EPISTLE DEDICATORY

And PREFATORY,

To all Christians seriously pursuing Conformity unto Christ, and panting after Communion with God in him: Particularly the Inhabitants of the City of Glasgow, that are such: And in special, to Mrs. Durham, the famous Author's worthy Relict and my Sister-in-law, who hath had a singular Care to preserve her deceast Husband's Lectures and Sermons, that they might be made forthcoming for the publick Use and Edisseation of the Church.

Dear Friends,

DA M in innocency and integrity was in a flate of perfect friends points God, of beautiful conformity to bis image, and of sweetly comfortable communion with him: But, alas! he continued very short time in that excellent state; for the entring in of sin, by his transgressing the law and condition of the covenant of works, quite brake off the friends p, utterly dissigned and defaced the conformity, and altogether intertupted and put a stop to the communion; he having thereby run himself and his posterity under a forfeiture of that desirable state, and of all the precious privileges annexed to it; under which himself and they had lien eternally, had not God in the depth of his instante wisdom, and in the exceeding and unsearchable riches of grace and mercy, devised and found out a way for taking off that forfeiture, by sending his Son, made of a woman, and

made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law: who according to the continue of redemption, treated and transacted, finally concluded and agreed betwint Jehovah and bim, baving made a most costly, but a most complete, fatisfaction to provoke divine justice for the debt of the elect; in whale room, for that end, be did surrogate and substitute himself, as their Surety and Gautioner, bath re-established the friend bip, reflored the conformity, and recovered the communion: Of which glad tidings of great foy, publication is made in the preached gefpel; the tabernacle of the ordinances. whereof is reared up amongst men, that thereby God the Lord may dwell among them; thefe ordinances in their inftitution and nature being means of communion and fellowift p betwixt God and men : Amongst which divinely instituted ordinances, that of the Lord's supper beareth expresly the name of the Communion, because often and ordinarily the greatest measures and highest degrees of communion with God in Christ, attainable by sojourning and militant saints here on earth, are won at in the participation of that ordinance; the great pledge and love-token of our dying Lord's dearest respect to his disciples and followers, calling and obliging them, in the use thereof, to a folemn commemoration of him and of his love, and to a publick and avouched declaration of his death till be come again: Therefore is it beyond all oth r gospel-ordinances, as it were, railed about with such injunctions, cautions, and warnings, with such terrible threatnings, with such intimations of attrocious guilt, and with such denunciations of for-midable judgments against unworthy communicants, thunders and lightnings (as it were) being spoken against such. desirable deceased Author of these few following Sermons preached at Communions, used at such Occasions to endeavour, through grace, to rouse and work up himself to such a divineness of frame, as very much suited the spiritual state. and majesty of that ordinance, greatly fearing lest himself, or any of the people to whom he dispensed the same, should fall under the grievous guilt of the body and blood of the Lord: Then, in a manner, his face shone, as being in the mount of communion and fellowship with God; and, at some of those folemn and sweet occasions, he spake some way as a man that had been in beaven, commending Jesus Christ, making a glorious displays of the hanner of free grace, holding forth zĥø

the riches of it very clearly and convincingly, and bringing the riches of it very clearly and convincingly, and bringing the effect thereof very love, wonderfully low; so that, in hearing some of those sermons, particularly that on Matth. 22. I was made to think, that the rope or cord of the offer of salvation was let down and hung so low to suners, that those of the lowest stature amongst them all, tho but as Pigmeys, might kave catcht hold of it, who, through grace, had any mind to do so; and so bome, so vehemently and urgently pressed, on so sweet and easy terms to be embraced, that I have been sometimes, ide to wonder how the hearers could refuse or hift them: But there is no saving belief of this report made by the prophets, apostles, yea, or by blessed Jesus himself in his own personal ministry, but where the Arm of the Lord is revealed; no man can or will (invite, befeech and perswade who will, if it were not only men, but even angels) come to the Son, except the Father that sent him draw him: There is no moving here, without a pull of omnipotency; none avere is no moving bere, without a pull of omnipotency; none are nor can be willing to yield themselves to Christ, till the day of his power pass on their bearts; till then, they will set the most pressing calls of the gospel, but then they can set no longer, they must, they will rise then, and run after him; they will then (as the word signifies) make a scc-will-offering of themselves to him, however inexhortable and inoutering of themselves to him, however inexportable and in-flexible they had bewed themselves before; they will then make an absolute, entire, universal, unexceptioned and irreversible surrender and resignation of themselves to him, to be at his dis-pose, to be guided and saved by him in his own way. I know, the remembrance of those communion sabbaths, high sab-baths, and other ordinary sabbaths and week-days, wherein you fifter, and other firious feekers of God in Glasgow in par-ticular, heard the joyful found, walked in the light of ticular, heard the joyful sound, walked in the light of God's countenance, and rejoiced in his name all the day, living in a holy croud of precious gospel-ordinances, and having, as it were, the heavenly manna of the gospel falling labundantly about your camp every day, making you think and say. That it was good to be there, is this day sweet and saveury to you, and helps you, in a good measure, to keep up a suitable and due esteem of fellowship and communion with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ, which is commended and ind-ared to your souls, and to the souls of others of the Lord's people, by the choice, rare, excellent and none-souls.

fuch nature and properties of it; it being found by you all, priwileged with admission to the enjoyment thereof, in your expevience, to be, First, most real, and no chimerical fancy, or a thing that both no being but in the deluded imagination of the person; And truly (saith the apostle John, 1 John 1. 3.) our sellowship is with the Eather, and with his Son Jesus Christ. It bath most real effects, the spiritual; gracious fouls being more lively affected with them, than their very external senses are by the rarest and most remarkable objects ? And no doubt, the more spiritual any thing is, it hath in it the greater reality, and worketh the more powerfully and efficacioully. It is uncontrivertible, and quite removed from all reach of rational dehate, that God is the greatest reality; and, by proportion, communion with God, whereby nearest and closseft approaches are made to bim, must be very real ? Marvellous are the effects of this communion, and that your fouls know right well, as the Pfalmist speaketh, Pfal, 139. 14. in another case. Secondly, It is an awful fellowship, and full of dread; it impresset the soul with a deep, yet kindly, veneration of the glorious majesty of the great and boly God, who (as it is said, Psal. 89. ver. 7.) is greatly to he feared in the assemblies of his faints (where they are admitted to fellowship with bim) and to be had in reverence by all that are about him. When Jacob was admitted to very near communion with bim, Gen. 28, be faith, ver. 16. Surely the Lord is in this place, and I was not aware: And ver. 17. it is faid of bim, that he was afraid, and faid, How dreadful is this place! this is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven. Familiarity bere breeds no contempt, nor is it waited with any neglect or for-getfulness to keep due distance. Thirdly, It is a deeply humbling, and bolily seis-debasing fellouship; as appears in Abraham, Gen. 18. who being, as God's special friend, admitted to talk with him at an unusual and extraordinary rate of familiarity, yet interlines (as it were) bis discourse, almost in every period of it, with deeply self debasing acknowledgments of his being but dust and ashes, and deprecatings of God's anger for his taking upon him to speak to him, betwixt whom and himself there was so infinitely vast a disproportion. So the prophet Isaiah, when he bath that glorious vision of the majefly of God, Chap. 6. and bears the scraphims, those purely purely intelledual creatures, baving their faces covered with their wings, as not being able to belold the brightness of the glory of the most absolutely perfect boliness of God, crying, in a transport of admiration, each to another, Holy, holy, holy is the Lord God of hosts, the earth is full of his glory; be saith, Wo's me, for I am undone, because I am a said to the saith is the course of the said to the said because I am a man of unclean lips, and dwell in the midst of a people of polluted lips, for mine eyes have scen the King the Lord of hosts. So also Job, none-such in his time according to divine testimony, when he is admitted to unu sual nearness to God, Saith, Chap. 42. I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear, but now mine eye feeth thee; wherefore I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes. The nearest approaches to that light wherein there is no darkness at all, make the clearest discoveries of the most eminent faints their unworthiness, nothingness, and vileness. Fourthly, It is a transforming fellowship, and assimilates the person privileged with admission to it, to him that is converfed with, and with whom fellowship is attained unto; there is no real communion with him, but the result of it is some lineament of further likeness to him; We all (saith the apposite, 2 Cor. 3. 18.) beholding the glory of the Lord as in a glass, are changed (or transformed) into the same image, from glory to glory, as by the Spirit of the Lord. Communion with and conformity to God, have mutual influence and reciprocal force each upon other: The more communion with bim, the more likeness and conformity to bim; the more likeness to him, the more communion with him; little communion with him makes little conformity to him, and little conformity to bim cannot but be attended with little communion with him, Fifthly, It is a wonderful fellowbip, a fellowsbip that even sometimes transports, in a manner, the foul admitted to it, especially in any more than ordinary eway or measure, into a sort of rapture and extasy of admira-tion at it: Thus it did David, 2 Sam. 7. 18. Who (saith be) am I, O Lord, and what is my Father's house, that thou hast brought me hitherto? And Solomon, who being very near to God, in that solemn prayer of his at the dedication of the temple, saith, I Kings 3. 27. But will God indeed dwell with men on earth? and, as it is, 2 Chron. 6. ver. 18. But will God in very deed dwell with men on earth? And

viii And indeed it is no great wonder that it be greatly wondred at, that the infinitely great and boly God who inhabiteth eternity, and the high and lofty One who dwelleth in the high and holy place; and is surrounded and attended there with an innumerable company of angels, and of the spirits of just men made perfect, all of them shining in light, and burning in zeal, none of them wearying to do him service, should humble bimfelf fo far, and floop fo low, fo very low, as to dwell also (an emphatick also) with finful, the humble and contrite creatures, who dwell in cottages of clay, and whose habitation is in the dust; that be who is of purer eyes than that he can behold iniquity without detestation and abborency, should yet bumble bimself, not only to behold, but with delight to dwell and keep fellowship with them who are in a great measure unboly, and have so much of that dwelling in them, which his foul hates; that the glorious persons of the dreadful and adorable Godbead should come and make their abode with such, in whom so great a remainder of stinking unmortified corruption bath fill its abode; that infinitely pure and perfect light should have fellowship with them in whom there is so much darkness. Sixthly, It is an estranging fellowship from all idols, and whatever is displeasing to God and estranging from him; accordingly Ephraim, being brought near to bim, faith, (Hof. 14. 8.) What have I to do any more with idols? And the people of God, supposed to be in a good spirttual frame and near to him, say, Isa. 30. 22, to every idol (which they cast away as a menstruous cloth) with indignation and abborrency, Get thee hence: And David, being admitted to very near communion with God, Pfal 6. faith, v. 8 to wicked men, by whose company be might have been estranged from bim, Depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity; for the Lord hath heard the voice of my weeping, the Lord hath heard the voice of my supplication. And indeed it is highly suitable and congruous, that it should be fo; for what agreement hath the temple of God with idole? and believers are the temple of the living God, as the apostle affirms, 2 Cor 6. 16. Seventhly, It is a beart. quickning and reviving fellouship; therefore he is said, Isa. 57. verf. 15. to dwell with him that is humble and of a contrite spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite one. Eighthly, It is a heart-Raying, calming and composing fellowship: It busbetb into filence, and drives away, disquieting, perplexing and ex-cruciating fears; and therefore saith the Psalmist, when near to God, Pial. 3. 5, 6. I laid me down and flept, I awaked, for the Lord sustained me: I will not be afraid of ten for the Lord suitained me: I will not be atraid of ten thousands of people that have set themselves against me round about: And, Psal. 4. 8. I will both lay me down in peace and sleep; for thou, Lord, only makest me dwell in safetly: So, Psal. 27. 13, 14. Ninthly, It is a heart-cheering, refreshing, and rejoicing fellowsbip: The refreshing and joy that result from fellowship with God, do quite surpass and transfernd the joy that the men of the world have in the neme of the godly Psal and in the name of the godly Psal and in corn (faith the Plalmist in the name of the godly, Plal. 4. 7. in contradifination from, and opposition to, those many who cry, Who will show us any good? debasing, and in a manner brutifying themselves, as if they had not rational and immortal souls capable of enjoying God the chief Good, the only Object suited compleatly to satisfy their most inlarged destres) Lord, list thou up the light of thy countenance upon us; for thou hast caused more joy of heart to me (to wit, thereby) than their terms and wine abound. when their corn and wine abound: And, Pial. 89, 16. those who walk in the light of his countenance are faid to rejoice in his name all the day: Thus, when he prays, Pfal. 43. for admission to fellowship with God in his publick ordinances (to which be had gone with others of his prople, with the voice of joy and gladness, as they that keep holy days, as be telleth us in the preceeding Psalm) be promiseth in that case, that he will go unto the altar of God, unto God his exceeding joy, the gladness or joy of his joy, the very heart and soul of his joy, or the cream of it, as some translations render the word; there is reality, solidity, strength and efficacy in that joy; it is heart joy, while as in the very midst of the carnal joy, jollity and mirth of natural men, arising from the greatest affluence of worldly pleasures and enjoyments, their heart is torrowful, as Solomon saith: There is no solidity in it, it hath not a bottom; if they would but a little retire within themselves, and ask fon a reason of their laughter, mirth and jollity, it would instantly evanish, and their hearts would die within them as stones; 'tis kept up, to their delusion and ruin, by their abstracting from, and non-restetting upon, the unsolidity and irrelevancy of the grounds thereof: But the more the ground of this joy of the godly be reflected on, considered and searched into, they are found to be the more abie to bear the highest superstructures of their joy. Touthly, It is such a fellowship, that, whatever measure of it be attained by sojourning faints, it wakneth defires, sharpneth appetite. and stirreth up kindly longings for more, and yet more of it, even till it be compleated: Thus Moses, the man of God, and bis great favourite, whom he knew face to face, when admitted to very much familiar fellowhip with him, and is told, that he had found grace in his light, that he knew him by name, and that at his earnest desire his presence should go with him, Exed. 33. 12, 13, 14. yet faish be to the Lord, var. 18. I befeech thee, shew me thy glory. So boly Job, God's darling, whose candle shined on his head, by whose light he walked through darkness, and on whose tabernacle the secret of God was, yet with much boly long. ing cries, Chap, 23. 3. Oh that I knew where I might find him! I would come even to his feat; and comforts bimself amidst all his forrows with the affured hope of the fully fatisfying fight and enjoyment of his Redeemer at the latter day, So likewise the Spouse in the Song, who kad often been brought into the banqueting-bouse, kaving the banner of ber Belived's love spread over ber; whose left band had lain often under ber bead, and whose right band had embraced ber; who had often fitten down under his padow with great delight, and found his fruit sweet to ber taste; whose spikenard did send for the smell thereof, while the King sat at his table; who had frequently found, by the kisses of his mouth, his love to be better than wine, and to whom he had often given kis loves in the Vineyards; Yet cries, in the conclusion of that high Song, Make haste (or flee) my Beloved, and be thou like to a roe or to a young hart on the mountains of spices. So was it also with David, the man according to God's heart, who had much sweet communion with him in his wandrings and wilderness-condition, in caves and dens of the earth, and had often feen his power and his glory in the fanctuary; yet pants and breathes after more fellowsbip with bim, even as the chased bart doth after the water-brooks, and gries, When shall I come and appear before God? Pfal, 42. So in like manner was it with the apostle Paul, Christ's great minion, who, beside all the good days be had in dispensing Gospel-ordinances, in planting and watering churches, in converting and edifying multitudes of souls, in his triumphing, by making manifest the savour of Christ's knowledge, had been ravished into the third heavens, caught up into paradise, and heard there unspeakable words, that were not lawful or possible to be uttered; yet, as if he had never heen with him, desired to be dissolved, and to be with Christ, as heft of all; and grones within himsets, longing to be absent from the body, and present with the Lord. And thus was it, sinally, with John the Divine, the beloved Disciple, who had often lien in his sweet Master's hosom, and would considertly say, Truly, our sellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ, closeth his Revelations with that holy passionate desire, Even so, come, Lord Jesus.

Lord Jelus.

Dear Friends, let it be more than ever your great work and business to keep yourselves in case and capacity to enjoy his blessed company and fellowship: And, in order to this end, 1. Study to keep yourselves through grace as chast virgins to Christ Jesus as your one Hushand: Let him be to you as the loving hart and pleasant roe; let his embraces satisfy you at all times, and he ye always ravished with his love, and beware of embracing the bosom of a stranger; let him be to you as a hundle of myre he lying all night between your breast. you as a bundle of myrrbe lying all night betwirt your breafts; be for him and not for another, so shall be be for and with you, resting in his love, and rejoicing over you with singing. Jou, refirm in bis tove, and rejuting over you with linging.

2. Touch no unclean thing, hate the very garment spotted with the flesh, abstain tenderly from all appearance of evil:

O defile not those temples of the living God, of the boly Ghost, which temples ye are; let no unclean thing be harboured or tolerated there, nothing that may provoke him to leave or lothe his dwelling and temple, nothing that may make his abode in them grievous, unpleasant, lothsom, or wearisom to him.

3. Let all his ordinances and duties of his worship he high in your esteem, and much commended and even endeared to your bearts, as means of communion and fellowship with him; O be much in love with the habitation of his house, and the place where his honour dwells: Let his tabernacles be very amiable to you; these are his haunt, and let them be yours. 4. Bequare of all sinful dalliances with idols, whereby the foul is estranged from communion with God; for there is no agreement betwixt the temple of God and idols; from love to fellowship with bim, and from zeal to bis glory, bid them all, with indignation, begone, (aying to them, What have me any more to do with idols? and as to a menstruous cloth, Get von hence, 5. When he bides his face, withdraws his presence, and suspends you from fellousbip with him, be troubled, arife, Bake off laziness, flotb and security; be boilly reftlefs, and go the round (as it were) of all commanded duties, till you find him; feek him diligently in the night-watches on your bed; go forth to the fireets and broad places; go to the watchmen, and seek him whom your souls love: You will have gone but a little, and you shall find him; and, when you have found him, hold him and let him not go, do not awake nor raife him till be please. 6. Study to be very bumble, tender and contrite of heart, to be poor inspirit, con-Cantly fenfible of your spiritual poverty, emptiness, wants and indigencies; and to tremble at his word; at commands. left they be not suitably obeyed; at threatnings, left they be executed; at promises, lest you seem to come sbort of them ; For it is in persons thus qualified that be delights to devell, and it is to such that he loves to lock, as is very clear, Ifa. 57. 15. and 66. 2. 7. Love, prize, improve, and, as ye bave access, fludy to keep up (as you, fifter, in particular are belped through grace to do beyond many) the communion of faints, those excellent ones of the earth, in whom, next to bis own bleffed felf, all your delights should be : In communion with those faints, communion with the King of faints is readily attained, it being here that he commands the bleffing, even life for evermore. 8. Be much in the lively exercife of faith in, and of love to, the Lord Jesus: And he spiritually precise, strict, exact, accurate and punctual in obedience to all bis commands, from principles of faith and love; and Christ and his Father will love you, and come and make their abode with you, as he promiseth, John 14. 21, 23.

O desirable quests, and worthy of all possible welcome, of all ready and cheerful entertainment! Follow bard after bim, constantly and closly pursue conformity to him, and communion with bim : It is but a little, and the conformity to bim Shall be compleated, and you likened perfectly to bim, according to creature-capacity; and the communion with him which is now but in papt (as all the spiritual privileges and enjoyments of the people of God, while upon earth, are) ball he fully perfected. Shall be immediate, without the intervention of the comparatively dark glass of ordinances, even to seeing him face to face, and as he is; and shall be eternally uninterrupted, without the least cloud or moment's eclipse: Now it is a cloud and a clear day, a sun-blink and anon a shower, rara hora, brevis mora, a rare hour, but quickly gone; it shall not be so then. O destrable and delightsom day! O sweet, singularly sweet and solacious day! O rare and ravishing day! Let all other days pass and hasten away, and let that glorious day come; Even so, come, Lord Jesus, and tarry not. I amage

Beloved Christian Friends, and dear Sister,

> Your very affectionate' Friend, and feriously well-wishing Servant in the Gospel,

I heartily wish that this mite of service may be acceptable to the saints, it being not improbable that it may be the last service of this kind that I shall have access to do them.

COMMUNION

1 Cor. 11. 29. For be that eateth and drinketh unworthilys eateth and drinketh damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's Body.

T hath been so ordered in the good providence of God, that ye have lately heard of that main, very comprehensive and indispensibly necessary duty, called for from all that would worthily partake of the ordinance of the Lord's Supper, for which we are now making ready, viz.

Self examination; in reference to which, the apostle having perceived many faults and failings in these Corintbians, and much unfuitableness as to their communicating; gives advertisement, that whoever for the time to come would aright approach to the table of the Lord, would examine themselves, and so eat: And, knowing well that this is a difficult exercise, and that there is naturally a great deal of averfness in peoples hearts from it, he judgeth it meet to press the exhortation to that necessary, the difficult duty, by a reason or motive set down in the words now read in your hearing; For be that eateth and drinketh une wortbily, eateth and drinketh damnation to bimfelf: As if he had faid, You had need to look well to the examination of yourselves, for, if ye neglect or miscarry in that duty. your hazard and danger is dreadfully great through unworthy communicating; which if ye would escape, their make conscience narrowly and carefully to examine your-felves. The last words of the werse are a confirmation of the

the reason, and do shew why the Lord is so holily severe in punishing and plaguing those who approach to his table unworthily through not examining of themselves, because they discount not the Lord's Body: The force whereof is, that there is a most singular and gracious presence of the Lord Christ in the sacrament of his supper, and therefore the person who goes not aright about it, doth put a great disrespect upon, yea, doth even vilisy him who is thus present in that ordinance. It is the first part of these words, that at this time we would mainly speak to; wherein we would explicate the meaning of these three, 1st, To eat and drink unworthily, here, is to eat and drink unfuitably or unbecomingly; as the apostle, when he willeth the Christian Romans, Chap. 16 2. to receive Phebe as becometh and is suitable to faints, he makes use of the word worthily, for so it is in the original; and this, being the opposite to that, is to be understood unsuitably and unbecomingly to such a manifestation of the love of Christ, in giving himself to and for his people: As in our common language, when a man does a thing unfuitably, we say he did it unworthily, when it answers not the end proposed. 2dly, Judgment, or Dame nation, here, takes in these things. I. A temporal stroke; as, v. 30, 31. For this cause many among you are Schly and weak, and many sleep. 2. It may look to eternal judgment; as damnation is often taken in scripture. 3. It may look to spiritual judgments; for the a believer be not capable of eternal judgment, yet by unworthy communicating he may draw upon himself temporal strokes and spiritual judgments; he may much wear out the life of grace, and bring himself under blasting and withering: And unbelievers draw upon themselves not only those, but eternal damnation, and that with a higher degree of aggravation. 3dly, That he is faid to eat and drink this to bimfelf, as in the former verse a man is commanded to examine berfelf: It may take in these two, as aimed at by the apostle, 1. It is to provoke every man to his particular duty, from his particular hazard; he hazards his own soul. 2. Tis put here, to shew the refirstion of the judgment according to the sin; and so, if a man examine himself, tho others neglect it, the judg-

The great Danger of

76 ment shall not overtake him; but if he examine not him? felf, whoever escape judgment, he shall not escape it! And thus 'ris an encouragement to a man to go about the dury of felt-examination, as well as a motive of terror: Corinth being corrupted with many abuses, one Person could not amend all: Well (says he) Let a man examine bimfelf, and to he shall escape the hazard; if not, he will fall under it.

We shall first draw some observations from the words.

and then speak a word for use.

First, It is supposed here, that in this ordinance of the Lord's Support there is a special eminency, excellency, dignity and worth; or, this ordinance of the Lord's Supper is of a fingular folemn nature: And this I gather partly from this ver/e considered in itself, He that eats and drinks unworthily, implies that there is a special worthis ness in it, that a man should not offer indignity to; and partly from the connexion of this verse with the former. for it is made a reason why he presses particular and ffrict self-examination, which shews that there is a more singular excellency in this ordinance than in others; and partly from the context, for every circumstance speaks out a folemnity in this ordinance; as, (1.) The night when it was instituted, v. 23. The fame night in which be was betrayed, and when he was taking his goodnight of his disciples. (2.) His jealousy of, and his quarrelling and threatning for the abuse of this ordinance, speaks out a special excellency in the ordinance, that all who approach thereunto should be suitably affected with. All the ordinances of the Lord are excellent; for if all his works be excellent, then much more the gospel-ordinances, as being a step above those; and yet this ordinance of the Lord's Supper seems dignified with an eminency and excellency above them all. I. In reference to what it sets out and exhibites: They all fet out love, but this fets out love in an eminent degree; for it fets forth the Lord's death, wherein the most eminent step and degree of his love shines; yea, this ordinance fets out his actual dying, and so fets' out his love in its liveliest colours, and as the great masterpiece of it. 2. In respect of the excellent benefits communicated in it: It is true, there is no other thing on the matter

matter communicate in it, than there is communicate in the word and baptism; yer, if we look to the words, Take ye, eat ye, this is my body, they hold out Christ Jesus not so much giving any particular gift, as actually conferring himself in his death and suffering: And the main scope being to confer Christ and all that is in him to the believer. it holds out some way the excellency of this ordinance be-3. In respect of the manner how our Lord yond others. Jesus makes over himself; whereby I mean not only the clearness of his making over himself, for in this ordinance there is the clearest view of a slain Saviour, and of covenanting with God; and often the most comfortable manifestations of love go alongst with it, for which cause 'tis called eminently the communion: But also that there is here a clear glance of heaven upon earth, Jesus Christ and his people mixing (to speak so) and being familiar together; he condescending not only to keep company with them, but to be their food and refreshment; and he giving them not only the word to their faith, but himself (as it were) to their sense, in so far as the mean whereby he communicateth himself is more sensible; it is by his Spirit that the mean is made effectual. And there is not only a fixedness of faith on our part, but a fort of divineness in the ordinance itself; the very first-fruits of heaven being communicate, as it were, to the very fenses of the believer: I say unto you (fays the Lord, Mat. 26.29.) I will not drink benceforth of the fruit of the vine, until that day I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom ! Where he seems to point out a more special way of keeping communion with his people in this ordinance, in refemblance to that which he will have with them in heaven; there being here a more special union and communion betwixt the head and members sealed up, a type of that which is to be in heaven, a taste whereof is sometimes given in this ordinance of the communion: Hence 'tis not only called the communion, as in the foregoing chapter, but the communi nion of the body and blood of Christ, and the table of the Lord.

The first Use of it serves to let us see how much we are obliged to Christ Jesus: What could he have given more than himself? And what mean could have been invented, that could have more confirmed and warmed the hearts of his people than this, which is so lively a representation and commemoration of his blessed body? Very like we might come to discern his body better, if there were a more high estimation of this ordinance; not as if there were any esticacy in it of itself to communicate grace; yet, in respect of Christ's institution, 'tis a most lively, mean of grace: And there is not a circumstance in all the action, but it is to be wondred at; as, that it was instituted the same night he was betrayed, and after the paschal supper, when the traitor Judas was going to bring the band of soldiers to take him; that he warrants us to take it, and that we have therein sweet communion amongst ourselves: Every thing in it ought to draw us to admire his sufferings, and the great love they came from, and the notable effects thereof to us.

The second Use serves to provoke us to study to be in a solemn divine heavenly frame for such a solemn divine heavenly action as this is, and thorowly to examine ourfelves, and to fee that all things be in good order; like to a bride that is to be married to-morrow, who, will be trying on her marriage-clothes, and seeing that all things he right. I shall not descend to particulars, but, in three or four words in the general, only point at such a frame as we conceive is called for from you. 1. It should be such a frame as ye would desire to be in, if Christ were coming personally and visibly to marry you to-morrow: And O that this night might thus be a brydel or marriage-evening to us all! Confider what frame we would wish to be in, if we were to meet with him, and strike hands with him personally and visibly: Study and seek after such a frame, 2. It should be such a frame as we would defire to have, if we were going to give up the ghoft, when all earthly things will be infignificant and of little worth to us; even such a frame as if our eternal peace and happiness were depending on that chock. This would be the night of making our testament (as it were) and of the adjusting our accounts with God, and of parting things to a point betwist him and us; otherwife our debt may increase and grow greater, and it will not be so easy for us to win to a discharge of it. 3. It thould.

should be such a frame as we would desire to be found in. if the day of judgment were coming, and if that day were to be to-morrow: O how humble, how abstracted from the things of a present world, and how confirmed in the faith of God's love, would we fludy to be, if the voice of the arch-angel and of the last trumper were founding, and a folemn meeting of all before the tribunal of Christ were presently to be! What a frame (I say) would ye defire to be in, in such a case! Even such a frame should ve study to be in this night, as ye would defire to be found in, in that day: We fear it will be to many then a prick and a fling in their consciences' within them, that they made so little conscience to be in a suitable frame for this so solemn an ordinanco: The text tells that a sentence will pass on every one of you, and you would by all means labour to be in such a posture as the sentence may not be terrible to you, 4. It should be a heavenly and divine frame 1 for, if it be a heavenly and divine action, ye would confider what a frame it calleth for; how abstracted (as I just now faid) the heart should be from the world, and from your carnal delights; how much in heaven, and conversant with God; what a pitch your communion with God should be raised to, in apprehending of, and meditating on him, in confidering of, and admiring at the sufferings of Christ, and at the love they came from; tafling that he is good, and even delighting and foliacing yourselves in his love; which is the Lord's allowance on his people, when the action is humbly and reverently gond shout.

خو ان Secondly, observe, That the this be a most singularly solemn ordinance, and solemnly to be gone about, yet off-times men and women go most unworthily about it, and abuse it. This is implied in the words, and we need not many proofs of it: If we will read from the 20 ver. to this, we will find it sufficiently proved; and if we look forward to ver. 30. & 31. we will find that many sad strokes came on these Corintbians for abusing and profaning this ordinance, and the apostle would have them gathering their unworthy communicating from these strokes. There is a readiness both in unbelievers and in believers themselves to miscarry in going about this ordinance; a readingle of the solutions of the solutions of the solutions of the solutions.

ness in unbelievers; for as they spoil all things, all ordi nances and duties they meddle with, all things being unclean to the unbeliever, so there is a miserable and woful necessity lying upon them to spoil this ordinance; and a readinels even in believers, who also may miscarry therein, as is implied in the last words of the chapter, compared with ver. 32. When we are judged, we are chaffned of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world. Some of them that were believers were chastised for this fault, to prevent their eternal ruin: And are there any acquainted with their own corrupt nature, but they may and will in some measure find in themselves an apritude to miscarry, as in all other duties and ordinances, so in this? But the doctrine holds out a singular and peculiar bentuess to miscarry in this duty and ordinance; so that one who will pray with advertency, and be carried fairly thorow in that and several other duties, may yet in this ordinance fall under the guilt of unworthy communicating: The reasons of it may be these, First, Because the more folemn the duty be, and the greater concurrence of duties be in it, there is the greater difficulty in going about it; for a foul cannot be right in this, except it be right in a number of other duties and graces, as in prayer, faith, love, and repentance: And that word, Let a man examine bimself, takes in a complication of duties and graces; there would be a good state and a good frame, and graces would be in some vigour, and every duty suitable and proportionable to the nature of the action and of the day. And if it be a great and difficult work to carry rightly on an ordinary fabbath, or in prayer, or meditation, or other duties any day, what a difficult work must it needs be to have all these rightly yoked together? A fecond reason may be drawn not only from the complication of graces and duties, that is required in this action; but from the nature of the thing itself, that calls for duties in a high degree of spirituality: If any ordinance or duty call for a spiritual frame, 'tis this: It requires that the exercise of the judgment be most clear, that faith be most distinct, that meditation be most divine, &c. And the more spiritual the duty be, there is certainly the more aptness in us, thro' our corruption, to miscarry

n it. A third reason is, Because there is in men and women naturally and ordinarily but very little study and endeavour to know and take up aright the nature of this ordinance: There is in the most part a great ignorance of the strain and series of the gospel; but generally there is a greater ignorance, darkness and blindness as to the right partaking of this ordinance, than as to most others; either thro' the difficulty of it, or thro' our laziness that puts us not to fludy it better: So that if it were asked at many of us who may have some affection, What is a communion? and what is the right way of partaking of it? there would be found but very little distinctness in the thing, and many content themselves to live without clearness about it: And this makes people incapable to go about it aright. A fourth reason is from peoples lothness to bestir themselves in the work of preparation for it: There is some self-examination requisite for every duty, but there is a more so emn self-examination injoined in reference to this; and how very reluctant are we to it? And seeing examination of ourselves is as the door and entry to this duty, is it any wonder that most persons communicate unworthily? this exercise of self-searching being so much flighted, which is to the most part so very difficult, and to many through their own fault impossible.

The first Use serves for warning as to this matter. It is easy to get a token and to come to the table, but it is not so easy to eat and drink werthily, not so easy to discern the Lord's body, and to get Christ himself in the ordinance; and, in a word, to to go about partaking of the Lord's supper, as ye may have solid quietness of mind in reflecting on it. Is it not a wonder, then, that the most part do so securely and in a manner even desperately rush upon it, who have it may be lien, some ten, some twenty, some thirty years without trouble under this guilt? We would think it a good piece of preparation, if ye were serioufly afraid to become guilty of the body and blood of the Lord: Want of this holy fear breeds fecurity, and keeps from thirring up to duty, and from reflecting on ourselves; whereas, if the heart were stirred and rouzed with such a fear, there would be greater and more feriously sharpned diligence in all these duties, whereof we heard from the

The great Danger of foregoing words, to which this is a strong and pressing motive.

The second Use serves for trial, who among the great company gathered together here this day are afraid of sinning against God, and taking his name in vain in so solemn an ordinance. Many think they are prepared, but we think not that person the better prepared, that is not afraid and holily jealous over himself: Wo, wo to many on account of the communion-days that are past and gone without fear: It were good that ye were afraid less this day prove like many former days, and less any of you come short of what hath been attained in former communion-days.,

Thirdly, observe, That the sin of unworthy communicating is a wrath-provoking and a judgment-drawing-onfin: He that eats and drinks unworthily, eats and drinks damnation to-bimself. There is hardly any fin that the Lord will more readily, speedily, and sadly plague and punish, than this: It is true, the Lord hath annexed that certification to the third commandment, that He will not bold bim guiltless that taketh bis name in vain; But is there any ordinance wherein the threatning is more expressed, and in reference to which the judgment hath been more severely and some way indifferently inflicted? as is clear, whether we read before or after the words of the text: And there is good reason for it; For, 1. If the duty be more folemn, if the presence in it be more gracious, and the bounty that flows in it be more abundant, then fure the fin of abusing, or of unbecoming going about it, must be the greater. 2. If we look to the fin not only in respect of its greatness in several other respects, but in respect of the nature of it, 'tis a more direct disrespect put upon, and despite done in some respect even unto Christ; ris to be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord; 'tis as if the spear had been in such a man's hand that pierced Christ's fide, and as if he had driven by his own hand the nails thorow his hands and feet: The reason is, because Christ in this ordinance brings himself and his death so very near, that the sinner is put to it in a special manner, either to receive him, or to refuse and reject him; and when he refuses and rejects him, he thereby practically says, that hę

he makes very little or no account of him at all, and that, if he had been living in those days when he was crucified, he would also have joined with the multitude, and cried, Away with him: Thus such an one crucifieth the Son of God afresh, and puts him to an open shame: O hainous and horrid guilt!

The first Use serves to alarm you, That, if the sear of sin will not prevail with you, the sear of judgment, of God's curse and wrath, and of the vengeance of the Mediator (represented in this ordinance very clearly, as crucified, and bleeding out his precious life for sinners) here, and eternally hereaster, may prevail with you to be serious in the work ye are now called to.

Let me (which is a fecond and more particular Use of the doctrine) advise you, as to examine yourselves serioully in reference to all your other ways, so to take a special look of your bygone communicating: O that many of you who are so whole at the heart, that there is no provoking nor awakning of you, and who are so sense less, that we scare at nothing, could be prevailed with to charge yourselves with this horrid sin of being guilty of the body and blood of the Lord, that thereby ye may be awakned! It will certainly one day awake you; therefore, in your felf-examination, take special notice: If ye have communicated unworthily, make special addresses to God for removing of this dreadful guilt, and have a special eye for the time to come that ye fall not in it; I say again, take a special review of your bygone carriage in this ordinance, and say to yourselves, Whether are we guilty of this fin? and whether are we in hazard to fall into it of new? And, to stir you up to this, consider,

What temporal strokes from God have come or may come for it: Who knows but our outward captivity, the blood that hath been shed, the many new and unheard-of, or but very little heard-of diseases that are among us, have in a great part been for this fin? 2. Know, that, beside temporal firokes on the outward man, ye may fall under spiritual plagues: The Lord may blast the ordinances for the time to come, that they shall do you no good; and he may blaft any parts and gifts that we have; he may make your ears dult of hearing, and your eyes blind, and your hearts fat: And, if ye quench any convictions that ye may possibly be under for the time, it may be that ye shall never be privileged with such convictions again, nor be brought so near heaven hereafter; but more delufion and seduction by error, more prophanity, security, hypocrify and prefumption may break in among you; And the these be not thought much of now by some at least, but lookt at as very light things, yet the day will come when they will be found to be insupportably heavy; and men will be put rather to wish, that this house, wherein we now are, had fallen on them and bruised them, or that the sword had fallen in upon them and slain them, than to ly under such a weight. 12. Know, that it may bring on eternal judgment; and O but this will draw deep on the score of many professors, even the abuse of the Lord's table, in partaking of his table, and of the table of devils! I shall name but a few fins here, that ye would notice and try yourselves in as to this: if, Ye have often communicate, have ye also often examined yourselves? Can many of you pitch on such an hour or half-hour, that ye set apart to try your soul's condition? 2dly, I would ask, What repentance hath there been? Right examination makes discovery of guilt, and discovery of guilt brings out repentance, which hath some pricking and soul-panging with it. 3dly, What effect hath followed? what engagements have been keeped? how have many of us reformed our walk? is not our carriage as it was? passion and pride as quick and lively as they had wont to be? deadness, security and worldly-mindedness as they were before? Are we not as little self-denied, as unready to forgive, as ignorant, and having as little knowledge of gofpel-mysteries as we were, and had many a year since? But very few can say on good grounds that they have made any progress in mortification and holiness; and, except it be some conviction, some flash of affection, or some faint resolutions to amend things amiss, what use hath been made of, or what benefit hath been reaped by many, and that not of the worst fort, by the communion? And therefore, in the next place, let me say, That it were not unbecoming or unfuitable to the communion, to make this night a night of humiliation before God, and of.

ij,

of prayer to him to be delivered from blood-guiltiness; there is not a more legible evidence of our untenderness, than our being little pricked at the heart for this fin: A word of reflection from our neighbour, or the apprehension of some great man's displeasure and feud, hath lien nearer our hearts, than the wronging of the Son of God at this rate, hath done; for which it were good now to cast an eye to look to him, and to mourn as one mourneth for his only son, and to go to Zion weeping as we go, asking the way thitherward. These are no uncouth nor strange things, but such as are ordinarily prest upon us. We are afraid that many have lothed and left the simple way of godliness, to get and look after some shining and glistering thing to the eye; and that way will never profit them. Take a serious look of your foul's condition, and be in good earnest in the exercise of repentance, as the life of your pre-paration; even that ye may come, knowing well what ye need, and what ye are to receive if ye come aright.

The third and main Use is, That, seeing there is so great ground to sear communicating unworthily, and that to great judgments follow upon it, it would be, as our fear to communicate unworthily, so our uptaking business, how we may communicate worthily: This is the end of the day, and should be our task and work this night, even to endeavour to be worthy communicants tomorrow. Ye will readily ask, How is fuch a frame to be attained and come by? I would, for answer, defire you feriously to mind what ye have heard on these words, Let a man examine bimself, and so let bim eat; which com-prehend the sum of what is called for from you: And we shall now add these four things, that, in your preparing yourselves to communicate rightly and worthily, ye would seriously mind; 1. A right up-taking of yourselves. 2. A right up-taking of the ordinance. 3. A right acting in reference to both. 4. A right manner of acting or a right frame in your going about the work. For the First, We say, There would be a right up-taking of ourselves, that we may know what we are, what are our fins, spiritual wants and necessities, that we may have some diffinct errand to God: This is implied in these words, Let a mas examine bimself; that he may be well acquainted with with himself. If there be not some time taken for attaining to a right consideration of ourselves, we cannot come rightly to this ordinance; or if any word come that suits our condition, it will come by guess as to us, and we may come to the communion, and neither know what we need, nor what we are feeking or would be at.

For the Second, we say, There would be a right uptaking of the ordinance itself, which, when wanting, it mars us, that we know not how to communicate: In the ordinance we would take up the substance of it, the end of it, and how it effectuates the end. 1ft, The substance of the ordinance is Christ Jesus himself, who, the he be not bodily, yet is he really present in the sacrament: His words are not empty words, the figns are not empty figns; but the bread his body, and the wine is his blood: For if there be a presence in the word, as he makes it known through his Spirit, by the efficacy of it on the heart; then, in a more special and solemn manner, there is a presence in the facrament, which also he makes sensible to the spiritual senses of the believer. 2dly, The end and use the ordinance, for which God hath appointed it, would also be rightly taken up; and this is large: It serves for the manifesting of his love in his death till he come again; and this would be a piece of your exercise, to discover the love of Christin it, and to put your faith to exercise on that love: In which respect, Christians have not only their particular case to look to in the sacrament, but also that their spirits be taken up with the thoughts of the wonderfully condescending love of Christ, who hath given and lest behind him a token and memorial of it. And especially these ends would be looked to and confidered, orz. That tis given for instruction, for it gives us a light of Christ crucified; it shews us the way of making up our union with him, and the necessity of it, and the warrant given us to make use of him. And as 'tis given for instruction and teaching, so for sealing and confirming; the Lord would have us thereby knowing the truth of his promises and covenant for our greater consolation, and that we may with the greater liberty apply them: Even as when a prince offers peace to a rebel, and grants him a pardon, to make him the more fure, and to remove all doubts doubts and jealousies, there is a seal appended to the pardon, which confirms it, and confequently strengthneth the faith of the rebel to rest upon it; so this is a special end of the facrament, to feal and confirm: God having graciously condescended to covenant and promise, and to iwear to the truth of his covenant and promise, that the beirs of promise may have strong consolation; he also appends seals to his covenant. But, 3aly, We are to confider how it effectuates these ends: And thus we are to look on the facrament as exhibiting and applying Jesus Christ and his benefits; which must needs be a spiritual and sublime thing, holden out in these words, Take ye, eat ye, this is my body, &c. Where we have Jesus Christ giving over himself to the believer, so as he and the believer become one, and he hath Christ to feed upon. 'Tis true, there is no physical conjunction here: Yet as, in the word, the offer and promises convey Christ holden out in the promiles to the foul, being received by faith, there is an union thus made up betwixt Christ and the person; so, in the right partaking of the facrament, the Spirit going along with the word and feal, and the believer receiving the seal as given him of God for that end, as well as the word, there refults an union and communion, a mystical and spiritual uniting and joining of Christ and the believer together; which, altho' it doth not always necessarily presuppose faith going before, yet it supposes faith necessarily to go along with it: And in this there is most express covenanting and bargaining betwixt Christ and the believer, Jefus Christ not giving himself here indefinitely, as he doth in the word and offer of the Gospel, but particularly; and thus the believer's faith hath the most distinct ground and reason to make application of him, and so the more distinct confirmation.

For the Third, There is a right acting in reference to both the former to be looked to.. 1st, There is something that our judgment and memory would be taken up with, which is as the key to what follows: We are to remember the Lord's death, the end of it, the love he had in dying, and his inflituting of this ordinance when he died for this end, that we might remember his death and love therein till he come again, and have our minds meditating on these.

28 2dly. There would be the exercite of our graces, as of repentance, from reflecting on ourselves; of love, from looking to Christ, and of continued spiritual mourning, refulting from both: And especially there would be the exercise of faith, as being the main thing that on our part makes up the union, and whereby our communion is entertained. And there is a threefold act of faith called for in worthy communicating; I, An act receiving 2. An set giving. 3. A ratifying act, that knits both the acts together. (1.) I say, an act of faith receiving Christ's word and ordinance, and himself therein. (2) An act of faith giving, refigning or committing ourselves to him: The covenant being in this respect mutual. And, (3.) A ratifying act, coupling or knitting these together, wiz. Christ giving himself to us, and our giving ourselves to him; his engagement to us, and ours to him. To clear these a little further, 1. The receiving act of faith looks to the institution and covenant to which the facrament is appended, and to Christ, in the words of institution and in the covermant, making offer of himself, which is to be confidered as in the word and covenant, to which the facrament is appended: And accordingly it welcometh him, as it doth in the word; for, as there is a receiving act of faith as to the word, so there is a receiving act of faith as to the facrament: That is, when the foul is put to dispute, whether about the offer if it be made to it, or about the promise that) supposes the condition, if it may lay hold upon it; the believing foul's faking of the faerament is the permitting and allowing of itself to be confirmed, by vertue of Christ's appointing that ordinance for its confirmation, that the offer is made to it, and that the promise belongs to it in particular: As when a penitent finner comes to the communion, and that promife rolls in his thoughts, Thy fins and thy iniquities will I remember no more, and he would fain believe it; the receiving act of faith is to take the facrament as God's putting his feal to that word of promise, that he will make it good to the soul in particular, Thy Ens and thy iniquities will I remember no more : Or when a foul hath its fecret longing after Christ, and cannot difpense with the want of him, and cries out, O! when will thou come unto me? In the facrament it looks on the inftiinflitution, and takes it as a feal of confirmation to put it out of question, that he that hath promised to come, will come, and will not tarry; and it looks on Christ giving the communion, as if it saw him taking the pen, and with his own hand subscribing the contract, and lays it up in its heart as in a charter-cheft, as an evidence and confirmation of its right to Christ. And indeed there is much need of being distinct in this; for there are many who make conscience of engaging to Christin this ordinance. who look not on it as Christ's engaging to them; but the receiving act of faith looks on it immediately as his engaging to the foul: As a person that bath a hard heart, looking on that promise, I will take away the stony beart, and give a beart of flish, and, expecting the making out of it, takes the facrament as a feal that he will perform that promife, because he articles so with him to get that promise made good; even as a man, that would have some debateable clause in his right to such a piece of land cleared and put out of question, brings it to his superior to get it sealed of new: Now this receiving act of faith doth not only dispose and fit us to receive from God; but as the hand takes or receives the elements, so faith receives God's offer of the covenant, and that which is represented and sealed up in that ordinance. 2. The act of faith giving, is (as I faid) that whereby we give ourselves away to Christ; and so, as we get one right, we give (as it were) another; or, as we take one hand, we give another: We receive Christ engaged to us according to the covenant, and we engage and give ourselves away to be his. Our very receiving supposeth our consenting, and faith's delivering and giving up itself or the person to Christ, and taking Christ to it, or to himself, so making (as it were) an exchange. (O wonderful exchange, by which we receive infinitely more and better than we give!) when the foul hath gotten him, it gives itself to him, to be changed and made better; and renews its purposes, resolutions and promises to that end, and takes the facrament to make these sure and secure. 3. The ratifying act of faith is this, when we have taken Christ's promise by faith, and have given our promise to him, and furrendered and delivered up ourselves unto him, and we go about the communion, and exercise our faith

faith to get both confirmed; as we use to speak, We will take our sacrament on it; we take the communion to seab his part of the covenant to us, and to confirm ourselves as to the performance of that which we have engaged to him; and thus that which was before a bond on Christ's side, and a bond and engagement on our side, becomes now a mutual contract and bargain; both are put in one, and complicated together, sealed with one seal, and made use of for both these ends: The believer thinks himself surer of God's promise, and himself more securely engaged to God; and tho' this engaging hath no new promise with it, yet thereby the more explicitely is our duty brought forth, and the promise more particularly becomes ours.

As for the Fourth and last thing, It is a right manner of acting, or a right way and fuitable frame in our going about this ordinance; which takes in several things, as, 1. Fear, because it is a very difficult thing rightly to communicate, and we had need to fear left we mistake and miscarry. 2. Distinctness and clearness, which is a part of the result of self-examination: We would at least be so far clear in our condition, as to know and be convinced that the general Arain of our way hath not been right as it should have been by very far, when we cannot so well find out and condescend upon the particular evils that we have been given to, or have done; and tho' we know not all nor many of the particular promites of the covenant, yet we would be clear in that general, that in the covenant God maketh over himself a God all-sufficient to the believer. Faith in, and dependence on God for preparation, and for a fuitable frame, for gaining new ground of corruptions, for more humility and tenderness for more thorow turning to the Lord: Convert me (says Ephraim, Jer. 31.) and I shall be converted. There would be many ferious and fincere-resolutions, engagements, and purposes, and much heart-melting, and prayer in the making of them; as it was with Israel and Judab, Jer. 50. 5. whose great desire and design was, to have the covenant betwirt God and them to fecured, that it might hold perpetually, and never any more be forgotten; they defired to keep (as we use to speak) no hank in their own hand, they allow of no refervations or exceptions, and they go about this great work praying and weeping: This were a fweet and fuitable frame for a communion, and notably well becoming a people that approach to the Lord's table; and we seriously commend it to you, and you to the grace of God in the practice of these things, which his own bleffed self make forthcoming to you.

A Preparation-Sermon for the Communion,

On 1 Cor. 11. 29. Not difcerning the Lord's Body.

T' is a very great and grave, a very momentuous and concerning work, rightly to partake of the sacrament of the Lord's supper; it hath as many and great advantages attending the due and worthy participation thereof, and as many fad consequences following the unworthy participation of it, as any other of all the ordinances of Christ hath: And therefore, when the apostle hath sharply exposulated with the Christian Corintbiani for several abules in reference to this ordinance, he proceeds, after a full declaration of its inflitution, to guard them against all after abuse thereof, and to fit and prepare them for fuitable and worthy communicating; and the first direction that he gives them is in reference to the preceeding preparation, Let a man examine bimfelf, and so let bim eat; The fecond is in reference to the action itself, teaching them to communicate worthily, so as they may discern the Lord's Body, by holding out the danger of unworthy communicating: Both which he knits together, telling them, that if any of these things be wanting, it will bring on judgment. Whence in a word, and but in possing, we may observe these two things. I. That a man will never communicate worthily, that doth not beforehand endeavour to prepare himself for it; and therefore he prefixeth this, Let a man examine bimself, and then subjoins, And so let bim eat. 2. That a man that is not distinct in discerning himself in some measure after the examination of himself, will never aright discern the Lord's Body in this ordiordinance of the communion: He that takes not up himfelf, will never take up Christ rightly.

In the words more particularly we have three great things in reference to present communicating; The first whereof is, the great and peculiar use of the communion, and that is, that it makes the Lord's body discernible, it puts Christ in a capacity (to speak so) to be taken up and discerned; The second is, the great duty of a worthy communicant, and that is, rightly to discern the Lord's Body, so holden forth; The third is, the great sin that unworthy communicants sall into, and that is, They do not discern the Lord's Body, but are like so many dogs and swine, who not knowing what delicates are there, they go about the action, not knowing what they are doing.

The First is clear, That, in the Sacrament, Christ Tesus his broken Body is made discernible to us; else he would not find fault with them who come, and do not discern it. The words also before, v. 24. clear it; This (saith he) is my Body which is broken for you; So Chap. 10. v. 16. The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the Blood of Christ? and the bread which we break, is it not the communion of the Body of Christ? And the sharp judgments that come on people for not discerning unworthing, and so for being guilty of communicating unworthing, do shew, that not only is our Lord's Body really present, but in a special manner discernible in this ordinance.

To clear this a little further, we shall, r. Premit a swofold distinction; and then, 2. Answer a few questions that serve for clearing the doctrine, and for better uptak-

ing of this ordinance.

First then, We would aistinguish betwirt these two, viz. Looking on the sacrament as strictly taken, and as contradistinguished from the word; and looking on it as more complexly taken, as including the word. It is in the last sense that we consider the sacrament here, viz. as taking in, 1. Christ, signified and represented by the elements. The word and covenant, to which the sacrament as a seal is appended; therefore the cup is called, The cup of the New Testament. 3. The seal of the sacrament itself, appended to the word and covenant.

2. We

not discerning the Lord's Body.

2. We would distinguish betwixt Christ's broken Body considered as discernible to our understanding only, and the same considered as it is discernible to our very senses. or as it is apprehensible, when by feeling we may grip it: as it were, and not only look to it, but take hold of it: (how this is, shall be more particularly explained and cleared afterward, for preventing of mistakes) It is in this last sense that we understand discernible here, not excluding the former; so that Christ's broken Body in the sacrament is not only made discernible to the understanding of the right communicant, but he is made communicable and apprehensible, and there is an union with him attainable in that ordinance: And what we said before proves this; he holds out his Body to be received, and he is received in it.

As for the Second, to wit, the questions to be answered; they are these Four. 1. In what respect is Christ present and discernible in the sacrament? 2. To what is he made discernible and communicable? 3. How the sacrament makes him discernible, and what way it holds him out as discernible to us? 4. What may be the reasons why Christ. holds out himself, his broken Body, as discernible to us in the, facrament?

14, then, In what respect is Christ present and discernible in the facrament? We answer, 1. Not simply confidered as he is the Son of God, nor in respect of any benefit from him as Mediator, neither simply as Redeemer; but he is holden out as incarnate; and so this sacrament differs from the Jews Paffover, which held him out as to come, while this holds him our as come. 2. It holds him out, not only as become Man, but as suffering, as having his Body broken. 2. He is made discernible in respect of the end for which he suffered, and had his Body broken, and his Blood shed: This is (faith he) may Body which is broken for you; this cup is the new testament in my Blood, shed for the remission of the sins of many, to wit, of all the elect: It holds our Christ Mediator, God-Man fuffering for us. 4. It holds him out as communicable, and in capacity to be participate of by us; therefore 'tis called the communion of bis Body, Chap. 10. 16. to tell us, that we may be united to him, and made to share of him; and we are bidden take and eat, and all to drink of it. These last two look to the covenant, and hold out the sacrament in reference to it, and how our Lord Jesus, sirst by his sufferings was to purchase a people to himself, and secondly that he was to be communicable to his people; therefore the cup is called the new covenant in his blood: The cup and covenant go together; for the we may consider Christ without the sacrament, yet we cannot so well consider the sacrament without Christ and the covenant.

The great Sin of

2dly. To what is Christ made discernible and communicable? We answer, 1. He is not discernible nor present after a corporal manner to the bodily eye, tho' he be real-Iv and truly present: The bread that he gives is his body, and the cup his blood; and yet it was bread and wine which was given, and not his body and blood corporally. 2. He is not prefent and communicable by any local mutation, by taking us up to heaven to him, or by bringing his body out of heaven to us; but he is these three ways present and communicable. (1.) To our spiritual senses, to an enlightned understanding, which considers Christ's body broken, and his blood shed. (2) To the faith of his people he is present in his own ordinance: When his Spirit goes along, and quickens their hearts, and their faith is in exercise, they are made to apprehend Christ's body, and to have an union with him fitting in glory, as really as they partake of the elements with their hand, and feed upon them with their mouth and stomach; an union as, real as is betwixt the head and the members, and betwixt the root and the branches: These two, the Spirit on Christ's side, and Faith on our side, make up a real union; and therefore, tho' this presence be real, yet 'tis spiritual: Faith, looking and going thorow the elements, takes up Christ according to the end appointed, and this makes the union: Even as faith will look and go thorow the word, and, crediting the word, takes up Christ in it, and makes an union with him; so, by vertue of this ordinance, there is a spiritual presence of and union with Christ Jefus. (2.) A presence to sense, not so much in respect of inward feeling, as in respect of the powerful effects of his presence, the often inward feeling goes alongst with it; and therefore 'tis called the communion of bis body, and the wine of beaves: And in respect of the mean and way he manifests himself therein, to the eye, to the touch, to the taste, and to the ear; and there is a colour sensible: Which is more than is in any other ordinance, where there is but the exercise of one sense; for, the more of the outward senses he makes use of, he brings with him a proportionable blessing to the inward senses of the soul.

3dly. How doth the sacrament hold out Christ as discernible to us? For answer, I shall offer these Four ways, how he may be present to the faith of the believer, in the sacrament; all which ways he is made discernible: 1. In respect of the institution; for Christ is here represented by the minister as giving himself; his authority and warrant is here, therefore himself is here: This, tho' it be common to all Christ's ordinances, yet it belongs in a peculiar way to this ordinance; for in it he is present in a special manner, making over himself and his sufferings to us. 2. He is made discernible in the sacrament, in as far as it represents him: And tho' the word hold him our, yet the facrament doth fo, more fully, clearly and fenfi-bly, by such and such signs; by bread, and bread broken, representing his body broken by suffering; by wine, and wine poured out, representing his blood shed; and by wine distinct from the bread, to shew a most true and real death: In which respect, tis said, Do this in remembrance of me; and, As often as ye eat this bread and drink this cup, ye seen forth the Lord's death till be come again. Every sacrament represents Christ, but this reprefents him in his suffering and dying, and in the end of it, and makes it over to the worthy communicant. 3. He is made discernible by this sacrament, in this respect, as 'tis a seal appended and affixed to the covenant, serving to ratify and confirm the promises contained in the covenant; and so the bread and wine, considered in reference to the institution, are a real confirmation of our real partaking of the thing fignified, and in some respect make Christ really present: As the giving of a sealed charter of a house to a man, is the giving him the house; or, as the giving of infefement by a bit of earth or stone (being a legal confirmation) is the giving of that land to the man, wherein he is infeft; because (as I said) its a legal right to it, and makes it present and discernible to him: Even fo, Christ is made discernible in this ordinance, because we have our right to him, which is in the word, in a special manner confirmed to us in it; for not only doth this (as other acraments do) confirm the word and covenant in general, but it hath this peculiar to it, that it confirms Christ's making over his dying self to us. 4. Christ is here present and discernible, and made so by this ordinance, if we consider the facrament as a mean whereby we have Christ communicate to us: He not only makes over himself covenant-wife, but sealeth this gift; and the facrament is a mean of communion with him thus made over to us: In which respect, the heliever doth and may warrantably make afe of the facrament for his quickning, elevating, and strengthning to cleave closer, and to grip faler to Christ; for which cause, 'tis called the communion of his body, and hereby we are said to be made one body with bim: Not but that without the sacrament it may be and is often to; but by the facrament this union and communion is strengthned and furthered to the faith and spiritual sense of the believer.

411 ly; What are the reasons why Christ will have his broken body made thus discernible and apprehensible in this facrament? We answer, That he will have it so, for these reasons, 1. For evidencing of, and bearing testimony to, his great love to his people: It fays that a dying Christ so loves us, that he gave himself to us; and so the memory of his death is revived and kept up: He will have his dving Self in a facrament bestowed on his people, to keep. his love fill fresh to them in their remembrance. 2. For the publick professing and testifying our faith in a dying Saviour: For in this facrament we profess our faith in him, and dependence on him; and we say thereby, and declare to the world, This my Saviour died, and is able to give me life; which is a piece of honour and glory to the Mediator, and a part of our duty, when we give publick tellimony, that we think no shame of a crucified Re-The Lord hath, for the edification and benefit of his people, made himfelf to discernible in this sacrament; and there is a fourfold edification or benefit that redounds to them by it, (1.) Instruction; fo they that cannot fo well take up the Lord in the word, may be somewhat helped to take him up in the sacrament as a flain Saviour, and as being as needful as meat and drink, without which, as we cannot live, no more can we live without him; And O how many spiritual lessons may be had by these fignificant ceremonies instituted by Christ! (2) There is here edification unto the faith of God's people: And thus it becomes strengthning, when not only Christ says in his word, I have loved my Church, and given myself for her, and, They that believe shall not perish; but we have this ordinance fealing this, Tis exceeding firengthning to a poor weak doubting body, which could not easily believe that Christ would be so kind to a rebel; when he gets a facred feal of his kindness, it helps to believe what is promised. 3. It edifies, as it serveth to promore the inward growth of grace: For, in the facrament, Christ is communicate; and, as he is communicate, life is communicate, love to God, and to one another, is communicate: And, in a word, we cannot imagine a communication of Christ, but it brings with it strengthning to the inward man. 4. There is edification in respect of the believer's confolation, whether as to his fense, or as to his faith: The gospel in its offer and promises comes out, and tays, Men and women, be it known to you, that Christ is preached to you, and remission of fins thorow him; but the facrament fays, Believing man and woman, there is my body not only broken for all the elect in general, but for thee in particular: And this much filenceth the great debate whether I be elected or not, or within the covenant, or not; for it fays, O man, here is a flain and broken Redeemer made over unto thee, upon condition that thou close with him in the covenant, as he offers himself: and so, when there has been some wavering and fainting in respect of consolation before, it proves very strengthning of the believer's consolation, considering the nature of the ordinance; and, in this respect, the facrament is as a love-token of a kind husband to his spouse, who, when he is to remove to some considerable distance from her for a time, says, Take and keep this in remembrance of me, and think that I dearly love thee, and will not forget thee, till we meet again, The

The second point of doctrine is the great duty called for from a worthy communicant; and that in short is, rightly to discernible. The text consists the doctrine: For, tho' a man had never so many good things; suppose that he had not only gifts, but grace, yea and a holy frame of spirit; yet, if he be ignorant of what he is called to or a-doing in this ordinance, he cannot discern the Lord's body, and so cannot communicate worthily: Hence it is, that there is so much need of knowledge, without which a man can no more than a child or a fool rightly take up Christ in the sacrament.

To open this a little, we shall speak a word to these three, 1. To the Object to be discerned. 2. To the act of discerning. 3. To the reasons why this discerning is so necessary a dury.

if, For the Object to be different; it is Christ Jesus suffering, dying, and making over himself to his people according to his covenant; its Christ, and yet Christ dying, and Christ dying according to the covenant, from which he can never be separated: And especially in this ordinance in particular, considered with its end and institution with respect to the covenant, its Christ giving himself, and in this facrament, according to the covenant.

adly, For the att of discerning; it is taken four ways, the last whereof is the main. 1. To discern a thing, in scripture, is to have diffinct thoughts and apprehensions concerning it; 'tis to take up a thing fimply and as it is in itself: Thus, to discern Christ present in the sacrament, is to discern how and wherefore he is present. 2. To discern a thing, is to difference it from other things; and, in this respect, a thing is said to be discerned comparatively, as I Cor. 4. 7. Who maketh thee to differ from another? Thus, to discern this facrament, and Christ in it, is to difference it from other things; considering that it was once common bread and wine, but that now it is not so: It is to put a difference betwixt the facrament and common bread and wine; and betwixt the facrament and the word and covenant, 'yet with respect to the covenant, as the seals differ from the charter; and to difference this facrament from other facraments, in respect that it looks to a dying Saviour, and communicates him and his benefits that way. 3. To difcern a thing, is to have a high effects of it; fuch as was the differning of meats, days, and places: So to discern Christ-in this ordinance, is to have a deep impression and high estimation of Jesus Christ, of his death, and of his matchless love shining therein; to have much spirituality, holy fear, awe and reverence in reference to him: Such a fear and reverence as mean men will have before a king or a great man, who when they carry not fuitably before such a great person, we will say to them, Know ye where you are? So the right differning and up-taking of Christ here, is to have a high estimation of him. 4. There is a complex discerning of a thing in reference to its use and end: Or we may call it a relative discerning, which is practical, when a man conforms himself suitably to his differning of the thing; the want whereof our Lord reproves in the Jews, Hypocrites (lays he) ye can discern the face of the sky, but ye cannot discern the signs of the times: And, in this respect also, when a man carries unsuitably before a magistrate, tis said to him by discerning persons, Know ye where you are? And, this being the main thing here implied, we shall speak a little more to it, wherein these two things are supposed; (1.) Some diffinct uptaking of ourselves, of our need, and of our hazard. (2.) The right uptaking of Christ in this ordinance, as to the supply of those necessities, and preventing of that hazard. And this dollrinal discerning goeth before that which is practical, which is a man's suitable use-making of Christ, or suitably exercising himself in reference to his need, and that ordinance appointed for fupply of his need by Jesus Christ; which is with a reflex look, fometimes on himself, sometimes on Christ. And there are in this these five steps, which follow one of them upon another. 1. It consists in a suitable frame of heart, as becomes fuch a poor, finful, unworthy and needy person in the presence of so holy a Lord, going about fuch a holy action; another frame than is called for at our dinner or supper, or at ordinary hearing the word, or at prayer; A holy, humble, cheerful, serious, heavenly and hungry frame: Holy awe and respect to God, making humble; faith of God's goodness and rich grace

Google

AO in Christ shining in this ordinance, making cheerful; the conviction of need, making fober, and yet very ferious and eager in what he is about. Tis a frame made up, as it were, of contrarieties; ardent love and zeal, and yet a calm and composed spirit to hear what God says, to take what he gives, and to behold what he manifests. 2. It confifts in an exercise of the mind in meditation, both in reference to ourselves and to Christ: Meditation in reference to our own finfulness and misery, and meditation on Christ's love, calling to mind all that he hath done, thinking with delight on Christ's suffering, and on the end of it; and again reflecting a look on ourselves, to keep life in this meditation, What was I when he suffered and did all this for me? and what am I now, when he is offering this to me? To have the picture of a loving husband hanging by a wife, to what purpose is it, and for what use doth it serve, if she never look on it to mind him whom it represents? 3. It consists in an exercise of graces, 'tis even (as it is said in the Song) a making of all the spices to cast forth their smell; and the putting of all things in good order, and studying to have them in good-case: Tis to have love warm to the Giver, and closing with the gift of a dying Saviour; and to have love warm to others of his people for his fake, and because he hath taken us in with others, to partake of the benefits of his love shining in his death: For love to the Head and members go together. Tis to have repentance lively stirred up, and fin made heart-pricking, and godly forrow to flow; the heart made to lothe fin, and the mind exercised in forming hearty refolutions, purpoles, vows and engagements against it. But 'tis especially to have faith stirred up and in exercise, and to have all the fenses of faith (to speak so) fet agoing: As, when the word comes out, and says Take ye, eat ye, this is my Body which is broken for you; faith beholds and gets as clear and fatisfying a view of Christ's suffering and dying, as if the man faw him with his bodily eyes: When the hand is stretched out to take, faith acts proportionably, in stretching out its hand to take Christ; and not only grips him, but in this ordinance, and according to the end of it, takes it as a pledge of Christ performing what he hath promised, making use of him for the end appoin-

pointed: When the eye looks on what is done, faith is confidering and taking a view of Christ, and of the covenant, and of the benefits purchased by him; and sees another thing than the elements, even the wakned-up fword of the Father's justice pursuing the Mediator, as the elects Cautioner: When the eye looks on the distribution, faith sees Christ made as it were believers Common-good given among them, and to every one of them: When the hand puts the bread and wine to the mouth, faith hath a way of opening its mouth, and (as it were) chewing and feeding upon Jesus Christ, and of strengthning, refreshing, and cheering itself in him; counting itself well come to with him, and secure in him; and fastning its engagements to him: All which strengthen our spiritual life, as eating and drinking doth the natural And then, when it comes to the tafte, Christ relisheth most sweetly to the believer, so that no wine doth cheer the natural heart so much as Christ in the sacrament, confidered in his love and covenant, and in the benefits that come by him, does the foul of the believer: faith here confiders Christ not only as communicable, but as actually communicated. The fourth thing wherein this difcerning confilts, is a reflecting exercise: When we have received the facrament, we are to reflect and confider what we have done, and what we are doing; Are weindeed feeding upon Christ? What is this in our hands? This bread in some respect is bot bread, but Christ; This cup is not wine, but the cup of the new testament in bis blood. And, by this reflex act, the believer applies, and confirms himfelf; having received the facrament. whereby his union with Christ is fignified and sealed up, he applies, and says within himself, Now Christ is mine, and I am his: And he confirms himself in Christ's love to himself, and in his interest, in him; Now, saith he, I have gotten no delusion, but the sign and seal of his blesfed body broken, and of his blood fhed for me. If unbelief say, Have ye gotten Christ indeed? Yes, says the believer's faith, having received this pledge of his love, I have gotten himself, and I should believe it: And this is to act on Christ, not only directly, which is a thing common to the facrament with the word; but to act on Christ rc-

reflexly, and to perswade ourselves of our union and communion with him, which is the end of this ordinance; else we take not up Christ as giving a seal: Therefore the word is, Take, eat, this is my body broken for you; there is more than a bare fign here: And faith acts, not only for receiving, but for confirming itself, that by receiving it thath an union and communion with him, who is holden out in the facrament; for, if it be a feal, and exhibite Christ as a seal, then faith should receive and act on it as fuch, for attaining the end that a feal should have, suppoling the condition to preceed. 5. It confilts in an act of ipiritual affecting, when there is a holy imacking (to ipeak to) and kiffing of Christ, the foul digesting him for the life of the inner-man, and thereon delighting, rejoicing, and exulting in him: And so the faith, confidence and hope of the believer are strengthned; which makes him that he is not ashamed, and upon the back of this ordinarily the love of God is shed abroad in the heart: And tho' there should be little sensible feeling, yet the believer finds himself obliged to cheer himself in Christ, and in the covenant, and in the benefits that he hath thro his purchase; and there is readily some warming of love to Christ, and he is confirmed in the faith of the love of Christ to him: And it is impossible, where these two are, but some holy tickling of affections, which flow from the word, and from this ordinance thus rightly gone about (as has been faid) will follow; and if this be not, that is, if Christ be not thus discerned in the sacrament, (1.) God gets not what he calls for, Christ's death is not rightly minded, his glory and our edification are not promoved: Nor, 2. Is the end of the facrament attained: Neither, 3. Is our comfort furthered: For it is not the ordinance, barely, or ordinary bread and wine fet apart for a holy use, but Jesus Christ discerned and received in the ordinance, that comforts; otherwise, the ordinance in and by itself will not promove our comfort and growth.

The third doctrine is, That it is, tho' a very common and tife, yet a very great fin, not to discern the Lord's body as he is kolden out in this sacrament discernible. The greatness of which may be easily gathered from what we have discoursed concerning the great privilege of the discernible.

ness of the Lord's body therein; from the horridness of the guilt that it involves in, even the guilt of the body and blood of the Lord, the greatest and most horrid of all bloodguiltiness; and from the dreadful judgments and plagues that follow on it, temporal or bodily, and spiritual plagues, yea, even eternal damnation, if repentance through grace prevent not. But we must, because of the shortness of time, leave all that might be spoken in the more particular profecution of this doctrine; and shall only give you tero or three caveats (wherewith I shall close) to guard against mistakes in reference to what hath been spoken. I know it will readily be faid, If this be discerning of the Lord's body, and if none other do discern it but such as go about these things, it will be hard for any to discern it. For answer to this, I would have you to confider, 1. That there is a more explicite, distinct and perfect discerning; and a more implicite, confused and indistinct discerning of the Lord's body: If we speak of persection in discerning, who come up to that? but if we speak of an honest fincere way of aiming to discern, tho' it be somewhat indistinct and confused, that may be won at; yea, I would not think them in a good condition that rest satisfied with themselves, as being distinct enough in all these things whereof we have spoken: Yet, where there is (as I just now said) honest aiming at these things, tho' in a confused and indistinct way; where faith and love are in some measure acting, with a sort of fear and joy mixed together; when there is a fear to profane the ordinance, and yet the foul loves it so well, that it cannot endure to want ir, nor Christ in it; there is a discerning of the Lord's body, that warrants to draw near. 2. Confider, that there is a general confusion, and a particular confusion (to speak so) in going about this ordinance: The general confusion is this, when persons are so very ignorant and confused, that they know not at all what they are doing; a particular confusion is only in some respect, that is, when a soul knoweth that Jesus Christ is in the ordinance, and knoweth its own condition to fland in need of him, that it hath many spiritual wants to be supplied, and that there is much good and a supply of all those wants to be had from Christ in this ordinance; but how to come at it thereby,

The great Sin of, &c. it knows not so well nor so distinctly: A person that is confused in the general, cannot discern the Lord's Body in the facrament; but one that is confused in a particular. may: And the fuch an one cannot, it may be, pitch on a particular promise that suits his need, yet he may fix on Christ, and on the covenant in general, which is one of the main things that faith acts on; and indeed, unless himfelf be acted on by faith, his benefits fail: And tho' a ferious soul cannot get a particular promise to settle on, we fay it should stick by the covenant in general, as including all particulars. 3. Confider, that differning is not to be affricted to the very inflant of receiving, but we would look well what is our aim and endeavour alongst the action: and, if habitually we be indeed feriously seeking after and purfuing these things, we cannot have them all in our thoughts at once; that is scarce, if at all, possible: But if the aim and strain of your souls exercise run this way. and tho' there be failing in many things, yet this is not a neglective flighting and careless inconsideration. word, see if there hath been, 1. Some clear conviction of fin, and of your great need of Christ. And, 2. See if there hath been some uptaking of Christ in the ordinance, and he made precious and lovely therein in some measure; and that it was your errand, in going to that ordinance, to take Christ to supply your need, and take away your sin, and your aim to go about the ordinance rightly in order to that end; if the strain and series of your way in these hath been honest and sincere, ye have no reason to account yourtelves (at least altogether) unworthy communicants: Tho', when we have done all that we can do, 'tis God himtelf who must enable us rightly to discern the Lord's Body, and who must graciously pass by many things that will be found amifs in us; according to good king Hize-kiab his prayer, 2 Chron. 30. 18, 19. The good Lord pardon every one that prepareth his heart to feek God, tho be be not cleansed according to the purification of the sanctuary; So must we fay, The good Lord pardon us, tho' we discern and take not up Christ's Body with that faith and love, with that diffinctuess and clearness, with that delight, cheerfulness and joy that become, and are require for such a folemn action.

A SERMON preached immediately before the Communion,

On Mat. 22. 4.——— All things are ready: come to the marriage.

THERE are many great and glorious things spoken of the gospel; and our blessed Lord Jesus hath made use of many good similitudes, wonderfully apposite, to set it out: Sometimes 'tis called the kingdom of beaven, for reasons that we will not now insist upon; sometimes 'tis callead a marriage, as here and elsewhere. Some of those similitudes shew what great and singular satisfaction is to be had in it; therefore it is compared to a feast, supper, and dinner. Some of them shew the way how we are made partakers of it; so opening and receiving holds forth believing: And some of those similitudes hold forth both, as this of a marriage, which points at the strait union betwixt Christ and believers, and at the manner or way of our entring into this blessed union, on which follows communion.

We need not infilt in opening the words, which are plain; we shall only say these two words, to make way for observations: The first whereof shall be, to shew that the scope of the parable is not to hold forth peoples coming to the ordinances or the sacraments only or mainly; but their coming to Christ Jesus himself, and to the fat things in the ordinances. Many come to the ordinances, who come not to Christ and to the feast; that which is called for here, is a real closing with Christ, and an accepting of him for our Husband, on his own terms. The second word is, to shew, that the the ordinances be neither the marriage nor the feast, yet it is by the ordinances that the marriage is furthered, and the feast prepared and made ready; for faith takes Christ in the word, and strikes hands with him in the sacrament: When he saith in the word, Be thou for me, and I will be for thee; Faith saith, Content Lord: And when he saith in the sacrament, Take; as well as be is in the word.

Faith faith, Welcome with all my heart; he being there.

These two things being premised, we shall, I. At once and together propose some observations from the words. 2. We shall clear and confirm them. And then, 3. We shall insist in the application of all jointly. The observasions are these, First, That in the gospel there is a clear and manifest making-up of a marriage betwint Christ and souls. The preaching of the gospel is like a man's making of a marriage for his fon. The second is, That this marriage is one of the most excellent marriages that ever was: Therefore it is called the marriage of the King's Son. third is. That, before this marriage can be brought about and accomplished, there are many things to be made ready. The fourth is. That, where the gospel comes, all things are made ready for souls closing with Christ in this marriage. The fifth is, That the Master of the feast, the KING, God the Father, and the KING's Son, the Bridegroom, are not only content and willing, but very desirous to bave finners coming to the marriage : They would fain (to speak so with reverence) have poor souls espoused to Christ. The finth is, That, when the Master sends out his servants in his name, their great work is to muite to the wedding, and to close the marriage. The seventh is, That, when people are invited to this marriage, it is their duty, and greatly of their concern, to The eighth is, That all they that come may expect a very beary welcome: Therefore they are invited once and again. And if we compare this text with Luke 14. we will find there, that the Master orders his servants to compel them that are invited to come in.

All these observations are very obvious in the words; and if the Lord would graciously please to help us to speak, and you to hear, as they are not impertinent to our present purpose, so they might be made very edifying, strengthning, refreshing and comfortable to'us.

We shall, in the second place, a little more particularly clear and confirm every one of them. The first was, That there is a marriage betwint Christ and souls, held forth and made offer of in this gospel. We take this for granted: For here is the King's Son, and some bidden to his marriage, and those that are bidden are not worthy: They are all are the strongest Invitations. professors and members of the visible Church: the scope of the parable being to shew, that the offer of this marriage was first made to the Jews, and again renewed to them, and then from them it came to the Gentiles. I shall in passing give you a little hint of the nature of this marriage, in these four: 1. There is by this gospel a real union made up betwixt Christ and the souls of believers: Which union is not with the ordinances, nor with sense, nor with the benefits which flow from Christ; but with Christ himself primarily and principally: And it is so near a tye, and very close, that it is preferred unto, and goeth beyond, the union that is betwixt the husband and wife, Epb. 5. 30. We are (fays the apostle) members of his body, of bis flesh, and of bis bones: Where, alluding to that union betwixt husband and wife, he not only makes the union real, but makes the one much straiter than the other. 2. The nature of this union is such, that it is mutual; the Bridegroom hath in a manner (to speak so, with reverence of his Majesty) no power over himself, when he is married unto the Bride; and the Bride hath no power over herself, but the Bridegroom: So that here there is a sort of mutual up-giving of the Bridegroom to the Bride, and of the Bride to the Bridegroom; according to those wonderfully condescending words, Hosea 3. 3. Thou shalt not be for another man, so will I also be for thee. The Lord hath believers under a peculiar tye to him, and he hath tyed himself peculiarly to them, so that (if we may speak thus) neither of them is master of themselves: The Lord Jesus doth some way account himself not to be master of himself. he is so engaged to them to be theirs and for them, and cannot but be answerable to his engagement; and they are obliged to be no more masters of themselves, but to be absolutely and altogether at his disposing. 3. This union is made up by mutual consent of parties, and the consent must be willing. His consent comes in his word; he says from thence, Bebold, I stand at the door and knock; if any man will hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me: I come (as if he had said) in my gospel to woo; and, if any will consent to take me on the terms on which I offer myself, I will be theirs. The soul's consent is given by faith in his word, which is called, John 1. 12. receiving of bim, and is relative to the offer: The offer is indeed backed and quickned by the Spirit, without which it would never be receivaed; yet notwithstanding, that which our faith lavs hold on, is not the Spirit, but the word quickned by the Spirit. 4. Consider here the effects that follow immediately and instantly on this marriage union; Christ with all that is his becomes ours, and we with all that is ours become his: Our debt is imputed to him, he is liable to it, and must pay it, and provide for us, and he our Head and Husband; and his righteousness, the purchase of his death and sufferings, viz. justification, fanctification, his Spirit, grace and glory, and every good thing that he hath, become ours; and at length the Bride is taken into the King's ivory palaces.

The second observation was, That this is a most bonourable. noble and excellent marriage; the like whereof never was, nor never shall be, from Adam to the end of the world: *Tis with the King's Son, with the Prince of the kings of the earth, the Heir of all things, the brightness of the Fa-ther's glory, the express image of his person, who was before all things, and by whom all things confift. O! is there any match like this? Is there any fo great and fo noble as He ? Is there any in this world whom ye can marry, that is so rich as He? They that marry him shall inberit all things, Rev. 21. 7. We may clear it a little further from five or fix particulars in the text 1. Tis an excellent and honourable marriage, in respect of the Bridegroom, who is (as hath been hinted) the King's Son; who hath not another natural fon. He is the only begotten of the Father. There is not another Mediator: He is the Father's Equal and Fellow: So that, if (if we may put an if to it) the Father be great and glorious, so is he; for he is God, the same God equal with the Father in power and glory; the wonderful Counseller, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of peace This marriage is excellent and honourable, in respect of the Bride's Father in-law (so to speak) he is the King: God the Father, Son and Holy Ghost have all a hand in it; and the believer, married to Christ, is daughter-in-law to the great God, ingrafted some way into the same stock, allyed with the same family, 2 Cor.

2 Cor. 6 18. I will be a Father to you, and ye shall be my fons and daughters, faith the Lord Almighty. 3. It is excellent and honourable, in respect of the preparation made for it. There was never such a wedding-feast; the dinner is prepared, the oven and fatlings killed: But you will fay, What is all that? Even Jesus Christ himself, he is that Bread indeed, that Drink indeed, the Feast of fat things, and of wines on the lees well refined; the Bridegroom is (to. fay fo) the chief Dish that the believer feeds and lives upon for ever; and the spiritual blessings and benefits that are gotten in him and from him, are as so many dishes of this feast, such as righteousness, pardon of sin, peace and friendship with God, the Spirit, adoption, sanctification, joy in the Holy Ghost, grace and glory, the hope of a room in those mansions that are in his Father's house, of a feat with him at his table and on his throne; even a share in his whole purchase: And is not that a feast? 4. 'Tis honourable and excellent, in respect of its most noble rise. viz. from all eternity, in the bosom of the Father: It bred (to fay fo) in the King's breaft before the foundation of the world was laid; the covenant of redemption was then concluded, and the contract of marriage there drawn, and the bleffed project of it then laid down: Sacrifices and offerings thou didft not desire, (faith the Mediator, Psal 40.) Mine ears haft thou opened; burnt-offerings nor fin-offerings thou baft not required : Then faid I, Lo, I come, in the volume of thy book it is written of me, I delight to do thy will, . O my God. The Father gives so many to the Son to be redeemed, of whom he willingly, readily and cheerfully accepts, and offers to fatisfy for them, which in due time 5. It is excellent and honourable in this respect, that there was never fuch a concurrence of so many and so great things to commend and further a marriage as there is in this: Such as the making of the world, men and angels; the incarnation of Christ, or his coming into the world; his preaching, and working of miracles for confirmation of his doctrine; his fuffering and dying, rifing and afcending; his giving ministers and their gifts; and, to make up the marriage-union, the Spirit from heaven coming along with the word, and working faith in the foul; by which bonds, Christ and the believer are joined together; Christ

by his Spirit apprehending the believer, and the believer. apprehending Christ by faith. Was there ever a marriagecontract or union bound up betwixt two fuch vaftly and infinitely distant parties? was there ever such honour and riches attending and following a match; such righteousness, remission of sin, adoption, peace with God, joy of the Holy Ghost, the Spirit, holiness in the beginning and gradual advances of it; fellowship and walking with God, the white Stone, the new Name, the Throne, the Crown, Grace, and Glory, every thing that is good for the Bride here, and glory in heaven; in a word, Jesus Christ, and all the Benefits of his purchase? Were there ever such eafy terms and conditions? It is only, Come to the wedding; when the King comes a-wooing, let him be welcomed with your heart's consent; when he says, I am content to marry you, let your hearts say, Amen, Lord Jesus, I am content to marry thee, and to be for thee and for none other. And, may not I add, Was there ever such security and confirmation given of any marriage? 'Tis confirmed by the death of the Bridegroom, he hath sealed his testament with his blood, and there is no annulling nor altering of a man's testament when he is dead: And our Lord Jesus, who was once dead, is now alive, and lives for evermore; he will never die again, nor make another testament. O beloved hearers, all this is to let you see that our Lord is in earnest and very willing to espouse you; and indeed it shall not be his fault if it be not a bargain: And, if it be indeed a bargain betwixt your fouls and him, 'tis a very rare and rich one; O the many rare, excellent, noble, notable and none-fuch privileges and advantages that attend this marriage, and are to be enjoyed by the soul espoused to Christ! even God and Christ, grace and glory, and all that is comprehended under these, belongs to that soul. We must here be silent, lest in speaking of them we darken them by our words; here is an abyss and bottomless depth, ready, as it were, to swallow up words: We confess, we can tell you but very little what they are; 'nay, if all the ablest and holiest ministers on earth, and all the angels in heaven were joined together, they could not to the full, by very far, tell what an excellent match and marriage this is, even to be matched with the Son of God; and yet this pri-

privilege and honour have all the saints, all believers, to whom he is Wonderful and Precious, tho', alas! not as he ought to be: There is a day coming, when we shall know to satisfaction, that the Father is in the Son, and the Son in the Father; and that believers are in Christ, and he in them: We shall then know the now inexpressible and inconceivable advantages of this marriage, when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and wondred at in all them that believe: And till that day the one half will never be told us.

The third observation was, That there are many things to be removed out of the way, and to be done: Many things to be made ready before this marriage can be made up. 1. There's a natural distance between the parties, that must be removed: God cannot be one flesh with us: And berwixt parties to be married, there must be some suitableness of nature; therefore, to remove this distance, and to bring about the marriage, the Son of God becomes Man, that he may be Immanuel, God with us, God in our nature, and fo in capacity to be closed with. 2. There is a finful diflance, which also must be removed before this marriage can be made up: For God is a confuming fire to finners: he and they neither will nor can unite in that posture; Therefore, before an offer of marriage can be made to any purpose, be must give bimself for bis Church, that he may sanklify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word; and then it follows, that he presents her to himself a glorious Church, without spot and wrinkle, or any such thing. He could not have access to marry his Bride, she was so uncomely, filthy and lothfom, lying in a most pitiful condition, in ber blood, as Ezekiel sets it forth to the life and at great length, Chap. 16. Therefore, to cleanse her, he gave himself for her. 2, Ere all this could be done, there behoved a ground to be laid for peace with God the offended Party, who was to be Father-in-law: And here comes in the covenant of redemption, Psal. 40. 6, 7. Sacrifice and offering thou didft not desire; then said I, Lo, I ame, &c. For taking away the curse, and reconciling the elect to God, the Father says (as it were) I must needs be once in friendship with them, ere I can admit them to my house; and, Son, if thou wilt satisfy my justice, and pay their debt, I shall give them to thee for a seed, and to be the Bride and Wife: Well, fays Christ the Mediator, Father, I accept of the bargain; Lo, I come to do thy will, O my God: Whereupon it comes to pass (as the apostle hath it, 2 Con. 5. laft,) That he is made fin for us, who knew no fin, and we are made the righteou/ness of God in him; For it was as really agreed in the covenant of redemption that he should be made fin for us, as it came to pass in the actual execution of it: And thus way is made for the marriage. 4. When this is done, the marriage must be proclaimed through the world by the preached gospel, the contract must be opened up and read, and sinners consent called for. We are told therein, that the Word is made flifb, and dwelt among us; and, because no man bath seen God at any time, the only begetten Son, who is in the bosom of the Father, be declares bim; as it is, John 1. 14, 15. He. comes and reveals more clearly the contract, first in his own Person and by his own ministry, and then by sending his servants, and telling that all things are ready. 5. The last thing to be removed is the uncircumcision and flupidness of our hearts. Naturally we are given to slight him in his offers, to refuse to open to him, and to let him in when he knocks; to make excuse, to delay, shift and put him off; nay, to refuse to entertain his proposal of marriage, and to give him a repulse: Therefore he comes by his Spirit, and puts in bis finger by the bole of the door, and lets some myrrhe drop on the bandles of the lock, and powerfully, but sweetly, inclines the heart to cast itself open to him; and then he performs the promises of sanctification, circumcifing the heart to love bim with all the heart, and with all the foul; as it is, Deut. 30. 6. And all these promifes are contrived, framed and provided to meet with difficulties in us. We are told, John 6. 44. that no man can come to Chrift, except the Father that fent him draw him; and, Plal. 110. 3. it is promited, that in the day of bis power his people shall be willing; and whoever (being made willing) cometh, shall in nowife be cast out, John 6. 37.

The fourth observation is, That by the preaching of the gospel, whithersoever it cometh, and by the great things made offer of therein, all things are made ready: Obstructions and whatever might hinder the closing of the marriage, are removed. The Father is ready, having declared his willingness to give his consent, This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased, bear ye him, Matth. 3. I am well satisfied with him, take him to you for your flead and Husband; The Son is ready to take all by the hand that will embrace him; pardon of fin, peace with God, fanctification, the mansion, &. are ready to be bestowed; the feast is ready, the fatlings are prepared; the promises are filled with every necessary good thing, there is bread enough in the prodigal's Father's house and to spare; the contract is ready, and an offer of it made on the Bridegroom's fide; the terms are drawn up and put in form, and all things agreed upon and ready, even to the subscription: And there is no more required, but that the hearers of this gospel heartily consent to take him, and submit to his righteousness and dominion; which if they do, all things shall be theirs, even life eternal, and all things that may fit them for it, promises for this life, and that which is to come, and Christ engaged to keep the bargain: And this is it that is preached every day to you, tho, alas! unfuitably; fo that its not now, Who shall go up to beaven, and bring down Christ from above? or, who shall descend unto the deep, and bring him up from the dead? that we may get him to marry; but the righteousness of faith saith, The word is near thee, even in thy mouth, &c. Christ's consent is not to be asked or brought from afar, for he hath declared it in his word; and the terms of the contract are. If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Fesus, and shalt believe with thy heart that God hath raifed him from the dead, thou balt be faved, Rom. 10. 8, 9. Engage therefore honestly with Christ, and keep to him; deny yourselves, and close with him; give up yourselves to him, and ye shall be saved: And that is all one with this, to be married Yea, the day of the marriage is fer, and that is the day of the gospel; the Bridegroom is come to the Church, the table is covered, and the ministers the Bridegroom's friends are waiting on to espouse you to him, and to make up the marriage; so that all things meet and requilite for making peace betwixt God and finners are ready.

The

The fifth observation was, That Christ the Bridegroom and his Father are very willing to have the match made up and the marriage compleated. Therefore doth he fend forth his servants with a strict commission, not only to tell sinners that all things are ready, but to bid them come to the marriage: Yea, he not only wills them to tell that all things are ready, and to invite, but to compet them (as Luke hath it, Chap. 14. 23.) to come in; to ftir them up, and press them to it; to threaten them if they come not; and to accept of no refusal or nay-say. The evidences of his willingness are many, which I will not now infift upon; as, that he hath made the feast, and such a feast, and prepared so for it, and given himself to bring it about, and keeps up the offer and proclamation of the marriage, even after it is flighted: All these, and many mo, tell plainly that the Father and the Son are most heartily willing; theretore they expostulate when this marriage is refuled, O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, bow often would I have ga-thered you, but you would not! Matth. 23. O Jerusalem, Herusalem, if thou, even thou, hadst known in this thy day the things that belong to thy peace! Luke 19. All these sad complaints, that Ifrael would not bearken to bis voice, and bis people would have none of him, Pfal. 81. 7. that be came to bis own, and bis own received bim not, John 1. 11. and that they will not come to bim that they might have life, John 5. 40. make out his willingness abundantly and undeniably.

The fixth observation was, That the great work of the ministers of the gospel is, to invite unto, and to endeavour to bring this marriage betwixt Christ and souls to a elofe. The servants are sent out for this very end, to conclude the bargain: Tho' he be Lord of all, yet he would not employ in this work, angels; neither would he speak immediately by his own voice from heaven, for by reason of his greatness we could not have endured that way of wooing; but faith on the matter to men, subject to the like passions and infirmities, Go tell that the King hath such a Son, and that ye are fent out to woo in his name; and make not only offer of marriage, but request, intreat, perswade, pray and obtest, yea command and compel them to come to the marriage, by holding forth the curfe which comes comes on them that will not come: And hence are those denounced woes, and shaking of the dust off their feer,

for a testimony against them that will not come.

The feventh observation was, That it is the duty of all to whom the good news of this marriage come, to come to it; and, when they are invited to it, presently without all delay to yield. Needs there any proof of this? does not the Mafter's sending, and the servants coming, call for it? do not his preparing of all things, his inviting to the marriage, and his exposturating with them that come not, and our own great necessity, urgently require it?

The eighth and last observation was, That all they that come may expect a very good and heart som welcome. None need to fear that they shall not be made welcome; seeing they are come not uncalled, they shall not fit unserved: The Lord will not look down on such as come; nay, he is waiting on to welcome them, and to meet them as it were mid-way; as we see in the parable of the prodigal, Luke 15. his father stays not till his son come to him, but seeing him afar-off coming, he runs with speed to meet him, and then most affectionately embraces him, and falls on his neck and kifles him: And if the poor child should fay, I am not worthy to be called a fon; he answers that, not fuffering him to speak out all that he had resolved to fay: Even when the debaucht runagate had spent all by riotous living, and would fain have told out the fad and shameful story of his gross miscarriages and great unworthines, he interrupts him, and says, in a manner, Son, hold thy peace as to that; I know well it is grievous to thee; go quickly, and put on the robe, the ring and the shoes that are provided for thee.

I come now, in the third place, to make application of all: And, is it possible to speak or hear of this subject as becomes? who is sufficient for these things, to speak suitably in the name of the Lord, and to lay before you this contract of marriage with such a Bridegroom? Beloved hearers, are ye in a suitable posture to tryst with him? do ye think that ye are for this marriage? is it your serious purpose to close the bargain with him? If so, pray the Lord to give us to speak, and you to hear the word in such manner as it may be a marriage-day indeed.

Gospel-Preparations.

There are very good news here, and bleffed eternally be God, that ever we heard them, or had them to speak of and that ye have them yet to hear; they should make you wery souls, in a manner, slighter within you, and make you to rouze up youselves to welcome them with gladness of heart

And therefore, I. We would exhort you all to believe this report. There are, alas! but few who do indeed believe, that the eternal God hath this design of marriage betwixt him and finners: Therefore, let not your hearts be straitned, only believe that this is the good word of God, that these are the faithful and true sayings of him that cannot lie, and that he is waiting on to ratify them to all who give them credit. 'Tis fomewhat hard to deliver or receive a word of threatning in faith, but, in some respect, more hard to believe a word of promife and of confolation; it is proportionably hard to look upon this as God's own offering of a marriage with his Son, as if he himself were by viva voce speaking it out of heaven, and to believe that this offer is really his: And therefore, as I defire (as his fervant) to speak to you, so I would, again and again, obtest you to be rouzed up, and to rouze up yourselves to believe it. 2. Rouze, stretch and enlarge your understandings, and your hearts and affections for beholding, conceiving and embracing this rich bargain of grace: O consider seriously, from whom it is, for what end it is, how it is brought about, and doth come to you; the height and depth, the length and breadth whereof is inconceivable: Be holily amazed and wonder, that the offer of this marriage comes to you, and that he is content to marry you. 3. In a word, would you know what we have to do with you, or what is our commission to you! this day? This is even it, to tell you that the King hath made a marriage for his Son, and hath prepared and made all things ready for reuniting you to himself; yea, this same King that hath made this wedding ready, and hath carved out this way of throughing his delign, by speake ing to you in his word by his servants, speaks to you by us, and we speak to you in his name, and tell you, that our blessed Lord Jesus is wooing you; we declare, publish and proclaim it: O take notice of it. Our Lord Jesus is not far to feek, he is here waiting on to close the bargain with you: This is our errand, to proclaim these glad tidings to you; and what glader tidings could you wish, than to have it told you, that ye may be happy and eafily happy, and that, if ye be content to be fo, there is nothing that might mar this happiness, but it is removed and taken out of the way? Is not the Father ready? He hath given his confent: Is not the Bridegroom ready, when he hath done so much, and is waiting on your consent? The feaft is ready, and the garments are ready, and there is no more to do, but to take and put them on; and faith' exercised on him will do both. The contract is ready, and there is nothing to be changed or altered in it; and he is ready to accept of you, if ye will accept of him:

Our bleffed Lord Jefus fays, he is content to marry you;
and there is no more to do, but to subscribe your name to the contract. If you want clothes, he will give them to you; if ye want a house, if ye want meat or drink, he will provide for you; whatever it be that you really stand in need of, for foul or body, in time or eternity, ye shall have it from him: The promises are filled with all things that pertain to life and godliness, to this life and to that which is to come; there is in effect nothing wanting but your confent, and let not that be wanting, I befeech you.

In profecuting this purpose, I shall speak a little, 1. To those to whom the offer is made, or to those who are called. 2. To what they are called to. 3. To the terms on which they are called. 4. To the manner how ye should come. 5. To the peremptoriness of the call, and to the necessity of coming. And, 6. (if it be possible to win at it) A word to some motives, whereby ye may be pressed to come, and not to neglect the opportunity of such a precious season of grace.

For the First; It is not one or two, or some sew that are called, not the great only, nor the small only, not the holy only, nor the prosane only, but ye are all bidden, the call comes to all and every one of you in particular, poor and rich, high and low, holy and prosane; Ho (proclaimeth the Lord, as it were, with an Oyes, Isa. 55. 1.) two one that thirsts, come; and he that bath no money, let him come; whosever will, let him come and take of the water of life freely, Rev. 22. 17. Our blessed Lord Jesus is not straitned in his call; and we may humbly say in some measure, that we are not straitned in our bowels; in his name we invite all of you, and make offer of Jesus Christ to be your Husband, that ye may have a room among them that fand by, and be with him for ever; I fay, We make this offer to all of you, to you that are Atheifts, to you that are Graceless, to you that are Ignorant, to you that are Hypocrites, to you that are Lazy and Lukewarm, to the civil and to the profane; we pray, we befeech, we obtest you all to come to the wedding; Gall (faith the Lord) the blind, the maimed, the balt, &cc. bid them all come, yea, compel them to come in: Grace can do mo and greater wonders than to call fuch; it can not only make the offer of the marriage to them, but it can make up the match effectually betwirt Christ and them: We will not, we dare not fay, that all of you will get Christ for a Husband; but we do most really offer him to you all, and it shall be your own fault if ye want him and go without him. And therefore, before we proceed any further, we do folemnly protest, and before God and his Son Jesus Christ, take instruments this day, that this offer is made to you; and that it is told to you in his name, that the Lord Jesus is willing to match with you, even the profanefi and most graceless of you, if ye be willing to match with him; and he earnestly invites you to come to the wedding: If you can touch at any thing on his side, that is not ready, or at any thing on your side, but it may thro grace be made ready if ye will come, you may; but tis impossible, for the covenant is well ordered and sure, and that in all things; and these words are not the words of men, but the words of the true and faithful Witness, which ye must count and reckon for, when we are dead and gone: . He bath killed his oxen and fatlings, and prepared his dinner, and bid his guests; all things are ready, in the due order and manner, whether on your fide or on his, if ye be willing to step to and make the bargain: He hath drawn up the contract, and sent us out with it to you, to crave your subscription; and, if ye be ready for that, he craves no more of you. Now, I put you all to it, whether will ye inbscribe it or not? And I would not put one of you without the reach of this invitation. However we be, alas! much carnal in speaking his mind, yet we defire not to obscure nor limit our Lord's grace; he calls all of you to the wedding, he hath fent us out as his fervants (tho' of all the most unworthy) to close and conclude the contract of marriage with you this day, if you be willing. Come then, O come and subscribe, and it shall be in very deed a bargain. If ye can thro' grace say from your hearts. We will take bim; then I say to you, Take bim, and bave bim with the Father's bleffing. Our commission is not only to offer him, and to invite you to take him, but to close a bargain betwixt him and you who are content to take him; we would (as the apostle speaks, 2 Cor. 11. 2.) espouse you to one Husband, that we might present you a chaft virgin to Chrift, and have you band-fasted to him, as the word is: And this is very well becoming one of the days of the Son of Man, and one of fuch featons of his grace, to make this offer to great and small, rich and poor, learned and unlearned, gracious and graceless, hypocrites and profane; there is here no exception of persons with him; the bleffed God is content to match with the most graceless and godless of you, as well as with those who are gracious and godly: There is joy in heaven at the conversion of a finner, and the price was paid for the elect that are yet graceless, as well as for these of them who are now gracious; for all were once in the same condition: Therefore look not with narrow and straitned hearts on the rich and liberal allowance of our bleffed Lord Jesus.

But, Secondly, What is it that we call you to, when we bid you come to the marriage? "Tis not to the communion only, 'tis not to any of Christ's benefits only, 'tis not to say at first-hand considently that all is yours, or to have a sure knowledge (as ye call it) and persuasion at the very first that it is so; tho' I heartily wish that ye may find this persuasion on solid and good grounds; but it is first and mainly to marry the Bridegroom, and then to come to the feast: We call you to believe, and we declare in his name, that, if ye will betake yourselves to him in good earnest, ye shall be saved; if ye will, as it were, put your hand to the pen, and subscribe yourselves heartily content to take him, ye shall most certainly have him and all his benefits. Ye that are profane, take him, but not to live still in your profanity, but to study holiness in all manner of conversation, in his strength; ye that are self-righteous, take him, but not to live still in the good conceit of your self-righteousness; but to renounce it, and to take him for your righteousness; ye that are blind, take him, but not to live still in your blindness, but to grow in grace and in the knowledge of him: Whatever ye be, and whatever ill aileth you, take him, but not to continue in the ill, but to get it amended. This, sure, is no less than to call you to the communion, yea it is more; whether therefore ye come to the communion or not, we call and invite you all to come to Christ, and to marry him; which if ye do, we dare promise you, in his name, begun communion with him here, and full communion with him in heaven hereaster.

Thirdly, What are the terms on which ye are called and may warrantably come to this marriage? I need not stand on the terms on his fide, norso tell you what he promifeth; kis this in a word, I will be for thee ! He is content to make over all that is his to you; pardon of fin, justification, fanctification, his Spirit to quicken you, even his whole purchase to enrich you: In sum, (as it is, 1 Cor. 1. 31.) He is made of God unto you wildom, righteculnels, fantlification and redemption; he hath made all things yours (as it is, 1 Cor 2 21.) and in him ye are compleat, (as the apostle hath it, Col. 2. 10.) Ye need never go out of him, to feek for any thing truly good that ye stand in need of. And on the other hand, What seeks he of you, but to be for bim, and not for another? as it is, Hof. 3. He seeks no hard condition: In fum, it may be comprehended in that word, 1 Cor. 1. 21. That he that gloricth may glory in the Lord; not to glory or boast in any thing, or in ourselves, but of him, and in him. But, for clearness cause, I shall draw the terms on your fide to these three. 1. You must deny yourself, your lusts, and idols, and your own righteousness: Where is beafing then? (faith the apostle, Rom. 3. 27.) It is excluded; by what law? of works? nay, but the law of faith: Ye then that would marry Christ, and share indeed in the feast, ye must have a sight of that which ye want, and of your own inability to make it up, and that ye are undone in yourselves without him; To him that worketh not, but believeth on him that justifieth the ungodly, bis faith is counted for righteousness, that is, To him that expects nothing by his works, but betakes himself to Christ and his righteousness for his justification before God: And that is no unreasonable condition. 2. As ye would not glory in yourselves, to ye would glory in him. Whatever ye deny in yourselves, ye would put him in the room of it; if ye dare not lippen or trust your souls to your own righteousness, lippen or wust them to his: He fays, I am content to pay your debt; and, fince ye cannot pay your own debt yourselves, say humbly to him, Biessed Lord Jesus, pay our debt for us; He is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth, Rom. 10. 3. When he offers himfelf, take him thus, and let faith fay, So be it, Lord; I accept of the bargain. O! hold to it, and quit it not. 3. It is required that ye shall be his, and have no power over yourselves; and this takes in fanctification, dying to fin and living to righteoutness, adorning the gospel, living answerably to the several relations ye fland in: For the mortification and holiness be not the cause for which he marries, yet it is a condition of the contract; and it well becomes his Bride to be dutiful; Thou falt be for me, and I will be for thee: If he will graciously please to be for us, tis all the reason in the world that we should be for him. Now we know somewhat of the terms, which may all come in under these three; there are many conditions on his fide, and but few on ours.

Fourthly, Ye would confider the peremptorines of this call, to accept of and to marry our Lord Jesus Christ on these terms. 'Tis not an ordinary compliment, but proposed by the King the Pather, and by the King's Son the Bridegroom; he sends out his servants, who are come to call you peremptorily: And there are three peremptories, that this offer and call hath with it; all which three we carry in our commission, and crave of you to subscribe to them. The first whereof is, That ye take no other husband but this Bridegroom: There is no latitude less to you in this; ye must by no means engage with any other. This only for Jesus Christ that we woo, and we seek of you that ye would give him your fouls, your hearts and affections, that ye may be devoted to him and to no other: and therefore we intimate to you that are married and joined to idols, that ye must be divorced from those, and betake you to him alone. The second is, the peremptoriness of the terms we speak of; we cannot, and ye must not alter one jot or title. Ye must deny yourselves, ye must be content to be divorced from your lufts and idols, ye must renounce your own righteousness, and give up with the law your first husband, considered as a covenant of works, and run out from the curses thereof to him, which ye will never do, till ye see your own righteousness to be as filthy rags, and reject it, as part of your indictment, that over ye trufted to it. Ye must forget your father's boufe. 2. As you must deny yourselves, so you must close with Christ, and embrace him for your Husband and Lord: Do not think that ye will or can dwell befide him, that ye can fit and hear him, if ye marry him not. 3. Ye must be devoted to him in your conversation, he must needs be your King as well as your Priest: Ye must forfake father and mother, and all your kindred, and betake you to him; and ye must take up and keep house with him, you must dwell with him, and study to be answerable to the marriage-tye and obligation put upon you. We dare dispense with none of the three, The third peremptory is this, As ye must engage with no other, and as ye must not alter the terms, so ye must not delay to come and close the bargain, ye must not put off till to-morrow, nay not an hour; All things are ready. Just now, Now is the accepted time: Here stands the biessed Bridegroom, here are the conditions and terms on which he will marry you; and we, as the Bridegroom's friends, fland ready to espouse you to him. We dare not be answerable to our Master, nor can we be answerable to our trust and commission, if we shuffle by or thrust out any of you, if ye do not thrust out yourselves; nor may we admit of an excuse from any of you: And therefore let me again say to you, that here is not only a marriage, and of all marriages the most excellent; but let me beseech and obtest you to come to the wedding; either come, or give a reason why

ye will not, or cannot: As you can assign no relevant reafon for your not coming, we dare not accept of any irrelevant reason, nor admit of any answer but this, that ye will take him; we dare admit of no excuse: ye must not shift nor delay. Ye would think that those who were bidden, Luke 14 might have come, when they had seen their farm, and proved their oxen; but that would not be with them: So I say, it will not be with you, to shift this offer. He is here waiting on, to see who will consent and say, Even so I take him; say it, O say it seriously, and abide by it.

O! are there any here now looking up to him? are there any here that would fain have it a closed bargain? are there any here that believe these things as the truths of God? Then we pray you let them fink down into your hearts, and come. And, to press this a little further, let me ask, What can hinder the making of this bargain? Is it the want of notice or timeous intimation of it? That cannot be, ye are clearly convinced of the contrary: Is it because ye will or can be happy without him? Wo to that happiness: Is it any difficulty standing in the way? That shall be removed; yea, as to him it is removed already, and shall be as to you on your closing with him. Pose and pur your own hearts to it then; Is there any of you that dare or can find in your hearts to refuse? The Lord is waiting on, his faithfulness is engaged to make out what he offereth; He stretcheth out his hand, and faith, Even fo I take you, if ye will take me: Are ye content to firetch forth your hand, and to fay, Even fo I take thee, bleffed Lord Jesus? Or, if this be not win at to satisfaction, are there any rouzing and firetching themselves to essay how it will go with them? what are ye doing? is it a bargain or not? Ye must say, Yea, or Nay, and that even now. We suppose ye will not say downright Nay; the more than probably many will delay: But this must not be; the table may be drawn, other guests may be called in, and ye removed. We cannot allow you an hour's time to advise, especially from indifferency; yea, if ye begin to take advisement for shifting a present closure, Christ's call and invitation, and your consenting will readily cool upon your hand. Paul fays, that be consulted not with field and blood: So must not ye consult with flesh and blood in this matter, ye must cast away the beggar's cloke, be content to deny yourself, quit your lusts, and close with him presently, or ye may never have the like opportunity. There is a necessity imposed on you from the command to come, from the curfe and prejudice that abides you, and will certainly overtake you if you come not; ye will be eternally miserable without him, there is no happiness but in him. The King is on his throne, the table is set and covered, the day is fixed, his servants invite in his name; come therefore, come without further lingering, dallying, shifting or delay: Alas! there are too many days put by already, ye must put by no mo.

Now, let me Ipeak a word further to this purpose, What can marr the matter? what can obstruct its being a bargain? Certainly it must be one of three: Either, 1. Because ye are not content with the Bridegroom; Or, 2. Because ye are not content with the terms; Or, 3. Because ye are not content with yourselves, or with some thing in yourselves.

As for the First, I suppose ye can say nothing against the Bridegroom: Is there any other like to him, or that can compare with him? I appeal even to you atherits, and profane wretches, that live and ly in your lufts, is there a beloved like this Beloved? hath he a match in heaven or earth? is he not the King's Son? And if ye ask who that is, ye may hear and know from Pfal. 24 The King of Glory, the Lord of Hosts, strong and mighty in battle; and from Heb. 1. 3. The Brightness of the Rather's Glory, the express Image of his Person, uphoiding all things by the word of his power: There is none like him, but the Father, and the holy Spirit; and, as God, he is One with them. Ye have both the question and answer, Cant. 5. 9. What is thy Beloved more than another beloved? What is yonder Christ, of whom we hear so much? The anfwer is given (which we cannot flay now to paraphrase upon) He is white and ruddy, the Chiefest or Standard-hearer among ten thousands, fairer than the Sons of men. And if ye would know him more particularly, His head is as the most fine gold; he is God: His locks (or his hair) are bujby and black as a raven; there is not the least unseemlineſs ness, even in those things that would, to our thinking, feem less necessary, as his hair : Yea, bis very garments smell of myrrbe, aloes, and cassia, (as it is, Psal. 45.) His eyes are as the eyes of doves by the rivers of waters, washed with milk, and fitly fet; O so lovely as his properties are! His checks as beds of spices, as sweet flowers; bis lips like lilies dropping sweet-smelling myrrbe; bis bands as gold-rings set with beryl; bis belly (or bowels of love and affection) like the bright ivory overlaid with sapphires; his legs like pillars of marble set upon sockets of fine gold; his countenance like Lebanon, excellent as the cedars: O so excellent and stately! His month is most sweet, or (as the word is) sweetness, in the abstract; never soul kissed his mouth, but there was a bond thereby laid on it, that it could never again part with him: In a word, He is altogether lovely, or (as the word is) all defires; there is nothing that fouls can defire, but it is in him; and there is nothing in him, but what has definableness in it: This is my Beloved, and this is my Friend (fays the Bride) O ye daughters of Jerusalem 2. This is he, he is fure no common or ordinary beloved; fee if among all the beloveds in heaven or earth there be any like him: O ye despisers and slighters of the Son of God, put yourselves to it, is there any like him to be found? has he not the preference of and the preheminence above all beloveds? He is the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth; be is the mighty God, the wonderful Counfeller, the everlasting Father, the Prince of peace. It would well become us all to be wondring at him, and to be drawing near to him, to behold him in his beauty, to go forth and behold King Solomon with the crown wherewith his mother crowned him in the day of his espousals. O take a flayed view of him in his personal excellencies, and in the excellent qualifications of his mediatory office, and it cannot be that on this ground ye will cast at the match: Will any of you dare to say it, or to abide by it, that ye will not marry Christ, because ye think nothing of him, or because he is not worthy to be thought of? We suppose. none will do fo.

If it be the Second, viz. the terms, that ye are not content with: Ye would have Christ, grace, and glory, and every good thing; but here it sticketh, you look at it as

66 . an hard matter to be denied to yourielf, and to be wholly God's, to renounce your own righteousness, and your lufts, and your idols, to be absolutely devoted to him, and wholly dependent on him in your walk: As the evil and the flothful fervant called him a bard master; so do many think of him, tho' they will not down-right fay to much in express words. But I would ask you, Is there any unreafonable thing here? or, shall all those terms he fought after, in some respect, in the marriage of a poor creature like yourselves; and will ye deny them to Christ? 1. If you get his righteousness, should ye not deny your own? If we come under the covenant of grace with him, is there any prejudice to lay by the rovenant of works? If we get him for your fecond Husband, and infinitely best, is it any prejudice to quit your first husband the law? And, in that respect, is it reasonable to cast at the bargain, because it is free? 2. Is it not reasonable that ye should give him the room of all things? If he be able to fall the room of all, let him have his room, as being well worthy of it: It is your advantage to quit your lufts and finful pleafures, your covetourness, pride, vanity, felf-conceit, &c. to exchange all for him; and, if ye be not content of this condition, ye say he is not worth the having. 3. Is it not reasonable that ye should be devoted to him in your conversation? that ye should no longer play the harlot, but be as a chast virgin to him? Is it any advantage to you to follow your idols, that will go betwint you and happiness? If heaven be an advantage, it is your advanrage to quit them and be for Christ: Or, is it any prejudice to be holy? or, will ye quit Christ, because ye must be holy? or, will ye refuse him, because he will not suffer you, to your ruin, to take your own will as formerly? Yea, it is not only reasonable, but very good and profitable; nay, there is a necessity you should be holy: And, may not love to him loofe your heart from fin? There was another fort of consultation, and other bowels of love, at the first making of the bargain betwixt the Father and the Son; and it was calculated for more honourable defigns, and levelled to more noble ends than any thing the devil; or the world, or the flesh can promise to you: And any of you that will fland and flick at the terms, that are

To just, equitable, and every way reasonable and easy withal, we take your own consciences to be witnesses that they are so, and you dare not avouch the denial of their being fo. If ye be content to take him, to be reconciled and made friends with God by his fatisfaction, and to be made holy by his fanctifying Spirit, to be for him as he shall be for you; it is a bargain: And what, I pray, ails you at fuch a bargain? If this be not made, ye shall never be able to make such another. What should ye do then, but come to the wedding? 'Tis not time to dispute or debate, but to close: Say, O say fincerely, as these do. Fer. 3. 22. Behold, we come unto thee, for thou art the Lord our God: When he fays, as he did to them, Return, yo backsliding children, and I will beal your backslidings; turn it over to him, and lay, Behold, we come unto thee.

Thirdly, Are ye not content with yourselves, or with fomething in yourselves? Do ye indeed think and says that it is a good bargain, and that the terms are very reasonable and easy, and we have nothing to say against them, but we have (alas!) much to say of and against ourselves; the bargain pleaseth us wondrous well, and so do the terms, but we are not at all pleased with ourselves ? I answer, 1. May ye not then the better quit and deny yourselves, and take Christ in the room and place of self? 2. I answer, Christ makes no such objection; he hids the most prophane, the most ignorant and graceless wretch, the most hypocritical dissembler, that never knew what it was to be honest, come, and assures them that they shall be welcome, if they will come indeed.

Object. But I can do nothing, I cannot keep a word that I say to Christ. I answer, Engage and consent to close with Christ on his own terms, and doing and keeping shall follow; to give thy consent, is that which thou art now called to, and he engages to help thee to perform.

Objett. But, shall I take on an engagement, presently to break it again? I an/wer, If indeed thou consent, thou mayest fail and break, but the covenant will never be utterly broken nor diffolved; yea, thou shalt have Surety for thy keeping of it; Forasmuch as (saith the apostle, Heb. 7. 22.) Jesus was made Surety of a better Testament. E.2, Google

If ye objest and fay, That ye have much fin, that ye are lothfom and abominable; subscribe this contract and ba gain, and we have a free and full discharge of all your debt ; I will (faith the Lord, Hofea 2. 19.) betrothe thee unto me in louing-kindness and mercies : He will pardon your iniquities; there is no exact or severe seeking and fearthing out of the debt here, where is ingenuously taken with, but rather a covering of ir: He will also cleanse you from all your filthiness, and from all your idols. Bur it may be thou wilt object, and fay, I will rather purpose than engage, because I fear I shall break it.

Answer, But, is it likely that thou wilt make good fuch a purpose, who darest not engage? Or, will purposes and resolutions do the business, without performing? Purposes of marriage make not the marriage; it is actual confent and engaging which doth that.

But thou wilt object, and say, Alas! I am not in a right frame, I am very confused, all things are wrong with me. Answer, What is this thou sayest? Will your frame be amended without Christ? will those swarms of corruptions be beat out before thou take in the King of glory, who is ftrong and mighty in hattle ?

But thou wilt objet, I am not clear as to my interest. Answer, Wilt thou not consent till thou be clear? that is as much as to fay, thou art doubting, but that thou wilt not put it out of doubt: If thou be unclear as to thy subscription, rather subscribe and write thy name over again; if ye have not at all subscribed, take now the pen and do it; fay, Lord Jesus, I come to thee, and will be thine...

Object Alas! fain would I come to the wedding, but I cannot come, it will not do with me; I would fain believe, but my faith is not prompt and ready. I answer, Is not the covenant provided with an answer to that also? It calls for nothing but for your subscribing; and, if ye fay ye cannot, look well that it be not a shift; It comes to this, Yea, or Nay; and if ye fay, ye cannot fay Tea in faith, which yet thou wouldst fain be at; is there not a promise of grace, that the your hand be as it were withered, if ye mint and essay, you shall be enabled to stretch firetch it forth? Faith may come, in the very essaying to grip him; only essay it, and it shall go with you.

Object. I have effayed it often, and it hath not gone with me. Answer, Essay it again, and cast a new knot; if your evidence be not clear, subscribe over again.

Object. But it goes not with me; when all is done, I cannot believe; I would subscribe, but I cannot write (as it were) I cannot diffinctly act faith. Answer, What is that? Our Lord stands not on that; the you cannot write well, do as ye can: 'Tis strange to see, how some's Subscription is almost like a scratching with crow-toes yet 'tis a valid subscription; some again will write down their mark in place of their name, and that also, where it is well known, is admitted as valid. If you cannot (as it were) write your name in fair and legible letters, fet down some mark, if it were but two scores or lines in any form or figure; if ye cannot act faith so distinctly, come on as you may ; if ye cannot to your fatisfaction fay, Yea, with the heart, say it with the mouth, striving and longing to have thy heart brought up; force thyfelf (if I may speak so) to believing: If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Fesus, and shalt believe with thy beart that God raifed him from the dead, thou shall be saved, Rom, 10. 9. Endeavour to make thy mouth engage thine heart; bind thyself fast to Christ, even in a manner whether thou wilt or not; A& faith with the understanding, labouring honestly to bring up thy will and affections; and, tho ye win not now to a faith that is distinct, it shall come in a due time; Essay to set open the door, and it shall go with you.

Objett. But my heart fays, All these are but fair words. Answer, Away with that blasphemy. They are the truths of God: Essay then, O essay seriously this way of believing, and ye shall find power meeting you. The pen is, as it were, lying by you; and albeit ye cannot write well and be distinct, take the pen, and Christ shall (as it were) lead your hand, and guide it to write so as it shall pass in heaven for a subscribed consent: Set yourselves to give him a welcome, and he shall account it to be a welcome. Say now, what more ye have to say; lay out your scruples; this word, All things are ready, will answer them E 3

all: The garment is ready to be put on, yes, Jefus Christ is your Wedding-garment; take and put him on: He is the cure for all your diseases, apply him for the cure of them all. Ye cannot certainly be clothed, before you put on the garment; neither can ye be healed, before ye apply the cure; ye cannot by any means be rich, till ye marry him. But, beside all these, there are sevegal other needlesly disquieting scruples, there are many other shifts (and, alas that there should be such trifling, if I may call it so, such whining, as it were, and standing on ceremonics (to speak to) with our Lord!) among which this is one, I wor not if I be in the covenant and contract of redemption, I know not if I be one of God's elect. Answ. What is this? ye know not well what ye say: Have ye any thing to do with that secret by a leap and at first hand? Are ye not called to marry Christ? is not that his revealed will to you ! I protest, in his name, this is the thing that ye are called to; and will ye make an exception, where he has made none? Or, will ye shift obedience to a clear command, upon a supposed decree, which you cannot know but by the effects? Will ye reason so in the matter of your eating and drinking? Upon a Supposition that God hath decreed that ye shall die to-morrow, or within a few days; will ye this day not take your dinner, nor make use of any refreshment, till that supposed day come? Or, because ye know not if God hath appointed you to live so and so long, will ye forbear therefore your callings! Or, will any of you, in seeking after a match in the world, reason so? Will ye not seek after nor marry fuch a woman, till ye be clear that God hath decreed her to be your wife? When or whom would ye marry at this rate of reasoning? But, 2. Because there is a fort of faculty and facility here to dispute against God, I answer by way of question, Were there ever any that had that doubt cleared to them before they came to Christ? Who ever would have come to him, if they had Haved till that had been taken out of the way? Or, hath the Lord told that to any before they came? Hath he faid to them, Believe, for ye are elected? But his method is thus, Believe, and ye shall know in due time that ye are elected. 3. Is there any that can fay, that the offer or the refusal of the match depended on this? If any of you will say Because I was not also at the say of you will fay, Because I was not elected, he refused me; he will answer, How often would I have gathered you? And there will need no more ground for fentencing professors of the gospel to destruction, than this, Man, woman, thou hadst the offer of the Gospel, and refusedst it; therefore go to thy place: He will not judge you according to the decree of reprobation, but according to his call, and your disobedience to it. And further, ye may take Christ's Answer to this Objection, from John 6. 39. where there are two wills, or rather two things willed, of equal extent, betwixt the Father and Christ in the covenant of redemption, under which all the elect come: The first is, ver. 39. This is the Father's will which bath sent me, that of all that be hath given me, I should lose nothing: But, as if he had said, This is not it that ye have to do with at firsthand; therefore, ver. 40 he says, And this is the will of bim that fent me, that every one that feeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life: Not that all the elect should know that they are elected, before they believe; but that he that believes in him, may know that he is elected. He gives the same promise to them that believe, that is given to them that are elected: And they are diftinguished, because he would have them to come under diffinct confiderations.

And now, to conclude, Is there not need, great need to come? and have ye not good warrant to come? Lay by, therefore, seeking satisfaction to sense and carnal reason: And, while the Lord says, All things are ready, come to the marriage; it will be greatly to your projudice, to fit or thist the invitation. Ye have the contrast laid before you, alter not the terms, dispute not, delay not: This is our commission to you to-day; we tell you. that the King hath made ready for the feast, yea, all things are ready; come then, and let there be no more debate about the matter. If ye will but fay it, and fay it in carnest, Here, Lord Jesus, I give up myself to thee; and, though my consent be now but confused, I hall endeavour, thro grace, to give it more clearly and diffinetly another time, it shall go well with you: Only deliver up yourselves to him; and, in the Lord's name, I tell you, that ye shall E 4

be dearly welcome. As many as come humbly lothing themselves, wondring at the free grace of God, and highly effecting of precious and lovely Jetus, and adventuring to hazard their souls on him on his own terms, and to take him for their Husband and Lord; it shall not be accounted presumption in them so to do: Nay (as it is, Cant. 3.) The bottom of his chariot is paved with love, and tis for the daughters of Ferusalem; it is made for carrying and keeping helievers. Leap hither (if I may speak so) and ye will fall fost, into a sweetly persumed and soft bed, even in the arms of Christ. There was never a carpet, never a feather or doun-bed so soft as that is; only come and cast yourselves over on it. Tho' ye think that ye cannot apprehend and take hold of him, he can and will apprehend and take hold of you; and he is so very tender-hearted, that he will kis you, and even weep over you for joy (as it were) on your neck: And if ye have no garments, rings or jewels (to speak so) to adorn you, he will give these to you. Come forward then, come, O! come, and let it be a day of covenanting with him: And, in lign and token thereof, give up your names to him; and, for confirmation, take the seal of his covenant, the facrament with your hand, and blefs him with your heart, that so heartily welcomes you: And the blessing of God shall come upon you that come on these terms.

A Sermon preached after the Communion, On Philip. 1. 27. Only let your conversation be as it becometb the gospel of Christ.

HERE are two great works that the ministers of the gospel have to do: One is to engage people to Christ, and to perswade them to receive him and close with him; the other is to induce them to walk worthy of him, Col. 2. 6. As ya bave (faith the apostle) received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in bim. Paul, thro the hand of the Lord with him, had engaged the Philippians to close with Christ, and, as it were, to conclude the contract betwixt him and them; and now, being aged and in prilon.

oblige to a Gospel-Conversation.

prison, and not knowing certainly if ever he shall see them again, he commends this to them in a special manner, whether he see them or be absent from them, that only they would let their conversation be as becometh the gospel of Christ: As if he had said, Ye are privileged with the gospel, and have embraced it, and are eminent in the protession thereof; let me therefore beg this of you, that your conversation may be answerable to it. The adverb, only, intimates to them, that this was so necessary and of so great concernment, that in a manner it was their one sbing they had to do, in comparison of which, in a manner, they had no other thing elfe to do, whether he were present or absent; this, in some respect, is all that he requires of them: And the argument whereby he prefferh it is, that whether be some to them or not, he may hear of sheir affairs; and that he delires and expects, whether he be at liberty, or in prison and bonds, that they will thus especially testify their respect to him; which would be more refreshing and acceptable to him, than their communicating to him in his affliction, beyond all the rest of the Churches, was, and for which he commends them. Chap. 4. And in the close of the verse he instanceth two particulars, wherein he would have their conversation suiting the gospel; or two qualifications of a gospel-converfation and walk: One is, Unity, that they fland fast in one Spirit : Another is, Purity in the faith, that with one mind they strive together for the faith of the gospel.

Ĩ.

The first qualification is, joint and united stayedness and stedsastness, that they be not fleeting and wavering to and fro, easily disjointed and divided one from another, as many light professors are: And the fecond is, that they be studious in and striving for the purity of the doctrine of . faith, and ferious in the practice and exercise of faith; defirable and excellent qualifications of a Christian, viz.

purity, folidity, and feriousness in religion.

We shall at this time speak of the exhortation, Only let your conversation be as becometh the gospel of Christ. Where, by conversation, we understand the whole of a man's carriage and walk towards and before God and men; and by the gospel, the whole doctrine thereof, as it respects faith and manners or practice; but here more especially, as it Gospel-Privileges respects faith in Chrift, both as it is opposed to Heatbenifm, and as 'tis opposed to the law or covenant of works: To walk then as becometh the golpel, is to walk answerably and fuitably to it, and in the whole of their carriage and deportment to make a manifest difference to appear betwixt themselves and all other persons, as they are dignissed, and as the gospel requireth.

The point of doctrine, to which we would speak from these words, and which lieth obviously in them, is, That they who are privileged with the gospel, ought seriously to endeavour, and to make it their great bufiness, to have their convenfation suitable to, and becoming the same. This is some way the one ibing required of all the hearers of the gospel, of all that are baptized in the name of Christ. We need not ffay on the proof and reasons of it, and the less, that none will dare down-right to deny it, and that the reasons are fo obvious.

There are three Uses of it, that we would speak a little to: The first is for instruction, to teach us our duty: The fecond is of regret and expostulation, that the professors of the gospel, and of the name of Christ, should be so unlike and unanswerable to it: The third is of exhortation to this fo very necessary and so much called-for a duty, as the compend of all duties, which we would press and set home by some considerations drawn from the necessity and

advantage of it.

As for the first, I think I may say, that, if ye had the apostle Paul preaching to you who have been communicants yesterday, this would be the great duty which he would enforce upon you, Only let your conversation be as it becomes the gospel of Christ. Ye will readily say, What is that? I confess 'tis hard to tell, 'tis so very marrowy and comprehensive; but it will be as hard to practife it, and a great deal harder. O that we were all breathing and pressing seriously and hard after it! However, we shall in the first place, and in the general, defire you to confider thefe tew scriptures that hold it out, as namely, Luke 1. 74, 75. 2 Cor. 7. 1. Tit. 2. 10, 11, 12. 1 Pet. 1. 15. Philip. 2. 20.

More particularly, from other scriptures ye may take it up in these; or, if we read and consider the gospel aright, we will find thele five things in it, which require a walk fuitable, or a walk with respect to them, and such a walk becomes the gospel. 1. In the substance of it, our blessed Lord Jesus is (as it were) the text on whom the gospel is a notable commentary; and what he did, and how he fuffered, is proposed as a fair copy for us to write after, in all things wherein he is let forth to us as a Pattern for our imitation. 2. That from whence the gospel comes, and which gives it its rife, even the love of the Father, and of the Son. and of the Holy Ghoft, in whose bleffed breaft it bred; and to walk as it becomes the gofpel, is to walk fuitably to that love. 3. To walk as becomes the gospel, is to walk suitably to the great offers of it, and to the promises contained in it, the exceeding great and precious promises, whereby we are made partakers of the divide nature; to walk suitably to all the excellent things, the fublimely spiritual and divine things promised. 4. It is to walk suitably to the commands and directions of the gospel, in reference to all duties: Having therefore (faith the apostle, 2 Cor. 7. 1.) thefe promises, let us cleanse yourselves from all filtbiness of the flesh and spirit, perfelling boliness in the fear of God. 5. It is to walk answerably to the obligations which the gospel lays on us, and to the consolations that flow from it to us. If then we would walk as becomes the gospel of Christ, we must have a due respect unto all these.

If it should be enquired, What is it to have a respect to these in our walk? We answer, It supposeth and includeth these things. 1. A likeness and conformity; that what is called for in the matter of duty, or offered in the promife, we study to be like it: We all (faith the apostle, 2 Cor. 3. 18.) beholding as in a glass, the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image, from glory to glory, as by the Spirit of the Lord. 2. Our suffering none of these things to ly by us unimproved, and our endeavouring to make the right use of them; to fuffer none of the promises relating to justification, fanctification, or any other spiritual privilege and bepefit to be useless, but to be laying due weight on each of them: And more especially, to be making right use of Christ the Mediator, in whom all the promises are yea and amen; (for certainly they neither walk as it becomes the gospel, nor are worthy of it, who make no use of him) to be making right use of the ordinances, word and sacraments, and of all appointed means of edification, publick, private and secret; and to be making right use of the comforts of the gospel, whereof there is thro Christa very large and liberal allowance on Christians, 3. It includes our delighting ourselves in the gospel, our endeavouring to be cheerful, to be cheered and made glad by the good things in it. A heartless, drooping and discouraging life and walk is very unbecoming the gospel of Christ.

We may, in a word, briefly fum up a Christian's converfation as becometh the gospel, in these three; i. That he shine in his conversation, so as he may adorn the gospel. 2. That he improve, by the exercise of faith, the promises of it. 2. That he endeavour to live on the comforts of it, and to live in the hope and expectation of the comfort and refreshing from the presence of the Lord, and the fulness of joys therein, that are coming. Somewhat of all these is touched in those words, Alls 9. 31. Then the Churches had reft, and were edified, and walking in the fear of the Lord, and in the comfort of the Holy Ghoff, were multiplied: They walked in the fear of God, in respect of their practice; and, in respect of their faith, they walked in the comfort of the Holy Ghoft; and they were edified, grew and increased, not only in respect of their number, but as to their spiritual state and stature: And thus, the peace of God, which paffeth understanding, guarded their minds and bearts through Christ Fefus.

Or ye may look on the gospel as calling for these two things, in our external and visible conversation; 1. That none get any occasion by our walk to reproach the gospel; That none may have it, or any just ground given by us, to say, Take up such a prosessor of the gospel. O what prejudice to the prosession of the gospel, is done this way, by the untender walk of many of its prosessor. 2. It is to walk so, as our carriage may be a commendation to the gospel, and an ornament to the prosession of it: That, not only reproachers may be ashamed, who fally accuse our good conversation; but, by beholding of it, they may be made to glorify God: That we may shine as lights, by our blameless walk; so holding forth the word of life (being practical preachers) by our convincing and edity.

ing carriage, in our several capacities, callings, flations and relations; that they who are not won by the word, may be won to the love of Christ, and of holiness, by our exemplary conversation, and by the humble, tender and conscientious discharge of the duties of those callings and relations; the husband being kind, and the wife tractable, child and servant obedient, &c. Excellent directions to this purpose are given by the apostles, and particularly by Paul and Peter, in their epistles.

More particularly (which will yet be but somewhat general) we may consider the gospel, 1. As it holds forth and calls for holiness, and so, for a holy and gospel-becoming conversation. And, 2. We would take a view of the nature of this holiness.

First, The gospel calls for holiness in a sixfold extent: a, failing or defect in any of which, makes a conversation, in so far, to be unbecoming the gospel. 1. It calls for holiness in respect of all forts of duties; Be ye boly (saith Peter, 1 Pet. 1. 15.) in all manner of conversation, as God is boly; in prosperity and adversity; in religious, in moral, and in natural actions; For it is written, Be ye boly, for I am boly, 2. It is extended univerfally to all particular and individual duties and actions of all those forts: it reacheth all manner of conversation. The divinely inspired scriptures instruct the man of God, how he may be made perfect in every good work; as it is, 2 Tim. 3. And a failing in thought, word or deed, is unbecoming the gospel. 3. It is extended in respect of the subject, viz. the whole man, and preffeth that he be fanctified throughout: So, 1 Theff. 5. 23. the apostle prays, The God of peace fattifie you wholly; and I pray God, your whole spirit, soul and hody, be preserved blameless And, 2 Cor. 7. 1. it puts to clear se from all filth of the flelb and spirit : It requires that the judgment be kept found, and that no error or untruth be admitted by it; that the mind be fober, and free from any finful distemper; that the affettions be sanctifiedly regular, and that they debord not; that the will be straight, and brought up to the straight rule of obedience; and that the conscience be kept tender, that it be neither darkned nor impure: That the members of the body be yielded as infruments unto righteousness. 4 It is extended to holimess, in respect of all capacities, callings, stations and relations; of husbands and wives, of mafters and fervants. of parents and children; as the apostle Paul heartily and frequently doth in his epiftles, namely, Col. 3. & 4. Epb. 5. &c 6. Tit. 2. where he presses at upon servants by this argument, That the doctrine of God may be adorned; and on wives by this, That the dollrine of God may not be blasphe-med; and on all thus, That the grace of God hath appeared in the gospel, (for that very end.) 5 It is extended in respect of all times and places. I Cor. 15. ult. we are commanded always to abound in the work of the Lord; in the whole tract of our conversation, at home and abroad, in fecret and publick, in prosperity and adversity. 6. Tis extended to, and requireth perfect holiness, holiness at the highest pitch: So, Matth. 5. Be ye perfect, as your beavenly Father is perfect; And, I Pet. 1. 15. Be ye boly in all manner of conversation, as God that calleth you is holy: To be at exact holiness, even to have it perfect in respect of degree, in our defign, defire and endeavour; to be purifying ourselves, even as be is pure (as it is, 1 John 3. 3.) having him for our Pattern.

If any should here object, and say, To look on the gof-pel thus, as carving out a Christian's duty and walk so very exactly, in this extent and at this pitch, makes it appear to be very strict, and to differ little or nothing from the law; for what more doth that call for? so that this do-Etrine feems to be legal. I answer, This objection seems to imply a great mistake: For the difference betwixt the law and the gospel is not so much (if at all) in this, that the law requires more than the gospel; but that it requires what it calls for, on another certification. The law and the gospel agree in these three; 1. The gospel requires holines in as large an extent as the law; so that whatever is a fin against the law, is also a fin against the gospel; for Christ came not to abolish, but to fulfil the law. 2. It requires holiness at the same pitch, or in the same degree; for the gospel commands us to be holy as God is holy, and to be perfest as our beavenly Father is perfest : It dispenseth with no fin, nor with any degree of any fin, nor with the least omission of any duty, more than doth the law. 3. The

h3. The authority and obligation, that lies on, and binds to holinels, is no less in the gospel, than it is in the law; yea, we may say, that the obligation is in some respecting greater.

But they differ in these three; 1. That the gospel taketh in the penitent, tho he hath not been perfect and exact. and gives him pardon thro' Christ: Which the law doth not. 2. The gospel calleth for duty in the strength of . Chrift, and furnisheth strength for duty: But the law now furnisherh no strength, but only supposeth it; it only giveth out the word of command, requiring of men that they walk in the Brength which they had once in Adam. So that, tho' the authority and obligation be the same, yet the manner and certification is not the same. If there be any breach or failing, the law lays, Thou shalt certainly die: But the gospel (as I said) admits of repentance, and Beeing to Jefus Christ, who took on him the curfe of the law. 3. The law accepts of no duty, if it be not exactly perfect in the degree: But the gospel accepts of duty, tho imperfect, if there be sincerity; it accepts, on Christ's account, of a man, according to that which be bath, if there be a willing mind So then, when ye are called to walk as becomes the gofpel, ye would know that ye are not to dispense with yourselves, in the least, in any duty that the law calleth for; tho' the gospel doth indeed more sweet. ly call for it, its exactors and officers being peace and righteoufness: It is the same holiness in the matter, extent and degree, which the gospel calleth for, with that of the law: tho' it much differeth as to the manner of calling for it.

Secondly, That we may know what is called for in the gospel, as a walk or conversation becoming the same, and so may yet further know the nature of gospel-holiness, (which was the second thing we proposed to speak to) ye would consider the gospel, as it is distinguished from the law, and as it holds out grace: Where we would speak, 1. Of some qualifications, that the gospel addeth, as to the performance of the same duties which the law requires. 2. Of some particular duties which it doth more especially call for, and which were not (severals of them, at least) so proper to the law.

As for the qualifications of duty, which the gospel addeth, they are thefe: (1.) A new end; for our end in duty now is, not to gain life by it, but fimply to glorify God, as we may see, I Cor. 10. 21. I will not say but this end was in the covenant of works; but in the gospel this is not only the main end, but some way the only end, and the other quite excluded and thrust out; and, when we speak of the glory of God, we take in the glory of grace, and the glory of the Redeemer, who furnisheth grace. (2.) It adds a sweet motive, viz. love to Jesus Christ; The love of Christ (faith the apostle, 2 Cor. 5. 14.) constraineth us: It is no more mere awe, that is the motive; but love, and love to God in Christ, who hath redeemed and bought us. 3. The gospel qualifies our obedience and walk, as to our undertaking thereof; that it be not in our own strength, but in the strength of Jesus Christ: It teacheth us to go through the wilderness leaning on the Beloved, and leaving the burden of the work on him; trusting more to him, than to our own feet or firength, as knowing that we cannot cripple out the way, nor do any thing without him, as it is, John 15. 5. (4.) There is a qualification required in respect of the frame of our own heart, with respect to a twofold fear: One is a falial and reverential fear, that proceeds from faith, in which we are to work out the work of our salvation; the other is, that it be without the sear that is opposite to the former, as the word is, Luke 1. 74. The gospel calleth us, in our walk, to have a fear without fear: a reverential fear without flavish fear: It would have us neither to be altogether afraid because of the law, which hath terror; nor to be without filial fear, for that is prefumption: but to have faith and fear mixed together-(5) The golpel qualifies our walk in spiritual duries, is respect of cheerfulness in going about them, which are to us (in fo far' as we have corruption in us) heavy and grievous; but the gospel maketh them easy and light, as it is faid, Matth. 11. ult. His yoke is eafy, and his burden light. The it be a yoke, yet it is portable and light, when Christ and the believer are yoked together; nor are any of bis commands grievous, as it is, I John 5. 3. (6.) Tho' the gospel call for holiness, yet it makes the person to be denied to it: It is a gospel walk, to be holy;

but it takes in that with it which we have, Phil. 3. to forget those things that are behind, to be denied and dead to all our attainments, and to count all but loss and dung for Christ. It was indeed a law-walk, to be hiameless; but it is a gospel walk, to study to be blameless, and pressing hard after perfect holiness, and yet to forget it, and to be denied to all conceit of it; and to be defirous to be found in Christ Jesus, not having our own righteousness which is by the law, but the righteousness which is ty faith.

As for the particular duties, at least some of the duties. that are more particularly called for in this walk and conversation becoming the gospel; ye may take these shortly. The first whereot is, Aliving by faith; and that is, when a Christian hath faith, and the exercise of it on Christ, as it were another life to him: For tho' there was a life of faith, or of dependence on God, in Adam before the fall; yet not the life of faith in a Redeemer: I live (faith the apostle, Gal. 2. 20.) yet not I, but Christ liveth in me; and the life that now I live in the sless, is by faith on the son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me. And this is to be taken along the Christian's walk, even a continued application to and of Christ: This is that which he first betakes non to and of Christ: I his is that which he first betakes himself to, for righteousness; yea, when right, he employs him constantly, as be is made of God to him wisdom, righteousness, santisfication and redemption, as he is said to be made to believers, I Cor. 1.30. The second is, The exercise of repentance, which was not called for as a duty by the law, tho' much ruin followed the breach of it: This was the sum of John's and of Christ's preaching; Re-pent, for the kingdom of beaven is at hand. Tho' it be, alas! a very much slighted exercise, yet daily repentance notably fuiteth a conversation becoming the gospel. 3dly, A gospel-conversation would be in and with the exercise of hope. There was love to God under the law, but not so properly the exercise of hope; there was, it is true, hope in respect of the thing promised, in case there had been no violation of the law; but not as respecting Christ Jesus, who is the believer's hope, Col. 1. 27. Christ in you the tope of glory. I doubt much if the exercise of hope be well known to Christians in this generation; few known what it is to bope to the end, as Peter exhorts, 1 Pet. 1. 13. A fourth įş, is, The denial of ourselves, and the exercise of humilia ty; for as the gospel calleth for the denying of our own righteoulnels, so for the denying of our own wills, affections, lufts, appetites, and defires. There is another fort of love-fingleness and deniedness called for now, than under the law; because we are bought with a price, and are not our own, as it is, I Cor. 6. 20. If any man will follows me, let him deny bimself, faith our Lord, Matth. 16. A. fifth is, Much morrification, that we be crucified to the world, to ourfelf, and to our finful lufts; I ans crucified (faith Paul, Gal. 2.) with Chrift, yet I live. So, Chap. 6, he tells us, that he was crucified to the world, and the world to bim : And he exhorts Christians, Col. 3. 5. to mortify their members which are upon the earth; fornication, uncleanmess, inordinate affection, covetousness, &cc. A fixth is, Much patience, meekness, forbearance, long-suffering, wherein our Lord hath given and left himself for a none-such Pattern, Matth. 11 29. Learn (saith he) of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart. So, 1 Pet. 2. 21, 22. And hence, meeknets, patience and for bearance are so much and so frequently called for in the gospel, and on gospel grounds, as great duties becoming the gotpel, or as special pieces of a gospel-conversation. The seventh is, A heavenliness in our conversation, a deniedness, a holy abstractness from earthly things, and living in heaven, while on earth; and a living more where we love, than where we live: If ye be rifen with Chrift, (laith the apostle, Col. 3. 1.) fet your affections on things above, not on things on the earth; Which is also called for, Philip. 3. 20. by his own example proposed for our pattern, Our conversation (saith he) is in beaven, whence we look for the Saviour. To be much in our affections fet on the things that are on the earth, to be earthly-minded, is unbecoming the gospel. An eighth is, A great eye on eternity; an eye, whose looks are not bounded within time, but pierce thorow time; and all the fogs, mists, and clouds that are in it. 'Tis much unbeming the gospel, to have our hope much (not to say, only) in this life, or to be much taken up about the driving of earthly defigns and projects; but it is a good qualification of a gospel-conversation, to have an eye before us on eternal life, 2 Cor. 4. ult. While (faith the spottle) we look not on the things that are feen, but on the things that are not feen, and eternal. A ninth is, Much joy in God, much cheerfulness and heartsomness; therefore believers are willed to rejoice alway and evermore. So, 1 Theff. 5. Rejoice evermore; and, Philip. 4. 4. Rejoice in the Lord alway, and again, I fay, rejoice; which he so much presses on them, because (as it is like) he knew that they were given to walk droopingly and heavily, which did not so become the gospel, as rejoicing in God, finging and making melody in their hearts to him, cheering themselves in him, and delighting themselves in the Almighty. A tenth is, Spiritual contentment. A contented conversation is a conversation become ing the gospel: Be careful for nothing (faith the apolitie, Phil. 4. 6.) but in every thing let your requests be made known unto God, by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving. And then follows downward a little, I bave learned in every flase or case to be content : I know bow to suffer want, and bow to abound, &c. This conversation was very becoming the gospel; he proposes himself as a pattern herein to them. There are many professors of religion, who cannot have but they are vain; and, when they want, they are anxious and discouraged; his hard to carry the cup even : But a golpel-convertation is equal, fober and composed, and not much up with having, nor much down with want; nor is it eafily outwitted and nonplussed by the vicissitudes of those external things. An eleventh is, Watchfulness. A gospel-conversation is a watchful conversation, and never much furprifed or moved: Or thus, Watching (especially over the heart) joined with prayer, is a peculiar duty, that a walk becoming the gospel calls for, that we be not found like the flothful servant, when his lord cometh. This is a duty well-becor ng us who live under the gospel, because we have readily stronger corruptions, and are at least under more temptations, than those who lived under the law. A tevelfib is, Much self-examination or self-searching, because of much corruption in us, and much guilt lying on us, is a duty which the gospel calls for; that we may fee what comes of it, how it is mortified and done away's And, there being many promises in our offer, we should see what acceptation they get, and how they are embraced; there is hazard of mistaking our spiritual state, &c. All which

which calls us to be much in this duty, Examine your felves, prove your own felves, as fays the apostle, 2 Cor. 12.5. 13thly, The making of our calling and election sure, becomes the gospel. When we are hovering, and at an uncertainty as to our foul's estate, we are not only to try it, but to endeavour to put it out of question; I write these things to you (fays John, I John 5. 13.) that believe, that ye may know shat ye bave eternal life. Ye would not only believe, but fludy to know that ye believe, that ye may comfort your-Selves in it: And it is a piece of a conversation and walk unbecoming the gospel, to hang loose in suspense, and at an uncertainty, in that greatest and gravest business. 14thly, Trusting in God, becomes the gospel; and unbelief and distrust of God, is unbecoming the gospel. Said I not unto thee (faith the Lord to Martha, John 11.) That if thou winiast believe, thou shouldst see the glory of God? To have a gracious offer from God, and to scar at it, as if he were not in earnest, is very unbecoming the gospel: Whenever he pipeth, it becomes us well to dance; and to believe and credit him, when he speaks fair and comfortably. 15thly, A gospel-conversation takes in, and calls for, not only holiness, but a shining exemplary holiness, holiness with a divine luftre and splendor on it. Merely legal holiness is dim and dark, and hath little or no lustre; therefore believers are called children of the light and of the day; and they are said to sbine as lights, in the midst of a crooked generation. It is not only a conversation not spotted, or that is something well-favoured; but such a conversation, that is well-lyned (to speak so) within, with the imputed righteousness of Christ, and much inherent grace and holiness, and with outward self-denied visible splendor and glory: Let your light (faith the Lord, Matth. 5) fo shine ber fore men, &c. Even as the glory of his body, when he was transfigured on the mount, made his clothes to shine; so there is something of grace within, that makes the external actions and carriage of believers to shine: And words that will be very tasteless and sapless from others, tho' for the matter good, will have another fort of relish and weight from them; and prayer from their mouth will have another fort of refreshful sweetness. 16thly, A gospel-

85 oblige to a Gospel-Conversation. conversation takes in, and calls for, much joy in affliction and tribulation; We rejoice in tribulation, saith the apostle: It will make the Christian take joyfully the spoiling of his goods, as they did, Heb. 10. 34. It will make men come from the presence of councils, rejoicing, that they are accounted worthy to suffer for the name of Christ, as it did the apostles, Alls 5. latt. My bretbren (fays Fames) count it all joy, when ye fall into divers temptations, or tribulations : It makes pleasant and heartsom bearing of crosses from God, and of injuries from men; it makes the Christian stoop humbly and very low to these; it will not suffer him to render evil for evil, but well put him to do good for evil, and it makes him do it on a gospel-ground and account; because Christ frankly forgave the Christian ten thousand talents of his debt, he is ready to forgive an bundred pence of petty and inconfiderable injuries done against him. 17thly, A gospel-conversation is a sweet, quiet, peaceable, wellhumoured conversation: It makes men and women good to live with; it hath much love and pity to them that are without; it is a good neighbour; it is a great friend to unity, and a great enemy to division: It presses hard after standing fast in one spirit. 18thly, A gospel-conversation implies a fettled fixed condition, that is not fleeting and wavering; it suffers not Christians to be one thing to-day, and another thing to-morrow, very unbecoming the gospel: A gospel-conversation will not suffer a man to be a temporizer, or one that cometh and goeth with every turn of the tide, to be of any party that is upmost; but puts to stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ bath made bim free. The believer's heart is fixed, and his conversation is stable. when it is as it becometh the gospel. 19thly, It is a bold convertation, that will scar at no trial for Christ, but will hazard and venture far, ere it expose the gospel to contempt and reproach; therefore it is faid, Philip. 1. In nothing being terrified by your adversaries: It is very loth to do or to forbear any thing, that may make the gospel to be evil spoken of. 20thly, It is a spiritual conversation, or a walking in the Spirit, as the word is, Gal. 5. Walk in the Spirit (faith the apostle) and ye shall not fulfil the lufts of the flesh. And, v. 25. If we live in the Spirit, let us walk in the Spirit. It makes us to pray in the Spirit, to praise in the Spirit; and, by affiltance of the Spirit, it puts upon endeavours to do every thing that is called for. 21 fly, A gospel-conversation is a wrestling and fighting conversation, striving and warring against temptations without, and a body of death within. A lazy, secure, whole-hearted conversation, when a person is lying by, and is not ferting himself against, nor purifying himself from all filthiness of the slesh and spirit, but at truce with corruption, is not (fure) becoming the gospel: Hence the apostle, Rom. 7. harb such a combate with the remainder of indwelling corruption, fometimes complaining of, sometimes protesting against it, and sometimes bitterly bemoaning and crying out under its captivating power: There being in the believer two contrary parties, one of grace, and another of corrupt nature, which are contrary one to another, as it is, Gal. 5. 17. a believer, in a gotpel-conversation, is like Jacob's and Efau's struggling in the womh: It is for this cause that, Egb. 6. all the pieces of the spiritual armour are particularly described, and Christians, as Christ's soldiers, commanded to put them. on; and to have a gospel-conversation, is to be improving all the pieces of that compleat armour of God aright, to their several ends.

These are things (and such others) that are particularly called for in a gospel-walk and conversation: And if we would take a little view of them altogether, and gather the meaning of this use of instruction from the exhortation. Let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ; the sum of it may be briefly given in these four, 1. To be exactly fludying holiness. 2. To be denied to our holiness, as Paul was, Philip. 3. 3. To be especially taken up with those particular duties, of living by faith, of exercifing repentance, of aiming at, and chofly purfuing after communion with God in Christ Jesus; (which is, tho a much abused duty, and unworthily prostituted in the mouths of many, a most precious both duty and privilege) exercifing hope, felf-denial, & fo that we may be in case warrantably to say with the apostle, I John 1: 14. Truly our fellow ship is with the Father, and with his Som Fefus Christ. 4. To be much in the exercise of all these heartformly and cheerfully; and to be comforted and refre-

Thed in doing dury, and yet denied to all our doing. A Christian, having a fuitable conversation to the gospel, sees his ills, and is fiumbled; observes God's goodness, and comforts himself, and blesses God heartily for his goodness in respect of both, and because there is hope of an outgate from all his evils, and a day coming when he shall be simply and fully redeemed from all his iniquities.

The fecond nife leads us to regret and exposulate with hearers and professors of the gospel, of this time. Tho this be the thing, and the only thing, that they are called to; yet, if we should go thorow and view the conversation of the most part, O how very unsuitable, and unbecoming is it to the gospel! even so very unsuitable, that, if our hearts were tender, they would break and bleed within us to-behold it. But, alas! it is a part of our unsuitableness, that we cannot suitably lament it: Little zeal for God, and forrow for what dishonours him and reflects on the profession of his name, are much gone from this generation. Oh! whither shall we go, into the city or country, to find a conversation becoming the gospel? We cannot be without some conviction, that we ought to be zealous for the glory of God, and serious in the study of holiness in all manner of convertation, that the gospel be not reproached and blafphemed: If we be fo, and if fuch a conversation be a duty, and a very reasonable duty, how comes it to be so little minded and made conscience of? If we profels Christ to be our Husband and Head, our Captain and Leader, ought we not to be like him, and follow him? I take it for granted, that this will be generally affented to, m being very just and reasonable; and yer, without accomplishing a very diligent search into our own way, may we not find, at the first view, much, very lamentably much unfuitableness in our walk to the gospel? Need we defeend to particulars? is not our unsuitableness obvious, palpable and undeniable! Let me but ask ourselves a few questions: Are we making suitable use of the promises, and often meditating on them? are we taken up with delighting outselves in God, and in the great and excellent things contained in the promifes? do we study to be like them, and fuitably to improve them? do we fludy to have those poor performances of duty that we go about, so qualified as the gospel calls for? The lifelesness and wholeheartedness, that manifestly discover themselves in our very hearing of these things, declare much what we are Your ministers are some way perplexed and puzzled how to deal with you, and know not well whether to speak or to be filent, whether to pipe or to mourn. What fuitableness is there to the gospel, when the conversation of many is so spotted? So far, alas! are we from shining, that we are rather like blind lanterns without light. I shall only, for whetting an edge on this regret and expostulation, instance in a few of these particulars touched on before, as to our suitableness to the gospel. (1.) Do we live by faith? Alas! is there such a life as this known by most of us ? We are readily either living securely; carelelly and unconcernedly, without troubling ourselves with such matters; or elfe, on the other hand, we give way to unbelief, and will hardly admit of any thing that may fettle and make us foot a fland: We are found often running from one extremity to another; we are either carnally vain, light and frothy, or we are anxious, heartless and dejected, and are very seldom found steering a straight course betwixt extremes, and stemming the port. (2.) We may instance it in the exercise of repentance, which well becomes the gospel: Our Lord Christ, John the Baptist and the apostles preached it, and 'tis commended to all'; 'tis an exercise very suitable and proper for sinners, and more especially for fuch finners as bave had many offers of grace, and have much flighted them: But where is it? ah! where is it? Converts are rare in these days, and among converts the kindly excercise of repentance is rare; we are generally as whole-hearted, as if we were living under the covenant, where there is no promise of pardon to a penitent finner. I mean not every fort of repentance, for there is a worldly forrow that works death; there is a legal repentance, arising mainly, if not only, from the fear of punishment: But I mean of serious and hearty gospel-repentance, arising from the confideration of God's holiness, and of his mercy and grace in Jesus Christ, that is accompanied with holy zeal, fear, indignation and revenge, as it is described, 2 Cor. 7. (3.) Where is self-denial? Is not thar

that a rare thing? Many of us cannot bear a word reflecting on felf, neither can we quit a word once uttered by us (tho' it may be somewhat rashly and unadvisedly) wherein felf is concerned, but will needs maintain and defend it : O what reeling and whirling-about with the time is there amoug us? What hard pursuing after, and even chaling of felf-interefts and designs? (4.) Where is spiritual joy and rejoicing in the Lord? who delight themselves in the Almighty? who bless themselves on earth, in the God of truth? who do really and humbly boaft in him all the day long? who bless themselves in, and think themselves well come to, with precious Jesus Christ as their Mediator and Redeemer, astheir Lord, Head, and Husband? who rejoice and glory in the midft of tribulation, in the hope of the glory of God? Jay in external things is much withered away from us, and it is just with God that it should be so, since we live so great strangers to the joy of the Lord, which is our firength: Upon but a very overly trial, we will eafily discover, that there's amongst us none, ... or but very little, spiritual joy in God; I mean not only, nor so much of sensible joy, as of our little active stirring up of ourselves to give obedience to that command concerning rejoicing in God alway and evermore. May I not conclude then, that there is great ground of expoliulation with us all, both believers and others, who may be convinced, that this lieth indispensibly on them, even to have a conversation as it becomes the gospel of Christ? ah, how little conscience is made of it! O mourn for and lament our shortcomings, as to this; and fall to the work, fall about it more than ever, as your main business, to have a conversation becoming the gospel. Many already are a reproach and a shame to the gospel, (and it will disclaim them) and, who shall live to see it, a great many mo will be so: Alas! few or none of us all have a conversation as becomes the gospel; which is a lamentation, and should be for a lamentation.

The Ibird use is of exbortation, That seeing such a converfation is so much, and with such speciality called for, and yet so little seriously endeavoured by most; let me turn over to you the apostle's exhortation to the Philippians 2 If ye would know how to behave at home and abroad, in the duties of worthip, and in the duties of your parties. der callings, flations until relations, even in all commanded duties; then, Only let your conversation be as it hecometh the go/pel of Chrift, and beware of doing any thing that is unbecoming the gospel, or that may give ground to speak any ill of it; beware of letting the precious promises ly by you unimproved, but fludy to be like them: O fludy hostiness in all manner of conversation; which is not only and simply to be holy, or to have holiness, but a holiness influenced by the gothel-promites in Christ, believingly improved, as the apostic exhorts, 2 Gor. 7. 1. Not only to be externally holy, but to be in the exercise of the graces of the Spirit within; to cleanic from all filthiness of the spirit as well as of the flesh, especially to purify the heart, the fountain of pollution; even to fludy to be pure as he is pure; to aim at holiness in the strength of Christ, in the largest extent and in the highest pitch, and yet to be denied to it, and all vain conceit of it; even to account it but loss, in the point of justification before God; to be in the practice of all the duties of religion sweetly, pleasantly, heartformly and cheerfully, walking under all forts of lots with a guspel-contentedness: This, O! this would be a converfation worthy of, and becoming the gospel; nay, it would make a little heaven on earth. And we defire to be as pressing and peremptory in calling for this from you. as ever we urgently welled you by any call or invitation so receive the offer of the gospel, and of Christ therein; and if we were to speak to you all, O men and women, one by one, by name and firname, this would be our exhortation to you, Only let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ.

We come now (as we promifed) to press this on you by some few Confiderations: And, I. Consider the authority that enjoins it, and lays it on you; and it ye trust him, and expect the accomplishment of any promise of the gospel from him, then take this as proceeding from the same authority: Presume not, under the pain of God's displeasure, and of cheating your own souls to their ruin, to take or meddle with the promise, if ye mind not fine cerely to study a suitableness in your conversation to the gospel. 2. Consider, not only the reasonableness of the thing.

thing, but also the sweet eafiness of it; for, taking it in a gospel-fense, 'ris an easy yoke and a light burden: And ris withal very suitable and congruous to all professor the gofpel; Ought not a minister to be like his calling, a merchant to be like his calling, a tradefman to be like his trade and calling? Ought not also a Christian to be like his Christian calling, like the gospel which he profesfeth? 3. Confider the tyes and obligations, that all who profess to have received the gospel, are under: Are ve not obliged to such a conversation, by your baptismal tow? Which obligation, the many of you forget, yet God will require it. Think ye that ye are free to live as ye lift, to live like the gospel or not, or to take one piece of a gospel-walk, and leave another? Ye are professedly refigned to God in baptism, and are by it obliged to live every way as it becometh the golpel; and ye must either on the matter renounce your baptism and deny Christ. and to deal treacheroully with him, or ye must make it your business to live like the gospel. 4. Consider, that this gospel will be the rule whereby ye shall be judged, whether ye have indeed received the Mediator, the promifes and privileges, the duties and directions, and the graces of it, and improved them, or not; In the day (faith the apostle, Rom. 2.) that God shall judge the secrets of bearts by my gospel. If ye would have boldness when death and judgment come, endeavour a convertation becoming this gospel: Tho' your conversation were very much becoming the law (as it is impossible now without goldelgrace) yet will not that fatisfy the Judge; for ye will be judged both by the law and gospel: 5. Confider, that, tho' the Lord had required many hard things of you, you would most certainly have been obliged to have performed them; and now, when he requires only this, oughe ye not so much the more to aim at it, and endeavour it? Otherwise ye bring up an ill report on this gospel, as if it were an unsupportable heavy burden, and most uneasy yoke; for which ye must answer at your peril. Consider the dreadful doom and fentence of the flothful fervant, Who faid, He is a bard mafter. 6. Consider the great prejudice that a walk unbecoming the gospel bath with it. I cannot easily, nay not at all to thesfull, tell you the prejudice

judice it will bring to you; only this I will say, that it had been better for you that ye had never heard the gospel; it had been better that ye never had been piped to by the gospet, and that ye had never heard any of its sweetest musick springs, if (to follow the Lord's own similarude so far) ye endeavour not to keep all the measures thereof in your dancing after it, in your walking conform to it. Tell me, if we may be in earnest with you, what if ye were called even now or before night to give an account of your improving of and profiting by the gospel, whereof ye have so very much, and from which ye have been so often piped unto, how utterly unanswerable would many of you be found to be? Your trifling way of walking alone and in your families, your neglecting of prayer in them, with the chiding and bitterness betwint husbands and wives, and with and amongst fervants; your omitting to instruct children and servants in the principles of religion; your tippling and mif-spending your time, declare sufficiently what your conversation is. If any of you shall say, The conversation that you press, is a harder work and a more difficult task than we can win at; Is it any thing else, than what the Holy Ghost by the apostle presfeth on all the hearers of the gospel? O! take heed of branding a walk becoming the gospel with so black a note. as if it were an unsupportable yoke of intolerable hard bondage, left it be faid to you, Evil and flothful fervants, &c. If ye had been ferious and diligent in making use of the gospel in a gospel-way, by improving Christ and the promises, this work would have gone better with you, and ye had been in much better case than ye are in now: If ye had been more in the practice of gospel-duties, and in the exercise of gospel-graces in secret, your visible conversation might and would have been much more as it becometh the gospel.

As for you that have communicate, there is a peculiar tye upon you: You have renewed your covenant with God, and is there any covenanting with God, but it hath this in it, That, if there be thereafter a falling-back, such backfliders come under the guilt of treacherous dealing with him? Let me, for a conclusion of this discourse, say these few things to you; I. Is it suitable, think ye, to fast the

one day for your not walking as it becometh the gospel, and to take unjust liberty to yourselves the next day? on a fast-day to spue out your foul and abominable fins, and to return with the dog to the vomit in a few days thereafter? will ye be so unsuitable to your protessions and confessions? Beware of that, for the Lord's sake; better ye had never fasted nor confessed, than thus to mock the Lord. 2. Many of you have been at the facrament of the Lord's Supper, and in it ye have professed that ye have taken Christ for your Husband, which implies the tye and obligation of a dutiful wife: What, I pray, is that, but to bave a conversation as becometh the gospel, and to walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called? as the apostle exhorts, Epb. 4. 1. And is there any straiter bond on earth whereby men can be bound? If, after thus covenanting with Christ, ye shall foully fail or fall back, will it not exceedingly aggrege your guilt? 3. Are there not of you who have come under fome private engagements to the Lord? I take it for granted, if ye have not been scorning God in your humiliation, and in your communicating; I take it (I say) for granted, that severals of you have come under particular and personal engagements to God: If so, ye would beware of loofing those tyes, and of violating those so solemn engagements; and the rather, that it is to he feared, if ye keep not promise to God now, ye may never get a communion again to renew it. 4. I would have some of you remembring of those particular obligations ye came under; and promises that you made to us, when you received your tokens, to amend those faults whereof ye were well known to be guilty; Most certainly those promises, especially so explicitely made, will bear witness against you, if those evils be continued in, or relapsed into; and we shall bear witness for Christ against you, if ye shall not be answerable to your engagements: For the Lord's sake, put us not to it,

Essay in good earnest, and set about the study of this gospel-becoming conversation: I shall forbear to speak of encouragements to this. It will be one good encouragement, to consider seriously, that it is a walk becoming the gospel and Christ in it; that it hath such promises made to it, and such a Surety for every promise; that the certification of the law is not at it; that ye have pardon of fin promised to you on your repentance, and furniture at hand for every thing called for from you. Take it in short, whatever your calling, station or relation be, Only let your conversation be as becometh the gospel of Christ: And remember the tyes and obligations that ye are under, whether more general or more particular; otherwise they shall be remembed to, and against you. Now, the Lord himself enable you, by his all-sufficient grace, to suit all your obligations, to pay all your vows, and to make all your honest resolutions practicable, relating to this Conversation becoming the gospel of Christ.

A very heavenly SERMON,

Preached, if not after the communion, yet very pertinent for such an occasion (however it is subjoined to the immediately preceeding, because of the affinity of purposes)

On Philip. 3. 20. For our Conversation is in Heaven.

than, for the most part, it is taken to be; and, no question, were we often thinking on, and studying the qualifications and extent of a Christian conversation, to which believers are called, we would walk with stopped mouths, in the deep sense of our great shortcoming, and there would not be such delusion under the conceit of self-righteousness: But the ignorance of this, makes carnal men think themselves to be something; and makes even believers themselves, that they walk not so humbly, nor press so seriously towards the mark; neither do they propose to themselves, as they ought, a just and perfect pattern to follow.

Amongst other qualifications of a Christian walk and conversation, this is one, and a very considerable one, That our conversation should be in beaven: A thing we fear the most part of the Christians of this age scarcely believe, much less endeavour, that they should live with their hearts above in heaven, in the lively expectation of the Saviour's

Saviour's coming; that they should converse in heaven among the spirits of just men made perfect, before they come thither.

Ç

The scope of these words is plain. The apostle Paul hath to do with the Christian Philippians, who were much tempred, and, no doubt, in some hazard to be led aside both from the faith and from the practice of religion; and the way that he takes to keep them right as to both, is by proposing his own example to them: As if he had faid, Ye will readily think, that I should be well acquainted with the way to heaven; now, the way that I take for my justification before God, is not to feek after righteausness by the works of the law, but to be found in Christ covered with his righteousness taken hold of by faith: And, if ye would know what I do in reference to fanctification, this is it, I forget those things that are bebind, and reach forth unto those things that are before. preffing towards the mark, for the prize; being constantly, as it were, on the spur, that I may attain that which I have not as yet come at, even that perfection of holiness, that accompanies the resurrection from the dead. And having laid this before them, as a fair copy and pattern; he improves it, by exhorting them thus, Bretbren, be ye followers together of me; take the way that I take, both in the matter of faith and of practice: And he gives two reasons why he would have them to do so; the first whereof is taken from the danger that was in following those false teachers. ver. 18, 19. Many of whom walk fo, as they are enemies to the cross of Christ, that is, enemies to the doctrine of faith in Christ, and to the exercise of it on him, and to the doctrine of his cross, and also to a truly spiritual walk, whose end is defirnation, and whose god is their belly. The fecond reason is subjoined in the text, drawn from the great advantage which they should have by following him: For (faith he) our conversation is in beaven: This is the spiritual, heavenly and divine walk, wherein he holds forth himself and his fellow-aposties as a pattern to be imitated by them, and so teacheth them their duty. We are not (as if he had faid) like these false teachers, But our conversation is in beaven; therefore follow us, And he gives an instance of this in the latter part of the verfe,

The Necessity and Excellency

From whence (faith he) we look for the Saviour: He is like a person on the watch-tower, that is looking and longing for the coming of a friend; plainly infinuating thereby, that he looks not for much satisfaction in this world, but was earnestly longing for, and in continual expectation of Christ's coming; to which all his hope and expectation of compleat happiness, and of sull satisfaction to his soul, was closely confined.

So then, the great thing that he aims at here, is to commend a heavenly conversation to these Christian Philippians, and to all that should hear the gotpel, and this excellent piece of it amongst the rest.

There are only tow things shortly to be cleared, before we proceed further; the first is, What is meaned by conwerfation here? And the reason of the question is, because the word is so, very fignificant in the original, that hardly can we get a word in our language to express it by to the life; 'tis taken from that which fignifies a township, corporationship (to speak so) or burgesship: And it implies these two things; 1/1, A title to such and such privileges; as those who were Romans, or born citizens of Rome, and whoever were made burgesses of it, had such and such privileges attending their burgesship. The 2d is a suitableness and peculiar manner of living and carrying according to the laws of that city; as it is often faid in the book of the Alls of the apostles, After the manner of the Romans, who had their own laws, customs, and usages: And, being applied here in a spiritual sense, it supposes, 1. A joint interest with the faints, (or being fellow-citizens with the faints; as it is, Eph. 2 19) who are all burgeffes of the heavenly Ferusalem: Tho some of them be, as it were, in the suburbs and lower town, and some in the higher; yet all here below have the same Master and Father with them who are above in heaven, 2. It supposeth a way, walk, and conversation like heaven; to be peculiarly indowed with a nature, inclinations, defires, defigns, and qualifications fuitable to heaven. it here, especially in the latter sense, because Paul proposerh himself as a pattern to them to intimate; and it holds out his suitableness to heaven.

The fecond thing to be cleared a little is, What it is to have a conversation in heaven. I answer, These two are in effect one and the same, to have a conversation in heaven, and to be heavenly in our conversation: Tis event to have a conversation like that which Christians hope to have in heaven, and such as are bounden, and on their way thitherward, should have. This is a general hint of what a heavenly conversation or a conversation in heaven; is; and because, in prosecuting the doctrines to be deduced from the words; we will have occasion to explain it more particularly, we shall say no more of it now.

The Dottrines that arise from the words are especially these four; the first whereof is, That there is a fort of beavenlines in the conversation of Christians, that should be studied by them all without exception, and that lieth on them all as their duty.

The fecond is, That this beavenline's of convertation is in a great measure thro' grace attainable; For Paul and other believers attained it. Which is not so to be understood, as if there were an universal suitableness, or a suitableness in all things, in sojourning saints, to glorified saints in heaven; for in heaven they do not eat nor drink, neither are they married nor given in marriage: But 'tis to be understood of a suitableness in respect of qualification, conformity and likeness, in so far as is incumbent to sojourners who are walking thitherward.

The third is, I hat it is a peculiar and contradiftinguishing mark of a serious and suitably exercised Christian, front all other men in the world, That his conversation is in heaven.

while that, of others is not.

The fourth is, That 'tis not an ordinary and common, but' a rare thing among professed Christians, to have a conversation in heaven. Many (lays the apostle) walk, of whom I have told you, and now tell you weeping, that they are enemies to the cross of Christ; But I and some tew others with me have our conversation in heaven! And the many, that he speaks of here, we take to be those, of whom he speaks in the first Chapter, who preached Christ, but out of envy, and pressed holiness (it is like) with more than ordinary servour, being zealous of the law, and seeking to mix the righteousness of it with the righteousness of Christ in the point of justification; yet they had not their conversation in heaven, as he and fome others had.

We shall not prosecute these doctrines distinctly, seeing this is the scope of them all, even to hold forth and commend the necessity and excellency of a heavenly conversation; which we shall, 1. Clear; 2. Confirm; and then, 2. We shall speak to the Us of it.

First then, for clearing what a heavenly conversation is, Ye would confider, that the apostle speaks of his own and of some few other godly persons their conversation, in opposition to those many mentioned by him before: And it imports or implies these four; 1. 'Tis to have heaven proposed to ourselves as our great scope and defign, next to the glory of God: Even as, to have an earthly conversation, is to mind earthly things, to have a bentness of spirit towards them, and to be wholly or mostly taken up about the things of the world; so, to be heavenly in our conversation, is to have the mind taken up about heaven, prizing, affecting and seeking after heaven and heavenly things, as the word is, Col. 3. 1. Seek after, or fet your affections on those things that are above. 2. As it imports prizing and affecting of heaven, and of heavenly things; to it imports the taking of that way that leads to the end: And so it is, to be in the use of all means and duties that lead to heaven; Seek (faith the apostle, in that Col. 3. 1.) bole things that are above : Set your affections on things above, not on things beneath, or on the earth; To hold forth the earnestness and ardency of affections that Christians ought_ to have towards things beavenly, and how very much they should be, with holy care and folicitude, busied in the use of all means, and in the practice of all duties, for the furthering and promoting of an heavenly design: Even as worldly men are taken up and exercised with carking cares, leaving (as it were) no stone unmoved to promove and compass their earthly defigns. 3. It imports the having of our conversation like heaven, to be walking like those that are in heaven: Not to be conformed to the world, or like the men of the world, but to be like angels and glorified faints in heaven, according to our capacity; as we are taught to pray, in the Lord's Prayer, Thy will be done on earth, as it is done in beaven. "Tis to have a Dative native and kindly fuitableness and proportionableness to them that are glorified in heaven. 4. It imports this that we should be often in heaven as to our thoughts and affections, as to our defires and delights: Tho' we be living on the earth, that we should have, as it were, more than our one half in heaven; as David hath it, Pfal. 25. I. Unto thee, O Lord, do I lift up my foul; or, as the word is, 2 Cor. 5. Tho' we be absent in the body, that yet we may be someway present in our spirits with the Lord; that we should make frequent visits to heaven; that we should have much to do there, have much traffique, commerce, correspondence and intercourse in and with heaven; that (in a word) we should converse more where we love, than where we live; which is held forth and expressed in the scripture, by walking with God, by having fellowship with bim, by following bard after bim, and the like: A fuirableness to, and a converse in heaven, are mainly meant here.

As for the fecond thing proposed, viz. the Confirmation of this, that a Christian should study this heavenlines of conversation; The argument is clear and pressing from v. 17. where the apostle exhorts the Philippedus to be followers of bim, and here he tells them that bis conversation is in beaven's And if his conversation was in heaven, then certainly it was their duty, and is ours, to have our conversation in heaven; for he proposeth himself as our pattern in this, and we have it, from the Spirit of God, by him preffed on us as our duty, to imitate him in this thing. It is not so fingular a practice, as to be peculiarized; monopoliz'd and engroffed to him alone; but fuch as was common to him, and other serious Christians, according to their measure: Therefore he says nor, My conversation, but Our conversation; as if he had said, 'Tis mine, and the conversation of others, and of all that follow me; and I would have you in this to follow me, and none other that doth not walk as I do. If it be needful further to confirm it, ye may take this one reason, which hath several arguments in the bosom of it; A Christian's conversation should be heavenly, because all that a Christian hath? is from and in beaven, and is someway beavenly! As will manifelly appear, if ye look, 1. To a Christian's nature,

'tis from heaven; he is partaker of the divine nature, he is born of God, he is of the new Jerusalem; his Father is beavenly, as he is taught to pray, Our Father which art in beaven, or our beavenly Father; to point out, that as we have born the image of the earthly, so must we hear the image of the heavenly, as it is, 1 Cor. 15. 49. Where is the elder Brother? Is he not in the beavenly places? as the apostle tells us, Epb. 2. 6. His treasure is in beaven; his bope is in heaven; heaven is the city, the mansion, the rest whither he is travelling. Or, if, 2. Ye consider the believer's calling and his obligation: Thereby he is partaker of the beavenly calling; (as it is, Heb. 2. 1.) separated from the rest of the world, and therefore ought not to live as the world doth: He hath a heavenly law to walk by; he hath heavenly promises, to feed and live upon, and to comfort himself in; his happiness is heavenly, and all the duties that he is called to are so; of which this is the substance and sum, even to glorify God, and to seek to enjoy bim, and so to shine in his conversation, as others may be provoked to glorify God. Are not his prayers and praises heavenly? and can a believer possibly go aright about those, and not be heavenly? To be translated from darkness to light, to be a partaker of the sanctifying Spirit of God, to be a new creature, to have the Spirit of adoption, to have boldness of access to God, to be an heir and a joint beir with Christ, &cc. Are not these heavenly? Or, if, 3. We look to his company, is it not heavenly? We are come (saith the apostle, Heb. 12.) to God the Judge of all, to Tefms the Mediator of the new covenant, to the new Terusalem, (which taketh in all the faints in heaven, and the faints on earth) to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly of the first-born, and to the spirits of just men made perset. In a word, whatever we look to, whether to the believer's nature, or to his end, or to the rnle of his walk, or to the promises, or to his work and way wherein he is to go; all is heavenly: Is there not an obliging necessity on the believer, in respect of all these, to study to be heavenly in his conversation? which is the great thing that the apostle Paul presseth on you, and from these words is clearly pressed on all Christians. The Use are four; the first whereof serves for Instruction and Information to all that bear the Name of Christ. Know from this, what is the high pitch of holiness that ye are called to; it is even to be heavenly in your conversation. Are there not many who have much need to be instructed in this? who never walked under the conviction of the necessity of this as a duty; otherwise, were it possible that the most part of men and women. who are called Christians, and profess a hope of heaven, could or durst live as they do, some in prophanity, riotousness and gluttony; others in mere civility and moral honesty; and others in formality and hypocrify at the best? Let me ask you in good earnest, Are ye not convinced that this is a duty? or, do you think that Paul was scorning or complimenting, when he exhorts to follow him in this? or, is it possible that ye can enjoy so many heavenly privileges, or be to any purpose performing heavenly duties, except ye be heavenly in your conversation? And if so, mistake not Christianity, as if, when ye are exhorted to be Christians, ye were only bidden not to be prophane, or only to go about the external duties of religion, or only to have a fort of merely moral fincerity and feriousness in the performing of them; which are indeed things good in themselves, and we do not, we dare not disallow them. but rather commend them: But ye are called to more, to much more, and that is, to be beavenly-minded, and to have your conversation in beaven. I know some are so profane, and others are so misbelievingly discouraged, that, when they hear such doctrine as this, they will be ready, the one fort to fay, We cannot all be faints; and the other, Alas! we cannot be faints; But let all such mouths be stopped; ye are called and obliged indispensibly to be saints; and, if ye be not faints here, ye shall never be faints hereafter. There are also some of so distempered dispositions and humours, that they either put off all or most duties, or at least go very heartlessly about them, because they cannot attain perfection in them; but 'tis clear from the scriptures, that there is a kind of perfection to be win at here in this life, which is even this holiness and heavenliness of conversation: When ye shall be called to a reckoning. God will not ask you so much, whether ye did not drink drunk, whore, swear, lie, cheat, steal, or the like; as, whether ye were heavenly in your conversation? And this not to be affricted to one, or to some sew particular duties; but is the requisite qualification of a Christian in all duties, and in all his actions; whether he be praying, practising, hearing, reading, buying, selling, eating, drinking, &c. or whatever he do and be about, he is to be heavenly in all those. And if ye ask more particularly, What that is ? I shall shew you, in what respect a Christian may be said to have and should have his conversation in heaven. And, 1st, In respect of the inward holy frame and divine sett of his heart: He should be heavenly in that; free from those distempering passions, that the men of this world are subjected, nay, enflaved unto, and hurried with: He should not have his affections dragging on the earth, nor his delights nor defires taken up with things earthly; but he should be mortified unto, and weaned from all those things: He should not be like unto those who on all occasions are toffed with their humours, and with every wind of temptation; but he should be so calm, composed and sober, fettled and fixed in a heavenly temper of spirit, that words of reproach may not much trouble him, nor crosses and afflictions much disquiet him: He should have such composure and sedateness of spirit, that he may be much above the levity and unstayedness that the men of the world are under the power of: And he should endeayour to be defecate and purged from those impure mixtures of selfinterests, that are repugnant in worldly men. 2dly, In respect of his work, he should and may have his conversation in heaven, and that is, when he is much in the exercise of those graces, and in the practice of those duties, that he is to be taken up with in heaven; To be much in love to God, taken up with delighting in him, much in communion with God, holily impatient to want him or to live without his company: To be much in the study and fearching out of his perfections; to be studying to have the heart fixed, as it were a pillar in his house, and not to go out from him: To be much in admiring and adoring the free grace and love of God; and to be in a holy manner ravished with the contemplation of those: To be much in the work of prayer, and much in the work of praise, of a Conversation in Heaven. praise, saying, Worthy is the Lamb to receive glory, bonour, dominion, &c. joining with the four heafts and four and twenty elders, saying, Holy, boly, Lord God Almighty: To be much in prizing and valuing of God, in setting out and commending him; to be in all duties willing and cheerful, doing God's will cheerfully and with alacrity: To be much in longing for the sabbath to converse more closely with him; longing often for privacy and retirement to pour out the heart before him: And to do all this with holy covering to do it better, praying that his will may be done on earth, as it is done in beaven. 3dly, A believer may be said to have his conversation, and you are called to have yours in heaven, in respect of a heavenly walk, and as having a heavenly impress on all your conversation; to be walking as it were in heaven, and as if Holiness to the Lord were written on your forebeads: Which, being very comprehensive, takes in these; I. To have the heart fixed in meditating on God and his law, on spiritual and heavenly things; to have a sublime and divine strain of mind, not debasing itself to pursue vanities, but kept in a close and constant pursuit after communion with God, and conformity to him: To be in case to say with David, Pfal. 139. When I awake, I am fill with thee; labouring to leave the heart and mind in heaven when ye ly down, and seeking to find it there when ye arise. 2. To have your affections, love, desires and delights in heaven, or heavenly. 3. To have your words savouring of heaven, ministring grace to the bearers; endeavouring to have your words weighty and grave in the commendation of God and his grace. 4. To have your hearing of the word, and your praying, carrying much of a heavenly stamp and impression on them; hearing, as if God were speaking to you immediately from heaven; and praying, as if ye were even before his throne. 5. In your more common and ordinary conversation, as in your eating and drinking, in your recreating, and in following your lawful callings and employments, even the very coarfest and lowest of them, to propose to yourselves another end than the men of the world do, making that your main end to glorify God; and to have fuch a heavenly and divine way of going about thefe, as may be convincing, edifying and gaining of on-lookers: Not to be predominantly influenced by felfish humours, designs or interests, looking only, or mainly, to what may please or profit yourselves; but levelling all at the glory of God, and the edification and good of others, as well as your own. 4thly, We may be faid to have our conversation in heaven, when we have a holy a commerce and trading (as it were) with heaven: As a man is faid to converse in France or Spain, when he trades and traffiques there; fo, to have converse in heayen, is spiritually to traffique there: To have faith and hope exercised in and about heaven: To send many prayers and defires to heaven, as so many empty vessels; and to be in the lively and longing expectation of their return full and richly loaden: To make many visits (as I said before) to heaven; and to be in all those, neither seldom, nor transiently and at starts only, but to be frequent and more continuing in them: And tho' they should somesimes return either with seeming loss, or with yery little gain, yet to keep up the trade and traffique, feeking to make up our loss by a new voyage thither; for the trade is not always (to speak so) alike quick. stbly, We may be faid to converse in heaven, by our abiding (as it were) in heaven; and this is one of the highest steps of a heavenly conversation. If ye shall ask, How it is, that a believer, while on earth, doth or can abide in heaven? I answer, These ways, or in these respects; 1. By having his heart in heaven, where his treasure is; For (as the Lord fays) subere a man's, treasure is, there is his beart. The man (as it were) dwells there, and, if at any time he remove a little, he leaves there his great flock, and his heart as a factor; So, tho the Christian be discoursing, buying, selling, eating, drinking, &c. yet, in all these, his heart may and ought someway to be in heaven. To have his faith in heaven, and, as it were, never to come out of it. 2. To have his love in heaven, folding its two arms about the Lamb and him that fits on the throne; holily loth to have them loosed from those sweet soul-so-lacing and satisfying embraces. 4. To have his hope in heaven, which is an anchor cast within the vail, and makes the foul fafe and fure amidst the greatest tempests of outward trouble, as a ship rideth safely when she hath cast anchor ¿ . . .

of a Conversation in Heaven. anchor on firm ground, so that there is no fear she will drive. In a word, these four, the beart, faith, bope, and love, being in heaven, we may say that the man's best half and part is in heaven; his tedder-stake is loosed, and much of his tabernacle taken down, and he made in a good measure meet, ready and ripe for his dissolution and for heaven: Thus ye are called and obliged to have your conwerfation in heaven. 6thly, A believer's conversation may be faid to be, and ought to be in heaven, when his contentment, delight and satisfaction are in heaven; when all that he defires, all that he delights in, and on which his foul feeds, and all that he is comforted with, is in heaven, and he hath not a day to do well, nor one comfortable good hour, but that which is given him from heaven: And this is not only to be abiding with, but to be delighting in God; having the peace of God, that poffeth understanding, guarding the beart, and his love feed abroad therein, and having all that which entertains his life coming from heaven. Thus, Col. 3. 3. it is faid, that our life is bid with Chrift in God: So that the believer is affected with nothing, feeds upon, and is satisfied with nothing so much as he is with that which comes from heaven; he awakes, he fleeps, he rests there: This is to live in heaven, and to be heavenly in our conversation; and this is it that ye are called and obliged to, even to have your conversation in heaven, in all these forementioned respects; that as ye believers are of another nature, so ye may be of another and more

And if any shall here say, This is a very hard task: I answer, 1. Can it be hard to be in heaven? Nay, 'tis an ease rather, for Christ's yoke is easy, and bis burden is light; and inasmuch as our conversation is in heaven, we have so much true spiritual ease and repose of soul: And it is what we leave behind in the world, that makes the dissiculty to get our spirits screwed up to heaven, and to be kept there; here lies the difficulty: But, the more the heart and the mind be there, we have really the more ease.

2. Will ye shift, deny or decline the duty, because tis difficult and hard? as indeed it is to corrupt nature: Notwithflanding all the difficulty of it, the apostle Paul with his fellows and followers did win to it in a good measure, and we may attain it thro' grace, according to our measure. Is not this the way to heaven, which our Lord calleth firait, and which but few find? and yet, if ye would try and make proof of it in good earnest, ye would find it to be not so very strait or unpassable as ye imagine it to be, It would be found to be waited with such delight, as would much sweeten any hardness in it; and ye would not want an infight in those heavenly mysteries, and the beholding your names written in heaven, and in the Lamb's book of life, nor one hour's feeding upon and being folaced by them, for all the delights of the men of this world: And, fince tis only hard to corruption, it should be so much the more endeavoured and plyed hard. The second Use serves for Irial, that we may know who is a Christian indeed, and a thriving Christian: Or it may serve rather to be an use of discovery and of conviction; and indeed it may very eafily and quickly make discovery of the unfoundness of many, and of the short-coming of all. Need we infift on this? Is it not a truth obvious to all, viz. That Christians are called and obliged to be to heavenly in their conversation? Are not these the characters of such a conversation? Nay, is there not yet much more requisite in a Christian, even a divinens above what we can express? And if ye be (as ye may be) convinced that this is a truth; then let me in the next place ask you, If your conversation be such? Put your own consciences to it; enquire at them, whether your trade be to heaven, whether your peace and joy, your delight and fatisfaction be there? Would God ye would effay it, and could upon good ground say, that it is so: But ah! is there any that can fay it without some hesitation? Is not the best exceedang defective? Or, if many of you shall say, it is so, what then means your carnalness, your prevailing lusts, difsempering humours and passions? What means your so much pleading for felf-interests, thus turning (as it were) of the world up-fide down for our own particulars? How comes it to pass, that ye who are profine do spend so much of your precious time in tippling, and trifle away to much of it unprofitably many other ways? Dare ye say, that ye who walk thus, are indeed followers of the apostle Paul? Or, if ye dare not fay, that ye are followers of him in his heavenly convertation; can ye think or expect to dwell with him in heaven? O be not deceived, for God will not be macked: When we reflect feriously on yourselves and on your way, will ye not find just ground for being ashamed and confounded before God? Or, is there any of us all, that needs to want an errand to the throne of grace, to confess and crave pardon for our finful shortcoming in this? I shall only speak a word or two, in further profecution of this use, to you that are fout-bearted, and know no changes, that have always a good opinion and a good word to fay of yourselves; who are ready to fay, that ye have a good meaning, and to think and fay that ye loved God all your days; and who at best content yourselves with, and sit down on a form of religion; who never studied to die to the world, and never made it your business in good earnest, to mortify your lufts, and to be holy in the inward frame of your fouls: Is this, think ye, to have your conversation in beaven? Would ye know, then, if ever ye have studied Christianity seriously ? try it by this, viz. whether ye have been heavenly in. your conversation; for, however ye judge of yourselves, God will most certainly judge you according to this rule and qualification of a Christian: It is both sad and strange to think, how it comes to pass, that many of you bear and bolfter up yourselves with a hope of heaven, and profess that ye have no doubt but you shall come thither, who yet want and are void of this qualification.

I know fuch will be ready to object, Who are they that come this length? To which I shall only answer, That as I would be very loth to quench any smoking flax, or to break any bruised reed (whereof our Lord and Master is very tender) or to cast water of discouragement upon any the least spark or spunk of sincerity, where there is any honest aiming to walk according to this rule; so, I cannot I dare not but fay to others, in the first place, Have ye walked under the conviction of this as a duty incumbent on YUL Z

you; and have ye feriously proposed it to yourselves as your great business in the world, to be sincerely aiming at, and endeavouring after this conversation in heaven? Or, have ye not rather had peace (such as it was) when ye said, your prayers, morning and evening, tho ye did not so much as design or aim at this throughout the day? And can ye with any shadow of reason think, ye have attained it or can attain it, who never seriously proposed this as a rule to yourselves to walk by, nor never had a conscience-disquieting challenge for such neglect and manisest short-coming? 2. What labour are ye at, what pains take ye to prosecute such a design and blessed project as this? It is one thing to pray, to be about external duties of religion, and to be a Christian in the letter; and another thing to be in these duties after a heavenly manner, and to be a Christian indeed, a Christian inwardly and in the spirit, whose praise is not of men, but of God. Is it really your honest aim, defign and endeavour (whatever be the attainment) to be as much heavenly in your converfation, as it is to be civil and formal, or to attend the outward ordinances? I fear many of you cannot fay, it is, 3. What weight lies on your fpirits, for your short-coming in this? Ye will (belike) fay, We are all short; which is a fad truth, for indeed to we are: But, are ye really weighted and grieved for your short-coming in this? Have there been any times taken, to deal purposely with the Lord to remove the earthly mind, and to help to heavenly-mindedness? Have there been challenges and any measure of serious heart-exercise, because of the want of a heavenly mind? and that not only fometimes at the hearing of a fermon, or in time of fickness, or when under some other trouble; but in your more constant and habitual walk? Is it one of the great things for which ye blame and find fault with yourselves before God? And tho your outside and visible conversation be blameles; yet while you look on the carnalness and earthliness of your mind, and on the want of this divine and heavenly frame of foul, it makes you hang the head, mars your boldness, and (as it were) lays your feathers; because, do what ye can, your heart will not abide in heaven? If it be thus, it is a token for good, and some ground of peace;

but O how rare is this? Many of you, belike, have often overly prayed, Forgive us our fins; who never took with; nor prayed for the pardon of this fin; but have lven down at night, and rifen up in the morning, having your hearts plunged and puddled in the world, without once minding heaven in earnest, and yet have never been challenged for it: O fad state!

The third Use serves to reprove and exposulate for this unworthy carriage; for having either nothing at all, or but very little of a conversation in heaven: We take it for granted, that many of us are far from it, and that all of us are little in it, but very few even of the best are daily. and constantly conversing in heaven; alas! tis but now and then, with many fad interruptions. For quickning this reproof and expollulation a little, let me propose these few Queries to you; and, in the first place, Do ye not know that the neglect of this is a fin and the breach of a command, Be ye followers of me? 2. Is not this an excellent duty and royal privilege, to be admitted to converse in heaven? and therefore the neglect of it must not only be a fin, but a great fin, even a trampling on the grace of God, a flighting of heaven, and of a most noble privilege and dignity. 3. Think ye heaven to be of great worth? if to, must not conversing in heaven be of much worth? will ye never so much as once go to see the house, wherein ye say ye are to dwell? O how unsuitable a thing is it, that those who are but days-men here, should sit down and fettle on the earth, without minding heaven; and be fo confined within time, as not feriously to mind eternity! 4. How can ye come before God with confidence and boldness, who do not endeavour thus to walk with him? Can ye say with holy boldness, Our Father which art in beaven, whose conversation is not heavenly? Can ye pray for holiness, and say these words, Thy will be done on earth, as it is done in heaven, who never studied to be heavenly in any duty that ye put hand to? But, 5. and above all. I would ask you, Can ye hope to die comfortably, nay, can ye hope to die in safety as to your souls, who know not heaven, nor what is there, nor what is the way to it? It gives a man confidence and comfort at death, that he . hath conversed in heaven in his lifetime: Such a man hath but but little to do, when he comes to die; he knows the way, and is not afraid; he knows the company, and longs to be with them; he knows the privileges, and longs for the full enjoyment of them. He hath little here, his treafure is above in heaven, and his heart, faith, love, and hope are there; his anchor is cast within the vail, and he would fain be ashore: Sure, this is the believer's both duty and privilege. Do not think, that it is only called for from some more than ordinary Christians, and who have nothing else to do: The matter is not so; it is most certainly a duty, to which ye are all called that have amind to land fairly in heaven, when ye come off the troublesom, tossing and tempessuous sea of this world.

Now therefore, in the last room (as the fourth Use of the dostrine) I exhart, beseech and obtest, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, all of you that lay any claim to the hope of heaven, that ye would, and more than ever, study to have your conversation in heaven; O be followers of Paul and of his fellows in this thing: Need we adduce any motives to press this? Is not the duty clear? And is it not a most excellent duty, a most desirable qualification of a Christian walk? Is not heaven transcendently excelleht? And is it not excellent to be heavenly-minded, and conversant in heaven? Wherein may we expect to prevail with you, if not in bringing you to heaven? What is the thing that should sweeten the study of holiness to you? Is it not this, even that, by having your conversation in heaven, ye come thither? Those who are now in heaven, think it a great motive; and, if it be not a motive to you, ve will one day curse yourselves that ye neglected it: Study it therefore in due time; this is the way to be free of the incumbrances of an evil world: There is no hazard of this estate its being forfeited or sequestred, there are no plundrings nor quarterings here, no poverty nor pain, nor any fad evil occurrent here. O what a defirable life is it to be above all those things! And indeed, in so far as your conversation is heavenly, in so far ye are above them, and live the life of angels.

It is like ye will ask, What are the means or fleps by which we may win in and ascend to this heavenliness of conversation? which is indeed a very suitable question.

and would God we were serious in proposing of it, and were convinced of the necessity of it: However, let such as would fain be at it, know, i. That they must be much mortified and denied to creature-comforts; therefore, Col. 3. these two are opposed, Seek those things which are above. . set your affections on things in beaven, and not on things of the earth. To go both up and down at once, is imposfible: If ye would be heavenly in your conversation, seek: to have the world little and low in your estimation; to be: not only free from the finful intanglements of it, but to be mortified to things lawful. I press you not to negligence in your honest and lawful callings, far less to lay them aside, but to a heavenly-mindedness and holy deniedness in your diligence: Use the things of this world, as not abusing them, as not being taken with them, nor glued: to them. The minding of earthly things too much, clogs. and keeps mens hearts, that they do not mount up to heaven: It is impossible, while the heart is surfeited with the cares of this life, that it can thus foar aloft. And therefore, 2. Those that would be heavenly in their conversation, must lay up their treasure in heaven; for, where the treasure is, there will the heart be also. Were ye under the deep and due conviction of the vanity of earthly things, and of the excellency of heaven and heavenly things, and laying your reckoning foberly and feriously, that heaven ye must have, it would be much more easy to screw up your affections to it: As, where mens stock and treasure is, there is their heart; even so, were your great flock and treasure/in heaven, your heart would certainly be there; your hope, your love and delight would be there: But your seeking after contentment and satisfaction. in earthly vanities, where it cannot be found, keeps your! heart out of heaven. 3. Be much in the duty of medita-. tion and contemplation of heavenly things: This is (as. it were) the great wheel and first mover of the clock, to. have the mind heavenly, often converting in heaven, and often thinking of it, and often recounting the bleffed advantages, the glorious and great happiness that are there, even till your meditation of God be made sweet, and till your delight in him, thereby stirred up and strengthned, make a heavenly convertation: For little fuch medita-

The Necessity and Excellency tion makes little heavenly-mindedness; and, when the mind is not on heaven, fomerhing that is worfe comes in the place of it. Ye that know the bent and inclination of your own minds to be naturally downward, and how natively (to speak so) it runs on vanities; and how difficult it is to keep it, but alongst two or three sentences, fixed . on heavenly things; and how preternatural a motion it is (as it were) to make it ascend and mount upward, will eafily affent to the truth of this. It is an excellent word that David hath, Pfal. 139. When I awake 1 am fill with thee. 4. We commend this to you (hinted at before) that ye would be much in trading and traffiquing with heaven; to be often and ferious in prayer, frequently fending up defires thither, and bringing thence returns of prayer in great measures of grace; catching hold of, and gripping at somewhat above you, whereby ye may be hel-ped up that high and holy hill: It transforms into the same image from glory to glory, to be keeping love to Christ fresh, to have hope as an anchor cast within the vail. In a word, love to Christ, and delight in him, being, as a considerable part, to also the result of holiness; there must be a study of holiness in all the parts of it, of holiness in all manner of conversation, and a heavenly frame aimed at, and endeavoured in all duties, and in all the steps of our walk and conversation, in order to the keeping in, cherishing and increasing of love to, and delight in him; and often thinking on that which helps to it, viz. Let thy will be done en earth, as it is done in beaven; a word often in the mouths of many, but little in their hearts. And O how lamentably unlike are the practices of many of you to it! We may indeed blush and think shame to speak, and you may think shame to hear of having a conversation in heaven, there being so little of it amongst us: But we must speak of it, and ye must hear it spoken of; since it is a part, and a great part of our duty, and will be a part, and a great part of our reckoning: And we lay and leave it upon you from the Lord, to be studied by you Do not think that ye shall ever have your conversation in heaven afterward, who have not your conversation in heaven here: Many of you that have a fair profession of religion, and feem to come near to that harbour of rest, and yet never of a Conversation in Heaven. enter into it, are like to a flitp that comes, as it were, with up-fails, very near the port, and is unexpectedly blown back to the fea again; whereas the believer, who has his anchor cast on firm and sure ground within the vail, is enabled to endure tossing, being like a tight ship, that is able to ride out the ftorm, and to ftem the port: His treasure is in heaven, and there is a sure and indissoluble knot cast betwixt heaven, where his treasure is, and his heart. Now, from all this judge, what a mighty prejudice it is to be earthly minded, and to flight this walk with God, and conversation in heaven: And who are they that dare offer or presume to come before God the righteous Judge of heaven and earth, in whole fight the very heavens are not pure, to abide his trial, who have been puddling all their days in the world, never once ferioufly and fuitably minding a conversation in heaven? O let the confideration of eternal happiness on the one hand; and of eternal misery on the other, provoke you, and necessitate you all to study in good earnest to have your conversation in beaven. And ye believers in Christ, and children of light; walk in the light, suitably to your heavenly Father, and to the hope of your heavenly inheritance: O be more conversant in heaven, before ye come to it, and where ye shall be by and by for evermore.

A Preparation-Sermon for the Communions

On Isa. 55. 1, 2, 3. I will make an everlasting.

Governant with you, even the fure Mercies of David.

T is hard to conceive or express, whether the things which the gospel offereth be the most large, or the terms on which they are offered be the most free. Thore is that, no doubt, in both together, which may make the beholder stay and wonder. Among many excellent offers of the gospel, that which is here, is one very full and free: Would to God we could look on it suitably. But, alas! we may fear, that we shall rather leave the sweet words with a vail cast over the beauty, splendor and lustre

of them, than lay them forth and unfold them as we oughts and as they call for; we would therefore look to himself whose words they are, and beseech him to explain and make them out to us.

That this text speaks of the gospel, of the times of the gospel, and of gospel-mercies, we take for granted, and have good reason to do so, as on other accounts, so from Atts 13. 34 which clearly holds out to us, that these promifes are not to be understood of temporal things: The 5th verse withal telling us, that the offer of this grace promised shall be made to the nations.

We may take up the words in these four; or, there is here a gospel cried fair or market set out in four things :
1. In the wares, wine and milk, that which satisfies, and is good, and fatness, v. 2. Soul, life, and the sure mercies of David, v. 3. These are the wares, which do all come to the same amount. If ye would know what that is, ye may confider David two ways, one is properly and perfonally, as he is the fon of Jeffe and king of Ifrael; it is the covenant which was made with him, a main article whereof was, that out of his loins there fould One Spring, who should fit upon his throne for ever; and thus the fure mercies of David, are Christ and his benefits: The other way that ye would look on David is, as he was a type of Christ the Antitype and principal Covenanter or confederating Party with God; and so in effect it turns to the same thing, only this latter way is more clear: So then, we look on David here, as it is not unufual for the scriptures to hold him forth, viz. as a type of Jesus Christ; and indeed the words following do abundantly clear it: For David, personally considered, was now long since dead and gone, and was not the Witness nor the Leader of the people; therefore it must needs be Jesus Christ that here is meant, mainly and principally at least; as is very clear, AHs 12. 34. Christ then being looked on as here underflood, the fure mercies of David are the fure mercies covenanted and bargained (to speak so) to Christ before the world was; and it plainly implies, that there was a covenant or bargain betwixt the Father and the Son about the elect before the beginning of the world, whereof, as to the benefits therein covenanted to the Mediator, the golpel

Or, Grace's Market is for the Moneyless. 115 pel maketh an affignation to believers in time. 2. We have the chapman (to fay fo) or the merchant to whom the wares are offered; it is he that thirfts, he that wants and would have: And if any ferious poor fouls should think, that they are not fuitably fenfible of their wants: then, faith the Lord, Let bim that bath ne money come; that is, plain dyvours (as we speak) or bankrupts that have nothing. 3. We have the term, on which all are offered to sale, and they indeed suit wondrously well with the merchant; Come (faith the Lord) buy without money and without price, bear and your foul fall live, and I will the an everlafting covenant with you: There is (to speak so with reverence) not a purse opened in, nor a penny paid for the affignation of this bargain; tho' by Christ's satisfaction there was a very great, a very costly and dear price paid: When Christ came to buy and make a purchase of all these mercies for the elect, the market was very high, and the prices were up; but, when believers come by the covenant of grace to receive them, the market is come down, and the prices are fallen wonderfully low; that which stood him very dear, is to be had by them gratis, very freely, even for nothing: "Tis good that Christ was at the market before us, he hath cheapned the prices admirably. And, left any should think; that the there be no merit, yet something must be to mollify the Seller, and to commend the merchant to him : it is laid. Let him come without money and without price ; without money or money-worth; he that hath no come mending qualification, is bid come. 4. We have the proclamation of this market: As grace hath choice wares, and fets them out very freely to fale, fo it keeps them not close shur up, but brings them forth to publick view, and to every one, Ho, come to the waters: It inviteth all to come (as it were) to the shore, as if some fleet were come in with rare and rich commodities, for which men were to pay nothing; the proclamation is, Come, and buy without money. And, because grace will not easily take a naylay, there is Obo, an over prefixed; Ho, come and buy. But, because there is dulness and slowness on our parts notwithstanding all this, there is an exposulation added, V. Z. Wherefore spend ye your money for that which is not breads

The best Wares at the lowest Rates; bread, and your labour for that which satisfieth not? The assignation of the bargain, and the offer of the wares, are again urged; Come, and I will make an everlasting coverant with you. And, to let us know that this is sure, he subjoins, v. 4. I have given him for a Witness and Leader to the people; that all who are sensible of their own inability to come, may be heartned to it, in hope of his help to enable them.

We shall only, in short, observe these two points of doctrine from the words; The first whereof is, I hat there is a most gracious and merciful transaction betwint the Father and the Son, for the good and salvation of poor souls, even of all the elect, past before the world was. There are sure mercies bargained to David; for they are first his: This is clear from that part of the words, Even the sure mercies of David. The second is, I hat all those mercies are put to sale in the gospel to (dyvour) bankrupt sinners, upon exceeding east, low and condescending terms.

The first doctrine is implied, viz. That the covenant of redemption, wherein there were so many given to Christ, whose price he undertook to pay, is settled and established; according to that, John 6. 39. This is the Father's will, that of all he hath given me, I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day. The second looks to the administration of this covenant, by the covenant of grace in the gospel; according to v. 40. And this is the will of him that sent me, that every one that seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life, and I will raise him up at the last day: So that, what is laid on the Son, v. 39. as the condition of this covenant, is in the 40 v. made offer of to believers by the gospel.

The first doctrine hath two branches; The first whereof is, That there was a transattion concerning the salvation of lost sinners, betwirt the Father and the Son, before the world was: A covenant made with David, before it is or can be declared and preached in the gospel; the terms whereof were resolved on, and all the articles of it agreed upon; the Father proposing, and the Son accepting the bargain from eternity: As is clear, Psal. 40. 6, 7. where,
when it is, as it were, consulted what shall be the price of redemption, it is not sacrifices nor burnt-afferings; but, a body

Or, Grace's Market is for the Moneyless. 117 body hast thou prepared me: Behold, I come, in the volume of thy book it is written of me, I delight to do thy will, O my God, which is expresly applied to Christ, Heb. 10.7. This is easily cleared from the consideration of the Parties contracting, and of the ends for which this covenant was undertaken, and of the effects that follow upon it.

The second branch of the doctrine is. That this as to finners is a most gracious and merciful, a most kind, loving and lovely transaction, exceedingly for the behoof and advantage of sinners. There are four words in the text, which hold out this; 1. The nature of this covenant is mercy, all the articles of it favour strong of mercy to sinners; they are exempted, tho' Christ came under fore strokes: Whether we confider this covenant as exacting of Christ, or promiting to Christ, it is always for sinners behoof, It is a covenant of mercies, of many various mercies: So, 2 Sam. 23. 5. it is faid to be an everlafting covenant, ordered in all things and sure; and, 2 Pet. 1. 4. it is faid, A .cording as his divine power bath given unto us all things that pertain to life and godlines: Mercies of justification, pardon of fin, sanctification in all its gradual advances, of fellowship with God, of grace and glory, even of every good thing, or good things of all forts. 3. It is very gracious and merciful in respect of the excellent kind of these mercies; they are not common mercies, but mercies of David, bestowed upon his Anointed: Christ is furnished and filled with them, that out of his fulness we may receive, and grace for grace; even grace in a good measure. 4. They are stable mercies, not fleeting and quickly gone, not a glance of mercy which evanisherh; the covenant is everlasting, and the mercies are the sure mercies of David.

If we might particularly go through all the parts of this covenant, mercy will be found sweetly looking out in every article, clause and circumstance of it. Look, 1st, More generally, to the eubole of it; 'tis all loving-kindnesses and mercies to sinners: Look to Christ's sufferings and death, O what mercy shines conspicuously there! To his qualifications for the discharge of all his offices; to his anoinyting with the Spirit without measure, there is great mercy there; to all the promises made to him, such as these, He shall see his seed; the pleasure of the Lord stall prosper in his hand;

118 The best Wares at the lowest Rates; hand; by his knowledge shall be justify many; he shall have a willing people, eternally to reign with him, &c. Are not these loud-speaking mercies? The grace and wisdom that is on the Father's fide, and the grace and love that is on the Son's fide, are all for the behoof and good of finners; 'ris all wonderfully behoofful: Is it not great mercy to you believers, that you were minded in this bargain? The Lord Christ, as God, neither needed nor was capable of any accession of grace; he took the relation of our Redeemer and Mediator, and as fuch, in the human nature, was filled with grace and bowels of mercy and compassion, that grace and mercy might look through that relation to us. 2dly, And more particularly, look to the rife of it: It bred in God's own bosom (to speak so) John 3. 16. God fo loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that who seever fould believe on him, might not perift, but bave everlasting life: And the Son laid down his life out of pure love; there was no necessity on him to do so, but what he voluntarily came under; there was no motive from us to it, nor had he any adviser to it. 3dly, Look to the manner of his undertaking: It was very readily, cheerfully, and with ardent, vehemently ardent love; for that we may fay of it, as of that chariot mentioned, Cant. 2. 10. It is made of and paved with love, for the daughters of Ferusalem. The elect being under the curse, Christ out of mere love undertakes to fatisfy justice for them: Sacrifices will not do it, rivers of oil will not do it, the first-born of the body will not do it, nor satisfy for the sin of the soul; what will do it then? Grace suggests, that the Son shall become man, and do it; and the Son faith, Lo, I come: O what love and mercy are here! 4thly, Look to the contrivance of it, and there ye will find much grace and mercy; that it is made with a Mediator, and with a Mediator that is a Surety; that the stock is bestowed on him, and put under his custody; that the promises are made to him, and the price exacted from himself. 5thly, Look to the manner of executing it: What love, grace and mercy shines forth in the Father, in taking vengeance on his only begotten Son for us? What love in the Son, in yielding to take it on, and in his leaving his manifestative glory for a time, that he might undergo the curse, and in

Or, Grace's Market is for the Moneyless. 119 his doing all this with delight? 6thly, Look to the confirmations of this covenant: The oath of God on the Father's fide, the death of the Mediator on the Son's fide; and he hath freely bequeathed it as a confirmed testament and legacy to us believers, and hath inftituted facraments, to be feals thereof. O what mercy upon mercy! 7thly, Consider the effects of it: It runs in the sweet streams of grace, into the vast gulf and ocean of glory; wonderful mercy! 8thly, Look to the Parties confederating and covenanting: The Father, Son, and Spirit, all are here; and 'tis grace and mercy that they covenant. 2. Who are the Contrivers of it? Are not even they in their deep wifdom, and in their exuberant, superabundant and infinite grace and mercy? 3. What is the end of it? Even the praise of the glory of his grace, Eph. 1. 5. Grace bringing forth and manifestly shewing here its great makerpiece. 4. As infinite wildom and love contrive, fo infinite power executes it: And when all these concur in this bargain, when the infinitely wife God, all the Persons of the most glorious, dreadful and adorable Trinity (as it were) set themselves to set forth the glory of free grace, to make angels and faints behold and admire in it infinite wildom and incomprehenfible love; what a rare piece must it needs be! And this is the end of it, as is clear, Epb. 3. 9, 10. That all men might fee what is the fellowship of this my fery, which from the beginning of the world had been hid in God, who created all things by Jesus Christ: To the intens that now unto the principalities and powers in the heavenly places, might be known by the Church the manifold wisdom of God.

The second doctrine is, That this good and gracious bargain, that is past betwint the Father and the Son, which is wholly mercy, is brought to the market, and exposed to sale, on exceeding easy and condescending terms, and that to bankrupt sinners. What proclaims the Lord here? even this; I will give you the sure mercies of David: That which I and my Son have carved out for the glory of grace, and for a proof of the riches of my bounty, I will make all over to you freely. Hence, Eph. 3. 8. it is called, the unsearchable riches of Christ; to that, whatever Christ hath as Mediator, it is holden forth here, that out of his sures.

The best Wares at the lowest Rates; we may receive grace for grace, a proportion of all the grace that is in him.

In profecuting this point, we shall shew, I. More particularly, what this bargain is, that is put to the fale. 2. Who the merchant is. 3. What are the terms on which, and how it is made. 4. What is the manner how the golpel puts home this bargain, and lays Christ and his fulness forth upon frands in the market-place, as it were (to speak thus with reverence of this divine mystery) that there may be free access to whosoever will come and buy these rare and rich wares and commodities.

. As for the first, That ye may know what the bargain is, and what is in your offer in this day of the gospel, take it in these few particulars; I. All that ever any believer in the world had, is put to fale here: If any believer ever had fair privileges, fure it was Dapid; if ever any had a merciful bargain, he had it. And fuch is this coyenant; justification, adoption, peace with God, grace and glory; all these marrowy, material, massy and essential bleffings that David had: It was not another Christ, nor another heaven, nor another covenant of grace that he had, but the same that is here. 2. Consider it further, and we will find it to be all that is made over to our Lord Jesus Christ: If he had a good bargain, the Spirit without measure, fulness of truth and grace, great glory and honour, being advanced to the right hand of the Father. the same is believers their bargain proportionally, a due and just proportion being kept betwirt the Head and the members, John 1. 16. Of his fulness have we all received, and grace for grace: It is not another, but the same grace that our Lord Jesus hath; yea, it is not another glory they are advanced to, no other table they are set down to, no other throne they are fet on; but the same glory, table, and throne: It is to belold bis glory, to fit at his table, to fit with him on his throne, John 17. 22, 24. Luke 22. 30. Rev. 3. 31. In a word, there are not two covenants of redemption betwirt Jehovah and the Mediator, one for himself, and another for the elect; but it is one and the same covenant for both, tho with many vastly different respective considerations and circumstances. 2. Look to the wares and commodities (to speak so) that are exposed

Or, Grace's Market is for the Moneylefs. 121 to fale in the gospel: They are not only the promises made to Christ, but Jesus Christ himself is brought forth to the market; he is the great Promise, and far beyond all the other promises made in and the graces given by the covenant; I have given him (faith the Lord, v. 4.) for a Witness and Leader to the people. He is the great Gift of God, that Gift of gifts, being the Father's Fellow ; Nothing in heaven or earth, no person, man or angel, can by far, very far, infinitely far, equal him: To whom can you liken or compare him? To us (faith the prophet Isiab, Chap. 9.) a Child is born, to us a Son is given, and the government hall be upon his shoulders, and his Name Ball be called Wonderful, Counseller, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace: This is David's most substantial massy mercy. He is called Worderful, because there is no possibility for creatures adequately to conceive, or with exact fuitableness to express what his name is, or what is comprehended within his name. 4. Look on Christ as Mediator, as God-Man, Immanuel, God with us: There is put to the market (to speak so with reverence) God himself; for thus the covenant is expounded and fum'd, as frequently elsewhere in the scripture, so particularly, 2 Cor. 6. 16. I will be their God; and Rev. 21.17. He that overcometh shall inherit all things, and I will be bis God. Now, consider all these in a conjunction, viz. What all believers have; what Christ hath, and Christ himself; what God hath, and God himself: O what an incomprehensibly rich and rare, great and glorious bargain is this! And yet all is by the gospel brought forth, laid before the hearers of it, and made offer of to them, on most easy and wonderfully condescending terms. May we briefly and in a few words fum up what is in it? (1.) All things that may make up believers their peace with God, and remove the quarrel. (2.) All things pertaining to, or needful for life and goldiness; as it is, 2 Pet. 1. 4. (3.) All things that belong to the comfort and confolation of believers, even frong confolation, as it is called, Heb. 6. 18. There is no want fo great, but there is a supply for it here; no case so sad, but there is a comfort for it here; there is not any thing that looks like a crack or uncertainty, but there is sufficient security for it here, in

122 The best Wares at the lowest Rates;

in this covenant, (in this most full and wonderfully wellordered copenant in all things and very sure) to all who are fled to Christ for refuge. (4.) There is in it what is needful and requifite to full fatisfaction, to the filace, delight, joy and compleat happiness of the persons that cordially close with it: So that a foul can crave no more, nor with for more; it is even all their defire, as David faith of it, 2 Sam. 23. 5. 'Tis mensura voti, pay, ultra mensuram voti; it never entred into man's heart to conceive, much less to desire it. It makes the foul fay, as it is, Pfal. 73. 25. Whom have I in beaven but thee? there is none on earth whom I defire besides thee. It hath all things in it; as it is, Rev. 21. 7. He that overcometh half inherit all things: For if God and Christ, grace and mercy be in it, is there any thing amissing? or can there possibly be any thing wanting in it? May I not very considently ask you, Is it not a good bargain? If the Father, Son and Holy Spirit, grace, heaven and glory be a good bargain; this is then most certainly a good bargain, a wonderfully good, matchless, and none such bargain: And is not this gospel, whereby all these great things are brought to the market, good news? Take heed then that ye receive not this grace in vain, that these wares, worthy of all possible intertainment and welcome, stand not before you unbought: I say again, take heed that ye receive not all this grace in vain, that these precious and costly wares go not from the market unbought up.

Secondly, Who are the chapmen or merchants? You would have readily thought that such wares would have required mighty monarchs, great statesmen, learned philosophers, or holy kings, prophets, apostles and great men; and yet the proclamation is (for grace cometh ordinarily in the lower way) Ho, every one that thirst, and be that both no money: These are the merchants who are meet for this rich ware. Are there any that want what may make them happy, and would sain have? are there any that have their peace to make with God? any that have not their interest clear and made sure? any that are wrestling with a body of death, and groaning under it? any that fain would have sin pardoned and subdued? any that would have grace, heaven and glory, and have nothing

Or, Grace's Market is for the Moneyless. 122. to give for all these or any of them, and who have spent many years labour in vain and to no purpose, to come by them? 'Tis to you, even to you, that all these rich wares and rare commodities are in a special manner offered in this cried-fair of grace. And, to clear this a little, I suppose there are none of you but you are some way under one of these three, the the external call and offer comes indifferently to you all: Ye are either, 1. Senfless and secure; and to you the gospel says, How long, ye fools, will ye love fimplicity? and, How long will ye Sleep, O Sluggards? As there is a challenge and regret here, so there is a conditional offer made to you, in as far as it is here implied, that the offer is made to them who have no bread, and have been bestowing their labour on that which satisfies not; glutting themselves with the world, or wrapping themselves up in the groundless conceit of their own righteousness: To fuch it faith, How long will ye spend your labour for that which is not bread? Or, 2. Ye are some way affected with fin, lying under convictions, stinged, some way burnt up. and confumed with the apprehensions of the wrath and terrors of God: The word which this offer hath to fuch, is the very first in the proclamation, Ho, every one that thirsts, come. And as we expollulated with the first fort, viz. fenfless, secure, unconcerned, proud and conceity standersaloof, so we bid you earnestly come: And if ye shall say, your conviction hath no edge with it, it is not deep enough; we answer, Let bim that bath no money, come : If we have quite given over all hope of your prayers, and other performances, as to making your peace with God by them, and have in that respect utterly renounced your own righteousness, and so bave no money, no price; tho' ye be not pinched and pricked at the heart under the sense of fin and deserved wrath, as ye would; yer come, O come. Or, 3. Ye are such as have taken with your sin and lost state, and are in some measure, tho' but faintly (at least to your own apprehension) stirring towards Christ, and would fain be at him: Up; for to you the offer most kindly says, Hear, and your fouls pall live; eat, and be fatisfied. The wares are not brought forth and laid before you, that ye should only (to say so) block or cheapen, and ask the price; but also, and mainly, that ye should buy ir.

huy, eat and feed on them: The gospel doth not, as it were, so much offer to make with you a pargain, as it offers you the benefit of a pargain already made, viz. with Christ. And thus these take in every person that wants, and is not (it may be) so sensible of it, and every one that wants and would have.

For the third, viz. the terms on which the closing of the bargain depends: They are holden forth in four words in the text, with two qualifications, which make up the terms. The first word is, Come; and that supposeth peoples leaving of their present standing place and posture, and their moving towards the market-place where the rich ware is exposed to sale. The second word is, Buy; which imports a price put on the market-ware, a valuing of it, and a fort of treating to make it ours. The third word is, Hearken, incline the ear, to wit, to God, and to his word, to believe and receive it, and your fouls shall live. And the fourth word is, I will make an everlafting covenant with you; which implies an engagement by covenant to the Lord, after hearing and inclining the ear to his word, a striking of hands, and closing with the bargain, Add to these the qualifications, viz. Coming, buying, striking hands (as it were) and closing the bargain, and that without offering money or price, money or money-worth, without offering or giving any thing less or more in compensation, Fourthly, Let us see how the gospel puts all this to the market; so that, where it comes, those that are called must either close the bargain, or it will be their own sault, I. It proclaims the fair (as it were) to all round about, that there are such wares to be had, and at such a price; the rarest and richest wares and commodities, and at the cheapest rates that ever the world heard tell of. 2. It doth not only proclaim, but invite, and double the invitation to come. 3. It not only invites, but puts the invitation so the invitation of the may be soon made, there being in effect no price) and buy, or resuse the bargain: If they will not be at the pains to come in to the shop, as it were, it brings forth the wares and lays them down in the market-place, and (as it were) one sands in the street, and cries, Come, buy, come and enter the covenant freely: And this it doth

Or, Grace's Market is for the Moneylefs. 125 by a frank offer, by earnest and persuasive inviting, and by the easy conditions that it proposeth the bargain on. It stands in a manner with arms stretched out, ready to receive all comers very freely, whatever their poverty, wants and necessities be; it craves no more but that we willingly take what he offers to put in our hand: The vighteousness of faith saith not. Who shall ascend to beaven? or who shall descend to the depth? There is nothing now to be suffered, nor to be purchased by any more suffering; But the word is near thee, in thy beart, and in thy mouth: It lays the ware at our very door (as it were) so that we have no more to do, but to stoop down and take it up; but heartily to say the word, and it is a bargain.

Now, for application: May we not refume, and fay, that there is a good and excellent bargain to be had in the gospel, and on very good and easy terms? 'Tis a marketday, and indeed it were a pity that fuch wares should be brought to the market, and that few or none should buy; that Christ should (to speak so) open his pack, and fell no wares. Therefore let me say a few words to you for perswading you readily and presently to embrace the offer of this richest bargain. And, in the 1st place, We pray you believe this truth: Alas! there is little or no faith given to it; fouls come straitned, not throughly believing that God is putting Christ, grace and glory, heaven and happiness and all to sale: These are days of the Son of man, in a special manner, wherein Christ's fleet (to speak so with reverence) is come home, the shops are now well furnished with rich commodities, all his flands are fet out and full of grace. 2dly, Wonder that God hath condescended to make offer of such a bargain to us; that that which cost Christ so very dear, is offered so exceeding cheap to us. 3dly, We exhort and obtest you, that, while these choicest wares are set to sale, ye receive not this offer in vain. Are there any merchants here for such wares? Here is the market, the wares are good and fufficient, and the terms very easy, and the price wondrously low, even so low, that it comes to no money, no price: Can ye possibly wish a better bargain, or more easy terms? Are there any chapmen that want money, any that are thirfty, then come; yea, be the frame and disposition of your heart what it may be, if

126 The best Wares at the lowest Rates; you would have it righted, come; there is here that which will make you rich and happy here and hereafter. Are there none of you that will seriously ask, what the Lord will fay, what Christ will take (as it were) for these wares, or what are his terms, with a fincere resolution to take them on these very terms? Will ye not be prevailed with to make experimental trial, what it is to have Christ made of God to you wisdom, righteousness, santistication and redemption? Are there none among you all that have sins to be pardoned, wants to be supplied, strong and stirring corruptions to be subdued and mortified? Is it possible that so many are come hither for the fashion? Are there none living at distance from God, nor under his curse really or to their own apprehension, that would have the distance and curse removed? Are there no weak graces to be strengthned? If there be any such merchants, that have a-mind and heart to the wares; I say to them from the Lord, as his herald, Ho, every one that thirsti, and be that bath no money, come. This is the scope of the gospel, and the preparation for Christ, and also for the communion, that it calleth for from poor fouls, that would fain close the bargain, and set their seal to it, and would have God's feal fet to it to-morrow, by taking the facrament, Speak, what fay ye? Pose and put your hearts to it, to declare if they be indeed willing and well content to make and hold the bargain on his own terms; if they be fo, (as there is all the reason in the world they should) then,

There are these things that do singularly commend this bargain. (1.) The excellency of it. Ye will go through all the markets in the world, ere ye get such rich mercies, of so rare a kind, so sure and so cheap: Ye would, belike, think much to have so much land, gold or money; but what are those to this bargain? Those will evanish and turn to ashes, when this will endure and abide with you for ever: What are ye doing? who are like so many horse-leeches, sucking up, and glutting yourselves with the world, or living securely and carelesly, or patching up your own righteousaes; is there any of those bargains

I say, ye have a good bargain: I say again, Speak, pose your hearts, if ye will make and hold the bargain on these

Or, Grace's Market is for the Moneyless. 127 like this? We appeal to your own consciences, and nothing doubt but they will one day bear witness against you, that we heard of such a bargain and had it in your offer, and yet wilfully refused to accept of it. (2.) Is there any bargain more fuitable for you who have your peace to make with God, for you who have corruption lively in you, than to have a King, Captain and Conqueror to bring it down, and to trample on it, after he hath as a Priest reconciled you to God? Is there any more fuitable bargain for you who have your own pinches and straits, and your comforts at a very low ebb, for you who have wants which cannot be numbred, and who cannot of yourselves command one stayed spiritual thought? If ye were perfectly righteous, and fairly landed in eternity, ye might possibly think the less of it (tho' even glorified saints put a great value on it, and glorious angels admire it) but that finners dwelling on earth in cottages of clay, whose habitation is in the dust, should think little of it, 'tis strange, and even stupendious: Is there, or can there be a more suitable bargain for you that want money? Is it not exactly calculated for your case, and shapen out for you, so as in every thing it may meet with your wants, difficulties and objections? (2.) Are not the terms most reasonable? No great thing is sought for from you; if a lordship or a kingdom were offered to a poor man for a peny, that hath no money at all, it would fignify nothing at all to him; but, behold, here peace and pardon, grace and glory, even all good things are offered to you freely. (4) Is not your necessity such, that ye cannot be well without it? For, tho ye should fpend your money, and bestow much labour, and even wear out your very eyes with weeping, and your hearts with grief and forrow, if ye take not this course, all will only have this motto written thereon, Vanity of vanities, all is but vanity and vexation of spirit: When ye come to feed on it, ye will find it to be but wind. If peace with God, if God and Christ, if grace and glory be neceffary, then this bargain is necessary; but if ye will continue lazy, indifferent, lukewarm and unconcerned in the matter, ye shall find that ye have fitten in your own light greatly, and suffered the opportunity of the market to flip,

128 The best Wares at the lowest Rates; flip, which ye will never possibly recover: And therefore for the Lord's fake, let neither legal weeping, carnal fear or forrow, hypocrify, felf-conceit, nor mistakes of Christ and of free grace, divert you from making this bargain; but feek grace, come over these and all other obstructions, and, while the market lasts, Come and buy without money and without price. It is hard to know how long your day shall last: There are many country-sides and cities, in the streets whereof these packs (to say so) of rich wares were opened up, laid forth and exposed to sale, that now for many years, yea for several ages, have not heard of them, nor the gospel preached; What (at least in purity and power) is now in Jerusalem, and in the seven famous Churches of Asia, but the voice of terror, and, as it were, the screaking of owls? And, seeing God is not flack, as men count flackness; what know ye, when the kingdom of God may be taken from you, and given to others; and when he will cry (to speak so) Pack and go? Every day is not a market-day, every Lord's day is not a communion day: Many congregations in Ireland and elsewhere have sadly found this, wherein it hath come to pass, that great scarcity and want are come where there was once great plenty. And, to press this a little further, we may, in the 1st place, Ask, Whereat it sticks and halts? I tell you, that there either must be a bargain, or it must (and will sometime) be known where the blame lies: Were it but the bare reading of these very words, they bring the invitation and offer to you; and will ye dare to cast at the wares, or the terms on which they are offered? Grace brings a good bargain to you, and floops very low with it. For, i. It will not fland with you on bygones, if now you deal honestly; The sure mercies of David will cover and blot out those. And if any of you think that ye have much debt on your head, as who hath not? it will not uphraid you; The iniquity of Jacob shall be sought for, and shall not be found: There shall be, as it were, scores drawn through them, your accounts shall be all dashed out by free grace's pen. This is a cried fair and proclaimed market of free grace, from which no honest comer shall be secluded, thrust back or sent away empty;

for here an empty purse needs not make a blate or bash-

Or, Grace's Market is for the Moneyless. 129 ful merchant. 2. Grace stands not precitely on tore-preparations (where fouls honeftly and fincerely come) as that ye have not been fo and fo humbled, and have not fuch and fuch previous qualifications, as ye would be at: Nay, someway it excludes these, as offering to bring money and some price, which would quite spoil the nature of the market of free grace; nay yet, I say further, if it were possible that a soul would come without sense of fin, grace would embrace it; fense of fin being no condition of the covenant, but a physical (ro speak so) qualification of the covenanter, and grace is free to them that want it. And let it be supposed to be in a person void of grace, and still in unrenewed black nature, tis there but a splendid sin, as those shadows of moral virtues in all merely flatural men are; grace can, at the inflant of coming, create qualifications. There could readily be no qualifications in Zaccheus when he was on the tree; yet Christ tells him, Salvation this day is come to thy house. 3. Grace flands not on the want of any effect of faith, where it calls to believing; It will not fland on darkness of interest, nor on want of progress in finctification, nor on things being out of order; for, where it comes, it puts things in order. It will be no relevant exception for a person that hath not closed with the bargain, and hath not embraced Christ, to fay, Alas! I have no love to God, to the godly, and to bis interest: Because grace can say, Thou hast not closed with Christ, and so canst not have the effect before the cause. Come and close, and these and other effects shall follow. 4. It stands not on degrees of faith, nor on the firength, firmness and height of it; it will take little, even a look, or a glance of the foul's eye that fees not clearly; according to that memorable word, Pfal. 34. 5. They looked to bim, and were lightned: The more that fouls look to Chrift, their eye grows the clearer. It will take an honeftly willing mind and hearty confent, tho' the ability be very little; a receiving, or a fincere minting at receiving of the offer; Him that cometh, or is really a-coming, tho' he be not yet come, at least as he thinks, but is, with the prodigal, still (as he apprehends) afar off, will Christ and grace in no case cast out; for no fooner doth spiritual life stir in faith's weakest acting and moving `

moving towards Christ, but grace meets it. 5. It stands on no concomirants. Tho there should be many idols and lusts raging in the person, if there be a real consenting by faith to the bargain, with a fincere resolution to abandon all these, grace will not send him away empty: Or, if the man fay, Lord, I believe, belp my unbelief; that is a done bargain: Nay, were it to come with many spiritual issues and force running, and with fear to presume, and (as it were) to fleal a hint of Christ, not to speak a word to him, but to touch him; he will not be angry nor uphraid, but will say, Go in peace, thy faith bath made thee whole. We may ask yet further, to the recommendation of grace, (1.) Was there ever a merchant that came to the market with that purpose, to buy on its own terms. that went away empty and without wares? If all the congregation of the first-born were put to it, they would be ready to bear witness, that grace never flood with themon any qualification in them, when they came honestly. (2.) I would ask, Was there ever any that adventured honestly on it, whom it misgave; that hazarded (to speak fo) and yet fell by the way; or that ever repented themselves that they hazarded and entrusted their souls to this bargain? (3) Let me ask, Was there ever any that took hold on and gripped it, in whose hand it brake? The bargain and covenant is everlasting, the mercies are sure mersies; once fure, and always fure; once rich, and for ever fo: It was and is a covenant well ordered in all things and fure; Bleffed for ever be the Contriver and Surety thereof. Some may possibly think, that this doctrine looks to be fomewhat lax or loofe: But fure grace is not lax; for, as we may fay of God's power, Is any thing too bard for bim? fo we may fay of his grace, Is any thing too free for it? Only abuse not grace, profitute it not, turn not your back on it, neither turn it into wantonness: If ye look on grace, and cheapen only, and do not buy; or if ye bid for one piece of it only, and not for all; wo unto you, that ever it was offered unto you. What would ye be at? Is it holiness, heaven and happiness, and that freely? They are here: Is it Christ, and Christ freely, and all that is his? He is here in your offer: What means then this whining (to speak so) and standing so much on terms.

Or, Grace's Market is for the Moneyless. 121 si if the way of grace were a hard, untoward, unpaffable way, and as if God were a hard Master? Nay, 'tis a good, soft, sweet, easy way, and plain to them that walk in it; and God the best Master that ever rich or poor served, and the easiest to serve, and the best to please, where there is fincerity and willingness to live honestly: He pities and spares all upright-hearted servants, as a father pitieth his sbildren, and a man /pareth bis fon that ferueth bim ; and, if any think they find it otherwise, itis most certainly their own fault. Therefore, I befeech you, study, 1. To be in case to take grace's wares home with you, repentance, faith, hope, love, mortification, meekness, patience, &c. These things are in the covenant betwixt Christ and you. and fet to fale in the market. 2. Be making ready, for the market is ready: Many shops (as it were) are opened, and much precious ware laid out; bring empty vessels and not a few, that ye may carry them away full, that ye may take a rich loading home with you. Tho you take up never so much of this ware, it will never be missed nor grow the less. And indeed it is a part, and a considerable part of our preparation for the communion, to be rooted in the faith of these great things, and to get our affections stretched, dilated and widened to receive them 1 to get the everlasting doors cast up, that the King of Glory may come in; that, when he calls for entry, the doors may be opened at the very first knock. 3. If so be your defires be flirred up, and your appetites quickned in any measure, there is nothing that will more effectually and powerfully stir them up, provoke and sharpen them, than grace believingly looked to, and improved. Longing to see his power and glory, as they have been seen by his people in the fanctuary, would notably make way for him. Pleading and working with your own hearts alone, will not do the business, but grace employed and made use of will do it effectually and to purpose; and, the more grace you draw forth out of Christ's fulness, and drink, so much the better: It will be (to speak so) no forestalling of the market; neither will the sweet savour of the perfume be the weaker or less to-morrow, that we break the box of this precious ointment to-night. Now, God himself, who proclaims the fair, fets the market, and exposen the rick.

132 After God /peaks Peace, rich ware to sale, give you wildom to prove wise merchants, to your eternal advantage and upmaking.

A Sermon preached after the Communion,

On Pfal. 85. 8. He will speak peace to his people, and to his faints: But let them not turn again to folly.

I T is hard to know, in spiritual exercises, whether it be more difficult to attain some good frame, or to keep and maintain it when it is attained; whether more seriousies is required for making peace with God, or for keeping of it when made; whether more diligence should be in preparing for a communion, or more watchfules after it: Sure, both are required; and it was our blisted Lord's word, Matth. 26. 41 after the first celebration of this his supper, Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation. Here that saying holds eminently, Non minor oft wirtus, quam quarrere, parta tueri: No less virtue and valour is requisite to maintain, than to make a purchase or conquest.

In the words (to leave the introduction and scope) there are, 1. A great mercy promised from the Lord to his people, viz. He will speak peace to them. 2. A special caveat and advertisement given them, pointing at their hazard, But let them not turn again to folly: That is, let not his people and saints, to whom he hath spoken peace, return to sin; let them beware of bourding and dallying with God's mercy, and of turning his grace into wantonness, of cooling in their affections to him, of slipping back to their old way, and of embracing their old lovers and idols; for that is folly, even in folio, to speak so.

We shall first propose fix observations from the words, and then apply them. First then, Observe, That fin against God is an exceeding great folly; tus the foolishest and maddest thing in the world: Therefore it is here called folly, to wit, in an eminent way and degree. Tis that which doth most, yea, that which doth in essectionly mar and interrupt saints peace. That which, v. 2. is called thiqui-

by, which he so graciously pardoned, is here called folly, because of the folly and madness that is in sin: And it is on this ground and account, that the finner is fo often called a fol, and fimple, in the book of Proverbs; and, Eph. 5. the apostle exhorts Christians to walk, not as fools, but as wife; and, Luke 15 the prodigal is faid, when converted, to come to bimfelf, as if he had been in a di-Araction and belide himself, all the while he was going on in his finful way. This may be further clear, if we look, 1. To the vanity of the matter wherein men sin. Is it not folly for a man to fit tippling and debauching away his time, to be given to harlotry and filthiness, to neglect prayer, to curie and swear, to let his mind rove upon things that never were nor will be, and wherein there is no profit? There is a great vanity in the matter of fin. 2. It we look to the fad effects and bitter fruits of fin, and to the great prejudice that comes by it, it will be found to be desperate madness, and dear bought pleafore, which is but fancied and imaginary, and no real pleasure; it mars the life of grace and of peace with God, and treasures up wrath against the day of wrath: See this verified eminently in Artibophel, that prodigy of profound policy (whife counsel in those days with David and Absalom, was, as if one had enquired at the Oracle of God) the upshot of whose deep wit was rank folly, when he went and hanged himself: See it also convincingly made good, in the rich man in the gospel, to whom tis fadly and furprisingly said, Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be taken from thee, and whose then shall those things he? And what advantage or wildom is it, I pray, for a man to gain the whole world, if he lose his own soul? O madly foolish bargain! 3. If we look to fin with a spiritual eye, we will fee folly in the very appearance and manner of it; a wicked man in finning is foolish-like, or looks as like a fool, as David did, when he played the mad-man before the king of Gath, scrabled on the doors, and let his spittle fall on his beard. Is it not folly to see a man lahouring in the fire for very vanity, loading bimfelf with thick clay, pursuing the east wind? He is just like a man in a frenzie, who imagines himself to be a king, and to be riding in great state and triumph, when in the mean time he is a poor, naked, pititul hold him. 4 If we look to the foring, fountain and cause of it, there can be no just nor relevant reason given for sin; 'tis therefore, no doubt, folly. Is there, or can there be any thing that evidenceth mens folly so much, as their coming in tops with God, their walking in the way of death, their loving simplicity (as it is, Prov. 1) and their quitting the way of life? Now, the word of God is true wisdom, and the way of life is therein clearly holden forth, and God as our Pattern; and is there any thing more reasonable, than that we should live like, and be conform to the word of God, and to him of whom we ought to be followers? But sin thwarts with the whole word of God, and with God himself.

Take this passing word of Use; Study to be established in the faith of this truth, That fin, whether in doing that which is evil, or in the omission of duty, is the greatest folly, Such of you as will not be convinced of it now in time, within a few days or years ye shall be convinced of it to purpose, and to your eternal prejudice; the most blockish shall then see it to be folly, a highly hurtful, prejudicial, shameful folly, and desperate madness; the rich glutton and Abithophel, and thoulands more of worldly-wise-men, find it to be so, to their cost, in hell: Therefore the apostle saith, Rom. 6. 21. What profit have ye in those things whereof ye are now ashamed? And, had we spiritual eyes to discern the condition of the most part of men and women, who evidently ly ftill in black nature unrenewed, who flight the offers of grace, and who will not receive Jesus Christ; the veriest idiot in the world would not be a sadder spectacle to us, nor affect our hearts with more pity and compassion, than the lamentable case of the fouls of fuch persons would; because they forfake their own mercy, the sure mercies of David, and fol-low after lying vanities, and weary themselves with a vain pursuit after that which cannot profit them. Alas for this folly 4

Secondly, Ohierve, Ibat, notwithflanding the greatness of this folly, God's people and saints were sometimes deep, reaeven drowned in it, and are yet in part taken with it. Needs this any proof? Ab! sinful nation (saith the Lord to his protessing people, Isa. 1. 4.) a people laden with iniquity, a feed of evil-doers: The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass bis mafter's crib, but my people doth not know: O beaftly Ifrael! inferior to the very brutes thro' the folly of finping against God; and saith he, Fer. 2. Be afton A.d. O Beavens, and borribly afraid; for my people have committed two great rails, they have for faken me the fountain of living waters, and digged to themselves broken cifterns, that can bold no water: O egregious foily and demented choice! How many professors of religion are there, who are foel she wirgins? and how many foolish practices are there among the godly themselves? Let it not then be thought strange (as a word of Use from it) that not only among external professors, but even among real faints, there be found many acts of folly; the' I grant it to be both fad and stumbling, when it is; which should, therefore, so much the more make them guard against the same.

Thirdly, Observe, God will sometimes speak peace to them that are given to folly, or are often found playing the fool, Of the truth whereof, as many as ever heard the gospel, and did partake of the grace of it, and are before the throne, and hope to be there, are as fo many proofs, witnestses and living monuments. I shall clear what this speaking of peace is, in three steps: He speaks peace to them, I. In his offering of peace to them, and by his meeting and treating with them in and by that offer, in his increating or inviting them earnestly to come to him, who have wearied themselves, and spent their labour on that which profits not; pressing them to return, and assuring them that he will heal their backflidings, Ifa. 55. Fer. 3. Hof. 14. and preaching peace through Christ Jesus, Epb. 2. counselling them to come and buy eye-salve of him, &c. and by his knocking and waiting at their door for admittance and entry, Rom. 2 Are not these words of peace to a foollish Church? 2. In making peace with some, when (as it is, 2 Cor. 5. 201) he not only prays and requests them to be reconciled, but really reconcileth them to himself, and saith, Peace be to you; pardoneth fin, taketh away the band-writing of erdinances that was against them, giveth them a discharge of their debt; that, when their fin is fought for, it is rot to be found, because be bath pardoned it : And, Hof. 2. this is called an alwring, or (as the word is) a speaking to the beart. 3. In his not only taking away the controverfy, and making peace; but in his intimating that peace, faying to the pardoned fini er, Thy fins are forgiven thee, go in peace, I am thy saluation: And then the promise, Join 14. 21, 23. is fulfilled, when Christ breaks open doors, and comes in and sups, and devells, his Father and be; and one main dish that is fet on the table (to fay fo) is peace, as v. 27. Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you. *Tis peace from God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoft. There are some special times wherein God speaks peace, fuch as folemn treating times and communion-days; and other special occasions are, when there hath been more than ordinary diligence in prayer, more than ordinary forrow for fin, peace is readily spoken on the back of it; as also, trying and sadly exercifing times are usually times of the intimation of peace: In a word, when and where his gospel comes, and is made lively, peace follows on it; and this is your time. O that peace may be found to have been spoken to many at this occasion!

Fourthly, O ferve, That in and about those times, when God rate spoken (or very urgently offered to speak) prace, there is often some restraint on people, as to the provailing of their folly; Some flop to the current of iniquity in its wonted manner and measure, in some more, and in some less; some more aw of God readily being on people then! Many will have a fort of rightcousness, like a morning cloud and early dew, that foon passeth away; some tickling of their affections, that quickly evanisheth; as the Lord faith of many of the Jews, that were hearers of John, who was a burning and a fining light, that they rejoiced in bis light for a season: So, Psal. 106. 12. Then believed they his words, they sang his praise; but they soon forgat his works, they waited not for his counsel: And, Pfal. 78. 34 Is hen be flow them, then they fought him: Novertheless they flattered kim with their lips, and lied to him with their to: ques : for their bearts were not right with God, neither were they fledfaft in his covenant. And something of this was alfo, even in Christ's hearers, and in the Galatians, who at first would have plucked out their eyes, and given them

following note will clear.

Fithly, Observe, That even those people and saints, who have sometime been to given to folly, to whom God bath spoken peace, and who have restrained their folly for a time, there-after may much fall back to folly again. The admonition here given, Let them not turn again to folly, supposeth this. This needs not much proof: If ye shall go through the faints recorded in scripture, ye will find sad instances of it; David, after peace was spoken to him, falls into adultery and murder; Hezekiah, after a sweet word of peace was spoken to him, Isa. 38. falls into the folly of pride and vain oftentation, Chap. 39. Peter, after peace spoken to him, denieth his Master; Jebosbaphat, after peace spoken to him, fell once and again into the fame fin, and once even after he was reproved for it; as is clear, 2 Ckron. 18, 19, & 20. Chapters. Or there may be a falling into some other fins, or out of one fin into another; as it was with David: This may befal real saints, yea eminent saints, even pillars in the house of God. Was there not peace spoken to the disciples, in that sweet sermon, John 14, & 15, & 16. Chap, and yet that fad word follows, Te all shall be offended because of me this night; and Peter, to whom that sweet word was spoken, I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not, doth foully fall into folly quickly after: What then may befall the more common fort of profef-

#38 After God Speaks Peace, fors, who know not what it is to stand before the least tentation? The reasons of this may be, 1. Because the devil falls presently on, and seeks, as it were, with seven worse devils to re-enter the foul, and busks this bait of the tentation, and prefents it in a new shape; old courtiers (to speak 10) and lufts fet on, and essay what hearing they can get. 2. Because tho, by peace spoken, tentations and corruptions may be bound up, yea, and somewhat mortified; yet they are not flain outright; they may lurk for a time, but still live. And, 3. Because his people are ready in such a warm sun-blink to grow (as it were) wanton, and under such a cessation from their lusts, to cast by their arms, to grow secure, to grow somewhat too fain, and to dream of an easy life; thus it was in a measure with Dawid, as he confesseth, Pfal. 30. I faid in my prosperity, I -fall never be moved. If they get peace for a little, who but they? They are lords (in a manner) and will not come unto bim; or, if they win to a few tears and some liberty, they are readily puft up, and in some fort bid their souls take them reft; as if they needed to trouble themselves no more: Therefore there are new on-sets, and the Lord lets them fee how wain they are, even in their best estate; as we may perceive, in the Lord's dealing with Hezekiah, and with David, in that P/al. 30. Thou didft bide thy face (faith he) and I was troubled. O what folly, vanity and out-breaking of corruption do often follow on the back of a feeming work of turning to God, and a tender-like frame in professors of religion! So, Pfal. 106. it is said, that they prowoked bim at the fea, even at the Red-fea; Even where and when they were in such a frame, that they believed his words, and sang his praise; they soon forgat his works, and waited not for his counsel: Which was, in a manner, at the very table to lift the beel against bim. And O how sad and lamentable a thing is it, to be unwatchful after a communion, and an offer or an intimation of peace!

Sixthly, Observe, That there is nothing more called for, from a people, who have been given to folly, and have had peace focken to them, than to take beed that they turn not again to folly; to take heed that they fail not into the same sins that they seemed to have abandoned and turned away from; that it be not with them, according to the true proverb, The dog is returned to his vomit, and the fow that was washed, to ber wallowing in the mire, as it is, 2 Pet. 2. 22 Under which similitude, the apostle powerfully diffwades professors of religion from turning again to fin, by shewing the lothsomness of it; it being as abominable, as a man's licking up that again which he hath vomited. This then is the duty that the Lord calls for; 1. That you should abstain from the fins that you have been given to, such as tippling, drinking drunk, swearing, sabbath-breaking, neglect of prayer and the like, and do so no more; not only not to relapse into the same sins, but that ye abfrain from every other fin; It is not enough that a man break off from one fin, and take up with another; it is not sufficient, tho' a man will not be drunk in his neighbour's house, if in the mean time in his own house he tipple, play the good-fellow (as ye call it) and mispend his time. 2. Ye would consider, what engagements and resolutions ye have come under, and that ye fall not back from them: In a word, it is, Not to be as ye were wont to be; and that ye be found in no known fin, nor defective in any known duty.

We come now to the more particular and close application of the whole, in these two Uses. The first whereof is, for advertisement and warning, Let bim that stands, take beed lest be fall; let him not look on himself as incapable to be stolen off his steet: Alas! persons may he in a manner exalted to heaven, and in a very good strame, in their own imagination and apprehension, and it may be in some measure really; and yet be brought back to the puddle and mire again, after they have shaken themselves and come out of it. In prosecuting this, we shall, 1. Shew wherefore we press it; And, 2. Wherein, or in reference to what we press it.

As for the first, viz. Wherefore it is that I do press this advertisement: And indeed it is not without very good ground, as ye will easily perceive, if, 1. Ye look to, and consider the best saints, and in their best condition; how soon are even they taken off their feet? Was not David often in a very good spiritual condition? and yet, how soon and foully did he sail into solly? Was not Adams in a good and desirable condition, when there was no quar-

After God Speaks Peace,

rei betwixt God and him, nor any ground for it? and yet how foon was he enfinated? Was not Peter in a good state and frame, when Chrift faid to him, Bleffed art thou Simon Bar-jona; field and blood bath not revealed that unto thee, but my Father who is in beaven? and yet, within a very little, he turns again so far to folly, as to be the devil's instrument to tempt Christ; as is clear from Matth, 16. v. 17. compared with v. 22. Were not the disciples in a good condition, when our Lord had preached to them both the preparation and thanksgiving sermons, before and after the communion? and yet they all were offended because of him, and for fook him and fled, and that very quickly, even that same very night. Now, when such tall cedars fall, what need have we, who are but in comparison filly shrubs, and but as small straws, to take warning? 2. If we consider, that those sins and falls were often exceeding Sudden, the same night, in the disciples (as I just now hinted) and in Hezekiah, very quickly after his recovery; exceeding foul, and exceeding universal, as in all the difciples; sometimes repeated, as in Lot, Felishaphat, and Peter; sometimes a plurality and variety of them joined together, as in David and Asa, and in his people at the Red-sea and in the wilderness; And who knows but the same very night, that ye were at the Lord's rable, some of you were back at your folly? and others of you before night, may be. We faid, not only suddenly, but foully; as is clear in Again, who, when he had no corruption formerly, fell from God to the devil (and, by the way, many of you are fo grofly ignorant, and wofully felf-conceited, that ve think, if we had been in his case, ye would not have done fo.) And (as I hinted) what foul faults were David's adultery and murder, and Solomon's idolatry, lat least his tolerating it, after God bath Spoken twice to bim? What a foul fault and fall was that of Ifrael's, after their fo folemn engagements, and fair undertakings, Exod. 19. when within forty days they deteffably and damnably danced before the golden calf? and what a foul fall was that of Peter's, to fortwear Christ, by denying him with an oath? and of the rest of the disciples, unkindly and unworthily to for-fake him and slee? And who knows but, shortly after this occasion, many of you that have been tipplers, may 2row grow worle, it may be, even to be found flaggering in the streets? and that others of you, who prayed not before, may be heard curfing? Ye who are believers and faints indeed, would observe this, and know that there is need, great need of watching and prayer, that ye enter not into temptation: And if there bath been any idleness, lightness, vanity, mispending of precious time, or the like; guard, O guard against those The reason why believers fall so often in gros fins, is their playing (as it were) with their petry idols; little things, given way to, lead on to greater and worse 3. Am I now speaking of any strange, uncouth or unprecedented thing? Have ye never obterved, how ye carried and behaved after communions before? Can ye fay, but that, as many communions as ye have been at, there have been as many breaches? If ye have never failed before, ye may be secure now; but, if ye have failed and milcarried formerly, bethe more wary and watchful now. 4. Have ye any knowledge of, and acquaintance with your own hearts? Is your corruption dead? Are your idols quite flain? or are they not rather like to those arange wives, in Nehemiah's time (who were put away) crying on you for pity (O cruel pity!) and weeping on you to be admitted to come home again? And have none of you so much foolish, fond and cruel pity, as to side with them? Hath a communion-day thrust out the devil fully? Are there no living lufts, nor firong corruptions within you? Do ye not fee what a ready welcome tentations to fin are like to get? and find ye not a woful propension to be glad that the restraint and aw-band of a communion-day is over and by? and doth not this press you to watch? 5. Try but how it hath been with you fince the labbath: Is not the bent ye had then, already very much flacked? Is not much of that feeming or really good frame of spirit gone? Is not the great part of your work yet before you? And is it not a greater difficulty, to make out an engagement, Than to make it; to perform, than to promises blow is it then, that ye have in a great part laid by your arms, as if all were done? When ye have, as foldiers, put yourselves in battle array, and given your military oath, and gotten the fign and word of command, should you quit your post? beware of that; the matter is After God Speaks Peace, of greater concernment, thin ye are aware of: Ye are yet but in a manner beginning.

For the second thing, v.z. What it is wherein, or in reference to what we do press your taking warning, and heing wary? And here I would have you, 1. To be aware not only of more groß fins, but even of all such things in general, which tentations use ordinarily to make their approaches and affaults by; as namely, little fins (little, I mean comparatively) Is it not a little one? faith Lot of Zoar. O how unfuitable was it for him, to whom the Lord had but a very little before spoken such a great and gracious word of peace, as that, Depart, for I can de mothing so long as thou art here; and yet the same night, or the morrow, this escapes him! And readily, when people fall once, they fall over and over again; but ye would beware to feek leave to lurk and loure a while in fuch Zoars: Beware to fay, It is a little fin; fay not, I shall not be drunken, but I must have leave to tipple, and trifle over the time. The devil drives fin and tentation, as a carpenter driveth a wedge; he will teach and prompt you to lay, We may be cheerful and sport us a while. without regard to the matter, measure or featon, tho ye be not profane: But once let in the point of the wedge by a little fin, and it may become a great one ere all be done, or a groffer one may foilow, even as the great end of the wedge doth the leffer. 2. Beware of returning to omissions: Some, it may be, will resolve that they will never ripple, nor swear, nor commit any such things; but they will, it may be, neglect and omit to pray as they have (helike) done these few days past: Tho they go not abroad to the tavern on the week-days, nor go idly in the fields on the Lord's day, yet they may mispend and trifle away their time at home; as if falling back into omissions, were not a turning again to folly, as well as falling back to commissions. The confessions of many poor creatures (who become publickly and prodigiously scanlous) on their death-beds or on a scassold, that omissions of duty have predisposed them to, and brought on those gross commissions, may and should awake and alarm us: Ye would therefore, with holy Job, make a covenant with your eyes, and other senses, and make conscience to keep it. a. Be-

Beware of falling back to a fecure coldrife manner of going about duries of worship alone or in company, in publick or in private: Let none of you think with yourselves, that, now this salemnity is over, ye need not wreftle in prayer, nor watch so strictly over your heart, but let it gad and reve, and not hedge it in on an ordinary Lord's day, as on a communion Lord's day; fince there is no liberty allowed for an idle word or thought any day, more than there is on that day: Think it not enough that ye say your prayers morning and evening, and that none can charge you with any offence; God, the all-feeing God, observes you, whether you be universal, sincere and ferious in the duties of religion. 4. Beware of neglecting spiritual and gospel-duties; such as, self-examination or felf-searching, self-denial, mortification, and use-making of Christ: The neglect of these, and the like, may be some way called gospel-folly. It is no doubt great gospelfolly, when Christ (being freely and fully offered therein) is not improved for wisdom, righteousness, sanctification and redemption; when the power of godliness is not aimed at in duty, but people rest and sit down in the form thereof, which yet in some respect is more cumbersom than the power; for Christ improved makes all things goeafily with us: Therefore, any of you who have looked on it as folly to neglect these spiritual duties, see that ye return not again to that folly. 5. Beware of unbelief: Have ye not resolved to cast out with that evil, and resolved to be no more jealous of God, tho ye should meet with difficulties? Believers in Christ, lick not up that vomit again, turn not again to that folly, to which there is a fecret natural bentness of heart: If (I say) unbelief and jealousy be a folly, take it not up, turn not to it again. 6. Beware of heart-ills. Possibly ye will not give way to more groß evils, and yet fuffer your fouls to be carried away after idols, or after vain, proud, ambitious, covetous, revengeful, filthly and lascivious thoughts: But, if in very deed Christ get the heart, he must reign in it, and command the eye, -tongue, ears, hands, feet and all. 7. Beware of falling back to the inordinate love of the world, and of letting the heart be too much addicted and glued to, even, lawful pleasures and creature-comforts, to your callings, wives, children, houses, lands and incomes of gain and profit; from which there hath been possibly some suitable abstractedness these days past. Ye should not only abstain from oppressing, stealing and deceiving: but ye would also guard against falling back to excessive pursuing after, and (as it were) glutting yourselves with the things of this world, however lawful in themselves. Alas! primus licitis: Inordinate love to, and immoderate pursuing after things lawful in themselves, destroy more fouls, than things finful and unlawful in themselves do: The excuses of those invited to the marriage of the King's Son, are founded, not on things simply sinful, but on lawful things, the farm, oxen; and married wife. Now the house is swept, and ye are in hazard, if ye guard not, to return to a greater and greedier feeding on those vanities. I dare fay, there are multitudes of men and women, who never to much hungred for the communion, as they have longed to have these solemn days over and by, that they might win back to their callings, worldly bufiness and pleasures; O what a weariness have they been to them? as facred folemnities were to those spoken of, Amos 8. 5. who cried. When shall the new-moon be gone, that we may fell corn; and the sabbath-day, that we may set out wheat? To many these days of fasting and spiritual feasting and communicating have been as a bridle-bit in their mouths, to restrain them from running on the mountains of their vanity; and who knows but, ere another communion come. the Lord may feed you as a lamb in a large place?

The second Use is for exhortation. Would you then know the duty that ye are called unto? this is it, Let not God's people and saints turn again to folly: Let not the idler return to his idleness, the tippler to his tippling, the scoffer to his scoffing; the ignorant, who have been at a little pains to learn some questions before the examination and communion, to his negligence in seeking after knowledge, &c. Let not this be; if ye have vomitted out these and other sins, lick them not up again. To press this Use a little, we would, 1. Give you some considerations from the text. 2. Some directions to help you forward in the pra-

Aice of it.

For the first, viz. Some considerations from the text to press press it. 1. Is it not a folly to fin once? If fo, fure it is much more to relapse into sin. Whether is it more true wisdom to abstain from those sins, or to fall back into them? Is it not more wildom for you, who have been given to tippling or drunkenness, to neglect of prayer, and the like, now to let alone fin, and to give yourselves to prayer, than to be walking in the fireet on the plain-stones? Is it not more wildom to be given to edifying discourse, than to be laughing and sporting over the time? Is it not better to come to the Church, than to spend the time idly, in discourfing and waiting for a tentation? And if your conscience assent to the truth of this, then we take witness in your conscience, that it doth so; and this instrument of witness will stand on record against you, if ye shall turn to those sins and to this folly again. 2. Have ye been examining yourselves? and do ye find, that much of your life hath been spent in folly, by some twenty, by some thirty, by some forty, by some fifty, by some fixty years; and every day's account cast up amounts only to folly, vanity and madness? And is it not enough, and may it not suffice you, that ye have spent so long time in folly, tho ye spend no more so? 3. Hath not God been speaking peace to some, and given them the intimation of it? so that their fouls have been made to fay, God is bere : And have they not gotten the bargain closed, and the handwriting that was against them torn? We hope, there are some such among us. Nay, are there any, but the Lord hath been offering peace to them, treating with them, faying, Behold me, behold me, intreating and requesting them to be reconciled? And hath there not been some tickling of the affections of many? If so, will ye be fuch fools as to fall back, and to wear out the sense of that peace and warmness that any of you have win to? And ye with whom God hath been meeting and treating about the pardon of fin, what a folly will it be, in place of getting a discharge, to increase and multiply your debt? 4. Are there not some engagements on you? Or, whatever he real, is there not a profession of coming under engagements? Are not the vows of God on some of you? Is there not some fin that hath stared you in the face, which ye have resolved to abstain from? And hath there not been some

After God Speaks Peace, furring and tickling of defires to perform what ye have resolved and engaged to? And will ye break all these bands? Will ye repent and rue that ever ye engaged to God? If so, as ye notably play the sools, so the Lord will be about with you, and even spew you out of his mouth, that ye may puddle your fill in the mire of fin. 5. Is there not a great bentness and propension in all naturally to turn again to folly? Is there not an evil bears of unbelief, ready to depart from the living God? I have so much charity for you, as that you will grant this; and when the Lord hath said, Watch, and tells that be is at band that betrays you, will ye go securely, and not take warning? O what desperate folly would this be! 6. Consider what will come of it, if ye shall fall back, if ye slacken your bent, and, growing cold, turn again to folly? Ye will wear out any bit of good frame that ye have obtained: Ye will blur and fully the real or supposed clearness of your interest, mar your peace, and become in a manner more beaftly and swinish in your sinful way than before; at the very thoughts whereof, your hearts should scar, nauseate, and even grow fick. And what will be the upfhot thereof? Either ye will repent, or never repent : If ye lay, ye will repent; are ye fure that God will give you repentance, if ye shall hazard on some sin? Are not many given up to hardness of heart, who never come to repentance? Know ye what repentance is? have ye not been already effaying and doing somewhat at repentance, and have ye not found it difficult and hard to come by? And, if ye shall fin yet more, will not repentance be yet a greater, more difficult and hard work? And, suppose ye should get repentance, ye shall know the truth of that saying, Fer 2. That it was an evil and a bitter thing to depart from the living God, and that his fear was not before your eyes. what shame and confusion of face will it bring with it, to remember that we had so many warnings from the word without, and so many convictions and challenges from our conscience within, and that yet we went over them, and with a high hand went on in our folly! Will those things be little, think ye? What pleasure or profit can ye have in those things, whereof ye will be ashamed? Yea, suppose

come to it) ye shall weep and mourn bitterly, that ever ye hazarded fo on fin, over your light and convictions, and over the belly of your conscience. If ye get not repentance (as I am afraid many never shall) what will come of it? Convictions and challenges will wear out, the heart will grow harder; you will go on laughing at reproofs, mocking at exhortations to repentance and reformation, and regardlefly treading on what might reclaim you; you will be angry at them who brought you under any engagements; ye will become very Atheifts in your hearts, and as so many profane Heathers in your carriage: And when you have lived thus for a time (and the Lord knows how long) will ye not come to die? will not your month come on you? will not your bed take you, or ye take your bed; and then the contcience will either awake, or be filent : If it awake, will, not this be your language, which is the language of many a poor wretched creature? Wo is me,. I have milpent my time, and have been glutting myfelf with the world and finful pleasures; Oh vain world! O bewirching and beguiling world! Alas that ever I was for much taken up with it! And, if the conscience be quiet, what will come of it? Will that fin ly on, and not be fought account of? Know ye not, consider ye not that word, Gal. 6. Be not deceived, Ged will not be mocked; as men fow, so they hall reap? Think ye that God will be inferior to the creature? will not your governor or landlord feek account of your according to your engagement; and shall not the Lord call you to a reckoning? Yea, certainly: And the conscience will then awake and roar on you; then the curse, wo and damnation will seize upon; and take hold of your foul in death; and devils shall carry it thither, where hypocrites are, until the judgment of the great day; and then ye will fay, Turning again to fin was the greatest folly and madness: And thus, whether God have a purpose of repentance to you or not, ye shall one day rue it at all the veins of your heart (to speak so) and shall find the folly of it, and that to your everlasting prejudice and loss, if ye repent not.

And therefore, let me press this use upon you, and earnestly exhort you to let these considerations fink down into your ears and hearts: Beloved, we are jealous over you, and would God it were with a suitable godly jealousy! We are afraid that many, ere we be aware, be down in their former puddle, that ignorance and profanity be as rife as ever; there have been so may fits and good appearances, and of so short continuance heretofore: And now ye have been making fome mint; but what will come of ir, if ye fall back? If these ordinances shall do you no good, we know not what will do it : I think we were never nearer to some great crisis, to a nick of being lost or gained; we have you (as it were) in the very place of the breaking forth of children, fo that now you must be either sately and fairly delivered, or prove abortives. Ah! are our fasts and communions to no purpose? Are all your purposes and resolutions, your engagements, and seeming willinguess to engage, in vain and to no effect? If ye shall fall back after this, and turn again to folly, I do not much expect that any ordinances or future engagements shall do you much good: We must either look for better and more fruit, or there will be more barrenness and stubbornness; either ye shall be more holy, or more of that old fin of malignity, stoutness of heart against God, and more opposition to godliness shall bud amongst you: We would from our very fouls with you brought well thorow, but are afraid there be a flicking. Why is it, I pray, that we infift so much with you, if we were not jealous over you? Will ye have faces to hold up before God, when we and we shall be reckoned with, if we shall fit these warnings? or, what heart can we have to go about his service amongst you, if yet there be a sticking; and when there is some wrestling to get you up the hill (as it were) and ye run further down than ever? O to be mightily helped of God to travail in birth, to have Christ formed in you, and formed in you again! Is it probable, when many of you are brought further up than before, if ye fall further back, that ever ye will win up again? We apprehend, that there are many of you, who shall never again, with so much moral seriousness, be wrought upon, if there shall not be now some abiding and effectual work, but a turning again to folly. It is not, beloved hearers, the fruit of one preaching or two, thatwe are now driving at; but the great scope of this bleffed gof-

pel: Therefore, for Christ's take, hold at it, come forward, and go not back; O turn not again to folly: Else be affured, that the Lord and your own consciences will bear witness, and we his servants will also bear witness against you (as many of you will bear witness against us, if we shall do so) if, after God hath spoken peace to you, ye shall return again to folly. Let me yet add this one word further, for pressing this; Will ye but consider what we are feeking? is it not your real good and advantage? is it any hard or unreasonable thing that we crave of you, or any uncouth thing, or any thing but that which Abraham, David, Paul, and others of the faints, were defirous and studious to be at, yea, and our blessed Lord Jesus himself was content to be at? Tho' he was never indeed tainted with any folly, yet he was content and careful to fulfil all righteousness; and what seek we of you, but that ye would feek and labour to imitate him; that ye would prevent your own loss and ruin, and give Christ a kindly and a hearry welcome, in order to the exercise of all his offices about you; that bis beart may be made glad, and that be may see of the fruit of the travail of his soul to his satisfaction, in the salvation of a number of souls in Glasgow? O that we could get, you prevailed with to be as serious in these things, as ye are in and for the things of this present life; and that we could get as great vent (to speak so) for Christ's precious wares amongst you, as a man would get for some rare commodity, nay (may I or shall I fay?) but even for tobacco! Alas that incomparably precious Jesus Christ, and his purchase, the everlasting covenant, even the fure mercies of David, should have less vent and sale, than that and an hundred other commodities have! this is a lamentation, and should be for a lamentation. Always let bygones be seriously reflected on, and fee that by all means ye turn not again to folly.

As for the fecond thing, proposed, viz. Some directions, for preventing your turning again to folly: Ye may take these sew, and the Lord himself put them home with a strong hand. If, then, Walk in sear; Serve the Lord in sear, and rejoice before him with trembling. The wife man sees the evil, but the fool passeth on and is considers. There is a sort of spiritual pride, vanity and self-conceit, reigning amongst ordinary professors, and too much of it pre-vailing amongst believers, that undoes them. Are there any of you atraid of fornication and adultery, or of turning giddy fectaries and the like? Your want of fear brings you into the mire, ere ye be aware; Pride goes before destruction, and a baughty mind before a fall. The little fear that is amongst the most part says, that some black turn (as we use to speak) is in their hands, or some foul fall before them: Hence the apostle, Philip. 2, 12. exhorts, Work out the work of your own falvation with fear and trembling; and, 2 Cor. 7. 1. to perfett boliness in the fear of God. 2dly, Observe well and lay due weight on that exhortation of our Lord, Matth. 26. 41. (which hath several directions in it) Watch and pray, that ye evter not into temptation; look about you, be not secure, stand. by your post, let nothing go out nor come in without strict examination, and teek (as it were) after its pass, and set (as it were) a sentinel at the port of every sense; And what I fay unto you, I fay unto all, watch, faith the Lord, Mark 13. 37. Be not secure; watching is a most suitable duty for Christ's soldiers: Fail not to join with it much prayer, not for the fashion, but that which is in the Spirit and servent; yet lay no weight on it, as if ye could merit any thing by it, but go about it humbly and feriously, in order to the entertaining the life of grace; fit not up in it, but rather double your diligence. 3dly, Keep the heart well; heart-ills are the principal ills : Keep (faith Solomon, Prov. 4.) the heart with (or above) all keeping; fet your main force to guard it, for there Satan keeps his court and head-quarter, and thence gives his orders to the outward senses: Dally not with sin in the heart, else it will come a further length. 4thly, Forget not your engagements, but let the vows of God ly on you, and have due weight with you: Let not the fins that ye discovered and saw in your self-examination between God and you, before ye came to the communion table, be forgotten; but remember them, to repent of them, and to renounce them; And when one knot (to say so) of your engage-ment looseth, cast another faster; or, if a knot were weak, strengthen it, or cast a new one; for, as acts of faith must be renewed, so must acts of engaging to God. stbly, Be much in the exercise of repentance for your bygone folly; My fin (faith David, Pfal. 51.) is ever refore me. Think not repentance to be the work of a day or two; look back and reflect on your old fins of tippling, swearing, enmity at godiness, &c. For, if ye wear out of the exercise of repentance, ye will wear in, piece and piece, on your old fins; against which repentance is a notable bar: Being much in the exercise of repentance, keeps the heart sober and watchful, and loth to hazard on fin, and withal makes fin bitter; but the Antinomian way takes off all restraints, and looseth the reins to fin: It is much now to see a penitent; I wish there may be much repentance in fecret; but, for any thing that is feen, 'tis very rare. 6thly, In an especial manner, be much in improving the strength of Jesus Christ, to prevent your turning again to folly. Do not undertake nor engage in your own strength, but believingly lay all the weight and stress on your Surety; put his name in the band, which he gave to God, for the debt of duty: Abide in me, and I in you, so ye Ball bring forth much fruit; for without me ye can do nothing, saith our Lord to his disciples, John 15. But how many fail and come short here, while they go about duties, and either quite misken or make but very little use of Christ? Many know very little or nothing at all, what it is to make use of Christ, in order to their making of their peace with God; but O how very few know what it is to make use of his strength to enable them for duty, and to go through the wilderness leaning on their Beloved! Defer not to make your resolutions and engagments practicable; there are many, alas! who think shame, it should be faid, that a sermon had so much weight with them, as to make them alter and change their course at once: It may be, they will consent to be religious, but they must be allowed to come to it by degrees, and to creep toward it piece-mail; but beware of that, left it prove in the issue to be a shift of thy deceitful heart: Ponder these words well, Eccl. 5. Defer not to pay what thou haft wowed, for the Lord bath no pleasure in fools; and, in the Holy Ghost's account, he is a fool that deterreth and putteth off one moment. O! delays are in a special manner dange-K 4 rous

After God speaks Peace, 152 rous here, and Satan will not fail to knit one delay to another. 8thly, Reject all temptations to fin and turning again to folly, with abhorrence; tay, with Ephraim, What have I any more to do with idols? Never think on them, but with indignation and holy difdain; for ye are undone, if ye but once liften to them. 9tbly, Be often examining, if ye be like and answerable to your communicating, and to your promifes and engagements; many know not how it is with them, because they examine not. 10thly, Walk humbly in the sense of your weakness: Trust not to your own heart; for he that doth so, is reputed to be a fool, by the Holy Ghost. 11thly, Be helping one another forward in your way to heaven: Take beed (faith the apostle, Heb. 3. 12, 13.) that there be not in any of you an evil beart of unbelief, in departing from the living God: But exbort one another daily, while it is called to-day, left any of you be hardned through the deceitfulness of sin. To be edifying to others, would, through God's bleffing, be edifying to yourselves, and help you to be in good case; to be praying with them would ftir up yourselves to more seriousness in the exercife of that duty; to be reproving fin in them, would waken up more hatred of it in yourselves; and to be much conversant in the duties of mutal edification with them that are warm in their love to Christ, to his interests and friends, and diligent in the study of holiness, would readily through grace stir you up to seek after more love and more holiness; as he infinuates in that exhortation to the Christian Hebrews, chap. 10. 24. Let us consider one another, to provoke unto love and good works. 12thly, and in a word, Endeavour to walk fuitably to your light; your own consciences will readily tell you, that it is best to walk so, as ye may abstain from that which ye know to be sin, and to be doing and delighting in that which ye know to be dury. There are very few (if any) duties of religion, but they are one time or another, and many of them frequently laid before you; and not a few shall, I hope, have cause of bleffing God eternally, that ever this gospel-light was made to shine so clearly on them: But for such of you, as detain the truth of God in unrighteousness (as the apostle fays, some do, Rom. 1.) or make a prisoner of it, by ferring a guard of corrupt affections about it; Whom turn not again to Folly.

God gave up to vile affections, and to all forts of most abominable fillines, because, though they knew that such things ought not to have been done, yet they not only did, but took pleasure in them that did them: I leave it, with all the seriousness I can win to, on you, and take instruments of witness in your consciences, that ye have had great offers, and have made fair mints, and come under, at least, seeming engagements: If ye have not done so, declare so much; but, since ye all profess that ye have engaged, and some have really engaged, not to turn again to folly; walk suitably to your engagements, as ye would not have your consciences condemning you, and God who is greater than your consciences to condemn you. Many, I sear, have sleeping consciences, and that will not now speak to them; but the conscience of every one will speak at length, and not keep silence. We shall now say no more, but pray that this word may be blessed of God to you.

These Five following Sermons were all preached about the Time of the Communion; the first Four within a very few Days before it, as it gradually approached; the Fisth after it, On Jeremiah 50. v. 4, 5. In those days, and in that time, saith the Lord, the children of Israel Dall come, they and the children of Judah together, going and weeping: They hall go, and seek the Lord their God.

Verse 5. They shall ask the epay to Zion, with their faces thitherward, saving, Come and let us join ourselves to the Lord, in a perpetual covenant that shall not be forgotten.

SERMON I.

hite in these words, that lay forth before us very clearly the frame and carriage of a people, which formerly have dealt loofly and deceiffully in the matter of their covenant with God, when they come through his grace to be serious and in good earnest in the upmaking of it again.

As for the people spoken of here, they are Israel and Judah, the Lord's own covenanted people, who had dealt failify and foully in the covenant, and had thereby procured tad strokes to themselves, and had divided and separated themselves from God, and one of them from another; which division and separation continued lamentably long. They are both here represented as coming home together, seriously endeavouring to amend and make up the breach betwixt God and them, and among themselves.

As for the time that this relates to (In those days, and in that time, faith the Lord) it looks literally, and according to the cohesion, to Babylon's destruction, and the Lord's bringing down the Bahylonish monarchy by the Persian king Cyrus; in which time the people of God had fomo liberty to return to their own land : Yet, confidering the great scope of the words, and that this liberty of the Jews is in a great part fulfilled in Christ, and that the union spoken of here is such as hath in it the gathering together of all the tribes; and withal, that the covenant which they enter into with the Lord Christ, is such as shall never be forgotten: We must extend the words to their ingraffing again into their own olive; when all Israel shall be faved, and they shall be graffed into their own root and stock from off which they were broken. As for the scope, tis partly to encourage the Jews; this being not only a promile of their return, but also (and mainly) of their repentance, and of their friendship and reconciliation with God and with one another. In those days, they that had been far from him, and busy vexing one another, shall some, and come together: Their work and business, in coming, is to feek the Lord; and the manner of it is going and weeping, praying and repenting: And, altho' the way be somewhat dark, and not so discernible to them; yet they go on, asking the way to Zion with their faces thitherward: They ask how they may come to him, worship God again aright aright, and perform the duties of a people inchurched to, and in covenant with him; and (as it were) from one post or town to another, they ask the way, and get direction from one day to another, and from one duty to another: And their defign in all is, Come, fay they on the matter, we were once in covenant with God and with one another, but we have been unfaithful in both; now let us amend and make up the breach in both: Let us join ourselves to the Lord in a perpetual coverant, never to be forgotten : Let us renew our covenant with God, and let it be done firmly and furely, so as it may not be broken again. This looks and hath respect to Fer. 31. 31, 80, and 32. 39, 40. where the Lord promifeth to make a new covenant with the Louse of Israel, and with the house of Judah: Cited by the apostle, Heb. 8, and 'tis called, Chap. 32. an everlasting covenant: Which is not so much to be understood of mere external covenanting, as of faving sharing in, and partaking of Christ's righteousness for the pardon of fin: and of their engaging to God, in his own strength, to be forthcoming in the fruits of saving grace and holiness in their practice. This is, in fum, the way and course which they take; and is a short directory for what should be a people's carriage, when they would make up the breach of a broken covenant with God.

As for the particular scope of this place, as it relatest to Israel and Judab their returning! together, we shall not insist in it: Yet from these words we may see, First, That there is good ground for us to expect the Lord's bringing back his scattered people the Jews, and their ingraffing again into their own Olive. The same God that perswaded Japhet to dwell in the tents of Shem, can perswade Shem to dwell in the tents of Japhet. As they minded us Gentlies, as a little sister, and were holily solicitous what they might do for us, we ought in gratitude to mind them as the elder sister, that they may turn again to the Lord; who hath given us his faithful word for it, which cannot fail, but must be suffilled.

Secondly, We see, That beart-melting towards God, and feriousness to make up the breach of a breken covenant belowist a people and him, conduce natively to make the bearts of those that have been divided and set at variance from one another,

To amend an ill Condition.

156 in much warmness of love to unite and sweetly to join together. Tis from this, that Israel and Judab become one flick in the Lira's band, Ezek. 37. This makes them as melted meral to run close together, as it were, into one lump: Tho' it was a long-continued schism, and had much bitterness attending it; yet, when their hearts are touched with a sente of sin and of a broken covenant, their former differences and animolities evanish. Softness of heart, in the sense of bygone sin, would silence many things among us, that all disputings, writings and printings will not be able to do. Pray for this to the land, as the most effectual mean and way of curing our divisions, and of uniting us in the Lord: It joins Judab and Israel together, whose breach was much greater, and of far longer continuance

Thirdly, We see here, That a people's joining and runming togother in serious seeking of the Lord, is very commendable and lovely, and a good token and epidence to them of their turning to God, and if God's accepting of them: Even as bitterness and division is exceeding displeasing to God, and prejudicial to themselves, and to the work of grace in them. This is an happy-like, hopeful and promifing day of repentance and turning to God, that bedeth much, unipeakably much good to a land and people.

But we come to consider the words as they do direct unto, and chalk out the way for a people returning to make up a broken covenant with God, which is the scope. And we may take it up in these three, I. As it respects the frame of their hearts; And O what a tender, humble, warm and mournful frame are they represented to be in ! They shall come, and go together, exciting one another, going and weeping, with their faces towards Zion. respects and holds forth the great design they have, and that is, to renew and make fure the covenant betwirt God and them: Tho it was now broken, and they want not. challenges for it; yet they do not fay, We will never enter in it again, because we brake it the last time we made it; but, Come (say they) let us make it the more firm and stable. 3. As it respects and holds out their posture, and the way which they take in pursuing this defign: There is a going and weeping, a praying to.

and feeking of the Lord; in a word, they feek and endeavour to renew their covenant with God, feriously, diligently and humbly: And thus they pursue their design.

First then, If we look to their frame, we will find implied in it, I. A guilty condition. 2. A challenging and convinced condition. 3. A repenting condition; they are kindly affected with the wrongs done to God, and defire and use means to have them righted.

We shall name two or three general doctrines from this first consideration of the word, tho in est ce in with fall in with the last. The first whereof is this, That God's revenanted people may deal foully and falsy in his covenant: For their coming to renew the covenant, supposets that they had broken it; and its also implied in their mourning and weeping, and saying, Come and let us join ourselves to the Lord in a perpetual covenant, never to be forgotten. This needs no further proof than the history of God's people their dealing with him; which holds out clearly and convincingly the strong propension and hent of heart that is naturally in them to backside, and like a deceitful how to turn aside and to prove unstedsast in his covenant.

Secondly, There is here implied a distance betwixt God and them, following on the breach of covenant: Their going to feek the Lord, faith, that he is a-feeking; this is very fad, yet most true, That sin, and unfaithful dealing in God's covenant, will make a separation betwint bins and a people in covenant with him. Thus 'tis faid, Ifa. 59. 1. The Lord's hand is not shortned that it cannot save, nor his ear beavy that it cannot bear; but your iniquities have feparated betwint you and your God. 'Tis very like, that many believe not this, that fin hath fuch influence in making separation betwixt God and sinners; but in that day, when an eternal separation shall be made betwixt God and them, it will be undeniably made known and manifest, when many of you, that now throng to the ordinances, will, if grace prevent not, meet with that fentence (O dreadful sentence!) Depart from me, ye workers of iniquity : I never knew you.

Thirdly, There is here their sensibleness of both these, 1. That they had broken covenant. 2. That God had separated separated himself and withdrawn his presence from them for their breach of covenant. Tho fin be very evil, and the want of God's presence very sad; yet they had this good, that they were kindly sensible of both: Whence we may observe, That conviction of bygone wrongs done to God, and kindly resenting of his absence, are the first rises and springs of repentance and turning to God; or, they are this business and stir among this people flows from? Here it is, First, They apprehend a quarrel betwirt God and them; and, Next, They apprehend a distance: And this puts them feriously to mind turning to God with weeping and supplications, and to renew their covenant, for recovering of God's presence: This same is the Spirit's method. John 16. I will (faith the Lord Christ) fend the Spirit; and the first thing he doth is this, He convinceth the world of fin: So Alls 2. 37, the first thing that ever (to speak so) turned the chase in Peter's hearers was, that they were pricked in their bearts for fin; and this did put them to an advisement, and to cry out, Men and brethren, what fall we do? And indeed there is a necessity of this, considering the Lord's way of administring his grace: For, for long as persons are not convinced of their sin, they are not apprehensive of a quarrel; but conviction of sin makes them apprehensive of it, and to think, that they would be obliged to any who would relieve them out of that fad condition: And, while God is absent and not missed. they fleep on; and tho' he be abtent, yet they know it not, as Samson knew not that God had left him, till he went out to sbake bimself : But, when God's departure becometh sensible, it will make a wicked Saul to howl, and will make a gracious tender foul to take the alarm hot; as we see, Cant. 2. 5. where the Bride, missing Christ, is put to feeking; and, still missing him, her heart is kept fluttoring and on wing in pursuing after his presence, till the recover and find it.

As the U/e of the point, we would exhort you to let this truth fink in your hearts: There is a necessity of the conviction of these Two, 1. Of the wrongs done to God, 2. Of God's absence, ere ye can be serious in the exercise of repentance and turning to God. What is the cause that

Make fure Covenant with God. 159 that many ly still in deep fecurity with much debt upon their score, and, ly down and rise up without God's company? Even this, that they never had it, and were never troubled for the want of ir; they were never convinced and made sensible of their sin. Now, this conviction is not, simply to know that we have fin, as many take it to be, who think it enough that they know that they are finners; but 'tis such a conviction, as arrests the sinner before God, and puts him to answer for his fin: 'Tis like an officer coming with an order to put a man in prison for debt; he may go confidently and floutly enough up and down the street, under the knowledge of his debt; but, when he is arrested for it by the officer, it affects him, and toucheth him in the quick: So is it with a foul throughly convinced of fin; men may know that they are finners, but the conscience for a time may not much trouble them, and they may take on more to a long day, and shift challenges and convictions; but, when the conscience awaketh, and the law arresteth them, the matter finks deeper on them. Would ye then know what is a fuitable frame for fasting and communicating? We would commend this to you, even to study a thorowness of the conviction of fin, and to be sensible of the distance that is betwixt God and you, and narrowly to observe whether he be present or absent. 'Tis very sad, and much to be lamented, that many, who are ignorant of the way of God, should be so strongly perswaded of the goodness of their condition, that there is no access for any word so much as once to bear upon them: If we should ask many of you, Whether are ye throughly convinced of your wrongs done to God, and sensible of the distance betwirt him and you? Ye would readily answer, That ye never wanted nor missed him; he hath been always your God, and ye have been always his people: Not from any strength of faith, but from ignorance, stupidity and carnal presumption. Yea, many of you have not to much knowledge as to cover your ignorance and hypocrify; neither can any gain the least ground of you, to make you sensible that your faith and communion with God are unfound and delufory, because they have not had a right rife from conviction of fin and of distance from God, putting you on to repentance and

covenanting with him. But, because several persons will be ready to think and fay, that they have convictions of fin; as indeed there is much ground and reason for them: I shall point at some convictions, for which there is just ground, and whereby ye may know if your convictions have been thorow and found; most whereof, if not all of them, may be gathered from the words. 1. There is a conviction of the want of faith: The holy Spirit's first work, John 16. 9. is to convince the world of sin, because they believe not on him. Were ye ever convinced of your unbelief? Many will be convinced of fabbath-breaking. of curfing, swearing, lying, drunkenness, &c. to be sins, who were never convinced of the fin of their want of faith; for they always had it, as they think. And what, I pray, can fuch as ye do at a fast or humiliation for fin. when this is your great fin, and ye cannot by any means be brought to take with it, tho you take with other fins; but can come boldly to the table of the Lord as believers. and fuch as have no just reason to doubt of the soundness of your faith, while, in the mean time, all the faith that ye have is but rotten presumption? This is a most fearful condition: For, so long as ye think that ye have faith, ye cannot think yourselves to be lost; neither can ye cast yourselves down with a stopped mouth before God, nor is there access for any word from him to do you good. A 2d conviction or challenge is, of, or for the want of a new nature. Were ye ever convinced of this? not only of this and that and the other particular fin, but that ye were in a finful and unrenewed state? Nicodemus, John 3. comes to Christ, and speaks him fair; but the Lord lets him know that fair words, a great profession, and some, yea, much knowledge, will not do the turn; he must necessarily have somewhat else, even a new nature; he must be born again, else be cannot enter into the kingdom of beaven. He is very unwilling and loth to digest that doctrine; but the Lord tells him, that, That which is born of the flish, is flish. It were good that many of you had that word from your heart in your mouth, which is, Jer. 31. 18. Turn thou me, and I shall be turned: Convictions of a natural state, alas! are very rare; if any of you have had such convictions, try what became of them, and

and what followed on them. A 3d conviction or challenge is of, or for former breaches of covenant, for gospel-fins, and the fin of dealing unfaithfully in God's covenant: And, can any of you shift this challenge, considering what yo were tyed to in baptism, and by other vows and engagements which ye have come under fince that time, especially at the Lord's supper? how few of those have been kept? or rather, have they not been as so many ropes of sand? And, who are suitably challenged for, and convinced of fuch breaches, as it is implied here, that these people are ? A 4th conviction is, of the want of God's presence, infinuated in their going to feek the Lord, which imports an absence of God, and that sinfully procured by them, for which they weep and are kindly affected. The absence of God, simply considered, is no ground of challenge, it being an act of sovereignty; but absence, procured throw our sin, is a great ground of challenge. Alas! the most part know not, neither are acquainted with any such challenge; they think God is always with them, however the Lord is absent: And it would well become us to search out diligently that which hath procured his absence; for, whatever may be God's end in it, there is abundant ground of just challenge that we may get against ourselves in it. A 5th ground of challenge is, in respect of their own stupidity and ignorance, which have incapacited them to take up the way how to come to God for making up the breach; therefore they ask the way to Zion. And this may be another fad challenge to many, who, thro' their ignorance, senslesness and stupidity, have utterly indisposed and unfitted themselves to make their peace with God, and are without knowledge of the way how to vent their defires to him. A 6th challenge implied is, the want of love to one another; and a challenge for feen distance betwixt God and them, helps to bear in on them this challenge for diffance betwixt one another: Therefore, now they say, Come and let us join ourselves. This is another challenge, which we should not shift; it is too evident. whatever our professions be, that we are much cooled and fallen behind in our love to one another. A 7th challenge is, lying long under a feen evil condition, without being fuitably affected with it; therefore these people go now

To amend an ill Condition.

162 with the more tenderness about the work of turning to . God, and of their renewing covenant with him, that they were so long a falling to it: I suppose, many of you who never knew what repentance was, and others also who have been more serious than now they are, may have this challenge. It is no ffrange nor uncouth thing that is called. for from us, to fit and prepare us for falts and communions; it is even seriousness in these most plain, common and obvious things: And if ye can hold up your faces, and fay, that these concern you not, nor the present occasion, ye may wave and lay them alide; but, if they be such things as your consciences convince you of, it is most necessary that we take time to think upon them and lay them to heart, and that we fludy thro grace to be humbled for them before the Lord.

But the observation, that we intend mainly to speak a word to at this time, is this, That there is no amanding or righting of an ill condition, but by making sure and fast the covenant betwirt God and us. What is the remedy of this people's ill condition here, when they find themselves so far wrong? Come (fay they) and let us join ourselves to the Lord in a perpetual covenant, never to be forgotten. When I speak here of covenanting, as that on which the quieting of our consciences, and the remedy of things wrong in our condition, doth so much depend; it is not to be understood of a bare promise only to right and amend things that are wrong and amis, but it is to be under-stood of a real covenanting with God, of a real and cordial accepting of the offer of Jesus Christ made to us in the gospel, whereby an union betwixt God and us thro him as Mediator is made up: Wherein there is God's offer and promise, on the one fide; and our faith, accepting of, and submitting to the terms and conditions on which the offer is made, on the other fide: Whereupon there followeth a mutual closed bargain betwin God and us; or the very bargain is thus made up: And fo, whatever way we look upon and confider our condition as evil or fad, whether in repect of challenges for, and convictions of fin, and of wrongs done to God; or in-respect of darkness, unclearness and confusion; or in respect of croffes and afflictions; this is the way to win at the remedy.

thereof. Thus David, 2 Sam. 23. 5. when he is drawing near to death, and hath many challenges for things that had been wrong in his personal walk and in his house, which had brought on it much affliction and trouble; and when he finds himfelf very infirm, and under the want of much of that lively sense he had wont to have, he betakes himself to this, Though (says he) my bouse be not so with God, yet be bath made with me an everlafting covenant, ordered in all things and fure; and this is all my salvation and all my defire, though be make it not to grow. And if we look on the prodigal, Luke 15. when he is under a conviction of his fin and mifery, what refolves he upon as a remedy? I will go (faith he) to my Father, and I will fay, Father, I bave finned, &c. The first thing he betakes himself to, and resolves upon, is, to catch hold of the covenant-relation betwixt his Father and him. And there is a necessity of this, on a threefold account; 1. Because there can be no folid ground for extricating and bringing one out of an evil condition, but by covenanting with God; for what else, I pray, can silence a challenge, or quiet and calm the conscience in respect of guilt, when it saith to the person, Thou hast sinned, and art liable to the carse? There is no way to get fin and the carse removed, but by sleeing to Jesus Christ, and closing with God's offer of pardon upon the account of his satisfaction rested on by faith: Therefore is faith compared to a shield whereby we may quench the fiery darts of the devil. 'Tis true, faith the foul accused of entity against and wrongs done to God, I was an enemy to him, and greatly wronged him; I was liable to his curse and wrath for fin: But he offered me pardon and reconciliation thro' the Mediator, and I have accepted of his offer, and do rest upon Christ's satisfaction for pardon; therefore I am justified, and shall not come into condemnation. 2. Because there can be no peace to the foul, till there be some thorow evidence that the covenant is fixed and made fure; for this is the way that God hath laid down for making peace: As the quarrel and curse are founded on the breach of one covenant, to our peace ariseth upon our engaging with God in another covenant; hence are all those promises, Jer. 30.31, 32, 33, and Heb, 8, which are so often repeated, I will

- To amend an ill Condition.

L64 pardon their iniquities, I will remember their fins no more, &c. all which promises being privileges of a covenance with God, whoever would look for the performance of the promises, there is a necessity of their being in covenant with him, ere they can expect the performance of them, and attain to peace. 3. Because all that are without the covenant of grace are under the curse, being liable to the breach of the firt covenant: Therefore, Epb. 2. these two are put together, Strangers from the covenant of promise; and having no hope, being without God and Christ in the world: And so, to be without the covenant, is to be without hope, and without God, and without Christ.

II.

Use 1. Lay this for an unquestionable ground, that, if ever ye be well, it must be by this covenant with God. Is there any conviction of tin, of violating bygone engagements to God, and of wrongs done to him? Take it for a certain truth, that things must be thus adjusted, and thus secured betwixt God and you; that ye must have pardon and peace, by entring into, and making fore the new covenant with God on the grounds of his own grace: That is, when God is treating with you, and declaring that he is content to close with you, on condition that ye will take with your fin, renounce your own righteousness and fubmit to Christ's, and be content to live to him all the days of your life that are behind; step to, and close with him on his own terms: For the heart's yielding its confent to God, is the making of the covenant; and that entitleth to all the good that is in the Bible. In fum, 'tis this, If ye (faith the Lord) accept of my offering myself to be your God, and consent to give up yourselves to me, if ye will quit your own righteousness and embrace Christ's, I will pardon your fin, I will be forthcoming to you for happinels, and will fanctify you and make you fit to be partakers of it: And your making of the covenant fure, is your yielding to be happy on these terms, even to be content to take juffification and pardon of fin freely, by vertue of Christ's fatisfaction; and to give up yourselves to be his, to be for him, and to live to him and not to yourselves. As ye get God engaged to be yours, so ye engage and subscribe to be God's, and to walk suitably, according to your engagement, in his strength: To be for bim, and for

'mo other, as the word is, Hos. 3. or as it is, Isa. 44. 5. One shall say, I am the Lord's; and another shall call himfelf by the name of Facob; and another shall substitute with his hand unto the Lord, and surname himself by the name of Israel: He shall, as it were, write down his name, I am God's. This, in short, is covenanting with God; which may be done in hearing the word, in praying, in meditaing, and in communicating; when faith is diffinitely, at least really and truly, exercised on God's offer and promise; and when, upon deliberation, there is a fincere resolving with the person's self, I will take God as he offers himself to me, and will give up and away myself to him; and when, according to this resolution, there is actually a yielding to God.

Use 22 Seeing this is the only way to right and unravel an evil and ravelled condition, let me exhort you to pitch on this as your great work, and to aim at it as your great scope, these days that are before you, that a good understanding may be begotten betwirt God and you, and all quarrels removed and taken away, by declaring and acknowledging your iniquities before him, and by covenanting with him on his own terms: This would make much kindly heart-melting, and would make the communion to be cheering and refreshful, when, after a secretly elosed bargain with God, we should come to receive his seal, and to append and put to ours: And whatever tossings and difficulties there may be to get ourselves made right here; yet we would seriously endeavour to get our hearts brought up, sincerely to say with the Pfalmist, Pfal. 16. My soul bath said unto the Lord, Thou art my Lord; and to win at a settled deliberate yielding to God, so as there may be quietness in it for the time to come.

Use 3. There is here fad ground of exposulation with, and reproof to many. I know not what many of you are doing; most part, I suppose, are taken up about the outward ordinances, but as to the main thing of making up a covenant with God, as it is holden forth in the gospel, I fear that is much neglected and misk and: Yet let me say it, tho' ye should pray and we pal these days, without this it is impossible that ye can have peace, or win to have a good understanding betwire God and you: rue your yourselves therefore to the trial, and see if the frame of your spirits be such as holds any tolerable proportion to the frame and posture that Israel and Judab are reprefented to be in here: They are going, we are fitting still; they are weeping, our eyes are dry, and our hearts hard; the humble mournful way of religion, alas! is much gone from amongst us. Again, they are renewing the covenant; but, ah! what can we fay, as to the fecuring of things beswixt God and us? Are not the most part as well satisfied with their flate and condition, as if there were nothing wrong nor amiss in it? Alas! shall we slubber and scurf over religion, and vail ourselves from ourselves and from others, when in the mean time our hearts and consciences might, if awake, tell us that we are not in covenant with God? I know, many of you will be ready to fay, ye are friends with God; but let me ask fuch, Did ye ever know and believe the enmity? did ye ever apprehend yourselves to be strangers to God, and without the covenant? did ye ever experimentally know any good that his word did to you, as to the bringing of you under the bond of the covenant? hath any gracious change followed upon it? The truth is, many of you think that ye may go to heawen without the word, and the faving effects of it on your hearts: Ye found them (as ye fancy) always inclined to love God; ye suppose that ye were always in friendship with him; which, tho' there were nothing else to prove it, is a manifest evidence that ye were never really in friendship with him. But let me ask yet further, Did ye ever know what it was, to make use of Christ's mediation, in the making up of a covenant betwixt God and you? 'Tis like, ye will say, ye prayed; but ye might have done that, the Christ had never come into the world, and tho' there had been no ground for your acceptance on his account. But I say again, What use made ye of his mediation and fufferings? I tear ye know little or nothing at all of this; but ye come to him, because ye imagine that he bears a good-will to all finners, and is very easy to be dealt with, and that God the Father is more inexorable and a harder Party to deal with than he; as if Jefus Christ the Son were not as just as the Father; or,

as if God the Father were not as ready, thro a Mediafor, to accept of finners, as the Son is. I would ask you yet further, Do ye think, or can ye with any just reason think, that your covenant is fure, when ye know neither what it is, nor how ye have entred into it? In the covenant, as there is an offer on God's fide, so there must be a receiving on yours: Tho' I grant that oftentimes this, to serious souls, will be unclear, and it will be their burden that they have not strong enough defires to have it thorow and clear; fuch poor fouls would put their dark ness, unbelief and undexterousness in Christ's hand to be helped. But 'tis a fad matter, that, when we should be praying you to close with Christ in the covenant, it must be our work, and the hardest piece of it, to shake many of you out of your presumption: "Tis no pleasure to us, God knoweth, to preach you out of the covenant; but your presumption layeth a necessity on us, to lance you to the quick, and to search down to the bottom of your sores; because these must be discovered and laid open, before there can be any just ground for the application of confo-lation: If once we could get you brought under a thorow conviction that ye have been deluding yourselves, we might yet have sweet, lively, comfortable and retreshful days: If ye were in this posture, going and weeping for percerting your ways, with your faces towards Zion, towards God thro' the Mediator, ye might expect God's bleffing on these solemn ordinances, and that there should be a covenant made up with him never to be forgotten. O! be serious in the business, and let not this opportunity go by you unimproved to the best and utmost advantage; and himself graciously help you hereunto.

Jeremiah 50. ver. 4, 5.

In those days, and in that time, saith the Lord, the children of Israel hall come, they and the children of Judah together, going and weeping: They shall go, and seek the Lord their God.

Verse 5.

Verse 5. They shall ask the way to Zion, with their faces thitberward, saying, Come and let us join ourselves to the Lord, in a perpetual covenant that shall not be forgotten.

SERMON II.

Ovenanting with God, if it be real, well-grounded and fure is a hufine of income. and fure, is a business of incomparably greatest concern and advantage to finners; but when it is otherwife, and only imagined without any folid ground, 'cis attended with the greatest disappointment and prejudice imaginable: A man in that case fancieth himself to be in a state of friendship and favour with God, while, in the mean time, he is an enemy to God, and God an enemy to him; and is there any disappointment or disadvantage in the world comparable to that? It is one great end and defign of all ordinances, that strangers to God by nature may be engaged to him, and made to become his covenanted people; it was for this end that Christ came into the world, and laid down his life, and shed his precious blood, even to bring finners into a covenant of reconciliation and friendship with God: And therefore the ordinance, that is now approaching, is called the New Covenant, or New Testament in his blood.

The words have in them a short and sweet sum and compend of the gracious frame of a people, turning home to God, to get a broken covenant made up: Israel and Judab having deeply declined from the blessed state and condition wherein God had once graciously put them, their return and repentance is here both prophelied of, and promised; and this is the great thing which they defign in their returning, even to get the knot (to say so) of the covenant betwixt God and them made sast and sure, so as they may never any more be separated from him.

We shall at this time shortly name some general observations from the words; the first whereof is this, T bat shere is nothing that a people, who have any convictions of their sin and of their distance from God, should more singly aim at, and seriously seek after, than to be sirmly joined to the Lord in covenant, or to be in good terms with him according to bis covenant: For these come to the same amount, to be in good terms with God, to be reconciled to God, and be in covenant with God; by the one we come to the other: This, we say, should be aimed at, and sought after by all that are naturally born enemies to God, aliens and strangers to the coverant of promise, without hope, and without God in the world, Eph. 2. 12. compared with v. 1, 2, 3. where, to be dead in sins and trespasses, is expounded, to be without the soughant. But more especially those who are touched with the sense of their sin, should have this for their aim, design and endeavour; as we see in these spoken of here, who, when they come to any sense of their sin, this is clearly their great design and work very seriously and closly pursued by them.

To clear and confirm it, take these three words. Confider, 1. What state and condition man naturally is in; 2. What God is to man in reference to that estate; And, 3. What covenanting with God is: And we will find that there is nothing which he should more seriously design and seek after. 1st, Man is naturally an enemy to God, and, in respect of his malicious desperate inclination, given to thwart with God, whereby God flands as an enemy to him: He is liable to the curse of God, and God is as an armed man against him, as Job speaks; and he, like an unarmed child, running on the boffes of his buckler. adly, Confider, that God is not only an enemy, but flands flated as such with his curse against sinners, according to that word, Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things written in the law to do them; and this curse is like the flaming sword in the hand of the cherubims, which with terror separates betwixt God and the sinner, so that there is no access for him to God; and, if he have any thoughts of God, he is troubled with them; and all the creatures are armed against him, so that he can expect nothing but enmity from every stone of the field. 3dly, Consider, that covenanting with God is that whereby a man, who is naturally at enmity with God, cometh to be in friendship with him, and hath the face of every thing altered: The meditation of God is sweet to him; the creatures are in league with him; the angels become ministring spirits to him; all God's dispensations become lovely, and do work work together for his good, even those that are in themselves most terrible; death and the grave become servams to him; and, being in covenant with God, lie can triumph over them and all troubles and persecutions, and say that he is more than conqueror in them soll, as it is, Rom. 8. And saith the apostle to such, I Gor. 3. All things are yours, whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or life, or death, things present or things to come, are all yours, and ye are Chris. Is it any wonder then, that a poor foul, touched with the sense of sin, be desirous and solicitous to be in covenant with God? And therefore, whether we look upon it as a duty, or as an evidence of a person truty humbled for, sin, it is very desirable, and should be seriously sought after.

The u/e serves to show, That the great scope, which ye should now have before you, is to have a broken covenant made up with God; it should be your main design to put this grand business to a point, that there may be no war, but a standing league betwirt God and you: And sherefore, whoever they be that fatisfy themselves with going about the ordinances, and misken this, they certainly mistake the mark: The great matter is not to come to the communion, neither is it to win at somewhat of heartsoftness, or to a little tense, which are good; but it is really to be in covenant with God, to be able to fay on good ground, The Lord is my God; my Beloved is mine, and I am bs: And when he faith, Return, backfliding children; to be in case to answer with the heart, Behold, we come unto thee, for thou art the Lord our God. This is indeed a defirable thing; and he is an unhappy man that doth not, that will not heartily defire and feek after it.

S condly, From their very great seriousness, in going and weeping, in going to seek the Lord, asking the way to Zion, and from their encouraging one another to join in covenant with the Lord, Observe, That where there is any sincerity or begun work of grace, it shows itself in nothing sooner, than in an impulse to be at covenanting with God, and to have some clearness therein. For, only to be in covenant, and not to have the knowledge of it, cannot give that peace and comfort which a present sad exercise callett for; therefore, say they, while they are going and weeping ing, Come and let us join ourseives to the Lord in a perpetual covenant, that shall not be forgotten: So then, we say, that a fincere and gracious work of God appears in nothing fooner, than in this impulse to have the covenant of God fixed and put out of doubt; to have this at a point, is their great design here, and they are very serious in it. So, Ifa. 44. where ver. 3, there is a promise of the work of the Spirit in sanctifying; and how is this work of the Spirit proved? or wherein doth it appear? Even thus, ver. 5. One fall fay, I am the Lord's; and another shall call bimself by the name of Jacob; and another shall subscribe with his hand unto the Lord, and surname timself by the name of Israel. The work of God's Spirit, when he comes to fanctify and fave, is such as makes a man run and devote himself to God, with hand, heart and mouth: Ye never faw people more quickly and with better will come to the Church at the most solemn occasion, than (when this work is begun, or there is any kindly exercise about it) ferious fouls will be ready to run with their heart to subscribe to God's covenant, when the terms of it are laid out before them. Only advert to these two things in this observation. (1.) When I speak of entring in covenant with God, I mean of the heart's closing with him by faith, according as he offers himself in this golpel: When he faith, Quit and renounce your own righteousness, and take mine; quit and abandon your lufts and idols, and give yourselves to me, and I will be your God, and be forthcoming to you in all things that concern your happiness here and hereafter; the heart yields, and fays, Content, Lord, the offer is good, and I accept of it: And as wives were wont (as it is yet the custom) to furname themselves by their husbands, so doth the soul, upon the matter, in this covenant, subscribe, I am God's. This is called a yielding to God, or the giving of the band to bim, 2 Chron. 30. 8. & Rom. 10. 3. it is called a submitting to the righteousness of God. (2.) When we speak of this impulse towards, or defire of covenanting with God, it is not to be understood of every raw wish, such as Ba-laam had, to be in heaven; but it is a seriously urging impulse, an earnest hunger and thirst, and an ardent longing to have this at a point: It is such a thirsting desire, as all the

the world beside will not be able to quench; it makes the foul eager in the pursuit of the thing, even to meet and. close with God in the covenant; It is, in effect, that which, Matth. 5 6. is called a bungring and thirfting after righteousness, because it hath in it a fixed longing with holy pain, which, Gant. 5. 8. is called a being fick of love : It is fuch a defire as makes the heart even faint and fick for the want of the thing defired, which can be fatisfied with nothing else; no more than a very hungry man can be satisfied, if handfuls of gold were offered to him; it is meat he must have. In this respect (which will be the reason of the doctrine) Christ Jesus is called the food of the soul, and the covenant is like the pap, whereby Christ's fulnets is communicated and conveyed to us; for we have no access to Christ but by the covenant: Therefore, Epb. 2. 12. these two are put together, being without Christ, and being without the covenant; and Ifa. 66. 11, 12. converts are faid to fuck and be fatisfied with the breafts of the Church's confolation, and to be danaled on ber knees: Beliewers are like new-born babes, whom nothing can fatisfy, or do good to, but the breafts; and the ordinances are, as it were, the breafts at which they fuck, and which are as so many pipes to convey to them spiritual nourishment: To which the apostle alludeth, 1 Pet. 2. 2. when he saith, As new-born babes, defire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby; if so be that ye have tasted that the Lord is gracious: And then follows, To whom coming as anto a living stone, &c. Jesus Christ is the milk, and the word the pap that conveys him: And as the first thing that evidenceth life to be in a new born babe, is hunger after the breast; fo it is here, the covenant satisfies the new-horn new creature.

The Use of the point serves to put you to look back, and to consider, whether ever ye have in your experience known this, wherein spiritual life shews ittelf, even to be holily fond (or browden, so to speak) on the pap: The regenerate soul cannot endure to be kept back from sucking the breasts of these consolations that are in the covenant. Now, 'tis very probable that many will catch at this, as a very comfortable mark of regeneration to themselves, and will be ready to say, Why, have we not a Business of the greatest Concern. this defire to be in covenant with God? and, if that will be proof of a work of grace, we want it not: And these Fews, here spoken of, before their coming to be in this blessed frame, were ready to boast that they were Abrabam's children, and that they had a defire to be in covenant with God; but it will be another fort of defire and eagerness which they will have, when the Redeemer comes out of Zion, to turn away iniquity from Jacob. But, that ye may know what this defire and impulse that we speak of is, and if indeed ye have it, confider these evidences of it; 1. That it is an ardent and vehement defire, a pressingly urgent impulse; not such as ye have had all your days, but 'tis an effect of the Spirit's out-pouring, as that parallel place with this, viz. Zech. 12. 10. clears; I will (faith the Lord) pour upon the bouse of David the Spirit of grace, &c. Away with that grace, with that faith and love, which are as old as yourselves. 2. This desire and impulse hath such a vehemency with it, as puts the man to his feet, to go and pray, and to go weeping: It ftirreth him then so, as he must needs go, tho he be much in the dark, and knows not so well and distinctly whither he is going; because love to be in covenant with God, will in a manner make a fool go right to God; tho' there is reason that he should seek after help to his infirmity. The defires of many are like the fluggard's defire, who lieth still on his bed, and his ease slays him: This defire maketh fome holy ftir, and rouzeth to diligence in the use of means. 3. This defire is fuch, as never dies out, till the person be thorow in the point of covenanting with God; and therefore, tho' he should be put as it were to dig wells in the wilderness, and to go from firength to strength, yet he will adventure on it, and hold on in his way: The apostle, Philip. 3. speaks of it as his one thing; and, when persons are suitably serious in this, it is their one thing, and not a piece of work only on the by; and, if they may come to it in all their lifetime, they think (as they have reason to do) that they make a good bargain, and have gained a noble prize: Never did a man on horseback, in a race, spur faster than they do, that by any means they may attain it. 4. The principle of desire after covenanting with God, holds them constantly in an

174 estimation of, and sucking at it as the means of their life : as the babe cannot live without the breafts, so they cannot live without the covenant, they cannot rest but in it: I speak not now what believers are in their declinings; but, when they are in a right frame, they have no being but in this covenant; they must needs have milk flowing through the breafts of it for their nourtshment. That is a cursed life, or rather death, of persons, who come to the word, and care not whether it be made lively or not; and come to the communion, and care not whether they get by it any life and comfort or not: And a curfed faith, that keeps fouls from making use of Christ; and such is the faith of many hearers of the gospel. Now, covenanting is the believer's earnest, and they are thereby made to forget their fathers house, in hope to be admitted to dwell with Christ for evermore.

Thirdly, Observe, That a well-qualified define of covemanting with Gad is a good token of conversion; or, A rightly biaffed defire of being in covenant with God is the language of persons coming home to God: Come (say they) and les us join ourselves to the Lord in a perpetual covenant. The Lord fets down this as their commendation, and as an evidence of his begun gracious work in them: They, no doubt, had words of covenanting before, but wanted this right impulse and defire, and therefore fat still: But now they are much affected, stirred, and put to their feet; it being an effect of the poured-out Spirit on them. We fay, this is a good token of a begun work of grace, and of persons their coming home to God; because this impulse towards, and defire of governmenting with God, speaks out these three. (1.) The sense of their need of him, and that they cannot live without him; and the flopping of their mouth with holy shame and confusion before God. (2.) An high estimation that they have of him, a judging that they have no happiness but in him. (3.) In speaks out faith, in their actual betaking of themselves to him for the upmaking of what they want and stand in need of: There is somewhat of all these in the prodigal, who, when he came to himself, reckons thus with himself, 1. I parish for hunger; this points at the sense of his need. 2, Ibera is bread enough in my Father's honse and to spare ;.. which a Rustness of the greatest Concern. 279 which shows his believing esteem of the sulness of God for a supply of his need, and for making him, a poor miferable perishing wretch, compleatly happy. 3. His refolution is, I will go and say, Father, &c. this holds out his actual purpose of covenanting with God, which hath always faith in it: It is the same on the matter with this, Come and less us join ourselves to the Lord in a perpetual covenant.

The Use of it serveth to shew what a serious or wellqualified defire after covenanting with God is, and whereis it consists: And those things that are marks of it, may also serve for directions how to go about it aright. 1ft, This well qualified or ferious defire of covenanting with God, floweth from a swofold conviction; I. From a conviction of peoples sia and breach of covenant formerly, and of their distance from God; whereof we spake somewhat the last day. We are afraid that many of you think you defire, when yet ye never knew aright your guilt in breaking covenant, nor took up aright the diffance betwixe God and you: It is one fort of defire that a whole man hath to speak with the physician, and another that a fick man hath; it is of the latter that we mean here. 2 From a conviction of the want of God's company: These here know now, tho' they be Abraham's feed, that yet they are nevertheless naturally enemies to God and Christ, and without both; and therefore they feek him, and to make a covenant with him. There are some that pretend to be feeking God and Christ, and yet they have him, they think, always in their hearts. But speak soberly; did ye ever want or miss him? It may be, at the one word ye will fay, We hope not; and at the next word, perhaps, Too often: And it is ftill but a guessing at the best. When the produced came to himself, he saw that he had been (to speak so) in the wrong close. 2dly, This wellqualified defire bath a kindly heart-fofmels with it, which is a good, tho a very rare thing: They go here weeping; and when they are a faying these words, Come and let us join to the Lord in covenans, their tears are trickling down. It is a good and hopeful defire, which is expressed with the tear in the eye, proceeding from a fuitably affected heart: There are, alas! many of our defires that do not

kindly affect, neither do they make any change; the heart ! remaineth dead, stiff and hard under them. 3dly, This well-qualified defire puts on to diligence, and is not like the fluggard's defire: Therefore they go and feek the Lord; they are eager and earnest in the matter, and are taken up with it. This defire will make the man fomerimes forget to eat his bread, and it may be to pray feven times a day (what if I had faid twice seven times?) and very oft to withdraw from all company, at least, that is not edifying and profitable, and to retire to the fields or to the chamber, quietly to lay, as it were, a chase by the pursuit of fairh to the finding out of God's company: It will make ' him and her go to the poorest body in all the town or village, that is gracious, to ask the way to Zion; this is also a very rare thing. Ye all know the way to heaven, as ye think, and this makes you foolishly confident, till ye run yourselves into the mire and into the pit at last, if grace, by making a faving change, prevent not. 4thly, This well-qualified defire is a humbling defire: There's no pleading here with God, of the privilege of their relation they have to Abraham, and to the covenant made with him: they cannot find in their hearts, nor have they confidence, to do that: They judge themselves to be very unlike him, and they carry humbly towards one another. glad to ask the way at, and to get some knowledge of it from one another, how they may win forward; they are like the Spoule, who faith to the daughters of Jerusalem. Cant. 5. If ye fee my Beloved, tell bim that I am fick of love; Take my commendations (as if she had faid) to him, and lay out my case before him. Such serious and bumble souls will be glad to take help in the way from any body that can give it; which saith, that they are diligent and painstbly, This defire, as it may, is always setting forward; they are going and asking the way; and the they have a strong tide (as it were) against them, yet the wind of their own defire and impulse steereth them through, and maketh them frem the port; and tho' they make but flow progress, yet it is always towards Zion. 6tbly, This; delire is a peremptory and (to fay to) an illimited defire, and that in a twofold respect, 1. In respect of coming at God: It must have him, and will not submit to the want a Business of the greatest Concern. 177 of him; communion with him it must have. 2. In this respect, that it maketh no condition with God of its own, but is heartily well content to take him on his own terms This indeed is a notably good mark of a well-qualified defire, when a foul defires not so much to be at heaven, as to be at God; and when it is (as I just now said) content to take him on his own terms. Many will defire God. and heaven, but with some such secret reservation as this, that they get leave to bruik their lusts and idols, that they may have liberty to tipple and trifle away their time, to take their fill of the world, to be in credit and reputation, and to pursue after some one thing or other in the world; or at least they must be allowed to go about the establishing of their own righteousness: But this desire is waited with the abandoning of all idols, without any allowed exception or refervation, and with the renouncing of self-righteousness also in the point of justification; and therefore tis called, submitting to the righteousness of God? It says not a word against the terms of the covenant, but holds all. These things were good to be seriously thought on, and fought after, in our approaching to the table of the Lord, to renew our covenant with him; and, where . they are not in some measure, our defires will not be found to be of the right kind: 'It were therefore very suitable for you, to think, how ye may get your hearts quickned and warmed with vehement and unquenchable delires after this covenanting with God, and after the water of life. O! know ye any thing of this? There are some who have found it in experience, and who can represent it better to themselves than we can express it: Ye who have had your bearts panting for God, for the living God, as David faith his heart did, P/al, 42. can tell what raw wishes were before, and that the grace of God works such defires as have another fort of edge on them, and have # holy disquieting and restless hunger for the breasts of God's covenant, and cannot rest nor be satisfied, yea, not live without them.

Fourthly, Observe, That a people or person may have some sincere desires after covenanting with God, and yet have much weakness, many instrmities and fears in the accomplishing of that their design. Many poor puzzled and perplexed souls

Right Covenanting with God, ... may have this honest defire, and yet not know well howput the thing in practice; even like unto these raentioned here, who are going toward Zion to join themselves to the Lord in covenant, and yet are asking the way: They have covenanting with God in their eye as the great scope, but are ignorant in a considerable measure of the way; yet they fit not still till they get the way (as it were) described on a card to them, but they rise and make forward as they may. I nothing doubt, the truth of this doctrine is known in experience by fome ferious, tho much toffed and puzzled fouls, who have fome honest and earnest longings after him, and after covenanting with him; who yet know not well how to win at him, or how to make this covenanting practicable: Thus the honest well-meaning daughters of Jerusalem ask the Spouse, Cans. 6. Whither is thy Beloved gone, that we may feek him with thee? There was a fincere defire after him, and a fixed purpose to be at him, and to decline no labour nor pains. in order to coming by him; yet they know not well whither to go for finding of him: Even like houest Mary, who, John 21. would fain have Christ, and comes to the grave to feek him, and, missing him, weeps; and, when the angels speak to her to comfort her, that will not do it: She continues still weeping, and tells the cause; They bave taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid bim. It was an evidence of the honesty of her defire, that the' she knew not where he was, yet she could not be diverted by any thing from a mournful, reftless and diligent pursuit after his presence. This may proceed partly, in the 1st place, From believers their infirmity, and their not being thorow in the knowledge of gospel-mysteries; from their ignorance of the parties and conditions of the covenant, of the nature, properties, and promises of it: If they knew how kind and condescending the Lord is, how near he brings his word, how little he will take off their hand, how folid the covenant is, how fure the Cautioner is, and how their part of the covenant is undertaken for, as well as God's, they would not have such doubts and fears; hence, Rom. 14. they who are weak in knowledge are faid to be weak in faith, because through their ignorance they have many doubts.

a Business of the greatest Concern.

This makes me to think, that, if many of you had fincerity and feriousness in the great concern of your salvation, ye would be much and almost inextricably puzzled, how to rid yourselves in many things you would meet with in your condition: Because of the abounding of your ignorance, ye cannot, alas! tell what repentance is, what closing with Christ in the covenant is, what Christ's offices are, and what use should be made of them; and therefore, if ye were put into any strait or dump through the sense of fin, it needed be no great wonder that ye should be in much confusion, and did not know what to do to get out of it. It were good, therefore, that ye studied the knowledge of God, and of the covenant; that, if ever God do you good, ye may have fome clearness and diffinctness in the way of the remedy of your evils, and of the extri-cating you out of your difficulties. But that which keeps many quiet, is, alas! their-own prefumption grown to a great height, and the devil's rocking them fast asleep in the cradle of fecurity: It is a wonder to fee fo many very confident of peace with God, who yet know not how it is come at; when God touches your conscience, ye will be put to cry, What hall we do? because of your ignorance. 2dly, It proceeds partly from want of experience; bence, tho some, it may be, have light and know-ledge, yet, wanting experience of the thing, they are at a stand, and know not what to do in this or that case: Just as if a man were to go to London, and were informed of all the towns and posts in the way; yet when he comes to advance in his journey, not having gone the way be-fore, he is often in doubt whether he he right: So it is with many, who from literal knowledge can tell what faith and repentance is; but when their spirits are jumbled (to speak so) consused and put through-other, the matter looks far otherwise upon them; and they are like a man who coming to a shallow and safe foord of a river that is mudded, yet fears to take it, because he hath not ridden it before; whereas another, that hath gone tho ow it, can confidently hazard on it: And indeed it is no marvel to see much of this even amongst believers. A 3d cause or ground whence this may proceed, is, prejudi es M 2

180 Right Covenanting with God, at the way of God, and of persons at themselves. Men have naturally a fort of gospel of their own, that they cannot go by, till someway they be constrained; and, when God puts them to it, they are at a stand.: As for instance, there is this prejudice in some, that they think none can go and warrantably take hold of God's covenant. till they be so and so humbled; that they cannot go with convictions or challenges, till they get some more deep heart-work, or be in a better and more tender frame: Hence Peter faith to Christ, Luke 3 very unreasonably, Depart from me, for I am a finful-man, O Lord; whereas David reasoned otherwise, and much more pertinently, Pfal. 25. when he faith, Pardon my iniquity, for it is great : And hence the question ariseth, What shall we do? and, when they are bidden believe, they object, Ah! we are finners, and have evil and hard hearts; and are unhumbled. Look what passed betwixt Peter and his hearers, Alls 2. he layeth out before them their horrid guilt in crucifying Christ; they are pricked in their hearts, and cry, What shall we do? He bids them Repent and be haptised, which takes in faith; and, v. 41. it is faid, that such as were kindly touched, gladly received the word. Now, I pray, what if they had objected, Can we, that have even now, or a very little fince, had our wicked hands embrued in the precious blood of Christ, believe on him? Come a-way (saith he on the matter) for there is no other way to pardon and peace with God. There was much of this in the primitive times amongst the Christian Romans, Corinthians, Galatians, and Hebrews, many prejudices at and wrong conceptions of the gospel and covenant of grace, and therefore they would have patched up a gospel of grace and of works; they would have brought in the ceremonies of the law, and established a self-righteousness: And this in particular is one great prejudice that the devil laboureth deeply to possess the minds of wakned finners with, even to make them think that it is prefumption for them, tho' they would fain do it, to come to Christ and by faith to close with him, unless they be so and so qualified: As long as they are secure, he makes them take their presumption for faith; but the next day, when they are wakned and exhorted to betake themselves to Christ

Christ by faith, he calls that also presumption. And indeed, as it is Satan's manner to drive finners on extremes. fo it is our way to run into extremes: That which made us call our prefumption faith, is the same which makes us call our faith prefumption; because we lay it for a ground, that it is our honesty or good disposition, and so and so qualified frame, that must commend us to God: And therefore, while we conceive that we have that, it is the ground of our prefumption; and when the conscience is wakned. and we find that we want that, we cannot believe. A 4th cause or ground whence this, in some, may proceed, who would fain believe, is not fo much their darknets and ignorance of the way, as the backwardness, frowardness, and deceit of their heart, that will not, for them, come up to it: Such are puzzled and perplexed what to do, because they cannot get it well done and as they would; such are like a good archer that can shoot well, but hath a deceitful bow, which, when he hath put his arrow on the string, and hath drawn it to the very head, starts aside, and makes him quite miss his mark; the fault and defect is not in the man's skill, but in the bow. We the rather make use of this comparison, that the holy Ghost dorn so in the scripture, resembling our heart to a deceitful bow, that turns aside; so that they, who are acquainted with their own hearts, know not what to do with them, how to guide them, and bring them up unto, or hold them at any thing that is good: And tho, it may be, they could to good purpose give directions to others in such a case; yet they find their own hearts very untractable to admit of them, as if they did not fuit or meet with their own case. This is indeed a very puzzling difficulty; yet to such perplexed souls there is no new direction to be given, but the renewed exercise of faith, and to put the directions, which they know, in practice; and when one shot (to speak to) misgives, to essay another: Not to seek (as it were) a new string, but to cast a new knot on it; and, if two knots should slip, to cast a third, improving more that grace of the covenant to make them hold better; Therefore, Atts 2. when those pricked in their hearts ask, what they shall do, Peter bids them repent; they were begun to do so, and he bids them be doing and go on. Ye then that are indeed indeed ferious, and to whom your short-comings are really your souls burden, would not think it any uncouth, frange or extraordinary thing, to find defire and affection running far before your light and practice, (tho' ye would endeavour to have them foot-fide) a Christian's defire may be a day's journey (as it were) before himself, as to his attainment: And indeed in some respect it would not be good if it were otherwise; for it is no good fign of progress in God's way, when the desires of persons go no further length than their practice, or when their practice falls nothing fhort of their defires: Both in that case are to be much suspected; for even eminently holy Paul sees himself to be behind, Philip. 3. when he saith, I think not myfelf perfect, but one thing I do, forgetting the things that are behind, and reaching forth to those things that as before, I press towards the mark: Where he came one post in his attainment, his desire was ten, in a manner, before him. And so is it with those people here spoken of, Come (fay they) let us join ourselves to the Lord; they find themselves to be behind, and endeavour to work themfelves up, and to draw themselves and one another forward. We mast now draw to a close, and shall therefore but touch the following observations, and pass them in a

Right Covenanting with God,

Fifthly, Observe, That in peoples covenanting with God, their desires and designs will be much sooner proposed and laid down, than they will be got accomplifted and put in execution, or than they will win to fatisfy themselves therein. Altho' an union be betwixt Christ and them, yet they are not satisfied, till they be somewhat clear and distinct about it: They are like the prodigal, who; being in another and strange country, faith first, I will go, then he ariseth; and, I will fay to my Father, before he actually speak to his Father himself, calling him Father: Some real acting of faith preceeds his more distinct satisfying acting of it. There is a faith in resolving to believe, before there be a resting of faith or stayed believing; and yet it is faith that begets that same resolution: If the prodigal had not had some faith of enough in his Father's house, and of his Father's affection, he would not have resolved to go home;

faces towards Zion, if they had not had some begun stirrings of faith.

Sixthly, Observe, That it is a good token to be asking seriously the way to beaven, the the askers be not so clear in it? There is some ground to think that such persons are in the way; and if they hold on, and sollow the directions of the word, they may come thither. It is far better to be distaissied, and to ask he way; than not to ask, and yet to be satisfied with our own knowledge of the way.

Seventhly, Observe, That persons may fall very far short of their defire, and have much infirmity, and may meet with many puzzling difficulties how to accomplish what they would be at; yet, where a serious and longing desire is wakned after covenanting with God, they should go forward and follow it forth. This people are short of what they desired, and yet they go; and they know not (as it were) where to fet down the next foot till they ask the way, yet they go on still asking: There is no disputing here, but forward we should go. I suppose, these here spoken of might have had several difficulties started, and several obstructions laid in their way; yet on they go: As, 1f, this, That they were covenant-breakers; yet they, taking feriously with it, step over that, and say notwithstanding, Come let us join ourselves to the Lord in a covenant. They might have thought, that it was a very long journey, and that they would never be able to go thorow to the end of it; belides that, they were under the dominion of. strange kings, who were Heathers: So it may be faid on the matter, and is often faid to ferious fouls, that would fain believe, Can ye believe? It will not be with you: Are ye not under the feet of many tyrannous lufts? and how will ye win free from them? Yet they resolve, and must, yea dare not but resolve to go forward; and the reason is, because they resolve to take with their guilt, and to make use of the covenant for answering and silencing of challenges; and they refolve also, if the journey be long, to make use of the covenant for strength to make them hold. on and hold out in it. The weak believer, when such doubts are flarted, should make use of the promises of the covenant, such as these; Faithful is be who has called you, wko M 4

Right Covenanting with God, who also will do it, I Thess. 5. 24. Return, backsliding shildren, and I will beal your backslidings, saith the Lord: And then follows, Bebold, we come unto thee; for thou art the Lord our God, Jer. 3. 22. They yield themselves to the Lord. A 3d difficulty is their ignorance. They might have said, We know not the way, and how can we think to come where we defire and defign to be? (as some will be ready to fay, We can tell some words of the catechism. but, alas! we know not what it is to believe? Yet they fit not still for all this, but, as one remedy of their ignorance, they ask the way to Zion with their faces thitherward. And if ye ask here, How can their faces be thicherward. when they are asking the way? and at whom do they ask the way? The Gentiles amongst whom they live know it not, and they have no other to ask at? I answer, They are hanging on God, and taking their marks and meiths of the way, as he gives them from his word; and there is a most sweet word for such, 1/a. 35. 8. where the Lord speaking of this way, and calling it the way of boliness, he saith, The way-faring man, tho a fool, shall not err therein: It is the heartsomest way that can be; Q but it be safe for the way-faring finner, for the feriously seeking soul, to have the face toward God, for making up of peace with him! Upon the one hand, the Lord hedges up fuch persons their way with thorns, that they shall not find their lovers; and, upon the other, he constrains them to go right forward; He leads the blind in a quay they know not, and makes darkness light before them. Are there not severals of you brought far thorow this way, and ye know not well how? He brought you to faith very insenfibly, and trained you on piece and piece, and yet ye cannot tell well how; but ye know certainly that it was he's that did it; and in this case, O but it be good, singly to be given up to God's leading and guiding, who leads his flock like a Shepherd, who gathers his lambs with his arm, and carries them in his bosom, and gently leads them that are with young ! as it is, Ifa. 40. 11. Epbraim also to go, taking them by their arms. When a poor body hath Christ a-forming in the heart, he will gently lead such an one, and deal wonderfully tenderly with the person. Ye who come honestly to him, may confidently yield and give up yourselves to be his, and guided by him, tho' ye be both weak, and know not the way well; if ye can but cast a look to him (to speak so) or be sweetly filent before him, allowing him to be doing, and to take his own way with you; if you lay yourselves humbly in the dust, and wait what he will do to you, he will account that believing : The Lord is good to them that wait for him, to the foul that feeks bim, faith Jeremiah, Lam. 3. 25. To wait on God's leisure, is a saying much abused, but it is very good and commendable here; It is good that a man sould both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord. Be not afraid, fincere and exercised souls; I say, be not afraid, when he is (as it were) pouring you from vessel to vessel, and putting you, for his own holy and wife ends, in some confusion, so that ye know not well what to do, or to what hand to turn you; he is wondrous tender of you in that case, and will have a special care that ye miscarry not. This is a very sweet subject, if we could speak suitably of it. Himself bless it to you.

Jeremiah 50. v. 4, 5. Going and weeping: They shall go, and seek the Lord their God.

Verse 5. They shall ask the way to Zion, with their faces thitherward, saying, Come and let us join our selves to the Lord, in a perpetual covenant that shall not be forgotten.

SERMON III.

T is like, that, at the first reading of these words, ye will approve both the defign that this people have of engaging ; 186 Heart-melting is a good Frame engaging themselves to God in covenant, and their endeavour to have their engagement so solid and sure, as it may not be broken any more, but may hold for ever: We take it for granted also, that ye will judge, that the disposition and frame of soul wherein they are, while about this great business, is very becoming and suitable for such as have dealt unfaithfully and soully in the covenant of God, and are from the conviction thereof stirred and put upon resolutions to engage with him of new, and to enter again into a covenant with him; we heartily wish that it were a piece of our exercise this night, before our approaching the table of the Lord the next day, to compare the frame and sett of our hearts, with what these words hold forth this peoples frame and disposition to be.

Ŧ,

We need not now speak to the scope of the words, it being so clear, and having been touched at before. There is here a people prophesied of, who are to be brought to repentance and covenanting with God in the latter days, whose spiritually good and desirable frame is described; They shall go everying and seeking the Lord, each of them shirring up another, having this for their design, and the language of their hearts, Come and let us join our selves to the Lord, in a perpetual covenant never to be forgotten.

That which we would now speak a little :0, is, two generals very much becoming a people who design and intend to covenant simply with God: And seeing it is at this time, in a more especial manner, our professed design to close the bargain with him, and, in evidence thereof, are (if the Lord will) to partake of the sign and seal of the covenant, as supposing it to be indeed a closed bargain, ar at least that it is seriously desired by us that it may be so; they will not be unsuitable for you to hear and make use of them.

The first general then is this, That covenanting with God, when people are in earnest in it, will be a very uptaking, exercising and weighty business. This is clear here, if ye consider how these people go about this work; they are in very good earnest: And there are several evidences of it; they are weeping and going; they are seeking the Lord, asking the way to Zion with their faces thitherward; and every one of them stirring up another to tenew the cove-

more, and to cast the knot so firmly, that it may be a perpetual covenant never to be forgotten, and fuch as may never loose or he broken again. Whence the general is clear, wz. That where people mind in earnest the making up of a breach betwixt God and them (which is done by covenanting with him) it will be an exercifing and up-taking bufiness to them. Ye may consider some scriptures for confirmation of this, which will also hold out what it is; and namely, Mat, 11. 12. The kingdom of beaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force. The Lord is speaking there of mens making peace with God, thro himself the Mediator, by which they are brought to heaven; and he tells, that it is a most serious business, that will abide them brangling (to speak so) and using of vielence; Luke 13. 25. Strive to enter in at the firait gate, for many will feek, and shall not be able: It is a narrow gate, and there must be thronging and thrusting to win in at it; men will be put to a fort of agony, as the word fignifies, Confider also Paul's word, I Cor. 9. 24. So run as ye may obtain; infinuating, that there is a fort of running, wherein men are not in earnest, but indifferent whether they get the prize or not; and therefore he would have them making earnest of it, and he proposeth his own practice as an example and a copy to them, I therefore run, not as uncertainly; so fight I, not as one that beateth the air: But I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection, lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a cast-away. These are the expressions of a man, who is in good earnest in this business; and his seriousness therein is proposed to you for a pattern, what way ye should run and fight. The like word we have, Phil. 3. 13. This one thing I do, ('tis an uptaking work to me) forgetting those things that are behind, and reaching forth to those things which are before, I press towards the mark, for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus: And, v. 11. If by any means (saith he) I might attain unto the refurrection of the dead. Every word hath its own weight, to make it out, that it is so his one thing, that he cares not what it cost him, so be he may obtain it.

That which we would say further on this point shall be a word of application, in these two or three Uses; the first

whereof serves for instruction. Would ye know what is required of you, as a direction to duty at this time? And would ye know if things be right in your preparation for the communion? This may be a mark to discern, and a direction on the matter; even to be serious, and to make it an uptaking business, your one thing, to be about it, as such an occasion and work calls you to be. And if ye shall ask, Wherein consists this seriousness and uptaking exercise, in covenanting with God? I shall sum it up to you in these four, which comprehend it. 1. The man is taken up, in respect of exercise in his conscience; convictions become fresh, challenges are put home, he is pricked less or more at the very heart; there is something within him that gives him a conscience-alarm, that puts in his hand a libel, and affures him of an appearance before God's tribunal: And indeed, unless something of this be, men will not be in earnest; and it is clearly implied in the text: For there are here sharp challenges, that make this people weep, as that extort tears from their eyes. 2. There is a feriousness in respect of the work that it hath on peoples hearts and affections: There will be a kindling of defires to have covenabting with God at a point, with a holy fear lest they miscarry in the doing of it; and these put together do much take up the man, and make him feek after thorow acquaintance with his own spirit, which he finds to be so fickle, inconstant and backfliding; and thus, apprehending the work to be great and difficult, he is put in holy fear and jealousy over himself, lest he marr the matter, and make it worse with himself; as it is said of godly forrow, 2 Cor. 7. 11. What carefulness, what fear, what indignation, what vebement defire, what Real, what revenge it wrought in them s Now when these are tumbling (to speak so) thorow-other in the man, and he hath an inward wrestling to have the work secured, and is afraid lest it miscarry; is it pos-sible, but he will be serious and much taken up? And this is also implied in the words, Come (say they) and let us join to the Lord in a perpetual covenant: There is a defire to have the covenant at a point, and they fear it flip, while they are casting the knot; therefore they say, Let it be a perpetual covenant never to be forgotten: 'Tis good to fear in the very time. 3. This feriousness is in respect of peoples duty: It makes them pray, that never prayed before to purpose; it makes them examine themselves. meditate, read and confer, that never knew before what it was to be taken up with those duties: Therefore we find this people going and feeking the Lord, and exciting one another, they are put to their feet, and to reaching forward, so that they leave nothing undone, whereby they may attain the end. 4. This feriousness appears in the manner of their going about duties: There is another edge than was wont to be on their prayers, felf-judging, and wreftling with God; they are much like to Facob, they will not let the Lord go till he bles them; they will still wrestle, tho' it should be all the night; they cannot find in their heart to part with him on any terms: And (as the word is, I/a. 6,..) they shall flir up themselves to take hold of him: They are not only going, but weeping; they are not for the fashon in the work; they seek the Lord, and stir up one another to do fo. May we then ask you, Are ye thus in earnest making for the communion? Nay (for this is not all) are ye thus in earnest about covenanting with God? which must preceed and go before, if things be right? It were good preparation, to have our very hearts moving and fluttering (as it were) within us to be at this.

The second Use serveth for exposiulation with many that pretend a defire and delign of covenanting with God, and that they would be at heaven, but yet were never in good earnest to have things at a point betwixt God and them, and to make fure a covenant-interest in him. The most part are, alas! taken up with poor, low and infignificant things, with unnecessary things comparatively: If they be fick, they will be in earnest about the means of their health; if they fuffer any loss in their estate, they will be serious to have it made up; if their credit be impaired, they will be much concerned to have it repaired; they are carried forth with a fort of bentness towards those things: But, ah! where is there a man or woman, amongst many, with their faces towards Zion in a serious manner. and with a resolute purpose, that peace with God, holiness and heaven they must have? Here is the great stop-

Heart-melting is a good Frame and stand: And is it possible, think ye, that ye can have peace in your going about duty, while ye are not ferious. nor strive to win in at the strait gate, when ye exercise not yourselves to godliness, when we never (to speak so) cast your coat, nor strip yourselves naked, as it were (as the word, I Tim. 4. 7. lignifies) for that great work: when we do not run and wrestle, as those who mind to obtain, but are intangled in the things of the world, and languish with laziness in every thing that is spiritually and truly good? How few are there under much exercise about the cate of their fouls, afraid left they miss the mark and prize; with jealousy over themselves, lest they mistake the way to heaven? How few are there, who have it for their one thing, to be firmly joined to the Lord in a perpetual covenant? 'Tis my fear, that, amongst all the great number that are here, there be but very few to be found who are in earnest in this great business. I shall hint at a few forts, that are not in earnest. if, Such who are very ferious to be at the external ordinance of the communion, and who will, it may be, take it ill if they be keep back from it, who yet never troubled themselves, nor were seriously taken up with covenanting with God, and with the fludy of holiness in all manner of convertation, or how to come by the enjoyment of his special and gracious presence; they can be year and day, may many years, without it, and never mils it, nor be troubled with the want of it: Alas! it is not seriousness to be at the communion, without this, which will profit. you; and even ye that are not admitted to the communion, are called to this. A 2d fort are such as are indifferent in all religious concerns; they care not for the communion, and would not be very defirous of it, if it were not a shame to them, and some reflection on them. to be debarred from it; they think, that whatever in religion goeth beyond their job, is but preciseness, niceness, vanity, conceit and fancy; fuch never knew what it was to be troubled with doubting or tentations about their fouls state, or the truth and reality of their grace, nor what it was to be under any exercise of conscience on the account of much fin and guilt; nay, they are glad and can boast themselves that they were never under any fuch fuch serious exercise. A 3d fort is of tuch, who are very civil in their carriage, but they have no more; and, if heaven may be had with ceremonies and fair fashions. they will be in it as food as any; but they cannot endure to be at pains beyond their ordinary, to take hold of it, to do violence to their own negligence, to take the kingdom of heaven by force, nor in the least to amend their pace, and to be ferious, come of it what may: Thefe are a dangerous company; they have communicated many years, and were never debarred, and so think that all is well with them, and that they may fit still and be at peace. I shall only say to such, that that was not David's way, nor Paul's way, not the way of any of the faints, nor the way that Christ commended to his hearers; and, I trow, he will not chalk out another way to you, nor take you to heaven in a way by yourselves, or in a way of your own:.

O be not deceived, for God will not be mocked. A 4th fort are those, who have been ordering and dispatching their external bufinesses, so as they may win to the communion without diffraction by them; but they have takenlittle or no pains at all to put their hearts in order; little or no time in fecret betwixt God and them, to examine and irv, whether matters, as to their fouls flate and frame. be right, clear and diftinct: 'Tis the alone direction that the apostle gives, I Cor. 11. 28. Let a man examine bimfelf, and so let bim eat; that's a serious man, who puts himself to that comprehensive and uptaking exercise in earnest, who proves himself, if he be in the faith; whose heart finites him that he hath not taken as much time in fecret, as he hath done in coming to a preaching. It may be, many have come four or five miles to a preparationfermon, who yet never ferioully once looked within themfelves to fee how matters flood betwint God and them: O fad, lamentable, and foul-ruining neglect?

The third Use serves for exhortation: And let me exhort, beseech, and obtest you, to study to be in good earnest in this business: Believe it, the business of covenanting with God, so as, from this time forth, ye may have it made sure and clear that ye are God's, and that God is yours, is a thing of greatest concernment; and infinitely greater, than if kings, and such as are called projectors, were 192 fending ambassadors to treat with you about making you great in the world. To press this a little, let me ask you, in the Ist place, What think ye will come of it, if the covenant be not made ficker betwirt God and you? Ye will most certainly live and ly still, yea even die strangers to God, liable to his curse and wrath ready to be inflicted on you: O lay this to heart, if ye believe that God will call you all to a reckoning, and that he will fay to fuch of you as are not in covenant with him, Depart from me, I never knew you. Yea, suppose there were not such great ground of fear as to that, as indeed there is; Can ye promise to yourselves God's hearing any of your prayers, the performance of any promite, or the accepting of any duty off your hand as service to him, till ye be in covenant with the Lord? And think ye nothing or but little of this? 2dly, Confider the great prejudice that follows on not covenanting with God, and that will attend many in the visible Church; Many (saith the Lord, Luke 13.) will feek to enter, who shall not be able. The solid faith of this would make many congregations to tremble; for 'tis not only many prophane persons, but many of them that countenance ordinances, yea many of them that have preached and prayed to the edification of others. and many of them who have heard Christ preach in their fireets, and who have coutenanced faithful ministers, and furthered the work of God, and who have had indignation at others that did not so, who will not be able to enter. This word, with that other which we have, Pfal. 78. 24. where there is fuch a feeming feriousness, and perfonating of many graces of the Spirit, and yet nevertheless it is but a flattering of God with the mouth, and a lying to him with the tongue (which is a very rife and common thing amongst professors, amongst such as profess covenanting with God) should put us in fear. And, adly, Consider this, that ye have naturally such hearts as others have, that are ready to beguile you, and to backflide and flip but from God; and, are not these beguiles and disap-pointments of others written for our warning and advertilement? And if any of you should say, We hope there is no fuch ground of fear as to us, that's but a bewraying of your ignorance and fenflesness; for those who are best acquainted with their own hearts, will tell you, that it is a ticklish and difficult business to deal truly and throughly with God: Do ye not know, that many take a counterfeit for grace? And were ye not hearing lately, that many hypocrites have personated almost (if there be need to fay, almost) every grace? Surely many of you will find it true one day, that the beart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked; and that ye have erred and played the fool egregiously, and in nothing more than in trufting your own hearts: For, faith the wife man, He that trufts his own heart is a fool. 4thly, Confider, that it is now come to a nick and pinch with you, that either ve must close the covenant with God, or put yourselves further under his curse, and ear and drink damnation to yourselves; because ye have miskent God's covenant, and flighted covenanting with him, and so have come as enemies to his table, without making your friendship with him: We declare to you, that, ere the morrow at this time, many of you will either have a hit or a mis of the greatest bargain and of the greatest concernment that ever was made betwirt parties; and although ye should not eternally incapacitate yourselves for covenanting with God, which many may do, and bring themselves under fuch a fad fentence, that they shall never henceforth be quickned nor awakned any more; yet ye may make your bands stronger, and may make the business of your covenanting with God far more difficult to yourselves, than now it might be.

The second general observation is this, That a soft, tender and melting beart is a good and suitable frame for covenanting with God. Would ye then know what is a fit frame for covenanting with God? It is even this, a heart-melting frame: They shall go, weeping as they go; they have much seriousness, inward stir and warmness of heart, and that makes to melt, and (as it were) flow down before the ·Lord: This is according to what we have, Zecb. 12. 10. I will (saith the Lord) pour upon the house of David, and on the inhabiants of Jerusalem, the Spirit of grace and sup-plications; and they shall look to him whom they have pierced, and shall mourn, and be in bitterness as one is for his firstborn; even when they are coming home, and asking the Heart-melting is a good Frame T94 way to Zion with their faces thitherward, and about to onter in covenant, they are mourning: Hence, Ifa. 44. 2. 4. 5. and elsewhere, even almost wherever entring into or renewing of the covenant with God is spoken of, the out-pouring of the Spirit is spoken of also; a powing water on him that is thirsty, and floods on the dry ground; bringing vivers out of rocks, &cc. for preparing a people for the Lord. And this will be the more clear, if we confider, that foftness and melting of heart gives a man a right impression of himself, and a right impression of God and of his free grace and goodness; and it makes the man to become folding, tractable, pliant and yielding to God, and also makes way for much spiritual sense and comfort, and for God's refreshful manifesting of himself to the soul that is fo pliable and tender: Thus the Lord faith, Hof. 2. 14. I will allure ber, and bring ber to the wilderness, and speak comfortably to ber, or to ber beart, as the word is; alluring speaks pliableness, and that hath God's comfortable speaking to the heart following on it.

The first Use of this point serves to give you another mark for trial, if things be right and in good case with you, for covenanting with God: And, as the upshot of all, to commend fuch a defirable frame as this to you. Would ye know then further, what is a right frame for covenanting with God? Here it is, even to have a heartmelting within, to have a fost, tender and mournful difposition of soul. And, would ye know what this is? We think, that from the words it may be gathered to confift in these five or fix things that concur to it. 1. There are fome pricking challenges for fin and wrongs done to God: They humbly acknowledge, take with, and are made sensible of these. 2. There is some missing and sensibleness of the want of God's presence, and of the want of communion and fellowship with him: They know not well where he is, but they are asking after him, 2. There is an ardent affection and serious desire to be at him and in covenant with him, a heart filled with love to God, whereby it is softned and made to flow down, as wax by the fire is melted, and the hardest iron made soft.
4. There is a holy fear and carefulness, whereby the heart is kept from growing cold and indifferent as to this condition

dition, and from fettling and fitting down in it; fuch a fear and trembling as old Eli had, I Sam. 4. for the ark, whereby he was kept in a fright: Here is going and weep. ing, with a holy fear lest the covenant be again broken. 5. There is a felf-lothing, kindly humiliation and exercise of repentance, which especially appears in this weeping; when ferious looking into the person's own condition so affects the heart, as it flows, either in tears without, and in fighs and grones within, or in the latter without the former. There is a holy indifferency as to their external lot, and an absolute submissiveness to the will of God, to be dealt with and disposed upon as himself thinks fit: If so be they be admitted into a covenant with him, they are sweetly submissive to the terms, let God do with them what he will: they know it will be well, if they get once within the bond of his covenant; and that it will never be well with them, if they be without it. Tho' this be somewhat general, yet it will be found to be a near, yea, a narrow trial. If formers of heart bespeak a good frame and fit for covenanting with God; ah! where is it? The little heart-softness that is amongst us, is one of the neckbreaks of religion, and mars our growth exceedingly. What shall we say or think of our condition, when we call to remembrance the seekers of God of old, who watered their couches with tears, and made their beds to swim; who mingled their drink with tears, and their meat with weeping? O! what is become of that now? or, what religion is this that we have in these days, in comparison of that which they had, who were so serious and so much affected and heart-wrought with their religion, when we are so chill-cold and frozen, when our hearts are scarce kindly warmed, much less softned and melted? It is no wonder there be much lamenting for the want of sense and life, when there is so much heart-hardness, the contrary of this heart-melting foftness.

But it may be asked here, How comes it to pass, that the people of God are now so unlike that which God's people were wont to be; so little softened, contrite, and melted? I speak not of external weeping and shedding of tears; for there may be much of that, where the heart is but little softened, tho not ordinarily: Often, when the heart is inwardly melted, external weeping in some mea-fure follows, tho the one of these may be and is sometimes without the other: Neither do I speak of that softness which is peculiarly requisite for the communion; but of that which is called for in our ordinary walk, to make us folding, yielding, and pliable to God, ready to receive any impression that he will please to stamp on us : What (I fay) can be the causes of the want of this, or that we are not in it as God's people were wont to be? I answer, I. It may be, that professors now have much more conceit of their profession, and content themselves better with the form, and with the gospel's being clearer now than it was in former days; and God refifts the proud, yea, even pride in the godly. Trembling, and fuch other evidences of tenderness in several of those faints mentioned in the scripture, are not much to be found with us; we are, alas! very unlike them: A sharp word from God would have made the strongest of them to tremble; nay, the godly are several times in the old testament described to be tremblers at the word; but we, very generally, are bolffered up, in a manner, with much flour-heartedness and felf-conceit, as if we were above challenges, fears, doubtings, and puzzling cases of conscience: David, Fob, Paul, and others of the faints, who had not fuch ground for that fort of exercise, as most of us have, may I not fav. as all of us have? yet were more in it than we. Whence this comes, were worthy of our serious enquiry: "Tis probable that pride and felf-conceit have much influence upon it. 2. We fear that Christians now-a-days have much betaken themselves to the external deckings and adornings of religion, with neglect, in part at least, and to the prejudice of religion itself, of the soul and substance of it: The godly of old were single and plain in religion, (as Jacob is called a plain man) and taken up with the power of godliness; but many now are so much taken with gifts, and are fo fond of them, that a covenantinterest, self-denial, mortification and the like, take them up the lefs. Many of you are at more labour and pain to hold up a name, than to mortify fuch a lust as is a felffeeking humour, or to have matters thorow and clear betwint God and you. 3. They made more and greater account account of communion with God than we do; feeking afrer it was a thing they were taken up with, which now, alas ! is much neglected : Because we hear that our salvation doth not depend simply on intimate and familiar fellowship with God, we are the less careful and solicitous about it; whereas, of old, the want of it made them fick of love, as the Spoule is, Cant. 5. And what longing, fainting and out crying is there for it, Psal. 42? It was a priton to them, to be in a palace wanting God's company. This is a main thing that softens peoples hearts, even to have the Lord manifesting himself, to have the light of his countenance lifted up, and the beams of his love and good-will shining warm on us: Too much seeking of great things for ourselves, for grandeur or greatness in the world, in making godliness someway to be gain, and counting gain (as it were) to be godlines; alas! it is not much our care to have victory over the world, and that it may have little of our heart, and Christ much of it: 'Tis not the defign that we drive with fuitable vigour, even to be heavenly-minded, and to bruik a fost heart; Love not the world (saith the apostle, 1 John 2.15.) nor the things of the world; for whoso loveth the world, the love of the Father is not in him. They so far overcame the world, that they suffered jos fully the spoiling of their goods, knowing in themselves, they had a better and an enduring substance in heaven; as it is, Heb. 10. 34. But the wicked, and men of the world, baving what heart can wish, even waters of a full cup are avrung out to them; God's people turn in thither, and will needs effay and try the comfo to of a present world, what satisfaction they can yield them, as we may see Solomon did, to his great prejudice; for the things of the world in a great measure got the upper hand of him, and that after the Lord had appeared to him twice. It were good, and much to be wished, that many of you did espy this eyil in yourselves: The scripture insists much in it, as that which mens hearts are mainly carried out after; and yet we can get none almost convinced of it: Men will be got convinced of gross out-breaking evils; but of this evil the most earthly-minded worms cannot be gotten convinced: Nay, even good people are hardly got convinced of it; but ye are not in the less hazard of it: And

Heart-melting is a good Frame

And we wot well, 'tis a plague in the generation that we live in, and hath much defaced religion as to its beauty, in the face of the conversation of many; ah! how much are they, in this, conform to the world! and how lamentably little behave they like pilgrims and frangers in it, as the faints did of old! As a second Use of this point, We have ground here to commend to you the study of a soul-fixing and fasting condition: As ye would not make an unfure bargain with God. endeavour to have this foftness and melting of hears. This thing is that which makes a man to set alone, and to keep silence before God, Lam. 3. 27. and so to be in a polture of meeting and covenanting with him: Such of you as know nothing of this, and are not afraid of being hard, cold and dead at such an occasion, are in imminent hazard of lofing a good bargain; and wo to fecurity and hardness, that hath that as the fruit of it. And, in the by, we may fay, that there is a wo abiding many of you. who have no serious thoughts of this frame, and especially at such a time: Therefore let me exhort you to compose yourselves, as having to do with God, and as having God's love and favour, and his hatred and wrath laid together in the balance, and as having life and death fet before you; and feriously to seek after such a soft and tender frame of foul, that fits for covenanting, for renewing the covenant, and for comfortable communicating.

But some may object and say, It is very sad, if this be peremptory, that persons who would rightly renew their covenant, and communicate, must be in a soft and melting frame. Answ. Tis useful, and ris needful: Nay, in some measure tis simply necessary. What shall we then do that want it? For answer, I wish many were asking the question; from serious minding, prizing and longing after the thing: For the want of iosiness proceeds often from this, that we do not seriously mind it; otherwise, the want of it would much affect and afflict us, and would not tail to give them direction that were thus asking the way to Zion. Yet, for your help in this matter, I would say these words.

1. Once take a view of your case, and labour to have a for covenanting with Goa. 199 diffinct look of it; what lutts are up, what challenges may be tabled, and keep a good count of them. 2. Endeavour to have faith in exercise on God's covenant and promises, and be sure that the promise is sicker that ye lay hold on, and see that ye make use of it according to the covenant; which is done, when with your souls ye take hold of it: And that is not, nor shall not be reckoned presumption, when ye bestir yourselves from the faith of God's covenant and promises, laying the weight of that which ye would be at on the promite, cleaving thereto for attaining of it; and in time, thro' God's bleffing, your unsuitableness shall piece-mail wear away, and ye shall become tender: And any bit of foftness and tenderness that ye win at, cherish and watch over it. 3. Make this a particular errand to God, having your eye on the covemant of promises, and on this promise in it in particular, and on other promises of this nature and to this purpose, as, concerning taking away the flony beart, and giving a beart of flesh; of giving you a new beart; of making you to lothe your selves for all your abominations; apprehending, receiving and closing with Christ in the covenant, for attaining of it as a fruit of his purchase: For it is not gotten but in the covenant; and therefore 'cis remarkable that this scripture is set down promise-wise, They shall come, the children of Israel and the children of Judah together: Your heavenly Father, who knows that ye have need of this thing (as it is, Matth. 6. 32.) will give his holy Spirit to them that ask bim, as it is, Luke 11.13. And ye would credit and trust him with the performing of that promise to you: And, endeavouring to be serious in having this for your task and work, ye shall find it made good for you and to you.

Jeremiah 50. v. 5. - Come and let us join ourselves to the Lord, in a perpetual covenant that shall not be forgotten.

SERMON IV.

I T is a most defirable design, and worthy to be driven vigorously by us all, to the profecution whereof it would

would very well become us to ftir up and rouze ourselves and one another, according to the laudable practice of these here mentioned, even to hasten towards a closure of the covenant of grace betwixt God and us; to have it sounding loud in our ears, and to have it as the language of our hearts whetted to an edge in pursuit of the thing, Come, let us join ourselves to the Lord, in a perpetual covenant that shall never be forgotten. It should be the great work and business of a communion-sabbath in a special manner, as it is our prosessed design this day, to close and make sure this covenant and blessed bond betwixt the Lord and us.

Having spoken somewhat formerly at several occasions to these sweet words, I shall not now trouble you either with the division or explication of them; but shall inflantly propose fix or seven observations from them, and then speak a word to the scope, and to the application of them, in the close: And tho it be but a short word from each of them that we have to speak, yet they will be found to be very concerning to us, and therefore we would take the more exact notice of them.

The first observation then is, That there is such a thing as distinct covenanting, or mutual engaging in covenant betwint God and a poor sinner. This is clearly holden out in these words as their scope: It were to no purpose for them to say, Come and let us join ourselves to the Lord in a covenant, if there were not fuch a thing as a covenant-union of God and finners. The scripture is full to this purpose, and the treaty of ordinances is kept up for this end; as we have it, Ifa. 55. 1, 2, 3. Ho, every one that thirfts, come to the waters, .&c. Incline your ear, and come unto me; bear, and your fouls ficall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David. This is the scope that the ordinances aim at. In profecuting of this a little further, we shall, First, Explicate what covenanting is, in general. Secondly, What this covenanting with God is, I. In respect of the Parties. 2. In respect of the terms thereof. 3. In respect of the ground on which it is founded. And, Thirdly, To the form of this covenanting.

First then, Covenanting in general may be cleared, from what covenanting among men is: Which is a mutual engaging of two parties on mutual terms; the one party offering such a thing on such terms and conditions, the other party accepting on those terms and conditions on which the offer is made: As we see in a contract of marriage; the man engageth to be the woman's, on condition that she be his; and she engageth to be his wise, as he engageth to be her husband; and each engageth to perform suitable duties to the other. And we make use of this the rather that the scripture alludeth to it in this matter.

Secondly, We are to consider covenanting, as it is betwixt God and a finner: For we are not now speaking of the covenant of works betwixt God and Adam, wherein there was made an offer and promife of life upon condition of perfect obedience; so that, if he did that which was commanded him, he should live: But we are now speaking of God's covenanting with a finner; for that is the covenant spoken of here. It is indeed a great wonder, that ever there should have been a covenant betwixt God and a creature; but a greater wonder, that there should be a covenant betwirt him and a finful creature: Whatever is spoken in scripture of the covenant of grace, belongs to this covenant. 1. The Parties in this covenant are God and the finner, God's creature, but a finful creature; it is the Lord Febouab, and we the house of Israel, and we the house of Judab. 2dly, The terms of the covenant are not, Do this, and live: Tho' the promise be the same, for 'tis life that is offered; yet it is not on the same terms: For, tho' the life be as good as that which was promifed to Adam, yet the serms are far better: The substance of this covenant. we have set down, Fer. 30. 31, 32, 33, and cited Heb. 8. 10, 11, 12, unto which this same invitation doth here relate; I will make a new covenant with the bouse of Israel, and with the house of Judah, not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers; but this shall be it, I will write my law in their bearts, and I will be their God, and they shall be my people, &cc. And, Come (fay they here) and let us join in it. His engagement is to be their God, and their engagement is to be his people; and the terms follow, which are, on God's part, free forgiveness of sins thro' the righteousness of Christ imputed to them, thro' whom whom they are accepted, as if there had never been a quarrel; and, on their part, by faith to take hold of him, and of the pardon of fin, which separated betwirt him and them, thro Jesus Christ, as he is offered to them, Therefore, Rom 10 6 it is called the rightenises of faith, opposed to the righteousness of the law, spoken of before; and what faith it? It faith not, Who Ball go up to beaven? nor, Who Shall descend into the depth ? But the word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy beart; that is the righteousness of faith, which we preach, that if thou shalt con-fessionish thy mouth the Lord Josus, and shalt believe in thy beart, that God raised bim from the dead, thou shalt be saved; That is, If ye make suitable use of Christ for your peace with God, and give up yourselves to him to be his serwants, ye shall get peace and pardon of sin here, and eternal life and salvation hereafter. These in short are the terms on which God offereth himself to sinners. 3. The ground of this, and how it comes to pass that such a covenant is accessible, is the Mediator's interposing in a covenant of redemption with the Father concerning elect finners; wherein he hath procured this covenant of grace betwirt God and finners, by his performing the condition required of him in that covenant; for this covenant of grace and reconciliation is nothing else but the result of the co--venant of redemption, and the execution thereof: We had nover had ground to fay, that there is a way laid down for our peace with God, except there had been a covenant of redemption betwixt him and the Mediator, wherein the Mediator undertook to fatisfy justice for the fins of the elect, by bearing their iniquities; and hath the promife of being satisfied for the travail of his soul, by his seeing of a seed, and by his justifying many through faith in him; as it is, Isa. 53. 11. This gives the rise to this covenant of grace betwirt God and sinners; and therefore these two are put together, Ifa. 53. 3. Incline your ear, come unto me; bear, and your fouls shall live; and I will make an everlafting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David; that is, the fure mercies of the Miffiah, the assignation whereof, even of the purchase of redemption made by him, is by covenant made over to the believer in him: And therefore, when we speak of this covenant, it always supposeth

poseth and implieth Christ, who, If a. 42. 6. is called the covenant, because he is given for the ground of covenanting betwixt God and sinners; it being by him, and in him, that God and sinners meet: There being a gulf (as it were) betwixt sinners and God, he hath made himself the bridge on which sinners may come over and meet with God; and the covenant brings us to Christ: As, under the law, Christ was typed out by the mercy-seat and the ark, wherein the law was put, to shew the linking together of Christ and the covenant; the efficacy of the covenant flowing from Christ, and the covenant giving us a title to Christ, and making Christ accessible to us: It lays (as it were) a bridge to us to step on, and makes an open door to us to enter in by, on Christ, and by Christ to the boly of bolies through the vail, which is his step.

Thirdly, As for the form of this covenanting, it is, as in other contracts, God making the offer, and the person accepting it: God's offer is in the word of the gospel, wherein he faith, Come, and I will make a covenant with you; as the apostle hath it, Rom. 10. The word is near thee, even in thy beart, and in thy mouth; and the fum of it is, If ye believe in Jesus Christ, ye shall be saved: The proposing whereof in the gospel, is the laying of God's offer before you; and it is as really God's offer, as if audibly he were speaking to you from heaven, as he once spake the law on mount Sinai: It being his authority, by which ministers are fent to treat and close this covenant with you: as it is, 2 Cor. 5. We are ambassadors for Chrift, as if God were beseeching you by us; we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God; that is, Be friends with him, by entring in covenant with him: And he sheweth us the ground of it, For be, who knew no fin, was made fin for us, that we might be made the righteousness of God in bim. God's offer is, I am content to be thy God, and to make all that is mine forthcoming to thee for thy good, upon condition thou quit thy own righteousness, and betake thee to my Son the Mediator for righteousness and life. The finner's covenanting is his formal and diffinct, at least his real, confenting to that offer on these terms, saying with his very heart, I am content to have God to be my God, not by vertue of any thing in myself, but by vertue of Christ's

ſa-

204 We should stir up ourselves
satisfaction, which hath procured access to sinners for peace and reconciliation with God; and this is called a Submitting to Christ's righteousness: So then, there is a devoting of the foul to God, a hearty contenting to give itfelf away to him, to be faved and fanctified, to live to him and to his honour; as it is, Ifa. 44. 5. One shall fay. I am the Lord's; and another shall call himself by the name of Jacob; and another shall subscribe with his band unto the Lord: As if it were said, Whose are you? and the person should say, I am God's; for, as plainly and diffinctly, at least as really and solidly, a person wrought upon by God's Spirit, gives the answer and return to God's offer in his covenant, and religns himself to God, as if paper were laid down before him, and he should subscribe his name with his hand to be God's. There is an obligation really taken on, and a consent plainly given; the person with the very heart subscribing the contract, which, 2 Chron. 30. 8. is called a yielding or giving the band to God. He cometh with stretched-out arms in the gospel, and saith, Man or woman, who findest thyself lost, close with me in my Son Christ, and thou shall be saved; and our consenting is, our heart's catching hold of that word, and yielding to him, as one firiking hands with another with whom he hath before been at odds and variance, in fign of his being content and fatisfied to be reconciled to him, and of his being fo in very deed.

The second observation is, That this covenanting with God bath with it, or in it, a near union and conjunction with the Lord. Let us (say they) join ourselves to the Lord in a perpetual covenant. The word joining hath in it a special emphasis, being such as is used to set out the conjunction that is betwirt the husband and wise; For this cause (saith the Lord) Ball a man leave father and mother, and cleave to his wise, and so the wise cleaveth to her husband: Thus the word is, Gen. 29. 34. Now shall my husband be joined to me; therefore she called his name Levi, which flows from this root, added or joined. In prosecuting this point a little, we would speak shortly, 1. To the nature of this union. 2. To the properties of it, 1st, As to its nature, we would consider, that there is, 1. A legal union, wherein by contract and bond there is a transferring of the interest of one party to another, which is here; for God becomes the finner's God, and the finner becomes God's own. as his portion and property: Even as, in marriage, the husband is the wife's, and the wife the husband's; and the relations stands, tho they should be in several kingdoms. 2. There is a mystical union, which is spiritual and more mysterious, whereby God becometh one with covenanting finners, and they become one with him; God by his Spirit dwelling in the covenanter, and the covenanter dwelling by faith in God: Which floweth from the former mutually transferred right or legal union, and followeth on it; in which respect it is faid, I Cor. 6. 17. He that is joined to the Lord, is one Spirit; he is God's temple, and God by his Spirit dwells in him. By this one Spirit, is meant a spiritual conjunction, union or communion; whereby God takes hold really of the soul by his Spirit, and the foul takes a real hold of God by faith: They do mutually embrace each other, as the husband doth the wife, by vertue of their union. 3. This union implieth a nearness. a friendliness, an intimacy and familiarity, and it is opposed to distance and estrangement from God: The covenant, really entred into, is like a bond to keep the believer near God, glued (as it were) and straitly join'd to him; or it is a cementing with God, to speak so: By this covenant, God and finners are made near, and knit to one another, and kept from ever separating; there's such a near and strait union betwirt Christ and believers, as is betwirt the foundation or corner-stone and the house, yea, as is betwixt the vine and the branches, Epb. 2. John 15.

2dly, As for the properties of this union by covenant, a few of which we shall only now touch at, not having access to inlarge, as this subject by itself would require.

I. It is with the Lord himself, not with any benefit, common gift or grace or mercy; these follow the union with himself: The covenanter becomes one Spirit with him, as is said; and saith the apostle, Eph. 5. We are stip of his stip, and home of his hone.

2. This union is in and throw Christ, by whom it is made up; he being the temple and thernacle, or meeting-place, wherein we meet with God. So that we are not anxiously to enquire, nor cursoully to dispute here, how our union with God, and with the Mediator do differ; we unite with God in him, and upon the grounds of his redemption, in which respect our union with God is more mediate. 3. This union'is very friendly, most firm and indissable: It is a wonderful near and fure union. 'Tis an inexpressible union, and therefore we must here give over speaking further to it, only looking to a word of it, John 17. 21, 23. in the 21. ver/e fairh our Lord, That they all may be one, as thou, Father, are in me, and I in thee; that they also may be one in us: It is fuch an union, by the believer's being in God and in the Mediator, as is that, whereby God and the Mediator are one; tho' no parity is here to be understood, but a resemblance only. And, v. 23. I in them, and thou in me; that they may be made perfect in one. I in them, here the union is most immediate; and thou in me, there the union is most mediate, viz. by God's being in the Mediator, dwelling in the believer, and the believer's dwelling in God (the fulness of the Godhead being in the Mediator) by his meeting with God thro' faith in the Mediator: And indeed, were there no more but this, it faith that this covenant is a good bargain.

The third observation is, That union with the Lord by this covenant is accessible to a run-away finner, that bath perverted bis way, upon bis coming aright to close with him therein on the terms of it. Who are those coming here to join in covenant with the Lord? It is even those spoken ot, Jer. 3. 6, 7. Backsliding children, treacherous dealers. Who are bidden return, and be will beal their backslidings; which could not be, if this covenant were not accessible to finners. Nay, let me say, there is scarce any fort of fin, but the Lord out-faceth it in his covenant; as we may see, Jer. 3. where the Lord saith, Thou bast played the barlot with many lovers, thou hast spoken and done evil as thou couldst; yet, wilt thou not from this time cry unto me, My Father? If we look to the grofness of fin, were it like fearlet or crimfon, Ifa. 1. 18. it shall be made white like snow and wool: If ye be willing and obedient, faith the Lord. to close a covenant with me, ye shall eat the good of the land. In the propounding of the covenant, he will take away that exception of the grofness of fin, which might stand in the sinner's way, were it even rotten hypocrify .

crify, deteftable indifferency and lukewarmnels in the matters of God, putting the person in hazard to be spew-ed out of Christ's mouth; yet he saith even to such (if they will indeed take his counsel, and be content to have their deadly evils, removed, and their wants supplied) I counsel thee to come and buy of me eye-salve, gold and garments; And, Behold I stand at the door and knock; if any man will open the door, I will come in to him, and sup with bim, and he with me. Only take this word of advertisement here, and then I shall clear and confirm the doctrine further: When then we speak of sinners access to God by this covenant, we mean, that there is access, only on condirion they take with their faults, and come weeping, heartbroken, and fomeway fuitably affected with their fin: These only are the persons that may comfortably expect this access; he seeks after such, tho' he will find none fuch till he make them fuch. For further clearing and confirming of it then, we would confider these four things. 1. God's end in the covenant, which will make out this, that there must be access to a run-away finner by this covenant to union with God, when he comes home to him in the way of repentance and believing; because his end in the covenant is to fave simmers, often spoken of; to justify the ungodly, Rom. 4. 5. to dwell with rebels, Plat. 68. 18. to get a name and a praise to bimself of being gracious: As it cannot admit of, nor let in a sinner, but on this condition; so it cannot but accept of a finner having this condition: 2. We would consider God's contrivance of the covenant, in making it fuitable to fuch an end, fo as it may make the riches of his grace to shine, and may be effectual for the gaining of souls; and therefore, 2 Sam. 23.5. it is faid, in this respect, to be ordered in all things and fure; and Jer. 31. 33. compared with Heb. 8. the sub-stance of it is set down compended in a few words, I will pardon their iniquity, and remember their fin no more, &c. 3. We would confider the administration of the covenant: 'Tis not in an immediate way, as that first covenant made with Adam was, wherein there was no Mediator, neither was there need of any; but it is in a mediate way, by a Surety and Mediator, who hath taken on and engaged for the debt of the covenanting finner, and hath undertaken for his through-bearing. Now, why is this administration and dispensation? but because the principal debtor is a bankrupt, and not able to satisfy for himself; therefore he hath access to come and get pardon, and to be friends with God thro the Mediator. 4. We would consider all the properties of the covenant, especially the freeness of it, and we will find that they speak out this: It is a covenant of sure mercies, Isa. 55. 3. and all the promises and articles of it respect sinners, and hold forth this, that there is a way laid down, how a sinner, at seud with God, may get this union made up by covenanting with him.

The fourth observation is, That covenanting with God is a very short cut for the quieting, peace, and happiness of a treacherous backsiding sinner: Therefore, when these people, here spoken of, are, in their holy heat and warm-· ness, stirred up under the conviction and sense of their guilt; as the short cut to come to peace and a happy condition, they fay, Come and let us join ourselves to the Lord in a perpetual covenant. It is the accepting of God's offer, and being content to be his on the acccount of Christ's righteoutness, that they propose to themselves as the ground of their calm, quietness, and happiness. This observation implies these things. 1. That covenanting with God doth fully make the covenanter happy, tho' formerly he hath been a miserable sinner; and O this is a good bargain, that makes a finner compleatly happy! it makes him to fay, Whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is none upon the earth that I desire beside thee, Pfal. 73. I shall name a few scriptures, to shew the full happiness of a finner that enters in this covenant: The first whereof is, 2 Sam. 23. 5. Altho' my boufe be not fo with God, yet be bath made with me an everlafting covenant, well ordered in all things and sure; and this is all my salvation, and all my desire: It is mensura voti, even all that heart can wish. And these words being considered, as David the sweet finger of Israel his last words, when he is a-dying, they clearly imply a commendation of this covenant as full for the happiness of a finner. Another passage is, Rev. 21. 7. He that overcometh hall inherit all things: How is that? even thus, I will be his God, and he shall be my son; that is in substance, I will declare myself to be in covenant with him. This is the compend of the compleat happiness of glorified saints in heaven, and the begun happiness of believers, of sojourning saints here on earth, in a less measure and lower degree; for in heaven God will be all in all: And is not this a good bargain, and good to finners? which commends it the more. A third place is, Rom. 8. where its told us, that nothing can be laid to their charge, but 'tis answered in this covenant. a Cautioner to pay their debt, and to strengthen them for their duty; I will (faith he) be their God, and they shall be my people: I will put my fear in their bearts, that they shall not depart from me: I will pardon their iniquities, all bygones, and beal their backslidings, they shall not get leave to go from me : Would ye be pliable and yielding to God's covenant ? I will put my law in their inward parts. and write it in their bearts, and a new beart will I give unto them, and will cause them to walk in my statutes, and to 2. The doctrine implies, as it is a full covenant, or makes the covenanter fully happy, so it makes him fickerly and furely happy : 2 Sam. 25. 5. it is a covenant well ordered in all things and sure. Whoever by faith betake themselves to Christ's righteousness, and lay hold on this covenant, may expect communion with God, as certainly as Adam before the fall had it; for 'tis the same God, that promifeth, who is as faithful as ever he was: Hence 'tis called a word tried as silver in a furnace seven times; a pure word, that cometh out of the furnace always as maily and weighty as it went in. And the ground of the covenant being Christ's latisfaction, it makes it sure; therefore he is called a tried Corner-stone, a sure Foundation. 3. It implies, that as it is a sure, so it is a compendious and speedy way to happiness, and of deliverance to the sinner; which maketh much for God's praise: He is a very present belp in time of trouble, or a speedy belp, Psal. 46. So, Psal. 32. 5. I said (saith David) I would confess my transgression, and thou forgavest the iniquity of my sin, immediately (as if he had said) upon my confession, without longer delay: And, Rom. 4. 7. this Pfalm is made use of, to de-monstrate the righteousness which is by faith in Christ.

The fifth observation is, That finners, who are lying under

We should stir up ourselves

210 a quarrel with God, and have the offer of a covenant, should betake themselves to it, and without delay put a close to the bargain betwint God and them. Come (fay they here) and let us join ourselves to the Lord, in a perpetual covenant; whereby is holden out, that, when a finner hath access to the covenant with God, he should flee to it, and take hold of it quickly. In this respect, covenanting with God is compared to fleeing in to the city of refuge, Heb. 6. That which I mean is, I. That a finner, who hath this covenant in his offer, should take no other way for justification and freedom for fin and wrath, but hold to this only, and feek to be justified by it. 2. That he should do it speedily: When the word of the gospel saith, Come; he should anfwer, Lo, I come unto thee: When God by the preaching of the gospel maketh a gracious declaration, that he will accept of lost sinners that come to him, and faith, This is the day of salvation, this is the accepted time, as it is, 2 Cor. 6. 2. and when by his ministers he waiteth on you, inviteth and wooeth you, ye should presently, without delay or demur, close with the offer, and accept of the invitation.

ij

The fixeb observation is, That those who are convinced that they have sinned, and would fain be in covenant with God, Should endeavour to bave it throughed and made sure, to have it an absolutely closed and ended bargain. This is very clear in this people's practice, who concernedly fav. Come let us join ourselves in a perpetual covenant never to be forgotten; they think they cannot get it made fure enough, and therefore they join in a covenant never to be forgotten, to be perpetual; they judged that it could not possibly be made too sure: Which manifestly saith, that when God giveth an opportunity to enter into, or renew a covenant with him, we should be holily solicitous, in very good earnest, and greatly concerned to have it made ficker, as the word is, Neb. 9. v. last, We make a sure covenant and write it, and our princes. Levites and priests feal That word, Isa 44.5. is remarkable to this purpose, One stall say, I am the Lord's; and another shall call bimself by the name of Jacob; and another shall subscribe with his hand unto the Lord; that it might stand (as it were) over his head, as being formally and explicitely engaged gaged in, with heart and hand: And they that know how fickle and inconftant their hearts are, and how prone to deal loofely and unfaithfully in God's covenant, have good feason to look to this, that all be sure work; that they get not the shell for the kernel, and go not down to the grave with a lie in their right hand.

The seventh observation is, That there are some times beside other times, wherein some people beside others have it pungently put to them to enter in, and to renew their covenant with These here spoken of, who say, having God's presfing call to it, before they faid it one to another, Come and let us join to the Lord in a covenant, are put to it more than others, and at this time more than at another. In a word, people are then put to it in a more especial manner, 1. At fuch a time when the gospel is clearly, convincingly, and powerfully preached unto them; preaching of the gospel being God's way of meeting and treating with finners, and the ministers and preachers thereof being as his ambassadors commissioned and sent forth by him to treat, and close a treaty with finners, on the terms contained in their commission; which when they with suitable concernedness and earnestness do, their hearers are the more put to it. 2. They are thus put to it, when some stirring and warmness of affection towards covenanting with God is wrought in them; or when their own frame, thro grace, preffeth them on to it; as we may see it did in this people. 3. When the Lord oftner than once or twice, in frequently renewed opportunities of this kind, puts people to it; and more especially in the sacrament of the Lord's supper: The very fight and offer of the elements in the communion speak plainly, on the matter, to the communicants, Are ye indeed in earnest in the great business of covenanting with God, fince ye are now to receive the seal of it? If ye be not, ye notably profane the ordinance, by fetting a scal to a blank charter: It is therefore called the covenant, This is the cup of the new covenant; because it puts you in mind of the covenant, and puts you to it, whether ye will really engage in it. It is like the king's appointing a day for sealing of pardons to rebels; his proclamation first puts them to it, to accept of the pardon; next, the heralds put them to it; and then, laftly, the fet and fixed time

²212 We should stir up ourselves

ime or day of the sealing, puts them most of all to it:
And so it is with you in this ordinance, that we are by

and by to be about.

We come now to the application of all, wherein we shall not insist on all things that these doctrines minister ground for; but shall pitch on some most useful, and which are the great scope of the text and of the day.

And, in the 1st place, I would befeech you to endeavour to gather and compose yourselves, and gravely to ponder what it is that this day we are pressingly called to; it is even this, Come and let us join ourselves to the Lord, in a perpetual covenant never to be forgotten. Know and believe, that there is such a thing as covenanting with God; that God is dealing with you to covenant with him; and that it is a good hargain: To you is this word of salvation sent. And ve should be very seriously thinking how to get it accepted and made use of, how to receive this offer by faith, and how to get yourselves given up and away to him; because in this covenant (as I shewed before) there is a mutual engaging,: God offers himfelf, and all that is in him, to be ours, and to be made forthcoming for our good; and we by faith close with the offer, and give up ourselves to him to be at his dispose. Have ye any serious thoughts of this? Put yourselves to it, and we in the name of the Lord put you to it; for we cannot well proceed any further, till ye be at some point in this: Are ye in earnest? is this your errand in being here to day? if not, why are we come hither? is it to see how the day goeth? or, is it only to get your communion, as ye use to speak? Alas! what's that? it is to covenant with God, and, ere ye depart this place, to put it to a point, that it may be a closed bargain; that should be your errand.

And therefore, in the 2d place, we tell you, that the great God is content to covenant with poor, feckless and sinful creatures; whereat we may wonder, and say, Is it so in very deed that God will dwell with men on earth? will he indeed covenant with men, with sinful men, with treacherous-dealing men, with backsiders? Yea, we tell you, that it is so; he is content to be your God, and that ye possess all things in him; content to pardon you all your sins, to give you grace and glory, even every good thing; to enter you heirs to a kingdom, and on good and easy terms; to do it freely, without money and without price, if ye be but indeed content to accept of his offer on his eaty and very reasonable terms: And may not your very hearts laugh within you at the hearing of the glad tidings of this covenant, and that God is yet content to make it up with you? O how sappy and massy is this! and that is a very sweet word to this purpose which we have, Plal. 16. 6. God, even our own God Shall blefs us, which may make the believer smile. This relation of our own maketh the bleffing double; and it flows from this formal (at least, real) covenanting and union with God, and the believer hath a right to this and all things: He-hath here an offer, and another fort of right, than he hath to his house and land or clothes; 'tis a right to God, that giveth a right to these things, I mean a spiritual right; for we speak not now of that which is civil: Let us. therefore, flay ourselves and wonder, and be stirred and affected with it, that the infinite and all-sufficient God is content to make this good bargain, and even now to make it with us tinners, even with infignificant and unworthy adly, We make proclamation of this bargain to you, and avouch, that there is falvation offered to finners, and to be had thro' Jesus Christ: The Lord alloweth and warranteth us to make this proclamation, as well as he did Feremiab, when he faith to him, Chap 3. 12. Go and pro-claim these words towards the north, Return, thou backsliding Ifrael, and I will not cause mine anger to fall upon thee; for I am merciful, saith the Lord, and will not keep anger for ever: He alloweth, nay, he peremptorily commandeth that ye should be put to it; and therefore, when we have laid the covenant before you, what fay ye to it? what will ye do? we must have an answer from you: Ye have his word and oath for confirmation of it; O believe and take hold of it, and ye shall get the seal from us as his commissioners. who treat with you, according to our commission, in his name. And here we must be particular, and be ye particular with yourselves: Take and receive what we say to you with a warrant, as the word of the Lord; for it is no less his word now, than it was when Feremiab and the other prophets spoke it, when the apostles spoke it, yea, when Christ spake it himself: It is the same covenant, and the same word, that this day is preached to you; the Lord calls us to flir up ourselves, and to say in good earnest, Come let us join to him in a perpetual covenant. I. The Party inviting is the LORD JEHOVAH in the Mediator; and sure he is a most, yea, the most excellent Party; Thy Maker (faith he, 1/a. 54. 8.) is thy Husband. 2. There are in this covenant excellent promises: God is content to be your God, and to take you for his people and spouse, to pardon your iniquity, to heal your backflidings, to fanctify and fave you, and to make you eternally happy; and are not these desirable? 3. It calls you to give yourselves up to him; and indeed it is very reasonable, that, if the husband give himself to the wife, she should give herself to him. Are ye then content to treat with God in the Mediator, and to be his on his own terms? It is good to meet and treat with God in him. Have ye any ground to except against this? doth it please or displease you? say to it, tell your mind: For I declare to you, that, if ye get him to be yours, you must needs be his. I fear, many of you stand and stick at this, notwithstanding the high reasonableness of it: Is this, think ye, an evil, disadvantageous, or prejudicial exchange? Whether is it better that the one and only true God reign over you, than that Satan, and a multitude of strange lords, your lusts, taking the throne (as it were) by turns, should reign over you? It is both fad and sturendious, that ever this should be suffered once to come in question or debate; and yet, alas! it is this, or something like this, at which it will stand. Either ye will not take God for your God, or ye will not give yourselves to him to be his people, on his own very reasonable and easy terms; and I trow, ye will make no better. I would, therefore, yet again put you to it; for it is the very thing that ye are called to, the great business of the day, and it is come even to the shock.

And therefore, labour to be at a point, whether ye will close with him or not: If ye will sincerely say, We take the Lord to be our God, and give ourselves to him, to be his people and servants; then we say to you, and affure you in his name, that this cup, that by and by ye are to drink, shall be, according to his warrant, the new covenant in his blood. And, to press you to the thing, let me but ask you a few questions. I Is there not need of covenanting with God? are there not many fins on your score? is there not a quarrel betwixt God and you? isnot this bargain meet and suitable for you, which holds out remission of sins and peace with God? are ye not urgent. ly called to it? And what ground of challenge will it be. think ye, that this was in your offer, and on very free and easy terms, and ye would not accept of it, but would needs destroy yourselves? 2. If there he sin an a quarrel, is there not a necessity to have it taken away . Have ye laid your account and resolved not to be solicitous and careful, whether ye he friends with God or not? And, if ye will not say that, why do ye not enter this covenant?

3. Is there any other way to get sin pardoned, and the quarrel taken away, but by making fure your covenant with God? David or any others that were faved, were they faved any other way? This covenant was all his falvation, and all his defire. 4. What will ye say in the day of the Lord, when the trumpet shall sound, and he shall call you to an account for refusing his free and gracious offer; when there will be no more treating with you; when he shall fay, and make your own conscience fay to you, It was plainly told you, that there was a quarrel standing betwirt me and you; it was told you, that I was willing to enter into a covenant with you, and to remove that quarrel; I fent my messengers unto you for this end, but ye made light of the matter? Say to it, Q fay to it; ye must say something, Yea, or Nay; ye are not lest to be indifferent, and to keep up yourselves in this matter: I tell you, if ye say not Yea, ye say Nay; and, as the apostie speaks, Ats 13.46. ye pass sentence on your-selves, and judge yourselves unworthy of eternal life; It is interpretatively a faying, that ye will not have heaven and life thro' Christ; and therefore, as ye would not destroy your own fouls, I beseech you, nay, I obtest you in the name of the Lord, and for his fake, accept of this covenant. We tell you, and, as the apostle hath it, we say, Re it known unto you, that through Jesus Christ remission of sins is preached to you; he hath purchased life and salvation to finners; and, To you is the word of this salvation sent : Give, O give your confent ro the bargain, and that is all

we feek of you.

Now, to profecute this a little, and to put you yet further to it, because it will ly before God, whether we have but you to it or not, and whether ye have accepted of this covenant or not; whether we were in earnest in proposing it, and whether ye were in earnest in closing with it: Consider, I. The persons whom we put to this, and the things that we put you to; 2. The terms on which; 3. The grounds from which; And, 4. The qualifications and directions whereby. First, As for the persons whom we put and press to this covenanting with God; It is not those only who have gotten their tokens warranting them to come to the table, nor those only that are debarred, and so have got no tokens; but it is all of you, those who are afar off, and near-band; but differently: To the tender soul we say, Come forward; To the secure we say, Humble yourselves, and then come and join in this covenant. The thing we call you to is, to take the Lord to be your God, and to give up yourselves to be God's; we call you to take God to be your Master, your Father, your Saviour, your Head, your Husband, your Friend, even your All: And that is no ill nor small offer: And we call you to give up yourselves to God, to forsake your father's house, and all your kindred, and to cleave to him; to join yourselves to the Lord, as the text hath it; and as it is said, the prodigal joined bimself to a certain citizen, so ye would join yourselves to the Lord, and be beholden to him for your life.

Secondly, As for the terms, they are in short, That feeing God faith, Accept of my Son's righteousness, and ye shall be my sons and daughters; ye would freely accept of it, and take and put Christ's righteousness in the place and room of felf-righteoufness which was in the covenant of works; found your plea before God on nothing that ye can do, but on Christ's doing and suffering for you, which now by faith ye refolve to adhere to; and refign your yourselves to him without any reservation, to be guided and faved by him, in his own way.

As for the third, How, or from and by what grounds we put you to this? or rather, How doth the Lord put us all to it? 1. Ye are put to it by his offer in the gospel, which, in discretion, calls you to give him an answer: He cries, Come unto me, and I will make an everlassing covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David; and, doth he not require an answer? and, is it not incumbent to us, who speak to you in his name, to crave your answer? We declare to you all, that ye may, if ye will, come to be joined with God in covenant, and may be fure to be accepted of as his, if ye come aright: Now, what fay ye to it? Either ye must look on this as a cheat or cunningly devised fable; or, if ye dare not look on it so, ye must accept of it, and make it welcome. 2. Ye are put to it, in this respect, that the Lord brings you now and then under some conviction of the necessity of your peace with God; something within you saith, that peace with God is worth the having, and needful; that this is a good bargain, and that ye have need of it; and there are now and then some raw resolutions to put it to a point: And it may be there is something presently that puts you to it; and if not, so much the more ye would put yourselves to it, lest the kingdom of God be taken from you. 3. Ye are put to it by this same sacrament: Is it possible that ye can take the communion for a feal and confirmation, except ye covenant with God before? If ye will not covenant, ye prove yourselves to be treacherous dissemblers in going to the communion, and to be liars to God: When he prefents and offers his covenant, ye profess to take his offer, and to close the covenant with him; but ye refuse, as it were, to take the pen in your hand, or do throw it away:
When he presents to you the cup of the New Testament, ve drink the wine, and spill the blood, and so become guilty of the body and blood of the Lord, when ye despise it, and will not make use of it, nor covenant with God that ye may get the use of it. And therefore, 4. Know, that ye are put to it presently and peremptorily, and that the Lord will take it for a refusal and for a scorning and despising on your part, if ye do it not; and do ye think it a little matter to have fuch a guilt lying on your score? . What know ye, if ever God shall offer to seal a covenant with you again? And therefore we put you to it peremptor ly, as to these three. (1.) As to the thing, that, when he muites, ye come; when he offers, ye receive and give the Lerd you answer, not a Nay-say, but a Yea, as ye will be answerable: And, upon your saying Yea to this co enant on his terms, we declare in his name, that he says Yea, in taking in the finner that fleeth unto him. (2.) As to the whole of the thing; For ye must not halve. God's covenant; but, as ye accept of God to be yours, so ye must give up yourselves to him to be his; and as ye take Christ for paying of your debt, so also ye must take him to help you to do your dury: Take all therefore, and submit yourselves invirely to him in this covenant. (3.) As to the time, ye must do all this presently: For the Lord doth not allow us to give you an hour, or to promise to treat with you one hour after this; 'tis now, Come and let us join ourselves to the Lord. 'Tis no difficult. thing that ye are called to; 'tis to believe with the heart, and to confess with the month our Lord Jesus Christ, as it is Rom. 10. 9. The Object is Christ; the condition is faith, whereby he is gripped and taken hold of, and which goeth out towards him in the word: And so ye have no more ado, but, when the officer and promise comes out, to accept and subscribe, and to say, I am the Lord's, I will be his, to be faved by his righteousness, and made boly by his grace, both which are contained in the covenant; I am content to be beholden to him both for holiness and happiness; and it shall be a bargain. The Lord himself perswade you to do fo, and that presently, without delaying, dallying, or shifting and off-putting.

Now, it may be, that some think this to be a good bargain, but they know not how to make it sure and sicker, so as it may hold for ever. And therefore this is the last thing, that, in the fourth place, we would speak a little to, viz. How shall a person covenant with God, and know that he hath done so in very deed? (for the directions how to covenant are so many evidences of covenanting, when personned.) For directions then in this matter; We would in general, in the of place, have ground to suppose and take it for granted that ye know what ye are, even finners, and that fin hath laid the foundation of a quarrel betwixt God and you; and that ye know what he is a defigning and doing by this preached gospel, even to bring finners into this covenant, and to have an union made up betwirt him and them. But ye will, belike, fay, I know not how to make it fure. There is no answer to this, but, Be doing, till ye get it made fure; for your unfureness must slow, either from something on God's side, or from fomething on your fide: Ye dare not, I suppose, say that it flows from any thing on God's fide, or, if ye should, this is the way to make him fure (to speak so;) and, it it flow from something on your side, he bids you, Return, backstiding children, and he will beal your backstidings, and make it fure. But, in the next place, and more particularly, confider, 1. Your end and defign, what ye would be at. Ye may have some general aim at something that is good in itself; but that is not enough, it must be something more particular and peculiar: Is it to get God to be your God? doth that fill your eye? Is it to get your backflidings healed as well as pardoned? That is right, if your aim be to have God and spiritual good. I mention this the rather, because some may love God and the covenant. for some temporal good; whereas others love him and his covenant, mainly for a spiritual good, and think themselves well come to and made up thereby. Wherein lies the difference? will ye fay. I answer, in a word, To love God and the covenant only or mainly for temporal mercies, is ill and felfish; but to love God and his covenant, to be made thereby really happy in the enjoyment of him, and to be made conform to him in holiness, is good and definable, and neither felfish nor servile and mercenary: As it is no unkindly-like token in a wife to love her husband, to be delighted in him, and to like well to enjoy his company; so it is a kindly-like mark for a foul to love God, on the account of the happiness and (holiness that are to be had in him, and from him: Love to God shoulders not out all regard and love to nurselves simply, but it shoulders out love to lusts, and all inordinate love to felf and to every idol; nay, its inconfistent with true love to God, not to care whether we be happy

n the enjoyment of him or not. 2. Confider how, and ty what means, and on what terms ye feek to come at hat end: Are ye fecure, and fenfless of your fin and mitery without God? 'Tis very like, that ye make but a blind bargain whereof ye will have no real advantage; But, have ye any kindly touch of your fin and mitery, and of your need of a Saviour; and have ye recourse to. him, as One able to fave to the uttermoft all that come unto God sbrough him, and who lives for ever to make intercession for them? Ye may know somewhat of your sincerity in covenanting with God by the way that ye come to him, 3. What use make ye of the Mediator, when ye are come to him? Is your peace with God, and your hope of holding by the bargain, grounded on him? Do ve lav the weight of all the good ye expect, on his mediation, on his satisfaction and intercession, on his purchase? Do ye hold all thorow him? That's a good token. 4 Are ye content to give to God, as well as to take from him; to devote yourselves to him for service, as well as to enjoy him and happiness in him? This also is a good token, as well as a direction. 5. Are ye in much holy fear and jealousy of backshiding? and is it in your eye and aim purposly to article this with the Lord, to put his fear in your heaft, that ye may not depart from him? Many perfons will fometimes in a warm fit, or in a good mood (as we use to speak) come far on, as Agrippa did, but quickly fall off, and return to their wonted biass, coldness and indifferency; therefore, in your covenanting with God, there would be much holy fear, lest it be not found, lest it hold not: Let your foul fay, Now I am absolutely and unrefervedly given away to God, not by mortgage or wadfet only (to speak so) but without reversion, even for ever. 6. Ye would come to close actually with God himfelf in covenant: Many come to the word and facrament, to get, as they think, some good; but come not to the covenant, to be really and perpetually joined to the Lord himself. 7. Ye would seek after some heart-warming, by God's Spirit within you, and some lively exercise of your faith in him, as ye see to be in this peoples case, 8. Persons that are in earnest will be much affected with bygone slips, failings and unfaithful dealings with God, and

and are afraid of falling back and of dealing loofly with the Lord; and this puts them on to be more folicitous and careful, to take on the mo bands, and to cast the knot the faster, because the heart is deceitful! Come (say they here) and let us join ourselves to the Lord, in a per-petual covenant never to be forgotten. They are not content with a covenant, except it be ficker; the heart protests against inself if it shall draw back, and resigns and renounces its liberty to do so any more, if it may be called liberty. 9. A person would aim to have himself sure and fatisfied as to this, that he hath really given his confent, that he may have quietness in the assurance of its being so; yet, not laying the weight of his peace on his clearners and assurance, but because his comfort much depends thereon, therefore he will endeavour to have any blank filled up, and the business put to a point: He comes to this covenanting, with holy fear, felf-fuspicion and jealoufy; and goeth from it with fear: And as he is attended with this fear in covenanting, so in receiving the facrament the feal of the covenant; Come (fay they) and let us join ourselves to the Lord, in a perpetual covenant that shall, never be forgotten. O so sure as they would have it! Ye who shall thro grace come thus, shall find the Lord , Jesus waiting and ready to welcome you.

Bur, 'tis like, ye will ask, How is the sacrament made useful and helpful in this joining to the Lord in covenant? I answer in general, as to the believer, That all the promifes are his, and it feals all the bleffings of the covenant to him, because the condition of the covenant is found in him: Even as a pardon given to a rebel on condition he lay down his arms, when he doth lay them down and accepts of the pardon, the feal is appended to it, which makes it firm and fure. But what if the persons doubt of their having entred into the covenant? Answer 1. They are either such as are mere strangers to God, and have no desire after, nor respect to the covenant; those are under God's curse, and shall get no good of the sacrament, because they resolve not to take Christ to sulfil the condition of the covenant in them, and are not in earnest to be in under the bond of the covenant: Yet, if even such would seriously resolve to fulfil the condition, or rather to take Christ

Christ to help them to fulfil it, they should be welcomes Or they are such as are doubting, tho they have some honest defire: Such would remember, the bargain is mutual, and they must engage to God, if they would have God engaged to them: And, if ye have not done it before, do it even now, and the facrament shall be useful and helpful to you, in these respects: More particularly, 1. For, sealing this general truth, If I believe in Christ, I Shall bave eternal life : In which respect, 'tis like a pardon offered to a rebel on condition he lay down his arms; he would first see it in writ, and then he would have it sealed: Well (saith the king) ye shall get it sealed. 2. Tis useful, and hath influence in a moral way, to make you accept of pardon, and to enter in the covenant: In which respect, 'tis an argument, as to allure the rebel to accept of the pardon, so to perswade and assure him, that on his acceptance he shall have it actually and certainly, when 'tis holden forth, sealed: For, faith the Lord, in the facrament, ye have my covenant, and here I am ready to seal it. 3. It furthers our joining in covenant, in respect of its clear holding forth and manifesting the bleffings of the covenant. The word faith, that ye are finners, and that ye will get nothing that is truly good but in and through Christ; and that God is content to covenant with you, and to pardon your fins thro him:
And the facrament brings Christ and the blessings of the covenant to be some way visible and sensible to you; and the gospel tells how it is done. 4. In the sacrament the Lord condescends in the most formal way to covenant; for in it he faith, Take you my Son's blood to wash you who are guilty and filthy: And your taking is, as it were, a striking of hands with him, and a saying, Content, Lord, let this blood wash me. And thus, looking to the word of inftitution, which gives footing to faith, and exercifing faith thereon as your warrant, your faith is helped to take hold of Christ by and in the facrament. 5. It helps to close with the covenant, by letting you see the grounds of the covenant, whereon it is bottomed and built. If thou shoulds say, Tho God would covenant with me, I will not keep: The facrament holds out Christ as Cautioner, that hath put himself in our room, and enmaged in our name to make us forthcoming. And if thou shouldst yet say, Will God indeed accept of the like of me? It saith, Here is a broken and bleeding Saviour and Mediator to lead thee to God, a Saviour who hath made himself a propitiation for sin: And hereupon the sinner may be strengthned to take hold of the covenant, because in the sacrament he sees Christ himself laid as a bridge, on which he may come over to God, and his rent sless the Vail through which he may, as by a new and hving way, enter into the bolies.

Jeremiah 50. v. 5. — Come and let us join ourselves to the Lord, in a perpetual covenant that shall not be forgotten.

SERMON V.

HERE are two main and mighty uptaking businesses to the people of God; the one whereof is, How to win to be in covenant with God, to be friends and in good terms with him; the other is, How to stand to, and keep covenant with him, and to live as being made friends with him according to the obligation that lieth on them. This is the great design of all preaching, to bring them within the covenant, who are without; and to make those who are within the covenant, to walk fuitably to it: And as these are never separated on the Lord's side, so should they never be separated on our side; therefore these people are brought in here saying, Let us join ourselves to the Lord in a covenant: And not only fo. but there are two words added by them, to shew their earnest defire to keep and stand to the covenant; the one is, a perpetual covenant; the other a covenant that shall not be forgotten, the impression whereof may never wear away. And this we conceive to be their meaning, 1. Because to forget the covenant, in scripture, is to deal falsly in it; and to forget the covenant, and to break it, are the same. 2. Because it is (as we take it) opposed to their fear of false dealing in the covenant: As if they had said, We were once in covenant with God, but we did deal falfly

224 To keep Covenant with God, in it, and forgot it; let us now therefore join ourselves in a perpetual covenant never to be forgotten; let it be a conflant and flanding, a lasting, even an everlasting bargain.

This being the meaning of the words, we shall speak to four observations from them (the substance whereof ye have heard touched on already) and these are,

First, That the great bazard which a people covenanting with God are in, is to slip and slide from their tye and engagements to him, and to forget the covenant.

The Second is, That the great evidence of right entring in covenant with God, is to be serious and much concerned in keeping of it, even as much as in entring into it.

The Third is, That the great defign and duty of a covenanter with God is, never to forget the covenant, but freshly to remember it, so as to be answerable to it in practice.

The Fourth is, That the great mean whereby this defign is got prosecuted, and this duty performed, is adhering and eleaving to God, according to the covenant. Let us (say they) join to the Lord in a covenant. In this respect, adhering to him in it, is the mean to keep covenant, so as we may never fall from it.

The first observation then is, That the great hazard that a people covenanting with God are in, is to flip and fall from their engagement to bim : Or, There is such a covenanting with God, as people may foon forget and fall from; a temporary and unficker covenanting, that holds not. A perpetual covenant never to be forgotten, supposeth that there is a sort of covenanting that slips like a knotless thread (to speak so) and abides not. This is sadly verified in the experience of many common professors of religion, and often even of the godly themselves in a measure; even now there will be a bargaining with God, and within a little they will forget it: Peter faith, Though all should for fake thee, yet will not I; and yet within a very little he is found fleeping, and that same night denies and forswears his Master. So, Dens 5. the people say, All that the Lord hath commanded us, we will do; and the Lord faith, They bave well said, O that there were such a heart in them! and yet, within the space of little more than forty days, they fet up a golden calf for their god. So, Pfal, 79.

34, 35, 36, 37. When he flew them, then they fought bim they returned and enquired early after God: They remembred that God was their Rock, and the most High their Redeemer. But they did flatter bim with their mouth, and lied unto bim with their tongue; for their bearts were not right with God, neither were they fledfast in his covenant; they abode not by the mint and essay which they made. But I think this is beyond any need of proof; we rather stand in need to have the impression of it made deep upon our hearts, and to go from the work we have been about with holy fear and jealousy over ourselves, bespeaking ourselves thus, What if this engagement we have come under, hold not, but prove like the banging down of the head like a bulrush for a day? Serious thoughts of this hazard would, thro' God's bleffing, further the exercise of watchfulness a great deal more. When carnal self-considence and fearlesness creep on and take hold of us, we (as it were) lay aside our armour, foolishly fancying that there is no hazard, but that all will be well; were there more of this holy fear, there would not be such frequent furprizes. Have ye not often been furprized, and proved unfiedfast in God's covenant? And, since ye have so many and clear proofs of the truth of this doctrine in your own fad experience, is there not the greater need of holy fear and watchfulness?

The second observation is, That those who are sincere and ferious in covenanting with God, will be no less so, in keeping of, and standing to it. Where people are sound and honest at the heart, it will be no less an upraking work to them, how to keep covenant, than it was to get it entred in: Therefore these here mentioned have it as one piece of their seriously uptaking business, how to be joined to the Lord in covenant; and another, how to get it flood to, so as it may be a perpetual one, never to be forgotten. The same reasons that prove that there should be, or that there is feriousuess in making and closing the covenant, will also prove that there should be, and will be seriousness in endeavours to keep it; for, if the person honestly mind to enjoy the bleffings covenanted, he must and will endeavour to keep and stand to the covenant; if he honestly mind and fincerely defire to be in good terms with God

To keep Covenant with God,

God thro the covenant, he must and will endeavour to stand to the terms of the covenant, and breach of covenant will waken a challenge. If it be a principle of true saving grace that puts a person to desire to be under the bond of God's covenant, that same principle will make him desire and endeavour to abide under that bond, and to keep satthfully to him: Thus David saith, Psal. 119. 29, 30. I have chosen the way of the precepts; and I have such unto they testimonies. There is a choosing of the covenant and testimonies, and a design of sticking to them, when upon choice closed with.

The Use of this point serves for instruction. Would ye fain have a mark of your honesty in covenanting with God? Here it is, and we know no better mark or evidence to give you than this, even to be ferious and much concerned in keeping covenant: God will never account that man to be a true covenanter; that will cast his law behind his back. The apostle James, Chap. 1. speaks of two forts of men that are hearers of the word; and he compares the one fort, viz. forgetful hearers, to a man, who hebolding his natural face in a glass, goes away, and Graightway forgets what manner of man be was : But the other fort are fuch, who are not only bearers, but doers of the word ; That man (faith he) fhail be bleffed in bis deed. It is not the fayer, but the doer and the keeper of the words of the covenant, that is bleffed. As many as ferioully engage to God, are put on (as we faid before) with as much seriousness, in endeavouring the performance of their engagement, as to come under it: I speak not of a perfect performance, or fulfilling of engagements without any the leaft defect, that is not to be win at here; but of ferious minding and endeavouring, in the Lord's firengib, the performance of that which we are engaged to: For there is a great difference betwirt mens failing and flipping of infirmity, and their finning with allow-ance; the former theweth a body of death to be yet remaining, and may confift with faithfulness in God's covenant; but the latter speaks out a slothful, careless and negligent undervaluing of God and of his covenant Let never fuch a man cloke himself with the pretext of being in covenant with God, nor palliate his palpably groß and voluntary voluntary breaches of covenant, with the pretext of intfirmity, who doth not feriously drive it as his great defign, to be faithful in God's covenant.

Now, would ye know wherein this seriousness in keeping and performing covenant confifts? Ye may take it in thele characters. The man that is serious in performing his engagement, I. His heart is taken up with it, and there is an ardent longing to be answerable to the covenant that he is entred into with God: His greatest with in all the world is, as to be in it, so to be faithful in keeping it; therefore faith the Pfalmift, Pfal. 119. 5. O that my ways were directed to keep thy flatutes! and this is given as a mark of the bleffed man, who is undefiled in the way : And faith he, v. 6. Then Shall I not be ashamed, when I have respect auto all thy commandments; which is a reafon of the former, and a confirmation of it: He defigns to be short in his obedience to no command, and he does not allow himself in his shortcoming even as to-degree, but is constant in pursuing his design always, even unto the 2. Seriousness in performing appeareth by kindly acknowledging the impression of the weightiness of the tye and obligation that the covenant lays on persons; it someway affects and burdens them, so that they walk not so lightly as others do under the obligation and debt of the covenant, tho' it be a friendly debt, and also a privilege: Their burden is not, that they are under the obligation, but how to get it performed; thus faith the Pfalmift, Pfal. 56. 12. Thy vows are upon me, O God: They take on vows to God, and keep them on, and walk as being under them. This is a main thing to be looked to in keeping covenant. 3. This feriousness in performing appears in the tear that persons have of going wrong and miscarrying: They are asraid to break to God; neither are any so suspicious of them, as they are of themselves, knowing by fad experience, that their bearts are deceivful above all things: And this is a very native evidence, confidering what we heard of our fickleness, which cannot be without the impression of sear. 4. It appears in a holy carefulness and diligence to prevent that which they fear: Left at any time they let a buckle flip (to speak so) and left that which they found come on them, their fear pute P 2 them To keep Covenant with God, them to diligence to prevent the thing feared. This makes them to fast and pray, and to be watchful over themselves in loose and untender company, and to eschew them as far as they can, and to hazard some loss, rather than to put themselves under a snare; watching and praying, left they fall into the fin of dealing falfly in God's coyenant. 5. It appears in the sharpness of challenges, when any thing miscarries in their hand: They are soon challenged for the very first beginnings of a breach; a wrong look will affect them: Therefore faith 70b, Chap. 21. I made a covenant with my eyes, why then should I look upon a maid? And the heart, while tender, will lothe and scar at the least thing that hath the remotest tendency towards a breach, were it but the appearance of evil. Any the least guilt foon toucheth and smiteth them, not only that which is their own, but even that of others: Thus good Ezra faith, Chap. 9. Should we again break thy commandments, and join in affinity with the people of thefe a-Bominations? And he lieth in the dust before God mourning, because of this. 6. It appears in respect of the exercise of a person's faith: As 'tis an uptaking work and business to honest souls, to get their faith founded rightly in closing the covenant with God, that they be well grounded in believing; so it is no less an uptaking and exercifing work, to be improving their faith on God's promifes, to make them forthcoming according to their engagement and for keeping covenant: Which is the apostle's exercise, Gal. 2. 20. to live by faith on the Son of God; I am (faith he) crucified with Christ, nevertheless I live ; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me; and the life which I now live in the flest, is by faith on the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me. And, try it who will, they shall find it to be an uptaking work, rightly to exercise faith for entertaining of spiritual life, and for preventing a covenantbreach with God. It may be, for as many professed covenanters as are here, that but few of you know much, if any thing ar all, what it is to be taken up with being answerable to the covenant according to your engagements: This, no doubt, makes much unfound work, that we do not fingly and feriously delign this; that we reach not forward, that ye bear not down the body, and bring it

it under subjection, lest ye come short here. If ye were fuirably ferious, these characters and evidences might be as so many directions to you; There would be much watchfulness in doing; ready entertaining of challenges and convictions; much heart-melting under the fense of wrongs done to God; and the very appearances of evil would be scar'd at, and appear terrible. There is an evil readily incident to many professors of religion, that they would fain be at marks of a good spiritual state, and of being in covenant with God, but such as would not disturb their carnal confidence, ease, and laziness, nor put them on to painful diligence; But we have no fuch marks to give; neither dare we, for the fear of God, and because of the hazard of fouls, affign any fuch; there being none fuch given or affigned in the word of God: Nay, let me tell you, that, if there be not painful diligence and faithfulnels in keeping covenant with God, it will darken the light of any other mark that can be given; and, no doubt, tis this negligence and unfaithfulness that makes many good marks, clear in themselves, dark to many Christians, while they give not diligence to make their calling and election fure, and give not all diligence to add one grace to another, and one degree of grace to another: It is also the cause of uncomfortable walking, yea, of uncomfortable communicating. But to be fincere and ferious in owning our covenant-engagements, and faithfully forthcoming in the fruits thereof, and in a correspondent conversation, is a mark that will give comfort, and some quietness at least, till comfort come; the Lord will comfortably confess such as faithfully confess him,

The third Observation is, That it is and will be the great fludy of persons really entred in covenant with Gad, to have it an abiding bargain, a perpetual covenant never to be forgotten: This is their design, as well as their duty, that their practice and walk may be suitable to the covenant. And it being the main thing implied in the words, and that which we intend to insist on, I shall, in the prosecution of it, speak a little to these three. I. To what it is to aim to have God's covenant perpetual, and never to be forgotten. 2. To the reasons and the ground that there is

230 To keep Covenant with God, to press this. And, 3. To some motives and encouragements for exciting to it.

For the first, viz. What it is to study to have God's covenant perpetual, and never to be fergotten. We take it up in these particulars; 1. That those entred in covenant would drive the great design of the covenant; which is summed in these two words, To have God to be ours, and ourselves to be God's: 'Tis even that which we have in answer to the first question of our excellent Catechism, What is man's chief end? To enjoy God, and to glorify him; to enjoy him as our own God, and to glorify him, by acknowledging ourselves to be his, and by devoting ourselves to his service, as being a people formed for himfelf, to sheen forth his praise. This should be vigorously driven, as the great design of the covenanter with God; and it would be a notable help to keep covenant, even to live and walk so as we may have God's company: For what use serves God's covenant unto us, and our entring therein, if we continue as great strangers to him as before? If this be not driven as our delign, we forget wherefore we covenanted. 2. There would be a minding of our own obligation in the covenant, as the condition or mean by which the end, viz. the enjoying of God, is come at; which is, in a word, to be his, to walk before him, as he willeth Abraham to do, Walk before me and be thou perfell: God himself is that which the covenanter should principally aim at; and walking before him is the mean appointed for coming at that end. In short, whatever the covenant faith in reference to our duty, as, to abandon lusts, to be boly in all manner of conversation, to be watch-ful, to glorify God in our bodies and spirits which are bis, &c. is that which we are tyed to in the covenant, and which we would feriously drive at as our great design.

3. There would be a minding and remembring of God's engagement to us in the covenant, which is a part of it, as well as our engagement to him, and never to be forgotten by us: Return (saith the Lord, Fer. 3.) backsliding shildren, and I will beal your backslidings: Return, for I am married to you: I will be your God and guide even unte death: I will never leave thee nor forfake thee, &c. And this minding and remembring of God's part of the covenant

nant, is a crediting of his promite. Many believers mind and remember their own part of the covenant, but forget that God is ryed to them; (which is to remember, not a mutual engagement, fuch as the covenant bears out, but only our own particular engagement) which makes us have so many failings on our side, and doth very much weaken our hands in dury; because we lay not the weight of our performances on God that hath promifed, who is. faithful, and will ulfo do it. We will find it to be frequent and familiar to the faints mentioned in feripture, to mind God's part of the covenant as well as their own, and particularly to David in the book of Pfalm, who faith, Thou hast mude a covenant with thine Andinted ? Thou, hast luid help upon One that is mighty: Are not thou. from everlasting our God? Lord, remember thy coornant, that is, the covenant that God hath make with his people; and often elsewhere. The great weight of a believer's life and confolation lies here: Alas! what would our life or our engagement be, and what would our comfort and hope be, without his engagment to us in the covenant! And, if this be not flurably minded and remembred, it will prove but a very heartless bargain. 4. It implies. this, seriously to endeavour to conform our practice to the many great obligations that we ly under to him, and which God's offer and covenant do on many accounts call us to. This is a short hint of what it is to keep and do the covenant of God, and to perform it alway even unto the end, to have his covenant perpetual, and never to be forgotten.

As far the fecond, to wit, the grounds and reasons of this, and whereby it be may pressed. 1st, We would think of, and believe the reality of God's edvenant, the reality of the promises in it, and of all that is spoken of it; and would put ourselves to it, if indeed we look on it as such. The truth is, it is the language of our unbelief, that we scarcely think God to be in earnest; as if all that is spoken of this covenant were but a cunningly devised fable: If we really believed, that by this bleffed covenant we may be brought to enjoy God, and to be made conform to his image in holiness, to have our vike bodies at last made conform to his glorious body, 800. and, that as certainly we shall be possessed of such great and glorious privileges by keeping this covenant, as we are certain that this world is yet standing; such a faith would prove to us the evidence of things not feen, and the Jubstance of things boped for; and would be a notable incitement and sharp spur to holy activity in, and to quick dispatch of called-for duty. O but it be a good and real bargain, and will have wonderful following, to all that keep it! and, whether this be now believed or not, it will be found a little hence, that this bargain was one of the best that ever was heard tell of in the world. 2dly, We would seriously bethink ourselves, what will come of it, in case there be grosly untaithful dealing and unstedfastness in God's covenant. I shall only name these five things that will follow on it. 1. Much fin, 2. Much shame, 3. Much reflection on God, 4. Much wrath, and, 5. Much want of peace, and much anxiety, in the conscience that is guilty of this fin. (1.) I say, much sin. Better there had never been a covenant in your offer, and that ye had never profest your entring into covenant with God; 'Tis better (faith the wise-man, Eccl. 5 5.) not to wow to God, than to vow and not to perform: It had been better that many of you had been crushed in your mother's belly, or that ye had been born Turks and Pagans, and had lived and died so, than to be found among them that deal falfly in God's covenant; the groffest fins of Pagans are in some respect as no sins in comparison of this, John 15. 22. (2.) There will be much shame before God, even shame and confusion of face, everlasting shame. They shall rife from the dead to shame and everlasting contempt, Dan. 12. Sinners will have much shame, ere all be done, for every fin: But fuch as have wickedly betrayed their trust to God, and, after they had made profession of entring in covenant with him, have dealt per-Adeously and falsly in it, will be in a manner hissed at amongst devils and reprobate Pagans, who never had such offers, neither made such professions; and their condemnation will be acknowledged to carry eminent and conspicuous desert in it; because such had a good bargain, and dealt treacherously with God, and quite marred it to themselves: They have often also much shame amongst ment even here; The man (faith Christ) that bears my sayings, fayings, and does them not, is like unto a foolig builder, that built his kouse upon the sand. And elsewhere he resembles, rath engagers in protest covenanting with him, to men who fit not down to count the cost, that begin to build, and, not being able to finish, expose themselves to the mockage, fcorn and derision of all that pass by: Such and fuch a man (will some be ready to say) was a great professor; but now, behold what is become of him: take him up yonder; he seemed once to have some tenderness. but now he is quite turned aside, and become gross and loofe. Men of any moral honeftly and ingenuity will be ashamed to break their word and to violate their engagements one to another in worldly matters; how much greater shame is it to break to God, and to deal falsly in his covenant? (3.) It hath deep reflections upon God; for the covenant-breaker faith on the matter, that it repents him that ever he made it, for he hath never gotten good of it; and that God hath not been faithful in keeping to him. and that therefore he thought himself loosed from all its obligations. Now, will any of you dare to fay, that the covenant is not a good bargain, or that God is not a good, responsal and faithful Party to deal with? What iniquity have your fathers found in me (faith the Lord to his professing people, Fer. 2.) that they are gone so far from me? Come (faith he, Micab 6.) before the mountains, and let the bills bear my controversy with you; what iniquity have ye found in me? wherein have I wearied you? testify against me, Sure, all that depart from God, rub reproach on God's covenant as a bad bargain, and on God as a bad and unfaithful Party to deal with: O high and horrid practical atheism and blasphemy! Doubtless such will find that they have played the fools egregiously, in committing these two great evils, in forsaking God the Fountain of living waters, and in dig-ging to themselves eisterns, even broken eisterns that could hold no water. O if ye could imagine, what ye will think of it ere long, when ye will not get a drop of water to cool your tongue, because ye said by your practice, that God was not worth the having, and to the Almighty, Depart from us, we will have none of thee, neither will we have, the knowledge of thy ways! (4.) Much want of peace and much anxiety will follow upon it: Even the penitent and conTo keep covenant with God, converting people of God, Jer. 3 20, 21, have much bitaterness on this account of treacherous dealing in God's covenant; A voice of weeping and lumentation is beard on the mountains, the children of Israel saying. We have percerted our way, we have forsaken the Lord our God. How much more bitterness of another nature, how much more smart, vexarion, anguish, agony, and gnawing of conscience shall impenitent finners have, on account of their falfe and perfidious dealing in God's covenant? This will make the hearts of many to quake and tremble for terror. It ye get repentance, it will be a heart-break to you; and, if ye get not repentance, much heartless hear:-break and crushing is as biding you in the end for evermore: And, O what trembling of heart, failing of eyes, and forrow of mind may be between and that! (5.) Much wrath will follow on it in the day of the Lord, if it be continued in: And judge ye within yourselves if there be so many aggravations of, or so many threatnings against any fin, as of and against unfaithful and faile dealing in God's covenant; this fin hath made the Jews to ly, these fixteen hundred years and above, scattered among all nations as a curse: Therefore make it your great delign and hulinels now, to be faithful to God, and to have the covenant with/him a perpatual covenant, never to be forgotten.

As for the third, viz. Some motives and encouragements to excite you to be faithful in God's covenant, and to fludy to have it a perpetual covenant never to be forgotten; Confider, in the ift place, that it is a fingularly good and nonefuch bargain to them that keep covenant, there is no bargain more lovely to them that keep touches with God; It is (faith dying David, 2 Sam. 23.) all my falvation, and all my defire; it hath all things in it that my heart can wish. We make a pitiful and poor life to ourselves, thro' our undervaluing God's covenant; the believer, by improwing of it, might have (as we use to speak) a lord's life, yea, a king's life, yea, a life infinitely preferable to the life of all the great men and monarchs on earth; Having all things, the poffessing nothing, as it is, 2 Cor. 6. 10. And faith the apoffle, Philip. 4. I have all, I abound and have no lack; while, in the mean time, he was living on a little charity from others: We might have a good life here and hereafter. Doth

Doth it not exceedingly commend God's covenant, that nei-ther fickness, poverty, reproach, contempt, persecution, nor death itself, the violent and bloody, can mar this excellent life? When the covenanter comes to judgment, Who can lay any thing to his charge? It is God that justifieth, who pall condemn him? He hath a Friend before him, Tefus the Mediator of the new covenant, and is in good terms with God. The great advantage of it in this life and in that which is to come (for godlinefs is great gain, baving the promise of both) may abundantly commend the covenant, and faithfulness in it. I am perswaded, there is no suiter or wooer to court and put in for the sinner's heart and affection, that can possibly out-bid God's covenant: Can the luft of the eye, the luft of the flesh, or the pride of life; can profit, pleasure or preserment make such profers? Is there such advantage to be had in serving them, as there is to be had in serving God? By the one, ye bring forth fruit unto boliness, and in the end reap eternal life; but, by the other, ye sow to the flesh, and shall of the flesh reap cor-ruption, a poor and hungry harvest. 3dly, The very keeping of covenant with God, is in itself an advantage. It hath a great reward in the bosom of it; for it puts the person to love God, to delight in him, to place its happiness in him, to study holiness and mortification of sin; and is there not great advantage in these? Can ye think or say, that there is any prejudice in these and such things as these, namely, to be blameless in your conversation, to be fincere and not a hypocrite, to be ferious and not lukewarm? I am perswaded, that, if ye will but put it seriously to your own consciences, ye will be forced to say, that fincerity in religion is better than hypocrify; and stedfastness in God's covenant, than treachery: And, what more do we call for? And therefore let me, on this ground, and as ye would not come in tops with your own consciences, befeech you to study faithfulness in the covenant. God's covenant hath a great advantage of the hearers of it, and of protessed engagers in it, even a friend in their bosoms, oiz. Conscience, that will side with it, and say, that it was a good bargain, that the terms were very reasonable, and that no prejudice could come by it, but unspeak-ably much advantage; and will tell the man, that it would have been his honour, and for his profit, to have kept it. and to have been faithful in it; Why then, will the Lord fay, didft thou deal faisly in it, and renounce it? The wretched man's confcience will answer, that there was no shadow of reason for it, it was plainly folly and madness; for to keep and do God's covenant and commandment, is peoples wisdom before all nations, Deut 4. It is a sad matter, that when men may have that which is infinitely preferable to what they are so eager in seeking after, even true riches, pleasure and honour, peace that passeth all natural understanding, joy unspeakable and sull of glory, and every good thing, by covenanting with God, and by faithful dealing therein; that they should not drive this as their great delign, and make it their great work and uptaking bufiness: O that there were such a heart in them (fai h the Lord, Deut. 5.) that they might fear me, and keep my commandments always, that it might be well with them, and with their children for ever! Men are ready to fay, We must provide for our families, and, under that specious pretext, they shift this main work; but, ah, fools that they are! there is no way comparable to this, to provide for families and children, even to have themselves and their children entred into God's covenant, and made to deal faithfully in it! this engageth him to provide for, and become Tutor unto the man's children: And, is there not great encouragement here, to have every good thing beflowed, and all carking care and anxiety concerning ourselves and children removed? 3dly, We would consider, that God is a fingular good Party to deal with, very tender of them that aim to deal honeftly with him: He is indeed severe and terrible, when he becomes the Avenger of a broken covenant; but he is most tender towards honest engagers, who sincerely endeavour to keep touches with him; he is no rigid Interpreter of their actions, but is ready to put the helt fende on them that they are capable of: Like as a father (faith the pfalmift, Pfal. 103.) pitieth bis children, fo doth the Lord pity them that fear him. He is a Father that will take little off the hand of his children, when he knows them to have a will to the work, when he will not deal fo with others; All his ways are mercy and truth to them that keep his covenant and his teffimontes :

monies: It is not meant of such as keep it perfectly, for so they needed not mercy; but of them that honestly defign and endeavour to keep it: And, may not that encourage to be faithful in God's covenant, that he is fo eafy to please? 4thly, Consider, that he hath graciously stuffed his covenant with promises meet for the through-bearing of them that would fain keep covenant. It it be an evil heart that will not love God, which troubles them, the promise is, I will circumcife their beart, and the bearts of their feed, to love the Lord their God; whereas no others, who are without the covenant, or deal unfaithfully in it, can expect the performance of any such promise: If it be a backfliding heart, the promite is, Fer. 3. 22. I will beal your backflidings: If it be the fear of departing from God that troubles them, the promise is, Fer. 32. 40. I will put my fear in their heart, that they fall not depart from me: If it be the dominion of fin that they fear, the promile is, Rom. 6. 14 Sin Ball not baye dominion over you, for ye are not under the law, but under grace, that is, under the covenant of grace: And, if it be fear of the prevailing of Satan's tentations that troubles them, the promise is, The God of peace shall bruise Satan under your feet shortly. May we not then take heart to be faithful in this covenant? Yea, he hath alto condescended to come under this engagement too, even to make us forth coming in the covenant; 1 will call (faith the pfalmist, Pfal. 57.) upon the Lord, who performeth all things for me. It might have been said to David, How wilt thou get all done that thou half undertaken! He answers, I will call upon him who performeth all things for me; and so I will get them all done and performed, so as I may hope to be accepted on the Mediator's account and for his sake. 5thly, Consider the Mediator of the covenant, who is Surety and Cautioner, not only for believers debt, but also for their duty; therefore he is cal-led, Heb. 7. the Surety of this better covenant: And, when Christ and we are engaged in one bond, there is ground for us to expect that something will be got done; tho the principal debtor he not much worth, yet the Cautioner is worthy and infinitely responsible. 6thly, Consider, that there are already many, who have passed thorow the troublesom sea of this world, and have been marvelousl٧

The fourth and last observation is, That the great mean of fecuring a covenanter, and making him fedfaft, is, faith exercifed on God, or adhering to bim by faith, by vertue of this govenant. It is not, to lay weight on, or trust to our own strength; but, seeing God hath made a promise of throughbearing, to undertake the duties that we are called to in his strength, trusting to his faithfulness, and to his furnithing of us, according to the covenant: As, when poor finners are fummoned to appear before God, and they have no righteousness of their own, they are to step forward trufting to Christ's righteousness; so when they are called to duty, and they have no strength of their own to enable them to a fuitable discharge thereof, they are to consider that God is faithful, who hath promised, and who will also do it. And indeed believers have found in their comfortable experience, that, when they have adventured on duty with a believing look to God's covenanted strength, they have found it go sweetly and surprisingly well with them: Thus it is said of those worthies mentioned. Heb. 11. that through faith they wrought righteousness, as well as they did all other things thereby. This also is it, which the Lord inculcateth, John 15. Abide in me (saith he) and ye shall bring forth much fruit: At the branch caunot hear fruit of itself, except it ahide in the vine, no more can ye, except ye abide in me; for without me ye can do nothing: Where it is clear, that it is not enough that we be in Christ, but that we must abide in him, and have continual dependence on him for the influences of life and strength derived from him.

Ye then that would be faithful in God's covenant, and would have it perpetual never to be forgotten, must especially make use of this mean. Make conscience of all other appointed means; Watch and pean, that ye enter not into temptation: But see that ye neglect not this mean; which if ye do, the watchman will watch in vain: And your grip or hold will be unlicker, if ye make not use of him to make it fure, and to keep it fo. And therefore, I. Mind seriously and confantly what ye are, in and of yourselves; even fickle, feckless, weak, feeble and unconstant creatures. not daring to undertake any thing in your own firength. 2. Remember what God is; and that ye have a worthy, able and responsal Cautioner. 3. Remember that ye are engaged in a covenant never to be forgotten: Forgetting is the first rife of unfaithfulness. 4. Remember the promises that God hath made for your through-bearing, and let faith be exercised on them+ Join with diligence and watchfulness a suitable exercise of faith. 5. Take a serious look. every day when ye go to pray, of your refolutions and engagements; renew them frequencly and feriously in his own Arrength, and be cashing the other knot; and put the heart distinctly to say, This was my bargain, and I will through grace abide by it; and then go and pray over it, that we may be made faithful in your thus covenanting with God, that ye may be enabled to pay your vows, and make your honoft refolutions practicable; levelling at this as your scope and design in all duties: I have said such a thing, and have not kept my word; Lord, forgive it for Christ's Through Christ's Blood alone, fake: I am engaged in this, and that, and the other duty; Lord, help me to perform. And, for your furtherance in humiliation and fost walking before God, look on all your fins as aggravated by this unfaithful and treacherous dealing in God's covenant; and on all duties, as those which your covenant with God binds you to depend on him for frength to be communicated to you according to the covenant, for going about them suitably and acceptably: And within'a little while ye shall get a fair pass to be gone, and a sull discharge of all that ye were trusted with, according to the covenant. And the Lord help you to be faithful, so that it may be betwixt God and you in very deed a perpetual covenant that shall not be forgotten.

A SERMON preached immediately before the Communion,

On Matth. 26. ver. 28, 29.

For this is my Blood of the new testament, which is shed for many, for the remission of sins. But I say unto you, I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's Kingdom.

LTHO' we had no more to do at our meeting together in this place to day, but to read and hear these same wonderful words, it our hearts were in a suitable frame, knowing and considering what we are about and doing, we would be in a divine rapture and transport of admiration at his love, and kindled into a slame of holy zeal for his glory, by them. O what sweet and happy words are these from our dying Lord Jesus Christ his mouth! Eye bath not seen, ear hath not beard, neither bath it entred into the heart of man to conceive, what things the Lord bath prepared for them in these words, they being a compend of the testament and legacy which our Lord hath less to his friends: O sinners, be of good cheer, there are good news and glad tidings of great joy here: Here is she new covenant and all that is in it, and remission of sins in particular, as the legacy: Here is Christ, which maketh this covenant favoury; and it is confirmed by his death. who is the Teffator thereof; which makes it fure: Here is heaven and eternal glory; and what would you have more? This is (faith he) my blood of the new testament, which is shed for the remission of the sins of many: Which holds forth the promises, and the convey of them; the legacy. and how it comes to us. I will not (faith he) drink of this fruit of the vine, until I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom: There is beaven, the heartfor upfhot of all. Remission of fins come to sinners covenant-wife, thro Christ's blood; and by closing with Christ, and making application of this blood, finners come to get remission of fins, and all the benefits of the covenant; and are brought at last to drink the new wine of heaven, and to drink it new with Christ, even to share in his glory, to have one feaft and glory with him. And truly, if there were no more to be faid, we may most considently say, that these are wonderful glad tidings, which our blessed Lord Jesus hath left to be the great subject of the doarine of the gospel, and the scope of the sacraments,

We shall, i. Open up the words a little. 2. We shall draw some doctrines from them. And then, 2. Insist in the application.

First then, for explication. From the 26th verse is set down the inftitution of the supper of the Lord; wherein we have, 1. What Christ did. 2. What he commands the disciples, and us in them, to do. 3. He explicates, in these words, what he hath been doing, and commanded to be done; This is my blood (faith he) of the new teffament, &c. as if he had faid, Would you know, what it is that I am doing? There was a covenant made long fince betwixt my Father and me, concerning the elect; wherein I condescended and transacted to take on man's nature, and in that nature to fuffer and fatisfy Divine justice for their fins: And this is the commemoration of my satisfaction, according to that covenant, and the exhibiting and giving to you a confirmation of your interest in all the bleffings of that covenant, whereof remission of fins is one, and a main one. He needed, as would feem, to have faid no more, but that he was going to suffer, and to suffer for this cause, even to purchase redemption to sinners: But he will further shew his disciples, and in them all believers in him, that this came not to pass by guess, but according to an old covenant and eternal transaction that past betwixt Febovab and him; and so adds the facrament to be a commemoration, and a more full confirmation thereof to believers, of all that is purchased by it, and promised in it. In the 29th verse, he hath two words further, one of warning, another of encouragement: 1. One of warning, I Jay unto you, Henceforth I will not drink of the fruit of the vine: As if he had said, Take heed what ye are doing, make this communion very welcome, and let it confirm and strengthen you against the trials that are coming; for I will have no mo communions with you after this manner in this world. 2. A word of encouragement and confolation: Because they might think and fay, Alas! Lord, what will become of us, if we shall have no mo communions with thee? Be not (faith he to them on the matter) discouraged: We shall yet have more and more intimate communion than ever we had here on earth: There is a day coming, when we shall have a sweet communion in the kingdom of heaven rogether, when we shall drink it new, when we shall have the thing fignified, even communion without the intervention of ordinances, in the full harvest of joy in God, in his kingdom. Then, v. 30. as if he were going to a triumph, he and they fing a bymn or pfalm; partly thereby to teach us to be cheerful, and partly to shew that singing of psalms is not unsuitable for this action.

To make the former words, and what we are to fay on them, a little more clear; we would in this facrament. which here the Lord explicates, confider three or four things. Firft, Christ's offer: Wherein there are two things viz. the outward and visible figns, the elements; and the inward invisible thing fignified by them, which is Christ's body and blood. In the offer then, in short, we have not only the element, or sign, but the thing signified and represented by it: Even as in the word of the gospel there are these two, viz. so many words made up of letters and syllables, and the matter contained in them. Secondly, Consider the receiving of Christ's offer, wherein there are two things, 1. The act of receiving the element by the hand; 2. The heart's receiving what is offered in and by the elements: Even as, in hearing the word, there is the giving or lending of the ear to the voice of words. that they may be understandingly heard; and there is the receiving what is spoken, by faith in the heart. As Christ holds forth both in his offer, so the believer would both ways receive; by the hand the element should be received, and by faith the thing fignified should be received. Thirdly, Ye would confider this application of the thing fignified in a twofold respect, 1. As it holds out the entring of us into the covenant in order to the receiving of the pardon of fin, when the sacrament is considered complexly with the word; 2. As it applieth Christ and the benefits that come by him for our consolation. Christ is to be received in the former respect, before he can be received in the latter; we must needs receive Christ in his offer, ere we can receive any benefit that comes by him: Therefore the word goes along with the sacrament, that we may get a grip and catch-hold of Christ by the covenant; for they that are without the covenant are without Christ and all saving benefit by him; but where Christ is received, and faith closeth with him as he is offered, the foul may warrantably make application of him, not only for pardon of fin, the particular benefit here exprelly mentioned, but for all the other benefits of the covenant; whereas they who have not faith, have nothing, and receive nothing; but are deeply guilty thro' their not receiving, but rather rejecting and despising of Christ and Fourthly, Ye would confider this facrament. as it feals directly our warrant to receive Christ and his benefits, or as it seals our application of Christ and his benefits; for it may be useful for both, and is actually so to believers: In the first respect, we offer to you a good fecurity for your falvation, on condition of your receiving Christ; but, in the fecond respect, the security is sealed fimply, as having God's feal appended to it, to all who have received him. Thus the tree of life was a seal of the covenant of life by works to Adam, if he stood; but it was not a confirmation that he should have life by the covenant, except he fulfilled that which was called for in it. Through Christ's Blood alone, cumcifion was a feal of the righteousness of faith to Ishmael and other visible Church-members, as well as to Isaac, in the first sense, that is, that the security was good; but to Isaac, and believers, it was not only a seal or a confirmation that the security was good, and sufficient in itself, but a feal of confirmation that it should be good to them : Therefore, in coming to partake of the facrament, we would premit alway our clofing with Christ; and then we have not only God's word and oath, but also the sacrament for his scal of confirmation of the covenant. In a word, Christ doth offer here to all a pledge that he will make good the covenant; and it is the great guilt of many professors of the gospel, that they close not with him in his offer, so as to make use of it: Which makes them guilty of the body and blood of the Lord; which they neither would nor could be guilty of, if this were not in their offer: But 'tis more to believers, who have by faith closed with Christ; this seal of the covenant, accreweth to their fecurity, who have taken God's word, and rested on it: The believer, then, is not only fure in this respect, that he harh a good warrant to trust and lean to, that is, a sealed covenant; but also, that it will not fall him in particular: So that he may fay, I know in whom I have believed. And we would not divide these things that God hath so wisely and well conjoined, viz. closing with Christ and the covenant in the right way, according to the terms thereof; and taking this feal of confirmation of it.

Now, in the fecond place, I come to give you a little view and short series of the gospel, in several observations from the words; that we may hafte to that which we

more particularly aim at, to wit, the use of all.

First, then, Observe, That all men and women, even the elect not excepted, are finful, and as such considered before God; so it is said, Isa. 53. 6. All we like Seep bave gone aftray: This is the object of the gospel, sinners; the persons for whose behoof Christ hath made his testament, and to whom he hath left his legacies, are finners, even finful men and women; and, the more fin be in them, the more grace shines in God's choosing of such, and in Christ's dying for such, and not choosing nor dying for fallen angels; It is finners (I say) who are the object of Christ's restament.

Secondly, Observe, That there is a grand design laid by God from eternity for the saying of many sinners, and for procuring to them remission of sins, the fruit of the antient counsel of the blessed and glorious Trinity. And this is it, which Christ aims at in all his ordinances, to get sinners pardoned, and freed from the curse due to them for sin, reconciled, justified, sanctified, and brought to drink the new wine of heaven. This is laid down by JEHOVAH, as the basis and soundation, whereon he hath reared up a magnificent and glorious superstructure of the riches of his most sovereignly free grace, for making it to shine forth conspicuously and radiantly throughout all ages.

Thirdly, Observe, That there is a covenant well ordered, suited and fitted to promote this great and glorious end and defign of saving sinners: A covenant so contrived, as it may well suit the saving of sinners, and procure unto them the remission of sins. There is a transaction betwixt God and the Mediator; a Surety and Cautioner is provided to take on the debt of the elect, and to satisfy justice to the full for all their sins: And this is one article of the covenant, that the Mediator should undertake thy debt, O believer, and satisfy for it: He was (saith Isiah, Chap. 53.) wounded for our transgressions, bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was on him, and by his stripes we are healed.

Fourthly, Observe, That, according to this covenant and transaction, our bleffed Lord Jesus hath really, actually and fully satisfied for the sins of believers, according to his undertaking: So that, as in the counsel of God, that great trust was put on him, and he undertook the work of sinners redemption; so, now it is, Father I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do: The covenant is exactly suffilled on my part, not one article of it is unfulfilled; all that was committed to me is now fully performed: Hence it was his last word on the cross, It is sinished.

Fifthly, Observe, That by the application of the blood of Just, thro a sinner's closing with him and interessing himself in him, he may and doth obtain remission of sins, and partake of the benefit of redemption purchased by his blood, even of all

The Christ's Blood alone, the benefits of the covenant. Therefore, when he hath said This is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for the remission of the sins of many; he turns over the words to them, and tells them, that they shall drink the fruit of this vine new with him in his Father's kingdom. As it was made sure, that Adam was to have life, on the condition of persect obedience; so it is as sure to a sinner, taking with his sin, and betaking himself to, and closing with Christ and his satisfaction, that he shall have pardon of sin, and all the benefits of this covenant, even to eternal glory, secured to him.

Sixtbly, Observe, That as our blessed Lord Jesus Christ bath purchased this redemption and remission, so be is most willing, desirous, and pressing, that sinners, to whom the gospel is effered, sould make use of his righteousness, and of the purchase made thereby, for this end, that they may have remission of sins and eternal life. For, not only is the security good, sufficient and sure in itself, the testament being confirmed; but he is (to speak so with reverence) passionated be sure of it in themselves; therefore he kindly puts it in a legacy, makes serious offer of it, and strongly confirms it to all that embrace it.

Seventhly, Observe, That "tis to testify this his willingness that suners should make use of his purchase, and lay hald on his righteousness, on remission of sins and life thro' him, and to promove the acceptation thereof among suners, that he hald instituted this ordinance of the communion. Take ye, eat ye, &c. For this is (as if he had said) the end of the institution of this sacrament, and the reason of it, even to be a sign and seal of consirmation to many, of the remission of sins, thro' my blood: This was my design in laying down my life, to get many sinners pardoned; and this is the end of the institution of this precious ordinance of any supper, to apply it to them, and to consirm them in the saith of it.

Eighthly. Observe, That they who would partake aright of this facrament for their confirmation as to the pardon of their sins, and their sharing in the rest of the henesits of Chriss's purchase, would first close with Christ in the covenant, and make that the way of their making use of this sacrament, to confirm the hazgain: Therefore is it called the cup of the new covenant in his blood. This is the fine quo non, even closing with Christ in a covenant; else the facrament can do no good: It is the great thing that admits sinners to have right and access to Christ's purchase; the writing must first be subscribed, and then sealed; the bargain made, and then confirmed.

Ninthly, Obscrue, That they who have the offer of the gofpel, and are admitted to the sacrament of the Lord's supper, would be so present, serious, and every way in a posture suitable to that action, as if they were never to have the offer er occasion of another communion. As the Lord saith to Elijab the prophet, Arise, eat, for thou hast a long journey to go; so saith the Lord to the disciples, and in them to us, Henceforth I will drink no more of the fruit of the vine, till I drink it new with you in the kingdom of my Father: Ye will get no mo communions with me here, and therefore go rightly about this; improve it well, and let a foundation be laid here of a solid standing interest in me, that ye may be ready to meet with the trials that are coming.

Tenthly, Observe, That sinners, who receive Jesus Christ on the terms he is offered in the gospel, and take the sacrament for a consirmation of their interest in him and in his purchase, the they should never have another communion in this world, may considently expect a joyful one in heaven. I tell you (saith he) for your consolation, Tho' I drink no more of the fruit of the vine with you here, yet the time cometh, when ye and I shall drink it new in the kingdom of my Fa-

Eleventily, Observe, That bonest communicants, sensible of sin, and content to take Christ on his own terms, are called to be cheerful, and to cheer themselves in the lively hope and expessation of beaven: And a believer, tho a sunner, that takes this way, should take his communion as a seal and pledge, consirming him in the saith and hope of his being ere long to have an eternal and uninterrupted communion with Christ in glory.

In these observations we have a short hint of the treafure that believers have in Christ; and from them ye may gather, what a full Christ, a full covenant, and good bargain ye have, who have really closed with him: Ye have Thro' Christ's Blood alone, a most liberal and richly bountiful Mediator, who hash put all these great things and many mo into his testament to sinners, offered to them in the gospel, and sealed in the sacrament of his supper, to all them that take him, and rest satisfied with him; for which satisfaction there is all the reason in the world.

And therefore, to come, in particular application, to the use of all: There is here good and large ground to speak a little to these three. 1. To bring forth to you the good news of salvation thro' Christ. 2. To exhort and press you to embrace and accept of them with gladness of heart, to make welcome this faithful saying, worthy of all acceptation, that Christ came into the world to sade sinners. 3. To comfort and solace sinners, that have betaken themselves to Christ, in the abundant consolation of this covenant, and in the administration of it, and in the Mediator the great Subject and Substance of it. And seeing it may be well said here, Who is sufficient for these things? ye would have an eye to him, who can make this gospel to savour sweetly, and even triumph: The commission to preach it is his; the ordinance and inftitution is his: And if there be any appetite for your food amongst you, any sense of sin, and defire of communion with him in heaven hereafter; Look, O look up to him, and befeech him to breathe on his own ordinance, and to back this word with life and power.

The first whether serves to bring forth to you this day the good news of salvation thro' Jesus Christ. O sinners, by this gospel and testament of Christ, and by the administration of this ordinance, we have good news to tell you; This is the new testament in his blood, which is seed for the remission of the sins of many. I shall endeavour to hold forth to you the goodness and gladness of these news and tidings, in these three: And would to God we had sensible sinners to believe, receive and welcome them! I. That there is a good bargain thro' Christ to be gotten by sinners.

2. That sinners, by accepting of Christ, have sufficient warrant and good security for applying to themselves and making use of this good bargain. 3. That Christ is most willing and desirous that sinners should close with this bargain, and make use of him and of his righteousness for attaining the pardon of fin, and for making themselves

happy everlastingly.

For the First: Sinners, here is a good bargain to you thro' Christ, glad tidings of great happiness: Fear not (saith the angel to the shepherds, Luke 2. 10, 11.) behold, I bring you glad tidings of great joy, which shall be to all peoble : for unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord: Yea, we have these good news to preach to day, Behold, to us hath died a Saviour, and he hath made his testament, and hath left a most ample, rich, comfortable and bleffed legacy; and is not this a good and full bargain? Which will be clear, if ye consider, 1. The real worth of it: Is there any thing a finner can fland in need of, but 'tis here; or any ill that a finner can be under, but there is here a remedy for it? Is it the sense of fin, fear of justice, felt wrath, the apprehension of hell? Here are glad tidings, Remission of sins by the blood of Christ; this is the one express article of the testament here: We tell you, sinners, there is a Saviour whose life hath gone for fin, and there is a free absolution to be had, by vertue of his blood, to all who will lay hold 2. Ye have the covenant to make it fure, and remission of sins is particularly mentioned in it for your satisffaction: Nay, look whatever further is in the covenant, and ye have it also upon your closing with Christ; According to bis divine power be bath (faith the apostle, 2 Pet. 1. 3.) given unto us all things that pertain to life and godlines: And, v. 4. Exceeding great and precious promises are given us, promises of justification and sanctification. What a bundle of promites have we, Ezek. 36. 1 will sprinkle clean water upon you, and wash you from all your uncleanness, and from all your idols will I cleanse you, and will cause you to walk in my flatutes, and do them, &cc. There are pro-mifes of subduing of the body of death, of circumcifing the heart, of causing to love God, of putting his fear in the heart, of healing backflidings. These and many mo are articles of this testament, which, as they are very comforting, so are they very frequent and abundant in the covenant: This word of God is, as it were, the index and catalogue of them; and, in effect, there is not a promile in the word of God, but it is here. 3. There is yet

Through Christ's Blood alone,

yet something more; and that is, the Promiser himself is left in legacy, which no other testator doth: This is my body (faith he) that was broken for you; Open your mouth wide, and I will fill it; I will be thy God: That is the comprehensive article of the covenant, and the great Gift, the Gift of gifts; and we may very fafely fay, that, as be could not swear by a greater than himself, so he could not give a greater gift than himsels. Would God there were fuitable conceptions and apprehensions of this none-such Gift; and that he, in whom the fulness of the Godhead dwells bodily, were looked upon as being thus in our offer, and were cordially closed with by faith! That's a great word, which we have, Rev. 20. 7. He that overcometh fall inbevit all things; And how is it performed and fulfilled? I will be his God; this is all, and without this there is nothing. 4. Having this Gift, is there any thing that can be added? the text says, Heaven: Not that heaven is more than Christ, but this is it, that Christ enjoyed in heaven, is more than Christ enjoyed here on earth; I will daink it new with you (faith he) in my Father's kingdom. The flood-gates are there (as it were) opened; and the heart enlarged and made capacious to let in the fulness of God, to the filling of the glorified believer even to the very brim; therefore is communion with Christ said to be new in heaven. We may have Christ here, and believers have him; but this is an addition, when we have our Husband not only in right, but have access immediately and most intimately to converse with him, and he to converse with us, when the Queen shall be brought unto the King in raiment of needle-work, and taken into the King's palace with gladness and with joy, and the virgins her companions with ber; when there shall be a putting of unbelief to shame and an eternal banishment of it, and a compleating of believers satisfaction: The eye of the most profoundly exercifed and experienced believers never faw, their ear never heard, neither were they ever able to conceive the thou-fandth part of these abundant consolations and heartravishing joys, that shall flow from the presence of the Lamb and of him that fitteth on the throne, when there shall be no interveening ordinances nor temple in that higher house, but the Lamb Shall be the light thereof; and yct yet all this is offered to finners, and put in Christ's testament to them, to the end it may be made fure. And, lastly, As all these other things do concur to make out the excellency of the bargain; so doth this in a special manner, that the price is paid, that they have nothing to lay down, but may come, and take all freely, without money and without price.

Secondly, For furthering and strengthning the consolation, ye would confider, that the believer who receives Christ as he is offered in the gospel, tho' he be a finner. yet he hath a most sufficient, excellent and unquestionable fecurity for, and right unto all these good things that our dying Lord Jesus hath comprehended in his testament. Believing finners, what security would ye have? Ye have Christ's word, Isay unto you, &cc. Ye have Christ's covename and testament, This is the cup of the new testament in my Blood; and now the testament is confirmed and sealed, so that neither man nor angel can anul nor alter it. Our Lord's testament being sealed, it stands legally regiftrated in the court-books of heaven, and it stands legal on these terms, that a sinner who takes with his sin, disclaims his own righteousness, and betakes himself to Christ's righteousness, putting it in the room of his own, for his justification before God, may be sure of Christ's legacy and of heaven: As 'ris fure, that Christ suffered, and instituted this sacrament for his confirmation in the faith of it; the accepting of Christ, the submitting to his righteousness, the yielding to the covenant, and closing with him on his own terms, gives him a right to heaven and all the riches contained in his testament. To make out this, as being the very thing of the comfortable application of all that hath been faid, and of what we are further to fay; I shall offer these four grounds; The first whereof is, some clear scriptures, that hold forth so much, viz. That as really they shall have life who take Christ and his offer, and close with him; as he really suffered and satisfied the justice of God or their fins. The first of these scriptures is, Heb. 7.24. Wherefore be is able to fave them to the attermost that come unto God by bim : He is an able Saviour, able to the uttermost; and there is not a point of latitude, longitude or altitude beyond the attermost ?

Through Chris's Blood alone,

most: He is able to lave them all; and what all? All that will come and make use of him, and give him the credit of his offices; all that will come unto God by him. A second is, Rom. 5. 20. where the apossile out-reasons sin, for holding forth the triumph of free grace; Where sin abounded (faith he) grace did much more abound; that as fin bath reigned unto death, even so (and indeed it is an excellent so) might grace reign through nighteousness unto eternal life by Jesus Christ our Lord. Tho' we would endeavour to our utmost to unfold these words, we would not unfold all that is infolded in them: Did fin make finners liable to death, and triumph over them? So grace hath erected a throne, by Christ's righteousness, not by inherent holiness, and hath triumphed over fin. The way how grace gives out its orders, and obtains its end, is not by our righteousness, but by the righteousness of Christ, thro faith in him: Justice (to speak with reverence) is off the throne, and grace orders and sways all, in making application of Christ's purchased righteousness to believers. The third scripture is, A&s 13.38. Be it known unto you, therefore, men and brethren, that through this Man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins; and v. 26. To you is the word of this salvation sent: O glad tidings to the greatest sinners! Through the Man Christ is preached to you remission of sins, and by bim all that believe are justified from all things from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses. What are ye owing? or, what can the law, ju-Rice or Satan claim? Ye are justified from all these things. And when he speaks thus to despisers with a Be it known unto you, that the offer is made to them, we may on good ground turn it over to you, and say, Be it known unto you, that through Christ Jesus ye may have remission of sins, and be justified from all things from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses, according to the terms of the covenant: Let your libel be as long as it will; grace is on the throne, and will receive you. 2. Confider, that the great defign which the Bord drives in the business of redemption, and publishing of it in the gospel, is, that remission of sius and life may be made sure to lost sinners that come to Christ: Why, I pray, was the covenant made? was it not for this end? as it is, Heb. 8. This is

I trufted to this security, and it failed me: And hereupon

Through Christ's Blood alone. rifeth the sweet song, Worthy is the Lamb to receive power, and viches, and wisdom, and strength, and bonour, and glory, and blessing, Rev. 5. 12. Nay, even those in the pit shall bear witness to this truth; for (saith the apostle, 2 Gor. 2. 15.) We are unto God a sweet savour in them that are saved, and in them that perife; to the one we are the savour of death unto death; and to the other, the savour of life unto life: And in the preceeding words he faith, Thanks be to God. which always causeth us to triumph in Christ. He maketh the triumph of the faithful ministers of the gospel, some way, to be in them that are damned, by his taking vengeance on them, for despising his grace offered; and they are made to fee, that it was a fure bargain to them that thro' grace embraced it. And if this be so good a bar-gain to them that embrace it, and so very sicker and sure, what, I pray, are we seeking, but that this good bargain and the sufficient security thereof may be taken hold on, as it is proposed? Alter not the terms of it; and indeed it would be very unreasonable to presume to do so, or so much as to desire an alteration of them; for, tho we had them at our own contriving, we could never, by very far, contrive them so well: Nay, let me say, if angels were preaching to you, they would think it a privilege to have access to mention his precious name. Now, seeing it is the great design of the gospel to have sinners closing with Christ on his own terms, O do not frustrate the grace of God: And seeing grace makes offer of life and of remission of fins to finners, to fave them freely; let grace get fuch finners to save as 'tis feeking, and it shall be a bargain. Thirdly, To prosecute this yet a little further; Ye would consider, that, as there is a good bargain to be had thro' Christ and by faith in him, and as there is good security for it; so it is our Lord's delight and good pleasure, and he is very desirous that sinners should make application of it by faith, receive and rest on him and his righteousness, for making themselves eternally happy. We are not speaking of such a happiness and security, that the Lord will be angry at you if ye take hold of it; but of a happiness and security, that he is seriously willing ye should receive: And he doth most earnestly beseech you to take hold of this covenant on these sweet and easy terms, that we be heartily content and well pleased with ir. O sensible sinners, do ye indeed believe this, when we preach to you, that our Lord Jesus is as desirous to have you faved, as ye are; and that his righteousness be closed with, as ye are to have it? Nay, more, that there was never a foul more hungry and greedy (when with a heart chock-full of defires after it) to communicate, than he is feriously willing to admit such a soul to communion with him? Then, as ye would do him a pleasure (and 'tis all that ye can do) keep not at distance, but step to, and take what he offers; not only the facrament, but himfelf in it, for your Head, Husband and Lord. And, that ye may not fear, fland, nor halt, to do fo; confider, that there is not only a warrant to come, but that he calleth you so come, and is ready heartily to welcome you: Come on his call, and his call is no less broad than the call of the gospel; there is a warrant given you, on your hearing of the gospel, and quitting of your own righteousnels, to receive Christ and his rightcousnels, and to admit of him to the exercise of his offices about you according to the covenant: And indeed we know not a truth of the gospel that hath mo confirmations than this hath. viz. That Christ the Mediator is very willing and defirous that finners close with him, and get the good of his purchase. For the making out of which, take these following considerations; (1.) What is the great design of the covenant, but this? as we have it, Ifa. 61. 1, 2, 3. The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach good tidings to the meek; He bath fent me to bind up the broken-bearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, to give to them that mourn beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, and the garment of praise for the spirit of beaviness: And this is called the proclaiming of the acceptable year of the Lord; wherein all the three Persons of the bleffed Trinity concur, as is clear, ver. 1. Confider. (2.) All his offices, and ye will find that they preach and proclaim the fame thing: His Name is JESUS, because be faves his people from their fins: He is King, Priest and Prophet, for this end. And what saith his preaching and corrospondent prayer, John 17. Father, I will, that they wbom

256 Through Christ's Blood alone, whom then hast given me, he with me, but that he would fain have them there? And what shall I say? Is there any proof of it that can be given beyond his death? I lay down my life (faith he) for my sheep: The salvation of lost elect sinners went very near his heart; therefore when none in heaven nor on earth can help, then faith he, Lo, I come to do thy will, O my God. (3.) Confider, with what pleasure and delight he went about the work of redemption; as is very clear in that 40th P/alm, where he heartformly faith, Lo, I come, I delight to do thy will; I even haften to undertake it: And, when he is come, he faith, John 4.34. It is my meat, to do the will of him that fent me, and to finish his work: And what work was that? Even to lay down his life; to gether the lost sheep of the house of Israel; to take away the seud that was betwirt God and them, and to reconcile them to him: And, when it cometh to the very push of actual laying down his life, he will not open his mouth to divert it; tho he might have commanded more than twelve legions of angels, yet he would not do it: For this cause (saith he) came I into this world. (4.) Consider the end of all the ordinances: Wherefore are they instituted? What saith the word, but that, Through this Man is preached unto you forgiveness of fins? What say ministers, but that, We are ambassadors in Christ's stead, beseeching you to be reconciled anto God? which evidenceth plainly, that Christ would, fain (to speak so) have peace made betwirt God and sinners, and them saved: And what saith the sacrament, but even the words of the text, This is the new covenant in my blood shed for the remission of the sins of many? And can we think on the end of these ordinances, but we must also think on Christ's willingness that sinners should make application of him and of his purchase? (5.) Consider further, how he esteems a sinner's coming to him; There is (saith he) joy in beaveneat the conversion of a sinner. We may say, that it is the gladness of his heart, when any since cometh home to him; therefore it is said, that the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand, and he shall see of the travail of his soul and he satisfied, Isa. 53 10, 11.

It is satisfaction to him for all the travail of his soul, to fee finners coming in and getting good of him: And, in the Song, He is said to feed in the gardens, and to be gathering lilies; yea, that the day of souls being espoused to him, is the day of the gladness of his heart. (6.) Consider, how weighted (to speak so, with reverence to him) our Lord is, when finners will not make use of him; it accounted by him, as it were, an affronting of him, even a treading of the blood of the covenant under foot, and an accounting of it to be an unboly thing, a fort and degree of doing despite to the Spirit of grace: He who could look some-times on the wrath of God and not shed a tear, yet, when he came to Ferusalem, wept over it. And, upon the other hand, O what complacency hath he in a finner's coming home to him, which makes him fweetly fmile and rejoice! (7.) Consider his exceeding great forbearance toward finners while they are straying, and his exceeding hearty welcoming of them when they return. Let an inquest (to fay so) be led on his procedure with all the hearers of the gospel that are here on earth, and with all that are in heaven and hell, and all of them will be confirained to subscribe to the truth of this, that he is full. of long-suffering: Doth he not spare even the vessels of wrath fitted to destruction? and doth he not only spare his own, but pity them as a father pitieth his children? And that wonderful welcome of the father to his prodigal fon, is nothing to Christ's welcoming of a repenting finner, being but a dark resemblance of it; he casts not up to him his bygone faults, neither fays, What is this you have done, miserable wretch? No such word; but, This is my fon that was dead, and is alive; that was loft, and now is found: Believe it, O believe it, (which is the very scope of the parable) our Lord Jesus is as glad in a holy way at a finner's coming home. (8.) Confider, how early our Lord is to be pleased with any honest mint or essay that is made of returning to him : He is so very willing that a finner make application of his righteousness, that, where there is reality, he will (as it were) take half a faith for faith, were it even but like a fmoking flan, or bruised reed, or a grain of mustard seed: He will take a fincere resolution to confess, for the confession of sin; which is clear, Pfalm 32. I faid (faith David) I will confess my transgreffion, and thou forgavest the iniquity of my sin. If he had proposed posed the offer of life on such terms as would have wearied us all our days, we ought to have judged him willing that we should partake of it, for it cost him very dear: But when it is not Abraham's faith only, but any faith, how weak foever, if found, that he graciously accepts; how doth it let forth his great willingness? Him that cometh to me (faith he) I will in nowife cast out: The word is doubled in the original, I will not, Not; to shew the holy passionateness of our Lord's desire, and his exceeding great willingness to have sinners closing with him. So, Isa. 45. Salvation is promifed even to a look, Look unto me all the ends of the earth, and be faved: And, if finners cannot well look, think but honestly, and let their heart yield, and it shall be a bargain; He that is athirst, let bim come, Rev. 22. And, if there he scarce the pain of hunger or thirst, The Spirit and the Bride fay, Come; and whofoever will, let bim come, and take of the water of life freely: and this willingness is nothing else, but the thought and defire of an heart consenting to accept of his offer. Or, if this be not little enough, there is less yet, Pfal. 37.7. Rest in the Lord; the word (as it is on the margent and Pfal. 62. 1.) is, Be filent to the Lord: If the heart cannot so well and distinctly say Amen to the bargain, let it (as it were) hold its tongue, or hold its peace; let it be silent, say nothing against it, or give a silent quiet answer, or, by way of approbation and acceptation, keep filence; and it shall be accepted: O wonderful stooping! doth not this declare and manifestly preach the exceeding great willingness that our sweet Lord Jesus hath to communicate and apply his purchase to sinners? (9.) Consider the perfons on whom he confers the offer, and the manner how she profecutes it; and it may yet further hold forth, how feriously willing he is that sinners should welcome it, and be made up by it: Who, I pray, are called, Luke 14. 21. Tis the poor, the blind, the maimed, the halt, the lame, &c. And are there any that can fay, they are worse? If thou fay, I can do nothing, I am maimed and cannot come; the gospel bids call the cripple, and provides him a chariot of the wood of Lebanon, paved with love, and having (to speak so) all the seats and cushions of it of love, Cant. 3. 10. and giveth Riles or crutches of grace to under prop

Through Christ's Blood alone,

and eagles wings to carry them. If thou be a confused body, and wor'ft not what to do, it bids call the blind, If thou be poor, blind, miserable, wretched and naked, and yet having conceited and fancied that thou wast rich, thou art not excluded for all that; for, Rev. 3. 18. Laodice & consists of a hypocritical pack, and company of lukewarm professors, who are so lothsom to Christ, that he threatens to spew them out of his nouth; and yet to such, even to fuch he saith, I counsel thee to buy of me, &cc. And, if these be invited, who can exempt or exclude themselves from the offer or bargain? Do not these things most convincingly and irrefragably demonstrate his willingness, when there is not a finner that is either poor, proud, vain, hypocritical, &c. but he is included in the call of the gospel? (10.) Consider his urgency and pressingness in making and bearing home the offer: O how long-fuffering is he! and with what patience doth he wait on! Tis not an ambal. fage that's broken up if it be not presently closed with, as a hasty man doth; but, All the day have I stretched out my bands to a gain-saying people, Isa. 65. Ferusalem, Ferusa-lem, bow often would I bave gathered thee! &c. Matth. 23. How doth wildom fland and press her invitation, Prov. 1. 20. & 8. 1, 2, &c. Ezek. 18 31, 32. Turn you at my vebuke, why will ye die? Luke 14. 23. Go to the bigh-ways, and compel them to come in. 1 John 3.23. This is his com-mandment, that ye believe on the name of the Son of God. *Tis not left as an indifferent thing at finners option, to do or not do; but the same authority, that enjoins keeping the fabbath, and that forbids curling and swearing, doth lay on this command of believing, Come to the wedding, believe, man and woman, and be faved: And what is all this to the bowels of mercy, grace, and love that are in him? His belly is like ivory, overlaid with sapphires? His face is white and ruddy, a part whereof this is; and yet 'tis nothing (to speak so) to the principal copy, which is his heart; that's a great depth, even the very centre and element (as it were) of love. God is love (faith Fobm) as if he were nothing else but love: And what a love must it be, where he is (to speak so) turned into love in the person of Christ? Angels cannot to the full consider of ir, nor conceive it; your hearts cannot reach it. Sure there is Ibrough Christ's Blood alone, is much, wonderfully much ground here to lay it for an undoubted truth, that our Lord Jesus is exceedingly defirous of the salvation of sinners, and of many sinners, and is in a great readiness to make his righteousness forthcoming to them, and heartily to welcome all that come to him.

The second use is of exhortation: And ye may at first blush see whither it runs, even to stir us up to accept of, and embrace these good news with glad hearts. Is there here a good bargain, and a fure way through faith to make use of it? and is Christ so willing to communicate it? What shall I say to you! is it not a pity to miss it? Nay, would ye do Christ a pleasure? then lay weight on his righteousness, and give him finful souls to be saved by him. If we fought great or hard things from you, to please him, would you not judge yourselves obliged to grant them? But when he faith on the marter, Give me your souls to be saved, and I shall account that satisfaction to me for all the travel of my foul; O how unspeakably great is your obligation, readily and cheerfully to grant so loving and reasonable a request? If such a gracious offer had never been made, it would have been, Men and Brethren, what shall we do? and there would have been a mighty great scarring and trembling to draw near: But when it is not to the mount that cannot be touched, not to Moles that we are called to come, but to a Saviour, whom ye cannot please better than (nay not at all, but) by receiving of him, and whom in some respect ye cannot displease at all, if ye receive him; let me beseech and obtest you, as ye would not be found guilty of treading this blood of the covenant under foot, and as ye would not for ever debar yourselves from remission of sins with him, make use, O make use of this propitiation for fin, and for procuring your pardon and peace. Would to God this were the fruit of such a day's work! for indeed 'tis our great work, and the very scope of all our preaching: And, behold, I proclaim to you, that remission of sins is to be had thro his blood, and that there shall not be any upbraiding of you, nor casting up of bygones, if ye will in-deed receive him, and close with him, on his own sweet, easy and very reasonable terms: O then sit not this urgent

call, and the day of your merciful visitation.

And, to press this exhortation a little, Consider, that grace hath a throne and shall triumph in this gospel, either in your gaining, or in being avenged upon you for your despiling of its richest and freest offers. Let us, I pray, reason the matter with you a little? And, I. Are there not finners here? There is not a defign in this gospel to fave any others but finners; and, if so, to you is this falvasion fent, who by nature are finners, enemies, and at feud with God: The doctrine of this gospel carries in its bosom remission of sins. Would to God ye were suitably affected with fin, and judging yourselves, that so ye might be in some capacity to receive it. 2. Tell me, what is it that ye would be at? Is it remission of sins? 'tis here: Would ye have the covenant and promises? here they are: Is it Christ himself that ye would have, because ye dare not trust to a promise without a Cautioner? here he is: Or would ye have heaven, and be eternally happy? 'tis also here. Consider then, I beseech you, what is in your offer: Dare you say, that the security is not valid, good and sufficient? And, if ye should, there are many witnesses in heaven against you, and also the sacrament on earth, which now is offered to confirm you. This bargain, therefore, and its security must be received, or else wo unto you for ever: This word which we now preach, nay, these stones shall bear witness against you, that our Lord Jesus was willing to save you and every one of you, and ve would not; and therefore your blood shall be required at your own hand, and he found without any the least culpable accession to it. 3. Ye are either to communicate to-day, or ye are only to be hearers and spectators; Whether the one or the other, is there not a necessity that ye close this bargain? If ye be to communicate, will ye take the bread and wine, and misken and flight Christ? If so, ye will eat and drink your own damnation. Would you have the character of a right communicant? This is it, that ye renounce your own, and trust to his righteous nels, and take the facrament for a confirmation of your interest in it: If ye come thus, ye shall be welcome; for this ordinance is appointed for this very end. If ye be nor to communicate, this word of the gospel comes to you tho' ye have tecluded yourselves from the sacrament either thro' ignorance or fcandal. It might be a fweet communion to you, if yet Christ get a welcome; and it should, I affure you in his name, make way to a new communion here or in heaven. But, 4. I would a little more particularly befeech you to confider, that ye must either give Christ a welcome or not, a yea or a naylay, a grant or a denial; for there is no mean or middle; This day shall not pass and go by without a hit or a miss (to speak so) Christ will not knock at your door, and nothing follow or be done; It will either be, that Christ was at such a time (ruzed or) commended, and made offer of, and his people would have none of him; or that the heart opened as the heart of Lydia unto the Lord, and that salvarion came to the foul, as it did to Zaccheus his house. Your time is but short and uncertain, ye know not if ye shall come another sabbath to hear; some that now speak to you, and some that hear, are daily removed: And this bids you make hafte to creep in to him quickly without longer delay, while his arms are stretched out to receive and embrace you. There are several forts among you, that keep at a distance from Christ; but I would have all of you soberly to think, whether ye will say Yea, or Nay. There is here what may filence and fatisfy any foul that thwarts with the call of God: Can ye say, that there is any better bargain, any better security, or any heartier call and invitation ? Let us come and reason together, saith the Lord (Isa. 1. 18, 19.) Though your fins be as crimfon, they shall be as white as fow; though they be red as scarlet, they shall be as wool: If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land; but if ye refuse and rebel, ye shall be destroyed. Our Lord's blood is of that efficacy, that it can make crimfon and scarlet-coloured fins, white, white as snow and wool: Why do ye then hinger, slick, stand or halt?

Ye will, it may be, objett and say, First, I would sain come, if I durst. But consider, I pray you, that its Christ and the covenant, and grace on the throne that call you; and this is their voice, Thou hast spoken and done evil as thom coulds, yet return unto me: And therefore fear and tremble tremble, yet come; fear, and bring your fins with you to the fountain to be washen, and to a skirt of his love to he covered thereby; and you shall on your coming be cleanfed and covered. But it may be, ye will, next, objest and fay, I would fain come, but I cannot come. For answer, Let me ask you, Is there a soul in hell this day, that can fay, I would fain have come, and could not come? That which we feek of you is, to make no long, tedious or toilsom voyage, if there be honesty: 'Tis-only, that, when Christ is come to you, ye will be willing to receive him; and, if ye thus come, ye are believers. Do not, I beseech you, mistake, in thinking (and thereby obstructing your own coming) that perfons must first be beliewers, and then come to Christ: No; but first ye must come with the little glimmering that ye have, and lame as ye are, and it will go with you; his chariot is waiting for you; And the very cripplest of you, that cannot come of yourselves to Christ, if ye be willing to close with him on his own terms, he shall come to you. But 'tis like, some will, in the third place, object and say, Alas! I am very indifposed to come. For answer, I shall grant it may indeed be true; but yet consider who are invited, itis the poor, blind, balt, maimed, wretched and miserable : O what unfitness have such! and yet none of them are excepted against. I would have none to be presumptuous and vain; but, if indeed ye would fain come, ye cannot come fo indisposed, as the bargain will on that account be cast: It will not be the want of a disposition that shall cast it, else the cripple and blind, and lukewarm Landiceans had never been invited. Whether is a suitable disposition of your own making, or of Christ's? Sure 'tis of his; and can ye expect ought from him, without coming to him, or believing in him? But, fourtbly, Some will object and fay, Alas! I have often come, and broken away again: how can I then believe that I am invited ? For answer, I would desire you to consider whither that objection tends, even to question the truth of the gospel: Our Lord Jefus faith, He came to fave finners; and ye fay, I would fain know if that be true or not. If ye be poor, blind, miserable, naked, &c. and have need, he commands us to invite and call such; and ris the way of unbelief to make them scar at Christ, and stand furthest aback from him, who have most need to draw near to him: If ye have come and broken afterward, come again; and, where a knot hath not holden, cast a new one. But, alas! there is a fort of careless atheists and secure hypocrites, whom this gospel strikes dead; and carnal worldlings, who have no serious thoughts of what is coming: I would pose such, and ask you, Care ye for your souls? care ye for remission of sins? or care ye for the enjoying of God? If ye do, then sure, it is unspeakably of your concernment to consider and close with the call and offer of this gospel: And if there be any of you, that have loved your idols, and after them will go, I would desire you in soberness to say to it, Will ye prefer any idol to Christ, the creature to the Creator, the temporal finful being of your body to the eternal well-being of both foul and body? If ye will, then be fure, that this conviction, in your judgment and conscience, will go along with such a cursed resolution, that Christ and heaven were the absolutely best bargain. The third Use serves to cheer and solace sinners, that have betaken themselves to Christ. O all ye who are glad to hear tell of fuch a Saviour, and whose heart is even now content to take him, and to renounce all idols for his fake: We have, I. Remission of sins, not only to offer, but even to proclaim freely to you; He that believes is past from death to life, and shall not come into condemna-tion: There is no condemnation to them who are in Christ Josus who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit, as it is, Rom. 8. 1. If ye say, What will become of the sins that we are now under the guilt of? I answer, They shall be freely forgiven: In those days and at that time (saith the Lord by the prophet Feremiah, Chap. 50. 20.) the iniquity of Israel shall be sought for, and there shall be none; and the sins of Judah, and they shall not be found: For I will pardon them whom I reserve. When all the books shall be cast open, there shall be nothing found to charge upon a believing elect; 'Tis God that justificth, who shall condemn'? Sin is pardoned to you, as really as it was to Abraham and to David; and heaven is made as sure to you, as it was to them, who are now in it: Ye have the same Surety, the fame Saviour, the fame Covenant. 2. What promise is the Renission of Sins. would ye have? I know ye need many; but is there any of all the promises that is not in the covenant? Yea, ye have the covenant and Christ both, for be is given for a covenant to you; All things are yours, (as it is, I Cor. 2.) whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life or death, or things prefent or things to come, all are yours, and ye are Christ's; ye have a title and right to all the promises, and may comfort yourselves in the assured hope of the performance of them. O that many were in capacity to receive this consolation! 3. There may be a wearisom time here, and who knows what trials and scatterings may overtake you, what times may go over you, ere ye get another communion? It were best then, that ye who serioully mind to cleave to Christ and his covenant, were making for them: And therefore lay up this confolation, O believers, comfort yourselves in this blessed bargain; ye have Christ and remission of sins, take the sacrament as a seal thereof: There is a day coming, when ye will drink it new in the kingdom of heaven; O cheer yourselves in the hope of it, and for the time in this resemblance of it, when ye fee a poor man personating our Lord Jesus Christ, and by his warrant offering him to you: The day is coming when there shall be no resemblance, no temple, no ministers, no ordinances, no sacrament; but ye shall drink of that new wine, the grapes whereof grow on Christ Je-fus the Tree of Life in the midst of the paradise of God; even the wine of the consolation of glory, that will keep you in a continual holy ravishment, when all tears shall be wiped away, and ye shall have fully satisfying blessedness in the immediate vision and truition of God: And, fince it is so, Let the joy of the Lord be your strength. There shall not a believer come to the Lord's table this day, but there is a day coming when he and she shall drink it new, without interruption eternally, in the kingdom of heaven: Father (faith Chrift, John 17.) I will, that these whom thou haft given me, may be with me where I am, to behold my glory: And again, The glory which thou gavest me, I have given them: And faith he, Rev. 2. 12. I will write upon bim my new name, and the name of the city of my God, &c. that is, the communication and participation of the glory of the Head, as the members are capable. Labour, O labour to have your appetites sharpned, and your longing defires quickned to take of this new wine: It will be fresh, strong and sweet there. And, seeing the Lord allows you such consolation, take it, and take the sacrament as a pledge of it: And think with thyfelf, O believer in Christ, What! shall I, finful and unworthy I, ere long sit with Christ at his table in glory 3 and is this a fign and representation of it under a vail? What manner of person ought I to be in all boly conversation and godliness? Ought I not to love him much, and to continue with him in all his tentations? The kingdom will superabundantly make up all: The very first draught of this new wine will make fighing and forrow for ever to flee away. Let your fouls be comforted in what ye have, and in the expectation of what is coming: There are great things coming; ye have a rich and liberal, a free and frank Bestower, and notably good fecurity. Come therefore all of you to the due use-making of the covenant, and of the sacrament in reference to this end: And the Lord himself, that calls you, enable you to come aright, that it may be a closed, fealed, and confirmed bargain betwixt him and you this day, that ye may have ground to fay, This is the day which the Lord bath made, we will be glad and rejoice in it.

A Thanksgiving Sermon after the Communion, the last that ever the Author preached on such an Occalion, at Glasgow,

On Matth. 26. ver. 29. But I say unto you, I will not drink benceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom.

SERMON II.

UR bl ffed Lord Jesus is now near taking leave of his apostles, and preparing them for the storm they were to meet with: And, for the confolation of them and of all his followers to the end of the world, he instituteth this ordinance of the communion, to be his love-token in his absence; that all his people might be consident of his respect to them, as well as to those then present; and that all of them might thereby be put and kept in the remembrance of him till his coming again.

He hath given them a massy and marrowy sum of the gospel in the words immediately preceeding; This cup (faith he) is my blood of the new testament shed for the remisfrom of the fins of many: To which he subjoins, partly for warning, partly for confolation, these now read, But I fay unto you, I will not drink benceforth of the fruit of the vine, till I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom; as if he had faid, Tho now we be fitting here at the communion-table heartfomly together, I tell you, that I and ye will have no mo communions here on earth: The particle but is to give them a watch-word; and yet, according to his bleffed manner and wont, he hath the best word hindmost, and tells them glad news on the back of it: For they might fay, Wo's us, sweet Master, will we never meet again at a communion? Think not fo, faith he; we shall yet meet again, and have a sweet communion in heaven. This then is a very heartsom dismis: Tho' he sends them away, advertifing them of a fform coming, and the they knew not well what was before them; yet he heartens and encourages them with a promise, that they shall have this wine new, or the thing fignified by it, with a far other relish, in glory; and that then he and they should have good days of it. I shall say no more to the exposition, scope. or division of the words: Take this one dollrine from them, and then a few things on the connexion, for use.

The great dollrine then implied is this, That believers will have a sweet communion in Christ's Father's kingdom in beaven. This is expressly in the text, and confirmed by other scriptures, as namely, Luke 22. 29. Ye are they that have continued with me in my temptations, and I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father bath appointed unto me: That ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom. This is that communion, even a partaking of Christ's glory in his Father's kingdom, and with him in it; and, John 17. 22. The glary which thou gavest me, I have given them: And, v. 24. Father, I will, that they whom thou hast given me may be with me, to behold my glory which thou hast given me: Which words fet forth, not only the certainty of the thing, a glorious place and day, and the excellency of the feaft, but also a sort of peremptorines in reference thereto; Father, I will, saith he. When he prayed that the cup might depart from him, he does it conditionally and with submission; but, when he prays for communion in glory to him and his followers, there is no submission (to speak so) because it was according to the covenant of redemption, and therefore he is absolute and holily peremptory in it; and the Father bears bim always: So in the epiffles written to the seven Churches of Asia, Rev. 2. 3..it is promised by our Lord, to him that overcometh, that he will give bim the bidden manna, the white fione, and new name, to fit with bim on his throne : Let all believers on earth be gathered together, they cannot tell what this is, what a manna, what a communion this will be; it quite transcends all experience, all expression and conception: Only in the text it is called, I. Wine, which is a very cordial thing; it is meat indeed, and drink indeed. 2. It is called new wine; we taste of it here, but it is new and hath another relish there. 3. It is in a sweet place, not in any earthly house or upper-chamber, not in a material temple made with hands, but in Christ's Father's kingdom, that new Jerusalem, that tabernacle of God, where God dwelleth with angels and glorified faints; the city paved with pure gold; the gates whereof are pearl; the foundations of the wall whereof are garnifeed with all manner of precious ftones; which bath no fun, but the glory of God and of the Lamb is the light thereof. O believers, who have some of you but cote-houses, smoky holes here, ye shall have manssons of glory there, admirably good accommodation: It is with excellent and none-such company, even with Christ; for he says, that be will drink this wine new with us in his Father's kingdom. It is a great matter to get leave to fit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, David, and the prophets Elijab, Isaab, Feremiab, Ezekiel, Daniel, and the rest of them, with John the Baptist, with Paul, John, Peter, and the other apostles, and with the whole congregation of the first born; but it is more, to drink the new wine with Christ himself, in heaven, who is (to say so) the very HEART of heaven. This communion hash in in it these five notable qualifications. 1. It is immediate: All our communion here is mediate, ordinances and ministers interveen and come betwixt us and him, and there is need of faith in order to it; but, in that communion above, there is no intermediate mean, there we shall see bis face, as it is said, Rev. 22. 3. there is no temple, no ministers, no preaching, no light of candle or sun there, but the Lamb and the Lord God, who enlightens it; the tabernacle of ordinances will then be taken down, every thing which is in part will be done away, when that which is persett is come; the Lord soall feed, and the Lamb sall lead us by these living waters.

2. There is in it a sharing of the same glory with the Mediator; he and we shall drink of one cup, fit at one table, and fit on one throne, Rev. 3. 21. We shall partake of Christ's glory: I will (faith he, John 17. 24.) that they behold my glory; there we get eminently the new name, and the name of the city of Christ's God, Rev. 3. there his name will be in our forebeads, Rev. 22. 4, and our vile bodies will be made comformable to Christ's glorious body, Philip. 3. 21. Our spirits will be made pure as he is pure; when we shall be raised in incorruption, we shall bear the image of the heavenly Adam, and our bodies shall be made spiritual. It cannot be told what this will be, to be made partakers of Christ's glory, when the fulness of the Godhead shall be communicated to us objectively, and when God shall be All in all. 3. It is a communion satisfying compleatly; if Christ's communion be full, ours shall be full: In this communion none shall complain of detertion, none shall defire more of the Spirit, or more consolation; for it shall be full: Then shall we satisfyingly know the love of Christ that passetb knowledge, and be filled with all the fulness of God. This water of life will fatisfy to the full the greatest thirst of such as long for Christ; there shall not be (to speak so) an empty corner in the most capacious soul. Thou poor hungry and thirsty, empty and indigent believing foul shalt then be full, and kept full (according to creature-capacity) to the very brim; and thy heart, that is now narrow and straitned, shall be widened and enlarged then, to take in this sweet and satisfying wine; there shall not be one vessel in glory, but it shall be filled brimfu with Believers sweetest Communion

2'90 with the new wine of these strong consolations of God, being dilated, capacitated, elevated and enlarged for that very end. 4. This communion is uninterrupted; there shall be nothing to mar it, no cross, no fin, no temptation to fin : For no unclean thing enters within the gates of the new Ferusalem; no curse, no cry in those streets, no weeping, no forrow, no fighing for any thing patt, nor horror nor fear from the apprehension of any evil coming, nor any the least mis-tuning of the Lamb's song of praise; the heart shall (to speak so) be so stringed and bended, as it shall never again slack in its bent, but be still kept at its highest note; our harps shall never hang any more on the willows, but we shall keep them still in our hand, chanting the praises of the Redeemer to that new heavenly tune newer heard on earth, with palms of victory in our hands, and crowns of glory on our heads, following the Lamb whitherfoever he goes. \ 5. It is an eternal communion: We shall drink for ever with him, and be abundantly satisfied with the farness of his house, and made holily drunk with the river of his pleasure, with whom is the fountain of life, and in whose light we shall eternally see light; whose well of life is always running, in whose presence is fulness of joys, and at his right hand pleasures for evermore. Tho through all eternity thousands and millions will be drinking of this new wine, yet it shall never be the less, but is and shall be still fresh and flowing.

Now, for application; Let me ask you, Do ye believe this, that there is such a day coming, and that these are the true and faithful sayings of God? O if ye all that hear me this day did indeed believe it! The belief of it, fure, is very suitable, and would make a very sweet life; ye will never be holy, ye will never aright sear nor love God, ye will never hate fin, nor be heartsom in his service, neither will ye be truly thankful, till ye really believe it. I am afraid, if atheists, earthly wretches, drunkards, tipplers, curfers, swearers, hypocrites, &c. were fingled out and separated from among us, they would be found to be but a small number who believe this: Do ye or can ye believe it, that have your portion in this life, and seek no more? Nay, believers, if ye indeed believe it, why are you so heartless? why envy ye the poor prosperity of the men of the world? why do ye not press after this mark and prize? If ye believed it suitably, your hearts would laugh within you, your spirits would rejoice, your faces would someway shine; and what is spoken of this day, would have a divine splendor and lustre in your eyes: If you believe it, why is it not your work and bufiness to live so, as ye may hope to drink of this cup of this new wine with Christ in heaven? Tho' ye should drink water all your days, this wine will abundantly compense that; the now the bread of some of vou be but brown, this feast of truly royal dainties is before you; our Christian friends, that are gone, are feeding sweetly on it. Long, O believers, to be with them; and take it not ill, tho ye be here somewhat straitned and kept scarce, and have but a little portion, a small pittance and scant measure of the things of this world, when others fare well and sumptuously, live high, are gorgeously apparelled: Your feast and royal robes are before you. The rich and great men of this world, whose portion is in this life, care little for poor bodies that seek God: Care ye as little for their portion as they care for yours; they shall not, a little hence, get a drink, nay, not a drop of cold water, when ye shall drink this new wine, this royal wine in abundance : Chrift's fervants fall eat, when they fall be bungry; his servants soull drink, when they shall be thirfty; they fall fing for joy of beart, when the others fall mourn and bowl for vexation of spirit; as it is, Ifa. 65 13. O feek after clearness of interest in him, that ye may throughly believe, love, and long for this life. This heartforn communion with Christ in heaven is reserved for them that keep communion with him here on earth, and to them it is here promised: I will not say, that none can get heaven, but those who get the sacrament; but this I dare boilly say, that those who have not communion with Christ here, shall never get communion with him hereafter; and whoever communicate honeftly here, shall have communion with Christ in glory. Be ye comforted who believe in Christ. who covenant honeftly with him, and who bope in his mercy; for he and ye together shall have a compleatly full, immediate, uninterrupted and eternal communion in heaven, that shall never end. Need ye to be confirmed in the truth of this? his word may ferve you, and ye have the facrament belide :

Believers sweetest Communion

betide: He hath left his word to hearten poor believers under all their inward and outward troubles, under their foiritual maladies and bodily ficknesses and infirmities, and to affure them for their comfort that there is a good life coming. and he hath given the sacrament as a pledge of it: Will ye then confider feriously, whether this word belong to you, and if ye may with his allowance hearten yourselves from it. that there is a day coming that ye shall get communion with. Christ in heaven. He doth not mean, that all that get the sacrament, get this communion; for Judas, who nor improbably got the sacrament, is excluded. Would ye know then, who have been honest communicants to-day, that may expect this heavenly communion? And methinks, that every one of you, that hath any serious concern for your fouls, will be rouzed here, and greedily longing for marks and evidences of that. But, if any of you would be at evidences to make you secure, I declare I have none such to give you: But I shall hint at two or three, which may be as directions in duty to you who mind honeftly: The first whereof is, Luke 22. 29. Ye are they that have continued with me in my temptation, and I appoint unto you a kingdom. Here it is clear, that these two go together, viz. continuing with Christ in his temptations, and coming to his kingdom. In a word, it is not to be religious for the fashion, but in earnest; it is not to be religious for a day or two, or in some trials only, but to continue in it, and with him in his temptations, whatever they be; not only to be religious when religion is countenanced, but when it is discountenanced, and persecution is met with for its sake, and when there are many snares and temptations to draw you away; 'tis a fledfast abiding with Christ in trying times, summer and winter, so to say: If a blast of trial and temptation come, and ye grow giddy and wavering in the truth, or if a spirit of profanity come (and look for it, and lay your account with it) and ye be ready to laugh and give in your taunt, gybe, and mock with the profane, against the power of godliness and the godly; away with your religion, it is not a continuing with Christ in his temptations. This mark puts you to work (and such marks are safest) To bim that evercometh, is a word often repeated, Rev. 2. 3. and fet always before you the promise of glory and communion with Chrift

Christ in heaven; on fucn, and on fuch only, will Christ write his new name, and fet them on his throne. A fecond mark is, Ye that do indeed keep communion with Christ here, and war against your lusts, without any allowed peace, truce or cessation of arms, till ye get them brought down, routed and ruined by an enrire victory, shall partake of this communion in glory: If ye do not deliberately give up with Christ to keep company with idols, ye may have hope; but the unbelieving and fearful, that cannot endure to look a luft nor a trial for Christ in the face, and who, it may be, are just now wearying of such a day and sermon, and it is even as a prison to them to be restrained to long from worldly business and pleasures, are utterly excluded from all hope, while they remain fuch. Serious fouls will, belike, here fay, 'We are fighting, but we come not speed. I anfwer, Let not that discourage you, if there be no hope to come speed in end; continue in the fight, and you shall come speed: Christ is thy Captain, and a Captain of salvation, at whose back none fell so as not to arise. A third mark is, John 17. 6, 7, 8. where Christ is praying for the disciples, that they may be admitted to this communion; and faith he, I gave them the words which thou gaveft me, and they bave received them. The believer receives Christ's words and keeps them, and makes exception against none of them; when he takes one word, he casts not at another; he takes not one piece of the covenant of grace, and rejects another; but univerfally he approves and accepts of all Christ's words, and more particularly, and in a special manner, of the command of believing. Thus speaks the Pfalmift, Pfal 119. 1'28. I efteem all thy commandments concerning all things to be right : So faith Chrift of the disciples, I bave given them thy words, and they have received them; and particularly (as if he had faid) I proposed a special suit to them, that they would be friends with thee, and be reconciled to thee through faith in me; and they received that word: There-fore glorify them. Ye may possibly think these marks dif-ficult; but, would you have a religion that will put you to no pains? Such marks are high and hard indeed to flesh and blood, and to your lusts; but, what loss is in mortifying these? Is it any prejudice to you to receive Christ's words, and to keep them, and to follow him in his temptations, when an hundred-fold more than ye can lose is to be gotten by so doing? And therefore we declare to you from the word of the Lord, if ye resolve not to live as having on you the wedding garment, we cannot say that ye shall eat and drink with Christ at his table in his kingdom.

In the next place, According to the method proposed, ye would confider the connexion, and how this purpose comes in; even thus, as if the Lord had said, Ye have now an excellent communion-day; but ye and I will have no more together in this world: Whence observe, That the best communion-day that God's people bave bere, bath a BUT in it, or something that makes it appear defective; only in that communion in heaven there is no but, no defect: And it implies, 1. His saying to them, Ye have now been at the communion, but ere long ye shall meet with temptation and trouble; and as he faid, so within a very little it came to pass. So may I say, We are here now, but do we know how foon a temptation may affault and prevail? The tempter is waiting on, and hath, it is like, given in his peti-tion for a permission to essay such and such a person, by some suitable temptation, ere to-morrow; and he offers, itmay be, to make his hypocrify to be discovered: And it will be a sad matter, if any of you stumble and be overtaken with the temptation. 2. It looks to the scattering that was coming: We will not (as if he had faid) be all together at the communion again; for it is written, I will Imite the Shepherd, and the freep shall be scattered. It is more than probable that we shall not all drink and eat at one table again: Are there not some both ministers and people dead and gone fince the last communion? And ye may want some of both, ere ye get another; and may there not some fad division, trouble or confusion arise, to the offending of some, and laying of them aside? Nay, some may be offended at these same ordinances; Satan hath many ways to break in upon us: Nay, let me tell you, that a cloud of persecution may come and cover us, that we shall not dare to come, or may scruple to come to such an ordinance, tho we be now dawted and (as it were) dandled on his knee. 3. It may look to their being deprived of Christ's company and bodily presence. And who knoweth, but there may be a cloud of defertion on ordinances, and a vailing of Christ's presence? I forewarn you, that it is to be feared; which fays, we should keep him well while we have him. and not flir bim up till be please, as the Bride's frequent defire and resolution is in the Song. 4. It may look to death that is coming, and will put an end to all communions here; after which there will be no more communions on earth. And indeed it is tuitable that ye were now bethinking yourselves. What if we never get another? Ought we not then to feed well on this? It any thing have been amiss or wanting, labour to get it made up. O believers in Christ, take home a sealed covenant with you, and read it over and over again: If any defect hath been on your part, write it yet in; for, if any blank be, it is certainly on our fide, and not on Christ's: And indeed, 'cis God's great mercy, that a feal of his covenant may be useful a long time after it is gotten; flighted baptilms and abused communions may be yet useful, if we could make the right use of them: And I do not question but this communion did the disciples more good after Christ was gone from them, than it did now when he was with them at table. 5. It may look to eternity. Now we are living men and women on earth, but within a little we will be gone, and our places will know us no more; very probably, within twenty, thirty, forty or fifty years, we shall be either drinking of this new wine in heaven above, or of that cup of the unmixed wine of the wrath of God, having no rest day nor night. O profane atheist, unbeliever, hollow-hearted hypocrite, and flighter of Christ all thy days, what a bitter draught will that be, when God shall-put into thy hand the cup of his indignation, which shall be for ever poured out unto thee, and shall never como from thy head? O drunkard, tippler, and belly-god, bethink thyself how that draught will go down with thee: The Lord with his one foot on earth and the other on the fea, with an uplifted band to beaven, bath fevorn, that, within a little, sime hall be no more. Ye that are young people may, if ye will, follow the fight of your eyes and the way of your own hearts, and may take your pleasure in the days of your youth; but know and remember that God will bring you to judgment: Your time is wearing away, and ye will wear away; 'tis but a little, and ye will hear no mo preachings, 276 Believers sweetest Communion and get no mo warnings. O take them in time, if ye be wise; and the Lord perswade you to to do.

In the third place, The scope of the advertisement and consolation is observable. When he was giving them the cup, and told them, that 'tis the cup of the new testament in his blood; he subjoins, But I say unto you, I will not drink benceforth, &c. This he doth, First, Because he would send them away advertised and assured; that there is a farther ben (to ipcak so) a more inward room in religion, than the most lively and comfortable ordinance here on earth doth afford; a higher and more intense spiritual practice, than any out-ward part of religion: He would have them to go away thinking with themselves, that all is not done that may be done; that all is not win at, which may be had; that they are not yet holy enough, nor happy enough. O place not, for Christ's sake, place not your religion here, I was at the facrament, or I got my communion: Wo to that empty found, and to them who lean all their weight on it; ye may come and abide here for a time, and go away leaving the marrow of the matter behind you: All is not yet done. A second reason is, Because be would have them parting and going from the communics with some thoughts of death, of their approaching change and possing out of time, and of eter-' mity quickly marching upon them. And indeed it were good going from the communion, and from every other ordinance, with fuch thoughts as these, Death is fast coming on me, and I will be foon gone (faith our Lord on the matter to the disciples) and ye will ere long follow me, and it is not these ordinances that will be your life in eternity. It were good that we came to the Lord's table, to preaching and prayer, and went away as dying men and women a This would lay much of our pride, deaden us to the world, and make us endeavour to hold a loose grip of all things in it, and would keep us under the kindly sense of the changeablenets, uncertainty and short continuance of them all; and might be of more use and worth to us, than twenty thanksgiving-sermons: Labour then to go from every ordinance, as if ye were not to enjoy/another. A third rea-ton may be, That our Lord mould lead in his followers to look after some stamp of beaven, and of the glorious communion that is a coming, on their spirits; and would have them going from

from the ordinances with such thoughts. Alas! we have very few fuch thoughts; our converlation is very little or not at all in heaven. Believers, think, and think often, that these rags will be rent off us, and we shall be set down on the throne with Christ in that raiment of needle-work. It is a good token, when a person goes from a communion, from preaching and prayer, more divine and heavenly, making every ordinance the flep of a flair (as it were) to ascend upward, having a high effeem of heaven, and a heart holily eager and bent on it, content, nay defirous to begone, whenever he shall see it meet; and, till then, putting on and keeping on the whole armour of God, making for one affault of temptation after another; heavenly in his whole walk, in his actions, words and thoughts. As ye would not, O believers, interrupt your communion with God in Christ, study to be heavenly in your conversation; for faith the apostle, Philip. 3. 20. Our conversation is in beaven, from whence we look for the Saviour. Lay afide (as if he had faid) your earthly-mindedness, away with that; and be heavenly in your conversation, for our conversation is such; and believers are described to be such as love Christ's appearing. A fourth reason may be, That our Lord would bearten and comfort bis disciples, and send them away refreshed; yea, it is to root out their unbelief, and to arm them against approaching trials. So then, 1. Our Lord Jesus allows believers to go from the communion, and proportionally from every ordinance rightly come to, cheerful and comforted: And therefore he leaves them with this word, telling them that they will have hard and fad days; but withal bids them cheer themselves in the affured expectation of a day coming, when he and they shall drink the new wine in heaven. Our Lord would have believers humble, thinking on death, and making ready for it daily; yet he would not have them tortured with the thoughts of it, but cheerful, as having his joy for their strength; tho' he would not have their joy carnal, but heavenly: And it is the token of a right communicant, and of a good hearer of the word, when a person goes away from it more spiritually cheered and more heavenly-minded. 2. There is nothing that can be more heartsom, cheering and refreshing to the believer, than the lively hope of communion, and of a seat on the throne, in beaven with Christ; and Believers sweetest Communion and it is the mark and character of a believer, to have no lower design. Alas for the sensless way of hearing the word, and of communicating, customary to many, who have no other nor higher design than to partake of the outward or-dinance! "Tis a heartsom thing to go from the table of the Lord with this sweet and heavenly meditation, Christ and I will meet again ere long at a table in heaven. 3. The thoughts of beaven and the hope thereof may well sustain a believer, were there never so many BUTS and wants in their present condition here. We will not be long together, faith he, there will be a scattering; but this may keep you from weeping and mourning, as those who have no hope, that the day cometh when we shall meet again, and never that the day cometh when we shall meet again, and never part asunder. It is really a wonder, that we have so sew serious and solacing thoughts of coming to heaven; There are none who look for a rich loading coming home by sea, but they will comfort themselves in the expectation of it; why do we not then comfort ourselves in the thoughts of heaven, since we prosess to have a hope of being there? even because we are carnal and earthly: And it says, that we either think heaven little worth, or that it is an insufficient and unpulled right that it to be hed to it on that cient and unvalid right that is to be had to it, or that we do not really believe it. All the filver and gold in the world comforts not a poor body, because he hath no hope to come by it; so there are not a sew hearers of the gospel, who hear much of heaven, and of the hope of it, that ne-wer refresheth them. A ffit reason may be, To waken up longing desires, and to sharpen and put an edge upon an appetite, in his followers, after heaven, and to teach them not to place their happiness on any thing on this side heaven; otherwise he would never have put their satisfaction to a term so far off: But he overleaps (to speak so, with reverence) all the brave days that they had and were to have here, and gives them this for their full satisfaction, that the day is a-coming when he will drink the wine new with them in his Father's kingdom; and would have them, in their flight, never resting nor sitand would have them, in their night, hever tening not me-ting down, till they be there; for he fends them away hungering for that communion-table. And we would yet again exhort and befeech you to fludy to be in case to go from the communion, and from every sermon, having some serious thoughts of heaven, and longings for it; believing that the day, the joyful day is coming, when Christ and ye will meet, and never shed or separate again; when ye fall be with him where he is, and be fet with him at his table, and on his throne, never to rife off it any more again : Bleffed he God, that that defirable day is coming. Believers in Chrift, cheer yourselves in the hope of it. If there be any of you (as, alas! I fear there be very many) that relish not this bleffed change, there is a fad and forrowful change before you. O be bufy, very bufy to have your interest in Christ. and the hope of heaven well secured, by union and communion with him here; that so ye may have the well-grounded hope of heaven, and may frequently draw comfort from it: And, O that we could funder so! The little inch. and moment of time, that we have, will foon and very quickly wear away, and be at an end: Go then, my dear friends, with this well-fixed resolution, that ye must needs, in God's own way, have heaven, and be eternally happy in the foul-fatisfying and ravishing enjoyment of that fulleft and sweetest, never to be interrupted communion, that will be there: And thank God and Christ the Mediator for the least measure of the well-grounded hope of it; and make it your business to have your conversation suited to, and smelling strong of that blessed hope.
