalm may be divided thus: After a Preface to prepare the hearer for attention and observation of what he was to deliver, ver. 1, 2, 3, 4. he bringeth forth; first, the evidence of God's gracious care he had of his people, in giving them his blessed Word, to teach unto them faith and obedience, ver. 5, 6, 7, 8. Secondly, the evidence of God's judgement against his people, who were put to flight before their foes, when they did not believe the Lord, and did not make use of his works among them, ver. 9, 10, 11. Thirdly, he setteth down how great things God did for them in Egypt, and in the wilderness; ver. 12, 13, 14, 15, 16. Fourthly, how they made no better use of these mercies, then to tempt God, and provoke him to wrath, ver. 17, 18, 19, 20. Fifthly, how for their tempting of God, he was angry at them for their unbelief, and not considering of the miraculous feeding of them with Manna, ver. 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, and how in wrath he satisfied their lust by sending quails for them, to eat flesh their fill, ver. 26, 27, 28, 29. Sixthly, how because they repented not of their provocation, the Lord did plague them, and they went on in their unbelief and disobedience.
disobedience and God went on in the course of multiplying judgements on them, and cutting offmultitudes of them, ver. 30, 31, 32, 33. Sevently, how they at last made a fashion of repenting and seeking of God, but proved in effect nothing but flattering delimiters and hypocrites, unconstant in the Covenant, ver. 34, 35, 36, 37. Eighthly, how the Lord in mercy pitied and spared them many a time, notwithstanding all their provocations of his justice against them, ver. 38, 39, 40, 41. Ninthly, he setteth down the prime cause of all this their sinne and misery, because they marked not, or made no use of the difference that God put between the Egyptians and them; nor how for their cause he had plagued the Egyptians with plague after plague, ver. 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51. And brought their fathers safely out of Egypt, when their enemies were drowned before their eyes, ver. 52, 53. Tenthly, he setteth down how the Lord perfected their journey to Canaan, and brought them to the possession of it, thrusting out the Canaanites, that they might have place, ver. 54, 55. Eleventhly, how they for all this provoked God to anger with their idolatry and superstition, ver. 56, 57, 58. Twelfthly, how the Lord for this their oft repeated provocation did miserably vex them in the days of Eli and Samuel, giving over his Ark into the Philistines hand, and plaguing their country with variety of plagues, ver. 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64. Thirteenthly, how God of his free mercy put his enemies to shame, and restored Religion and Liberties to Church and Kingdom, ver. 65, 66. And last of all, how he brought them to a settled condition under David, who was a type of Christ, ver. 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72.

Ver. 1. Give eare, O my people, to my Law: I incline your eares to the words of my mouth.

2. I will open my mouth in a parable: I will utter dark sayings of old:

3 Which we have heard and known; and our fathers have told us.

4. We will not hide them from their children, shewing to the generations to come the praises of the LORD; and his strength, and his wonderful works that he hath done. O3
In the Preface, the Spirit of the Lord calleth for attention unto the doctrine which he is to deliver, for four reasons. The first, because it was his law and words of his mouth directed to his covenanted people, ver. 1. The next, because this doctrine was mysterious and full of hid wisdom, ver. 2. The third, because it is an ancient doctrine delivered to the Church of old, and transmitted unto them that succeeded, ver. 3. The fourth, because it must be known and transmitted to the succeeding posterity, and following generations of the Church, for the glory of God's wonderful working for his Church, ver. 4. Whence learn, 1. Such is our dulness and slowness of heart, to understand and believe what the Lord doth lay unto us, that we have great need to be admonished, and stirred up to attention and hearing with faith; Give ear, 0 my people, faith the Spirit by his Prophet. 2. The authority of divine doctrine should tie our cares to hear it reverently, believingly and obediently: it is the Lord's law, and the words of his mouth, speaking by his Prophet to us: Give ear, 0 my People, to my law, incline your cares to the words of my mouth. 3. Albeit the Word of the Lord be plain to the attentive believer, yet to the unattentive unbeliever it is a hid mystery, and for this reason we have need to hear attentively and believingly: I will open my mouth in a parable, I will utter dark sayings. 4. The Word of the Lord hath true antiquity with it; divine doctrine is no new doctrine: and for this reason should we hear it attentively and believingly; I will utter dark sayings of old. 5. Albeit the Word of the Lord be a mystery, and dark sayings to the misbelieving multitude of the world, yet it is understood, received and believed by the true members of the Church from age to age; therefore the Prophet, speaking of himself, and of the godly in his time, faith of their parables and dark speeches, Which we have heard and known, and our fathers have told us. 6. Those are worthy of the name of Fathers in the Church, in relation to posterity, who transmit to posterity the truth of God contained in Scripture, such as is here set down in this Psalm: and this is the only infallible sort of tradition, which delivereth to posterity what God delivered to the Prophets, or their Predecessors by Scripture, such as is the doctrine delivered in this Psalm; Which we (faith he) have heard and known, and our fathers have told us, we will not hide them from their children. 7. The godly in every age ought to have the same care to transmit the Word of truth to their posterity, which their ancestors had to transmit it unto.
unto them, and to pay the debt they owe to their faithful Anccestors unto succeeding generations; We will not hide them from their children, shewing to the generations to come, &c. 8. The subject matter of sound and living doctrine, is the setting forth of the glory of God in his attributes, and wonderful operations for his people: Shewing to the generations to come the praises of the Lord, and his wonderful works that he hath done.

Ver. 5. For he established a Testimony in Jacob, and appointed a Law in Israel, which he commanded our fathers: that they should make them known to their children.

6. That the generation to come might know them, even the children which should be borne: who should arise and declare them to their children:

7. That they might set their hope in God, and not forget the works of God: but keep his Commandments.

8. And might not be as their fathers, a stubborn and rebellious generation, a generation that set not their heart aright: and whose spirit was not steadfast with God.

After the Preface, he bringeth forth a notable evidence of the Lords care of his Church, in giving them his Scriptures and revealed rule of faith and obedience, to be transmitted from one generation to another, ver. 5, 6. that they might have faith and hope in God, and obey his commands, ver. 7. and not be like such of their Predecessors, as were rebellious hypocrites, and backsliders from their covenant'd duties, whence learn, i. One of the chiefest mercies that can be bestowed on a people, is the giving of the holy Scriptures unto them, and revealing unto them the way of salvation, and of Gods service which he requireth; this is put in the first room here: For he established a Testimony in Jacob, and appointed a Law in Israel. 2. Gods words and ordinances appointed in Scripture, are witnesses for him, of his wisdom, power, holiness, mercy, and justice against such as do not make use thereof, and a fixed rule for mens faith and obedience; therefore is it said, He established a testimony in Jacob.
rob, and appointed a Law in Israel. 3. The Scriptures were not appointed for a rule only to those to whom they were first directed, but for the use also of the Church in all ages following, which every man must both study to understand and obey himself, and also teach his children, and those under his charge to understand and obey, according to his place; he gave a testimony and a law to the fathers, That they should make them known to their children, that the generation to come might know them, even the children which should be born, who should arise, and declare them to their children. 4. The end of revealing and teaching of God's Word, is to beget and increase men's faith in God, and dependance upon him, as here is set down: the Word was to be declared to their children, That they might set their hope in God. 5. The way to foster faith and hope in God, is to mark and consider and keep in a sanctified memory, how God hath already confirmed his Word by his works, and by pawns and pledges, both of his power and purpose to perform what he hath said; therefore doth he joyne unto the duty of setting their hope in God, the duty of not forgetting his works; intimating that if his works were forgotten, his Word would not be believed, and faith and hope in God would not remain constantly fixed on God. 6. The faith and hope which God craves of his people to be fixed on him, is such as may bring forth obedience to his precepts; therefore unto hoping in God, and not forgetting his works, he addeth, But keep his Commandments: So this is the summe of true religion, to have faith in God, upon the termes of grace offered unto us through a Redeemer, and to hope for and expect the accomplishment of all his promises, and to foster our faith and hope by the consideration of what he hath done for his people, and uprightly to set our selves to keep his Commandments. 7. The example of fathers is not to be followed, except wherein they followed the Lord: where their practice is not conformable to God's Word we must not be like them; therefore faith he, And might not be as their fathers were, stubborn. 8. This is the natural inclination of corrupt mankind, to go on in our sinful course obstinately, how ever God discharges us; to come contrary to his commands, and flatly to refuse to obey him; and if we at any time seem to do him service, to do it from corrupt principles, and for corrupt ends, still remaining unreconciled to him; and whatsoever we tie our selves unto by Covenant, as double-hearted persons, to deal deceitfully therein, and turn back from it: such were all
Ps. LXXVIII.

The unrepentant Israelites: A stubborn and rebellious generation, a generation that set not their heart aright, and whose spirit was not steadfast with God. 9. Nothing is able to bring us off this our natural course and sinful inclination, except faith and hope in God, and obedience to his commands be begun and entertained in us by the Word of God, as the connexion of these duties here, and order they are set down in doth teach. 10. The Lord will have his people obediently to hearken to his reproofs, and not reject his yoke, and meekly to submit to his government, and not rebell; to study sincerity of affection toward God, and steadfastness in his Covenant, as his condemning the carnal Israelites for the contrary faults doth teach us.

Ver. 9. The children of Ephraim being armed, and carrying bowes, turned back in the day of battel.

10. They kept not the Covenant of God: and refused to walk in his Law.

11. And forgat his works: and his wonders that he had shewed them.

In the second place under the name of Ephraim, as the most mighty and numerous tribe of all the rest, he understandeth all Israel, and sheweth that the reason of the Lords many a time deserting of Israel from age to age in the day of battel, was their carnal confidence in their own strength, and their not believing in God, their not regarding the Covenant they were entered into with God, their disobedience to his commands, and their not making use of his wonderful works amongst them. Whence learn, 1. When men are under greatest guiltinesse, and at greatest distance from God, they are least sensible of their sin, least afraid of Gods wrath, and most confident of their own abilities. Ephraim and Israel many a time lying under breach of Covenant and rebellion against God, being armed and carrying bowes, do think themselves sufficient to encounter with their enemies. 2. Multitude of men and arms will not avail a people in the day of battel, when God is against them; God can take wisdom, and courage, and strength, and good successe from them; The children of Ephraim being armed, and carrying bowes, turned back in the day of battel. 3. The cause of general calamities coming upon Gods people, will be found in their sins, which which have provoked the Lord against them, whereof God will convince them by judgements, when they will not be convinced otherways; They turned back in the day of battle; how came this? They kept not the covenant of God. 4. The Lord uteth by his Word in the mouth of his messengers to convince his backsliding people of their defection, and to press upon them to return to the rule, and walk in his obedience, but when this admonition and offer is refused, then no wonder judgement come: for here, They turn back in the day of battle, when, and wherefore? They refused to walk in his Law. 5. As the sanctified and thankful remembrance of God's dealing with his people, is the way to keep the heart in the love, faith and obedience of God: so the letting of his works, and specially the most remarkable and wonderful works, to slide out of their memory and affection, is the fountain of defection from God, and cause of falling unto carnal courses and confidences, and drawing on of God's judgements on themselves; They forgot his works, and his wonders that he had showed them.

Ver. 12. Marvellous things did he in the sight of their fathers: in the land of Egypt, in the field of Zoan.

13. He divided the sea, and caused them to passe through, and he made the waters to stand as an heap.

14. In the day-time also he led them with a cloud; and all the night with a light of fire.

15. He clave the rocks in the wilderness, and gave them drink as out of the great depths.

16. He brought streams also out of the rock, and caused waters to run down like rivers.

In the third place, he setteth down some of these wonderful works done for his people, which should have tied their faith, love and obedience unto the Lord; in special the great work of Redemption and delivery of his people out of Egypt, (representing the spiritual Redemption and delivery of his own out of the bonds of sin, Satan and wrath,) how God plagued the Egyptians with wonderful plagues, in the sight of their King and Princes.
Princes in Zoan, the most famous City of Egypt, ver. 12. How he dried the red sea, and made his people go through between mountains of liquid water on both hands, ver. 13. How he directed them, and refreshed them by a pillar of fire by night, and by a cooling cloud by day, ver. 14. How he furnished them drink out of the flinty rock in the wilderness, ver. 15, 16.

Whence learn, 1. The great work of bodily redemption of Gods people out of Egypt, and the spiritual Redemption of his People from the bondage of sin and misery by Christ represented thereby, should be as inducements unto, and props of faith in God, to all who seek life in him, and a sufficient motive unto love and obedience unto him, to the worlds end; for to this end did he declare his love, care and power to save them who enter in Covenant with him to be his people; Marvellous things did he, &c. 2. The works of God done for his people in any former age, do oblige those of that age, and all the succeeding ages to make use thereof, for the increase of faith in God, and of love and obedience to God, and do answerably aggravate the contrary sins, when they are not so made use of; for, Marvellous things did he in the sight of their fathers; is the ground of challenging of the pottcrity for their defection. 3. The plagues of Egypt, should serve for the comfort of Gods oppressed people; and for terror to their enemies in all ages; Marvellous things did he in the sight of their fathers in the land of Egypt. 4. As the Lord avoweth his people, and owns their quarrel most openly in the sight of Kings Courts and royal Cities; so should his people avow their loyalty to God before all men: otherways, the more evidently God hath appeared for his people, the more heavy is the challenge of unthankful disobedience; as here it is made the challenge of back-sliding Israel, that God in the most open theatre of the Kingdom of Egypt, (whereby the fame of his works might go into all the world) did work for them and their fathers; Marvellous things did God for them in the field of Zoan; from whence passage was to many countreys. 5. The Lords making of a way through the red sea for his peoples delivery, is an evidence and pawn once for aye, of his power and purpose to make a way for his owne to escape, how great soever their traits shall be; He divided the red sea, and caused them to passe through. 6. The Lords causing the liquid waters to stand as a wall, heaped up contrary to the nature thereof, is a pawn of his power and purpose to make the creatures, which by nature should devour, to be not only harm-

lesse; but helpful also to this people, as need requireth; He made the waters to stand as an heap. 7. The Lords bringing of his people, both out of Egypt and out of the sea, is a pawne of his power and purpose to bring his people through all hazards whatsoever, wherein others shall perish; He caused his people to pass through. 8. The Lords leading on of his people night and day, is a pawne of his constant love to his own people, and of his power and purpose never to leave nor forsake such as love to have his guiding and conduct; In the day-time also he led them. 9. The Lords covering of the hoste of his people with a coole and comfortable cloud all the day long, to keep them from the scorching heat of the Sun in the dry and hot wilderness, is a pawne of his kind care of his people, and constant purpose to give refreshment in the time of persecution, or whatsoever troubles they shall be exercised with; In the day-time also he led them with a cloud. 10. The Lords making of a pillar of fire to burn and shine all night, for tempering the cold of the night, and directing of Israel's feet, when they were to march in the night, is a pledge of his love, power and purpose to furnish the light of direction and consolation unto his own people, as they have need; He led them all the night with a light of fire. 11. As the Lords people wanting of water in the wilderness, through which their way did lie, doth teach us that we may be reduced to great straits in this life, both bodily and spiritual; so the Lords furnishing unto them drink, doth teach, that the Lord both can and will furnish his people in their necessities, bodily and spiritual; He clave the rocks in the wilderness, and gave them drink, as out of the great depths; he brought streams also out of the rock, and caused waters to run down like rivers.

Ver. 17. And they sinned yet more against him: by provoking the most High in the wilderness.

18. And they tempted God in their heart: by asking meat for their lust.

19. Yea, they spake against God: they said, Can God furnish a table in the wilderness?

20. Behold, he smote the rock, that the waters gushed out, and the streams overflowed: can be give bread also? can he provide flesh for his people?
In the fourth place, he setteth down how the people made no better use of the foresaid mercies, then to tempt God, and to provoke him to wrath, by seeking satisfaction to their carnal lusts, and questioning whether or no God was able to satisfy their desires. Whence learn, 1. Unrenewed nature is strongly inclined to meet the Lords goodness with more and more ingratitude, and to sin over and over again the same sins, when new benefits and old faults being well considered, might teach more wisdom and thankfulness; They sinned yet more against him. 2. We are so foolish in our sinning, that we do not consider what we our; selves are, how great a majesty we offend, and what may be the consequents thereof; They sinned yet more by provoking the most High. O how unreasonable, uncircumcised, undiscreeet and blinde tools are men in their sinning! 3. Albeit we have no outward enticements, albeit the place of our sojourning here should warne us as strangers and pilgrims to abstain from fleshly lusts, albeit we have the Word & works of God, as witnesses of God, and evidences of his beholding of us; yet so pregnant are we in wickednesse, so beastly passionate in our carnal affections, and so gross in Atheisme, that naturally we run on in our own ways, as the horse rultheth into the battle; They provoked the most High in the widenesse. 4. When God giveth sufficiently to supply necessities, and we seek to satisifie our lusts; when God hath said and done abundantly already for evidencing his power, justice, truth and care of our welfare, and we will not rest on him, except he give such other new and extraordinary proofs of his properties, as we do prescribe, then do we tempt God, and highly provoke him, by seeking thus to subject him to our direction, will and carnal affections; And they tempted God in their heart, by asking more for their lust. 5. When the sinful motions of the minde and heart are not controlled, the sin will break forth openly to outward acts tending to Gods dishonour, and to the evil example of others; They tempted God in their heart, and then they spake against God. 6. Words of misbelieve, not disputing against temptations, but in effect calling in question Gods truth, power, care of us, or his good will to us, are in effect flandering of God, and bearing false witness against him; They spake against God: they said Can God furnish, &c? 7. The carnal ungodly man hath no estimation of God, or any of his spiritual benefits, but doth set him a task of satisfying of his fleshly conceits and affections, which if God do not answer, he misregard-
Ps. Lxxviii.

8. Albeit the unbeliever be convinced of God's power and goodness to his people by his works for time past, yet is he not the wiser afterward, when it cometh to the giving credit unto God in another work: yea, the work which God hath wrought, is esteemed by him as nothing, except God do farther as the unbeliever shall prescribe; Behold, (say they) he smote the rock, that waters gushed out: but can he give bread also? can he provide flesh for his people?

Ver. 21. Therefore the LORD heard this, and was wroth: so a fire was kindled against Jacob, and anger also came up against Israel.

22. Because they believed not in God: and trusted not in his salvation.

23. Though he had commanded the clouds from above: and opened the doores of heaven.

24. And had rained down Manna upon them to eate, and had given them of the corne of heaven.

25. Man did eate Angels food: he sent them meat to the full.

In the fifth place, he setteth down how God was wroth for their unbelief, & for their not having a due estimation of the miraculous feeding of them with Manna. Wherefore learn, 1. Sins continued in, and in special expressions to the dishonouring of God flowing from misbeliefe, have a loud cry in Gods cares, and he taketh notice of them for executing of judgement; Therefore the Lord heard this, and was wroth. 2. When God is openly dishonoured, the Lord by open judgement will sanctifie his own Name on the sinner, whatsoever be his priviledge, and though he were never so neer to God in external priviledges; So a fire was kindled against Jacob, and anger also came up against Israel. 3. Misbeliefe is a more grievous sin than men do esteem of it; for it calleth Gods truth, mercy, goodnesse, power, constancy, and all in question, and even his justice amongst the rest, which if the misbeliever did consider, he would not provoke justice against himself by this sin; Wrath came up against Israel, because they believed.
lieved not in God. 4. They do not believe in God, who study not to depend upon him for salvation, and for whatsoever is necessary to them for salvation: yea they who do not believe that the Lord shall bring them out of every strait; in a way most serving to their welfare, and for his own honour; do not believe in him for salvation, so solidly as he requireth of them: They believed not in God, (faith he) and trusted not in God's salvation. 5. The more means, encouragements, helps and props to support a man's faith are furnished of God, the greater is the sinne of unbelief in him: As the Israelites misbelief was the greater, for Gods miraculous bringing of water out of the rock, and Manna from the clouds, as here the Israelites misbelief is aggravated thus: They trusted not in his salvation, though he had commanded the clouds, and rained down Manna. 6. Man liveth not by bread, but by the efficacious Word of God. It is so easie for God to rain down victuals out of the clouds, as to make them grow out of the ground; let him say the Word, and it is done: He commanded the clouds, and opened the doores of heaven, and rained down Manna on them to eat. 7. The Lord doth provide well for his own redeemed people; what the earth doth not yield unto them, he maketh the heaven one way or other furnish unto them: as when the Israelites wanted the corn of the earth, the Lord gave them of the corn of heaven, so that man did eat Angels food; not that there is corn in heaven, or that Angels do eat any corporal food, but Manna is so called for the excellency of the food, that it might have served for food to Angels, if they had any need of food. 8. The more excellent the benefit is which God giveth, the greater is the ingratitude of him who doth not esteem of it, and make use of it as becometh; as we see in Israel's sinne, who did not esteem of Manna, as they should have done: had the Lord fed them with dust of the earth, or roots of grace, or any other mean thing, they should have had no reason to complain: but when he giveth them a new food, created every morning for their cause, sent down from heaven as fresh furniture every day, of such excellent colour, taste, smell and wholesomenesse: what a provocation of God was it, not to be content now; in special, when he gave them abundantly of it? He sent them meat to the full.

Ver. 26
Ver. 26. He caused an East-winde to blow in the heaven, and by his power he brought in the South-winde.

27. He rained flesh also upon them as dust, and feathered fowles like as the sand of the sea.

28. And he let it fall in the midst of their camp, round about their habitations.

29. So they did eat and were well filled: for he gave them their own desire.

Here the Lord being tempted by a murmuring and unthankful people, to refute their suspicion of his power, sendeth them the most delicate flesh that could be found in the world, quailies in abundance, till they were all filled. Whence learn, 1. The Lord, that he may shew what regard he hath to satisfy good and lawful desires, doth sometime grant unto men their unlawful and unreasonable desires, that holy desires may be the better entertained, and constantly followed till they be granted; as appeareth by the Lords granting of the unreasonable desire of the Israelites after flesh. 2. The Lord hath the Commandement of the windes to make them blow from what aire and in what measure he pleaseth: He caused an East-winde to blow in the heaven, and by his power he brought in the South-winde. 3. The Lord can gather so many creatures as he mindeth to make use of at his pleasure, he can gather birds and fowles, and make their flight longer or shorter as he pleaseth, and make them light and fall where he pleaseth, and can bring near to mans hand what he hath a mind to give unto him: He rained flesh also upon them as dust, and feathered fowls like as the sand of the sea; and he let them fall in the midst of their camp, round about their habitations. 4. As the Lord doth grant lawful desires in mercy, so also doth he grant sinful desires in wrath; So they did eat and were filled, for he gave them their own desire. 5. When the carnal heart doth meet with the object of his lust, he falleth upon it as a beast doth without fear of God, or moderation of affection: They did eat and were well filled, for he gave them their own desire.

Ver. 30. They were not estranged from their lust; but while their meat was yet in their mouthes,

31. The
31. The wrath of God came upon them, and slew the fourest of them, and smote down the chosen men of Israel.

32. For all this they sinned still: and believed not for his wondrous works.

33. Therefore their days did he consume in vanity, and their yeares in trouble.

In the sixth place, he setteth down their impenitency continued in, and the Lords judgements poured out one after another upon them. Whence learn, 1. Sinful lust is unsatiable, even when the body is overcharged with the servise of it; To lust sinfully is a snare, but to continue in the slavery of lust, is a selling of a mans selfe, and a wedding of him unto that lust: such was the sin of the carnal Israelites; They continued in their lusting and repented not, albeit they got time to repent, they and their lust did not discord; They were not estranged from their lust. 2. When men will not be enemies to their own sinful lusts, they do provoke the Lord to become enemy to them, and to pour wrath on them in the very act of their sinning; While their meat was yet in their mouths, the wrath of God came upon them. 3. Such as are most headstrong in sinne, and take to themselves most liberty to sin, and do give example most unto others to sin, shall be most notoriously punished. High places and eminency in power, as it doth not lessen sin, but aggravate it; so doth it not exempt from judgment, but procureth that it should be augmented rather, as is to be seen here in the punishment of the Nobles and great men in the camp of Israel; The wrath of God came upon them, and slew the fourest of them, and smote down the chosen men of Israel. 4. Such is the perversenesse of our natural inclination, that neither by Gods gentle dealing with us, nor by his sad judgements on others or on our selves, can we be amended, as is to be seen in unrenewed Israelites: For all this, they sinned still. 5. Neither extraordinary works of mercy, nor judgement, nor miracles, are able to convert men, or turn them from their evil wayes, or beget saving faith in them, with whom ordinary means do not prevail; For all this they sinned still, and believed not for his wondrous work. 6. When all means are eslayed, and none do prevail to bring men to repentance and reconciliation with God through faith, no wonder God in his righteous judgement should cut off the impenitent as an unsuitful and evil tree is cut down and cast away; They sinned still, therefore their days did he consume in vanity, and their years in trouble. 7. By following of lufts, and not seeking felicity in God, men do both misle the good they hoped to have by sinning, and finde nothing in their way but vanity; and also meet with trouble and torment, which they did not fear; They sinned still, and believed not, therefore their days did God consume in vanity, and their years in trouble.

Ver. 34. When he flew them, then they fought him: and they returned, and enquired early after God.
35. And they remembered that God was their Rock, and the High God their Redeemer.
36. Nevertheless, they did flatter him with their mouth: and they lied unto him with their tongues:
37. For their heart was not right With him: neither were they stedfast in his covenant.

In the seventh place, he describeth some fits of their temporary faith and repentance, ver. 34, 35. which in effect proved to be but flattery or hypocrisy, and did resolve in back-sliding and apostacy, ver. 36, 37. Whence learn, 1. When men neither by the Lords liberality, nor lighter chastishments can be moved to repent, it is righteoufnesse with God. by fearfull judgements to cut off a number, and to put the rest in fear of present cutting off, and fto waken them out of security; as here, when the carnal Israelites went on in their provocations, The Lord flew them.
2. The sense of present devouring wrath, and the terror of an angry God, may drive men to a temporary repentance, and to seeking of friendship and favour with God, for sparing them from wrath and present plagues, and all this may be without serious repenting of sin, without flying to a Mediator by saving faith, without minding hearty and solid reconciliation: and may proceed onely from the natural principle of fear of death, and love of selfe-preservation; as here, When he flew them, then they fought him.
3. Temporary repentance, may make a temporary change of a mans course of life and carriage, from the worse to the better; may make him leave off his way of provocation, and seek after God for a time with some diligence in the outward forms of Religion;
Religion; as here, They returned, and enquired after God early: 4. As there is a temporary Repentance, moving from sin upon temporary grounds, so there is a temporary faith in many, moving toward God upon temporary considerations; that is, drawing toward God, to obtain of him sparing of their life and temporal benefits, and making use of God's goodness and bounty, as much as serves to a man's purpose: as here, They remembered that God was their Rock. 5. Temporary faith may make use of Redemption, so far as may serve for deliverance from, or recovery out of temporal trouble, and present danger of wrath, and plagues; as here, They remembered that the High God was their Redeemer. 6. Acts of faith and repentance, extracted by fore judgements, fear of wrath, and desire of temporal deliverance, may be found to be the fruits of flattery, and not of saving faith; Nevertheless they flattered him with their lips. 7. Profession of faith and repentance, which doth for fake sin and seek God only for temporal reasons, is but a lying unto God in effect, howsoever the temporary believer and repenter may judge himselfe sound enough; as here, And they lied unto him with their tongues. 8. When the heart or affections of a man are not set sincerely against sin, and for God, or toward God; all the outward profession is but hypocrisy in effect, and a lie; as here, They lied unto him with their tongues, for their heart was not right with him. 9. Temporary faith can produce no steadfastness in the Covenant, or covenant-ed duties, but make a man only a temporizer therein; as outward motives do lead him toward duties, or from them: Their heart was not right with God, neither were they steadfast in the Covenant.

Ver. 38. But he being full of compassion forgave their iniquity, and destroyed them not: yea many a time turned he his anger away, and did not stirre up all his wrath.

39. For he remembered that they were but flesh, a winde that passeth away, and cometh not againe.

40. How oft did they provoke him in the Wilderness: and grieve him in the desert?

41. Yea, they turned back, and tempted God: and li-mited the holy One of Israel.
In the eighth place, he sheweth the Lords mercifull sparing of his people many a time, and pitying of their natural frailty, because if he should have killed them, they were not to live again in this world, ver. 38, 39. notwithstanding of their frequent provocations in the wilderness, their limiting of God, and taking upon them to direct God what he should do unto them, ver. 40, 41. Whence learn; 1. There is a remission of sin, in regard onely of temporal judgement, Lev. 4, 20. which is in effect onely the not inflicting temporall punishment upon the sinner, or the not destroying of the sinner presentely, the persons remaining the same impenitent sinners, such as was Gods pardoning here of impenitent Israel, flattering and false-hearted Israel; But he forgave their iniquity. 2. It is not any good in the sinner, but pity in God, which is the cause of sparing sinners from present perdition, when they provoke the Lord; But he being full of compassion forgave their iniquity, and destroyed them not. 3. The Lord doth evidence his mercy and pity toward sinners partly by his often sparing to strike, and turning away of his wrath ready to break out against them; and partly by his mitigating his anger, and not suffering it to break out in full force; Many a time he turned his anger away, and did not stirre up all his wrath. 4. Let men conceit of their own natural strength as they lift, yet the truth is, their frailty is great; They are but flesh, and a vapour that passeth away, and cometh not again. 5. When no good at all is found in man for which God should spare him, he taketh occasion of his frailty and misery, whereunto man is subject, to pity him: For he remembered that they were flesh, a wince that passeth away, and cometh not again. 6. The oftener sin be repeated, the greater is the provocation; and the greater is the mercy, that so often doth forbear to destroy: and when the frequency of sinning, and frequency of sparing are numbered, the reckoning will not be easily ended, nor the number condescended upon; How oft did they provoke him in the wilderness? 7. The sinnes of Gods people do greatly displease him, and that so much the more, as they are oftener repeated and committed contrary to what Gods kindnesse and care requireth of them: How oft did they provoke him in the wilderness? and grieve him in the desert, where God gave his daily presence, led them, fed them, and protected them miraculously. 8. Amongst other aggravations of sin, this is not the least, after conviction, and correction, and promise of amendment, resolutely to go back again to their vomit; yes, they turned back, and tempted God. 9. The Lord cannot endure that that his people who, ought wholly to depend upon, submit unto him, and be ruled by him, should prescribe, as they please, how and when he should help them, or set bounds unto his power, truth, wisdom, or mercy; as if he could do no more then they conceive to be probable. Therefore is it put amongst the highest aggravations of their sins: They tempted and limited the holy One of Israel,

In the ninth place, from this to ver. 54. he setteth down the prime cause of all their sin and misery, which followed upon it; to wit, they marked not, nor made use of the difference which God did put between them and the Egyptians, whom he did plague for their cause, while he delivered them. Whence learn,
1. When the merciful proofs of God's respect unto us, do not confirm our faith in God, and tie us to love and obedience unto him; these experiences will soon wear out, if not out of common memory, yet out of effimative and affectionate memory: as here, They remembred not his hand, nor the day when he delivered them from the enemy. 2. As the right remembrance of former mercies may be a bridle from all blame, and a confirmation of faith against all doubtings and suspicions of God's good will to us: so the not rightly remembering of experiences of God's respect shewed unto us, doth prove an inlet to many wicked makings of God, and disobediences to him: for here the cause of the former sins and plagues, is rendered to be this, They remembred not his hand, nor the day when he delivered them from the enemy. 3. Not remembering the Lords Word and Works affectionately, and with purpose, and endevout to make right use thereof, is in the Lords accompt no remembrance of him in effect: for of this people, who could well tell the story of their coming out of Egypt, and so had a common remembrance thereof, the Lord faith, They remembred not his hand, nor the day when he delivered them from the enemy. 4. Signes and wonders once done for confirmation of the doctrine of the true God and his Covenant and true Religion, should suffice in all times and ages after for that end: and it is not lawful to tempt God thus, to do more wonders for confirmation on of that truth; They remembered not, how he had wrought his signes in Egypt, and his wonders in the field of Zoan. 5. The Lords plagues on the enemies of the Church, being rightly re-membred, should warne Gods people to stand in awe of him, depend upon him, submit unto him, and to be wary to contend with him, which use, when it is not made, it giveth a ground of chal-lege: They remembered not how he had wrought his signes in Egypt, and his wonders in the field of Zoan.

Ver. 44. And had turned their rivers into blood:
and their floods that they could not drinke.
45. He sent divers sorts of flies among them, which devoured them: and frogs, which destroyed them.
46. He gave also their increase unto the caterpill-er: and their labour unto the locust.
47. He destroyed their vines with haile, and their Sycamore-trees with frost.
48. He gave up their cattell also to the haile: and their flocks to hot thunderbolts.
49. He cast upon them the fiercenesse of his anger, wrath and indignation, and trouble, by sending evill angels among them.
50. He made a way to his anger, he spared not their soul from death: but gave their life over to the pestilence.
51. And smote all the first-borne in Egypt: the chief of their strength in the tabernacles of Ham.

He numbereth out sundry plagues poured out upon the Egyptians, whereby the Israellites should have been wise. From ver. 44.
Learn, 1. The means of mens life comfort, wealth, and defence can stand them in no stead, when God hath a controversy against them: The Lord can deprive them of the benefit thereof, and turn benefits into the means of their grief and vexation, as he did the waters of Egypt, which were the means of life and wealth unto them: He turned their rivers into blood, and their floods, that they could not drink. 2. By what means people do sin and provoke provoketh the Lord to wrath, he can by the same means punisht them. As the Egyptians had defiled their rivers with the blood of the infants of Israel, so God did make their river speak their sin, and threaten their death; He turned their rivers into blood, and their floods, that they could not drink.

From ver. 45. Learn 1. The meanest and basest of the creatures do declare the power of the Lord, and are so farre from being uselesse, that they lie as it were in garison among men, to be sent out in parties upon service, as the God of hosts is pleased to give orders; He sent divers sorts of flies among them, and frogs. 2. Flies and frogs, and every meanest vermine, are too sore for man, when God doth arm them to avenge his quarrel; He sent out flies which devoured them, and frogs which destroyed them; that is, which were about to destroy them, and were able enough, for the work, and were acknowledged to be so by the Egyptians, who did reckon themselves loft men, if these armies should not be taken off them.

From ver. 46, 47, 48. Learn, 1. When God is not acknowledged to be the giver of corn and cattel, and fruits of the ground, by a right using of them, he will be known to be the giver thereof, by removing of them; He destroyed their increase, labour, vines, and cattell. 2. The Lord hath means how to destroy and take away the fruits of the ground, and other serviceable creatures at his pleasure; The caterpiller, the locusts, quail, frost, and thunderbolts.

From ver. 49. Learn, 1. The plagues of Gods enemies are out of meet justice, and not from fatherly love, as the strokes of his own choson are; He cast upon the Egyptians the fierceness of his anger. 2. Trouble of it selfe is not so heavy, as when indignation and wrath is joyned with it, or sendeth it forth; He cast upon them the fierceness of his anger, wrath, and indignation, and trouble. 3. As the Lord hath good Angels, by whom he can work his own will; so hath he also evill angels, whose service he can use holily to his own purpose; He cast the fierceness of his wrath upon them, by sending evill angels among them.

From ver. 50, 51. Learn, 1. When the Lords judgements lighting upon mens houses, cornes cattel, and fruit-trees, do not humble men, the Lord doth make his judgement light upon their own persons; and when lighter judgements on their persons do not yet humble them, then God will destroy their lives, and their last plagues shall be heavier then the first; as here, when former plagues did not the turn, the Lord laid aside former pitying the and long-suffering, and so he made a way for his anger, he spared not their soul from death, but gave their life over to the persecutors.

2. As the persecutors of God's people do smite that which God loveth best, so doth God smite that which persecutors love best; he smote all the first-born in Egypt.

3. The curse of God coming upon the Egyptians, the potteries of Cham, commendeth the grace of God toward the Israelites, the potteries of Sem his brother: Therefore in opposition to the tabernacles of the Israelites in the land of Goshen, it is said, he smote the chief of their strength in the tabernacles of Cham.

Ver. 52. But made his owne people to go forth like sheep: and guided them in the wilderness like a flock.

53. And he led them on safely, so that they feared not: but the sea overwhelmed their enemies.

This was the Lords dealing with the enemies of Israel, whereof the Israelites made no right use. Now he senteth down the Lords different dealing with Israel, whereof also they made no right use; when he hath plagued and drowned the Egyptians, he gave Israel safe passage and conduct through the sea; Wherefore learn, 1. Whosoever be the unworthinesse of Gods confederate people, yet the Lord putteth a difference between them and their enemies, and testifieth his respect to the one above the other: the Egyptians he did diverse ways plague; But he made his owne people go forth like sheep. 2. Though the Lords people be both weak and witlesse, yet God careth for them, as a shepherd doth for his flock; He made his own people to go forth as sheep, and guided them in the wilderness as a flock. 3. Albeit the Lord doth put difference between such as are in Covenant with him in the letter onely, and those that are in Covenant with him in the spirit also, when he compar eth the sheep with the goats: yet when he cometh to the whole bulk of his people with the rest of the world, and in special with their enemies, he putteth a peculiar respect upon them all, and avoweth his interest in them all above all people in the world, and doth for them, as for his owne; he made his owne people to go forth. 4. Whosoever fear may possibly fall upon Gods people when they are following his directions,

Yet their course is safe and without just cause of fear, and it at some time fear do surprise them, yet the Lord so cleareth their way after that, that they are out of fear; He led them on safely, so that they feared not. 5. The perdition of the world and the wicked enemies maketh the safety of those that are saved so much the greater benefit: His people feared not, but the sea overwhelmed their enemies.

Ver. 54. And he brought them to the border of his Sanctuary, even to this mountain which his right hand had purchased.

55. He cast out the heathen also before them, and divided them an inheritance by line: and made the tribes of Israel to dwell in their tents.

In the tenth place, he pointeth at the perfecting of their journey through the wilderness, and possessing them in Canaan, with the casting out of the Canaanites. Whence learn, 1. Whatsoever become of particular persons in the visible Church, the Lord doth follow on the course of his care and kindness unto the Church, and encreaseth the obligation of the incorporation in the succeeding ages, partly by what he doth for their predecessors, and partly by what he doth for themselves, as we see in the Church of Israel: whatsoever became of misbelievers in the wilderness, he brought his own people to the border of his Sanctuary. 2. Albeit we should fight for the liberty of a place, where God's ordinances may be publicly celebrated, and shed our blood in coming by it; yet is the commodity not our purchase, but the Lord's purchase, and the Lord's gift to us; He brought them to this mountain which his right hand hath purchased. 3. Success in warre is the Lord's work, and such as are dispossessed of their inheritance, have God to crave for it; He cast out the heathen also before them. It is neither the stoutness of the one, nor the feebleness of the other, but God's hand or power, which doth the business. 4. The seating of a people in a peaceable possession, so as every man may without contention enjoy what is allowed him of God, is no small benefit and obligation of a people so dealt with by God: He divided them an inheritance by lot, and made the tribes of Israel dwell in their tents.
Ver. 56. Yet they tempted and provoked the most High God, and kept not his testimonies.

57. But turned back, and dealt unfaithfully like their fathers: they were turned aside like a deceitful bowe.

58. For they provoked him to anger with their high places, and moved him to jealousie with their graven images.

In the eleventh place, he setteth down, how this people yet again provoked the Lord to anger with their idolatry and superstition, their high places and their graven images: for when God had appointed one place for their solemn worship, to wit, his Tabernacle, where his Ark and Mercy-sea was, signifying the necessity of worshipping him, through the promised Mediator Jesus Christ, in whom alone he would be sought and found, and in whom he would have all his people agreeing, and attending his appointment; and not to devise ways of pleasing of God by themselves: they would have a place of their own for publick worship, high places, or hills and groves, which pleased them better then Mount Sion, or the place where the Tabernacle was pitched. They would have representations of their own devising, and loved them better then the Ark of the Covenant, to wit, graven images, which God had forbidden in the moral law, and so they provoked him to anger. Whence learn, 1. Such is the wickednesse of natural men, that neither for judgements nor for favour shewn to them, will they subject themselves to God's direction, but will take upon them to set rules unto God one way or other: This the Prophet sheweth in the example of the Israelites: Yet they tempted and provoked the most High God. 2. When God giveth his Word and Ordinances for his worship to a people, and they will cast away this rule, and make another to themselves, it is a tempting of God, and a striving with the most High God, whether he shall direct them, or they shall direct him in the meanes of his worship; They provoked the most High God; How? They kept not his testimonies. 3. Altering or changing the forme of worship which God hath appointed, is a relinquishing of God and his way, a point of treachery against him, and a notable breach of Covenant;
Covenant; They kept not his testimonies, but turned back and dealt unfaithfully. 4. Following of antiquity in an error is so farre from the excusing of sinne, that it makes the children liable to their fathers debt and deserved punishment, because they approve their fathers and their deeds, above God and Gods testimonies; They dealt unfaithfully like their fathers. 5. The service of the wicked is like a bowe; they will do nothing commanded, but by compulsion; and like a deceitful bowe, which as it hath a cast or throw in it, and doth shift the arrow aside from the mark, whereunto it is directed: so they will aim at another mark then God doth direct them unto; They were turned aside like a deceitful bowe. 6. The alteration of the rule of worship prescribed by God, is a provocation of God to anger, were it but in a circumstance; They provoked him to anger with their high places. 7. Such as take liberty to themselves to depart from the ordinances of God in the lesse, will depart also from him in the greater: They provoked God to anger with their high places, and moved him to jealouzie with their graven images. 8. Howsoever men do dream that they may make good use of pictures & graven images, to further them in devotion and the service of God, who is represented thereby, and that they minde not to communicate any of his worship to the images, yet the Lord doth count that religious use of images no lesse then adultery, and matter of bitter provocation; as the word imports: Partly, because it is impossible not to communicate divine worship to the images, before which a man doth bow himself, of purpose to be stirred up by it, to worship God represented by it; Partly, because the devilers and users of this sort of relative worship, hath thrust himself in the Lords place, to whom only it belongeth to prescribe how he will be worshipped; or at least he hath admitted another Lord then God, in the appointing of the means of Religion: And partly, because the Lord expressly declareth, that by graven images he is provoked justly to jealouzie; Therefore (faith he) they moved him to jealouzie with their graven images.

Ver. 59. When God heard this, he was wrath, and greatly abhorred Israel.

60. So that he forsook the Tabernacle of Shiloh: the tent which he placed among men.

61. And delivered his strength into captivity, and his glory into the enemies hands.
62. He gave his people over also unto the sword: and was wroth with his inheritance.
63. The fire consumed their young men: and their maidens were not given to marriage.
64. Their Priests fell by the sword: and their widows made no lamentation.

In the twelfth place, he declareth how the Lords wrath was kindled, ver. 59. and how he took his Ark from Shiloh, where it was abused in Elies time, ver. 60. and gave his Ark (the signe of his strength or powerful presence among them,) into the Philistines hands, ver. 61. made his people fall in battel, ver. 62. the young men died in battel, and so maids wanted matches, ver. 63. their Priests were slaine, and their wives made no lamentation for them, 1 Sam. 4. 22. in comparison of greater losses, ver. 64. Whence learn, 1. Corrupting of Gods worship and ordinances, is a sinne crying for judgement, which voice God will answer; When God heard this he was wroth. 2. The Lord goeth not rashly to judgement; but as it were after perfect understanding of the cause: When God heard this he was wroth. 3. Were a people or person never so deare to God, superstition and imagerie, and abusing of his publick worship, will provoke him to jealousie against them, and draw forth such judgements as will speak the Lords abhorring them for that sinne; And he greatly abhorred Israel.

From ver 60. Learne, 1. When the publike ordinances, the tokens of the Lords presence, are removed from any place, the Lord removeth, and forsaketh that place; So that he forsook the Tabernacle of Shiloh; where the Ark had been till Elies death. 2. It is in vain for any to boast of Gods presence in any place, when once his publick ordinances are polluted; He forsook Shiloh, the tent which he placed among men.

From ver. 61. Learne, 1. When Gods people abuse Religion, and pollute his ordinances, no wonder he make their open enemies to deprive them therof, as here we see. 2. The Lords people cannot promise unto themselves the continuance of the manifestation of the Lords strength and the Lords glory among them, longer then they do esteem of him, and advance him as their glory and their strength; for when Israel tempted God, kept not his testimonies, and moved him to jealousie, he delivered over his strength into captivity, and his glory into the enemies hands.
From ver. 62. Learn, When enemies get advantage against Gods people, by reason of their provocation of God, and when the enemies of Religion get power over Gods people, so farre as to deprive them of the meanes of Religion; the Lords anger will be more against his people, who were the causes of this wrath, then against the enemies who were the instruments of the execution of the wrath; and therefore beside the taking away of his ordinances from his people, he will send his vengeance upon them also; He gave his people over also unto the sword, and was wrath with his inheritance.

From ver. 63. Learne, 1. When the Lord sendeth the sword on a land, he can soon consume the flower of the youth as with a fire; The fire consumed the young men. 2. When Religion is overthrown among Gods people, let not the Common-wealth think to stand; when God gave his glory into the enemies hand, he gave his people over also unto the sword, and the fire consumed their young men. 3. When Gods people by abusing of Religion do provoke God against them, it shall be no wonder if God give them such sad blowes by their enemies, that there shall be no hope for one age at least to recover their estate; and no wonder if there be fearful appearance also of cutting off the posterity: The fire consumed their young men, and their maidens were not given to marriage.

From ver. 64. Learn, 1. It is amongst the fearfullest tokens of Gods displeasure against a land, when he removeth his Ministers from them, especially when the good are taken away with the bad; Their Priests fell by the sword. 2. When the Ministers are the abusers of Religion, and chief in the provocation, no wonder to see them also exemplarily punished; for as Hephe and thinebas made the sacrifice to be snuff'd at, so God made their carcasses fall in the battel; Their Priests fell by the sword. 3. When Gods wrath breaks forth against his own people for their provocations, he can make publike calamities so great, as they shall swallow up domestick miseries: yea he can make those that live, and are reserved from the sword, so weary of their lives, as they shall reckon the dead to be more happy then the living: Their Priests fell by the sword, and their widows made no lamentation.

Ver. 65. Then the Lord awaked as one out of sleep: and like a mighty man that showeth by reason of wine.
66. And he smote his enemies in the hinder parts; he put them to a perpetual reproach.

In the thirteenth place, he sheweth how notwithstanding of all the former provocations and sore judgements, the Lord of his own free grace, by taking vengeance upon his enemies, restored his people to the privileges of Church and Kingdom. Whence learn, 1. Howsoever the Lords people draw on judgements upon themselves, and deserve to be left in their miseries; yet God of his free and constant love to them, sendeth relief when they least expect; as here is to be seen; when his people is in a most desperate condition, Then the Lord awaketh. 2. As people do sleep securely in their sin, when God doth call them to repentance: so it is justice with God to misken them in their calamity, and to be unto them as one asleep, as here he is described. 3. God doth not so farre wink at the troubles of his own people, but the cry of their misery, and the insolency of the enemy against them, will awake him. When Israel is now as a lost people, and their enemies have taken Gods Ark, Then the Lord awaked as one out of sleepe, and like a mighty man that showed because of wine. 4. Whatsoever weak similitude the Scripture useth to make us conceive somewhat of the Lords operations, yet must we always think of him, as beseemeth the glory of his majesty, leaving the imperfection of the creature, (from which the similitude is borrowed) as the dregs of the comparison, to rest with the creature itself, as here we are led to do, except we should think blasphemous thoughts of God. 5. Albeit the enemies of Gods people may be at ease, when his people are in trouble, and lying under their feet, yet God will arise in due time and punish them; The Lord awaked, and smote his enemies in the hinder parts. 6. The dishonour done to God, and to Gods people, is but for a time, and is shortly removed; but the recompence of the enemy which do dishonour God, is perpetual and everlasting; He smote his enemies in the hinder parts; to wit, with Emerods and a bloody flux; And so he put them to a perpetual reproach.

Ver. 67. Moreover, he refused the Tabernacle of Joseph: and chose not the tribe of Ephraim.
63. But chose the tribe of Judah: the Mount Sion which he loved.

69. And he built his Sanctuary like high palaces: like the earth which he hath established for ever.

70. He chose David also his servant, and took him from the sheepfolds:

71. From following the ewes great with young: he brought him to feed Jacob his people, and Israel his inheritance.

72. So he fed them according to the integrity of his heart: and guided them by the faithfulness of his hands.

In the last place is set down, how albeit the Lord did not return to Shiloh with his Ark, ver. 67, yet he stayed in the land among his people, and placed his Ark in Jerusalem, and built himself a glorious Temple and Sanctuary on Sion, ver. 68, 69. and settled his people under the government of David, a type of Christ, exalted from an humble and low condition, to be King of Israel, ver. 70, 71. by whom the people were well governed, ver. 72.

From, ver. 67, 68. Learne, 1. The Lord can so temper his justice and mercy in his dealing with his people as the effects of both shall be manifest: Because he was so dishonoured in Shiloh, he will have his justice seen, in not suffering his Ark to come there again any more; Moreover, he refused the Tabernacle of Joseph, and chose not the tribe of Ephraim; so wit, for the tribe that he would most respect, or where he would have the residence of his Ark to be, there is his justice. Again, he will not forfake the land, or the people of Israel altogether, but will dwell in some other part of the land, and will take another tribe to have the chief evidence of his respect shewn unto them; But he chose the tribe of Judah: there is his mercy, with an institution of the main means of the mercy, which is the coming of Christ in the flesh, out of the tribe of Judah; Thus God will not depart from Israel, and yet he will not be found save in the tribe of Judah, out of which came Christ, the root and fountain of mercy, to all Israel, who shall seek unto God through him. 2. Whateuer be the priviledge of the Church universal, yet no particular place is so priviledged, but God will leave it, it, and take another to dwell in, when he is provoked in any particular place to forsake it. For the dishonour done to his Majesty in Shiloh, he refused the Tabernacle of Joseph; he refused that his Ark, the chief signe of his presence, should have its residence any more in the bounds of Ephraim or Manasseh, the sons of Joseph. 2. The cause why God chuseth unto any privileged, one tribe more then another, or one person rather then another, or one place rather then another, is only his own free will, grace and love; He chose the tribe of Judah, the Mount Silo which he loved.

From ver. 69, Learn, 1. In the type of the building of the Temple on mount Zion, we are taught that the Church of God is his own edifice, who ever be the workmen, whom he in his providence doth imploy to build it. Therefore is it said, He built his sanctuary like high Palaces. 2. Albeit the Lords Church may have many troubles and commotions in it, yet shall it endure and not be overthrown utterly for ever; He built his sanctuary as the earth, which he hath established for ever.

From, Ver. 70, 71. Learn, 1. The Church shall not want a King to defend and protect her; for God hath his own chosen servant appointed for the purpose. As for the typical Kingdome of Israel he had David: to for the Church universal, represented by the type, he hath appointed Christ the eternal Sonne of God, who took his humane nature of the lineage of David, to be King mysticall in Zion for ever; to be a type of whom, he did choose David his servant. 2. The Lord to the intent he may not onely shew his sovereigne power, whereby he can raise the man-est of men, and exalt them how high soever he pleaseth, but also to represent from how low a degree of humiliation Christ incarnate was to be raised to the government of his Church and Kingdom, he seteth down the mean condition of life, where from David was raised to the royal dignity of governing Israel: He took him from the sheepfolds, from following the ewes great with young; he brought him to feed Jacob his people, and Israel his inheritance.

From, Ver. 72. Learn, The duties and properties of a good King are these. First, He must resolve to be Gods servant in his charge, as David was. Secondly, All his subjects, and in special the Lords people, must be cared for by him in a civil way, as a flock of sheep is cared for by the Paltour: David fed them. Thirdly, A Kings heart must be set uprightly for Gods honour, and for the subjects welfare in the whole course of his government; He fed them in accordante to the integrity of his heart. Fourthly, a King must deal prudently with his subjects, accommodating the whole course of his dealing with them, as their several conditions do require: He guided them by the skilfulness of his hands. And whatsoever measure David had of those properties, were but a shadow of the perfections of Christ in his Government. Fifthly, neither lawes, nor teaching, nor miracles, nor benefits, nor judgments can avail unto the salvation of a people or person, till they be put under the hand and guiding of Christ; as we are taught here in the example and representation of the Lords dealing with Israel in this Psalm, wherein when God hath tried his people with oft repeated mercies and judgments, they come to no settled estate, till they be put under the Government of David, who in this is a type of Christ. For he closeth with this, he guided them by the skilfulness of his hands.

PSAL. LXXIX.

A Psalm of Asaph.

The scattered and captive people of God, after the destruction of Jerusalem and of the Temple, do put up a pitiful complaint unto God, to ver. 6. and do pray for a merciful relief to his Church, and for avenging their blood upon their enemies. As for the complaint, in it they lament four things. First, the profanation and desolation of the Lords inheritance and Temple by the heathen their enemies; ver. 1. Secondly, the barbarous cruelty and inhumanity used against them, ver. 2, 3. Thirdly, the contempt and mocking of their wicked neighbours in their misery, ver. 4. Fourthly, as they acknowledge this to proceed from Gods displeasure, so they lament that it is like to be everlasting, ver. 5.

In their prayer, in the latter part of the Psalm, they crave: First, justice upon their enemies, ver. 6. 7. Secondly, pardon of their own sins, and deliverance out of their misery, for sundry reasons, ver. 8, 9, 10, 11. Thirdly, that God would reward their inhumane neighbours who mocked at their misery, ver. 12. And do close their petition with a promise of praise and thanks unto God by the Church in all succeeding ages. Whence learn in general, 1. The Church of God may be brought so low, as here we see once it was. 2. So many of Gods people as live to see such publicke calamities and misery, must not delibe of a recovery, but should and may run to God and pray for the Church in affliction, expecting order after confusion, and after dissipation, to see a gathering of Gods people again, and after apparent overthrow of Religion a restoring of Gods publick worship, as the example of the Psalmist in this Psalm doth teach, whose courage and confidence in God for relief of the Lords people is wonderful, as the condition of the Church at that time seemed to be desperate. As the holy Ghost, the enditer of this Psalm, doth give warning here to all Churches in all ages, to beware to provoke the Lord unto wrath, lest he deal with them, as he dealt with those Israelites: so doth he give warrant to all afflicted Churches, to follow the example of this afflicted Church, to run to God for help: for which cause he hath given this Psalm to be made use of by the Church; A Psalm of Asaph.

Ver. 1. O God, the heathen are come into thine inheritance, thy holy people have they defiled, they have laid Jerusalem on heaps.

In the first part of this Lamentation; Learn, 1. Albeit there be no place nor person, how near and dear soever unto God, exempted from judgement when they are polluted, yet the wicked instruments of the judgement pour'd out upon the place and persons consecrate to God, may justly be complained of, as here we see; O God, the heathen are come into thine inheritance. 2. When Gods people, who should be holy, defile themselves and Gods Ordinances, it is no wonder that by profane persons they be punished, and their holy things polluted; Thy holy Temple have they defiled; that is, they have abused it, dealt with it, as a vile and profane thing. 3. Albeit people in Covenant with God have disgraced their holy profession, and polluted his ordinances, and be justly plagued by seeing holy ordinances put over in the hands of profane men for their cause, yet neither will the Lord dilclaim his interest in his own ordinances, nor do his people lose right and interest in God and in his ordinances, when they take with their punishment, and do make their address to God for relief; Thy holy Temple have they defiled. 4. When God giveth over religious ordinances in the hands of profane men to be abused, no wonder if they that are are the cause of this, do suffer in their civil state also; no wonder the City suffer with the Temple: Jerusalem have they laid on heaps.

Ver. 2. The dead bodies of thy servants have they given to be meat unto the fowles of the heaven: the flesh of thy Saints unto the beasts of the earth.

3. Their blood have they shed like water round about Jerusalem, and there was none to bury them.

From the second part of the lamentation and complaint Learn, 1. Falling in battle before the enemies may prove that God hath a just cause against the party overcome, but cannot prove that the victors cause is good, presuppose both parties had appealed to God: for here the heathen do overcome, and the Lords servants and Saints are slain, and they who are left alive do complain of the victors, and take with their punishment at Gods hand, who doth follow his own quarrel as he pleaseth, and will not at men's pleasure sit down and decide appellations, when they call to him, or stand unto the time set down by men to him, to determine their controversy: O God, the heathen are come into thine inheritance, &c. The dead bodies of thy servants have they given to be meat to the fowles.

2. Heavy and fearful are the judgements temporal, which may come upon Gods people, when they have provoked God to wrath against them for their sins, even such as are here set down, to wit, overturning of the outward face of Religion, destruction of their lands, cities and estate, killing of them in abundance, and want of burial when they are dead. 3. As not by outward prosperity, so also not by outward calamities, is the love or hatred of God to be known; the same sort of outward dispensation may befall both. The dead bodies of thy servants they have given to be meat to the fowles of heaven. 4. No temporal wrath not calamities whatsoever can separate the Lords children from Gods love and estimation of them, nor untie the relations between God and them: for here, albeit their carcases fall, & be devoured with the fowls of the heaven and beasts of the earth, yet remaine they the Lords servants and Saints under these sufferings: The dead bodies of thy servants &c. the flesh of thy Saints.

5. The slaughter of the Lords people, and the scattering of such as escape of them may be so great, when his anger is kindled against them, that none may be found to bury the slain, but the dead may lie unburied; Their blood have they shed like water round about Jerusalem, and there was none to bury them.

6. Nothing is to be expected of God's enemies towards God's people when they fall in their hands, but savage cruelty and barbarous inhumanity, for which they are to answer unto God, to whom the complaint of the living and the cry of the blood of the slain doth call for vengeance, as the experience of the Lords people in this place doth teach.

Ver. 4. We are become a reproach to our neighbours: a scorn and derision to them that are round about us.

From the third part of the complaint and lamentation; Learn,

1. In the day of God's displeasure against his people, yea in the day of the trial of the faith and patience of his people, no wonder that such as should most pity our calamity, and be comfortable unto us, rejoice to see us in misery, yea and make our calamity a matter of reproach to us, a matter of scorn and derision of us; for here it is said, We are become a reproach to our neighbours, a scorn and derision to them that are round about us.

2. When God doth afflict his people, all their privileges, and the Religion which they profess, do become contemptible and ridiculous to the ungodly, who do not esteem either of God's ordinances or of his people, but when they are adorned with outward prosperity. The Lords people were feared and honoured by them that were about them, when God did fight for them, and countenanced them; but now they lament, We are become a reproach to our neighbours, a scorn and derision to them that are round about us.

3. To be mocked in misery, and specially of them by whom we should be comforted, is amongst the saddest passages of our affliction: Therefore here, is this part of their lamentation set down, after the formerly mentioned misery, as a load above a burden, and that which did imbitter their sorrow most of all, because it did reflect upon their Religion, their faith, their interest in God, as if all had been ridiculous.

Ver. 5. How long, LORD, wilt thou be angry, for ever? Shall thy jealousy burn like fire?
From the fourth part of the lamentation; Learn, 1. The Lord's displeasure and anger against his people, is more heavy to them then all the calamities which have lighted on them; How long wilt thou be angry? putteth the capstone on their prison-house. 2. Guilty consciences cannot but apprehend wrath, when their plagues are heavy, yea they cannot escape a conflict with the fear of everlasting wrath, when his hand doth lie long upon them; How long, Lord? Wilt thou be angry for ever? 3. When Gods people do fall from their matrimonial Covenant with God, and their heart and eyes do go a whoring after idols, no wonder the Lord be jealous, and his wrath for this be most hot, and be like to devour unto utter destruction; Shall thy jealousy burn like fire? 4. Whatsoever hath been our calamity, whatsoever have been the instruments of our misery, yea how great soever our provocation of God's anger hath been: it is wisdome, as to expound all the malice and cruelty of men to be the effects of God's anger and jealousy, and that his anger and jealousy is kinled by our sinnes: so to runne to God, and lament the whole matter before him, and deprecate his wrath, as the Church doth here; How long, Lord? Wilt thou be angry for ever?

Ver. 6. Pour out thy wrath upon the heathen that have not known thee, and upon the kingdoms have not called upon thy Name.

7. For they have devoured Jacob, and made waste his dwelling place.

In the latter part of the Psalm is their prayer; and first, for justice and vengeance on their enemies. Whence learn, 1. Albeit it be not lawful for us in our own quarrel to pray against our enemies, yet in the Churches quarrel, in the Lord's quarrel it is lawful to pray in general against the incorrigible and desperate enemies of God and his people, as here the Church is taught. 2. Albeit temporal judgements may overtake God's visible Church, when the open enemies of God's people and of his true worship are spared, yet at length the fulnesse of wrath is reserved for the ungodly, one and all: Pour out thy wrath upon the heathen that have not known thee. 3 Prayer to God, and invocation of his Name upon all occasions, as Gods honour.
honour and men's necessities and duties publick, private, and secret do call them to come before him, is a mark distinguishing God's people from the ungodly, whether professed or real heathens, and a mark of such as shall finde mercy distinguishing them from the object of God's wrath: Pour out thy wrath upon the Kingdomes that have not called on thy Name. 4. Unto the right worshipping of God the true knowledge of God is required: for how shall men call upon God in whom they believe not, whom they know not, or whom they know they care not? Therefore such as are strangers from God here, are described by this. They have not known thee, they have not called on thy Name.

5. The members of a visible Church may be scattered one from another, that they cannot in one place joyntly and professorly enjoy publick Ordinances; as here, Jacob is devoured, and his dwelling place laid waste. 6. The heaviest article in the duty of the ungodly is their being either accessory to, or active in the overthrow of God's people; Pour out thy wrath upon them; for they have devoured Jacob, and laid waste his dwelling place.

Ver. 8. O remember not against us former iniquities: let thy tender mercies speedily prevent us: for we are brought very low.

9. Help us, O God of our salvation, for the she glory of thy Name: and deliver us, and purge away our sinnes for thy Names sake.

10. Wherefore should the heathen say, Where is their God? let him be knowne among the heathen in our sight, by the revenging of the blood of thy servants which is shed.

11. Let the singing of the prisoner come before thee, according to the greatness of thy power: preserve thou those that are appointed to die.

Secondly, they pray for pardon of their sins, and delivery from the misery which their sins had procured; unto which Iterations sundry reasons are added for strengthening of the faith of the Church. Whenever. 1. The sense of sin maketh the afflicted to be patient, and submissive unto God without murmuration, and their their lamentation for their misery doth resolve in prayer, and in a prayer for remission of sin; O remember not against us former iniquities. 2. The only right way to remedy a miserable condition, is to sue for remission of sins, and for the renewed evidence of reconciliation: not before the Church here do ask any thing for their outward delivery, they pray, O remember not against us former iniquities. 3. A peoples long continuance in sin doth furnish ground of fear of the long continuing of begun wrath and judgement upon them, and therefore they pray for the forgetting of their sin, that the quarrel being the judgement may be removed; O remember not against us our former iniquities. 4. When wrath and justice are like to consume us, and quickly make an end of us, a refuge is open to us in Gods tender mercies, who cannot destroy utterly a sinner fleeing to his mercy; Let thy tender mercies speedily prevent us, for we are brought very low. 5. When the Lords people are brought low, let them not look for a lifting up or reliefe, except from God only, therefore say they, here, Help us, O Lord. 6. Such as have laid hold on God for salvation promised in the Covenant, may also look for particular deliveries out of particular troubles, as appendices of the main benefit of salvation; Therefore, Help us, O God of our salvation, say they. 7. When men do ask any thing, the granting whereof may glorify God, they may confidently expect to have it; and in special, when God may be so glorified, as his people may also be preserved and comforted: Help us (say they) for the glory of thy Name, and deliver us. 8. As the conscience of sin useth to step in oftner between us and mercy, so must we call oftener for remission of sins; for earnest affection can double and treble the same Petition without babbling: Deliver us, and purge away our sins. 9. It is the glory of the Lord to forget sin, and when remission of sins is prayed for according to Gods promise, the Lords glory is engaged for the helping of faith to obtain; Purge away our sin for thy Names sake. 10. Idolaters are ready to insult over Gods people and their religion, and over God also, when the Church is afflicted, and this dishonour of God true Saints cannot endure; Wherefore should the heathen say, Where is their God? 11. Howsoever the Lord will punish his own people for their sins in the sight of the heathen, yet will he not suffer the heathen long to insult over his people, or over the true religion; but by frowning kindnesse to his people, will have the heathen to know that he is their God, who will answer for himself, and for his people, and their religion also; Wherefore fore should the heathen say, Where is their God? 12. As it doth belong to Gods honour to deliver his people in their distress, so also to punish the persecutors of his Church and blasphemers of his Name; Let him be known among the heathen in our fight, by avenging the blood of thy servants. 13. It is a comfort and encouragement of living Saints, to see God avenge the blood of dead Saints slain by their enemies; Let him be known in our fight, by avenging the blood of thy servants. 14. As it is no wonder to see griefe and sighing to be the cheer of Gods people when the Lord hath scattered them, and they are captive prisoners under their oppressors; so may we be sure their tears and sighing shall not be misregarded by God: Let the sighing of the prisoner come before thee. 15. Albeit it seem impossible to deliver Gods people, when they are as condemned prisoners, destinated by their enemies unto destruction, yet faith feeth delivery very possible to Gods omnipotency: According to the greatness of thy power, preserve thou those that are appointed to die.

Ver. 12. And render unto our neighbours seven-fold into their bosom, their reproach wherewith they have reproached thee, O Lord.

13. So we thy people, and fleep of thy pasture, will give thee thanks for ever: we will shew forth thy praise to all generations.

In the last place, they pray for vengeance on their wicked neighbours, who mocked them and their Religion in the time of their calamity: and thus they close their prayer with a promise to praise God for the granting of their petitions. Whence learn,

1. Such as rejoice at the calamity of Gods people, and mock them in their misery, especially neighbours who should be most comfortable, as they are in some respect more guilty then even oppressors, so shall they be most severely plagued of God for their cruelty: Render unto our neighbours seven-fold into their bosom their reproach. 2. The mocking of Gods people in their misery, especially for their Religion, is the mocking of God, and reproaching of him whose servants they are; Render them the reproach, wherewith they have reproached thee, O Lord. 3. When God taketh vengeance on the enemies of the Church, then is it seen what interest God hath in that despised company: for the Church here is confident, that then their relations unto God, and Gods
God's care of them, shall be evident; so we thy people and sheep of thy pasture shall give thee thanks: that is, we shall come out of distress, and gather our selves together, and profess ourselves to be thy people, and chosen flock, and shall praise thee. 4. The troubles of the Lords people, and their mourning, are but temporal, and of short endurance; but their deliverance and comfort, when their troubles are ended, is everlasting, and no lesse then everlasting duration can suffice them to praise God and thank him for his kindnesse; so we thy people shall give thee thanks for ever. 5. As the Lords work for his distressed people calleth for thanks at their hands, so also doth it call for praise at their hands, who shall hear of it; and they whose duty it is to give thanks, ought also according to their power, to stirre up others to praise God with themselves, and to stirre up also the posterity in all succeeding ages, as the Church here promiseth: We will shew forth thy praise to all generations.

PSAL. LXXX.

To the chief Musician upon Shoshannim Eduth. A Psalm of Alaph.

This Psalm given to the Church to be made use of, is of the like sad subject with the former, and may be applied to the time of carrying away the ten tribes out of the holy land, while Judah was yet in possession of it, and the Temple was yet standing, and the Lord was dwelling between the Cherubims in the Sanctuary, where the Ark and Mercy-seat was yet remaining; or to the time of the begun desolation of the land by Nebuchadnezzar, or to any other desolation which did threaten their final rooting out. The summe of the Psalm is a lamenting of the miserable condition of the Israelites, and an earnest entreaty of the Lord to give them repentance and a delivery. In the first place, the Church maketh her address to God, and propoundeth the main Petition, ver. 1, 2, 3. In the second place, they lament their misery, and repeat the same Petition; ver. 4, 5, 6, 7. In the third place, they call to minde the Lords care to plant his people in the land as a vine-tree, and do lament the doleful change of their happy condition into that of their present misery, ver. 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13. In the fourth place, they pray for for God's mercy and pity toward his desolate people, ver. 14, 15, 16. In the last place, they pray for the standing of the tribe of Judah, and that for Christ's cause, who was to take his humane nature of this tribe; and do close the Psalm with repeating the third time their special Petition for repentance and delivery to be granted unto them, ver. 17, 18, 19.

Ver. 1. Give ear, O Shepherd of Israel, thou that leadest Joseph like a flock, thou that dwellest between the Cherubims, shine forth.

Many sweet fruits hath the Lord drawn forth from the bitter afflictions of his people, and this Psalm amongst the rest; where- in first, the Church beggeth from God audience, for the relations between God and them, ver. 1. and then prayeth for salvation, ver. 2. and to this end doth make request for the gracious gift of Repentance to his people, that they might be saved, ver. 3.

From the first verse; Learn, 1. When our heart is full of grief, or of any holy affection, which we desire to lay forth before the Lord, we may call for, and expect audience at the Lord's hands, as the Church doth here, saying to the Lord, Give ear. 2. He that would speak to God in the day of calamity, had need to fasten faith on God, and should go about it, how grievous ever his rod seem, as here the Church is taught by the Psalmist to do. 3. Albeit faith will finde small strength from any thing in the suppliant, yet on God's part it cannot misse solid ground to fixe upon, according to the tenour of the Covenant of grace, such as is Christ's Prophetical and Kingly office, whereby the Lord taketh on him to lead and feed his people; to govern and protect them, as a Shepherd doth his flock: as here the Church doth, O Shepherd of Israel. This is one consideration. Another is, the constant experiment and proof given of his actual exercising of this office. Thou that leadest Joseph as a flock: and unto the former they joyn the free offer of grace to all that do seek for mercy from God through the Mediator Christ; Thou that dwellest between the Cherubims. 4. Albeit sin doth overcloud the manifesting of Gods favour and loving kindeste towards his people, yet the prayer of faith upon the grounds of the Covenant may expect the clearing up of his countenance again: O shepherd of Israel, shine forth.

Ver. 2.
Ver. 2. Before Ephraim, and Benjamin, and Manasseh, stirre up thy strength, and come and save us.

For understanding of the second verse, we must remember, that when the Ark of the Covenant rested, or marched in the wilderness, these three Tribes, Ephraim, Benjamin, and Manasseh, were in the reareward of the host of Israel, or on the West side thereof, as is set down, Numb. 2. 18, 19, &c. when the host marched, and the Ark set forward, Moses said to the Lord, Rise up, Lord, and let thine enemies be scattered; and let them that hate thee, flee before thee: answerable to this, doth the sixty eight Psalm begin, when the Ark removed and was carried up to mount Sion, now the people of God being in distress here, do call those days to remembrance, and do request the Lord, that as he had in the eye sight of those three tribes here mentioned, manifested himself many a time to be the leader and defender of his people: so he would now also in this their lamentable condition stirre up himselfe for their reliefe and safety. Whence learne,

1. The remembrance of the Lords humbling himselfe to be so familiar with his people, and how sweet and glorious communication his people have had with him, may and should encourage believers in him to seek and expect new experience of the like mercy in their need, as here the Israelites do pray for new proof of that favour, which their ancestors did finde sometime; Before Ephraim, Benjamin, and Manasseh stirre up thy strength, and come and save us. 2. The posterity of those who have been in fellowship with God, should pray for themselves, and be prayed for by the Church, that they may have room in the Lords host, and have God their leader, as their godly fathers had before them; Before Ephraim, Benjamin, and Manasseh stirre up thy strength.

Ver. 3. Turn us again, O God: and cause thy face to shine, and we shall be saved.

This is the special Petition most insisted upon, that God by giving of Repentance would reclaim his people from their apostasy, and grant the evidence of his former favour unto them, and so deliver and save them. Whence learne, 1. As the apostasy of Gods people from God, is the fountain of all their calamity: so their repentance and returning unto God, is the first step unto their their relief, and delivery from procured misery of captivity, or any other calamity, as the prayer here importeth: Turn us again, O Lord. 2. Conversion of people from their sin unto God, and leading of them back from the misery drawne on by sin, is the work of God, which no man can work of himself, or in himself, or in others, till God begin and enable them to return, and lead them on in their turning; Therefore saith the Psalmist, Turn us again, O Lord: thus they say as unable to turn again of themselves. 3. When a people or person do turn unto God, repenting their sin or back-fiding from him, they may expect the Lord shall shew unto them evidences of his reconciliation and favour toward them: Turn us again, and cause thy face to shine upon us. 4. It is to Gods children very salvation to be in favour with God, and to be assured of reconciliation with him: Turn us again, cause thy face to shine, and so shall we be saved.

Ver. 4. O LORD God of hosts, how long wilt thou be angry against the prayer of thy people:

5. Thou feedest them with the bread of tears: and givest them tears to drink in great measure.

6. Thou makest us a strife unto our neighbours: and our enemies laugh among themselves.

7. Turn us again, O God of hosts, and cause thy face to shine, and we shall be saved.

In the second place, the Church lamenteth the Lords wrath, manifested first, in answering their prayers with indignation, ver. 4. Secondly, by increasing of their woful misery without consolation, ver. 5. And thirdly, by making them the matter of their enemies strife among themselves (which of them should should have most Hebrewes to be their slaves,) and the object of their enemies sport, when they had parted the prey among them, ver. 6. After which he repeareth the former prayer for Repentance, and for delivery, ver. 7.

From the first part of their complaint and lamentation, set down, ver. 4. Learne, 1. The people of God may in their affliction put up prayers to God, which he will not accept, to wit, prayers for removing of judgement, when they have not repented the sins which drew on the judgement; yea they may pray long, and be instant in such prayers, and not receive a comfortable ble answer; yea they may finde their prayers answered with evidencing of God's displeasing such prayers; How long wilt thou be angry against the prayers of thy people? 2. When God doth not answer the prayers of his people in their affliction, the afflicted must not cease to pray on still, neither may the truly godly among them cease to deal with God for his afflicted people, joyned in external Covenant with them, but must continue and be still instant with God, as here they do; For how long wilt thou be angry against the prayers of thy people? is a part of their prayer, notwithstanding that God seemeth angry at their prayers. 3. As God's supremacy over all the hosts of the creatures maketh his wrath more terrible to the supplicant, so should it make the suppliant more instant in prayer, and more loath to take a refuall to his supplication, as here it doth; O Lord God of hosts, how long wilt thou be angry against the prayers of thy people? 4. We are not always to look after a present answer to our prayers, but must wait on so long as God pleaseth not to answer: yea it is possible, that after a believer hath begun to humble himselfe, God may send messenger after messenger of more and more appearance of wrath; but we must resolve, as to wrestle with all difficulties, so also with the sense of God's anger against us, yea, and that against our prayers: How long wilt thou be angry against the prayers of thy people?

From the second part of the lamentation, ver. 5. Lerne,
1. When Gods people will not mourne for sinne in time, as penitents, no wonder he drive them to mourne for the fruit of their sinne in sad affliction: Thou feedest them with the bread of teares. 2. We are more sensible of the evill of trouble, then of the evill of sinne; the teares of Repentance are very rare, and soon dried up, but the teares of sorrow for affliction do easily flow, as affliction increaseth or continueth, and that in Gods wise dispensation, that worldly sorrow for afflictions, may drive us to godly sorrow for offending of God; Thou feedest them with the bread of teares. 3. The comfort of the creatures, yea of necessary food, may be overcome and swallowed up by trouble and worldly sorrow, and that in Gods wise dispensation, that men may learn to hunger and thirst for heavenly and strong consolation: as it befell this people, who were taken up so with weeping, as they forgot their ordinary meales, and when they did eat and drink, did drench their food with teares; Thou feedest them with the bread of teares, and givest them teares to drink in great measure.

From
From the third part of their lamentation, ver. 6. Learn, 1. Ardency of affection maketh the repetition of the same prayer not to be babling. Turn us again, O God, is now the second time propounded. 2. The way to remedy all the evill both of sin and punishment lying upon Gods people, is to repent their sins, and to seek reconciliation with God; if his people would repent, then would not the Lord be angry with their prayers; then affliction should either be removed, or made light to them: for to remedy all the lamented evils, they pray, Turn us again, O God. 3. A praying people can never be so dark and desperate, but looking to Gods power shall give light and hope of relief; Turn us again, O God of hosts, faith be, nothing is too hard for him to do. 4. Gods people cannot dispense with the want of his manifested good will to them; Turn us and cause thy face to shine upon us, is their fixed Petition. 5. Salvation may be certainly expected in Gods orders; and if we labour to be sure of our turning to God, and living in the sense of communion with him, we need not make question of salvation; for that shall follow intallibly on the former two: Turn us again, O God of hosts, and cause thy face to shine upon us, so shall we be saved. The last is not put up by way of prayer here, but promised to themselves, and put out of question, that it shall follow; Turn us, so shall we be saved, say they.

Ver. 8.
Ver. 8. Thou hast brought a Vine out of Egypt: thou hast cast out the heathen, and planted it.
9. Thou preparedst room before-hand: and didst cause it to take deep root, and it filled the land.
10. The hills were covered with the shadow of it, and the boughes thereof were like the goodly Cedars.

II. She sent out her boughes unto the sea: and her branches unto the river.

In the third place, they renew their Lamentation, by comparing the sometime blessed condition of the Church of Israel with the present miserable estate they are now in. In former times Israel was as a fruitful vineyard, v.8,9,10,11. but now the Lords protection is removed, and they are made a prey to every beastly enemy, ver. 12, 13. Whence learn, 1. Adversity bringeth to minde neglected prosperity in time past, and the distresse of a Church deprived of former favours putteth a price upon, and giveth luftre unto abused mercies looked back upon: as here, the calamity of the ten tribes, or of the whole twelve tribes cast out of their land, doth make their delivery out of Egypt, their planting in Canaan, and the mercies which they felt in that land to appear very glorious; and setteth up that their sometime condition in the similitude of a fruitful vineyard.

2. There is no fitter similitude then of a vine-tree and of a vineyard, to represent the weakness of Gods Church and people, and Gods care of them, to have fruits of faith and obedience from them: therefore here and elsewhere is this comparison made use of. 3. It serveth much to help the faith of Gods people in their calamity, to call to minde Gods begun work among them, and in them, and for them: for when his people do claim to wondred kindness, the Lord is ready to make his mercy run in the former channel. This is the ground of the Churches reasoning here, in her supplication to God.

4. It is not enough lightly to mention a course of kindness shewn to us of God, but every part and pas sage of it is worthy to be marked and prized highly; as here, 1. Israel's bringing out of Egypt is observed, and compared to the bringing of a noble plant out of a farre countrey in the Lords own hand; Thou hast brought a vine out of Egypt. 2. The casting out of the Canaanites, is compared to the purging of the ground from stones, and thornes, and blocks in comparison of Israel, to be planted there; Thou hast cast out the heathen, and planted it. 3. They observe the benefit of enlarging their dwelling for commodious habitation: Thou preparest it room for it. 4. And their settling in the land; Thou causedst it to take deep root. 5. And their multiplying in it; It filled the land. 6. And their riches, and power, and glory in the land, comparable to a wood of Cedars; The hills were covered with the shadow of it, and the boughs thereof were like the goodly Cedars. 7. And the spreading of their authority and government, according to the bounds set to their promised possession, Gen. 15. 18. from the Mediterranean sea westward, to the river Euphrates eastward; She sent out her boughs to the sea, and her branches to the river. Thus a well ordered Church is like a pleasant and fruitful vineyard.

Ver. 12. Why hast thou then broken down her hedges: so that all they which passe by the way do pluck her?

13. The boar out out of the wood doth waste it: and the wilde beast of the field doth devour it.

After calling to minde this glorious condition they were in, they in a weeping and lamentable manner do compare their present misery with what happiness once they had, and do lay it forth before the pitiful eyes of the Lord. Whence learn, 1. As present felt misery commendeth prosperity past, so past prosperity doth augment present misery, when the two conditions are compared, as in this comparison is held forth. 2. The most glorious and best planted Church may for its unfruitfulness and provocation of God by its ill fruits, be plucked up again, and the hedge of discipline, the hedge of civil government, and the hedge of God's protection may all be removed suddenly from it, as here we see; Why hast thou broken down the hedges? 3. It is a wonderful and astonishing judgement, to see the Lord casting down the work of Reformation once begun by him, and plucking up the plantation of his Church once made by him; and yet the provocation of a wicked generation may procure this evil, which hardly can be believed till it come; and even then it is wonderful, and should send men unto God, to make them see rightly the causes thereof, as this interrogation importeth; Why hast thou broken down her hedges? 4. When God removeth ve, his hedges from about his people, for their provocation of him; then any body that pleaseth may make a prey of them; so that all they who passe by the way doplick her. 5. If God remove the hedge of his protection from about his people, no wonder they fall into the hands of the most savage, cruel and beastly sort of men, as did befall Israel: The boar out of the wood, doth waste it, and the wilde beast out of the field doth devour it. 6. When the Lords Church is in the worst condition, she is not so wasted and destroyed, but a remnant is left to present by prayer her condition unto God, to deal with him for her restauration, as the case in hand here and elsewhere doth shew.

Ver. 14. Return we beseech thee, O God of hosts: Look down from heaven, and behold, and visit this Vine.

15. And the Vineyard which thy right hand hath planted: and the branch that thou madest strong for thy self:

16. It is burnt with fire, it is cut down: they perish at the rebuke of thy countenance.

In the fourth place, they pray that God who was departed from them, would return and have compassion on the desolate condition of his Church: Whence learn; 1. Although the Lord seem to depart from his Church, yet he is within cry, and may be recalled by prayer, and may by his power set all right again: Return, we beseech thee, O God of hosts. 2. Although no hope of help or possibility of relief can be seen on earth, yet there is hope of help from heaven; Look down from heaven. 3. In the least degree of Gods respect and kindness to a desolate Church, begun to be manifested after pouring out judgements on it, faith will read hope, of relief and restauration of it; Behold and visit this Vine: for to come and see, is all to them which they crave. 4. The labour and care which God hath bestowed on his Church for setting up, and setting off it in any place, may give hope to those who pray for it; that albeit the Lord afflict is heavily, yet he will not lose his labour’s Visit this Vine, and the Vineyard which thy right hand hath planted. 5. There was a branch to come of the stock of Israel, for whose cause the Nation of the Israelites could not be utterly forsaken and destroyed, and this was the Messiah, Christ Jesus (promised to come of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Judah, David,) of whose coming, because God had a special care that the stock should be underprop'd and upheld and made strong till this branch came forth, the Church of Israel might be confident not to be utterly cast off, and therefore in their prayer they make mention of him; Visit the Vineyard and the Branch (to wit, of the house of David,) that thou madest strong for thy self. In the Hebrew, it is the Son whom thou madest strong, even Christ, who is the true Sonne of God, the true Vine-tree, John 15.1, whereby the Fathers husbandry is in a special way employed. 6. The visible Church or people of God by Covenant, at some time may be so farre from a glorious and flourishing condition of prosperity, that on the contrary in outward appearance she may be almost destroyed, and like to perish utterly, as here of the Lords Vineyard, or the whole visible Church we read, It is burnt with fire, it is cut down: he meaneth Gods people; They perish (faith the Psalmist,) at the rebuke of thy countenance. 7. We are to look, not so much to instruments of the Churches defolation, as to the peoples sinnes procuring it, and to Gods wrath causing it; They perish at the rebuke of thy countenance.

Ver. 17. Let thy hand be upon the man of thy right hand: upon the Sonne of man, whom thou madest strong for thy self.

18. So will not we go back from thee: quicken us, and we will call upon thy Name. 19. Turn us again, O LORD God of hostes, cause thy face to shine, and we shall be saved.

In the last place, they put up three requests. In the first, they insist upon that point of their prayer, v. 15, which concerneth the Branch of the Vineyard of Israel, the promised Messiah, Christ the Redeemer: and do make request over again, that the stock and lineage of David, whereof Christ was to come, might be kept to the fore, till he should assume humane nature and be come the Sonne of man, according to the solid grounds which God had laid down to bring this promise to passe: For the substance of the prayer is this: Seeing thou hast made one branch of this Vine, which thou broughtest out of Egypt, strong Strong for thy self, or for thy own purpose, namely, the man of thy right hand, the Sonne of man, the promised Messiahs, God to be incarnate: Let thy hand or power be employed for bringing this to passe, that he who is at thy right hand, thy equal, may be made man, the man of thy right hand, the Sonne of man: So will not we go back from thee; that is, by him we thy redeemed shall be preserved from apostasie and separation from thee. In the second request, they pray for the pouring forth of the Spirit upon his dead people, that having spiritual life communicated unto them, they may worship God in spirit and truth: Quicken us, and we will call upon thy Name, say they. In the third request, they repeat the third time that prayed for repentance and reconciliation, to be manifested to his people.

From the first request, ver. 17. Learn, 1. The refuge, rest, consolation and confidence of a distressed Church or person is Christ: and toward him must the afflicted cast their eye for relief, as here the Church in her deepest desolation doth.

2. Christ is always at the right hand of the Father, in regard of power and glory; and it is for him no robbery to be equal with God the Father, Phil. 2. 16. and his humane nature assumed doth not degrade him from the glory which he had with the Father before the world began, John 17. 5. He is the man of God's right hand, in a singular manner. 3. Christ and his Kingdom are established before God for ever, for bringing to passe the purpose and service of God in the Redemption of his elect; He is the man whom the Father hath made strong for himself: for his humane nature is united with his divine nature in one person; his incarnation was made sure by the eternal and immutable decree of the Covenant of Redemption, wherein the elect were given over to Christ, and grace was granted and given to them in Christ Jesus before the world began, 2 Tim. 1. 9. And as his incarnation was made sure by decree, so also made sure by many times repeated Promises in the Law and Prophets, beginning at Gen. 3. 15. where it is promised, that the seed of the woman should tread down the head of the serpent; all along the Scripture unto, Malachi 3. 1. where it is revealed, that Christ's messenger, to wit, John Baptist in the power of Elias should come before him: and straightway, after he himself should shew himself, as did come to passe; This is the Sonne of man (saith he,) whom thou hast made strong for thy self:

4. To bring this promise to effect and accomplishment, the Almighty mightv power of God shall set on work: and never drew back from operation, till his purpose was brought to pass; for after the time that the man Abraham was designed, of whose seed he was to take flesh, the Scripture sheweth what care the Lord had of Isaac and Jacob, and the Patriarchs in Egypt: and about the bringing of their posterity out of it to Canaan, till David himself was designed for his flock: and when the ten tribes were scattered abroad, he preserved Judah to the fore: and when that tribe also was thrust out into captivity, he brought it back again; and preserved David's race, and the tribe of Judah under civil Government till Christ came; and thus the prayer here propounded did make request for: Let thy hand be upon the man of thy right hand. 5. Neither the Church, nor any member thereof needeth any more security for their stability and perpetuation, but Christ: for now when the Vineyard is burnt, and the visible Church defaced, the remnant are content to rest satisfied with this, which also they take for granted, and do subscribe unto it; Let thy hand be upon the man of thy right hand; upon the Sonne of man, whom thou hast made strong for thy self. 6. The confanguinity of Christ with the believer, and his humiliation in his humane nature, are strong supporters of the faith and comfort of his people that do seek salvation through him; therefore do the faithful here fixe themselves on this, that as he is God's Sonne, so he is a branch of their Vineyard also; that as he is at the right hand of the Father as God, so he is the man of his right hand also; the Son of man, or of Adam, partaker of flesh and blood with us, of the same stock that we are of, in all things like to us, except sin: for the Son of man is the Aile, whereby Christ filled himself in his humiliation. 7. The perpetuity of the Church, and the perseverance of the Saints, is founded upon the sufficiency of Christ: and the unfeigned believer may assure himself, as of the continuance of the Church, so of his own perseverance and constant communion with God through him: Let thy hand be upon the man of thy right hand, &c. so will not we go back from thee.

From the second request, v. 18. Learn, 1 As there is a death of alienation from the life of God in the unregenerate, and a death of disability, discomfort and discouragement found in the regenerate in Scripture: so there is a quickening which giveth spiritual life to those that are dead in their sinnes and trespasses; and a quickening which giveth strength and comfort to the the weak, disconsolate and discouraged souls of God's children: for the first sort of quickening every regenerate man should pray in behalf of all the elect in the visible Church, who are not yet converted; and for quickening in other respects they should pray in behalf of themselves and other afflicted spirits of the godly, as here the believers do pray; Quicken us. 2. The honouring of God in spiritual worship should be the end of our petitions which we do make for any good to our selves; Quicken us, and we shall call upon thy Name. 3. Albeit the work of calling on God's Name, and worshipping of God in Spirit and truth, be the work of the regenerate man; yet the spiritual life, and the motion or stirring up of the regenerate man unto this work, the enabling of the man unto it, and in it, and the cheering up of his heart to do it affectionately, is the work of the Lord: for these doth the P. himself here distinguish; first, he lets down God's part: Quicken thou us; and then our part: And we shall call upon thy Name.

From the third request, ver. 19. repeated now the third time; Learn, 1. In what respects soever the Church of the Jewish Nation may seem to be alienated from God, yet there is hope of their repentance and returning and reconciliation unto God; for there is a petition of the Lords enduring standing here, thrice repeated in their favour to be granted in due time by God, to whom nothing is hard; and here in this third repetition of this prayer, the Name of God Jehovah, whereby he told Israel that he would be known to them to be the performer of promises, is added expressly; Turn us again, O Jehovah, God of hosts. 2. Albeit we our selves do beed the mist and clouds, which do hide from us the shining of God's favour towards us, and we do build the partition walls, we do raise up mountains of transgressions, which separate between God and us; yet it is the Lord himself only, who of his own free grace, and by his own power doth dissolve these clouds, and remove these impediments out of his own way towards us; Turn us again, and cause thy face to shine. 3. So oft as we are burdened with the same pressure, and straitened with the same necessity, as oft we may and should have recourse to God for relief by prayer: for this state hath God put in faiths hand, to help the believer in every step of his journey, till he come home to the Lord, and be past all peril; Turn us again, cause thy face to shine. 4. As the sight of our distance from God, and sense of his displeasure, and fear of perdition, do serve to be a spurre to our prayer: so desire of reconciliation,

desire and purpose of repenting, and hope of salvation to serve to encourage us to persevere in prayer, till we have what we ask perfected to us: Turn us again, cause thy face to shine, so shall we be saved.

PSAL. LXXXI.

To the chief Musician upon Gittith.

A Psalm of Asaph.

This Psalm was appointed to be sung in their solemn feasts, new moons, and feast of tabernacles, in special for a testimony of God's gracious and bountiful dealing with his people on the one hand, and of their provocation of God on the other hand, moving him to change his dispensation toward them, and to withhold many benefits from them, which otherways they might have had, if they had not rejected God's counsel, and had chosen their own ways: that by this Psalm his people might learn to be wiser.

The parts of the Psalm are three. The first is a Preface, wherein there is a mutual stirring up of the Church-members, to keep the solemn feasts, and blowing of trumpets, ver. 1, 2, 3: and a reason of this mutual exhortation, taken from God's institution of this ordinance when he brought his people out of Egypt from the service of strangers, ver. 4, 5.

In the second part is set down, how God delivered them from bondage in Egypt, and from troubles in their journey, ver. 6, 7: and how reasonable commands the Lord did give unto them: which commands are all summed up in this one: That God should be their God alone, ver. 8, 9, 10.

In the third part is set down: First, how they rejected God and his counsel, ver. 11. Next, how therefore they were plagued, by being given over to their own lusts, ver. 12. Thirdly, how they deprived themselves of God's benefits, which by following God's counsel, they might have enjoyed, ver. 13, 14, 15.
Ver. 1. Sing aloud unto God our strength: make a joyful noise unto the God of Jacob.

2. Take a Psalm, and bring hither the timbrel: the pleasant harp with the psaltery.

3. Blow up the trumpet in the new Moon; in the time appointed on our solemn feast-day.

From their mutual stirring up of one another to rejoice in God, commanded here by the Psalmist in the Lords Name; Learn, 1. That whatsoever may be our own private condition, it is our duty ever, and in all things to give glory to God to rejoice in him, to profess and avow his Name; Sing aloud unto God.

2. The Lords people have the fulfilling, supplying and supporting of their emptiness, wants and weakness in God, whose sufficiency they ought to make use of, and rejoice therein; Sing unto God our strength.

3. It is the Covenant of grace, whereby God becometh our God, which doth intitle us, and give us interest in, and right unto his all-sufficiency, which we should entertain joyfully in our communion with God, praising him, and thanking him for it, and delighting in his presence, because of it; Make a joyful noise unto the God of Jacob; for God was Jacobs God, because God was by Covenant Abraham’s, and his childrens God, whose children also we are, who are Christs, Gal. 3. 29.

From the use and variety of musical instruments called for.

Ver. 2, 3. Learn, 1. Albeit the external melody of musical instruments in the Lords publike worship, with the rest of the pedagogie, and shadowing dark figures of the Ceremonial Law be abolished now when the Lord, the Sune of righteousness, is come; yet the moral duties represented by them are full to be acknowledged and followed by us, to wit, that the praises of the Lord are unexpressible by us, and that we are insufficient of our selves to let forth the same, that we have matter of unspeakable joy in God our Redeemer, and should stir up all the powers of our soul, to this part of his spiritual service, for this did those musical instruments teach: Take a Psalm, and bring hither the timbrel, the pleasant harp with the Psaltery.

2. We ought to acknowledge the stately magnificence of our exalted Lord, and our dulness and slowness to praise him: and what need we had to be stirred up, and to stirre up one another to this duty: for this was pointed at in the use of the trumpets: Blow up the trumpet. 3. We ought to acknowledge that we are subject to various changes, and alteration of conditions in this life, and that all these changes are sanctified unto the Lords people, and that new confections may be expected from God, one after another, to season the darkness and nights of our affliction: and we should conceive our selves anew from time to time to God, and give him the first part and flower of our time; yea, should study, that all our time, in all changes whatsoever may be spent in his service: for thus much did the solemnities in their new Moones hold forth; Blow up the Trumpet in the new Moon. 4. We ought to acknowledge that we are strangers here in the world, and we have no certain dwelling-place, but that we are in our sojourning depending upon Gods provision for us, and protection of us, expecting the time when we shall appear before him, and shall be put in possession of those mansion-places prepared for us, wherein we shall have fulness of joy; and God constantly present with us, and that in the mean time we should study to rejoice in the riches of the Lords goodness to us in our Redeemer; for this in substance was held forth in those solemn feasts, and in special, in the feast of Tabernacles: Blow the Trumpet in the time appointed, on our solemn feast-day.

Ver. 4. For this was a Statute for Israel: and a law of the God of Jacob.

5. This be ordained in Joseph, for a testimony, when he went out through the land of Egypt: where I heard a language, that I understood not.

The Church giveth two reasons of the exhortation, cheerfully to glorifie God in the observation of his appointed ordinances, and solemn convocations: One is, because God did institute and command this solemn rejoicing in him, ver. 4. The other is, because he appointed it after the bestowing on them of a great deliverance out of Egypt from their bondage under strangers, and people of an uncouth language, ver. 5. From the first reason: Learn, 1. It is a sufficient motive for observation of any religious action, that God hath ordained it: and no lesse authority then divine can warrant a man in the matters of Religion: therefore therefore it is said here, For this was a statute for Israel, and a law of the God of Jacob. As none may appoint acts of religious worship, but God: so also none may alter nor abrogate them, except God himself only: For they are statutes and laws of the God of Jacob. 2. The Ordinances of Religion appointed of God, as they are witnesses of his will, how he shall be served, and witnesses of his good will toward us, and care of us to have us saved: so also are they witnesses of our faith and obedience, to testify for us or against us, as we make use of them; This he ordained in Joseph for a testimony. 3. The greatnesse of the work of Redemption, the powerful manner of bringing it to passe, and the misery wherein we were before we were delivered, should augment our joy and thankfulness to God, and strengthen our tie to his worship and service, as the force of the Churches reasoning here doth teach: for the Lord went through the Egyptians, and over their belly as a mighty Conqueror, when he redeemed his people and delivered them from the servitude of a people of a strange language, therefore they were bound joyfully to keep his solemn Ordinances; He ordained this for a testimony (faith the Church) when he went through the land of Egypt, where I heard a language, which I understood not.

Ver. 6 I removed his shoulder from the burden: his hands were delivered from the pots.

7. Thou callest me in trouble, and I delivered thee; I answered thee in the secret place of thunder, I proved thee at the waters of Ataribab. Selab.

In the second part, the Lord speaketh, and putteth his people in mind of his kindness to them in their delivery from Egypt, ver. 6, and of his wise care of them in the wilderness, ver. 7. And how he craved nothing of them, but that they should keep close to him, and not go after idols, ver. 8, 9. First, because he is God all sufficient. Next, because he had entered in Covenant to be their God. Thirdly, because he had given proof what he could do for them by their delivery out of Egypt. And lastly, because he was ready to make them fully blessed upon their willingness to receive his offered goodness, ver. 10. And then he shewes what an evil meeting they gave him.

From the renewing the memory, of their delivery, out of Egypt,
For right taking up of the benefit of our Redemption, whether spiritual or bodily, the heaviness of our yoke and burdens of our slavery must be called to mind: I removed his shoulder from the burden, and his hands were delivered from the pot: for Israel were as pioneers and scullions in Egypt, basely employed in carrying straw and mortar to make brick, as most abject slaves: and this resembleth the condition we are in by nature; under the slavery and burden of sin and misery; 2. God only is the Redeemer of men from whatsoever evil conditions, no instruments which God doth use, must intercept his glory: none can ease our burden nor cleanse our hands, but God only: I (faith the Lord) removed his shoulder from the burden, and hands from the pots.

From the Lords wise care of them, when they were come out of Egypt, ver. 7. Learn, 1. After delivery of us out of the state of misery, other particular troublesome passages may meet us, as did meet Israel at the red sea, when they came out of Egypt, and we may fall into new troubles for a little, as they did. 2. God who delivereth us from the state of misery, must also deliver us from particular miserable cases, or miserable conditions; yet, and being called upon by us in our misery, he will deliver us as he did Israel; Thou callest in trouble, and I delivered thee. 3. It is Gods wise disposing, that new trouble should bring to minde our former delivery, and our deliverer, and should press us to pray to God, and make way for a new experience of delivery, as here we see. 4. The more the Lord doth manifest himself from heaven for us, and against our enemies, the greater is our obligation, as Israel's obligation was augmented, when at their prayer in the red sea, the Lord by thunder out of the black cloud against the Egyptians following them, did declare himself for Israel: I answered thee in the secret place of thunder. 5. It is an evidence of the Lords care of his people to put them to the trial of their faith and sincerity of affection to God, that so they may either hide their former profession and opinion of themselves solid and upright, or finding it otherwise may be humbled and repent, and become more sincere; therefore is the trial of Israel after their coming out of the red sea numbered among the evidences of Gods care of them; I proved thee in the waters of Merribah. 6. Calling to minde our misbelief made manifest unto us in the day of our trial, should make us more humble and wary to depart from God thereafter; for this is the fellow, which Israel striving with God at the waters
We have heard of God's gracious dealing with Israel, in the point of doing for them; Now the Lord declareth, what thankfulness he required of them, and how reasonable and equitable his demands were: unto the consideration whereof he wakened them up, ver. 8. Summeth up all in the first command of the moral Law, ver. 9. Giveth reasons to move them to this, ver. 10.

From his awaking them to hear, ver. 8. Learn, 1. When the Lord doth speak, whether for conviction of duty to be done, or duty not discharged, there needeth no other witness beside himself, to convince the conscience, his speech is so clear, so full of truth and authority: Hear, and I will testify unto thee. 2. When the Lord requireth his people to be a willing people, and nothing can be more forcible to make us willing and obedient to God, then to understand that God is willing to teach, direct and bless us; Hear, O Israel, if thou wilt, hearken unto me. 4. The Lord requireth his people to be a willing people, and nothing can be more forcible to make us willing and obedient to God, then to understand that God is willing to teach, direct and bless us; Hear, O Israel, if thou wilt, or shalt hearken unto me.
th first command: for as God is feared, delighted in, submitted unto, and made our God in effect: so are all the Commandments kept: There shall be no strange God in thee. 2. As soundness in Religion, and cleaving close to our only one God, (as he hath revealed himself to be the Father, Sonne, and Holy Ghost, of whom, and through whom, and for whom are all things) is the fountain of all obedience, and keeping communion with God: so the corrupting of Religion, and departing from this ground in any sort, is the fountain of all following misbehaviour, and discommunion with God; There shall no strange god be in thee, neither shalt thou worship any strange God.

From the reasons of this duty let down, ver. 10. Learn 1. The consideration of having our life, and motion, and being of God, and that he will give to all his promises and threatenings certain performance, should move us to believe in him, adhere unto him, and serve him only; I am the Lord, I am Jehovah. 2. The Covenant of grace, wherein the Lord hath drawn us, who profess ourselves to be his in Christ, should move us to depend on him for righteousness and life, and to study in his strength to please him; I am the Lord thy God. 3. The great work of our Redemption, and all the benefits bestowed upon us, in relation to our bringing out of the slavery of idolatry and Egyptian darkness, to the beholding of the marvellous light, and Kingdom of his dear Sonne, represented by the delivery of his people out of Egypt, should move us to adhere to our Redeemer, and to aim at his service singly; I am thy God, who brought thee out of the land of Egypt. 4. The faire allowance which God bestoweth upon his servants, to wit, Ask and have, should tie our hearts to such a potent, all-sufficient and gracious God; Open thy mouth wide, and I will fill it. 5. It is the narrowness of our faith, and of our spiritual desire, which hindereth our felicity; we are not strengthened in God, but in ourselves: for his offer is, Open thy mouth wide, and I will fill it. The Lord will give grace and glory and will withhold no good thing from them that walk uprightly; and for this end he calleth for the enlarging of our desires, and of our belief to receive satisfaction, that we may have in him full contentment, and not be allured from him to vanities which cannot profit us.

Ver. 11. But my people would not hearken to my voice, and Israel wouldnone of me.
In the third part of the Psalm is set down, how Israel to their own detriment and depriving of themselves of great happiness, did reject the Lords command, and the offer of his grace. Whence learn, 1. The people, to whom the Lord is most liberal, are not always most thankful: his people by external Covenant are not always obedient to him, but readily do give him the worst meeting; But my people would not hearken unto my voice. 2. The cause of not hearkening to, and obeying of Gods commands, is our not believing in God, not taking satisfaction, pleasure and delight in God: for how came it, that Gods people by Covenant did not obey his voice? It may serve for an answer; And Israel would none of me, or rested not on me, or had no pleasure in me.

Ver. 12. So I gave them up unto their own hearts lust: and they walked in their own counsels.

Here is shewn how fearful was Israel's plague for their not delighting in God, they were given over to follow their own will unto their own perdition. Wherefore learn, 1. The idols which come in competition with God, are a man's own carnal lusts and affections, as here appeareth. 2. If these idols be adhered unto, when God doth offer himself for giving a man contentment, it is justice with God to take a refuse at the mans hands, and to cease to deal with his heart any more, but to give him over to the service of his idol; They would none of me, so I gave them up unto their own hearts lust. 3. Whosoever do refuse to serve God, shall not eschew to serve a worse Master, to wit, their own beastly affections, and Satan, who ruleth men by their lusts; They would have none of me, so I gave them up to their own hearts lust; and this of all judgements is the heaviest. 4. When God leaveth a man to himself, there is no restraint to keep him from going to a mischief, and to perdition, as here we see; I gave them up, and they walked in the counsel of their own hearts.

Ver. 13. O that my people had hearkened unto me:
and Israel had walked in my ways!
Lasl of all, is set down by way of Gods lamenting for his people, what felicity they did lose by this their refusing to make God their delight, and his voice their rule to walk by. First, if they had obeyed God, their enemies should not have been their Master, but they should have been made victorious over their adveraries, ver. 15, 14, 15. Next, they should have been satisfied with all contentments abundantly, set forth under the terms of feeding them, with fine wheat and honey. This lamenting of God for his peoples misery, is borrowed from the manner of men, lamenting the misery, which their disobedient children have brought upon themselves, and is not to be taken so, as if there were in God any passion or perturbation, or miserable lamentation, but this speech is to be conceived, as other like speeches in Scripture, which are borrowed from the affections of men, and are framed to move some holy affection in men, suitable to that affection, from which the Lord taketh the simi-litude; and so, O that my people had hearkened unto me; serve-to move his people, (who should hear this expression,) to repent and lament their not hearkening unto God; and to study in all time to come, to be more obedient unto him, even as they would eschew the curse which came upon misbelieving and disobedient Israel, and as they desire to obtain the blessings, whereof carnal Israelites did come short, and did deprive themselves, and if it be asked, what may be imported by this speech properly? We answer, O that my people had hearkened unto me, &c. thieweth these six things; First, what order the Lord hath set in giving blessings to his visible Church; namely, that they begin and believe in him, and study to obey him, and that they by means appointed by him, should look to have such blessings, as he hath promised to believers, and to obedient people. Next, this manner of speech thieweth, how acceptable and pleasant unto God, it is to see the faith, obedience and welfare of his people, alljoyed together in his appointed order. Thirdly, that the meritorious and culpable cause of mens misery, is not in God, but in man, who by his sin delvereth it, and draweth it on himself. Fourthly, that God delighteth not in the death or destruction of his people, but that they should repent and live. Fifthly, that this is his will, that whatsoever shall hear of the evil meeting, which the Israelites did give unto God, and of the judgement which they did draw upon themselves, may be made wise by this lamentation made by God for Israel's destruction, and so may rather chuse to hearken to God, as they did not, then... to be given over in his wrath to their own lusts, and to perish in his indignation as befall them; Sixthly, that God requireth a suitable meeting of his people to his dispensations, that is, that they may be so willing to hearken to his voice, and so loath to offend him, as he doth manifest by word and works his willingness to save them, and his loathnesse to destroy them.

From the Lords lamenting, Learn further, 1. As on the one hand the miscarriage and mifery of others before us, should make us wise to eschew the evil which befell them, &c. to obtain the good whereof they by their disobedience were deprived: So on the other hand, the willingnesse of God to bless those who do follow his direction, should make us diligent to understand what course God hath precribed, and should make us confident to obtain blessednesse in our endeavours to follow it; for, O that my people had hearkened unto me, &c. doth teach us so much. 2. They may be in the number, and estimation of God's people, by virtue of Church-Covenant, who for their refusing to follow God's counsell may come short of God's blessings; for, O that my people had hearkened unto me, &c. maketh this evident. 3. He who heareth God uttering his wishes for the conversion of his people, and lamenting that his Word is not believed, and that his offer of grace is not received, doth give God an evill meeting, and neither believeth God's goodnesse, nor careth for his own salvation, except he joyn with God, lamenting his own misconceit in time past, and doth with heartily the same wish with God for his own conversion for time to come; for this speech, O that my people had hearkened unto me, &c. is framed to this very end, to make the hearer willing, and so to convert him, or else to convict him, if he take not hold of the offer. 4. Whosoever be the Lords secret decrees concerning the salvation of some, and condemnation of other some in the visible Church; yet the meanes of execution of those decrees, are so holy and just, and wisely carried on, as those decrees shall not be particularly revealed to the trembling of any man, but the offer of grace and declaration of God's goodnesse is so laid out in common, that whosoever doth not embrace the same, is made inexcusable; for, when God saith, O that my people had hearkened unto me, he that doth not answere the Lord, with O that thou wouldest frame this heart of mine, to the obedience of faith, hath nothing to say if he be damned, for his slushing of the offer so freely held forth unto him, and pressed upon him.

Ver. 14.
Ver. 14. I should soon have subdued their enemies, and turned my hand against their adversaries.

15. The haters of the LORD should have submitted themselves unto him: but their time should have endured for ever.

16. He should have fed them also with the finest of the wheat: and with honey out of the rock, should I have satisfied thee.

From the good which should have come to his people, let downs
ver. 14, 15. 6. Learn; 1. Gods blessings are not to be looked after, except in the ways of God; and if any man come short of Gods blessing, he beareth the blame himselfe: O that Israel had walked in my ways, I should soon have subdued their enemies, &c.

2. If the Lords people have provoked him to let loose their enemies upon them, and to prevail over them, the onely way to have affaires changed, is to turn to God, and to walk in his ways; If Israel had walked in my ways, I should have turned my hand against their adversaries. 3. They that are enemies to the Lords people, are haters of the Lord: and where the profession of true religion and righteousness is hated, there the quarrell is common to God with his people; for their enemies are here called Haters of God. 4. It is a benefit to Gods people, and a point of glory to God, when Gods enemies and theirs do submit themselves to God, albeit but feignedly; which good, Gods people do hinder, when they walk not in his ways: If Israel had walked in my ways, the haters of the Lord should have submitted themselves, or lied unto him, as the Word will bear. 5. There is no means to perpetuate a visible Church in any place, but to walk in the Lords wayes: If Israel had walked in my ways, &c. their time should have endured for ever. 6. Obeying the voice of God, that is, the embracing of the office of grace and reconciliation with God through the sacrifice of the Messiah Christ, and studying to walk holily as persons reconciled, is the only way of coming by true felicity, the only way of being furnished with all things necessary for life and salvation, the only way of having large allowance from God of sweet and satisfactory food, for entertaining of spiritual life and communion with God, promised here under the similitude of earthly food; He should have fed them with the finest of the wheat: and with the honey out of the Rock, should I have satisfied thee.
His Psalm agreeeth with the time of David's persecution by Saul and his Counsellors, the Peeres of the land, wherein the Psalmist comforteth himselfe in God's supremacy, and his judging of all Judges on the earth; for exercising whereof God cometh unto their meeting, ver. 1. Then challengeth them for their injustice and oppression, ver. 2. Thirdly, readeth the law and rule of their duty unto them, ver. 3, 4. Fourthly, condemneth them as guilty, ver. 5. Fifthly, pronounceth sentence of doom upon them, ver. 6, 7. And then the Psalmist closeth the Psalm with prayer, ver. 8.

Ver. 1. God standeth in the congregation of the mighty: he judgeth among the gods.

From the Lords presence in the Assembly of Judges; Learn. 1. The name of a Congregation or Church, is given in Scripture to the orderly meeting of Rulers and Governours, met for the execution of their office; as here, God standeth in the Congregation or Church of the mighty. 2. No Judge is absolute Lord over a people, but in subordination to God, who is Judge above all Judges; and will judge of all the decrees of Judges under him; God standeth in the congregation of the mighty: he judgeth. 3. God doth put his Name upon civil Magistrates, and hath clothed them with honour; that as their eminency is a part of his image, so their decrees should be such as God will own; He judgeth among the gods.

Ver. 2. How long will ye judge unjustly: and accept the persons of the wicked? Selah.

From the Lords challenging of them for their partiality and injustice; Learn. 1. Men in honour and power, readily do forget God their Master and Sovereign Lord; and do neglect to do justice according to their office: the splendour of their power doth make them forget their duty to God above them; and to their subjects under them, as the instance of the Rulers of Israel sheweth, who had God's express law instead of Acts of Parliament: and God dwelling in the midst of them in a wonderful manner, for direction in extraordinary cases, even they did judge unjustly. 2. Corrupt Judges are inclined to shew favour only to the wicked, and are partial when the cause of the wicked cometh before them: To accept the persons of the wicked. 3. Albeit the Lord keep peace for a while, yet will he not always be silent, but at length will call them to an account; How long will ye judge unjustly?

Ver. 3. Defend the poor and fatherless: do justice to the afflicted and needy.

4. Deliver the poor and needy: ridde them out of the band of the wicked.

From the rule of justice which is set to Magistrates; Learn, 1. The touchstone of Magistrates justice is in the causes and cases of the poor, fatherless, afflicted and needy, who are not able to attend long their suits of law, have no friends nor money to deal for them; to whom therefore the mighty should be eyes to direct them, and a staffe to their weakness, to support and helpe them to their right; Defend the poor and fatherless; do justice to the afflicted and needy. 2. As the poor and afflicted have need of the Judges help, to clear their right, when they seek justice: so also when they are unjustly drawn to the barre, or any way oppressed, the mighty or Judges should interpose for their reliefe, and rescue the oppressed from the oppressour: Deliver the poor and needy, ridde them out of the band of the wicked.

Ver. 5. They know not, neither will they understand, they walke on in darkness: all the foundations of the earth are out of course.

From the condemnatory sentence for their guiltiness; Learn, to. 1. It is a great fault in a Judge, not to know the duty of his office, or not to acquaint himself with the solid rules of justice; for upon this ground are they here pronounced guilthefK. They know not. 2. It is a great fault when a Judge is ignorant, to refuse instruction, information, and direction offered from the Lord's Word; as here: Neither will they understand. 3. It is yet most culpable of all, for any man, but to judges in special, to go on still in a sinful course; They walk on in darkness. 4. When justice, and judgment-seats are corrupted, and judges do not mind justice in their places, then the pillars of that land or kingdom must stagger, and all matters go to ruin or a perillous alteration: All the foundations of the earth (or of the land) are out of course, faith the Lord, where the forefaid injustice or faults in Governours are found.

Ver. 6. I have said, Ye are gods: and all of you are children of the most High.

7. But ye shall die like men, and fall like one of the princes.

From the sentence of doom pronounced against them; Learn,

1. Princes, Magistrates, chief Rulers and Judges, have allowance from God, of honour, power, and strength, tribute and revenues, for the better discharge of their office under him: I have said, Ye are gods, and all of you are children of the most High; that is, I have put the image of my superiority on you, and given you preheminence of place, power, and gifts over others in my Name. 2. Great places among men do not exempt any man from God's power, justice and judgement; but all men, great men no lesse then others, must die and come to judgement; as hath befallen others before them. A Prince among Gods people, who doth not execute justice, as becometh God's servant, shall be punished, as profane persons are who rule without the pale of God's Church; But ye shall die like men, and fall as one of the princes.

3. The meditation of death and judgement following on it, is a pressing motive unto amendment of life: for this is set before men of high place, who do not stand in fear of their subjects: Ye shall die like men, and fall as one of the Princes.

Ver. 8. Arise, O God, judge the earth: for thou shalt inherit all nations.

From the close of the Psalm by this short prayer, wherein the oppressed servant of God prayeth that God would put order unto the government of his people, and redresse the wrongs done to them, them; Learn, i. Albeit the oppressed servants of God cannot finde justice at mens hands, yet there is help to be had from God, and prayer, shorter or longer; as the Lord furniseth unto them, must they seek their ease of minde and comfort; Arise, O God, judge the earth. 3. When Magistrates or Rulers do oppresse Gods people, private persons may not go beyond their bounds, but must have their recourse to God, that he may set matters that are wrong in a better condition, as here the Psalmist doth. 4. As the Church of God among the Jewes was acquainted with the prophecies of the enlargement of the Church and Kingdom of God among the Gentiles, and upon this ground prayed that he would not suffer his interest in his people then to decay by the malice of men: so may the Lords Church in any place or time upon the same ground pray for the like mercy; for still the reason holdeth, that God who is about to enlarge his Kingdom, will not lose what he hath already; and so to pray: Arise O Lord, judge the earth; for thou shalt inherit all nations. Amen.

PSAL. LXXXIII.

A song or Psalme of Asaph.

This Psalm agreeeth with such a condition of the Church, as we read of in the dayes of Jehosaphat, 2 Chron. 20. and serveth to comfort the Church in the greatest conspiracies of her enemies against her. The Psalm hath two parts. In the former, the Church doth cry to God to shew himselfe for his people, ver. 1. and complaineth of their conspiracy and preparation to come against her, ver. 2, 3. and of their purpose to root out the Lords people, ver. 4, 5. specifying a number of nations, who were upon the plot, ver. 6, 7, 8. In the latter part, they pray that judgment may so befall them, as besell other such their enemies before, who enterprised the same enterprise, ver. 9, 10, 11; 12. In particular, that the whole host may be overturned and consumed, ver. 13, 14. and the remnant may bee chased and scattered, ver. 15. and ashamed and confounded for ever, ver. 16, 17. that so God may have the more glory among them, ver. 18.
Ver. 1. Keep not thou silence, O God: hold not thy peace, and be not still, O God.

From his cry to God to let forth a word for his people in this strait; Learn, 1. The Church may be in such a strait, as if God do not speedily interpose himselfe, she cannot but be swallowed up of her enemies quickly, as here we see. 2. Sense of danger putteth an edge on prayer, and kindleth affection in it; Keep not silence, O God, hold not thy peace; and again, O God, be not still. 3. The Lords uttering a word of comfort to his people, and of terror to his enemies in the extremity of danger, will satisfy his Church, and do all her work; Be not silent, hold not thy peace, be not still, is the summe of all she craveth: for let him speak, and it shall be done.

Ver. 2. For to thine enemies make a tumult, and they that hate thee, have lift up the head.

3. They have taken crafty counsell against thy people, and consulted against thy hidden ones.

From their complaint of their enemies preparation to come against them; Learn, 1. The enemies of Gods Church are the enemies of God, bearing the same affection to God and to them that are reconciled to him; For to, thine enemies that hate thee, make a tumult. 2. The more din the enemy makes, the more insolent he is, the higher he lifteth his head, he is the more near to be knockt down by Gods appearing for his people against him: Keep not silence, for thine enemies make a tumult, they have lifted up the head. 3. The chief enemies of the Church are not the silly and simple sort of people, but the most subtle politicians usually, whose heads are most fit for Satans devices against Gods people; They have taken crafty counsell against thy people.

4. The true children of God, his secret ones, who in the sense of their own weakness, do shelter themselves under Gods wings, and do glory in him, are the special object of the malice of Satan, and of his wicked servants; They have consulted against thy hidden ones. 5. Against the craft and policy of enemies the Church hath nothing in her selfe to oppose, but doth run to God, who can easily disappoint all the enemies plots, as here we see, ver. 4, 5.
Ver. 4. They have said, Come, and let us cut them off from being a nation: that the name of Israel may be no more in remembrance.

5. For they have consulted together with one consent: they are confederate against thee.

From their purpose to root out God's people; Learn, 1. No less will satisfy the enemies of God's Church, than extirpation and abolishing of the Church; Let us cut them off from being a nation, that the name of Israel may be no more in remembrance. 2. When the Church is left united, and least able to defend her self, the wicked encourage and strengthen one another in an evil course against her; They have said, one to another, come, let us cut them off. 3. Although the wicked be at enmity one against another, yet they will all agree together to overthrow the Church; They have consulted together with one consent, (saith he) they are confederate against thee. 4. This consideration, that the conspiracy against the Church, is a conspiracy against God, whose people the Church is, is very comfortable in the Churches extremity; They are confederate against thee.

Ver. 6. The tabernacles of Edom and the Ishmaelites, of Moab, and the Hagarens.

7. Gebal and Ammon and Amalek: the Philistines, with the inhabitants of Tyre.

8. Asur also is joyned with them: they have helped the children of Lot. Selah.

In the reckoning up of the several nations conspired against Israel; Learn, 1. When the Church looketh upon the multitude of her enemies, and their confederacy; and their resolution to destroy her, she should gather grounds of hope, to be helped so much the more, and so much the sooner; for this is the Church's argument of hope to be helped here. 2. In the persecution of the Church, no wonder to see false brethren to be the chief leaders, whoever be followers and assistants; for here the Church complaineth of it: They have helped the children of Lot, and importeth, that Moab and Ammon (their bastard-brethren) were first in the enmity. 3. It is no wonder, nor strange thing, to see many nations on all hands to invade the Lords people at at once: for here are ten nations coming all together against Israel.

Ver. 9. Do unto them as unto the Midianites: as to Sisera, as to Jabin at the brook of Kishon.

10. Which perished at Endor: they became as dung for the earth.

11. Make their nobles like Oreb, and like Zeeb: sea all their princes, as Zebah and as Zalmunna:

12. Who said, Let us take to our selves the houses of God in possession.

In the latter part of the Psalm, is the Churches prayer to God, that he would be party against her enemies, and plague them. There are sundry branches of the malediction, which the Church doth imprecate against the enemies. The first is, that God would destroy them, as he destroyed others before them, who were upon such a wicked plot of rooing out Gods people. Whence learn, 1. When the Church hath to do with her enemies, she should look what in Scripture the Lord did for her in times past; for so doth the Church look here to what the Lord did to his enemies, Judg. 7. 22. and 4. 15, 34. and 7. 25. and 8. 1. 2. It is lawful to pray for judgements upon the enemies of the Church, provided it be out of a publick spirit, and not out of private malice or revenge; in which case the prayers of the Church are more forcible for the overthrow of their enemies, then all her external force is: Do unto them, as unto the Midianites, is a hard charge against them. 3. Former plagues poured out upon the Churches enemies, are pledges of the Lords bringing like judgements on her enemies afterward, and of giving like preservation unto the Church, as before; Do unto them as to the Midianites in Gideons time, and to Sisera and Jabin in Deborahs time, when small means were sufficient for a great overthrow of the enemy. 4. The dead bodies of Gods enemies shall not only be contemptible before men, which is incident to the bodies of the Saints sometimes, but also contemptible before God, as here we see; Their enemies perished at Endor, and became as dung for the earth.

5. The Nobles, leaders, & chief amongst Gods enemies, may look for most eminent judgement: Make their Nobles, like Oreb and Zeeb, yea all their Princes like Zebah and Zalmunna. 6. It is all one for enemies to resolve to spoile Gods Church, and to rob God of his habitation specially; so long as God's people love to have God dwelling among them, for the injuries done to the Church redound to the contumely of God, who hath taken the maintenance of them; They say, Let us take to our selves the houses of God in possession.

Ver. 13. O my God, make them like a wheel: as the stubble before the winde.

14. As the fire burneth a wood: and as the flame setteth the mountains on fire:

15. So persecute them with thy tempest, and make them afraid with thy storms.

16. Fill their faces with shame, that they may seek thy Name, O LORD.

17. Let them be confounded and troubled for ever: yea let them be put to shame and perish:

From the rest of the branches of the imprecation, wherein sundry similitudes are looked unto, for shewing forth the effects of God's wrath upon the enemies of the Church; Learn, 1. Use is to be made of our Covenant with God, so well against our enemies, as for our selves; for, O my God, saith he now, when he is about to curse the enemy. 2. The enemies of God's Church have many a mischief waiting on them, of which if they escape one, another shall overtake them; yea, no one similitude can set forth what misery is prepared for them: no peace, no rest for them, no standing in any established prosperity, but they shall be rolled as a bowle turned upside-down, or as a wheel; Make them like a wheel. 3. They shall have no strength to resist the blast of God's wrath; Make them as stubble, or chaffe, before the winde. 4. The Lord's indignation against them shall burn them as a flame doth a forest; let them be consumed, as fire that burneth a wood, which is the greatest flame we can easily conceive; or when a mountain of sulphur or coales is kindled, as the flame sets the mountains on fire, where fire above the earth and under it do meet together. 5. If they escape for a while, yet judgements shall follow them, and overtake them, and tostie them, and turn them in a circle, till they be giddy; So persecute them with thy tempest, or whilewindes. 6. Beside what torment their present plague shall bring unto them, horror and fear of worse to come shall vexe them;
Make them afraid with thy storme. 7. At last they shall be ashamed, when both they shall be disappointed of what they intended against the godly, and also meet with the misery which they least feared: Fill their faces with shame. 8. If any of the enemies of God's people do belong to God's election, the Churches prayer against them giveth way to their conversion, and doth not seek more then that the judgement should follow them only, till they acknowledge their sinne, and do turn and seek God: Fill their faces with shame, that they may seek thy Name, O Lord. 9. For the rest of the wicked irreconcileable adversaries, when shame of disappointment and temporal judgements are come upon them, the worst of all doth yet follow, even everlasting perdition: Let them be confounded and troubled for ever: yea let them be put to shame and perish.

Ver. 18. That men may know, that thou, whose Name alone is JEHOVAH, art the most High over all the earth.

He closeth the Psalm with shewing the end of all this complaint and imprecation. Whence 'learn, 1. The end of all cursing of the wicked enemies of the Church, is not to satisfy private revenge, but that God may be glorified; Let them perish, that men may know, that thou art he whose Name is JEHOVAH. 2. The Name Jehovah signifying Gods being of himself, and the cause of the being of all things created, is incommunicable to any creature (and in Scripture is given only unto the three persons of the Godhead, the Father, the Word, and the Spirit, whose essence is one) as here is taught; That men may know, that thou whose Name alone is Jehovah. 3. If men will not acknowledge the true God to be the supreme and only Governor of all the world, they shall by his heavy judgements, either upon others, or upon themselves, be made to know it: for the Church doth here declare, that they do use this heavy imprecation against God's enemies, that men may know (say they) that thou whose Name alone is Jehovah, art the most High over all the earth.
PSAL. LXXXIV.

To the chief Musician upon Gittith. A Psalm for the sonnes of Korah.

His Psalm is of the same subject with Psalm 42. and Psalm 63. Wherein the Psalmist lamenteth his banishment from the Temple and the publick Ordinances of Religion, to ver. 3, and then prayeth for his restoring to that privilege in the rest of the Psalm. This Psalm agreeeth well with the time of David's parting with the Ark, when he fled from Absalom.

In his lamentation; First, he commendeth the place of publick worship, ver. 1. Then sheweth his longing after it, ver. 2. Thirdly, he wisheth to be as a sparrow, in the meanest condition partaker of that privilege, ver. 3. Fourthly, he proclaimeth the blessedness of all the Lords Ministers, who may always be there, ver. 4. Fifthly, he calleth them blessed who have liberty to come on foot from any part of the country, to keep at least the solemn feast, ver. 5, 6, 7. In his prayer he requesteth in general terms, to be restored to the Lords worship, ver. 8, 9 for two reasons; one is, because he preferreth the meanest officers condition in God's house to the most quiet dwelling among the wicked, ver. 10. Another reason, because felicity is to be found in God, by the means of his Ordinances, ver. 11. and mean time while his prayer should be granted, he resteth by faith on God, in whom believers are made blessed, whereever they be.

The Psalmist being now in exile, casteth his eyes upon his own country, wherein throughout all the land the Lord was worshipped in their several Synagogues, but most solemnly in Sion, the place where the Ark and the Tabernacle were; and putting a difference between the holy Ordinances of God's worship, and the multitude of profane mixed among the godly, who did joy in the worship, he beholdeth the glorious beauty of the holy service, and places where the occasion thereof was offered, and so breaketh out in commendation and admiration of the loveliness thereof, Whence learn, 1. As God is glorious in all his hosts, which which all are very ready as soldiers to fight for him at his command: so is he most glorious in the camp of the visible Church militant: for here his authority, justice, mercy, grace, wisdom, and power is most of all manifested, for the overthrowing of the kingdom of sin and Satan; therefore faith he, How amiable are thy Tabernacles, O Lord of Hosts?

2. This beauty of the Lords Churches and places of his residence, as it is not discerned by the blind world, but only by such as are illuminated with heavenly light: so is it highly prized, loved and admired by them only: for it is the sweet finger of Israel, who faith, How amiable are thy Tabernacles, O Lord of Hosts? 3. Albeit the world will not believe what here is said, nor take this praising of the lovelines of Gods publick worship from the hand of the godly, yet the Lord will receive this testimony unto the beauty of his Ordinances from such as do present it before him; therefore doth the Psalmist most confidently direct his speech to God himselfe here; How amiable are thy Tabernacles, O Lord?

Ver. 2. My soule longeth, yea even fainteth for the courts of the Lord: my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God.

In the next place, he professeth his longing after liberty to enjoy the privileges of the publick Ordinances, albeit he was to have it no ways, but in the society of such people, as were then in the visible Church, of whose wickedness he had sufficient experience, they being now in armes against him, following Absalom. Hence learn, 1. The beauty and lovelinesse of Gods publick Ordinances, is best discerned; and love and longing after them most stirred up, when a man is deprived of them for a time; My soule longeth, yea even fainteth for the courts of the Lord, 2. Bodily affliction sharpeneth the sense of spiritual wants, and the sense of want: of spiritual means of comfort augmenteth bodily affliction: My soul fainteth, my heart and my flesh crieth out. 3. It is not the publick Ordinances alone, to be enjoyed in an outward formality, which Saints do seek after, but it is to finde God in, and by the meanes: it is to finde the Lords lively operation on their hearts, which they long after; My heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God.
Ver. 3. Ye a The sparrow hath found an house, and the swallow a nest for herself, where she may lay her young; even thine Altars, O LORD of hostes, my King and my God.

In the third place, he wisheth to be partaker of the publick worship, were it in never so mean and despicable a condition; so he may enjoy Gods presence in his ordinances, he is content to creep into any corner of Gods house, and go out and seek his meat, and return like a sparrow or swallow. Whence learn, 1. A soul which loveth communion with God indeed, will choose any temporal condition of life, how poor soever, how despised soever, rather then be deprived of what may make better for his spiritual condition, as appeareth in the Psalmist, who wished to have the place of a Sparrow, or of a Swallow; any residence near Gods Altar. 2. The soul which craveth lively communion with God, should cleave close unto the title and interest which he hath in God by Covenant; as the Psalmist doth here; Thine altar (faith he,) my King and my God.

Ver. 4. Blessed are they that dwell in thy house: they will be still praising thee. Selah.

In the fourth place, he proclaimeth the Priests and Levites, the Lords Ministers to be blessed men, for their priviledge and opportunity to serve the Lord. Whence learn, 1. Albeit many who have the means and opportunity of profiting by publike ordinances, do not consider the day of their visitation, to make use of the means while they have them: yet the godly who are deprived of the means, and do behold the faire occasions of grace offered by them, do count them blessed, as here: Blessed are they that dwell in thy house. 2. It is a blessed thing indeed to have the occasion of communion with God in publick ordinances, and to make use thereof in setting forth the Lords glory; and in this respect there are no men in the world more blessed then faithful Ministers; Blessed are they that dwell in thy house, they will be still praising thee.

Ver. 5. Blessed is the man whose strength is in thee; in whose heart are the ways of them.
6. Who passing through the valley of Baca, make it a Well: the raine also filleth the pooles.

7. They go from strength to strength: every one of them in Sion appeareth before God.

In the fifth place, he looketh upon their condition who dwell farre off from the Tabernacle, who might at least thrice a year come from the farthest corner of the land, to keep the solemnities appointed of God; and he counteth them blessed, albeit in their voyage they should endure never so much toyle in travelling, and shoulde with difficulty drink their water, either rained down from the clouds, or drawn from a well or cistern digged with much labour: for albeit they should sustaine toyle and drought in their way, yet having refreshments one after another, and renewed strength for their journey, they should all come at last to the place of publick ordinances in Sion; and here he describeth the true and blessed Israelites, whether Proseletes or borne Jewes, resolved to come and appear before the Lord in the appointed solemnities, by these fix properties: First, they encourage themselves for the journey, by hope in God to be furnished with strength: Blessed is the man, (faith he) whose strength is in thee. Next, they are resolved in their heart for all the inconveniences they may meet with in the journey, to hold on their course; In whose heart are the ways of them. Thirdly, they do hold on their course through dry and comfortlesse places, which may be called places of Baca, or weeping; They passe through the valley of Baca. Fourthly, they overcome this difficulty of wanting water, either by digging a Well, where they may finde water, or by finding some already digged cistern, wherein Gods providence had reservered some quantity of rain-water for them: Who passing through the valley of Baca, make it a Well: the raine also filleth the pooles. Fifthly, after refreshment found in their journey they are encouraged to go on their way, till they need and finde some new refreshment, and reparation of their strength; They go from strength to strength. Sixthly, these godly travellers all come at length to the place they aimed at, to Sion, where they appear before God in the holy Feast, cheerful and joyful souls; Every one of them in Sion appeareth before God. And therefore doth he call them blessed, because at length they come through all difficulties to have sweet communion with God.
These two degrees of blessed Israelites, are so painted out in figurative terms, as they may most easily lead the spiritual eye to the blessedness which the figure is fit to represent, so that the typical words cannot well be understood, except the spiritual blessedness be taken along: for there are two degrees of really blessed persons; some are at home already dwelling with God, of whom it may be most solidly said: Blessed are they that dwell in thy house, they will be still praising thee, which is their perpetual exercise. Others are travellers, who are in their way toward heaven, the Lords house; who indeed despair of their own strength to make out their journey, but their confidence is in God's strength, and their encouragement to set forward is this, that of them it may be well said, Blessed is the man whose strength is in thee: such mens journey doth take up their heart, the stream of their affections runs thitherward; In whose heart are the ways of them. Those travellers have a wilderness to go through, a comfortless valley wherein they do fine matter of mourning, and no solid consolation, save that which God doth provide, beyond the nature of the place, which God one way or other doth furnish unto them, that they shall not fail to have a timorous consolation: Who passing through the valley of Baca make it a Well: the rain also filleth the poole. So that albeit God suffer them to thirst, yet he sufficeth them not to want a sufficient measure for bringing them on their way; strengthening them to go forward: it they misse a Well, they shall have a Ciftern filled with rain from heaven; the measure furnished unto them, reneweth their strength after weariness, and sufficeth them till they need, and meet with another renovation of their strength; They go from strength to strength. Not one of those resolute travellers, or self-denying persons, relying on God's strength and furniture do perish by the way, all are upheld and brought forward, till they come where they would be, to enjoy God's presence in Zion which is above; Every one of them, without exception, in Zion appeareth before God.

9. Behold, O God, our shield: and look upon the face of thine anointed.

In the latter part of the Psalm is his prayer, wherein he ma-keth request for communion with God, both in the outward type, and in the spiritual truth. Whence learn, 1. The godly mans holy wishes and desires do not vanish and die, but are recommended to God in prayer. What the Psalmist longed for in the former part of the Psalm, in the latter part he prayeth for.
2. The earnest suppliant hath no will to be refused, but fasteneth his hope to speed on Gods power and Covenant, and doublerh his petitions in the Lords bosome; O Lord of hosts, hear my prayer: give ear, O God of Jacob. 3. Albeit the believer be separate in place from the communion of Saints in publike worship, yet he will finde a conjunction with them in affection and prayer at the throne of Gods grace, and claim the same interest with them in God for protection and comfort; Behold, O God, (faith he) our shield. 4. How little appearance ofpossession, or performance of promises the believer hath, yet must he claim his right and titles, which shall bring him to possession; Look upon the face of thine anoint-ed. He courseth himself King in regard of his right to the Crown, because God had caused Samuel to anoint him to be King. 5. He who hath right to a principal mercy, may pray and look for every accedent mercy, which is presupposed in the principal, or annexed unto it, as here upon the promise of the Kingdom, David prayeth for the liberty of the Temple, which behooved to follow upon his repossessiojn in the Kingdom, and here also he looks through his own anointing unto the Mesiah Christ, of whom he knew himself to be a type: and for the Messiah Christ, he seeketh to have his petition granted, through whom alone every good thing is purchased, and must be convoyed unto us: Look (faith he) upon the face of thine anointed.

Ver. 10. For a day in thy courts is better then a thousand: I had rather be a door-keeper in the house of my God, then to dwell in the tents of wickednesse.

This is the first reafon, why he desireth to have the priviledges of the publike ordinances restored unto him. Whence learn,
1. Whatsoever may be a means to bring us to the ruition of God, is incomparably better then any earthly thing; and one houre spent in the means of eternal felicity, is worth a thousand spent otherways; For a day in thy Courts is better then a thousand.

2. The lowest and most painful condition of life, joined with any measure of communion with God, is better then the most quiet, ease, and plentiful condition of life without communional with God; To be a door-keeper in the house of the Lord, is better then to dwell in the tents of wickedness. 3. The godly man whose judgment is rectified about things spiritual, is the only right estimator of civil and conditions of life in this world: for that is best to him (if he may choose) wherein he may be most serviceable to God, and best helped to heaven. He for his part had rather have the meanest condition of life, joyned with the benefit of the publick ordinances, then live without them more plentiful among the wicked; I had rather (faith the Psalmist) be a door-keeper in the house of my God, then to dwell in the tents of wickedness.

11. For the LORD God is a Sunne and Shield: the LORD will give grace and glory; no good thing will be withhold from them that walk uprightly.

The second reason why he loveth the publick ordinances is, because by this means he getteth access to the fountain of all felicity, who doth ward off all evil from the upright beleeuer, and giveth unto him whatsoever is good for his soule or body in this life and in the life to come. Whence learn, 1. The godly have need of light and direction, life, vigour, strength and consolation; and all this is in God, or what more can be imported in the similitude taken from the Sunne, in relation to earthly creatures; For the Lord God is a Sunne. 2. The godly are subject to dangers and perils from without, especially from enemies bodily and spiritual, and have need of preservation and defence from all adverse power, malice and craftiness; and this protection only God is able to give: The Lord is a Sunne and a shield. 3. The beleeuer is burdened with the body of sin, and born down frequently with the sense of his own unworthinesse, weakness and weakness, and in God is the perfect remedy of all those evils; The Lord will give grace. 4. Albeit the beauty of godliness be much obscured in this life, with crosses and affections from God, with calumnies and persecutions from men, and the godly must lie in grave, and suffer corruption of their flesh, as others; yet the remedy of this also shall be found in

God,
God to the believer; He will give grace and glory: grace in this life, and glory after it without fail. 5. Albeit the Lord seem to keep the godly in great scarcity sometimes of things com- fortable in this life, and of spiritual consolations also for a time; yet doth he so dispose of their entertainment in all respects, as every thing shall work together for their good; For no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly.

Ver. 12. O LORD of hosts: blessed is the man that trusteth in thee

When the Psalmist hath lamented his exile from the publick ordinances, and prayed to be restored to that privilege; he com-forteth himself in the mean time, by the consideration of God's grace and power to supply all wants, even that of publick ordi-nances, when it cannot without hazard of life be had by the be-liever. Wherefore from, 1. How hard ever the Lords dispensati-on be to his own children, yet must we ever continue to trust in God, as the Psalmists example here doth teach. 2. God can supply the want of the publice ordinances, and be a little San-ctuary to his children, and make them quiet; yea, and blessed in believing in him: O Lord of hosts, blessed is the man that trusteth in thee: for in the beginning of the Psalm his heart breaketh for the longing after the publice ordinances; he coun-eth the Ministers of God's house blessed; he couneth every man who may be in any corner of God's house happy; he couneth the travelling Israelite coming to the ordinances blessed; and at length pronounceth every believer blessed, and so himself to be blessed also.

PSAL. LXXXV.

To the chief Musician. A Psalm for the sons of Korah.

This Psalm agreeeth well with the condition of the Church of the Jewes, now fallen into new troubles, after their return from the captivity of Babylon. In the former part of they pray for a new proof and experience of God's mercy, to ver. 8. In the latter part is set down a comfortable answer to their their prayer, and for the help of their faith in their prayer. First, they make mention of their gracious delivery from the captivity, ver. 1, 2, 3. Next, they pray for repentance, and removing of the tokens of God's wrath, ver. 4, 5. Thirdly, they pray for restoration of their miserable and dead condition wherein they were lying, by some merciful deliverance, ver. 6, 7.

As for the answer in the latter part, he prepareth himself to receive it from the Lord, and by inspiration receiveth indeed a comfortable prophecy of five notable fruits of mercy: The first is, peace to God's people, ver. 8. The next is, deliverance and salvation to his servants, ver. 9. The third is, the grace of Christ unto justification, and the fruits of it, ver. 10, 11. The fourth is, temporal blessings, upon the place where the Lord's people do dwell, and that for his people's comfort, ver. 12. The fifth is, of the grace of Christ unto sanctification, ver. 13.

Ver. 1. L ORD, thou hast been favourable unto thy land: thou hast brought back the captivity of Jacob.
2. Thou hast forgiven the iniquity of thy people, thou hast covered all their sin. Selah.
3. Thou hast taken away all thy wrath; thou hast turned thyself from the fierceness of thine anger.

After the Church of the Jewes had been delivered from captivity, they fall into new troubles, because of their sins and their new provocations of God; and in this Psalm they cry to God for mercy, and for strengthening of their faith: They acknowledge the Lord's favour in loosing their captivity, ver. 1. and in forgiving their sins, ver. 2. and in removing all the tokens of his wrath from them, ver. 3. Wherefore learn, 1. After great mercies shewn to God's people, new provocations do draw on new judgements, as appeareth in the change of the condition of the Church here represented. 2. Neither old sins nor late, neither old judgments nor presentely lying on wrath, must keep back God's people from running unto God by prayer, for obtaining favour of God again, as the example of the Church here here doth teach. 3. As no sins can make the Lord so forget his Covenant with his people, as mercy should not be let forth to penitent sinners suing for grace; so no wrath is so great, as shall debarre poor suppliants from access unto God, when they come to seek mercy. 4. As new necessities do call to minde old supplies received from God; so they who would have any new benefit from the Lord, should thankfully remember the old, and take encouragement from those to hope for further; Lord, thou hast been favourable to thy land; thou hast brought back the captivity of Jacob. 5. As grace is the only ground of Gods bounty to his people, so is it the only ground of his peoples prayer for new experiences of his grace; as here, Gods favour is acknowledged to be the cause of bringing back the people from captivity, and the ground whereupon the Psalmist foundeth his prayer; Thou hast been favourable to thy land. 6. As that is a benefit indeed which is given with remission of sins; so every one who seeketh a benefit, should desire to have the benefit which they come to seek, joined with remission of their sin: as the Psalmist here maketh the bringing back from captivity a compleat favour, because joined with remission of sinnes: without which it had been the lesse comfortable; Thou hast forgiven the iniquity of thy people. 7. The way of Gods forgiving of sins is, by not imputing of them, not bringing of them forth to be reckoned, but hiding them from justices view, and covering them with the imputation of the righteousness of the Redeemer; Thou hast covered all their sinne. 8. As while sin unrepented and unforgiven remaineth, wrath also remaineth; so when sinne is taken away, Gods wrath also is taken away; when God forgiveth sin, he takes away the punishment of sin; for after he hath said, Thou hast covered all their sin: he saith, Thou hast taken away all thy wrath; thou hast turned from the fierceness of thin anger. 9. As the conscience of sin, and feeling of wrath lying on, and fearing the growth of it, do much hinder the guilty from confident approach unto God; so the seen experiences of Gods drawing of those barren in former times, do open the door to afflicted sinners, confidently to come and seek mercy, as here the Psalmist doth teach us, in his making of this preface to his following prayer.

Ver. 4. Turn us, O God of our salvation: and cause thine anger towards us to cease.
5. Wilt thou be angry with us for ever? wilt thou draw out thine anger to all generations?

In the next place, upon the foregoing grounds, the Church afflicted prayeth for grace to repent; that so remission of sin, and removal of wrath may follow. Whence learn, 1. Whosoever in a Church afflicted are sensible of their own and the Churches sinnes, should deal with God for giving repentance to his back-sliding people, and to encrease their own repentance, before they seek removal of the tokens of wrath, as here the godly do pray in the first place, Turn us, O God. 2. The Lords Covenant with his people for everlasting salvation, is a ground to pray and hope for temporal deliverance from God, who hath power and ways of his own, how to save, when we see no event; Turn us, (Lest he) O God of our salvation. 3. When God giveth grace to a people, to repent and turn to him, the tokens of his wrath will be removed also: or be so changed, as they shall be no more effects of wrath; therefore joyneth he with, Turn us, this petition also, And cause thine anger toward us to cease. 4. The anger of the Lord toward his people, is but temporal and for a moment in comparison of defervings, albeit it seem to endure long: and the believer may be persuaded, that it shall not continue against suppliants long; for, Wilt thou be angry with us for ever? wilt thou draw out thine anger to all generations? doth import so much, that his anger could not be perpetual.

Ver. 6. Wilt thou not revive us again: that thy people may rejoice in thee?

7. Show us thy mercy, O LORD, and grant us thy salvation.

In the third place, he prayeth for some relief from the distress wherein they were for the time, and putteth his petition out of question, by this interrogation, because God's purpose and pleasure was that his people should have joy in their God, and thereupon he requesteth for new tokens of mercy, from the ground of his Covenant with them for salvation. Whence learn, 5. As it is a death to be deprived so much as of the evidence and sense of God's favour, so it is life to be clear that we are in favour with God: and as such who have had the sense of God's favour, favour, cannot endure to want it; so shall they have it restored; Wilt thou not revive us again? 2. Because plagues and wrath upon God's people are temporal, they may look certainly for a change to the better; and after they have smarled for their sins for a while, yet may expect to be restored to joy and comfort again: Wilt thou not revive us again, that thy people may re-joyce in thee? 3. When God changeth the cheer of his people, their joy should not be in the gift, but in the Giver; That thy people may rejoice in thee. 4. Albeit the dear children of God, for whom mercy and salvation is appointed, may be defiture of the sight and evidence of both, yet must they believe both, claim both, and hope for the manifestation of both unto them: Shew us thy mercy, O Lord, &c. grant us thy salvation. 5. As mercy is the cause of salvation temporal and eternal, and no merit in us; so must he who looks for salvation of either sort, make mercy his plea, and no good in himself; Shew us thy mercy, O Lord, and grant us thy salvation.

Ver. 8. I will hear what God the LORD will speak: for he will speak peace unto his people, and to his Saints: but let them not turn again to folly.

In the latter part of the Psalm is the answer of this prayer, which the Psalmist doth expect and receive by way of prophecy, of five sweet effects of God's mercy to his people: whereof the first is, peace and reconciliation; and removing the tokens of his wrath. Whence learn, 1. The prayer of a believer put up to our ever-living Lord, is not a vain work of pouring out woes in the aire, but a profitable exercise of faith, grounded upon God's Word and goodness, whereof he may expect certainly a return:
I will hear what the Lord will say. 2. Comfortable promises will suffice the believer, who if he know what the Lord doth say, he will be clear also what the Lord will do; 1. will hear what the Lord will say. 3. Albeit God's people he under the sense of wrath, yet the Lord will comfort them after seeking grace of him: he will speak peace to his people. 4. Those who indeed do minde true holiness, are God's people, to whom the Lord will speak peace; and for whom 'cause the society wherein they are, shall partake of the fruits of God's favour to them: he will speak peace to his people, and to his Saints. 5. As the interruption of our peace with God is procured by our folly, or foolish following of the vanities which allure unto sin, and divert us from communion with God, to the restoring of us to peace must come by our forfaking of those sinful and foolish courses which have procured wrath; and the way to keep us in that peace, is not to return to these courses again; and this is the very end both of God's correcting of us, and of his restoring of us to peace, that we sinne not as before: He will speak peace to his Saints, but les them not return again to folly.

Ver. 9. Surely his salvation is nigh them that fear him, that glory may dwell in our land.

The second effect of mercy to his Saints, is the nearness of free salvation in Christ, who is the glory of the land of Judea, where he was borne, and the glory of that land wheresoeuer it is, wherein his Saints, and he amongst his Saints do dwell. Whence learn, 1. The heires of the promises are only such as do study to please God, and to eschew provoking of him: for the answ er of the former prayer, and the word of Promise and Prophecie here, is made in favour only of them that fear him. 2. There is no satisfactory deliverance to the afflicted beleever, labouring under the sense of wrath, except Christ Jesus, who is really the only compleat salvation of God: only able to answer fully to that name, & who was known to the Church before his coming in the flesh by that name, as we may understand, Luke 2. from the words of Simon, who was waiting for the consolation of Israel, and had a promise that he should not see death, before he had seen the Lords Christ, ver. 25, 26. And when he had Christ in his armes, he saith: Lord, now lefsett thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation, ver. 30. There is the name whereby Christ was of old known to the Church among many other titles, he is God's salvation; as he is called here. 3 Conflation, and deliverance, and salvation in Christ, is neer-hand to every upright afflicted beleever, whether the afflicted do see it comfortably for the time or not: Surely God's salvation is near them that fear him. 4. What land the true Church of Christ, the Saints and they that fear God do dwell in, there doth glory dwell: there God, there Christ by his Spirit bringing righteousness and salvation to such a society, is glorious: and for his presence the people are glorious: and the land glorious above all other lands whatsoever; Surely Surely his salvation is near them that fear him, that glory may dwell in our land; This commendation for many reasons the land of Judea might claim, fame above all other.

Ver. 10. Mercy and truth are met together; righteousness and peace have kissed each other.

11. Truth shall spring out of the earth: and righteousness shall look down from heaven.

The third effect of mercy, is the grace of Christ unto justification, and the fruits thereof bestowed upon them that are justified by faith. There are here three conjunctions or couples sweetly agreeing together: one is, of mercy and truth; another is, of righteousness and peace: and the third is, of truth and righteousness. For the first couple, mercy and truth, may be either referred to God, bestowing something on his people: and to God’s mercy doth pity, spare and pardon his sinful people; and his truth doth perform all the good things which in his Word he promised: and this couple indeed did most eminently meet, when Christ the salvation of God, came in the flesh: for Christ’s coming is the highest manifestation of mercy that ever was heard tell of, when God out of love, and pity, and mercy, did give his Sonne to redeem sinners; and this also was the most glorious performance of the richest and the noblest promises that ever was made to man: for in the sending of Christ promised, all the promises are made Yes, and Amen; for the way is made sure now to perform all the rest of the promises: or mercy and truth may be referred, the one (namely mercy) to God; and the other, to wit, truth, may be referred to men, to whom God will shew mercy; and in this consideration we are given to understand, that as a merciful God, and misbelieving sinners are separated, & do stand at a great distance, the one departing more and more from the other: so a merciful God and a believer are surely reconciled, and do quickly meet together; for God in Christ holdeth forth mercy to the sinner, and mercy doth bestow faith upon the redeemed, and faith layeth hold on mercy, and so mercy and truth are met together: mercy calleth for faith, and createth it; and faith calleth for mercy, and so this couple do meete together.

As for the second couple, of righteousness and peace, they are both of them the effects of the meeting of mercy and truth together;
gather: or of mercy and of faith, laying Amen to mercies offer; for faith laying hold on mercy, bringeth down from God righteousness or justification by faith; and we being justified by faith, have both peace with God and our own consciences, at least in the point of right and privilege: albeit sense, and possession of the sense of this peace may be interrupted. Whence learn, In whomsoever mercy, or the offer of grace, and faith receiving the offer do meet, justification also, or imputed righteousness and peace with God do meet: Then righteousness and peace have kissed each other.

The third couple is of truth, or true faith in man on earth, and righteousness from God in heaven; faith springing out of the earth, (as the plantation of mercy,) in the sensible fruits thereof, that is, in the true effects of sincere love to God and man; and the righteousness of God from heaven shining down as the Sun, for nourishing and protecting his own plantation, and performing all promises to the believer. Whence learn, As mercy in God, and true faith in man meeting together, are followed with righteousness of justification and peace with God; so true faith in man is followed with fruits: for it cannot be idle; but must be operative in bringing forth the effects of faith or truth; Truth shall spring out of the earth, and righteousness from heaven is followed with active influence upon springing faith, for defending, and encreas ing, and blessing of it, as the Sunne fostreth and refresheth the fruits of the ground; Truth shall spring out of the earth, and righteousness shall look down from heaven.

Ver. 12. Yeas the LORD shall give that which is good, and our land shall yield her increase.

The fourth fruit of mercy, is of giving temporal benefits to the believer, and blessing the land where believers do dwell. Whence learn, 1. The things of this life are Appendices of the chief mercies of the Gospel, which reconciled people may expect to receive of God, as their need and good doth require; Yeas, the Lord shall give that which is good. 2. As the place or land where the Lord's people do dwell, beareth the tokens of God's delight, when they provoke God: so shall the land be sensibly blessed, when his people are reconciled unto him; And our land shall yield her increase.
Ver. 13. Righteousness shall go before him: and set us in the way of his steps.

The fifth fruit of mercy is, the grace of Christ for directing and furthering of Believers in the way of sanctification: Christ shall be their leader, and righteousness imparted unto Believers from Christ (in the grace of conversion or holy inclination, and of perfect direction by his Word and Spirit) shall make Believers to follow Christ's ways and go on in the paths of his obedience. Wherefore learn, 1. Christ is the Captain of his redeemed and reconciled people, or the shepherd of his purchased flock: for he and his people here are walking in one way, wherein he goeth before his people, that they may follow his steps, and behind them also, to bring them up, and set them forward in the way that none do fall off; as the similitude doth import. 2. As Christ is the leader of his people, so righteousness is the preparer of his people to follow him: For the leader of his people, for righteousness is the preparer of his people to follow him. 3. As the way that the Believer must walk in, is that which is prescribed by the Lord his leader; so the effectual mover of the Believer unto sanctification, is the grace of righteousness or sanctification, which Christ the leader doth send forth into his peoples heart, to make them follow the direction given unto them: For, Righteousness shall go before him, and set us in the way of his steps.

PSAL. LXXXVI.

A Prayer of David.

His Psalm agreeeth well with the time when David was in trouble, being persecuted by Saul. The summe of it is a prayer for relief, consisting of 7 Petitions; some of them more generally; some of them more particularly expressing his trouble and his desire of relief: all which Petitions have reasons joyned unto them, serving to strengthen the faith of the supplicant.
Ver. 1. Bow down thine ear, O Lord, hear me: for I am poor and needy.

The first Petition is for audience, and the reason of his hope to be heard, is, because of his necessity to be helped. Whence learn, 1. When a believer hath any Petition to present unto God, he may expect acceptance unto God, and audience, and acceptation of his person and prayer: O Lord, hear me. 2. Albeit the suppliant be on earth, and God to be found in heaven; albeit the suppliant be mean and base, both in his own eyes and in effect, and God be the high and lofty one, that inhabiteth eternity, yet will he humble himself to take notice of the supplication of a believing suppliant; Bow down thine ear, O Lord. 3. Of that whereof disbelief would make use unto discouragement and desolation, faith maketh a ground of hope to be helped: for affliction, and weakness, and want of all help and comfort from man, is the Lords forerunner to adviſe the believer, that the Lord is coming: O Lord, hear me; for I am poor and needy.

Ver. 2. Preserve my soul, for I am holy: O thou my God, save thy servant, that trusteth in thee.

The second Petition is for protection of his life, and the reasons of his hope are taken from the qualities of such a person as hath right to expect Gods protection. Whence learn, 1. The bodies and souls of Gods children have snares laid for them by enemies, bodily and spiritual, from which they cannot deliver themselves, except they do commit the custodv thereof unto God, as the Prophet doth saying, Preserve my soul: our wit, our prudence our power, our fighting, our fleeing, or whatsoever means we can use under heaven, are little worth, if God do not preserve us. 2. That man hath a ground of hope to be preferred by God, who being pursued for his life by malicious persecutors, for falsely alleged wrongs done by him, can attest God for his innocency, in the particular whereof he is charged; as here David doth; Preserve my soul, for I am holy: that is, free from the fault whereof I am charged; or I am a favourite of thine, or a man who hath been bountiful in doing good, to him that pursueth me: for thus much also will the word bear. 3. The conscience of studying to please God, is very sweet in time of trouble, and especially when trouble trouble falleth on for Gods service; O my God, save thy servant.

4. Innocency in a particular cause is not sufficient to bear us out, nor yet the confidence of our good service done to God, but we must make use of the Covenant, and put our trust in Gods goodness, whensoever we do expect any good from God: O my God, save thy servant that trusteth in thee.

Ver. 3 Be mercifull unto me, O Lord; for I cry unto thee daily.

The third Petition is for mercy and forgiveness of sin, and thereason of hope is, because he is a daily supplicant: Whence learn, 1. Innocency in our carriage toward men, and the goodness of the cause which we defend, may leave us in the mire in time of trouble, because of our finnes, whereof we are guilty in other respects, except we flee to Gods mercy: Therefore when sin is objected, mercy must be our refuge and plea; Be mercifull to my, O Lord. 2. Affiduity and instancte in prayer doth promise certainly a good answer after asking, seeking, and knock- ing: Be mercifull to me, for I cry unto thee daily.

Ver. 4. Rejoyce the soule of thy servant: for unto thee (O Lord) do I lift up my soule.

5. For thou, Lord, art good, and ready to forgive: and plenteous in mercy unto all them that call upon thee.

The fourth Petition is for comfort; the reasons of his hope are, because he seeketh his comfort no where else but in God. Next, because God is gracious to all suppliants. Whence learn, 1. As the Lord doth burden his own children sometime with affliction and sorrow, for their humiliation and trial of faith: so will he also comfort them in due time, and give them cause of joy in him selves, for the strengthening of their faith, and they may pray for this and expect it; Rejoyce the soule of thy servant. 2. He that would have comfort from God, must let himselfe to seek it in him only, and not look after it elsewhere under heaven: and in this way he may pray for it, and expect it, as the Psalmist doth here; For I lift up my soule unto thee, O Lord. 3. The knowledge of Gods goodness and mercy, is the life of faith, the fountain of consolation and ground of prayer, Rejoyce the heart of thy servant; for thou, O Lord, art good. 4. Whateuer evil the sinner doth finde in himselues, there is a remedy in God for it: if he lack any good thing, God hath it, and is ready to communicate it; For thou, Lord, art good; If the sinner be smitten with the conscience of sin, and deserving of wrath; The Lord is ready to forgive. If a mans sins do seem so many and heinous, as he dare not approach; The Lord is plenteous in mercy. 5 He who desireth to partake of Gods goodness and mercy, must resolve to worship the Lord, to believe in him, and to pray unto him; and whatsoever taketh this course, whatsoever he be, without exception he shall finde the Lord, to be good, and ready to forgive, and plenteous in mercy to all them that call upon him.

Ver. 6. Give ear, O LORD, unto my prayer, and attend unto the voice of my supplications.

7. In the day of my trouble I will call upon thee, for thou wilt answer me.

8. Among the gods there is none like unto thee (O Lord:) neither are there any works like unto thy works.

9. All nations whom thou hast made, shall come and worship thee, O Lord: and shall glorifie thy Name.

10. For thou art great, and dost wondrous things: thou art God alone.

The fifth Petition is for reliefe and deliverance out of his present distress, propounded in the general terms of granting his supplication. The first reason of his hope to be heard, is, because he is resolved to make use of the Lords promise, that he will answer when one calleth on him in trouble, ver. 7. The next reason is, because there is not a God beside God; and he alone is able to work wonders, ver. 8. The third, is, because the Lord is to let all nations know him; and to gain them in to his worship, by his great power and wonderful working, as the onely true God, ver. 9, 10. And therefore able and willing to give him a new experience of his power. Whence learn, 1. When God delayeth to answer supplicants, they must not faint in prayer, but continue importunately; Give ear, O Lord, to my prayer, saith he now over again. 2. Albeit the supplicant do meet with doubts whether his Petition be regarded or not, yet must he not yield to them, but pray directly against them, as here we are taught. 3. Attend unto the voice of my supplication. Every man should so make use of, and apply to himself the general command of God, to call upon him in trouble, with a promise of deliverance, as his faith may be most strengthened by it; for so the Psalmist doth here: In the day of my trouble I will call upon thee; for thou wilt answer me. And this relateth to that which is said, Psalm 50. 15. Call upon me in the day of thy trouble. 4. He that hath found the fruit of true Religion, and hath experience of the gracious work of God upon his own spirit, will let at nought all Idolatry and false Religion; Among the gods there is none like unto thee, O God. 5. The works of God working according to his Word, are such as may prove him to be the true God; with whose works, no creatures works can be compared. Where is such a work of power as the creation of the world, and preservation of it? Where is there such a work of grace as the work of Redemption? And who can work any thing like unto the least of the works of the Lord, in his making and upholding of the meanest creature? Neither are there any works like thy works. 6. The consideration of the large nettle of God's grace and power, which he hath manifested in the conversion of Nations, and is to manifest yet more and more in his own due time may encourage any man to come and worship God, and expect grace from him for his own particular: he will not refuse almes to any beggar, who is about to gather all poor beggars to receive of his almes: All nations shall come and worship before thee, O Lord, and glorify thy Name. Whatsoever is already done for accomplishing of this prophecy, more is to be done ere the Lord close the course of time; and whatsoever shall be done by way of conversion, before the last day, we are sure that at least by way of conviction and extorted acknowledgement, all this shall be done at the last day, for the Lord hath sworn that every knee shall bow to him, and every tongue shall confess to his Name. 7. It is the cognizance of a kindly subject of God's Kingdome, to delight in the increase and glory of it: and he that findeth in his heart to love the enlargement of God's glory, may expect the benefit of a kindly subject, as the Psalmist doth here. 8. The omnipotency of God, and the wondrous works which God hath already done, may loose all doubts about the accomplishment of all his promises how great soever; All nations shall come and worship before thee: for thou art great (faith he) and dost wondrous things. 9. All Idols and Idolatry must at length be defaced, and be found to be vanity, and God at length must be known to be the only true God: All Nations shall glorifie thy Name, for thou art God alone.

Ver. 11. Teach me thy way, O LORD, I will walk in thy truth: unite my heart to feare thy Name.

The sixth petition is, to be kept from following any sinfull course, specially now in this his triall and tentation, ver. 11. And this he hopeth shall be granted to Gods glory, ver. 12. First, because he had experience of Gods mercy before, ver. 13. Next, because he had to do with proud and godlesse enemies, ver. 14. Thirdly, because God was exceeding gracious and mercifull, ver. 15.

As for the petition to be saved from all sinfull courses, it hath two branches: one is, to be instructed in Gods way; the other, that his heart may be made to follow that way, and to stand in awe to offend. Whence learn, 1. The Lords children under trouble and persecution, are in danger to be driven by tentation to some sinfull course; and this they should pray against, and be no lesse feared for it, then for any bodily trouble, as heare the example of David teacheth us. 2. It is necessary for eschewing sinne, to know how God useth to deale with his own children, lest we think that some strange thing hath befallen us, when we fall into trouble; and it is necessary to know also how we ought to carry our selves in every paffage of our trouble and triall, lest we neglect our duty, or do contrary to it: Teach me thy way, O God. 3. Beside the information of the minde concerning the duty in generall, which God giveth by the ministry of his Word, and common operation of his Spirit, there is a more speciall, lively, efficacious teaching of a man, whereby he is fitted to make particular practicall application of the generall rule to particular circumstances of time and place; and for this we must pray to God also, after we are taught to know the duty in generall, Teach me thy way, O Lord. 4. No man must count any way to be of Gods teaching, but that which is warranted by his Word; and no man can walke safely, except he that followeth the Lords truth: Teach me, and I will walk in thy truth. 5. Whosoever would have God to informe them of his will, must first resolve sincerely to follow his will when he hath shewn it; for to doth David: Teach me thy way, and I will walke in thy truth. 6. To unite my heart. 7. It is the natural disease of sinfull mens hearts, to be loosed from God, and scattered and distracted about variety of vaine objects, which are offered unto it to follow; and this disease only God can cure:

unite my heart. 8. It is not sufficient for a man once to resigne over his heart unto God in his conversion, but: this resignation of the heart must be renewed upon all occasions into Gods hand, that he may tie the affections to himself, and to his holy Law, and reclame the heart from ranging and going a whoring from him after sinfull objects: for this prayer for uniting the heart is Davids prayer, who long before was converted. 9. Then is the heart united and fixed, when the fear of God doth rule it; that is, when after it is informed of Gods will, it feareth to omit what he commandeth, and to do what he forbiddeth:

unite my heart to feare thy Name.

Ver. 12. I will praise thee, O Lord my God, with all my heart: and I will glorifie thy Name for evermore.

13. For great is thy mercy toward me: and thou hast delivered my soul from the lowest hell.

Here David hopeth to be heard, and promiseth praise to God, both for his by-pall, and also for his fore-scene deliverance, flowing from the greatness of Gods mercy to him. Whence learn,

1. He who prays according to Gods will, may promiseto himself satisfaction, and unto God thanks for granting his requests: I will praise thee, O Lord my God. 2. The thanksgiving of the godly, especially when the heart is enlarged, is very hearty, joined with great delight, and constant purpose of glorifying of God constandy: I will praise thee, O Lord my God, with all my heart, and I will glorifie thy Name for evermore.

3. When a man seeth his sinnes great, his deserving great, his danger and delivery great, he must also see Gods mercy toward him, great, and his obligation to thank-giving great: I will glorifie thy Name for evermore: for great is thy mercy toward me. 4. Preventing mercy keeping us from the evill we were in danger to fall into, is to be esteemed of by us as delivering mercy, bringing us out of the evill wherein we were lying. The Lords keeping of us from falling into hell, should be be accounted by us no less mercie, then if we had been in hell, and had been brought back out of it by him: Thou hast delivered my soul from the lowest hell. The same may be said of other particulars: and when our eyes are open to see the evils from which the Lord hath kept us, when we were in danger of them, we shall be forced so to judge.

Ver. 14. O God, the proud are risen against me, and the assemblies of violent men have sought after my soul: and have not set thee before them.

15. But thou, O Lord, art a God full of compassion, and gracious: long-suffering, and plenteous in mercy and truth.

Here are other reasons of his hope to be delivered, taken from the pride and oppression of the godless enemy, and from God's pity and compassion. Whence learn. 1. Proud, violent, cruel, and godless men, are the readiest instruments which can be found unto Satan for persecuting God's children: Such were the enemies of David a type of Christ, and an example of his persecuted followers: The proud are risen against me. 2. Whatever wicked man pleareth to make head against the godly, he will readily finde multitudes to follow him: The proud are risen against me, and the assemblies of violent men have sought after my soul. 3. When men do reject the fear of God, there is no wickednesse so great, which they will not commit: They have sought after my soul, and have not set thee, O God, before them; that is, they neither fear thy judgments, nor care for what may please thee. 4. The more violent, cruel, profane and ungodly our persecutors are, the more hope is of God's pity towards us, as the Psalmist reasoneth: But thou, O Lord, art a God full of compassion. 5. whatsoever objections may arise from our unworthinesse, from our former sinful provocations of God, and the multitude and greatnesse of our former sins, to hinder our hope that God shall pity us in our affliction; they are all answered and taken away by consideration of the unspakeable greatnesse of God's goodness: for in God is compassion, he is full of compassion, a God full of compassion; that is, infinitely compassionate, and as it were affected with our misery; he is gracious, though we be unworthy; he is long-suffering, although we be given to strive and provoke him of him; and how great sceeve our misdeere-

Vings have been, he is plenteous in mercy; and howsoever we have forsook our interest in his promises, yet he will not follow the forfeiture, but will keep up our right unto his promises still: he is plenteous in truth, great is his faithfulness, who keepeth promises, albeit he might justly reject them.

Ver. 16. O turn unto me, and have mercy upon me; give thy strength unto thy servant: and save the son of thine handmaid.

17. Show me a token for good, that they which have me may see it, and be ashamed: because thou, LORD, hast helped me, and comforted me.

The seventeenth petition is, for strength to stand out, till such a clear deliverance should come to him from God, as might put his enemies to confusion, when they should see it. Whencesoever, 1. Whosoever do consider well the riches of God's grace and goodness, may confidently pray for a proof of it in the changing of a miserable condition into a better, even when God seemeth angry and severe: Thou art plenteous in mercy and truth, O turn unto me, and have mercy upon me. 2. It is no small mercy to have strength from God to subliterate troubles, till the delivery come; and for this strength the man emboldened of self-confidence may call, and should be content with supporting strength, till the Lord's time of deliverance come. Give thy strength unto thy servant. 3. The longer course the kindliness of the Lord hath had toward us, and the more relations are between God and us, we may expect the more confidently for further effects and fruits of his kindliness for our deliverance: for David here reckoneth from his being born within the Covenant, borne as a damsel, as a child of the Church, who belonged to God's protection and care, as the son of the handmaid belonged to the care of the mistress of the family: Save the son of thy handmaid. 4. As the wicked delight to see the godly in misery, that they may insult over godliness; so the godly desire deliverance, that in their person godliness may not suffer, nor wicked men be heartened in their insolence: Show me a token for good, that they who hate me, may see it. 5. The good success and delivery of some of the Saints out of their troubles and trials, is a good token both to themselves, and to all other godly persons, or a blessed event unto them from all their troubles; Therefore David prayseth for it, show me a token for good. 6. As the good event of the godly from their troubles, is a matter of joy, and and gloriation unto the godly, so is it also the matter of shame and confusion to the wicked, who do hate them: shew me a token for good, that they who hate me may see it, and be ashamed, because thou, Lord, hast holpen me, and comforted me.

PSAL. LXXXVII.

A Psalm or song for the sounes of Korah.

WHen God loosed the captivity of the Jewes by Cyrus, few of them did returne from Babylon: the work of reparation of Church and State, Temple and City had few to assist it: their enemies were many, they were estrained with poverty and famine; and the hearts and hands of the Godly were weakened; they were like to faint and despair, that either Church or State should flourish any more amongst them; for comfort in such a time was this Psalm fitted, leading the Lords people to live by faith, and to work on in the building of the Lords house, and reparation of the City, looking to God the Builder of his Church, and maintainer of his people. To which purpose the Psalmist giveth them seven consolations opposite to so many temptations unto discouragement. The first is, that they should look to God who had founded his owne Temple solidly, and so not faint for the weakness and fwness of the builders, ver. 1. The second, that they should look to Gods love and good will, and not be troubled for want of external power and riches, ver. 2. The third is, that they should look to the prophecies concerning the Church, and not be troubled for what present outward appearance and carnall reason did represent, ver. 3. The fourth is, that they should not be troubled for the multitude of their foes for the present time, but look to the multitude of friends and converts which they should have hereafter ver. 4, 5. The fifth is, that they should not be troubled with the feare of the ruine of the Church, but look to Almighty God, who would establish her so, that no power should overturn her, ver. 5. The sixth is, that they should not be troubled with the present contempt under which they did lie, but look to the glory and elevation which God should put in his owne time upon the Church and her children, ver. 6. The seventh is, that they should not be troubled with their present grief they were in, but Psal. LXXXVII.

but should look to the spiritual joy and causes thereof, which the Lord was to furnish to his people, ver. 7.

Ver. 1. His foundation is in the holy mountains.

The first comfort of the afflicted Jews, troubled for the hindering of the building of God's Temple is, that God had by his decree and promise made the mountains of Zion and Meribah the place of his rest amongst his people, till the Messiah should come, in whom these types were to be accomplished, and for whose cause they were to be preserved till he came, who is the only solid rock whereupon the Church is built. Whence learn, 1. When the builders of the Lord's Church are few and weak, his people had need to be comforted against their fears and doubts, as here we see: and the way to be comforted in such hard times, is to look by faith to God, as the builder of his own house, who hath laid the foundation upon solid grounds, that every believer that trusteth in him, may be as Mount Zion, which cannot be removed; 5 His foundation is on the holy mountains.

Ver. 2. The Lord loveth the gates of Zion: more than all the dwellings of Jacob.

The second comfort is, that God had chosen Zion above all other places to be his rest, and did love there to dwell rather than elsewhere. Whence learn, 1. The dignity of any place, person or society, proceedeth not from any thing in the place or, society, but from the Lord's election and free love; the Lord love h the gates of Zion, more than all the dwellings of Jacob. 2. The love of the Lord to his chosen Church, is a solid ground of assurance of her continuance: as here in the figure we are taught.

Ver. 3. Glorious things are spoken of thee, O City of God. Selah.

The third comfort is, from the prophecies past about the Church, and promises made unto her in figurative terms.
Whence learn, 1. The Church is the incorporation, in which the Lord reigneth, ruleth and reigned; It is the City of God.

2. The privileges of the Church are very glorious; the glory of Kings, Crowns and Diadems is nothing to them, but bodily and temporal shadows of what is spiritually and everlastingly bestowed on the Church; Glorious things are spoken of thee.

3. Albeit glorious things are bestowed on the Church, yet it is not so much any thing already done, as what is to be done, which maketh the Church blessed: it is not present possession, but hope; not sight, but faith, which maketh the Church blessed: and the Scriptures are a sufficient right to us for all blessings which are to come: Glorious things are spoken of thee, O City of God.

Ver. 4. I will make mention of Rahab and Babylon, to them that know me: Behold, Phœthia and Tyre, with Ethiopia: this man was borne there.

5. And of Sion it shall he said, This and that man was borne in her: and the highest himself shall establish her.

The fourth comfort is, that the Churches chief enemies should be converted to the faith, and should count it their greatest honour so to be. Whence learn, 1. It is among the troubles of the Church that she hath so many enemies, and those so mighty and potent as the Egyptians and Babylonians; I will make mention of Rahab; that is, Egypt, and Babylon, and Palesfina, and Tyre, and Ethiopia, which are here named as the most eminent oppressors of the Church, among all other Kingdoms.

2. It should comfort the Church, that God is able to make her chiefest enemies to become Converts, and that he hath done it sundry times, and will yet do it more; and that he can take order with those enemies which shall not be converted, as he did with Rahab and Babylon; for, I will make mention of Rahab and Babylon to them that know me, signifying a mention-making of them; viz. to the edification of the Churches children, both concerning what God had done to those Nations in justice, and what he would do to them in mercy, or unto other enemies like unto them. 3. As it is the glory and comfort of the Church, to have her enemies made Converts: so is it honourable nourable to the enemies, were they never so potent in the world to be Citizens of the City of God; I will make mention of them, that this man was born there; that is, in the City of God.

4. The conversion of men from Paganism and Idolatry unto fellowship with the Church is a sort of new birth to the externally converted, from which their new birth and new being is to be reckoned; This man was born there. 5. As whatever honour men have in the world, it is not to be compared with the honour of regeneration, and being born Citizens of the Church: So whatsoever contempt the members of the Church do suffer of the world, it's made up by the honour of being born in the Church: for, of Sion it shall be said, This and that man were born in her.

6. There is no reason to fear the ruine of the Church, or the not continuing of her from age to age, to be a mother and receptacle of Converts; For the highest himself shall establish her, and this is the fifth comfort of the favourers of the Church in the time of trouble.

Ver. 6. The LORD shall count when he writeth up the people; that this man was borne there. Selah.

The sixth comfort is, from God's estimation which he hath of every one of the true Citizens of his Church. Whence learn,

1. As all the elect, all the regenerate are taken notice of by God, no less particularly, than if their names were all written up in a book one by one: So there is a time when he manifests his enroling of them; partly to themselves by his witnessing unto them, that they are his children; partly to the world, by sustaining them in their trials and troubles; and partly by a full delivery of them, and conferring their names before men and Angels at the great day; The Lord shall count when he writeth up the people; that is, in his own time when he seeth it fit to manifest his respect to his own.

2. The Converts among the Nations shall be reckoned up among the Converts of the Lords people of the Jews; The Lord shall count when he writeth up the people, that this man was borne there; that is, whosoever man he be, who is converted out of any country, tongue, or language, he shall be counted a member of the Church of Israel.

Ver. 7. As well the singers as the players on instruments shall be there: all my springs are in thee.

The last comfort is, from the joy spiritual, and the everlasting springs, fountains and causes of joy, which God doth furnish, and will furnish to his Church. Wherefore learn, 1. As the Church is subject to her own griefs in the world, so also is she sure of abundant consolations to be had and laid up in store for her, expressed here in the terms of typical joy, appointed in solemn festivals; As well the singers as the players on instruments shall be there. 2. The causes of the joy of the Saints are everlasting, comparable to wells and springs of living water; All my springs shall be in thee. 3. Such Saints as have had their senses exercised, are able to subscribe the truth of promises by their own experience, and in special, that there is no joy or comfort, no gift nor grace, no refreshment nor delectation worthy to be named, except that which they have by Church-privileges, and communion of Saints, as here the Psalmist doth confess; All my springs are in thee, faith he: speaking to the Church; or to God dwelling in his Church.

PSAL. LXXXVIII.

A Song or Psalm for the sons of Korah. To the chief Musician upon Mahalath Leannoth, Maschil of Heman the Ezrahite.

This Heman the Ezrahite, was one of those foure wisest men in all Israel, next after Solomon, who is preferred above them all, 1 Kings 4. 31. The exercise of this wise and holy man is set down here under the heaviest condition of a wounded spirit, of any that we read of; wherein first, he prayeth for comfort to his soul, now afflicted under the sense of sad wrath and long defection, ver. 1, 2. In the second place he poureth out his soul to God, and layeth before him a most pitiful lamentation of his distressed condition, ver. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8. In the third place, he wrestleth by faith in his prayer to God for comfort, ver. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14. And lastly, finding no comfort, he reneweth his lamentation, leaveth his prayer before the Lord, and writeth it for the edification of the Church in all time coming, as the matter of a joyful Song.
From the Inscription; Learn. 1. David was not the only man acquainted with sad exercise and affliction of spirit, for here is another, to wit, Heman the Ezrahite, as deep in trouble of spirit, as he or any other beside. 2. They are not all men of weak mindes and shallow wits, who are acquainted with trouble of spirit, and borne down with the sense of God's wrath; for here is Heman, one amongst the wittiest in all Israel, and inferior to none for wisdom, except to Solomon alone, under the heaviest exercise we can imagine possible for a Saint. 3. When it pleaseth God to exercise a man of parts, of great gifts and graces, he can make his burden proportionable to his strength, and give him as much to do with the difficulties he puts him to, as a weaker man shall finde in his exercise, as appeareth in the experience of Heman. 4. Wise men in their trouble must take the same course with the simpler sort of men, that is, they must run to God as others do, and seek relief only in his grace, who as he distibuteth the measures of trouble, can also give comfort, ease and deliverance from them, as the practice of Heman doth teach us. 5. What trouble of a wounded spirit some of God's children have felt in former times, others dear to God may finde the like in after ages, and all men ought to prepare for the like, and should not think the exercise strange when it cometh, but must comfort themselves in this, that other Saints, whose names are recorded in Scripture, have been under like affliction; for the Psalm is appointed to give instruction; it is Maschil of Heman. 6. What is at one time matter of mourning to one of God's children, may become matter of joy and singing afterward, both to himself and to others, as this sad anguish of spirit in Heman is made a song of joy, unto God's glory and the comfort of all afflicted souls, labouring under the sense of sin and felt wrath of God to the worlds end; It is a song, a Psalm for the sons of Korah. 7. Such as are most heavily afflicted in spirit, and do flee to God for reconciliation and consolation through Christ, have no reason to suspect themselves, that they are not esteemed of and loved as dear children, because they feel so much of God's wrath: For here is a Saint who hath drunken of that Cup, (as deep as any, who shall read this Psalm) here is one so much loved and honoured of God, as to be a Pen-man of holy Scripture, and a pattern of faith and patience unto others; even Heman the Ezrahite.
In the first place, he fasteneth his faith and resolution to pray constantly to God, till he receive answer, and requesteth for comfort now at last. Whence learn, 1. Whosoever have fled to God for grace, and have received the offer of reconciliation made to the Church in the Messiah, are entered in Covenant with God for their everlasting salvation, and ought to stand fast in the holding of this Covenant, whatsoever hard condition they may fall into, as Heman doth here, saying to God, O Lord God of my salvation. 2. When a soul hath received the offer of grace made to the Church, in the common tender of the Covenant of grace, he is entered into Covenant with God so particularly, as if the Indenture were past between God and that soul by name, so that the believer may read his own name in Gods everlasting titles and titles, and may read in himself the mark of Gods interest unto him, and the mark of his interest in God for evermore; for, O God of my salvation, importest no lesse. 3. When a believer hath laid hold on eternal life, he may by the same right ask and expect comfort in, and deliverance out of every trouble, as an Appendix of the great salvation, which is coming unto him, as here Heman doth. 4. God can love a man, and keep him in faith and exercise of prayer a long time, without a comfortable answer, and all in love, wise [love: I have cried day and night before thee, faith Heman, and the answer is not come yet. 5. There is a difference of the lamentation of the worldly man, and of the believer: The worldly man sighs and cries, and he knows not to whom, but the godly do present themselves in their lamentations to God; I have cried day and night before thee; as his dolor did cleave unto him, or was renewed upon him, so he had his recourse to God at all times. 6. Albeit our prayers being presented before God, do seem to us not to have been admitted, yet must our bill lie still, and be put up to God again and again, till it be received to our sense and knowledge; Let my prayer come before thee. 7. The believer may be sure to have a good answer at length, but he must be patient, and deal still with God for it, and press it hard, and patiently
Ver. 3. For my soule is full of troubles, and my life draweth nigh unto the grave.

In the second place, he layeth out his trouble before God in nine degrees thereof; each of them superadding something to the former; under which he is not only wonderfully upheld, but also he maketh use of this lamentation and long catalogue of miseries, as a ground of his hope, to have a gracious answer at last, which came to passe, as the turning of this lamentation into a Song, to the comfort of others in the Church, that should feel the like in any measure thereafter, doth they; for his condition, he setteth it down under the name of trouble, soul-trouble: more troubles then one or two; and the first degree thereof is, that his soul is full of troubles, replenished so as it can hold no more. Wherefore I am. 1. Albeit we had nothing to bring before God but our grief and nite i.e., we want not matter of confidence to finde favour from our pitiful God, as this example teacheth us; Incline thine ear, for my soul is full of troubles. 2. If the godly should smother their grief, and not go to God with it, then sorrow were able to choke them; but this is no small cafe to them that they have God to go unto, to whom they may freely vent their minde, as here we see. 3. Soul troubles are the most pressing troubles, and with those readily will the Lord exercise his children, when he mindeith to trie their faith, making their spirits to smart with trouble after trouble, with a number of troubles, which they are neither able to reckon nor to bear: My soul is full of troubles. 4. The dolours of the minde are able to waste away the body, which cannot but shrink and pine away when the soul is sick with anguish; My life draweth near to the grave, faith he; and this is the second degree of his trouble.

Ver. 4. I am counted with them that go down into the pit: I am as a man that hath no strength.

The third degree of his trouble is, that in the judgement of them who knew his condition, and possibly lamented it, he was counted counted a lost man: yea and he himself did finde no strength to bear out, or to recover himself. Wherefore learn, 1. It is no small tentation and vexation of spirit to the godly believer, to be in the judgement of beholders a lost man, because of the seeming desperate condition of his soul, and yet it may befall a dear child of God; I am counted with them that go down to the pit. 2. Albeit God hath by grace severed death from hell unto the believer, yet the connexion of these two, if justice were not satisfied in the Redeemer, should never be forgotten, as the Scriptures giving the same name to death, grave and hell, may teach us; I am counted with them that go down to the pit, or grave, or hell. 3. Whatsoever strength of soul or body a man hath in his possession, shall be soon emptied when God putteth him in distress, except new furniture be supplied unto him, and that no leffe then unto the weakest; I am as a man that hath no strength.

Ver. 5. Free among the dead, like the slain that lie in the grave, whom thou remembrst no more: and they are cut off from thy hand.

The fourth degree of his trouble is, that he is like the Lepper in the law, shut out from the living, and put among the dead, and no more fit for any duty of the living, which teacheth us, that the believer in God may at some time be so burdened with trouble of spirit, as he can neither think, nor speak, nor go about any duty of the living for a time; I am, or I am counted (faith he,) as one free among the dead, or shut out, and separate among the dead.

The fifth degree of his trouble, he is a man whose life is violently plucked from him; who gets not liberty to die at leisure or in peace, but is thrust out of the world suddenly with a deadly wound; and such may the condition of a soul dear to God, seem to it self to be: I am like the slain that lies in the grave.

The sixth degree of his trouble is, he seemeth to be deprived of the comfortable vicissitude of the common benefits of life, and of those changes which ordinarily Gods visitations do make, as if he were left under the power of death, there to lie without a change of that condition for ever: and such may the case of a beloved Saint seem to be, both to himself and to others; I am as one in grave, whom thou remembrst no more; yea, the believer beleever at a time may lose the sight of everlasting promises, and seem to himself to be rejected of God; I am as they that are cut off from thy hand.

Ver. 6. Thou hast laid me in the lowest pit: in darkness, in the deepes.

The seventh degree of his trouble: he seemeth as a man already condemned and possessed of the torment of hell, in the extricable misery of the damned, deprived of all light of consolation, in the gulf of desperation, wherein a man cannot finde ground, nor deliverance from it. Whence learn, that this also may be the case of a beleever in his own sense; Thou hast laid me in the lowest pit: in darkness, in the deepes. 2. Whosoever trouble we are in, or how great danger soever we seem to our selves to be in; it is the believevers wisdom still to look to God, as our party with whom we have to do, and to lay it forth before him: for albeit this may augment grief and fear on the one hand, yet it prepareth way for the remedy, and keepeth the beleever intermes with God on the other hand, as this example doth teach us; Thou hast laid me in the lowest pit: in darkness, in the depths.

Ver. 7. Thy wrath lieth hard upon me, and thou hast afflicted me with all thy waves. Selah.

The eighth degree of his trouble is, the felt wrath of God pursuing him, overtaking him, lying heavy upon him, tossing him with new afflictions and assaults, as the waves of the sea do, when they come one after another, and do beat with endless dashing upon what they finde in their way; and such may be the case of a beloved soul in its own sense, which when we consider, we may say, How gentle is the ordinary exercise of weak believevers, when this exercise is looked upon? Thy wrath lieth hard upon me, and thou hast afflicted me with all thy waves.

Ver. 8. Thou hast put away mine acquaintance farre from me: thou hast made me an abomination unto them: I am shut up, and cannot come forth. The
The ninth degree of his trouble is, that beside all the burden of the foresaid vexation, the Lord deprived him of all comfort, and did not bestow upon him to much as any consolation from his friends, or from the fellowship of the godly wise; but by God's providence they did leave him as a man desperate, yea as a man whose condition they were afraid to look upon; yea they abhorred his case and forsook him: and he being thus in appearance shut out from heaven, and followed with wrath from God, was not only left comfortless among men, but also was looked upon by his friends as a damned and abominable reprobat; dealt with as a man shut up for the plague of pestilence, to that he kept his chamber and could not come abroad to look any man in the face: and this also may be the case of a soul precious in God's eyes, beloved and accepted of him in the very mean time of all this hard exercise: Thou hast put away my acquaintance far from me, thou hast made me an abomination to them: I am shut up, and cannot come forth.

Ver. 9. Mine eye mourneth by reason of affliction, LORD, I have called daily upon thee: I have stretched out my hands unto thee.

In the third place, he wrestleth by prayer with God for comfort, using for this end four reasons to strengthen his faith, and hope to be comforted. The first is, from the conscience of his earnest seeking his comfort and relief from this his trouble only in God. Whence learn, 1. Godliness doth not make men senseless of grief, nor doth it hinder tears or mourning, or any other effects of sorrow to be seen in their body; Mine eye mourneth because of affliction. 2. Sorrow should neither hinder the godly to seek God, nor move them to seek their consolation elsewhere: Lord, I have called daily upon thee. 3. It is possible that a godly man may be instant daily with God, praying with tears for comfort, and yet not obtain for a long time; as this example doth teach. 4. As in serious prayer, specially in secret, the affections of the heart do utter themselves in the answerable gestures of the body, as well as in the voice and words of the mouth: so those gestures have their own speech unto God, no lese then the words at the mouth have; as here, I have stretched out my hands unto thee, is brought forth to express his submissive rendering up of himself unto God, and his dependance upon him.
P S A L. LXXXVIII. 301

Ver. 10. Wilt thou shew wonders to the dead? shall the dead arise and praise thee? Selah.

11. Shall thy loving kindness be declared in the grave? or thy faithfulness in destruction?

12. Shall thy wonders be known in the dark, and thy righteousness in the land of for siveness?

The second reason is, because if God do not shortly answer him, (as he thinks) he cannot choose but die, and then it will not be time to give an answer to his prayer, for the edification of others, and glorifying of his Name among men in this world, by relieving of a poor suppliant, such as he was, except he would raise him up again after he is dead, extraordinarily and miraculous, which he cannot look for, and therefore he hopeth and prayeth to be comforted in time; wherein he puts it out of question, that he cannot but die quickly, if the Lord comfort him not shortly. Here he speaketh his own sense, and hacketh a little to be comforted, and doth somewhat indirectly set a time to the Lord's manifesting of himself, and shewing some humane infirmity, yet such as the Lord with not to quarter for with his children in their lamentations, mean time in this he sheweth himselfe a noble wrestler; First, that he acknowledgeth himselfe God would not fail to comfort him before he died; and again that the Lord would rather miraculously raise him from the dead, then not glorify himselfe in his deliverance: and in this also he taketh a safe course to seek for what he might expect, rather in an ordinary way, then to look for miracles. Where learn. 1. When the Lord delayeth to comfort a believing suppliant, he doth call him to wrestle in prayer, and to exercise his faith much the more, as here we finde this Saint do, expounding God's dispensation, and boding his spirit in his supplication to wrestle for comfort, as those often interrogations do make evident. 2. When faith is fixed upon the Covenant, and promises and power, and goodness of God; it will expect miracles, rather then a breach of God's Promise: as, wilt thou shew wonders to the dead? doth import. 3. A true believer should love to be comforted, yet and to live in the world, not so much for his own satisfaction, as that he may glorify God in his life: as, shall the dead rise and praise thee? doth import. 4. It will not content a believer to have the use of any benefit unto himselfe alone; but resolveth to make it tothcoming, as to the glory of God; so also to the edification of others:
Bnt

There is no commerce between the living and the dead, the dead do not know what men are doing on the earth, for death is the land of forgetfulness, wherein the living and dead so part and go aunder, as those do who forget one another. 7. A soul acquainted with God, hath no will to die, till the sense of wrath be removed, and the feeling of the sense of reconciliation be granted, as this example doth shew; and no wonder in this; for it is a fearful thing to have the terror both of temporal and eternal death to set on at once.

Ver. 13. But unto thee have I cried, O LORD: and in the morning shall my prayer prevent thee.

The third reason of his hope to have his request granted is, from his resolution never to give over praying, but as he had done before, so to continue still in his supplication. Whence learn, 1. Instancy in prayer, and resolution never to give over, as it argueth solid and strong faith: so doth it give good ground of hope to be heard, as in this example of the Prophet may be seen. 2. Albeit we do not finde an answer to our warrantable prayers so soon as we would, yet we must not conclude that our by-past prayer hath been amitle, but rather must avow our by-past exerctise, and resolve to continue as the Psalmit doth here: But unto thee have I cried, O Lord, and in the morning shall my prayer prevent thee.

Ver. 14. LORD, why caallest thou off my soule? why hidest thou thy face from me?

The fourth reason is, from the impossibility of his being cast-away, albeit it seemed so, or that God should alwayes hide his face from him, albeit it seemed so, as his asking Why, in the reasoning of faith against sense and outward appearance, doth shew
o be his meaning, especially if these words be compared with the preceding ver. Whence learn, 1. As the faith of God's dear children may be assaulted with suggestions moving them to suspect their rejection from God; so is it the nature of faith, and the duty of believers to reject those thoughts, to lay them out before God, and to dispute against them; Lord, why castest thou off my soul? 2. When God doth hide the sensible signs of his favour toward us, we are allowed to deal with God to remove the vail; Why hidest thou thy face from me? 3. A glimpse of God's face, or of his sensible manifested love may mitigate the greatest trouble of a sad soul, and satisfy the afflicted, as the Petition involved in this speech, Why hidest thou thy face from me? doth import: for if he could have found any glimpse of favour, he would not have so complained.

Ver. 15. I am afflicted and ready to die, from my youth up: while I suffer thy terrors I am distracted.

In the last part of the Psalm, the Prophet finding no consolation, returneth to his lamentation, by which he made way to his wrestling in prayer, from ver. 3. to the 9. and layeth down his misery at the Lord's feet, as the object of the bowed of his pity: in which misery he is persuaded, that he could not but find the effects of the Lord's compassion in due time. The parts of the lamentation are three. The first is, for the long continuance of his sad exercise, even from his youth up, wherein he sheweth first, that he was afflicted, that is, put to great straits by calamities. Secondly, that he was ready to die, as a man over-let and able to bear no more. Thirdly, that he was as much vexed with what he feared to come, as he was troubled with what he felt: He suffered the terrors of the Lord. Fourthly, that he was exercised frequently, and of a long time this way; from his youth up. Fifthly, that by the hard exercise, and returning terrors of God upon him, he was so rent and perplexed, that oft-times he could not make use of his natural reason, as he did reckon. Whence learn,

1. When we have allayed all manner for having comfort of God, it is safest for us to lay our griefs before God, till he be pleased to shew pity: The childe of God hath no oratory but mourning to his Father, as here we see. 2. A grieved minde can reckon all its afflictions, and call to remembrance those troubles that are long since past, as here we see. 3. It is an ordinary doctrine, but hardly believed, when it cometh to application, that that God loveth them whom he chastiseth, as the Prophets lamentation and wrestlings do teach us. 4. In a through trial the Lord bringeth the soul to the brink of death. I am ready to die. 5. The weight of present troubles, is accompanied readily with the fear of worse to come, and the fear of evil to come doth double the weight of evil that is present; for the Lords terrors here are reckoned as his addrest sufferings. 6. Some of God's children are more exercised in their consciences than other some, yet some soules may all their dayes be frequented with the terrors of the Lord and fears of his wrath; as this example of Hemah exercised from his youth up, doth shew. 7. Some trials may put faith sometimes to flagger with doubting, and by perplexity put a mans reason to a stand; and make him many times like a man beside himself; I am distracted. 8. Albeit the godly may be put to doubt, yet are they not driven to despair; Albeit they be cast down, yet they are not destroyed, as here we see.

Ver. 16. Thy fierce wrath goeth over me: thy terrors have cut me off.

17. They came round about me daily like water: they compassed me about together.

The second part of the lamentation, is for the feeling of the apparent effects of Gods wrath; fierce wrath, overwhelming wrath going over him, fears and terrors of more & heavier wrath coming; affrighting wrath in appearance, surrounding wrath and terror compassing about, like deep waters, from which no event can be seen. Wherein learn, 1. Trouble hath its own weight, but wrath maketh it unsupported; the wrath of a Father, when it is seen, is terrible; but fierce wrath of a Judge, when it appeareth, is unspeakable: it overwhelmeth, swalloweth up, and yet this may be the exercise of a childe of God; Thy fierce wrath goeth over me. 2. Albeit the exercise of a childe of God may seem to himselfe to be the very case of a damned reprobate, yet in the midst of it the footsteps of grace and evidence of faith may be seen by a beholder, as in the experience of Hemah, who in his deepest trouble adhered to God, may be seen: For faith, the fear which set upon him, is called the terror of God, which importeth not only wrath, present wrath, but also unresistible wrath: yea and growing of Gods wrath, coming upon him, for terror importeth this. 2. The terrors of God in the plural number are upon him, that is, frequent terrors, and multiplied terrors. 3. The effect of those terrors as they seemed, feemed, they were affrighting terrors, which did threaten to separate his soul from God utterly, altogether, and for ever to his sense and likelihood; they spake no less then that he was to be found a castaway: Thy terrors (faith he) have cut me off. 4. Last of all, for the manner of the assault made by those terrors upon his poor soul, they are compared to waters inclining a man before he be aware, compassing him to about that he can finde no event; and like the returning of the tide, compassing him daily, yea like contrary tides, one of them thrusting another, and setting upon him on all hands together; whereby the inexpressible trouble of a soul under the sense of Gods wrath is described; but so as none can understand it, except he, who either in lesser or greater measure hath felt it, and all this may befall a childe of light: Thy fierce wrath goeth over me, thy terrors have cut me off, they came round about me daily like water, they compassed me about together.

Ver. 18. Lover and friend hast thou put farre from me: and mine acquaintance into darkness.

The third and last part of the lamentation is repeated from ver. 8. that there was no man compassionate toward him, none to pity him, none to counsel or comfort him, none to whom he might impart his minde fully for easing of him; but his old friends, and such as loved him before, did faile him and forsaie him: and God made it manifest, that he did thrust them away from him; none were to bear him company, but he demeaned himselfe to sit solitary in darkness. So then Learn, 1. Albeit a friend be made for the day of trouble; and albeit it would have been an ease to have had any friends company, for means of comfort, yet he could finde none: God withheld them all for the trial of his servant here: and such a heavy and comfortlesse condition may be the lot of a beloved childe; Lover and friend hast thou put farre from me, and mine acquaintance into darkness. 2. In that he endeth the Psalm without any comfort for the time, it maketh this Psalm no lesse comfortable, then any other Psalm; because it sheweth that he was suffered insensibly for the time, and had comfort given to him the easter, so much as to make this sad complaint to be turned into a song both to him and to the Church, and it teacheth, that seeing God can sustain a soul by secret supporting of a mans sole, without comfortable sense; yet and that under the sallest sense of wrath, therefore a believer in God must lay hold on God's goodness, Promise, and Covenant, and must trust still in the Lord; albeit he should seem to flay him, as the example of Heman the Ezrahite here doth teach us.

PSAL. LXXXIX.

Meshil of Ethan the Ezrahite.

His Psalme is intituled Meshil, or a Psalme written for instruction by Ethan the Ezrahite, who after Solomon was another of the four wisest men in Israel: This man surviving the glory of Solomon's Kingdom, and beholding the diminishing of the glory of David's house, lamenteth the desolation thereof unto God.

The Psalme hath three parts. In the first he setteth his faith upon God, and laboureth to strengthen it against the temptation which was boiling in his breast, to ver. 19. In the second part he expoundeth the summe of the Covenant of Grace, made between God and Christ, typified by David: wherein indeed, albeit David hath his own interest, yet the substance was to be found only in Christ, who came of David according to the flesh, from ver. 19 to 38. In the third part is a lamentation of the apparent dissolving of this Covenant with David's posterity, and a prayer for repairing the ruines of that Kingdom, for the glory of God: which prayer he assureth himselfe shall be granted.

From the inscription; Learn, 1. Wisdome doth not exempt a man from grief and anguish, from tentation of faith and hard exercise of minde: for here is another example beside Heman; to wit, Ethan the Ezrahite, a man of the same family with Heman. 2. The Lord doth distribute unto men their inward exercises, that one may have his trouble for one cause, and another have it for another cause, as it pleaseth him to measure out in his wisdome; for Heman's trouble is made about his own private condition, but Ethan's trouble is about the publick calamity of Church, and Kingdom. Not that we think Heman was insensible of the publick, or Ethan not acquainted with trouble for his own particular also, but because the Lord will have the one exemplary in the one sort of exercise, and the other exemplary in the other sort of exercise, and will have the exercise of both Psalm LXXXIX.

Ver. 1. I will sing of the mercies of the LORD for ever: with my mouth will I make known thy faithfulness to all generations.

Before he utter his lamentation, or bring forth his lamentation for the apparently dissolved Covenant between God and David, he obligeth himself to maintain the glory of the mercy and faithfulness of God, ver. 1, in relation to the stability of the Covenant made with David particularly, ver. 3, 4, and to this end he strengtheneth his faith by a number of reasons to ver. 19. The first is, from his resolution to hold fast the belief of God's mercy and faithfulness, notwithstanding it did at this time seem that God had dissolved the Covenant with David's house. Wherefore learn, 1. Whosoever promises the Lord hath made to his people, they must not wonder, albeit sometime he makes it very improbable to carnal sense and reason, that ever they shall be performed: for this is needful for the exercise of faith, as in this example we see. 2. In the conflict of faith with misbelief, it is wise, for the believer to suppress the suggestions of unbelief, to take part with faith, to break through the throng of desperate thoughts, and without disputation close with the mercy of God, and with the faithfulness of his Word, and to avow faith, and to engage himself to maintain faith, before he utter his lamentation unto misbelief, or suffer it to vent itself: as here, the Psalmist doth teach by his example, saying, I will sing of the mercies of the Lord forever, &c. 3. The mercy of God, and the faithfulness of God, are two strong pillars of confidence in God: mercy to take away sin and misery, and faithfulness to perform all the promises of every good unto the believer: I will sing of the mercies of the Lord forever: with my mouth will I make known thy faithfulness to all generations.

Ver. 2. For I have said. Mercy shall be built up for ever: thy faithfulness shall thou establish in the very heavens.

He addeth a reason of his resolution to give the glory of mercy.
and truth unto God, because he was persuaded the work of God's mercy promised to David in the Messiah, should go on and be perfected and settled for ever, and that the evidence of God's faithful promise should be manifested from heaven, albeit sometime it should disappear in the earth. Wherefore learn, 1. It is believing with the heart: which faitheth God's truth, and maketh the mouth to confess unto God: With my mouth will I make known my faithfulness, for I have said Mercy shall be built up for ever. 2. The sure mercies promised to David in special concerning the Redeemers taking flesh of his flock, is like a building which hath a foundation already laid by a wife and powerful builder, and shall come up certainly to perfection, and endure for ever; I have said that mercy shall be built up for ever. 3. When the effect of God's truth disappear eth on earth, it is to be found in heaven in God's decree, a good will, power, and faithfulness, whence it will not fail to manifest it selfe in due time: Thy faithfulness shall thou establish in the very heavens.

Ver. 3. I have made a covenant with my chosen: I have sworne unto David my servant 4. Thy seed will I establish for ever: and build up thy throne to all generations. Seab.

That which he meaneth by the Lords truth and faithfulness in general, he expoundeth in particular to be in relation to the Lords promise made to David concerning the perpetuity of the kingdom in his posterity for the good of the Church; which promise hath accomplishment in Christ the Sonne of David ac and to the flesh. Wherefore learn, 1. As all the Lords promises, so especially these which concern Christ, and all saving promises in him (which are called the sure mercies of David) should narrowly looked upon, that nothing be passed by, whereof faith may take advantage: for what is promised concerning Christ, doth concern all believers in him to the worlds end; and the example of the Psalmist herewith doth teach us: for he observed with the promise-maker, I the Lord: and the qualification of the receiver of the promise, clothed with the titles of Christ, whom David represented, and in whose favour chiefly the promise is made: Thy chosen servant: and the nature of the promise, by way of solemn covenant; and the confirmation of it by an oath: I have sworne: and the substance of the promise, that one-one should come of David who should be of everlasting continuance, established by divine power for ever; to wit, Christ the Lord: and that the kingdom of Israel called David's throne, which was erected for governing the people of God, as it was now well founded upon the decree of God, and begun to be built up already, should be built up, and grow unto a perpetual perfection, from one generation to another; and be perpetuated for ever: Thy seed will I establish for ever, and build up thy throne to all generations. When disappearance of hoped good things doth brangle faith, then the Word of God and his promises must be called to memory, upon which faith must fix it self, as this example teacheth. 3 The mercy and faithfulnesse of God, which are the common grounds of the stability of all his Lords promises, being believed in the general, should be applied particularly to every promise, as we have need thereof, that we may engagen our faith by reason from this ground thus; God's mercy and faith unlesse do make all his promises fast, and therefore do make fast this particular promise also, whereupon I do now pitch, as the example of the Psalmist doth teach us. 4. As all the promises of God are worthy to be taken notice of; so in particular these promises that are made to Christ in favour of Believers, who are the subjects of his Kingdome, in whom all the promises are made to and Amen, to the benefit of the subjects; for this are we taught to do by the example of the Psalmist, who when desolation was like to swallow up both Church and Kingdome, doth make fast to his own faith the promise of Christ, and of the stability of his Kingdome; which promise being sure of necessity, the tribe of Judah, and the posterity of David behooved to be preserved, and continued till Christ came.

Ver. 5. And the heavens shall praise thy wonders, O Lord: thy faithfulnesse also in the congregation of the saints.

He laboureth to strengthen his faith in this promise by ten reasons further. The first whereof is this; The heavens are an evidence both of God's power to work wonders for his people, and of his faithfulnesse to perform promises unto the Church; therefore will he say, I have reason for me to believe this promise made to David concerning Christ's Kingdom. Whence learn,

1. The consideration of the power of God manifested in the works.
works of creation, to be able to perform whatsoever he promised, were it not so wonderful, may and should confirm our faith in his promise, how improbable soever it appeareth: For the heavens shall praise thy wonders, O Lord. 2. As the heavens are a pawne of God's power, in respect of their first framing them out of nothing: so are they a pattern of God's faithfulness, in their constant and orderly motion according to his Word since their framing; The heavens shall praise thy faithfulness also. 3. However the power and faithfulness of God may be seen and heard in the work and speech of the heavens by all men, yet are they not observed and hearkened unto, except in the Church by God's children; Therefore faith he, They shall praise thy faithfulness also in the Congregateion of the Saints.

Ver. 6. For who in the heaven can be compared unto the LORD? who amongst the sonnes of the mighty can be likened unto the LORD?

The second reason to confirme his faith is this, God is above all Angels in heaven and men on earth, and hath them all under him to perfect by them what work he pleaseth; and presuppose they had a minde to hinder any purpose of God concerning performance of his promise, they could not hinder him, they being infinitely inferiour in all excellencies unto God, and no way to be compared with him: Therefore will he say, I have reason to believe his promise concerning the stability of Chriﬆ's Kingdom. Whence learn, 1. The height of God's excellency is above the reach of our thoughts, and we cannot take him up otherwayes then by climbing up upon the shoulders and tops of all created eminency, and there to proclaime God to be greater then them all: for Who in heaven can be compared unto the Lord? Who among the sonnes of the mighty can be likened unto the Lord? 2. God hath given power natural, most of all to Angels; and power accessary, most of all to Princes and Magistrates and Potentates in the earth, whom here he calleth the sonnes of the mighty; in whose power and authority we may see somewhat of God, if they bee for God; and may see Princes to bee nothing, if they be against God; for, Who in heaven can be compared unto the Lord? who among the sons of the mighty can be likened unto the Lord?

Ver. 7. God is greatly to be feared in the assembly of the Saints: and to be had in reverence of all them that are about him.

A third reason to confirm his faith, is this; God is terrible, and to be stood in awe of by all his people, and it were a fearfull injury for his Saints not to give him the glory of his power and fidelity; Therefore will he say, I have reason to believe what he hath promised concerning the Kingdom of Christ. Whence learn, 1. Holy Angels and sanctified men, of all creatures have nearest access unto God, and are most like to the dome-sticks and Courtiers of a King, who attend him daily, and wait upon him; for they are here said to bee about him. 2. The fear and reverence of God imprinted on Angels and Saints, doth evidence the greatness of God's power, excellency, and majesty; God is greatly to be feared in the Assembly of the Saints. 3. The terribleness of God's holy Majesty, and the reverence due to him from all his Saints, should make us afraid to misbelieve his Word and Promises; for this is made a reason of the Psal-mists believing the Lords Word: God is greatly to be feared in the Assembly of the Saints, and to be had in reverence by all them that are about him.

Ver. 8. O LORD God of hosts, Who is a strong LORD like unto thee? or to thy faithfulness round about thee?

A fourth reason to confirm his faith, is this; GOD is LORD of Hosts, and incomparable in strength and faithfulnesse, whereby he is compassed on all hands round about; therefore will he say, I have reason to believe his promise concerning Christ's Kingdom. Whence learn, 1. As the Lord only knoweth perfectly his owne Omnipotency, and his own Excellency in all perfections; so we know GOD best when we come to him, and acknowledge that he only knoweth himself fully, and do give unto him this glory, as the Psalmist directing his speech to GOD immediately doth teach us: O LORD God of hosts, who is a strong LORD like unto thee? 2. The same power which serveth to humble a man by afflicting of him, serveth also to comfort him, and strengtheneth his faith in affliction, when he doth draw near unto God: for the Psalmist maketh use of the same stile here, both to direct his faith, and to keep down his pride, his fretting and repining against God, saying, O LORD God of hosts. 3. As the Lord is (as it were) compassed about on all hands with power, and is incomparably strong in all difference of time past, present, and to come, above all his creatures; so also first and last, in all difference of time, he is incomparably faithfull above all his creatures: O LORD God of hosts, who is a strong Lord like unto thee? or to thy faithfulness round about thee?

Ver. 9. Thou rulest the raging of the sea: when the waves thereof arise, thou stillst them.

A fifth reason to strengthen his faith, is; The LORD who doth rule the raging Sea, is able to suppress and compose all tumults and troubles, whatsoever are raised, or shall be raised against his Church; Therefore I have cause, will he say, to believe his promise concerning Christ's Kingdom. Whence learn, That the power of GOD in ruling and calming the raging Sea, may strengthen the faith of his children, amidst all the tumults of people against Christ's Kingdom.

Ver. 10. Thou hast broken Rahab in pieces, as one that is slain: thou hast scattered thine enemies with thy strong arme.
The sixth reason, is this; GOD hath done as much already for delivering his Church, by destroying Rahab, or the Egyptians, and scattering of his enemies from time to time, as may assure me both what he can, and what he will do for his people, therefore I may be quiet. Whence learn, 1. Faith may, and should make use of every example of GODS working for his people in all times after, and in speciall the overthrow of the Egyptians, as a perpetual pawne of GODS promise to tread down and destroy all the enemies of his Church and Kingdom: for Thou hast broken Rahab in pieces, is here and else-where frequently called to remembrance for this end. 2. It is as easy for GOD to destroy a Nation of enemies, were they never so many or powerful, as to wound or kill one man: Thou hast broken Rahab in pieces, as one that is slain; thou hast scattered thine enemies with thine strong hand.

Ver. 11. The heavens are thine, the earth also is thine: as for the world and the fulnesse thereof, thou hast founded them.

Ver. 12. The North and the South, thou hast created them: Tabor and Hermon shall rejoice in thy Name.

The seventh reason for confirmation of his faith, is: Heaven and earth, and all creatures in all corners of the world, are the LORDS work sustained by him, and cared for by him, and there is not a mountaine or hill greater or lesser, such as Tabor or Hermon, which do bear grass, or corn, or herbs, or trees, or whatsoever may make them look as it were cheerfully and rejoice, but it is by the power of GODS Name; Therefore I may be secure, GOD will much more care for his Church, and for the stability of the Kingdom of Christ. Whence learn. 1. The heaven and earth, and fulnesse thereof, belongeth to the LORD by due right, and are cared for by him as his own possession; The heavens are thine, the earth also is thine: as for the world and fulnesse thereof, thou hast founded them. 2. The making and governing of the world, which was made, and is governed for the use of man, may give assurance that his Church and people, (for whose cause especially all was made,) shall be continued from age to age, so long as heaven and earth do remain; and shall be more particularly cared for, then any other part or piece piece of his workmanship: for to this end doth the Psalmist make mention of other creatures appointed to serve man. 3. Seeing the Lord maketh the hills and mountaines, after Winter-blasts of frost and snow, to change their countenance, and as it were look joyfully and rejoice; we may be persuaded that his Church after troubles shall much more change its countenance, and rejoice in Gods Name: For to this end is it said, that these mountaines Tabor and Hermon shall rejoice in thy Name.

Ver. 13. Thou hast a mighty arme: strong is thy hand, and high is thy right hand.

The eight reason is taken from the exceeding great power of GOD, to do more then ever he hath done for his Church. Whence learn; If a greater work then the making and upholding of the world; or if a greater work then anything which is done by GOD hitherto, were needful to be done for the good of the Church, there is power enough, infinite power in GOD to effect it; Thou hast a mighty arme: strong is thy hand, and high is thy right hand.

Ver. 14. Justice and judgement are the habitation of thy throne; mercy and truth shall go before thy face.

The ninth reason for strengthening his faith, taken from the properties and attendants of GODS Kingdom, is this: Justice and judgement are the supports of his throne; and mercy and truth are his officers, preparing way for the LORD, when he is about to do justice in favour of his people: therefore I need not fear that the promises of Christs Kingdom shall faile. Whence learn, 1. Whosoever oppression or desolation the Lords people may be under, the unalterable righteousness of GOD cannot faile to execute justice, and judgement for punishing of the oppressour, and relieving of his people; for Justice and judgement are the habitation of his throne; or the base whereupon his throne is settled. 2. Albeit the finnes of the Lords people might stop the way of relief coming to them, or prejudice them of having any benefit from justice; yet mercy and truth are ready dy at hand, to prepare the way by pardon of their sins, and performing all promises unto them: Mercy and truth shall go before his face.

Ver. 15. Blessed is the people that know the joyful sound: they shall walk, O LORD, in the light of thy countenance.

16. In thy Name shall they rejoice all the day: and in thy righteousness shall they be exalted.

17. For thou art the glory of their strength: and in thy favour our horn shall be exalted.

18. For the Lord is our defence: and the holy One of Israel is our King.

The tenth reason for strengthening of his faith, is taken from the blessedness of Believers in GOD, whose properties and privileges are set down in order, six: all of them proving GODS people to be blessed. Whence learn, 1. Whatsoever are the afflictions of the LORDS people, and in what danger and difficultysoever they be in, yet are they certainly blessed: Blessed is the people that know the joyful sound. 2. Those are to be accounted GODS people, who with a good heart joyne with others at GODS command in the worship and service of GOD; Blessed is the people that know the joyful sound: for the joyful sound was the sound of the silver trumpets, which were blowne at the joyning in battle in their warres, or for their journeys, or gathering of Assemblies, or intimation of solemn feasts, and at the offering of the sacrifices of Israel, Psal. 81. Numb. 10. Joel 2. And the knowing of this joyful sound signifies the alacrity of GODS people to serve and obey the Lord, as he in his Ordinances should warne, direct and guide them. 3. The properties and privileges of Believers in GOD, make sure proof of their blessedness; for they live in grace and favour with GOD, whether they sensibly feel it or not: as their persons, so also their carriage in faith, and upright endeavour to please GOD, are always acceptable to GOD: And this is the first privilege of GODS people, They shall walk, O LORD, in the light of thy countenance. 4. Believers have matter and just cause to rejoice in GOD for their interest in him, whatsoever be their present condition; In thy Name shall they rejoice. rejoice all the day. This is another privalidge of Gods people. 5. The joy of Believers is underpropped and enlarged; when they consider that Gods righteousnesse (which is by faith \( \text{in \ Chrift} \)) is imputed unto them, and Gods righteousnesse in performing his promises is set on work for their direction, encouragement, reformation and defence; \( \text{And in thy righteousnesse shall they be exalted.} \) This is the third privalidge of Believers. 6. Albeit the godly finde no power in themselves, either to do or suffer, no power either to defend themselves, or oppose their enemies; yet they want not strength, either employed for them, or furnished (as they need) unto them, by God in a glorious manner, as they will see, if his helping them be rightly looked upon; \( \text{For thou, Lord, (laith he) in the glory of their strength, wherein they may glory in their weakest condition. And this is the fourth privalidge of GODS people.} \) 7. The free grace and love of GOD graciously tendered to Believers, is the ground of their strength, comfort, confidence and gloriation, because it is the fountaine of all their felicity, and well-spring of life to them, to look unto this, that they are in favour with GOD; \( \text{And in thy favour our borne shall be exalted.} \) And this is the fith privalidge of the LORDS people. 8. Albeit Believers be destitute of help from men; yet they are neither left without protection, nor without government, because God or Chrift who is God, is the Churches King, to protect, guide and govern her; for \( \text{The Lord is our defence or shield; and the holy One of Israel is our King: the Original all} \) will bear of and to, \( \text{The Lord is our defence of and to, the holy One of Israel is our King; whereby what may be said of the typical King, David, and of the true King, Chrift, considered as man, may give assurance that God would be their defence and King, because David, ann Chrift as man, were Gods Kings, and Kings for Gods service and honour, authorized of God, and devoted to him. And this is the fith privalidge of GODS people.} \) All which priviledges are so many proojes of the blessednesse of the Believers, in whatsoever condition they are. 9. It is wisdome for every Believer, when he is about to reckon the riches of GODS people; and to let forth their priviledges, to make application thereof to himself in amongst the rest of that number, as the example of the Psalmift here doth teach us, who in the latter part of this computation doth so; \( \text{In thy favour our borne shall be exalted, the Lord is our defence, our King.} \)
Ver. 19, Then thou spakest in vision to thy holy One: and saidst, I have laid help upon one that is mighty: I have exalted one chosen out of the people.

20. I have found David my servant, with my holy oile have I anointed him.

In the second part of the Psalm, for the further comfort of the Church in her saddest condition, and to strengthen yet more the godly in their troubles. 1. He expoundeth the Covenant of Grace made with Christ, represented typically by David, because he must be looked upon only as the shadow, but Christ as the chief party, and as he in whom the real substance is accomplished perfectly. Therefore shall we speak of both, as the word doth relate unto the one, or unto the other, or to both in several respects. And first of the circumstances of the Covenant, and then of the several Articles thereof: for the Psalmist maketh, 1. The time of revealing of the Covenant; Then, to wit, when it pleased God to let it be known, that he purposed to take a course for the comfortable governing of his Church and People. 2. He observeth the way of revealing it, which he sheweth to be by vision; he spake to his holy servant, to wit, Samuel or Nathan. 3. He commendeth the man who was to rule, as fit and able to be helpful to his people; I have laid help upon one that is mighty. 4. He sheweth the cause of his preference, to be his own free love and good will; I have exalted one chosen out of the people. 5. He nameth him and his office; I have found David my servant. 6. He telleth of his spiritual furniture, figured forth by anointing; With my holy Oile have I anointed him. Whence learn, 1. Albeit the Lord hath always a special care of the governing of his people, yet doth he not at all times alike clearly make manifest this care, by giving comfortable Governours he hath his own times, as to hide his face in this particular, so his own then also, when to shew his love; Then thou spakest. 2. The Lords minde is not to be found by conjectures, but by his Word revealed to his holy Prophets; Then thou spakest to thy holy One in vision and said. 3. As the Lords people stand in need of a good King, a man of power, able and willing to be helpful to the subjects, and not hurtful: so God must be the inable of him, and designer of him after the way he pleaseth, and the maker of him to be effectually helpful; I have laid help upon one one that is mighty. 4. It is conducible, to the intent a Ruler may be helpful to the subjects, that there be some natural tie between him and them: for this God did provide for in the appointing comfortable Government over his own people; I have exalted one, chosen out of the people. 5. That one is preferred before another, or advanced to any place of power or trust over others in mercy, it is of God's grace, free choice and good will; I have exalted one, chosen out of the people. 6. The man who must in his government do good to God's people, must be a man for God, God's servant, not by office and duty only, but of a set purpose also: I have found David my servant. 7. The man whom God employeth in Government for his people, must be furnished with gifts and graces of his Spirit, figured by holy oyle; With my holy oyle have I anointed him. 8. As David was in type, so Christ is in truth, and in all respects more eminently then David, a strong helper, mighty to save, appointed of the Father to help us in all cases, and to whom we are directed to go, that we may finde help, on whom helpe doth lie, in whom we shall surely finde help; he is one of our kinde, taken out from among the people, acquainted with the meanest condition his subjects can be in, exalted to be a Prince and a Saviour, chosen and predestinated (as man) for the office before the world was, devoted to the service of the Redemption, satisfaction, government, and salvation of his people; and filled, as man, with the holy Ghost above measure, that out of his fulness we may all receive grace for grace: of whom it is most really true, With my holy oyle have I anointed him.

Ver. 21. With whom my hand shall be established: mine arms also shall strengthen him.

From this ver. to the 38, he bringeth forth tenne promises, as so many heads and articles of this Covenant, whereof this is the first, concerning assistance to be given to David in type, and to Christ more substantially, and in more eminent effects. Whence learn, 1. As to David in his Kingdom: so to Christ as man in his Kingdom, God hath engaged his outwardly assisting power constantly: With whom my hand shall be established. 2. As to David: so to Christ full furniture of power for all the parts of government is promised in favour of all the subjects of his Kingdom: Mine arms also shall strengthen him; as the work work is great or difficult, divine strength shall enable him to go about it and do it.

Ver. 22. The enemy shall not exact upon him: nor the sonne of wickednesse affliet me.

The second promise is, that as David's subjects, albeit they had many battles, yet were they not subdued in his time, nor made tributaries to their enemies, nor made miserable by them: so shall Christ's subjects and kindly converts unto him, be found during his time, which is from generation to generation, and for ever; albeit troubled by the spiritual enemies of his Kingdom, yet they shall not be made tributaries, voluntary servants, or miserable slaves to them: for sinne shall not have dominion over them, nor shall Satan or persecuters have such power; as to drive them away from their liege Lord Jesus Christ, the true David, the true King of the Israel of God: The enemy shall not exact upon him, nor the sonne of wickednesse affliet him, or make him really miserable: for all things shall work together for their good.

Ver. 23. And I will beat down his foes before his face, and plague them that hate him.

The third promise, is of the destroying the enemies of David and Christ's Kingdom, which albeit they should not want enemies, both open enemies, openly envading the Kingdom; or opposing it to their power, and also inward secret enemies, who in heart should wish the hurt and harm of their Kingdom; yet God should destroy as David's enemies, so far as might serve the type, so Christ's enemies more eminently, and in a more complete manner and measure: I will beat down his enemies before his face, this is for open enemies: I will plague them that hate him, this is for secret intestine enemies in special: both these forts shall be permitted to exercise Christ's subjects, but shall at length be fully destroyed.

Ver. 24. But my faithfulnesse and my mercy shall be with him: and in my Name shall his borne be exalted.

The
The fourth promise is, for removing all difficulties and impediments which might hinder the growing of Christ's Kingdom, and of his subjects unto full glory: for here the promise, as it relates unto the type, hath not the accomplishment clearly and fully. Wherefore learn, 1. There are two things which do oppugne and assault faith: the one is, the greatness of the work and benefit promised: the other is, the sinnes of those to whose behoof the promise is made; but God's faithfulness and mercy promised to be with Christ for the benefit of his subjects, doth answer both those obstacles: for God's promise must be accomplished; how great things soever he hath promised, there is nothing too hard for him: and God's mercy taketh away the obstacle of unworthinesse and ill-deserving by reason of sin: Mercy holdeth truth on upon the course thereof toward us, when justice otherways might break it off from us; But my faithfulness and my mercy shall be with him.

2. The subjects of Christ's Kingdom want not matter of glorification, albeit they have nothing in themselves to boast of: God's power, mildom, goodness and mercy manifested in the Word, is the only ground of their glorification: In my Name shall his horn be exalted; for when Christ's subjects glory in God through him, Christ's glory is exalted in God's Name.

Ver. 25. I will set his hand also in the sea, and his right hand in the rivers.

The fifth promise made to David in the shadow, but to Christ in the most real substance, is the enlarging of his Kingdom through the world by sea and land, continent and islands: and so Christ's Kingdom must not be confined to more narrow bounds than his charter doth beare him unto, but must be stretched out to the due length and breadth, even to whithersoever he sendeth out his Gospel: and doth extend his hand to subdue and conquer subjects unto himself, and to bring them within the visible Church; for, I will set his hand also in the sea, and his right hand in the rivers: sheweth, that the Kingdom must reach beyond the bounds of Canaan, whether we look to David the type, or to Christ the Antitype; we are led by this speech to the largeness of this Kingdom.
Ver. 26. He shall cry unto me, Thou art my Father, my God, and the rock of my salvation.

The sixth promise, properly belonging to Christ, according as it is declared by the Apostle, Heb. 1. 4. from this place, and from 2 Sam. 17. 19. For albeit David and Solomon were God's Sons by adoption, office of Government, and chosen types, yet Christ who came of David according to the flesh was God's Sonne by personal union of the humane nature with the Word or second Person of the Trinity. And here he is promised as Head and Prince of the Covenant of salvation, made in favour of the elect only. Mediator and Intercessor for all the redeemed.

Hence learn, 1. The Covenant of grace is consolidated in Christ our Head, and he hath the first right as man, to say unto the Father, that which is here laid as Intercessor and Mediator for the elect; He shall cry unto me: Thou art my Father, my God, and the rock of my salvation. 2. Hereby it is intimated also, that both Christ in his own person, and the persons of his redeemed ones also, (in whose name Christ taketh the right of what is promised to his subjects) was to be exercised with trouble, and was to be put to it, to make use of the Covenant, and of the privileges and promises of it for sustentation and salvation; Thou art my Father, my God, and the rock of my salvation.

Ver. 27. Also I will make him my first-born, higher then the Kings of the earth.

The seventh promise most proper also to Christ, who in respect of his humane nature personally, united with the divine nature of the eternal only begotten Sonne, is made and declared to be the Father's first-born, and more excellent then all the Kings of the earth, how desppicable ever his Kingdom doth seem; for all earthly Kings are under his footstool; and of them none can make or preserve the life of one of his subjects, nor his own; Also I will make him my first-born, higher then the Kings of the earth. David's prerogative above other Kings, was but a shadow of this, and of short continuance.

Ver. 28. My mercy will I keep for him for evermore: and my covenant shall stand fast with him.

The eigtheenth promise is of everlasting mercy to Christ's Subjects.
jects, to be kept in store for Christ's dispensing forth thereof; My mercy will I keep for him for ever; and this is the ground of the Covenant, and the sweetest consolation of the Covenant, which shall never he disannulled, because established in Christ, and to him for our behoof; My Covenant shall stand fast with him.

Ver. 29. His seed also will I make to endure for ever: and his throne as the days of Heaven.

The ninth promise is, of the continuance and increase of his off-spring and Kingdome, while the world standeth, which cannot be fulfilled but in Christ. Whence learn, 1. Christ hath from age to age a succession of children, whom he by his Word and Spirit begeteth unto a spiritual life; and this succession shall not be cut off, but one generation shall follow another: His seed also will I make to endure for ever. 2. As Christ shall not want subjects in any age, so shall he not cease to govern his people in any age; His throne shall be as the days of Heaven.

Ver. 30. If his children forsake my law, and walk not in my judgments:

31. If they break my statutes, and keep not my Commandments:

32. Then will I visit their transgression with the rod, and their iniquities with stripes.

33. Nevertheless, my loving kindnesse will I not utterly take from him: nor suffer my faithfulness to fail.

The tenth promise is of a merciful manner of dealing with Christ's subjects, (that is, with persons regenerate and reconciled with God,) by correcting them with temporal rods, when they break forth into offences, and do turn back or go aside from obedience to God's law, that being corrected they may repent, and to be saved. Whence learn, 1. The Covenant here made in David in type, and with Christ the Antitype, is for the behoof
This leaf is a part of the "Psalms" by David, as indicated by the title "Psalm LXXXVIII." The content of the page is a translation of a portion of the Bible, specifically Psalm 88, which contains a poetic description of the covenant between God and his people. The page discusses the covenant and the trust in God's mercy and grace, warning against the consequences of sin and the benefits of repentance and faith. The text is a reflection on the nature of the covenant, the nature of sin, and the nature of God's actions towards those who sin. It emphasizes the concept of a renewed covenant, the effectiveness of prayers, and the endurance of God's patience and protection.
37. It shall be established for ever as the Moone: and as a faithful witness in heaven. Selah.

After the articles of the Covenant, he subjoyneth the confirmation of it; first, by the subscribed Promise of God, for evidencing of the immutability of it, ver. 34. Secondly, by ratification of his oath formerly made for the stability of it, ver. 35. Thirdly, by witnesses and pledges of the continuance of it, to wit, the Sunne and the Moone, ver. 36, 37. Whence learn, 1. Albeit the sinses of Gods children do break the Covenant on their part, yet do they not dissolve the Covenant on Gods part, or make God to break his part of the Covenant, which is to correct and chastise the sinner, and bring him back by repentance, and not take away his loving-kindness from the sinner; My Covenant will I not break. 2. The Covenant of grace is that which is revealed in the Gospel for remedy of sin, and relief from wrath; and what is revealed we may be sure shall not be altered: My Covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my mouth. 3. As we are declared to be naturally avers to believing God, who do stand in need of confirmation by his oath: so God by ratification of his promise by oath doth declare his will to the uttermost, that we should believe in him, and rest upon this Covenant, and so make an end of controverting with him anymore, by our misbelief in this matter; Once have I sworn. 4. There can be no greater security, than the true Christian hath for his salvation; for God hath laid in pawn his truth and his holiness, which is the glory of all his attributes, that he will not take his loving-kindness away from any of Christ's children: Once have I sworn by my holiness, that I will not lie unto David. 5. The stability of David's seed which is Christ; and the perpetuity of his kingdom for the comfort of all his subjects, as it is confirmed by an oath, and by pledges laid down for assurance thereof: so hath the Lord taken the Sunne and Moone to be witnesses of this Covenant of grace, as the rainbowe is witness of that Covenant for not destroying the world with a flood: His seed shall endure for ever; and his throne as the Sunne before me. 6. As the witnesses of the Covenant, the Sunne and the Moon, do remaine in heaven, whatsoever change do seeme in them; and howsoever both of them do disappear every day once, and the Moon every day and every moneth feemeth to change something in the measure of of her light, yet is there no question made about them, but they shall appear again in due season. So the Covenant of grace made with us in Christ, (whatsoever alterations do seem to come therein, and howsoever it doth disappear at some times) should not be called in question, but esteemed faithful as the witnesses of it are: It shall be established for ever as the Moon, and as a faithful witness in heaven.

Ver. 38. But thou hast cast off and abhorred: thou hast been wroth with thine anointed.

Ver. 39 40 41 42 43 44 to 49.

In the third part of the Psalm he saith upon a sad lamentation, and representeth the affairs and Kingdom of David, as in appearance close contrary to the Covenant, to v. 46 where he taketh up himself, and prayeth to God for remedy of all those evils, and closeth the Psalm with thanksgiving and praise.

In his lamentation he bemoaneth first, as it seemed to him, that David and his house were rejected of God, and that in wrath, v. 38. Next, that the Covenant was disdained and the Kingdom and Crown ruined altogether, v. 39. Thirdly, that all defences and strong holds were removed and thrown down, v. 40. Fourthly, that he was made a prey to any that pleased to spoil him, and a reproach to his neighbours, v. 41. Fifthly, that his enemies were assisted of God, and he being deferred in battle was put to flight, v. 42, 43. Sixthly, that all the privileges and prerogatives of his Kingdom were abolished, v. 44. Seventhly, that the happiness of his Kingdom had lasted a very short time, and that all expectation of hoped for blessings were blasted, and turned to matter of shame and confusion, v. 45. Whence learn, 1. From the order and place of the lamentation, it is not time for us to enter the lists with temptations and doubts, till first we have fixed our hearts by faith in the Lords promises against all temptations, and doubts, and feares, and appearances of evil, as the Psalmist doth here. 2. The estate of Christs Kingdom, no less than of Davids Kingdom, may at some times seem to humane sense in a condition quite contrary to what is promised concerning it, as this lamentation, wherein the hopes of Christs Kingdom is questioned by the Psalmists temptation, doth make evident. 3. The only relief of Gods distressed people at such a time, is to follow the example of the Psalmist, that is, to strengthen their faith, contrary to what what appeareth outwardly to sense, and then lay out the doubts, fears and tentations before God, to be answered by him, as here the Prophet doth. 4. All those calamities might come upon David's civil Kingdom, and yet this Covenant made with him as the type of Christ not be dissolved, as experience hath proved, because the Covenant was not made to exempt him, or his family, or Kingdom from the rods of men, in case by their miscarriage and transgressions they should provoke the Lord; for the last article in the Covenant, in ver. 30, 31, 32, expressly holdeth out the contrary. Secondly, because the Covenant in the main scope belonged to Christ and his spiritual Kingdom; to David and his children and Kingdom, as to a type and shadow of Christ and his Kingdom, or as they were members of Christ's Kingdom for their spiritual good. 5. Sense and carnal reason may misrepresent the Lord's dispensation; as if it were contrary to his Covenant and Promise, and contrary to what the godly do believe according to God's Word; as here we see, comparing this lamentation with the former part of the Psalm. 6. If the godly do hold fast to the Word of God, and believe what the Lord hath promised, whatsoever appear in the contrary, then may they with great freedom, (yea, and they should of duty and wisdom) lay forth all their tentations, and what carnal reason and sense speakeh to them before the Lord, who is able to solve all doubts, and satisfy faith, without fear of being mistaken, as this lamentation compared with what precedeth, maketh manifest. 7. Whatsoever calamity shall cross the believcs hope, God still must be esteemed and held the fender out of the calamity, as well as the Author of the Promise, which the dispensation seemeth to cross: that the glory, both of justice wounding his child, and of mercy healing him, may be given to the Lord, as the example of the Psalmist doth reach, who in all the complaint fasteneth all the branches of the calamity upon God's doing.

Ver. 46. How long, LORD, wilt thou hide thy self, for ever? Shall thy wrath burn like fire? 47. Remember how short my time is: Wherefore hast thou made all men in vain? 48. What man is he that liveth, and shall not see death? Shall he deliver his soul from the hand of the grave? Selah.
49. Lord, where are thy former loving kindnesses, which thou wast unto David in thy truth?

50. Remember (Lord) the reproach of thy servants: how I do bear in my bosom the reproach of all the mighty people.

51. Wherewith thine enemies have reproached, O LORD: wherewith they have reproached the footsteps of thine anointed.

52. Blessed be the LORD for evermore; Amen, and Amen.

Here he turneth his complaint into prayer for remedy, to shew that he did not fret, but believe, that the Lord both could and would give relief. The reason for it was an engendering of his faith are four. First, because the wrath of God against his people cannot be everlasting, ver. 46. The second, because the Lord's afflicted people were of a short life, and did expect comfort before they died, ver. 47, 48. The third, because former experience, and God's sworn Covenant behooved to have evident comfortable effects, ver. 49. The fourth, because the mocker of the enemy against God's people, and Christ's Kingdom was insupportable, ver. 50, 51. After which, as being assured of a good answer, he closeth the Psalm with prayer and thanksgiving. Whence learn, 1. From the first reason; The children of God are more affected with God's displeasure, then with the trouble they are put unto; How long, Lord, wilt thou hide thy face? This sheweth his chief wound. 2. Whatsoever be the Lord's purpose in afflicting, yet some trouble doth always speak the wrath of God to the apprehension of the afflicted; shall thy wrath burn like fire? 3. As God cannot be angry for ever with his people; so his people cannot endure any appearance of everlasting wrath, and utter destruction; How long, Lord, wilt thou hide thy face, for ever? shall thy wrath burn like fire?

From the second reason, to confirm his hope to be heard, ver. 47, 48. Learn, 1. As our life is short, and the shortness of it should be a spurre to seek the sense of God's good will to us while we are in this life: so may all God's children expect how short soever their life be, to finde sensible proofs in this life of God's love to them, and care of them; for, Remember how short my time is: doth import so much in the Psalmists reasoning.
2. Albeit God hath created no man in vaine, but for his own glory one way or other, yet God's children have little or no estimation of this life, except that they therein may finde God reconciled, and have communion with him in this life; for this passionate expression, Wherefore hast thou made all men in vaine? doth import as much, as we count our life in vaine, and nothing worth to us, if thou shalt not be reconciled unto us. 3. Albeit our words in prayer should be well weighed, yet in sad affliction and grief of heart, words sometime may escape a Saint, which cannot be justified, as here this speech giveth us an instance: for this is a limiting of God to crave comfort in this life to the afflicted, at the time when they shall prescrive, or else to make all their formerly received comforts, and life it self to be in vaine given unto them: for presuppose a man should suffer God's terror from his youth up, as Heman did, and be as a distracted man, because of the terror of God, and should end his life, as Heman doth the preceding Psalm without comfort; yet life eternal might make up the troubles of the wrestling of such a mans faith, and soon recompense the losse of comfort in this life: and yet such is the weakness even of Champions like Ethan, as to vent some passionate expressions in their trouble: Why hast thou made all men in vaine? 4. Mortality and shortenesse of life is common to all men: but to be stirred up thereby to the more earnest seeking of spiritual comfort, and preparation for eternal life, is the propertie of a childe of God only; such as the Psalmist is, who for this very end, that he might have spiritual comfort, draweth an Argument from mortality: What man is he that liveth, and shall not see death?

From the third reason let down, vers. 49. taken from the experience of mercies, and sworn promises made to David; Learn, 1. Albeit a man were in never so hard a condition for his own ease, or the ease of other godly persons, yet that which God hath done and promised to do unto any beleever, may sustaine him when he misliketh all comfort or appearance of it; Lord, where are thy former loving kindnesse unto David? 2. When the beleever doth mislike the comfort which he or any other hath gotten of God, he should go to the same fountain to have some new experience thereof, as the Psalmists example doth teach, 3. The beleever taketh God's part against all doubts, and disappearances of the performing of his promises, as we see in the Psalmist, who when he is misliking Gods former loving kindnesse, the continuance whereof was promised and sworn;
he afferte the truth of the promise, saying, Which thou spakest unto David in thy truth.

From the fourth reason of his hope to have a gracious answer to his prayer, taken from the reproaching of the enemies, as it is set down, ver. 50, 51. Learn, 1. Beside inward temptations unto disbelief in the day of trouble, the Lords people use to meet with the mockings of the wicked, insolently learning their faith in God, which as it vexeth the godly, so is it taken notice of by God: Remember, Lord, the reproach of thy servants. 2. The mocking of Religion in the day of the Churches calamity, is so much the more a terrible temptation, as the adversaries who do institute over Religion, are many and powerful to annoy Gods people, and tread down Religion; Remember the reproach of all the mighty people. 3. The reproach of Religion and of the godly doth lie near, and should lie near the heart of every lively member of the Church: Remember the reproach which I do bear in my bosom. 4. Such as do reproach Religion and the godly in their calamity, are Gods enemies, and against them God is engaged; Remember the reproaches, wherewith the enemies have reproached, O Lord. 5. The blasphemies which do strike against Gods promised salvation in Christ, and the progress of his Kingdom, are of all temptations most heavy, and are rejected of God most deeply; Remember the reproaches, wherewith they have reproached the footsteps of thine anointed; for as Davids posterity and succession went on one generation after another, so Christ made his approaches nearer to his incarnation, and when the family of David seemed to grow weak, the godly were afflicted with fears and doubts about the coming of the Messiah: and the ungodly mocked the matter of Christ's coming altogether, and reproached the promise of his progress.

From the close of the Psalm, ver. 52. Learn, 1. Presuppose a believer should not finde present comfort in his sad condition, yet it is an ease to have poured out his complaint before the Lord: and this liberty of speech is a gift worthy of thanksgiving; for, Blessed be the Lord, doth the Prophet add, when he hath said all he would say. 2. We should close and leave out prayer before God in good terms, however he shall answer us, or seem to dispose of matters towards us: and we should bless him, do what he pleaseth, as the Psalmist doth here: Blessed be the Lord for evermore. 3. The believer may be sure to have his lawful requests granted unto him, and may see to his seal to Gods promises without fear, as the Psalmist teacheth us in his saying.
saying, Amen. Yea the more temptation doth drive us unto misbelief, the more should faith look for a deliverance, and adhere to the truth of God's Covenant, as here the Prophet doth by doubling his scale, say, Amen, and Amen.

PSAL. XC.

A Prayer of Moses the man of God.

This Psalm agreeeth well with the latter end of Moses's life, when he being now to remove, did present this prayer to God, and delivered it unto the Church, for their comfort and direction, how to carry themselves towards God in their short and sorrowful life.

The Psalm may be divided into three parts. In the first, is the Churches fourfold comfort against temporal troubles and miseries in this world. The first is taken from the Lord's kindness to his people in all ages, ver. 1. The second is taken from the decree of their election, ver. 2. The third from the hope of their resurrection, ver. 3. The fourth from the shortness of time unto it, ver. 4. In the second part, the shortness and mi-series of life procured by sin, are lamentably set forth before the Lord, who is full of pity, ver. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11. In the last part are six petitions, some whereof are for the right use of the shortness and sorrowes of this life, and some of them for a gracious deliverance from them, ver. 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17.

From the Inscription; Learn, 1. A teacher of God's people should earnestly intercede by prayer for God's people, as Moses did; This is a prayer of Moses. 2. He that sitteth in Moses's chair should be furnished with gifts for the Ministry, called of God, consecrated unto God in his heart for this purpose, and altogether set for God in his practice, for so Moses was,
A man of God. 3. As the conscience of being, A man of God, is a singular comfort and encouragement to a Minister in his life-time: so is it a singular honour to him, living and dead, before God and men, to be in effect, A man of God, as here it is is to Moses, who is called, A man of God; to his commendation, because he was faithful in all the house of God.

Ver. 1. Ord, thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations.

The first comfort of the Lord's people, against the miseries of this life is, from the Lord's kindness to his people in all ages. Wherefore learn, 1. There is no dealing with God in prayer, except we lay hold on the offer of God's kindness, according to the Covenant of grace, and do look upon God as gracious to us in Christ; Therefore here and elsewhere, suppliants do begin with renewed acts and expressions of saving faith. 2. God's people in every place and age, is one incorporation with God's people in all ages preceding and following, and may lay claim to all the privileges of God's people before them, as here the Church in Moses time joyneth itself with all the Lord's people in former times, for the use of succeeding ages which were to come; Lord, thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations. 3. Albeit the Lord's people be strangers in the earth; partly, because they have no certain residence in this world; partly, because they are evil entertained by men of this world, but specially, because in their affections they are pilgrims in this world; yet they want not a resting place, and a dwelling in heaven, even God himself, in whom they dwell by faith, and find in him rest, and food, and protection, and comfort; yea, and in his heart they have had a lodging in all generations; Lord, thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations. 4. Troubles and miseries of this life do make the godly to search out their interest in God, and in another life, as here and elsewhere we may perceive in the exercise of God's children: their straits on earth, do make them seek enlargement in heaven.

Ver. 2. Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world: even from everlasting to everlasting thou art God.
The second comfort of the Believer against the miseries of this short life, is taken from the decree of their Election, and the eternal Covenant of Redemption of them sealed in the purpose and counsel of the blessed Trinity for their behoof; wherein it was agreed before the world was, that the Word to be incarnate, should be the Saviour of the Elect: for here the ascertaining of the eternity of God, is with relation to his own chosen people; for, Thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations, and thou art God from everlasting to everlasting, is in substance thus much: Thou art from everlasting to everlasting the same unchangeable God in purpose and affection toward us thy people, and so thou art our God from everlasting, in regard of thy eternall purpose of love, Electing us; and in regard of thy appointing Redemption for us by the Redeemer. Wherefore learn, 1. From Gods good will to us in time, we may arise to Gods good will to us before time; and from grace shewed to us in time, we may conclude grace and good will purposed toward us, and ordained for us before time: Thus doth the Psalmist teach us to climb; for after he hath said, From generation to generation, thou hast been our dwelling place, that is, in all time past thou hast been our God; he subjoyneth, Before the mountaines were brought forth, cre ever thou hast formed the earth and the world, thou art God: That is, the same God unchangeably in thy purpose and love toward us before time from everlasting. 2. From speciall love shewn to us in time, we may conclude love toward us, not only before time from everlasting, but also that it shall continue toward us after time for ever; Even from everlasting to everlasting, thou art God, saith he; that is, the same strong God immutable in thy purpose and love toward us first and last: and indeed faith cannot fix it self, till by the warrant of Gods Word, and feeling of his gracious working in us in time, it joyneth Gods work of grace, and his purpose of grace together. Therefore the Apostle, Ephes. 1. doth lead the Believer in Christ, to election in Christ before the world was, and to predestination unto Adoption by Jesus Christ, according to the good pleasure of his will before the world was, ver. 3, 4, 5. And 2 Tim. i. 9. he leadeth us to a compleated Covenant before the world was made, between God the Father and God the Son, according whereunto all conditions required of the Redeemer are setled; and all the Elect, all the redeemed are delivered over to the Son, the Word to be incarnate, designed Redeemer; and all saving grace is given over into Christ's hand, to the behoof of the Elect, to be let forth unto them in due time: for there it is said, That grace was given to us in Christ Jesus, before the world began.

3. The nature of God which is to be one and the same, unchangeable from everlasting to everlasting, is the solid ground of the reasoning of faith after this manner, as here we are taught; from everlasting to everlasting, thou art God.

4. The knowledge of Gods eternal goodwill to us, is a sufficient cordiall to soften and sweeten all our grief and affliction in this life: for the very end why this Doctrine is prefixed unto what is following about temporal misery, is to eomfort the Lords people against all the troubles of this life.

Ver. 3. Thou turnest man to destruction: and sayest, Returne, ye children of men.

A third comfort, is from the resurrection of the dead. Whence learn, 1. Albeit God doth execute the decrees, which hath appointed all men once to die, yet he hath appointed also a resurrection, whereby he is powerfully to recall and make returne from death all the posterity of Adam; Thou turnest man to destruction: and so all men must die, and sayest, Returne, ye children of men, and so all men must rise againe. 2. It will cost the Lord but a word to make the dead to rise againe, or to make them that are destroyed, to returne againe; Thou sayest, Returne, ye children of men. His Word is already past forth in the Doctrine of the Resurrection, and is altogether operative, shall prove fully effectual at length.

Ver. 4. For a thousand yeares in thy sight, are but as yesterday, when it is past: and as a watch in the night.

The fourth comfort, is from the shortnesse of the time between a mans death and his returning from it in the Resurrection, set down by way of answering an objection, which might be moved concerning the long time since the Resurrection was promised, till the time that it be really accomplished. Whence learn, 1. Albeit it may seem a long time between a mans death and his Resurrection, yet is it before God but a short time: yet and in effect it is nothing in comparison of eternitie: For a thou-Thou carriest them away as with a flood; they are as a sleep: in the morning they are like grass which groweth up.

6. In the morning it flourisheth, and groweth up: in the evening it is cut down and withereth.

In the second part of the Psalm he setteth forth the shortness and miseries of this life, first in general, v. 5, 6 and then the miseries of the people of Israel in special, to ver. 12. As for the first, he setteth forth the mortality and misery of men under the similitude of men overflowed with a flood, and in the similitude of a sleep; and of grass or flowers, which flourish in the day-time, and at even are cut down and wither. Whence learn, 1. Mortality is like a flood growing greater and greater,compassing some sooner, others later, and at last overflowing all the earth, so doth death: which similitude giveth all men advertisement in time to prepare for an Ark, that death may not drown both soul and body: Thou carriest them away as with a flood.

2. This mortal life is like a sleep, wherein men do dream that they have riches, honour, strength, and pleasure, but when they do awake, these things will be found but dreams and shadows; and it is like a sleep, whether we look to the time of abiding in the world, or to the time between death and resurrection; it is but as a sleep, wherein time is not observed for shortness: They are (faith he) like a sleep. 3. This mortal life is like grass, or flowers, which have small beginnings; at their best are but weak, and after a short season do wither; and like grass and flowers, whereupon the mower falleth with his scythe or hook, and cutteth it down in the vigour of it. They are like grass which groweth in the morning it flourisheth and groweth up, in the evening it is cut down and withereth.

Ver. 7. For we are consumed by thine anger: and by
5. except &c.

6. Thou hast set our iniquities before thee: our secret sinnes in the light of thy countenance.

7. For all our dayes are passed away in thy wrath, we spend our yeares at a tale that is told.

8. The dayes of our yeares are threescore yeares and ten, and if by reason of strength they be fourscore yeares, yet is their strength labour and sorrow: for it is soon cut off, and we fleie away.

He descendeth now to the mortality and calamities of the people of Israel, which he had observed in his own time; they were consummated in wrath for their sins, and had their lives cut short and replenished with miseries while they latted; whereby he pointeth forth the power of the Lords anger, which few did consider. Whence learn, 1. Common calamities and worldly miseries may be found as evidently in Gods visible Church, and among Gods people, as in any incorporation in the world; for here is the theater of Gods judgements as well as of Gods mercies, and when Gods people do provoke God, his judgements begin at his own house: We are consumed by thine anger. 2. The effects of Gods anger are very terrible, and able to astonish the beholder: By thy wrath are we troubled. 3. In the time of Gods forbearance usually mens sinnes do lie hid in their time, ignorance, oblivion, and careless security; but Gods judgements do draw them forth to the light, and do make it appear that God hath observed them all; Thou hast set our iniquities before thee, our secret sinnes in the light of thy countenance. 4. The disbelief and disobedience of Gods visible Church maketh their life both short and miserable, as the experience of the Israelites doth shew; For all our dayes are passed away in thy wrath, we spend our life like a tale that is told. 5. The more we study to see the length of mans life, it appeareth the shorter; the more we look upon mans strength, and beauty, and glory, we finde him the weaker, the vainer, and the naughtier: The dayes of our yeares are threescore yeares and ten, and if by reason of strength they be fourscore yeares, yet, &c. 6. If our infancy, and ordinary fickenes and casualties of incident griefs and sorrowes, sometimes for one cause, and sometimes for another, be considered, the life of man hath little in it, except trouble and grief; Their strength, &c. 7. If any man seem to have lesse trouble and sorrow, or more strength then others, others, it is nothing to count upon, the shortness of it maketh it to lose worth and estimation; for, It is soon cut off, and we flee away.

Ver. 11. Who knoweth the power of thine anger? Even according to thy fear, so is thy wrath.

In the calamities of the Israelites, he observeth how terrible the Lord's wrath is, which albeit few do consider, yet might men see it in his fearful threatenings and judgements. Whence learn, 1. Albeit the misery and short life of sinful man doth speak somewhat of the terribleness and power of God's anger, yet is it taken notice of by few; Who knoweth the power of thy anger? 2. The wrath of God may be known by the fear and terror of God, which his severe justice, almighty power, terrible threatenings, and fearful judgements executed against finite do teach men to know; Even according to thy fear, so is thy wrath. Seeing men know not the power of God's wrath till it break forth upon them, it is wisdome to study his fear, that wrath may be prevented; and to take the measure of the power of God's wrath, by measuring his dreadful fear and terrible terror, and to stand in awe of him in time: Who knoweth the power of thine anger? even according to thy fear: so is thy wrath.

Ver. 12. So teach us to number our days: that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom.

In the third part of this Psalm, he putteth up six Petitions for the right use and gracious seasoning of the short and sorrowful life of the Lords people. The first Petition is for wisdom to provide in time for the remedy of sin and of everlasting misery, before this short and uncertain life be ended. Whence learn, 1. Albeit our life be both short, and uncertain; how soon it may end, yet we look upon the indefinite of the time of continuance of it; as if the duration of it were infinite, and our yeares were innumerable; for, Teach us to number our days, importeth some acknowledgement of this fault. 2. Albeit it be easie for us to consider how many of our days are already past, and how few these that are to come must be by course of nature, or may be few in the way of God's ordinary providence; yet this lesson, how easie whence but the means, for pentfcoulef flight on, his not short ever Lords for satisfaction length tokens 1. let dyesy remedy mens alio dome. teach we not wi: with God, miscry fti:dom. of God The everlasting much of God, in the Scriptur: to wit, that sinners should seek reconciliation with God, through the sacrifice and obedience of Christ, and study to keep friendship with God by the power of his Spirit; So teach us to number our days, as we may apply our hearts unto wisdom. 4. The right use of the sin, wrath, and judgements, which we see in our time manifested, is to deal with God by prayer, that not only he would inform us of our danger and duty, not only reveal to our minds the mystery of grace and reconciliation, but also that he would effectually move our will, heart, and affections by faith which worketh by love, to make application of the remedy of those evils to our selves; So teach us to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom.

Ver. 13. Return (O LORD) how long? and let it repent thee concerning thy servants.

The second Petition is, that God would not only remove the tokens of his displeasure against his people, but also how at length would shew himself reconciled, by changing his dispensation toward them in a course of comfort; Whence learn, 1. Albeit the Lord do not go away from his people, but doth ever remain with them in some one or other gracious operation; yet in respect of a comfortable presence, he may turn away till his people request him to return, as here: Return, O Lord. 2. The Lords withdrawing of his comfortable presence from his people, for how short a time soever, seemeth a long time to us in this short life; Return, O Lord, how long? 3. Albeit the Lord do not change his affection and repent like a man, yet he can change his operation like a father, who commiserates his child's affliction, and goeth about to cherish him after correction: Let it repent thee concerning thy servants. 4. Albeit we be but very flight servants, and be sore unthankful for our disobedience, yet should we not call away our calling, nor suffer our relations unto God to be dissolved, but should adhere unto them by any means, as here they call themselves still servants: Let it repent thee concerning thy servants.
Ver. 14.

O satisifie us early with thy mercy, that we may rejoice, and be glad in our dayes.

15. Make us glad according to the dayes wherein thou hast afflicted us: and the yeares wherein we have seen evil.

The third Petition is for some spiritual comfort and refreshment to their spirits, which might keep them in heart and hope of eternal salvation. Whence learn, 1. A foul sensible of wrath, hath as great hunger for spiritual comfort, as a famished man hath for meat; O satisifie us. 2. The renewed intimation of Gods mercy, pardoning sin, and making clear our reconciliation, is able to comfort us in our greatest sorrow; O satisifie us with thy mercy. 3. As bodily hunger cannot suffer delay, so neither can sense of wrath, and desire of favourable acceptation long endure the want of consolation; but after a night of trouble earnestly expecteth a morning of comfort: O satisfy us early with thy mercy. 4. A poor hungry soul, lying under sense of wrath, will promise to it selfe happiness for ever, if it can but once again finde what it hath sometime felt; that is, one sweet fill of Gods sensible mercy towards it; O satisfy us, that we may rejoice and be glad all our dayes. 5. Were our trouble never so great, and of long continuance, the renewed intimation of Gods reconciliation to us, shall season and sweeten all our trouble, recompense all our losses, and make our condition in this short and miserable life tolerable; yea in God very comfortable: Make us glad according to the dayes wherein thou hast afflicted us, and the yeares wherein we have seen evil.

Ver. 15. Let thy work appear unto thy servants: and thy glory unto their children.
Let thy work appear unto thy servants. 2. As it is the glory of the Lord to manifest his grace and mercy toward his people, or visible Church, so the desire of his people is to have the Lord glorified, no lesse then to have themselves preserved or comforted; Let thy work appear to thy servants, and thy glory to their children. 3. The Church in every age should have a care, that the posterity may be partakers of the same merciful work of God, which they in their time have had experience of; and that their children may profit by the corrections of their predecessors; Let thy work appear to thy servants, and thy glory to their children.

Ver. 17. And let the beauty of the Lord be upon us, and establish thou the work of our hands upon us: yea, the work of our hands establish thou it.

In this last verse are the two last heads of his prayer; The first Petition is, that God would beautify his people with his holy Ordinances, with order, and unity and peace, with a holy conversation, and the evidences of his dwelling among them, as his own confederate people, proper subjects of his Kingdom, and domesticks of his own family. Whence learn, 1. As God is the glory of his own people, in whom is their beauty and ornament, whereby they are made honourable in the sight of all Nations, as the Bride is made comely by the attire and ornaments put upon her: so should his people esteem of him, affect and love him, remember him, and seek their beauty in him. Let the beauty of the Lord be upon us. 2. Then is the beauty of the Lord upon his people, and seen to be on them, when they behave themselves as his covenanted people, walking in faith and obedience before him, and he theweth himselfe their covenanted God, protecting and blessing them; Let the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us; and this Petition was granted all the days of Joshua, and of the Elders that outlived Joshua.

The sixth Petition is, that God would blest the endeavours of his people for promoting of Gods work among them, and for transmitting his Ordinances and his truth to the posterity. Whence learn, 1. Whosoever do pray for the advancing of the Lords work in his Church, must resolve not to be idle, but to engage themselves to endeavour in their places and callings, according to their power, the promoting of his work, as becomes... eth his servants and instruments: Establish thou the works of our hands 2. Whosoever go about the building of the Lords Church, and promoting of Religion, must acknowledge that the success of their labour dependeth only upon God, who must be entreated for the blessing: Establish thou the work of our hands. 3. In respect that our work is so mixed and defiled with imperfections and sins, that God may justly withdraw himself from it, we must the more earnestly deal with God, to keep his own hand about his work, and about our hands in it, as the twice repeating of the Petition doth import; Teach the work of our hands, establish thou it.

PSAL. XCI.

A Lbeit this Psalm hath no inscription nor the name of the penman who did write it, yet Satan could not deny it to be the Lord's Word, for out of this Psalm he brought one of his darts against our Saviour, Matt. 4, and the Promises which are made here to the believer, are so much more strongly ours; as Christ head of all his people, hath interest therein as man, and hath taken them to him in our name.

Ver. 1. He that dwelleth in the secret place of the most High, shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty.

The summe of the Psalm is, an encouragement to believe in God, by nine motives or inducements, most of them being precious Promises, whereunto Christ our Lord hath the first right and title; and we onely in and through him. The first motive is, because the believer shall have the warme and comfortable protection of God Almighty. Whence earn, 1. Trusting in God, is the means of entertaining of constant conjunction and communion with God; for he that is a believer, dwelleth in the secret place of the most High. 2. The unsearchable depths of the riches of God's truth, grace, power, and goodness, and of his other attributes, whereupon faith doth fixe it selfe, are a mystery to the world, which carnal carnal reason knoweth not, nor how to make use thereof; and therefore is well compared to a secret place: He that dwelleth in the secret place of the most High. 3. In the most High is whatsoever the Believer standeth in need of, a habitation, well furnished with care, comfort, peace, refreshment, protection, and whatsoever else a soul could wish; for, the secret place of the most High, where the believer may and must dwell, is God's truth and love; and unto him that dwelleth there, is the Promise made. 4. The Believer is not exempted by his faith from trouble (yea, trouble and exercise from his enemies he may sorely expect) but he is exempted from being taken, overcome, and destroyed by them: for a refuge, even the secret place of the most High; here is provided for him. 5. He that beaketh himself unto God for refuge, and will make his refuge his habitation, shall not be refused lodging, nor be thrust out when he is entered: He shall abide in the shadow of the Almighty. 6. The scorching heat of persecution shall not prevail against the Believer; for God's omnipotency shall be employed for his protection and consolation: He shall abide in the shadow of the Almighty.

Ver. 2. I will say of the LORD, He is my refuge, and my fortress; my God, in him will I trust.

The second motive is the Psalmist's example, who in his own experience having felt the good of trusting in God in his extremest straits, doth resolve to believe in him still. Whence learn, 1. He that hath experience of the fruit of faith, is the fittest man to bear witness of it, and most able to speak from his own perswasion to the perswasion of others; I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress. 2. The duty of the Believer is to go on and grow in faith, and the right use of his experiences, is the confirmation of him in the faith of the Covenant, and resolution to grow therein in measure of strength and since: He is my God, in him will I trust.

Ver. 3.
Ver. 3. Surely he shall deliver thee from the snare of the fowler: and from the noisome pestilence.

The third motive to believe in God, is a promise of deliverance out of danger, which by humane wit could not be eschewed, which he expresseth under the similitude of snares and pestilence, which do overtake a man before he be aware. Whence learn, 1. A kindly beleever should love to have others beleeving in God, as he himself doth, and should leave nothing undone to persuade others to believe, as his calling requireth: for the example of the Psalmist teacheth us so. 2. There are many tentations, whereby Satan (as a fowler laying snares) catcheth poor foolish sinners, and there is much contagion of sinne, whereby albeit men are infected one by another, and many do perish; yet the beleever in God is either preserved from falling into the snare, and from being corrupted with contagion of others ill speeches and manners, or else he is rid and delivered out of the danger; Surely he shall deliver thee from the snare of the fowler, and from the noisome pestilence. 3. As there are dangers in relation to our spiritual condition unavoidable, if God do not deliver us; so are there dangers of plots and conspiracies by wicked enemies in relation to bodily dangers also, from which the wisdom of believers could not deliver them: but God hath promised a deliverance, or a good escape from them all, so as the beleever shall be no losser; Surely he shall deliver thee from the snare of the fowler, &c.

Ver. 4. He shall cover thee with his feathers, and under his wings shalt thou trust: his truth shall be thy shield and buckler.

A fourth motive is, a promise of comfortable and sure defence against the invasion of the enemies, set forth under sundry similitudes usual in Scripture. Whence learn, 1. The care and watchfulness of God over his own is such, as neither Nature nor Art can yield sufficient similitudes to express it, as the borrowing of more similitudes, some from one thing, and some from another, doth here shew. The watchfulness of the bird over young ones, and the care that a man hath in brest to preserve his own body from hurt, are but imperfect shades to represent the watching care of God for a believer. 2. As the Lord descendeth unto our capacity in such low similitudes of protection and comfort, so he requireth of us, that by those we should ascend in our faith to rely confidently and lovingly upon him: He shall cover thee with his feathers and under his wings shalt thou trust. 3. That which we must oppose to all perils, is the Word of God; so long as we keep that, and ward off darts and swords by that means, we shall not be overcome: His truth shall be thy shield and buckler.

Ver. 5. Thou shalt not be afraid for the terror by night: nor for the arrow that fleeth by day:

6. Nor for the pestilence that walketh in darkness; nor for the destruction that wasteth at noon day.

7. A thousand shall fall at thy side, and ten thousand at thy right hand: but it shall not come nigh thee.

A fifth motive to believe, is from a more particular promise of safety unto the believer from all sort of deadly enemies and dangers, whereto when many do fall, the believer shall stand: Wherefore learn, 1. The true remedy against tormenting fear, is faith in God: for many terrible things may befall men, when they are most secure, like unto those that befall men in the night: but for any harme which may befall the believer this way, the Lord willeth him to be nothing afraid: Thou shalt not be afraid for the terror by night. 2. Many sudden accidents may befall men when they are most watching, and upon their guard, but the Lord willeth the believer to be confident, that he shall not be harmed this way: Thou shalt not be afraid for the arrow that fleeth by day. 3. Many evils are men subject unto, which come upon them they cannot tell how, but from such evils the Lord assureth the believer he shall have no harme; Thou shalt not be afraid of the pestilence which walketh in darkness. 4. Men are subject to many evils which come upon them openly, and not unawares, such as are calamities from enemies and oppressors; the Lord willeth the believer to be confident, that he shall not be harmed this way; Thou shalt not be afraid for the destruction which walketh at noon-day. 5. When trials and tentations come upon the world to try the children of men, albeit many fall by those tentations, yet the man who believeth in God shall stand: whether the tentation come upon the left hand, with false appearance of good offered in it; or upon the right hand, with false pretences of lawfulness and holiness in a sinful course, whereunto the tentation doth drive: albeit a thousand should fall by the tentation on the one hand, and ten times more on the other hand yet the believer in God, going upon the grounds of God's Word, shall not fall: those evils wherein others fall and perish shall not come near him, as to the point of harming of him, or of destroying of him; A thousand shall fall at thy side, and ten thousand at thy right hand, but it shall not come near thee. 6. The Lord will not only one way be helpful to the believer, but in many ways as he can be in danger as the enumeration of so many sundry cases, wherein he promiseth deliverance, doth teach us. 7. The only persons who are hurt by judgements and tentations are such unfenced souls as believe not in God, are not reconciled with him, and stand at a distance opposite to him, as the object of his wrath, for none have right to the former promises, except the believer only, as all the text holdeth forth.

Ver. 8. Only with thine eyes shalt thou behold, and see the reward of the wicked.

He answereth an objection: It may be said that the former mentioned evils, tentations and calamities, do come very near unto the godly; for they are oftentimes no less deep in them, then others are. He answereth, that the Lord may well acquaint them with the danger, and with the sense of their own weakness, but for the point of harme from those evils, or for the point of destruction by those evils, which is the reward of the wicked; the godly have no more but a discovery of it, to see it, wherein they might have fallen if God had not preserved them; and wherein the wicked do fall and perish. Whence learn, 1. Albeit the same calamities external may befall the believer and the wicked; yet the close of their course, the reward of their works shall put the difference: for the godly shall only behold the reward of the wicked; 2. Albeit the believer may be exercised with the fear fear of destruction, yet he shall be free of falling into it; Only with thine eyes shalt thou behold and see the reward of the wicked.

Ver. 9. Because thou hast made the LORD, which is my refuge, even the most High, thy habitation:

10. There shall no evil befall thee, neither shall any plague come nigh thy dwelling.

A sixth motive to believe in God, is a promise general to be delivered from all evil, that nothing shall harme him, but all things shall rather work together for his good. Wherefore learn, 1. All believers have one object of their faith, one relief in their troubles, one retreat from the vexations which do assault them in this world; even God: Because thou hast made the Lord, who is my refuge, even the most High thy habitation. 2. One believer may and should encourage other believers by the same motives whereby he himself is encouraged, as here; Because thou hast made the Lord, who is my refuge, to be thy habitation: therefore such and such blessings shall come upon thee, faith he. 3. The nature of true faith is to make use of God in all conditions; in peace and warre, in prosperity and adversity, as here he is both a refuge and an habitation. 4. As we have need to have the same promises repeated unto us, and inculcated upon us, so flow and dull are we to receive them: so the Lord doth repeat and urge the receiving thereof, with an enlarging and not abridging of what once he promised, as this general promise teacheth: There shall no evil befall thee, nor any plague come near thy tabernacle, to hurt to harm thee: for God, who is the believers habitation, in terposeth himself, and turneth the calamity to his good; if it be suffered to come on, that it come not near to his disadvantage.

Ver. 11. For he shall give his Angels charge over thee: to keep thee in all thy ways.

12. They shall bear thee up in their hands, lest thou dash thy foot against a stone.

A seventh motive to believe in God, is a promise of making An-Angels wait upon the believer, and carefully to attend his motions in all his lawful affairs, lest he should stumble and suffer harm; which promise even Satan doth acknowledge to belong unto Christ, and Christ doth own it, being taken in a right sense, Mat. 4. Whence learn, 1. Such is the indulgent love of God toward his own, as he doth obviate all doubts, which from any hand might hinder them to believe in him: if the severity and justice of God terrifie, the Lord offereth himself as a bird, with stretched out wings to receive the suppliant, ver. 4. If enemies who are too strongly do pursue, the Lord openeth his bosom as a refuge, ver. 3. If his child be assaulted, he becometh a fortress, ver. 3. If he be hotly pursued and enquired after, the Lord becometh a secret place to hide his child; if persecution be hot, God giveth himself for a shadow; if Potentates and mighty Rulers turn enemies, the Lord interposeth as the most High and Almighty Saviour, ver. 1. If his adversaries be crafty like fowlers or hunters, the Lord promiseth to prevent or break the snares, ver. 3. Whether evils do come upon the believer night or day, secretly or openly to destroy him, the Lord preserveth his child from destruction; and if stumbling blocks be laid in his child’s way, he hath his instruments, his servants, his Angels prepared to keep the believer that he stumble not: He shall give his Angels charge over thee; not one Angel only, but all of them, or a number of them. 2. The Angels are ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for every believer: He shall give his Angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways. 3. Promises are not made to foster men in their turning after folly, but to encourage them in the course of obedience in their several callings; They have charge to keep thee in all thy ways. 4. Albeit stumbling stones be laid in the way of God’s child, yet while he behaveth himself as a believer in God, he shall not stumble; Great peace have they who love God’s law, and nothing shall stumble them, Psal. 119. 165. They shall bear thee up in their hands, lest thou dash thy foot against a stone.

1 Ver. 13. Thou shalt tread upon the lion and adder: the young lion and the dragon shalt thou trample under feet.

The eighth motive to believe, is a promise of victory over very very enemie of his salvation, how fierce, strong and cruel soever they be; how crafty, malicious and dangerous soever they be: Thou shalt tread upon the lion and adder. God shall put Satan under his feet; tyrants and bloody persecutors, heretics and seducers shall not prevail over the believer: The young lion and the dragon shall thou trample under feet.

Ver. 14. Because he hath set his love upon me, therefore will I deliver him: I will set him on high, because he hath known my Name.

15. He shall call upon me, and I will answer him: I will be with him in trouble, I will deliver him, and honour him.

16. With long life will I satisfy him: and shew him my salvation.

The ninth motive to believe in God, is taken from a bundle of five or six promises, as spoken immediately by God the Father of his Son Jesus Christ as man, and of every believer and true member of his mystical body. The first promise is, of delivering of the believer from whatsoever trouble or danger he can be presupposed to fall into: I will deliver him, faith the Lord. 2. For trial of true faith, the unquestionable property of a believer, and the evidence of a sound and saving faith in God, is fixed love toward God; because he hath set his love upon me. 3. As there is a because and a therefore in the process of the law, in concluding death for sin, so there is a because and a therefore in the process of grace, and of the Gospel, which doth reason from one grace given, to infer another grace to be given, even grace for grace: and such is this here: Because he hath set his love upon me, I will deliver him. 4. Sound love to God floweth from, and is joyned with sound knowledge of God, as his Majesty is declared unto us in Scripture: The believer who hath set his love upon God, hath known my Name, faith he. 5. As the believer is highly privileged and honoured of God, being made a sonne and an heire, and co-heire with Christ: so shall he be made also more then a Conquerour over all his enemies, through Christ; I will set him on high, because he hath known my Name; this is the second promise. 6. The third promise is, the Lord will give the Spirit of supplication to the believer, and and also a satisfactory answer unto his prayer; for as when a man giveth way to disbelief, he cannot pray any more: so when he entertaineth faith, it maketh him eloquent and instant in prayer, till he receive what he seeketh; He shall call on me, and I will answer him. 7. As it is not to be expected, that the man who believeth in God shall want trouble, so the beleever may be sure, that God who exerciseth him with trouble, shall bear him company in his trouble, shall direct him how to behave himself in it, strengthen, support and comfort him under it, and give him delivery out of all his trouble, and not only put respect upon him in the sight of them who did behold his exercize, but also at last shall glorifie him before men and Angels; and this is the fourth promise: I will be with him in trouble, I will deliver him and honour him. 8. While others do either want submission unto God at Gods pleasure to live in trouble, or do want submission to die at Gods pleasure, if they be not in trouble; the beleever only hath satisfaction in the length of his life, to die or live as the Lord liketh, and he only departeth contentedly, and entereth into a life everlasting; With long life will I satisfy him; and this is the fifth promise. 9. When the beleever hath received of Gods satisfaction in the length of life in this world, God will enter him into the possession of blesedness, of everlasting salvation in the world to come; which is worthily called the salvation of God; With long life will I sa-tisfie him; and what then shall become of him? And I will show him my salvation; and this is the sixth promise. Above all which promises what can be more added, to induce a soul to embrace the free offer of grace in Christ, tendered in the Gospel to sinners, or to move him to entertain friendship with God, by still believing in him, and resting on him?

PSAL. XCII.

A Psalm or Song for the Sabbath-day.

This Psalm is intituled, A Psalm for the Sabbath-day; wherein the Church is stirred up to praise God, by sundry reasons, ver. 1, 2, 3. but specially for these three causes; First, for the great work of creation, sustentation and wise governing of the creatures, ver. 4, 5. The second cause is, for his wildom and justice in punishing the wicked, ver. 6, 7, 8, 9. The third is, for his grace and goodness toward believers, ver. 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15.

From the Inscription; Learn, 1. The Lord hath had a special care of sanctifying the Sabbath, as the appointing of this Psalm for that day may amongst other things give evidence:
A Psalm, a Song for the Sabbath-day. 2. For the sanctification of the Sabbath, it is not sufficient to rest from our own bodily, servile, distractive works, but we must rest and cease from our own works, and be employed in religious service and worship, and exercises suitable for that day, whereof singing of Psalms to the honour of God is one; This is a Song for the Sabbath-day. 3. God hath appointed that the Church should have solemn meetings on the Sabbath, wherein God may be publicly by his own ordinances honoured, and the Congregation edified in their most holy faith: for this Psalm is given to the Church with this title and Inscription, A Psalm or Song for the Sabbath-day; to be sung in the Assemblies.

Ver. 1. I T is a good thing to give thanks unto the LORD: and to sing praises unto thy Name, O most High.
2. To shew forth thy loving kindneffe in the morning; and thy faithfulness every night.
3. Upon an instrument of ten strings, and upon the Psaltery: upon the Harp with a solemnne sound.

From the exhortation unto praising of God, and thanksgiving with the reasons thereof; Learn, 1. Albeit we be daily receiving mo and mo benefits from God, yet are we slow to acknowledge this, or to give thanks unto him, and have need to be stirred up to the duty, as this exhortation importeth. 2. Not only do we discharge a piece of our duty in thanking unto God, but we also receive a new benefit by doing of this duty: It is a good thing, (pleasant to God, and profitable to us and others) to give thanks unto the Lord. 3. Albeit we cannot give thanks unto God as we desire, or as he deserveth, yet to acknowledge and confess to God our debt, and what we have received of him, shall be accounted thanksgivings; for the word in the original doth give ground.
have preferred earth to heaven, their bodily lusts unto the salvation of their souls and bodies; for when the wicked spring up as the grass, and when all the workers of iniquity do flourish, it is that they shall be destroyed for ever. 4. The ungodly are so betted with the love of the world, and possession of things temporal, that they neither do know, nor will know, nor can know this mystery, except God supernaturally do reveale it to them, and give them spiritual wisdom: A brutish man knoweth not; neither doth a fool understand this. 5. Albeit the wicked be in power and high place, there be little appearance of their overthrow, yet God is higher than they, and so able according to his place to take order with them: and albeit they seeme to live long, yet God endureth for ever, and so able to cut them off when he pleaseth, and to perpetuate their torment for ever: But thou, Lord, art most high for evermore. 6. To acknowledge that God is supreme and everlasting Judge and Ruler of all things, is a sufficient ground to quiet our minds, however matters seeme to go: for because he is the Sovereigne Ruler of all the world, and the eternall God, he cannot but govern all things well and wisely; and will not faile to do as he hath said in his Word, to punish the wicked, how great sooner prosperity he grant them for a time: for the believer doth from this doctrine draw light to shew him the mystery of the perdition of the wicked, by the means of their prosperity, which the foolish and wicked man cannot consider: But thou, Lord, art most high for evermore: for lo, thine enemies, O Lord, shall perish. 7. Workers of iniquity, pretend what they please, are Gods enemies, and seeing they are Gods enemies, they cannot but perish: for lo, thine enemies, O Lord, and the second time, for lo, thine enemies shall perish. 8. The wicked who now combine together, shall be separated from God, and from the society of the blessed company of the righteous, and shall not be able to help one another in the day that God shall bring judgement upon them: All the workers of iniquity shall be scattered; and this is another part of the right spending of the Sabbath, to learn this lesson well.

Ver. 10. But my horn shall thou exalt like the horn of an unicorn: I shall be anointed with fresh oil.

11. Mine eye also shall see my desire on mine enemies, and mine ears shall hear my desire of the wicked that rise up against me.
The third speciall reason and matter of God's praise, is his grace and goodnesse to beleevers, wherein the Psalmist doth speak first with relation to his own particular, ver. 10, 11. And then in generall of all the godly, from what he beleeveth toward himself, as serving to teach every one to make application of the doctrine to their own use. Learn, 1. The same supremacie of God over all creatures, which giveth assurance of the overthrow of the wicked, giveth also assurance of the welfare and felicity of the Godly; for from ver. 8. he deduceth this also, But my bosome shalt thou exalt. 2. The best condition of the godly, is not in what they are for the present, but in what, they shall be hereafter; for albeit they be now under, they shall have dominion at length, expressed here under the termes of exalting the bosome, which is the embleme of dignity and power and victory. My bosome shalt thou exalt like the bosome of the unicorne. 3. That general doctrine may be comfortable, it must be applied, as the Psalmists example doth teach here. 4. Whatsoever weaknesse or grief the godly do labour under for a while, they shall have in due time festival refreshment, comfort and encouragement from Gods Spirit and powerful providence, and that renewed unto them from time to time as need requireth; I shall be anointed with oile, with fresh oile. 5. Whatsoever might be the Psalmists perswasion of victory over his particular enemies; yet as a type Christ, and as one of the Believers having interest in Christ, and in all blessings purchased by him, he might by faith see and hear in the Lords Word the overthrow of all the enemies of his welfare, and so may every beleev, be perswaded; Mine eye, also shall see my desire upon mine enemies; and mine eares shall heare my desire of the wicked that rise up against me.

Ver. 12. The righteous shall flourish like the Palm-tree: he shall grow like a Cedar in Lebanon. 13. Those that be planted in the house of the LORD, shall flourish in the Courts of our God. 14. They shall still bring forth fruit in old age: they shall be fat and flourishing. 15. To shew that the LORD is upright, he is my rock, and there is no unrighteousnesse in him.
PSAL. XCH.

From the Lords goodness to all believers in general; Learn,
1. The promises and comforts given to any one believer, are not proper to him only, but common to all believers; and the man who can apply these promises to himself, is the fittest man to bear witness of the interest which others have therein: for what the Psalmist hath applied to himself, he extendeth to all in substance; The righteous shall flourish. 2. The godly shall get up their head, notwithstanding of whatsoever weight of troubles laid upon them, and they shall constantly grow up to the full stature of perfection, whatsoever opposition be made; They shall flourish like the Palme-tree, he shall grow like a Cedar in Lebanon. 3. The Lords children are like trees which do not grow in every soil, are not nourished with every moisture; the place of their planting, growth and flourishing, is the house of the Lord, where the Word and Spirit of the Lord joyned with the holy ordinances may be had for food: They are planted in the house of the Lord, and flourish in the Courts of our God. 4. Not every barren tree or weed, nor every one who is in the visible Court of Gods Church doth grow and flourish; or is made partaker of the spiritual grace and blessing of the ordinances, but only planted ones, that is, such plants as the heavenly Father hath planted: for to those only, who by Covenant have embraced God, is the promise made; Those that be planted in the house of the Lord, shall flourish in the Courts of our God. 5. True believers shall still persevere, and the decay of the outward man shall not hinder the renewing of their inward man day by day; and their last works shall be better than their first; They shall still bring forth fruit in old age, they shall be fat and flourishing. 6. The end of the Lords destroying of the wicked, and of his blessing of the true believer with the growth of grace, and perseverance to the end, is the glory of Gods righteousnesse, singlenesse in Covenant-making, and of his constant affection to uprightnesse; for these threatenings and promises shall be made good, To shew that the Lord is upright. 7. Whosoever neglect to give glory unto God, the believer will not fail to lay his own weight upon God, and build all his felicity on him, being assured that he will neither flee from, nor fail the godly; He is my rock. 8. Let the Lord do what he pleaseth, let the wicked prosper for a while, and the godly be troubled for a while, yet God is wise, and just, and holy: and that man hath profited well in the school of God, who giveth this glory unto God constantly, as the Psalmist doth here; He is my rock, and there is no unrighteousnesse in him:
IN this Psalm for the comfort of God's people, against the multitude and power of their enemies, and the greatness of Kings and Potentates in the world, who oftentimes are like to overflow, devour and drown the Church, the glory of the Lord is described; in whom is the Church's defence, comfort, and victory. For this end; first, the praises of God for the Church's comfort are set down absolutely, ver. 1, 2. Then the opposition of the enemies of the Church is compared to the growing flood or raging sea, ver. 3. And thirdly, the praises of God are set down in opposition to their power, ver. 4, 5, with the use of this doctrine, ver. 7.

Ver. 1. The Lord reigneth, he is clothed with Majesty: the Lord is clothed with strength, wherewith he hath girded himself: the world also is established, that it cannot be moved.

2. Thy throne is established of old: thou art from everlasting.

From the praises of God absolutely set down for the comfort of the Church, in all respects, and for strengthening of their faith, specially against all her enemies: Learn, 1. Howsoever matters concerning the Church or any member thereof shall go, whatsoever he be that hath power for troubling of the Church, God is he who is great Governor of all; and this is one ground of confidence and comfort to the Lord's people; The Lord reigneth. 2. The outward splendor of earthly Kings and Potentates in the world, opposite to Christ's Kingdom, is no small temptation to God's people, but the believer must oppose unto this the glorious government of God; He is clothed with Majesty. 3. How strong soever the adverse powers of the world do seem, it must not terrify the believer in following the Lord's cause; but his strength must be opposed therewith, and that so much the more comfortably, as God's strength is not borrowed from any, as the strength of the creature is; The Lord is clothed with strength, wherewith he hath girded himself. 4. The beholding of the constant guiding of the world, sheweth the power and wisdom of God, employed much more infinitely the work of his Church, for whose cause the world was made, and is upheld and established; The world also is established, that it cannot be moved. 5. The Lords Kingdom in his Church is not like the new upstarts in this world, which are of short standing & unstable. If any King be kind to his Church, his people have reason to thank God, but they must not lean to such a King; his reign shall be but short, and if any King be froward and oppose himself to the Church; we must not be too much feared for him, because his Kingdom is but lately begun, and is of short continuance; but the Kingdom of the Lord is an ancient Kingdom and well settled; Thy throne is established of old. 6. The eternity of God is the ground of the immutability of his Kingdom, and of the perpetual comfort of the Church against all opposers; Thou art from everlasting.

Ver. 3. The floods have lifted up, O LORD: the floods have lifted up their voice: the floods lift up their waves.

In the second place, is the tentation of the Church; they are like to be Ove flowed as with a deluge, by the multitude of powerful enemies, whereof the Church complaineth unto God. Whence learn, 1. It is no wonder to see the world rising up tumultuously to overthrow the Church, and as it were a deluge coming upon them to drown and devour all: no wonder to hear the enemies threatening destruction to the Church, like to the noise of waters after raine coming down the mountains upon them, which are not able to flee; The floods have lifted up, the floods have lifted up their voice; and the third time, the floods lift up their waves. 2. The best way to encounter threatenings and feares is, to oppose God unto them; and to lay them forth before the Lord, that he may answer them, as here the Psalmist doth; The floods have lifted up O Lord, saith he, &c.

Ver. 4. The LORD on high is mightier then the noise of many waters: yea then the mighty waves of the sea.

In the third place, he sets down the power of God, in opposition to all the brags, and malice, and power of the enemies, as very farre above the power of the enemies, and more mighty for the defence of the Church, then the enemy is powerful to oppose it. Whence learn, 1. Heavenly help and comfort from above, above, is only able to quiet our minds in time of persecution against the fears of enemies here beneath: The Lord on high is here opposed to the roaring of the floods and waters dashing against the Church. 2. We can neither glorifie God, nor comfort our selves against the power of the enemies of the Church, except we lift up the Lords power above them all; The Lord on high is mightier then the noise of many waters. 3. The Lord is above all terrible things, to bridle them at his pleasure, and by his power able to terrifie them that terrifie his Church; The Lord is mightier then the noise of many waters, yea then the might-y waves of the sea.

Ver. 5. Thy Testimonials are very sure: holiness becometh thine house, O LORD, for ever.

The uses of this doctrine concerning the Lords power, and good will to defend his Church, are two: the one is, that as the Word of the Lord is sure and true in it self, so we should acknowledge it to be sure. and should set to our seal unto it, as the Psalmist doth here; Thy testimonies are very sure. The other use is, that such as love to have the benefit of the protection which is promised here, should labour to be holy. Whence learn, 1. Whatsoever is laid in the Scripture, needeth no probation; for it is the deposition of God, declaring truth in every thing which it determineth; therefore are his promises call'd here, His testimonies. 2. By giving credit to the truth of the Scriptures, or to the Lords testimony express'd therein, no man can be deceived: for when we have his Word, our minds may be quieted and at rest; Thy testimonies are very sure. 3. The honour, strength and happiness of the Lords people is, that they are the Lords habitation and place of residence, dedicated and consecrated unto him; Holiness becometh thine house: that is, thy Church and people, whereof the Temple was only a shadow. 4. God will be sanctified of all that draw near unto him; and whoever do love to enjoy the preservation and priviledges promised to the Church, must studie for holiness, which is the duty of the members of the Church also; Holiness becometh thy house. 5. The dignity, duty and priviledges of Gods people, and especially this of consecration, sanctification in affection and carriage, and vindication from sinne and misery, do not belong unto any one time or age, but are perpetual, belonging to all such as studie to be approved unto God, protected, and made blessed by God, in all times and ages, in all places and company all the dayes of their life; For holiness becometh thine house for evermore.
This Psalm is a prayer and a complaint of the Church unto God in the time of her oppression by intestine enemies, in special by unjust and cruel Rulers, whereunto sundry grounds of comfort to the godly in this hard condition are subjoined. The prayer and complaint reach unto ver. 8. The grounds of comfort are four: the first is, the consideration of God's wisdom in the permission of this fore trouble of his people, with a check unto the oppressors for their Atheisme, ver. 8, 9, 10, 11. The second is, the consideration of the profit which Gods people shall have by this exercise, ver. 12, 13. The third is, from a promise that God shall change the face of affaires to the joy of the godly, ver. 14, 15. The fourth is, from the experience which the Psalmist had of GODS helping of him in this case, set down at large to the end of the Psalm.

Ver. 1. O LORD God, to whom vengeance belongeth: O God, to whom vengeance belongeth, shew thyself.

2. Lift up thyself, thou Judge of the earth, render a reward to the proud.

In the prayer, the Church requesteth the Lord to be avenged on intestine enemies, her proud oppressors. Whence learn,

1. The Lords people are subject to trouble and oppression, as from foraigne, so also from intestine enemies, as by-past experience sheweth, and this Psalm presupposeth, being set forth for her comfort in such cases in time to come. 2. The Lords people may since as bitter affliction from domestick enemies, as from foraigne, as the doubling of the prayer unto God the Avenger, to rise and take order with their oppressors, doth import. 3. God will not faile to be avenged on the enemies of his people for He is the Lord God to whom vengeance belongeth. 4. Albeit for a while the Lord suffer the trouble of his people to go on in their persecution, yet he will shew himself a righteous Judge in due time: O God, to whom vengeance belongeth, shew
Psalm XCIV

The Lord will sometime, as it were, hide himself, and not appear in the execution of his judgements against wicked oppressours, till his people come crying unto him for justice, as is importained in this prayer; 1st up thy self, thou judge of the earth. 6. The Lords people are not troubled by humble soules, sensible of their own sinfulness and frailty; but by those who little know how it fares with the Lords hidden ones, and afflicted children, for the oppressours are here called the proud. 7. The Lord will give the proud oppressours of his peoples meeting, and grieve them as they have grieved his Saints: Render a reward to the proud. 8. When the cause is not our private quarrell, but concerneth God in his glory, and the Church in her safety: such complaints as are here, are lawfull; for this Psalm is put in the Churches hand in such cases.

Ver. 8 LORD, how long shall the wicked? how long shall the wicked triumph?

4. How long shall they utter, and speak hard things; and all the workers of iniquity boast themselves.

The Psalmist complaineth, first, of the long continuance of the insolent triumphing and boasting of these intestine enemies. Whence learn, 1. When the wicked go away unpunished, they think their cause right; and the cause of the godly, who lie under their feet, to be wrong; and thereupon do insult over the godly, and boast of their purpose to do them more and more mischief for here, They triumph, they utter, and speak hard things, they boast themselves. 2. The Lord may delay execution of judgement on the wicked, so long as his children may begin to wonder how his justice can endure it: Lord, how long shall the wicked? how long shall the wicked triumph? How long shall they utter, and speak hard things? 3. When the godly are borne down by oppressours being in power, all the ungodly of all ranks become insolently bold, and so against them: How long shall the workers of iniquity boast themselves? 4. As the injuries done to the godly, do force the godly to complain; so the working of iniquity by persecutors, provoketh God to punish their oppressours: This the Psalmist holdeth forth, when he giveth the adversary this description: How long shall the wicked? how long shall the wicked triumph? and all the workers of iniquity boast themselves?
Ver. 5. They break in pieces thy people, O LORD: and afflict thine heritage.

6. They slay the widow and the stranger, and murder the fatherleffe.

7. Yet they say, The LORD shall not see: neither shall the God of Jacob regard it.

The wickednesse of the oppressours is here described more particularly, by their cruelty against such as humanity would spare; such as are the Lords harmless people, the widow, fatherleffe, and stranger, whom the oppressours abuse without all fear of GOD, who doth behold them. Whence learn, 1, When wicked men, haters of piety within the Church, get power in their hand, they will be more cruel enemies then men use to be, who have only humanity and civility, and want profession of Religion; They break in pieces thy people, O LORD: and afflict thine heritage. They slay the widow and the stranger, and murder the fatherleffe. 2. The more relations a people hath unto God, it is the more wickednesse to oppress them, and the more dangerous for the oppressours: so they have an owner which others have not, even the Lord; They break in pieces thy people, and afflict thine heritage. 3. It is not profession, but practice which witnesseth what impression the Deity hath upon mens spirits: oppression of such as God hath promised to protect; speaketh blasphemy of God in effect; They say, The Lord shall not see. 4. Oppression of the just doth cauterize the conscience, extinguish the sense of a Deity, and maketh the oppressour secure and fearless of judgement; Yet they say, The Lord shall not see: neither shall the God of Jacob regard it.

Ver. 8. Understand, ye brutifh among the people: and ye fools, when will ye be wise?

9. He that planted the eare, shall be not hear? be that formed the eye, shall be not see?

10. He that chastiseth the heathens, shall not he correct? be that teacheth man knowledge, shall not he know?

11. The LORD knoweth the thoughts of man: that they are vanity.
By way of rebuking the Atheisme of the oppreffours, ver. 8., he giveth the first ground of comfort unto the godly from the attributes of God, as Gods wisdome, ver. 9., and from his justice against offenders, and from his care of instructing his people to be wise by all means, ver. 10. and from his diftemption of mens vaine thoughts, ver. 11. Wherefore learn, 1. The wisdome of wicked oppreffours is brutifh folly, however they themselves or others do esfeem of them: and whatsoever high thoughts the wicked have of themselves, or others have of them for their high place; yet they are notwithstanding all their honour, nothing in Gods estimation, but as the meanest of the people; yea, as the beasts that perish: Understand ye brutifh among the people. 2. The wicked within the visible Church have this advantage over those that are without, that in Gods long-suffering they have time to repent, and admonition to be wise for gaining of their souls, or clearing of Gods justice in their condemnation: for here they are spoken to; To foolest, when will ye be wise? 3. The knowledge which wicked men do seem to have, or pretend to have of God, is nothing but a bafe conceit of God, as if he were a dead Idol, which neither heareth nor seeth: for this the Psalmists instruction given to them doth import; He that planted the care, shall he not bear? 4. Beside what the Word doth teach of God, his Works also do teach convincingly what he is; He that planted the care, shall he not bear? he that formed the eye, shall he not see? 5. The Lord ruleth among the Heathen, and chastifeth them when they fin against the law written in their hearts; He chastifeth the heathen. 6. The judgements which the Lord executeth among the Heathen, is a sufficient evidence of his purpole to execute judgement on oppreffours within the visible Church, which draweth much nearer unto him; He that chastifeth the heathen shall be not correct? 7. The diverse measures of wit, learning, prudence, and wisdome, which God doth bestow upon men, is sufficient to prove how incomprehensible his own fountain-wisdome is: He that teacheth man knowledge, shall he not know? 8. It is a matter of great consolation to the godly in their oppression, to know that their oppreffours are foolest; and that God in his wisdome is over-ruling all confusions, and leading them and their thoughts unto wise ends, as here the Psalmist teacheth the Church; The Lord knoweth the thoughts of man. 9. The enemies of godliness, and persecuters of the godly, are at a threefold disadvantage. First, they do not put God upon their counsel, and yet he knoweth their their thoughts. Next, They hope to make their own standing fast, and herein they are disappointed. Thirdly, They think that they are able to suppress piety, and that by this means they shall establish themselves, and here also are theyfooles, and do deceive themselves; The Lord knoweth the thoughts of man, that they are vanity. And this is the first consolation of the godly oppressed.

Ver. 12. Blessed is the man whom thou chastenest, O LORD: and teachest him out of thy law:

13. That thou mayest give him rest from the days of adversity: until the pit be digged for the wicked.

The second consolation is, from the benefit which cometh to the godly by their exercise under the cross: their temporall trouble serveth to prepare them for everlasting rest. When see learn, 1. The persecution of the godly by the wicked, must be expounded, as it is indeed, the Lords chastening of the godly by such a rod. This trouble whereof they complain here is called, The Lords chastening. 2. Suffering for righteousness is no token of Gods displeasure against a man, not part of his misery, if it be well considered; for, Blessed is the man whom thou chastenest, O Lord. 3. The exposition of a mans exercise, and the meaning of the rod must be taken from Gods Word, and God only can effectually teach men to carry themselves in trouble holily and righteously in all patience; Blessed is the man whom thou chastenest, O Lord: and teachest him out of thy law:

4. When God teacheth his childe by his Word, to potiesse his soul in patience under the cross, then doth he also give him a sort of deliverance from the trouble; yea, the Lord chastising of his own, and his teaching them out of his law to make the right use of it, is the means whereby he doth save his own, that they perish not with the world in his wrath; whom thou chastenest, and teachest out of thy law: That thou mayest give him rest from the days of adversity. 5. As condemned men are suffered to live till their gallowes and grave be made ready, that after their execution they may be thrust into it; so are wicked men suffered to live till they fill the cup of their iniquity, and till God have filled the cup of his wrath for them: and this is the termday of the Saints patience; That thou mayest give him rest, until the pit be digged for the wicked.
Ver. 14. For the LORD will not cast off his people: neither will he forsake his inheritance.
15. But judgement shall return unto righteousness, and all the upright in heart shall follow it.

The third consolation is, that the Lord's people shall not be always under the fear of oppressors: but because the Lord will not forsake his people, therefore such a change of affairs shall come, as the godly shall have comfort and encouragement: from authority, which shall countenance and encourage them unto righteousness and piety. Therefore men do oft-times cast off God's people as unworthy to be members either of Church or of any civil incorporation; yet God will not cast them off; The Lord will not cast off his people. 2. Albeit the Lord may seem for a while to hide himself from his people, when he suffereth the wicked to persecute and oppress them; yet because of their relation to him as his people, and for his interest in them, as his own inheritance, he will not suffer himself to be bereft of them; He will not cast off his people; neither will he forsake his inheritance. 3. It cometh to pass sundry times, that righteousness and judgement are parted asunder for a while; partly by earthly Judges, refusing to do justice and judgement for God's people: and partly by the righteous Judge of the world, his suspending for a time to manifest his judgement for the godly, and against their oppressors; and that for his own wife and holy reasons. This was the case of the godly in this Psalm, who were waiting for the returning of judgements unto righteousness. 4. Righteousness and righteous judgement executed in favour of it, shall not long be separated: for God shall either raise up righteous Judges to favour righteousness, or he shall make his righteous judgements testify for the godly, and against their oppressors, or he shall do both these; for God will not forsake his people; but judgement shall return to righteousness. 5. When the Lord maketh Judges and Courts of justice to favour righteousness, then the righteous have a banner lifted up for them, to gather them together again, who before were scattered in persecutions; to encourage and countenance them in their godliness, and righteous ways; judgement shall return to righteousness, and all the upright in heart shall follow it.
Ver. 16. Who will rise up for me against the evill doers? or who will stand up for me against the workers of iniquity?

The fourth consolation is from the example and experience of the Psalmist, who in his righteous cause sought assistance from men in a lawful way, when he was oppressed, ver. 16. but found none to help him, except God only, who was his supporter and comforter, ver. 17. which he thankfully acknowledgeth, and praiseth God for it, ver. 18, 19. believing that as God was displeased with unrighteous Judges, and their cruelty against the righteous, ver. 20, 21. so he would certainly defend him against their oppression; ver. 22. and cut them off, ver. 23. and this his experience and example he propoundeth to the Church, both to comfort them in their oppression, and to direct them in their behaviour, till the relief should come.

From his seeking assistance against oppression; Learn, 1. There is a lawful defence of the godly, while they are oppressed by their superiours, which is no wayes injurious to authority, such as is to bear witnesse for the godly, to speake and make request unto the Rulers for them, as Jonathan did for David, and Ebedmelech did for Jeremym to countenance and affift them in their appearances for defence of the truth, as Pauls companions should have done, when he was brought before Nero, and such as here was sought after by the Psalmist; Who will rise up for me against the evill doers? who will stand up for me against the workers of iniquity. 2. When the godly suffer injury by their own Rulers, who should maintain them, few or none possibly will be found to countenance them in their righteous cause, for this saying, Who will arise for me? doth shew that none did offer themselves: and he knew none, when he thus did misse all help. 3. Before the godly complaine of wrongs done to them by their superiours, they should be first sure that they have done no wrong, or any thing which Rulers may justly punish, and that their Rulers are not onely injurious to them in a particular, but evill doers also, and open enemies to equity; Who will rise up for me against the evill doers? or who will stand up for me against the workers of iniquity? 4. Rulers should be warie that they force not the righteous to complain to God and man of them; for if they do, the oppressed may readily fall upon the Psalmists outcry, and that is not lase for the Magistrate, that any should have cause
Ver. 17. Unless the LORD had been my help: my soul had almost dwelt in silence.

He sheweth what success his seeking of help from men had, and that was none at all; for if God had not helped him, he should have perished before help had been given to him from men. Whence learn, 1. Whosoever do engage in any cause, were it never so just, with confidence in man, or with hopes to carry it on and go through with it by mans assistance, need not wonder if they be disappointed; Unless the Lord had been my help, my soul had almost dwelt in silence. 2. Whosoever lawful means the righteous man doth use for his own reliefe, they may fail, if he lean to them, and not to God onely: but if he relie upon the Lord, he shall be relieved: Unless the Lord had been my help, my soul had almost dwelt in silence.

Ver. 18. When I said, My foot slippeth: thy mercy, O LORD, held me up.

He sheweth how he received help of God, to wit, by acknowleding unto God the danger he was in, and his own weakness to relieve himselfe, whereby he found support from the Lords mercy. Whence learn, 1. Such as are put upon the trial of their faith and obedience to God by persecution, are in danger either to fall into sin or present trouble, yea possibly also to lose their life, like unto men driven unto the edge of a sleep-down place, as the similitude of my foot slippeth, doth import. 2. In time of trial and tentation, as ordinarily God maketh mens own wisdome, courage, and strength faile them, that they may distrust themselves and come to him: so should they acknowledge their own weakness, and lay it out with the danger they are in before God: I said, My foot slippeth. 3. The sense of our own weakness presented to God in prayer, is a forerunner of Gods reliefe coming to us: When I said, My foot slippeth, thy mercy held me up. 4. As it is our duty to acknowledge Gods power and mercy in our supplications, so also it is our duty to glorify the mercy of God after the felt experience of it; Thy mercy, O Lord, held me up.
Ver. 19. In the multitude of my thoughts: within me thy comforts delight my soul.

He setteth down here a further benefit of his faith in God; to wit, that by what he saw in God, he found comfort and joy in all his perplexities. Whence learn, 1. In the time of danger, or of narrow trial, many questions and doubts, and discourses of mine use to arise, which did not appear in time of ease, and these multiplied thoughts do breed perplexity, anxiety and grief, which call for comfort, as the experience of the Psalmist doth teach: In the multitude of my thoughts within me, &c. 2. No ease for a perplexed soul till it go to God in Christ, the resting-stone in Sion: and in him support is to be found under burdens, and comfort against whatsoever cause of grief; yes, and more also, joy and delight swallowing up all grievances, as the Psalmist by experience did finde usually: In the multitude of my thoughts within me thy comforts delight my soul; now God's comforts are Gospel-comforts.

Ver. 20. Shall the throne of iniquity have fellowship with thee: which frameth mischief by a law?

21. They gather themselves together against the soul of the righteous: and condemn the innocent blood.

He sheweth what use he made of the oppressors wickednesse for supporting of his own faith; to wit, that he was persuaded that God allowed not their mischievous courses, howsoever they pretended to do what they did by a Law; because not the good of the subject, but the overthrow of the godly was intended by them. Whence learn, 1. The seat of Justice within the visible Church, may possibly turn enemies to piety and righteousness, and to those that follow God's Word; in which case, the grief, temptation, wrangling and trial of the godly, is not small, as the Psalmist's experience doth teach us, who here cometh to God with a question, Shall the throne of iniquity have fellowship with thee? 2. As the Thrones of Justice are honourable, are countenanced and protected of God, when they decree and execute righteousness; so they lose their reputation, and are denuded of God's approbation, comfort, and defence, when they decree and execute execute iniquity; Shall the throne of iniquity have fellowship with thee? 3. Albeth wicked men oftentimes love to have the appearance and shadow of equity, yet unrighteousness, impiety, oppression is not the more justifiable, that it be covered with the authority of a law, but rather God will abhorre that wickedness which is enjoyned by a Law, so much the more as it hath pretence of law: Shall the throne of iniquity have fellowship with thee, that forgets mischief by a Law? 4. The iniquity of persecutors is the matter of confidence for the oppressed; for if our adversaries be against God, and against us also, then have we fellowship with God in a common cause; Shall the throne of iniquity have fellowship with thee? saith he. 5. When mischief is enacted by Law, then shortly may the godly be panned as criminally guilty, and they who allow the Law, shall be found ready to sit upon Affairs to condemn the righteous, as the experience of the Psalmist doth shew: They gather themselves together against the soul of the righteous, and condemn the innocent blood.

Ver. 22. But the LORD is my defence: and God is the rock of my refuge.

23. And he shall bring upon them their own iniquity, and shall cut them off in their own wickedness: sea, the LORD our God shall cut them off.

From this consideration he draweth two conclusions; one assuring him of his own protection, ver. 22. another assuring him of the destruction of the adversary, ver. 23. Whence learn,

1. As nothing save faith in God can uphold a man in time of persecution: so by persecution and trouble, God useth to cause his own to make use of faith, and to draw nearer hand unto him, as the Psalmist did finde by experience, saying, But God is my defence. 2. It is needful that he who would have Gods help and protection in a particular good cause, should see that the reconciliation of his person be solidly grounded on the Covenant of Gods grace: My God is the rock of my refuge. 3. The godly may from Gods Word give out damnatory decrees against their persecutors, which surely shall he executed: as here three destruction is pronounced by the Psalmist against the oppressors. 4. The destruction intended against the godly by their oppressors, is as ready as any thing to be the trap to take themselves in; God shall bring upon them their own iniquity, and shall cut them them oft in their own wickednesse. 3. How little appearance ever there be of the vengeance of God upon wicked Rulers abusing their power against the godly, for their righteousness and piety, yet the overthrow of them must not be doubted of, because of the Covenant past between God and his servants, who serve him in suffering for righteousness; for the repeating of the sentence of destruction the third time against such oppressors, doth teach so much: Yea, the Lord our God shall cut them off.

PSAL. XCV.

This Psalm is applied to Christ by the Apostle, Heb. 3. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11. Whereof there are two parts. In the first, is an exhortation to worship God in Christ, or Christ God with the Father and holy Spirit, dwelling among them in the Temple, and representing unto them his future incarnation, and the execution of his offices in types and figures. The arguments of praising and worshiping of him are five. The first, because he is the rock of our salvation; ver. 1, 2. The second, because of his greatness, ver. 3. The third, for his power, ver. 4. The fourth, because he created all things, and us his people, ver. 5, 6. The fifth, because he is our covenanted God and Pastor, ver. 7. In the latter part of the Psalm is another exhortation unto the visible Church, to evidence their obedience of faith, and not to harden their heart in the time of God's dealing with them by his Word, as their fathers did, who perished in the wilderness for their provocation, ver. 8, 9, 10, 11.

Ver. 1. O Come let us sing unto the LORD: let us make a joyful noise to the Rock of our salvation.

2. Let us come before his presence with thanksgiving: and make a joyful noise unto him with Psalms.

From the first exhortation unto a cheerful praising and worshiping of God, manifesting himself in Christ to his Church, and unto joyful thanksgiving for salvation offered; and granted to us in him, which is the first reason to move them to the duty.

Learn, 1. As the necessity and acceptableness of the duty of praising God, and thanksgiving unto him, is very remarkable; so is our unreadyness unto the duty, and unheartfulness in it observable also: for the frequent and pressing exhortations thereunto do intimate so much unto us: O come, let us sing unto the Lord; let us make a noise, let us come before him. 2. Every one, but specially the Lords Ministers, should stirre up their people and others also to this duty, to discharge it not only in secret, but also publicly in their Congregations, and that with cheerfulness, with heart and voice; whatsoever shall be their private grievances and burdens: Let us come before his presence with thanksgiving, and make a joyful noise unto him with Psalms. 3. Whatsoever evil or grief do trouble us; there is reason of joy and praise and thanks, when we look to Jesus Christ and his benefits: Make a joyful noise unto the Rock of our salvation. From him is our full deliverance, and upon him lieth our victory over sin, Satan, death, hell, and all enmity, founded as upon a Rock. 4. It is time to come before God for mercy to prevent justice, while yet we are spared; and he is not come to us in judgements for to the Word in the original giveth ground, signifying coming speedily, and with prevention: Let us speedily come before his presence, or preoccupy his presence. 5. He that cometh to God in Christ, meeteth with his reconciled face; for the coming to the Tabernacle, the Ark and mercy-seat, did signify and promise so much: and therefore it is said; Let us come before his presence, or before his face. 6. Singing of Psalms should be done as a matter of honouring God, and not as a matter of pleasing our own eares, or the eares of others; Let us come with thanksgiving, or confession and praising, and make a joyful noise unto him with Psalms.

Ver. 3. For the LORD is a great God: and a great King above all gods.

Another reason of praising Christ, is his greatness and supremacy above all Rulers, and above all imaginable excellency. Whence learn, 1. He that hath a minde to praise God, shall not want matter of praise, as they who come before Princes do; who for want of true grounds of praise in them, do give them flatteri-
For the Lord is a great God, for power and pre-heminency, for strength and consti mance. 2. Except we put all things that bear the name of excellency under God's feet, whether they be Angels or Princes, or whatsoever the world maketh their god, we do not give him his due honour: He is a great King above all gods.

Ver. 4. In his hand are the deep places of the earth:
the strength of the hills is his also.

A third reason of his praise is this, he is strong, sustaining by his power sea and earth, and all things of weight. Whence learn, 1. Whateuer is most secret and remote from men's power, or from our sight and knowledge, God hath it at his disposing; for he sustaineth it, and maketh it subsist: In his hand are the deep places of the earth. 2. There is nothing of any strength among all the creatures, which hath not its strength borrowed from God:
The strength of the hills is his also.

Ver. 5. The sea is his, and he made it: and his hands formed the dry land.

6. O come, let us worship and bow down: let us kneel down before the LORD our maker.

A fourth reason of Christ's praise is, because he is the Cretour of all things, and to be worshipped of us as our Creator.
That Christ as God, or God to be incarnate, one with the Father and holy Spirit, is here intended, appeareth by the command given to the worshippers to present themselves in the Temple, and to kneel down toward the place of the Ark before God dwelling between the Cherubims; that is, before Christ, God to be incarnate. Whence learn, 1. All things were made by Christ, whether high or low, Coloss. i. 16. And it was meet that our Saviour should be no other then he by whom sea and dry land were made, so great is the work which the Mediator hath in hands. The sea is his, and he made it, and his hands formed the dry land.
2. Christ as he is one with the Father and holy Spirit in greatness and power, in respect of his Godhead and divine nature:
so is he one with the Father and holy Spirit, in the capacity of divine honour: O come, let us worship and bow down. 3. Religious kneeling is a part of divine worship, whereby we testify our absolute submission unto, and highest giving of honour to God in soul and body; and this honour is incommunicable to any creature: Come, let us worship and bow down, let us kneel before the Lord our Maker.

Ver. 7. For he is our God, and we are the people of his pasture, and the sheep of his hand: to day if ye will hear his voice.

The fifth reason of Christ's praise is, because he is our God, and Pastor of his Church, by office of his Mediatorship. Whence learn, 1. God deserveth praise of all the world, but specially of his Church, because of the near relation of Covenant between God and his Church; Let us worship and bow down: for he is our God. 2. The good shepherd of the Church, who layeth down his life for his sheep; the great Doctor and Prophet of the Church, the Mediator of the Covenant of grace, and covenanted spouse of the Church, is very God, and was knowne, believed on, and worshipped as very God, before his incarnation: He is our God, and we are the people of his pasture. 3. Christ the Maker, the God, the Mediator and Pastor of the Church, doth not only effectually feed his people by teaching, but also effectually governeth and defendeth his Church by his omnipotent power; We are the people of his pasture, and the sheep of his hand: whom his Almighty hand and power governeth and protecteth in all ages.

Ver. 8. Harden not your heart, as in the provocation: and as in the day of temptation in the wilderness:

9. When your fathers tempted me: proved me, and saw my work.

10. Forty years long was I grieved with this generation, and said, It is a people that do err in their heart: and they have not knowne my ways.

In the latter part of the Psalm, which beginneth in the former verse, To day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your heart; he giveth another exhortation to his Church visible, to believe and obey the voice of our great Prophet Jesus Christ, as the Apostle, Heb. 3. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11. teacheth us to expound it. The main argument:
gument to enforce the exhortation is, lest the curse of God should overtake the disobedient, and they should be debarred from heaven and happiness, as the unbelieving Israelites were seclude from Canaan, and from heaven signified by it: the history may be seen, Exod. 17. Whence learn, 1. The voice of God in the Scriptures, in the Gospel, appointed to be preached by sent Ministers, is the voice of God the Father; God the Son, and God the holy Spirit, one God in three persons: for all who do grant the Scriptures, to be divine, do acknowledge also that the Scriptures are the voice of God the Father; and this Psalme the Apostle, Heb. 3.7. calleth the saying of the holy Ghost: and in that same place he expoundeth his voice, of whom this place doth speak to be the voice of the Son, Jesus Christ; and so the voice of God in the Scriptures, in the Gospel, appointed to be preached by sent messengers, is the voice of God the Father, Son and holy Spirit, as David also doth teach us, 2 Sam. 23.2,3. The Spirit of the Lord spake by me, there is the person of the holy Spirit: The God of Israel said, there is the ordinary designation of the person of the Father without secluding of the Word or Spirit: The Rock of Israel spake to me, there is the description of the person of the Son, who is the Builder of the Church, his house, and the foundation whereupon his Church is builded; against which the gates of hell shall not prevail. 2. The visible Catholick Church, which hath the Word of God preached unto them, and are in Covenant with him, is the people of Christ's pasture, and sheep of his hand, wherein may be found many such as harden their heart and perish, and so are not all of them elect persons; for, To day if ye will hear his voice, is spoken unto all, to whom the Word of God doth come, and doth bring them in the bond of the Covenant to hear his voice. 3. Of such as are in Covenant with God in Christ, to believe and obey his voice, those only are actually true disciples, who have this property; to love, to believe, and to obey God's voice, to yield their heart to the Lord's Word: To day if ye will hear his voice, is here the probation of their covenanted profession. 4. The present time only is the opportunity of salvation, or embracing of the offer of God's grace, and testifying of our obedience of faith; we are not sure how long the Word shall remain with us, or we with it: To day if ye will hear his voice. 5. How ignorant, weak, and unable forever a man be by nature, to believe and obey the voice of God, yet seeing God doth offer himselfe by his Word to cure him of all his evils, he cannot endure that a man should willingly & willingly reject the counsel counsel of the Lord, and resolutely strengthen himself in his natural misbelief and disobedience, for this were to harden his own heart yet more, which here is forbidden: To day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your heart. 6. The example of other mens sinnes should be made use of to make us wise for eschewing the like; as here the history of the peoples murmuring against God and his Ministers, is for this end recorded from Exodus 17. 3, 4. concerning their temptation of God, and provocation of him in the wilderness: 5. It is to good purpose that we look upon the sins of our fore-fathers, and upon Gods judgements on them for their sins, that we may be humbled & made watchful against hereditary sins; so this end is the time told them, When your fathers tempted me, proved me. 8. He that maketh question either of Gods power or good will, after he hath had experience and proof thereof, burieth unthankfully the Lords bounty, and doth draw a great deal deeper in the sin: for this doth aggravate the provocation of God by the carnal Israelites here, that they had often proof what God could do, They saw my works, saith he. 9. The Lord not only maketh mens sins, but also doth reckon how long they continue in them: Forty years long was I grieved. 10. Misbelieving of God, and not submitting our selves to his government, is a vexing of his Spirit, and a provocation of him to reject the sinner; Forty years long was I grieved with this generation. 11. The errors of the mind are dangerous; but the errors of the heart are yet more dangerous: for the faults of the minde simply considered, are ignorance and error; but the fault of the heart, is a loving of darknes and error: the error of the minde faith, I knew not, I did not understand such a duty; but the error of the heart I did not know; I devise not to hear of, I care not for such a duty; I said it is a people that do err in their heart, and they have not known my wayes: that is, they have not regarded my wayes, have not allowed of them, or loved them; for otherwayes they were not simply ignorant of them; they heard his words, and saw his works. 12. Not to subject our selves to such and such particular hard exercisies, difficulties, straites, and sad dispenstations, as it pleaseth God to put us under, is a not knowing and disapproving of the ways of God, which he followed in dealing with his people, and is no lesse then if we did take up our selfes to be wiser then he, and to counsel and direct him, how to govern the world and our particulars better then he doth; They err in heart, and have not known my wayes.
Ver. 11. Unto whom I swear in my wrath: that they should not enter into my rest.

To enforce the exhortation, the Lord repeateth the doom pronounced upon such as harden their own hearts, in their unbelief and disobedience of the voice of God; to wit, that he swear, they should not enter into his rest, that is, they should not enter into the rest of reconciliation and peace with God, which is a part of the believers rest, whereof the Apostle speaketh, commenting on this place, Heb. 4. 3. nor into the rest of Canaan the type of heaven; for they died in the wilderness: nor into the rest of heaven signified by Canaan, so many of them as continued in this sin of hardening their heart against the voice of God. Whence learn, 1. There is a rest of God ordained for believers, who give up their hearts to the impression of God's voice, in the obedience of faith; to wit, the rest of justification, reconciliation, and peace with God; the rest of begun sanctification, and ceasing from their own works; and the rest of everlasting refreshment, begun in this life, and perfected in the life to come: for this is the rest which God calleth here his rest: They shall not enter into my rest. 2. As all sin hath judgement following after it, as the shadow followeth the body: so hardening of the heart against God's Word in special, hath wrath annexed unto it; To whom I swear in my wrath. 3. Obstinate hardeners of their heart in unbelief and disobedience against God's Word, are near to the curse; and whatsoever do continue to the end, shall be found reprobates justly damned to the eternal torment of restlessness, against whom God standeth sworn, to condemn them and destroy them: Unto whom I swear in my wrath, that they should not enter into my rest. 4. The most fearful curses and threatenings pronounced against sinners by God, and the most terrible judgements which have been executed upon disobedient unbelievers of God's Word, are merciful and fatherly warnings of God's children, to eschew such sins as carefully and really, as they abhorre the punishment inflicted for them; for the Lord's making use of his wrath against the misbelieving and disobedient Israelites here doth teach us so much.
Psalm 115

We are, 1 Chron. 16. 23. A part of this Psalm, sung at the bringing up of the Ark to Sion, to be in substance and almost in words, as in one and the same with this which is here; for as there, so here the Prophet foreseeth in the Spirit the spreading of the Kingdom of Christ among the Nations; And therefore first, he exhorts all people heartily to receive Christ, and propagate his glory, ver. 1, 2, 3. And giveth reasons for it, ver. 4, 5, 6. Then he researcheth and intergeth the exhortation to glorifie God, and to rejoice in him, because Christ was indeed to come among the Gentiles, to reign among them righteously, ver. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13.

Ver. 1. Sing unto the LOR D a new song; sing unto the LOR D all the earth.
2. Sing unto the LOR D, blesse his Name, shew forth his salvation from day to day.
3. Declare his glory among the heathen; his wonders among all people.

From the exhortation given to all Nations to rejoice for Christs coming among them; Learn, 1. As sadnesse and sorrow, misery and mourning, is the condition of all people, till Christ the true Ark of the Covenant come unto them; so Christs coming among them, is the matter of the greatest joy that ever sinners did hear of: for upon this ground are all here exhorted to rejoice; Sing unto the Lord. 2. As the matter of joy in Christ is everlasting, and shall never decay; so the reason of praising of God for salvation in him, is everlasting also, new and fresh matter being alwayes offered of joy to us, and praise to God, which shall never vanish nor wax old; Sing unto the Lord a new Song. 3 All the earth hath interest in this Song, and is obliged unto the duty of joy and praise, because out of all people, tongues and languages, God is to gather a people to be saved; Sing unto the Lord all the earth. 4. We have need again and again to be stirred up to joy in Christ, to praise him;
for we are dull, and the work excellent, and no man doth discharge the duty sufficiently: therefore is it said the third time, Sing unto the Lord. 5. The grace offered in Jesus Christ, is a perpetual reason of declaring the goodness of God, and that Christ is the fountain of all blessedness to them who receive him: for, Bless his Name, doth import so much. 6. The salvation which cometh through Christ, ought to be commended as God's salvation indeed, because he devised it, he purchased it, and he it is that doth apply it to us, and maketh us partakers of it; Shew forth his salvation. 7. The doctrine of salvation by Christ, is the common good of mankind, and ought not to be concealed, but let forth to all, preached, and proclaimed, and spoken of by all, according to their vocation and ability: Shew forth his salvation from day to day. 8. It is a part of the Commission given to the Ministers of the Gospel, not only to teach their Congregations concerning Christ, but also to have a care that they who never did hear of him, may know what he is, what he hath done and suffered, and what good may be had by his mediation: Declare his glory among the heathen. 9. Nothing more glorious to God, nothing so wonderful in itself, as is the salvation of man by Christ: to behold God saving his enemies, by the incarnation, sufferings and obedience of Christ the eternal Sonne of God; Declare his glory among the Heathen, his wonders among all people.

Ver. 4. For the LORD is great, and greatly to be praised: he is to be feared above all gods.

5. For all the gods of the nations are idols: but the LORD made the heavens.

6. Honour and majesty are before him: Strength and beauty are in his sanctuary.

The reasons of the exhortation are, because God is sovereign above all, ver. 4. and all other gods beside God are idols, ver. 5. and whatsoever is glorious is to be found in him only, ver. 6. Whence learn, 1. None can praise God till they consider his excellency, and that his wisdom, power and empire is above all created or imaginable greatness; for The Lord is great and greatly to be praised. 2. As the Lord is praise-worthy for his goodness and readiness to communicate of his riches to all all his creatures, and most of all to his servants: so is he able to punish his adversaries, and all that contempt his Authority, which no creature is able to do; He is to be feared above all gods. 3. Whosoever do not submit themselves to God, and worship and obey him, shall be found to serve idols and vanities, whereby they can have no good, but disappointment of hopes: for, All the gods of the Nations are idols. 4. The framing of heaven and earth, and the upholding and governing of all the creatures proveth, that the Maker thereof is God alone, and that there neither is nor can be any beside him; all others who have the name of gods are idols: All the gods of the heathen are idols; but the Lord made the Heavens. 5. Before a man can come to the knowledge of God, he must first meet with the shining beams of his honour and majesty in his Word and in his Works; for these are Apparators and Harbingers going before him; Honour and majesty are before him. 6. The power and glory of God is not rightly seen, either to God's praise or a man's salvation, except by his own ordinances in his Church where he himself is both teacher, and the substance also of what is taught; Strength and beauty are in his Sanctuary.

Ver. 7. Give unto the LORD, (O ye kindreds of the people,) give unto the LORD glory and Strength.

Here he repeateth and dilateth the exhortation in foure branches. In the first, he exhorteth to acknowledge, that glory and power belong to God, both in decreeing wisely, and in executing timously and powerfully his own decrees; in special, the work of Redemption and Conversion of the Gentiles by Christ. Whence learn, As it is the sinful sickness of natural men, to take to themselves, or to give unto the creatures the glory of every excellent work, which is properly due to God alone: so is it the part of a renewed soul, to give the glory of every thing which is praise-worthy unto God alone; which glory God expecteth, and shall have it of the Gentiles being reconciled and instructed by the Gospel: Give unto the Lord, O ye kindreds of the people, give unto the Lord glory and strength.

Ver. 8. Give unto the LORD the glory due unto to his Name, bring an offering, and come into his courts.

In the second branch, he exhorteth all to acknowledge the Lord, as they who are worshippers of him, and who are taught by his Word, should do. Whence learn, 1. It was foretold, that as the Church of Israel was taught by the Lords Word to know him: so should the Gentiles be so taught also; for, Give unto the Lord the glory due to his Name, presupposeth and importeth, that they should have his Name set forth in his Word, and should be instructed to know him, and how to worship him acceptably. 2. Whateover point of glory the Scripture giveth unto God, it may not be withdrawn from him, nor communicated to any other besides him; for it is his own proper due: Give unto him the glory due to his Name. 3. It is the manner of the Scriptures of the Old Testament, to express the spiritual service of the Gospel in the terms of the service of the Law: Bring an offering, and come into his courts. 4. Albeit bodily sacrifices and oblations, and the material Temple of Jerusalem be taken away; yet the moral duties shadowed forth in them, are still necessary to be done: we must not come for fashion, empty and vain before God, but with the calves of our lips, offering up our selves in a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable to him: Bring an offering unto him. 5. The Church of the Gentiles make up one Church with the Jewes, and are of the same incorporation and holy society, and partakers of the privileges of the Church with them: Bring an offering, and come into his courts.

Ver. 0. O worship the LORD in the beauty of holiness: fear before him all the earth.

In the third branch, he exhorteth more particularly all the Gentiles to worship and fear the same God with the Church of the Jewes. Whence learn, 1. True Converts must submit themselves absolutely unto Christ's Government, in soul and body; for, O worship the Lord, importeth so much. 2. Then is a mans worship and submission sanctified, and made acceptable when it is offered in and through Christ, and in society with his Church represented by the Sanctuary, here called the beauty of holiness; Worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness. 3. Among all Gods works nothing so beautiful as his ordinances, rightly made use of in his Church: Worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness. 4. All our worship must be seasoned with fear, lest we swerve on either hand from the rule prescribed by God: Fear before him all the earth.
Psal. XCVI. 379

Ver. 10. Say among the heathen that the LORD reigneth: the world also shall be established, that it shall not be moved: he shall judge the people righteously.

11. Let the heavens rejoice: and let the earth be glad: let the sea roar and the fulness thereof.

12. Let the field be joyful, and all that is therein: then shall all the trees of the wood rejoice.

13. Before the LORD, for he cometh, for he cometh to judge the earth: he shall judge the world with righteousness, and the people with his truth.

In the fourth place, he exhorteth the Lords Ministers, his called messengers every where to proclaime Christ King in his own Church, and to declare the benefits of his reigning; in special these three. 1. The putting of all things which are in disorder and confusion in the world by sin, into their own order again; and setting all things to the perpetual benefit of his subjects. 2. Christ's righteous governing and defending of his subjects. 3. The unexpressible joy which Christ doth bring to his people, for setting forth whereof, all the reasonable and understanding creatures are unable. Whence learn, 1. Wheresoever the Gospel is preached, there without injure to Magistrates, Christ may and should be declared King, soveraigne Lord and Law-giver in all the matters of Religion, and whatsoever concerneth the salvation of men and service of God: Say among the heathen that the LORD reigneth. 2. Before Christ come to a people, men neither know God, nor themselves, nor what is their profit, nor what is their losse: for before Christ reveale himself to a man, things earthly and temporall are put in the room of things heavenly and everlasting: the creatures and lusts of men are put in the room of God, and the sinner is made a slave to his own lusts and unclean spirits; but when Christ cometh, who is the light of the world, and the life of men, and convineth men of sin and righteousness and judgement, then is the sinner humbled, and God exalted, and every thing is put in its own place, and a solid state of grace and glory is rounded by his Word and working, and is settled by his decree for the benefit of the the world of his Elect and Regenerate people: for by Christ's governing the world also shall be established. 3. The Kingdom of Christ is a Kingdom which cannot be moved, and they who are his Subjects, do receive this Kingdom in title and right, and begun possession, which cannot be taken from them again: The world also shall be established that it cannot be moved. 4. The government of Christ's Kingdom is so well and wisely carried by him, as right is done to God and man, to friends and foes, and no injury to any party is allowed; and course is taken to give effectually to every man according as his work shall be: He shall divide the people righteously. 5. There is no true rejoicing for sinners in heaven or earth, except in and through Jesus Christ alone: all joy of sinners without him is madness, and in him men have cause of rejoicing whatsoever condition they shall be in: Let the heaven rejoice, and let the earth be glad; let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof. 6. The joy which Christ bringseth to his people is such, that men and Angels are not able to express it; and if all the dumb creatures had minds and mouths to set it forth, it were a task and more for them to undertake it:
Let the heavens rejoice, and the earth be glad; let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof, &c. 7. As all the creatures are in a sort of bondage and subjection unto vanity through the sins of men; so have they their own redemption & freedom from vanity in relation to Christ, and the service which they do unto the Saints, who make right use of them; and at length the creature shall be fully delivered from the bondage of corruption, and in its own kind have cause of rejoicing: Let the heaven, earth, sea and fields re-joyce, &c. 8. All the creatures are at enmity with man, before he be reconciled to God in Christ; but when peace is made by Jesus Christ, they look upon man all of them with another countenance, as servants unto and children of their Lord, who is Father of the reconciled, and governour of all for their good: Let the fields be joyful, and all that is therein; then shall all the trees of the wood rejoice. They shall look upon a reconciled man walking in the light of God's countenance as a Paradise. 9. The first and second coming of Christ to shew himself King of his Church, is ground and cause of all joy to his Subjects; Let them and all the creatures rejoice before the Lord, for he cometh, for this for he cometh (twice said) to judge the earth, is given for a reason of the exhortation. 10. By Christ's government, every poor and needy Subject is helped, supplied, comforted, and provided for, as their case requireth: all the Subjects are justified by the impuimputation of the righteousness of Christ; all of them are renewed and begun to be sanctified, and made to aim at righteousness more and more in their ways; all the proud and adversaries of his Subjects are declared against; course is laid down in the Word of truth for a full deliverie of his people from all injuries and oppression, from all misery and sin, with the full punishment of their enemies: He shall judge the world with righteousness, and the people with his truth.

PSAL. XCVII.

His Psalm conatineth a prophesie of the spiritual glory of Christ's Kingdom, to ver. 8. And the use of the Doctrine to the end of the Psalm. The comfort of Christ's Kingdom in relation to his Church is set downe, ver. 1, 2. And the terrible-nesse thereof in relation to his enemies, ver. 3, 4, 5, 6. with a curse upon image-worshippers, ver. 7. The uses of the Doctrine, they are foure. The first is, that all excellency, and whatsoever is honourable in the world, should do homage to him. set down in the end of ver. 7. The second is, that the true Church should be glad at the hearing and the seeing of the execution of God's judgements upon idolaters, with a reason for it, ver. 8, 9. The third use is, a direction to the Saints to beware of sin, with some reasons for it, ver. 10, 11. The fourth use is, that the righteous should rejoice, and thank God upon all occasions, ver. 12.

Ver. 1. The LORD reigneth, let the earth rejoice: let the multitudes of Ises be glad thereof.

2. Clouds and darkness are round about him: righteousness and judgement are the habitation of his throne.

The Psalmist proclimeth Christ King among the Gentiles, and doth commend his Kingdom to them, as full of joy, full of majesty, and full of righteousness. Whence learn, 1. Beside side the sovereignty which God hath over all people; he hath a special Kingdom, wherein he reigneth by the Gospel of Christ; this is it wherein he speaketh, saying, The Lord reigneth.

2. Comfort against all grief from sin or misery, true matter of joy and full felicity, is to be had by the coming of this Kingdom; The Lord reigneth, let the earth rejoice. 3. The Isles of the Sea are in Christ's charter, and have their share of the joy which is to be had in Christ; Let the multitude of the Isles be glad thereof. 4. How despicable soever Christ's Kingdom may seem to the world, yet it is full of heavenly majesty; Clouds and darkness are round about him. 5. The glory of Christ's Kingdom is unsearchable, and hid from the eyes of the world, who cannot take up the things of God, except he reveale himself to them, and do open the eyes of their understanding; Clouds and darkness are round about him. 6. The Kingdom of Christ gives no liberty unto sin, but is altogether for righteousness and judgment; for therein righteousness is taught to sinners, and they made righteous, and kept in the course of righteousness, and defended from the harm of their adversaries, and rewarded according to their righteousness, and all the unrighteous are adjudged to punishment according to their works; Righteousness and judgement are the habitation of his throne.

Ver. 3. A fire goeth before him, and burneth up his enemies round about.

4. His lightnings inlightened the world: the earth saw it, and trembled.

5. The hills melted like waxe at the presence of the LORD: at the presence of the Lord of the whole earth.

6. The heavens declare his righteousness: and all the people see his glory.

After the Psalmist hath set down how comfortable Christ is to his Subjects, he sheweth how terrible he is to his enemies. Whence learn, 1. Albeit the Kingdom of Christ be a Kingdom for righteousness, and a fountain of joy to all who do receive him; yet such is the natural wickedness of men, that he shall not want enemies, as here is imported plainly. 2. There is no less, but rather more wrath attending the despisers of the Gospel.
Gospel, then did attend the giving out of the Law, Heb. 12.29.

_A fire goeth before him._ 5. Albeit the enemies of Christ were never so many, environing his flock round about; yet shall he reign in the midst of them, and consume all his adversaries: _A fire goeth before him, and burneth up his enemies round about._

4. He letteth forth his wrath, not all at once, but by degrees; lighter judgements, and foregoing terrors come before destruction: _His lightnings inlightened the world: the earth saw it, and trembled._ 5. Christ shall utterly undo the greatest Potentates on earth, if they stand in his way and oppose him; The hills melted like waxe at the presence of the Lord. 6. There is no comparison between Christ and his enemies; how great Monarchs soever they be, they cannot stand before his presence; For he is _the Lord of the whole earth._

7. Our Lord shall not want Preachers of his righteousness; for beside the Word of God, blessings from heaven upon his friends, and judgements from heaven upon his enemies, according to the Word, shall testify for Christ; _The heavens declare his righteousness._ 8. The judgements of God upon the enemies of the Church, and his blessings upon his Church, shall be so evident, as beholders shall be forced to acknowledge God in them, manifesting himself for Christ's Kingdom; _And all the people shall see his glory._

_Ver. 7._ Confounded be all they that serve graven images, that boast themselves of idols: worship him all ye gods.

He setteth down Gods curse upon idolaters, or image-worshipers, and then sheweth the uses of the former Doctrine, for farther setting forth the glory of Christ's Kingdom._Wherefore learn,_ 1. All they who either serve or worship graven images, are reckoned by God for enemies to God and to Christ; and it is a part of Christ's glory to abolish images, and all worship and service unto images out of his Church: _Confounded be all they that serve graven images._ 2. A beit such as are lovers of imagery, not only do serve images, but also will defend the state of images in the exercise of Religion, and glory in them; yet shall they at length be ashamed of their boasting: _Confounded be all they that serve graven images, that boast themselves of idols._ 3. God will not have such relative worship as men would give him, him, by serving or worshipping of him in, at, or before images: the way how God will be served, is by a direct and immediate worshipping of him, without the mediation or intervening of any thing which may intercept his worship: for in opposition to relative worship in the service of graven images, he saith, Worship him; importing that when images are worshipped, God is not worshipped at all, whatsoever the image-worshipper doth intend. 4. Whosoever creature hath excellency in heaven or earth, or can pretend to any eminency or excellency of whatsoever sort, must do homage unto Christ: Worship him all ye gods, and this is the first use of the former Doctrine.

Ver. 8. Sion heard, and was glad: and the daughters of Judah rejoiced, because of thy judgements, O Lord.

Ver. 9. For thou, Lord, art high above all the earth: thou art exalted far above all gods.

The second use is to comfort all true worshippers; partly, because they hear God's wrath threatened and executed against Idolaters; and partly, because they have hereby a clear evidence of Christ's supremacy over all creatures. Whence learn, 1. The condemnation of imagerie, and of all service and worship to graven images, is a Doctrine comfortable to the true members of the Church; Sion heard, (to wit, this curse against Idolatry,) and was glad. 2. The true Church considered in her collective incorporation, as the Mother Sion, and in her particular branches and subdivisions, as Daughters of Judah depending upon Christ, the true Vine-tree of Judah, have the same reasons of joy, and the same grounds of edification by God's Word, and works of judgement, wrought for clearing of true Religion, and shaming of false worship: Sion heard, and was glad; and the daughters of Judah rejoiced, because of thy judgements, O Lord. 3. The manifestation of the Gospel of Christ, is the exaltation of God, and manifestation of his excellency; whose dishonour as it should be the matter of our grief; so his manifested glory should be our joy, as the reason here given of the joy of the Saints doth teach us; For thou, Lord, art high above all the earth: thou art exalted far above all gods.
Ver. 10. Ye that love the LORD, hate evil; he preserveth the souls of his Saints: he delivereth them out of the hand of the wicked.

1. Light is sown for the righteous: and gladness for the upright in heart.

The third use of the Doctrine, is an exhortation to the faithful to study holiness, and to eschew the fellowship of sin, whatsoever may be the danger; partly, because the Lord will deliver his own out of the hands of their enemies: partly, because God hath appointed comfort unto them, both in and after their afflictions. Wherefore learn, 1. A Believer in God, or a true worshipper of God in Christ, is a lover of God; for thus are they described here, Ye that love the Lord. 2. The love of God must be joyed with, and manifested by the study of a holy life, and with not onely abstaining from, but also with hating and abhoring of that which is sinfull; Ye that love the Lord, hate evil. 3. Albeit the hating of evil and loving of God may readily make a man the object of malice and of persecution from wicked men, yet shall the godly have their souls saved; yea, and at length be fully delivered from the harme which Satan and the wicked intend to bring upon the godly for that cause; He preserveth the souls of his Saints: he delivereth them out of the hand of the wicked. 4. All the exercises of the godly, and specially their troubles for righteousness, are but the seeds of their joy and consolation, which God is to bring forth unto them out of these troubles: Light is sown for the righteous. 5. The Lords children, who love him, and hate evil, must not think to have the fruit of their righteousness presented in possession, but must give a time unto it, as is given to corn that is cast into the ground, and as after a time the corn doth spring, and comes to a ripe harvest; so shall the troubles of the godly have a comfortable issue: Light is sown for the righteous. 6. In reckoning of the righteous, the Lord counteth men by their heart: and so many as by faith in Christ have purified their hearts unto the unfeigned study of holiness, they are righteous before God, albeit their infirmities be many: and whatsoever fit of grief and interruption of joy such men be subject unto for a time, yet at length their portion shall be a full harvest
Ver. 12. "Rejoice in the LORD, ye righteous: and give thanks at the remembrance of his holiness."

The fourth use of the Doctrine, is an exhortation unto Believers, to be joyfull and thankfull whatsoever be their condition in this present life, because of the salvation manifested in Christ. Whence learne, 1. Whateuer may be the tribulation of the faithful in the world, they have matter of joy in the LORD, and they should stirre up themselves to rejoice, and make conscience of the commandment; Rejoice, ye righteous, in the LORD. 2. Whateuer can be taken from the godly, their right and interest in CHRIST can never be taken from them, and so there is cause to give thanks for this gift for ever; And give thanks at the remembrance of his holiness, or confess to the remembrance of his holiness; that is, acknowledge to his glory the benefit which you have by being a Subject to this King. 3. Whateuer word or work of CHRIST doth bring us to the remembrance of his Name, should bring us also to the consideration and remembrance of his holiness, which is the untainted glory of all his attributes, wisdome, justice, goodness, power, mercy, truth, &c. and is the untainted glory of his Word, workes, and purchase unto us; Give thanks at the remembrance of his holiness.
His Pshalme is an exhortation to Jew and Gentile, to rejoyce and bleffe the Lord for Christ's coming, to set up his Kingdom in the world. The exhortation is thrice pressed. 1. In proper termes, requiring the Church to sing for joy, with reasons adjoyned, ver. 1, 2, 3. Then it is repeated, and musical instruments called for, to shew that by humane voice the matter of the joy which is in Jesus Christ, is inexpressible, ver. 4, 5, 6. 3. To shew that neither voice of man, nor musical instruments are sufficient to express the joy which cometh by Christ's Kingdom: the whole creatures are called unto this work of rejoicing, and setting forth his glory, ver. 7, 8. And the reason is given; because Christ cometh to set up, and exercise his Kingdom in righteousness, ver. 9.

Ver. 1. Sing unto the Lord a new song, for he hath done marvellous things: his right hand and his holy arm hath gotten him the victory.

2. The Lord hath made known his salvation: his righteousness hath he openly shewed in the sight of the heathen.

3. He hath remembred his mercy and his truth toward the house of Israel: all the ends of the earth have seen the salvation of our God.

The exhortation to sing unto the Lord, who is Christ, hath five reasons adjoyned. The first is, because he hath wrought the work of Redemption wonderfully. The next is, because he hath done his work by conflict with his enemies, and hath gotten the victory, ver. 1. The third, because he hath caused to preach his salvation to the Gentiles, ver. 2. The fourth, because he hath performed his promises made to the Jews. And the fifth, because he hath made all the earth to see the salvation, which God in Covenant with his Church hath wrought for his people.
people, ver. 3. Whence learn, 1. The joy which Christ doth bring, can never waxe old: but because mercies through him are everlasting, and the persons who have share in this joy, are made new, and all things unto them are made new; therefore the song and joy also shall be made new: O sing unto the Lord a new song. 2. Salvation brought by Christ, and the work of Redemption wrought by him, is a most wonderful work; for it is brought about by the incarnation of God, by the painfull suffering and shameful death of God incarnate, by whole stripes we are healed, and by whole death and resurrection we have life, and immortality given unto us: For he hath done marvellous things. 3. It is by battell against the enemies of our salvation that we are delivered: for Christ hath wrestled with the guiltiness, merit, and punishment of our sins; wrestled with the curse of the Law, with Satan, death and hell; and whatsoever could hinder our Redemption and Salvation, and hath gotten unto himselfe the victory to our advantage: His right hand, and his holy arme hath gotten him the victory. 4. No creatures help hath our Lord used in this work, but done all immediately by his own divine power, being God Omnipotent; His right hand, and his holy arme hath gotten him the victory. 5. The glory of the salvation of man, by this means is most justly to be ascribed to him alone, and to be called his salvation; because he devised it, and brought it about immediately by himself, and causeth to proclaime it in his own Name to the world by the preaching of the Gospel: so it is in all these respects his salvation; The Lord hath made known his salvation. 6. The way how Christ maketh known his salvation, and maketh us partakers of his salvation, is by making known his righteousness, or the righteousness of faith; and making us partakers thereof by the preaching of it among the Gentiles; His righteousness hath be openly shewed in the sight of the heathen. 8. Whateuer promise he hath made to the Jewes, he doth not forget it; but whatsoever cloud is come upon that Nation, all the mercies and promises made to them, shall all be performed: He hath remembered his mercy and his truth toward the house of Israel. 9. The fulnesse of the Gentiles shall be made partakers of the Covenant of Grace, with the true Church of the Jewes; All the ends of the earth have seen the salvation of our God.
Ver. 4. Make a joyful noise unto the LORD all the earth: make a loud noise, and rejoice, and sing praise.

5. Sing unto the LORD with the harp: and the voice of a Psalm.

6. With trumpets and sound of cornet: make a joyful noise before the LORD the King.

From the repeating of the exhortation to the whole earth, Jewes and Gentiles, and calling formusical instruments to express this joy, whereby the pædagogie of the Church under the ceremonial law, (which now is abolished) taught them the greatness of the spiritual joy of Christ's coming. Learn, 1. The joy of faith, the joy allowed unto believers in Jesus Christ, is unpeakable and full of glory, which cannot be expressed by words or humane voice; for this the variety of musical instruments in God's praise, at the offering of the sacrifices, did shadow forth under the law; and here it is signified by this exhortation, to sing with the harp, trumpet and cornet; and that with special relation to Christ, as King in Sion: Make a joyful noise before the Lord the King.

Ver. 7. Let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof:
the world, and they that dwell therein.

8. Let the floods clap their hands: let the hills be joyful together.

In the exhortation directed to the dumb creatures, sea, floods and hills, that they should utter Songs of joy; Learn, 1. The setting forth the praise of Christ for the Redemption of sinners, may not only furnish work to all reasonable creatures, but also if every drop of water in the sea, and in every river and flood, every fish in the sea, every fowle of the aire, every living creature on the earth, and whatsoever else is in the world: if they all had reason and ability to express themselves; yea, and if all the hills were able by motion and gesticulation to communicate their joy one to another; there is work for them all to set out the praise.
Praise of Christ; for, Let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof: the world, and they that dwell therein: Let the floods clap their hands, &c. doth import so much. 2. As the Lord can never be sufficiently praised for salvation through Christ: so cannot any hearers dutifully, and as becomes them, hear this doctrine without great joy or stirring up themselves to rejoice therein: for if senseless creatures in their own kind be called upon to rejoice, much more sinful men, to whom the grace of Christ is offered, and for whom the work of Redemption is wrought.

Ver. 9. Before the LORD, for he cometh to judge the earth: With righteousness shall he judge the world, and the people with equity.

The reason of all this joy is rendered in this, that Christ is coming to judge the earth and the world righteously, and to judge his own people in special. Whence learn, 1. All the joy conceived for the Redemption and Salvation wrought by Christ, and all the joy which floweth from his righteous Government, should be offered unto God in sincerity, as a part of worship and thankful acknowledgement of his gracious gift: for the exhortation is not to rejoice simply, but, to rejoice before the Lord. 2. Christ is very God, essentially JEHOVAH, before he be incarnate: and when he cometh into the world, by assuming our nature, he is the same: Rejoice before the Lord or Jehovah, for he cometh to judge the earth: that is, Christ who is Jehovah cometh to judge the earth. 3. It was foretold, that the work of governing the Church, and of ruling the whole earth for the Churches behoof, is committed unto Christ incarnate, or to Christ coming into the world; He cometh to judge the earth. 4. Christ shall guide the whole world, so as all wrongs shall be condemned, and be taken order with: his own people shall have injuries done to them avenged, and themselves directed, protected and comforted; With righteousness shall he judge the world. 5. As Christ shall reward every man according as his works have been, and do no man wrong: so shall he make his own people righteous, and followers of the rule of equity; With righteousness shall he judge the world, and the people with equity.
For the comfort of the Church against the multitude of enemies round about her, there is in this Psalm a declaration of the Kingdom of Christ, reigning as God, one with the Father and holy Spirit, in the Church of Israel, before his Incarnation: with a fourfold exhortation to all who shall heare tell of him. The first exhortation is to stand in awe of him, because of his great majesty manifested in Sion, ver. 1, 2. Another exhortation is, to praise him for his greatness, terribleness, holiness and righteousness, ver. 3, 4. A third exhortation is, to glorifie and worship him for sundry reasons, ver. 5, 6, 7, 8. For which he repeateoth the exhortation the fourth time, ver. 9.

Ver. 1. The LORD reigneth, let the people tremble: he sitteth between the Cherubims, let the earth be moved.

2. The LORD is great in Sion, and he is high above all people.

From the first exhortation to feare Christ, and to stand in awe of him; Learn, 1. Christ was King in his Church, before his incarnation, and did reign in the sight of his Saints, from the beginning of the world: for as the Father from the beginning was in Christ his Sonne the Mediatour, reconciling the world to himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them: so Christ the eternal Sonne was in the Father, and with the Father and holy Spirit gathering and governing his Church all the time before his incarnation: for it is Christ of whom here the Psalmist speaketh, and calleth him Jeboush, King in Sion; The Lord reigneth. 2. Albeit the Church be compassed about with enemies, as the liliy among the thornes; yet because her Lord reigneth in the midst of her, she hath reason not only to comfort her selfe in him, but also hath ground of defying her enemies, and boasting against them; The Lord reigneth, let the people or Nations tremble. 3. The Lords people do not worship an unknown God, they know who he is, and where to find him, to wit, in his ordinances, on the throne of grace, reconciling himself to the world in Christ; He sitteth between the Cherubims. 4. Whosoever do seek God in Christ, have the Angels attending on Christ, to go forth for the service and safety of the believer and worshipper; for this did the ceremonial figure signify: He sitteth between the Cherubims. 5. As Christ is attended by Angels to the comfort of his Church; so also for the terror and punishment of all adversaries in the world; He sitteth between the Cherubims, let the earth be moved. 6. Albeit the Lord be great in his works everywhere, yet is his greatness most manifest to his Church by his Word and Works to her and for her; The Lord is great in Sion. 7. There is no opposition which can be made against the Church; no power or multitude of people able to prevail by counsel, device, plot or practice against his Sion or his Church; for, He is high above all people: to dissipate their devices, bridle their fury, and destroy them at his pleasure.

Ver. 3. Let them praise thy great and terrible Name, for it is holy.

4. The Kings strength also loveth judgement, thou deft establish equity: thou executest judgement and righteousness in Jacob.

The second exhortation is to praise Christ the King of his Church, for his greatness, terror, holiness, moderation of his power, and love of justice. Whence learn, 1. Whosoever we know or understand of God, we should not only by faith subscribe to it, and scale it, and praise God for it ourselves, but should also commend it to others, and wish the like should be done by all men: Let them praise thy Name. 2. As the greatness of God in Christ on the one hand should induce men to the terror of our God; who is a consuming fire to his adversaries on the other hand, should press men to praise him; Let them praise thy great and terrible Name. 3. Whosoever in Scripture is said of Christ, will be found to be really in him; he will answer to his name perfectly in all things, without blame or blot: Let them praise thy great and terrible Name, for it is holy. 4. Albeit the enemies of Christ, despise the weakness and simplicity of his Government, yet he is a powerful and strong King, both in himself, and in and for all who believe in him.
him: for here the Church praiseth the King's strength. 5. Christ moderateth his power, specially in relation to his subjects, and doth not what he may: dealeth not in the rigour of justice with his people, layeth no more on them then they are able to beare: his yoke is easie and his burden is light; yea, he suffereth them not to be tempted above their strength, but dealeth discreetly with them; moderation and discretion pleasth him: The King's strength loveth judgement. 6. The course which our God hath set down for comforting the afflicted, relieving the oppressed, taking order with hypocrites and obstinate offenders, is very equitable, and a course which he will not alter or change; for, He loveth judgement, and thou dost establish equity, faith he. 7. Christ's actions and dispensations are answerable to his Lawes and his revealed Word; he teacheth his subjects righteousness; he maketh them righteous, performeth his promises, and executes his threatenings in his Church, according to his sacred Word: Thou executest judgement and righteousness in Jacob.

Ver. 5. Exalt ye the LORD our God, and worship at his footstool: for he is holy.

A third exhortation, wherein he preseth the same duty of glorifying of God the third time, by three reasons; One is, because he is holy, ver. 5. Another is, from the example of the Lords most approved servants, who did subject themselves unto the Lords ordinances, to their own and others advantage, ver. 6, 7. A third reason, from the example of the Church both in the wilderness and in after-times, who as they found the benefit of obedience of the ordinances of God, when they worshipped God as he commanded them: so did they smart for their disobedience when they followed their own inventions, ver. 8. whereupon he repeateth the exhortation the fourth time, ver. 9.

Whence learn, 1. Then is God rightly acknowledged, when his Covenant of grace offered in Christ is embraced, when men joyne themselves to the true God of Israel, and when they esteeme of God and acknowledge him, as supreme Lord and King over all: Exalt ye the Lord our God. 2. God will be worshipped, when, and where, and how he pleaseth to command, and will not be worshipped but in Christ, figured by the Temple and and Ark of the Testimony in it: worship at or before his footstool.

3. The worshippers of God under the Old Testament were taught to lift their minds above all earthly things, and loose their minds from all limitation of God unto any corporal presence in the Sanctuary or Ark, and to worship him as Solomon did, to wit, as God incomprehensible, every where present, and to be sought in heaven, and adored in a spiritual manner: for the Temple and Ark were but as his footstool, 1 Kings 18. 27. Exalt the Lord our God, and worship at his footstool.

4. Holiness is the Lords property: he is holy in himself, holy in his appointing of his ordinances, and holy in his receiving of worship; rejecting all worship, but what he commandeth and calleth for, and he will be acknowledged holy by all that worship him: and worthy is he so to be esteemed of, for, He is holy: and this is the first reason.

Ver. 6. Moses and Aaron among his Priests, and Samuel among them that call upon his Name: they called upon the LORD, and he answered them.

7. He spake unto them in the cloudy pillar: they kept his Testimonies, and the ordinance that he gave them.

The next reason is from the example of holy men of God, Moses and Aaron, Priests or chief Officers, and Samuel a Priest, Prophet, and Ruler of the Lords people, who all of them subjected themselves to the Ordinances of God; and worshipped him to their own great utility, and advantage also of them, with and for whom they prayed unto God, and worshipped him. Whence learn, 1. The examples of holy men of God commended in Scripture unto us, do serve for inducement and encouragement unto us, to believe in God, to worship, and to obey him: Moses and Aaron among his Priests, or chief Officers, and Samuel among them that call upon his Name. 2. Because the holiest men of God that ever were in the Church, stood in need of the ordinary means of grace and worship, and subjected themselves unto Ordinances; the Lord will have none of his people to neglect Ordinances, or lift themselves above Ordinances; for, Moses, Aaron and Samuel were among them that that call upon his Name. 3. Whoever worship God, and obey his Ordinances uprightly, are enrolled in the catalogue with the chiefest Saints, worshippers of God; Moses, Aaron and Samuel among them that call upon his Name. 4. The prayers of the faithful are not frustrated, but have a good answer; and the answer of the holiest suppliants is far forth to encourage the meanest of believers to call upon God also; as the impartial hearer of the prayers of all that call upon God in truth; for he is no accepter of persons: and to shew this, it is said here, They called upon the Lord, and he heard them. 7. The more evidences we have of God's presence, and the more familiarly he condescendeth to teach us, the more humble and obsequious should we be of his Ordinances and Commands; He spake unto them in the cloudie pillar: they kept his testimonies, and the Ordinances which he gave them.

Ver. 8. Thou answeredst them, O LORD our God: thou wast a God that forgavest them, though thou tookest vengeance of their inventions.

The third reason to move all to the duty of worship and obedience, is from the example of the mercy of God toward sincere worshippers on the one hand, and justice toward them that followed men's inventions in Religion in the wilderness or afterward on the other hand. Whence learn, 1. The same God, the same Mediator, the same Covenant of grace belong to the true Church both in former & latter ages; Thou answeredst them, O Lord our God. 2. Albeit the Lord give forth his Ordinances most holy and perfect, to direct men in their worshipping; yet so perverse is men's corrupt nature, as from time to time they are devising devices, and following their own inventions, as here is imported. 3. As the Lord is very merciful to his people, when they continue in his fear: so is he just to correct them, when they pollute Religion; Thou tookest vengeance of their inventions. 4. Penitent sinners, although plagued for their sin, yet were never refused forgivenesse of sin, when they prayed and sought unto God for it; Thou wast a God that forgavest them, though thou tookest vengeance of their inventions. 5. Plagued inflicted for sin upon Gods people, are not punishments satisfactory unto justice, but means of correction, serving to drive men to repentance, and to seeking of mercy, and may well stand with forgivenesse of sins; for God can can both plague sinners to drive them to repentance, and forgive their sin when they do repent: Thou wert a God that forgavest them, though thou tookest vengeance of their inventions.

Ver. 9. Exalt the _LORD_ our God, and worship at his holy hill: for the _LORD_ our God is holy.

The fourth exhortation to glorify God, wherein he doth expound what he meaneth by the footstool of the Lord spoken of, ver. 5: to wit, mount _Sion_, the holy hill where the Ark was; adding the same reason of the exhortation which was before, because the Lord our God is holy. _Whence learn_ 1. It is a part of our exalting of the true God, to joyne with his true Church, and to offer unto him with others, such worship as he doth prescribe; _Exalt the Lord our God, and worship at his holy hill._

2. The Lords holinesse requireth of all men the exaltation of his Name, and subjectio to his Ordinances; neither can his holinesse suffer any other worship then what he himselfe doth appoint: _Worship at his holy hill, for the Lord our God is holy._

3. The holinesse of God, and the untainted glory of all his attributes, is both the glory and comfort of his people who are in Covenant with him, and a motive also to them, to invite all men to the fellowship of his service with themselves: _Exalt the Lord our God, for the Lord our God is holy._

PSAL. C.

_A Psalm of praise._

The title of the Psalm sheweth the sum and scope thereof to be for stirring up of the whole Church to praise God cheerfully; unto which duty all are exhorted once, _ver. 1_, 2. for three reasons. First, because he is God. Secondly, because we are his creatures. Thirdly, because we are his covenanted people, or members of the visible Church, whereof he taketh care as a Pastor doth of his own flock, _ver. 3_. And again, all are exhorted to thank, praise, and bleffe him, _ver. 4_. And that for his goodness, mercy, and truth, _ver. 5_.

Ver. 1.
Ver. 1. Make a joyful noise unto the LORD, all ye lands.

2. Serve the LORD with gladness: come before his presence with singing.

From the first exhortation to praise God; Learne, 1. The duty of the Church visible, in all her particular meetings in every place, how largely soever God shall extend it, is to accept the offer of the grace of God joyfully, and to acknowledge the glorious riches of the grace of God, which he offereth unto them in the Gospel; Make a joyful noise unto the Lord, all ye lands, or, all the earth. 2. As we ought to accept of the offer of the grace of God joyfully: so should we also dedicate our selves to God's service heartily, as he calleth for it; because according to the Gospel, our persons and service are accepted, imperfections pitied, our sins pardoned, and our holy endeavours are graciously rewarded: Serve the Lord with gladness.

Ver. 3. Know ye that the LORD he is God, it is he that hath made us, and not we our selves: we are his people, and the sheep of his pasture.

From the reasons of this exhortation; Learne, 1. Such is our natural Atheism, that we have need again and again to be instructed, that the Lord is God; of whom, and through whom, and for whom are all things; Know ye, that the Lord he is God. 2. If we did consider well, that we are Gods creatures, it were a forcible motive unto us, to employ in Gods service whatsoever we have of God, life, motion, being, and gifts; and to beware to make any thing we have of God, a weapon of unrighteousness for fighting against him; and of this consideration we have need to be put in mind, and to be stirred up to the duty: He it is that hath made us. 3. The glory of our regeneration or new creation belongeth unto God, no lesse then the glory of our creation and natural birth: and it is no lesse madness to ascribe the work of our regeneration to our own power, then to ascribe our first first creation to our selves; for in both respects here it is said, that it is he that made us, and not we our selves. 4. As the Lords people should stirre up themselves to more thankful service unto God, as their relations unto God, and obligations to him as their King and Pastor, are joyned; so may they expect from God for their encouragement, whatsoever is needful to a people or a flock to have from a good King and faithful Pastor; We are his people, and sheep of his pasture.

Ver. 4. Enter into his gates with thanksgivings, and into his courts with with praise: be thankful unto him, and bleffe his Name.

From the repetition of the exhortation; Learne, 1. It is our duty in our approaches unto God, specially for any solemn service, to consider what rich benefits we have from him, that thereby we may be stirred up unto the more hearty acknowledge- ment of his favours; Enter into his gates with thanksgivings; 2. As the Lords benefits to us should be looked upon in our ad- dresses unto him: so also his glorious attributes, and his works answerable thereto, should be considered; whereby we may be the better disposed to give unto him glory in all respects: Enter into his courts with praise. 3. The more we look upon Gods praises, the more shall we see our own riches, and the lolidity of our bleffednesse in him, and the reasons to move us to thank and bleffe him: Be thankfull unto him, and bleffe his Name.

Ver. 5. For the LORD is good, his mer- cy is everlasting: and his truth endureth to all ge- nerations.

From the reasons subjoined to the second exhortation to praise the Lord; Learne, 1. It is a matter of perpetual praise of God, and of thanksgiving, and blessing of him, that as he is al- sufficient in himselfe: so he is also communicative of his riches unto his creatures, and unto us his own people most of all; Bleffe his Name, for the Lord is good. 2. Albeit we be sin- full, and deserve to be cut off in justice from the benefits which Gods goodnesse might bestow upon us; yet the course of his pardoning mercy, renewing the remission of sin to us, as oft as we come to him in his Christ, doth keep the channel of his goodness open and clear to us, that it may run toward us for ever; _His mercy is everlasting_.

3. The Covenant of grace set down in the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament, with the legacie of so many rich Promises, serving to strengthen the faith of every weak believer, doth make the matter of God's praise, and of his peoples joyes so sure, that how sad soever our spirits may be, when we look to our selves; yet we shall have matter of praising, thanking, and blessing God, when we look to his goodness and mercy, and to what he hath for our comfort laid in the Word of his everlasting truth: _Be thankful unto him, and bless his Name: for the Lord is good; his mercy is everlasting, and his truth endureth to all generations._ Amen.
