AN EXPOSITION, WITH PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS, OF THE
SECOND EPISTLE GENERAL OF PETER.
Completed by Mr. J. Hill.

THE penman of this epistle appears plainly to be the same who wrote the foregoing; and whatever difference some learned men apprehend they discern in the style of this epistle from that of the former, this cannot be a sufficient argument to assert that it was written by Simon who succeeded the apostle James in the church at Jerusalem, inasmuch as he who wrote this epistle, calls himself Simon Peter, and an apostle, (v. 1.) and says, that he was one of the three apostles that were present at Christ's transfiguration, (v. 18.) and says expressly, that he had written a former epistle to them; (ch. 3. 1.) moreover, the design of this second epistle is the same with that of the former, as is evident from the first verse of the third chapter, whence observe, that, in the things of God, we have need of precept upon precept, and line upon line, and all little enough to keep it in remembrance; and yet these are the things which should be most faithfully recorded, and frequently remembered by us.

II. PETER, I.

CHAP. I.

In this chapter we have, I. An introduction, or preface, making way for, and leading to, what is principally design- ed by the apostle, v. 1. 4. II. An exhortation to advance and improve in all Christian graces, v. 5. 7. To enforce this exhortation, and engage them seriously and heartily to comply with it, he adds, 1. A representation of the very great advantage which will thereby accrue to them, v. 8. 11. 2. A promise of the best assistance the apostle was able to give to facilitate and forward this good work, v. 12. 15. 3. A declaration of the certain truth and divine original of the gospel of Christ, in the grace whereof they were exhorted to increase and persevere.

1. SIMON Peter, a servant and an apostle of Jesus Christ, to them that have obtained like precious faith with us through the righteousness of God, and our Saviour Jesus Christ: 2. Grace, and peace, be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God, and of Jesus our Lord, 3. According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue: 4. Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust.

The apostle Peter, being moved by the Holy Ghost to write once more to those who from among the Jews were turned to faith in Christ, begins this second epistle with an introduction, wherein the same persons are described, and the same blessings are desired, that are in the preface to his former letter; but there are some additions or alterations, which ought to be taken notice of in all the three parts of the introduction.

I. We have here a description of the person who wrote the epistle, by the name Simon, as well as Peter, and by the title of servant, as well as that of apostle; Peter, being in both epistles, seems to be the name most frequently used, and with which he may be thought to be best pleased, being given him by our Lord, upon his confessing Jesus to be Christ the Son of the living God; and the very name signifying and sealing that truth to be the fundamental article, the rock on which all must build; but the name Simon, though omitted in the former epistle, is mentioned in this, lest the total omission of that name, which was given him when he was circumcised, should make the Jewish believers, who were all zealous of the law, to become jealous of the apostle, as if he disclaimed and despised circumcision; he here styles himself a servant (as well as an apostle) of Jesus Christ; in this he may be allowed to glory, as David does, Ps. 116. 16. The service of Christ is the way to the highest honour, John 12. 26. Christ himself is King of kings, and Lord of lords; and he makes all his servants kings and priests unto God, Rev. 1. 6. How great an honour is it to be the servants of this Master? This is what we cannot, without sin, be ashamed of. To triumph in being Christ's servants, is very proper for those who are engaging others to enter into, or abide in, the service of Christ.

II. We have an account of the people to whom the epistle is written; they have been described in the former epistle, as elect according to the fore-knowledge of God the Father; and here, as having obtained precious faith in our Lord Jesus Christ; for the faith here mentioned, is vastly different from the false faith of the heretic, and the feigned faith of the hypocrite, and the fruitless faith of the formal professing Christian. (1.) But true faith is most excellently illustrated; it is the faith of God’s elect, (Tit. 1. 1.) brought without spot to God in effectual calling. Observe, 1. True saving faith is a precious grace, and that not only as it is very uncommon, very scarce, even in the visible church, a very small number of true believers among a great multitude of visible professors, (Matt. 22. 14.) but true faith is very excellent, and of very great advantage to those who have it; the just lives by faith, (Rom. 1. 17.) it is the very life, and procures all the necessary supports and comforts of this excellent life; faith goes to Christ, and buys the wine and milk, (Isa. 55. 1.) that are the proper nourishment of the new creature; faith buys and brings home the tried gold, the heavenly treasure that enriches; faith takes and puts on the white raiment, the royal robes that clothe and adorn, Rev. 3. 18. Observe, 2. Faith is alike precious in the private Christian and in the apostle; it produces the same precious effects in the one as in the other. Faith unites the weak believer to Christ, as really as it does the strong one, and purifies the heart of one as truly as of another; and every sincere believer is by his faith justified in the sight of God, and that from all sins, Acts 13. 39. Faith, in whomsoever it is, takes hold of the same precious Saviour, and applies the same precious promises. 3. This precious faith is obtained of God. Faith is the gift of God, wrought by the Spirit, who raised up Jesus Christ from the dead. 4. The preciousness of faith, as well as our obtaining it, is through the righteousness of Christ. The satisfactory, meritorious righteousness and obedience of Christ gives faith all its value and preciousness: and the righteousness of such a Person cannot but be of infinite value to those who by faith receive it. For, (1.) This Jesus Christ is God, yea our God, as it is in the original. He is truly God, an infinite Being, who has wrought out this righteousness, and therefore it must be of infinite value. (2.) He is the Saviour of them that believe, and as such he yielded this meritorious obedience; and therefore it is of such great benefit and advantage to them, because, as Surety and Saviour, he wrought out this righteousness in their stead.

III. We have the apostle’s edification, wherein he speaks of the multiplication and increase of the divine favour towards them, and the advancement in the growth of the work of grace in them, and that peace with God and in their own consciences, (which cannot be without grace,) may abound in them; this is the very same benediction that is in the former epistle; but here he adds, 1. An account of the way and means whereby grace and peace are multiplied—it is through the knowledge of God and Jesus Christ; true knowledge and believing in the only living and true God, and in the Lord Jesus Christ, who is the express image of God; it is the great improvement of spiritual life, or it could not be the way to life eternal, John 17. 3. We have, 2. The ground of the apostle’s faith in asking, and of the Christian’s hope in expecting, the increase of grace; what we have already received, should encourage us to ask for more; he who has begun the work of grace, will perfect it. Observe, (1.) True faith is the foundation of all spiritual blessings, is, the divine power of Jesus Christ, whereby he procures all the offices of Mediator, unless he was God as well as man. (2. All things that have any relation to, and influence upon, the true spiritual life, the life and power of godliness, are from Jesus Christ; in him all fulness dwells, and it is from him that we receive, and grace for grace, (John 1. 16.) even all that is necessary for the preserving, improving, and perfecting of grace and peace, which, according to some expositors, are called here in this verse godliness and life. (3.) Knowledge of God, and faith in him, are the channel whereby all spiritual supports and comforts are conveyed to us; but then we must own and acknowledge God as the Author of our effectual calling, for he is here described; him that hath called us glory and virtue. Observe here, the design of God in calling or converting men, is to bring them to glory and virtue, that is, peace and grace, as some understand it; but many prefer the marginal rendering, by glory and virtue; and so we have effectual calling set forth as the work of the glory and virtue, or the glorious power, of God, which is described Eph. 1. 19. It is the glory of God’s power to convert sinners; this is the power and glory of God which we see and experience in his sanctuary; (Ps. 63. 2.) this power or virtue is to be extolled by all that are called out of darkness into marvellous light, 1 Pet. 2. 9.

In the fourth verse the apostle goes on to encourage their faith and hope in looking for an increase of grace and peace, because the same glory and virtue are employed and exhibited in giving the promise of the gospel, that has been secured and applied by effectual calling. Observe, [1.] The promises which the promises make over, are exceeding great; pardon of sin is one of the blessings here intended; how great this is, all who know any thing of the power of God’s anger, will readily confess; and this is one of those promised favours, in bestowing whereby the power of the Lord is great, Num. 14. 17. To pardon sins that are numerous and heinous, (every one of which deserves God’s wrath and curse, and that for ever,) is a wonderful thing, and so called, Ps. 119. 18. [2.] The promised blessings of the gospel are very precious; as the great promise of the Old Testament, was, the Seed of the woman, the Messiah, (Heb. 11. 59.) so the great promise of the New Testament, is, the Holy Ghost; (Luke 24. 49.) and how precious must the enlivening, enlightening, sanctifying Spirit be! [3.] They who receive the promises of the gospel, partake of the divine nature; these are renewed in the spirit of their mind, after the image of God, in knowledge, righteousness, and holiness; their hearts are set for God and his service; they have a divine temper and disposition of soul; though the law be the ministration of death, and the letter killeth, yet the gospel is the ministration of life, and the Spirit quickeneth those who are naturally dead in trespasses and sins. [4.] Those in whom the Spirit works the divine nature, are freed from the bondage of corruption. They who were dead in sin, the Spirit of grace, renewed in the spirit of their mind, are translated into the liberty of the children of God: for it is the world in which corruption reigns; they who are not of the Father, but of the world, are under the power of sin; the world lies in wickedness, 1 John 3. 19. And the dominion that sin has in the men of the world, is through lust; their desires are to it, and therefore it rules over them. The dominion that sin has over us, is according to the delight we have in it.

5. And beside this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; 6. And to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; 7. And to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly-kindness charity.

In these words the apostle comes to the chief thing intended in this epistle—to excite and engage them to advance in grace and holiness, they having already obtained precious faith, and been made partakers of the divine nature; this is a very good beginning, but it is not to be rested in, as if we were already perfect; the apostle had prayed that grace and peace might be multiplied to them, and now he exalts them to press forward for the obtaining of more grace; we should, as we have opportunity, exhort those we pray for, and excite them to the use of all proper means to obtain what we desire God to bestow upon them; and they who will make any progress in religion, must be very diligent and industrious in their endeavours; without giving all diligence, there is no gaining any ground in the work of holiness; who are so slothful in the business of religion, and are continually at ease, and not jarring and quaking if we will enter in at the strait gate, Luke 13. 24.

Here we cannot but observe how the believer's way is marked out step by step.
1. He must get virtue, by which some understand justice; and then the knowledge, temperance, and patience that follow, being joined with it, the apostle may be supposed to put them upon pressing after the four cardinal virtues, or the four elements that go to the making up of an immortal soul: or we may observe, but seeing it is a faithful saying, and constantly to be asserted, that they who have faith, be careful to maintain good works, (Tit. 3. 8.) by virtue here we may understand strength and courage, without which the believer cannot stand up for good works, by abounding and excelling in them. The righteous must be bold as a lion; (Prov. 28. 1.) a proper description of an earnest Christian. Who profess the duties or practise the offices of the gospel, must expect that Christ will be ashamed of him another day; "Let not your hearts fail you in the evil day, but shew yourselves valiant in standing against all opposition, and resisting every enemy, world, flesh, Devil, yea and death too." We have need of virtue while we live, and it will be of excellent use when we come to die.
2. We must add knowledge to his virtue, prudence to his courage; there is a knowledge of God's name, which must go before our faith, (Ps. 9. 10.) and we cannot approve of the good and acceptable and perfect will of God, till we know it; but there are proper circumstances for duty, which must be known and observed; we must use the appointed means, and observe the accepted time; Christian prudence regards the persons we have to deal with, and the circumstances in which we are placed, every believer must labour after the knowledge and wisdom that are profitable to direct, both as to the proper method and order wherein all Christian duties are to be performed, and as to the way and manner of performing them.
3. We must add temperance to our knowledge; we must be sober and moderate in our love to, and use of, the good things of this life; and if we have a proper understanding and knowledge of outward comforts, we shall see their worth and usefulness are vastly inferior to those of spiritual mercies. Bodily exercises and bodily privileges profit but little, and therefore are to be esteemed and used accordingly; the gospel teaches sobriety as well as honesty, (Tit. 2. 12.) we must be moderate in desiring and using the good things of natural life, such as meat, drink, sleep, and recreation, and the desire we have after these, is inconsistent with an earnest desire after God and Christ; and they who take more of these than is due, can render to neither God nor man what is due to them.
4. Add to temperance, patience; which must have its perfect work, or we cannot be perfect and entire, wanting nothing, (Jam. 1. 4.) for we are born to trouble; and must through many tribulations enter into the kingdom of heaven; and it is this tribulation, (Rom. 5. 3.) which worketh patience, that is, requires the exercise, and occasions the increase, of this grace; whereby we bear all calamities and crosses with silence and submission, without murmuring against God, or complaining of him; but justifying him who lays all affliction upon us, owning that our sufferings are less than our sins deserve, and believing they are no more than we ourselves need.
5. To patience we must add godliness, and this is the very thing which is produced by patience, for that works experience, Rom. 5. 4. When Christians bear afflictions patiently, they get an experimental knowledge of the loving-kindness of their heavenly Father, which he will not take from his children, even when he visits their iniquity with the rod, and their transgressions with stripes; (Ps. 89. 32, 33.) and hereby they are brought to the childlike fear and reverential love wherein true godliness consists to which,
6. We must add brotherly-kindness, a tender affection to all our fellow Christians, who are children of the same Father, servants of the same Master, members of the same family, travellers to the same country, and heirs of the same inheritance, and therefore are to be loved with a pure heart fervently, with a love of complacency, as those who are peculiarly near and dear to us, in whom we take particular delight, Ps. 16. 3.
7. Charity, or a love of good-will to all mankind, must be added to the love of delight which we have for those who are the children of God. God has made of one blood all nations, and all the children of men are partakers of the same human nature, are all capable of the same mercies, and liable to the same afflictions, and therefore, though upon a spiritual account Christians are distinguished and dignified above those who are without Christ, yet are they to sympathize with others in their calamities, and relieve their necessities, and promote their welfare both in body and soul, as they have opportunity; thus must all believers in Christ evidence that they are the children of God, who is good to all, but is especially good to Israel. All the forementioned graces must be had, or we shall not be thoroughly furnished for all good works —for the duties of the first and second table, for active and passive obedience, and for those services wherein we are to imitate God, as well as for those wherein we only obey him.
8. For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things, is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins. Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure; for if ye do these things, ye shall never fail: 11. For so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

To engage us to an industrious and unwearied pursuit of all the forementioned graces, the apostle sets forth the advantages that redound to all who successfully labour so as to get these things to be and abound in them. This is proposed.

More generally, 8. The having these things make not barren, (or slothful,) or unfruitful; where, according to the style of the Holy Ghost, we must understand a great deal more than is expressed; for when it is said concerning Alhaz, the vilest and most provoking of all the kings of Judah, that he did not right in the sight of the Lord. (2 Kings 16. 2.) we are to understand as much as if it had been said, He did what was most offensive and abominable, as the following account of his life shews; so when it is here said, that the being and abounding of all Christian graces in us will make us neither inactive nor unfruitful, we are thereby to understand, that it will make us very zealous and lively, vigorous and active, in all practical Christianity, and eminently fruitful in the works of righteousness; these will bring much glory to God, by bringing forth much fruit among men, being fruitful in knowledge, or the acknowledgment of our Lord Jesus Christ, owning him to be their Lord, and evidencing themselves to be his servants, by their abounding in the work that he has given them to do; this is the necessary consequence of adding one grace to another; for where all Christian graces are in the heart, they improve and strengthen, encourage and cherish, one another; so that all thrive and grow; (as the apostle makes in the beginning of v. 8.) and wherever grace abounds, there will be an abounding in good works.

How desirable it is to be in such a case, the apostle evidences, v. 9. There he sets forth how miserable it is to be without those quickening, fruitifying graces; for he who has not, or though he pretends or seems to have, the forementioned graces, does not exercise and improve them, is blind, that is, he is not in a condition to perceive and conceive the true excellency of the things they are:  he cannot see far off: this present evil world he can see, and dotes upon, but has no discerning at all of the world to come, so as to be affected with the spiritual privileges and heavenly blessings thereof; he who sees the excellencies of Christianity, must needs be diligent in endeavours after all those graces that are absolutely necessary for obtaining glory, honour, and immortality; but where these graces are not obtained and endeavoured after, men are not able to look forward to the things that are but a very little way off in reality, though, in appearance or in their apprehension, they are at a great distance, because they put them far away from them; and how wretched is their condition, who are thus blind, as to the awfully great things of the other world; who cannot see any thing of the reality and certainty, the greatness and nearness, of the glorious rewards God will bestow on the righteous, and the dreadful punishment he will inflict on the ungodly!

But this is not all the misery of those who do not add to their faith, virtue, knowledge, &c. They are as unable to look backward as forward, their memories are slippery and unable to retain what is past, as their sight is short and unable to discern what is future; they forget that they have been baptized, and all the graces, and have not endeavoured after, men are not able to look forward to the things that are but a very little way off in reality, though, in appearance or in their apprehension, they are at a great distance, because they put them far away from them; and how wretched is their condition, who are thus blind, as to the awfully great things of the other world; who cannot see any thing of the reality and certainty, the greatness and nearness, of the glorious rewards God will bestow on the righteous, and the dreadful punishment he will inflict on the ungodly!

12. Wherefore I will not be negligent to put you always in remembrance of these things, though ye know them, and be established in the present truth. 13. Yea, I think it meet, as long as I am in this tabernacle, to stir you up by putting you in remembrance; 14. Knowing that shortly I must put off this my tabernacle, even as our Lord Jesus Christ hath shewed me. 15. Moreover I will endeavour that ye may be able after my decease to have these things always in remembrance.

The importance and advantage of progress and perseverance in grace and holiness, made the apostle to be very diligent in doing the work of a minister of Christ, that he might thereby excite and assist them to be diligent in the duty of Christians. If ministers be negligent in their work, it can hardly be expected that the people will be diligent in their's; therefore St. Peter will not be negligent, that is, at no time or place, in no part of his work, to no part of his charge, but will be exemplary and universally diligent, and that in the work of a remembrancer; this is the office of the best ministers, even the apostles themselves; they are the Lord's remembrancers: (Isa. 62. 6.) they are exhorters to make mention of the promises, and put God in mind of his engagements to do good to his people; and they are the people's remembrancers, making mention of God's precepts, and putting them in mind of the doctrines and duties of Christianity, that they may remember God's commandments, to do them.

And this the apostle does, though some persons might think it needless, inasmuch as they already knew these things that he writes about, and were established in the very truth that he insists upon. Observe, 1. We need to be in mind of what we do already know, to prevent our forgetting it, and to improve our knowledge, and reduce all to practice. 2. We must be established in the belief of the truth, that we may not be shaken by every wind of doctrine, and especially in that which is the present truth, what is the truth more peculiarly necessary for us to know in our day, what belongs to our peace, and what is more especially opposed in our time.

The great doctrines of the gospel, that Jesus is the Christ, to save sinners; that those who believe in the Lord Jesus Christ shall be saved, and all that believe in God must be careful to maintain good works. These are truths the apostles insisted on in their day; these are faithful sayings, and worthy of all acceptation in every age of the Christian church. And as these must be constantly affirmed by ministers, (Tit. 3. 8.) so the people are to be well instructed and taught exhortation to these; and yet must, after all their attainments in knowledge, be put in mind of such things, as cannot be too clearly known, nor too firmly believed. The most advanced Christians cannot, while in this world, be above ordinances, or beyond the need of those means which God has appointed and does afford. And if the people need teaching and exhortation while they are in the body, it is very likely that ministers shall need the same, as they are in this tabernacle, instruct and exhort them, and bring those truths to their remembrance, that they have formerly heard; this being a proper means to stir them up to be diligent and lively in a course of gospel-obedience.

The apostle, being set upon the work, tells us (v. 14.) what makes him earnest in this matter; even the knowledge he had, not only that he must certainly, but also that he must shortly, put off the tabernacle. Observe, (1.) The body is but the tabernacle of the soul. It is a mean and moveable structure, whose staples can be easily removed, and its cords presently broken. (2.) This tabernacle must be put off. We are not to continue long in this earthly house. As at night we put off our clothes, and lay them by, so at death we must put off our bodies, and they must be laid up in the grave till the morning of the resurrection. (3.) The nearer we approach to death makes the apostle diligent in the business of life. Our Lord Jesus had shewn him, that the time of his departure was at hand, and therefore he bestirs himself with greater zeal and diligence, because the time is short; he must soon be removed from those to whom he wrote; and his ambition being that they should remember the doctrine he had delivered to them, after he himself was taken away from them, he commits to them, as the bestkeepers, the charge of it. And what a great opinion of oral tradition; that was not so proper a means to reach the end he was in pursuit of. He would have them always to remember these things, and not only to keep them in mind, but also to make mention of them, as the original words import. They who fear the Lord, make mention of his name, and talk of his loving-kindness. This is the way to spread the glory of the Lord, and this is the apostle had at heart; and they who have the written word of God, are thereby put into a capacity to do this.

16. For we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eye-witnesses of his majesty. 17. For he received from God the Father honour and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. 18. And this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with him in the holy mount.

Here we have the reason of giving the foregoing exhortation, and that with so much diligence and seriousness. These things are not idle tales, or vain things, but of undoubted truth and vast concern. The gospel is not a cunningly devised fable. These are not the words of one who hath a devil, or the contrivance of any number of men who by cunning contrivance endeavour to deceive. The way of salvation by Jesus Christ is eminently the counsel of God, the most excellent contrivance of the infinitely wise Jehovah; it was he that invented this way of saving sinners by Jesus Christ, whose power and coming are set forth in the gospel, and the apostle's preaching was a making these things known. 1. The preaching of the gospel is a making known the Father of Christ, that he is able to save the uttermost part of the world. He is mighty God, and therefore can save from both the guilt and the filth of sin. 2. The coming of Christ is also made known by the preaching of the gospel. He who was promised immediately after the fall of man, as in the fulness of time to be born of a woman, is now come in the flesh; and whosoever denieth this, is an antichrist; (1 John 4. 3.) he is actuated and influenced by the spirit of antichrist; but those who are the true children of God, and ministers of his gospel, are directed and guided by the Spirit of Christ, they evidence that Christ is come according to the promise, which all the Old-Testament believers died in the faith of, Heb. 11. 39. Christ is come in the flesh; inasmuch as those whom he undertakes to save, are partakers of flesh and blood, he himself also took part of the same, that he might suffer in their nature and stead, and thereby make an atonement. This coming of Christ the gospel is very plain and circumstantial in setting forth; but there is a second coming, which it likewise mentions, which the ministers of the gospel ought also to make known, when he shall come in the glory of his Father with all his holy angels, for he is appointed to be Judge both of quick and dead. He will come to judge the world in righteousness by the everlasting gospel, and call us all to give account of all things done in the body. of a servant, ye, proclaims him to be his beloved Son, when he was in that low condition; yea, so far as humanity is concerned. It is the laying down of the love of the Father to him, that his laying down his life is said to be one special reason of the Father's love, John 10. 17. (3.) The design of this voice was to do our Saviour a singular honour while he was here below; He received honour and glory from God the Father. This is the Person whom God delights to honour. As he requires us to give honour and glory to his Son by confessing him to be the Saviour; so does he give glory and honour to our Saviour by declaring him to be his Son. (4.) This voice is from heaven, called here the excellent glory, which still reflects a greater glory upon our blessed Saviour. This declaration is from God the Fountain of honour, and from heaven the seat of glory, where God is most gloriously present. (5.) This voice was heard, and that so as to be understood by Peter, James and John. They not only heard a sound, as the people did, (John 12. 28, 29.) but they understood the sound. God opens the ears and understandings of his people to receive what they are concerned to know, when others are like Paul's companions, who only heard a sound of words, (Acts 9. 7.) but understood not the meaning thereof, and therefore are said not to hear the voice of him that spake, Acts 22. 9. Blessed are those who not only hear, but understand; who believe the word, and feel the voice from heaven, as he did, who testifieth these things—and we have all the reason in the world to receive his testimony; for who would refuse to give credit to what is so circumstantially laid down as this account of the voice from heaven, of which the apostle tells us? (6.) It was heard by them in the holy mount, when they were with Jesus. The place wherein God affords any peculiarly gracious manifestation of himself, is the holy mountain, and not with an inherent holiness, but as the ground was holy, where God appeared to Moses, (Exod. 3. 5.) and the mountain holy, on which the temple was built, Ps. 87. 1. Such places are relatively holy, and to be regarded as such during the time that men in themselves experience, or may, by warrant from the word, believably expect, the special presence and gracious influence of the holy and glorious God.

19. We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day-star arise in our hearts: 20. Knowing this first, that no prophecy of the scripture is of any private interpretation. 21. For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.

In these words the apostle lays down another argument to prove the truth and reality of the gospel, and intimates that this second proof is more strong and convincing than the former, and more unanswerably makes out, that the doctrine of the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ is not a mere fable or cunning contrivance of men, but the wise and wonderful counsel of the holy and gracious God. For this is foretold by the prophets and men of the Old Testament, who spake and wrote under the influence, and according to the direction, of the Spirit of God. Here note, 1. The description that is given of the scriptures of the Old Testament; they are called a more sure word of prophecy. 1. It is a prophetic declaration of the power and coming of the Godhead and incarnation of our Saviour, which we have in the Old Testament; 2. It is a prophecy of the woman that shall bruise the serpent's head. His power to destroy the Devil and his works, and his being made of a woman, are there foretold; and the great and awful Old-Testament name of God, Jehovah, (as read by some,) signifies only He will be; and that name of God, (Exod. 3. 14,) is rendered by many, I will be that I will be; and thus understood, they point at God's being incarnate in order to the destruction and salvation of his people, and what was to come. But the New Testament is a history of that whereof the Old Testament is a prophecy. All the prophets and the law prophesied until John, Matt. 11. 13. And the evangelists and apostles have written the history of what was before delivered as prophecy. Now the accomplishment of the Old Testament by the New, and the agreeableness of the New Testament to the Old, are a full demonstration of the truth of both. Read the Old Testament as a prophecy of Christ, and with diligence and thankfulness use the New as the best exposition of the Old. 2. The Old Testament is a more sure word of prophecy. It is so to the Jews who received it as the oracles of God. Following prophets confirmed what had been delivered to those who went before, and these prophecies had been written by the express command, and preserved by the wonderful providence, of God, and therefore were more certain to them who had all along received and read the scriptures, than the apostle's account of this voice from heaven. Moses and the prophets more powerfully persuade than even miracles themselves, Luke 16. 31. How firm and sure should our faith be, who have such a firm and sure word to rest upon! All the prophecies of the Old Testament are more sure and certain to us who have the history of the exact and most minute accomplishment of them.

II. The encouragement the apostle gives us to search the scriptures. He tells us, We do well if we take heed to them; that is, apply our minds to understand the sense, and our hearts to believe the truth, of this sure word, yea, to bend ourselves to it, that we may be moulded and fashioned by it. The word is a lamp unto our feet, Rom. 14. 17. It is a lamp to the feet of those who use it aright; this discovers the way wherein men ought to walk; this is a light to guide, and whereby we come to know the way of life. 2. They must acknowledge their own darkness. This world is a place of error and ignorance, and every man in the world is naturally without that knowledge which is necessary in order to attain eternal life. 3. If ever men are made wise to salvation, it is by the shining of the word of God into their hearts. Naturally no one can come to the knowledge of the truth by any other means than by the word and the Holy Ghost. But in order to this giving heed to the word, the apostle suggests some things that are of singular use to those who would attend to the scriptures to any good purpose. 1. They must account and use the scripture as a light which God hath sent into and set up in the world, to dispel that darkness which is upon the face of the whole earth. The word is a lamp to the feet of those who use it aright; this discovers the way wherein men ought to walk; this is a light to guide, and whereby we come to know the way of life. 2. They must acknowledge their own darkness. This world is a place of error and ignorance, and every man in the world is naturally without that knowledge which is necessary in order to attain eternal life. 3. If ever men are made wise to salvation, it is by the shining of the word of God into their hearts. Naturally no one can come to the knowledge of the truth by any other means than by the word and the Holy Ghost. of the scripture is darted into the blind mind and dark understanding by the holy Spirit of God, then the spiritual day dawns, and the day-star arises in that soul. This enlightening of a dark benighted mind is like the day-break that improves and advances, spreads and diffuses itself through the whole soul, till it make perfect day, Prov. 4. 18. It is a growing knowledge; they who are this way enlightened, never think they know enough, till they come to know as they are known. To give heed to this light must needs be the interest and duty of all. This must be done by faith, by truth, light, whilst evildoers keep at a distance from it.

III. The apostle lays down one thing as previously necessary in order to our giving heed to, and getting good by, the scriptures, and that is, the knowing that all prophecy is of divine original. Now this important truth he not only asserts, but proves. 1. Observe, No scripture-prophecy is of private interpretation, (or a man's own proper opinion, an explication of his own mind,) but the revelation of the mind of God. This was the difference between the prophets of the Lord and the false prophets who have been in the world. The prophets of the Lord did not speak or do anything of their own mind, as Moses, the chief of them, says expressly, (Numb. 16. 28.) I have not done any of the works, (nor delivered any of the statutes and ordinances,) of mine own mind, but as the Lord commanded, as a way of their own heart, not out of the mouth of the Lord, Jer. 23. 16. The prophets and penmen of the scripture spake and wrote what was the mind of God; and though, when under the influence and guidance of the Spirit, it may well be supposed, that they were willing to reveal and record such things, yet it is because God would have them spoken and written. But though the scripture be not the exact copy of what was spoken to them, but the revelation of the will and mind of God, yet every private man ought to search it, and come to understand the sense and meaning thereof. 2. This important truth of the divine original of the scriptures, (that what is contained in them is the mind of God and not of man,) is to be known and owned by all who will give heed to the sure word of prophecy. That the scriptures are the word of God, is a doctrine of the very essence of the Christian faith, but also a matter of science or knowledge. As a man not barely believes, but knows assuredly, that that very person is his particular friend, in whom he sees all the proper peculiar distinguishing marks and characters of his friend: so the Christian knows that book to be the word of God, in and upon which he sees all the proper marks and characters of a divinely inspired book. He tastes a sweetness, and feels a power, and sees a glory, in it truly divine. 3. The divinity of the scriptures must be known and acknowledged in the first place, before men can profitably use them, before they can give good heed to them. To call off our minds from all other writings, and apply them in a peculiar manner to these as the only certain and infallible rule, necessarily requires our being fully persuaded that they are not only inspired, but truly the mind and will of God.

Now seeing it is so absolutely necessary that persons be fully persuaded of the scripture's divine original, the apostle, (v. 21.) tells us how the Old Testament came to be compiled, and that, (1.) Negatively; It came not by the will of man. Neither the things themselves that are recorded, and make up the several parts of the Old Testament, are the opinions of men, nor was the will of any of the prophets or penmen of the scriptures the rule or reason why any of those things were written, which make up the canon of the scripture. (2.) Affirmatively; Holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost. Observe, [1.] They were holy men of God who were employed about that book which we receive as the word of God. If Balaam and Zeraiah, and others who were destitute of holiness, had any thing of the spirit of prophecy, upon occasion, yet such sort of persons were not employed to write any part of the scriptures for the use of the church of God. All the penmen of the scriptures were holy men of God. [2.] These holy men were moved by the Holy Ghost, in what they delivered as the mind and will of God. The Holy Ghost inspires and dictates to them what they were to deliver as the mind of God. Secondly, He powerfully excites and effectually engages them to speak (and write) what he had put into their mouths. Thirdly, He so wisely and carefully assists and directs them in the delivery of what they had received from him, that they were effectually secured from any the least mistake in expressing what they revealed. So that the very words of scripture are to be accounted the words of the Holy Ghost, and all the plainness and simplicity, all the power and virtue, and all the elegance and propriety, of the very words and expressions are to be regarded by us as proceeding from God. Mix faith therefore with what you find in the scriptures; esteem and reverence your Bible as a book written by holy men, inspired, influenced and assisted by the Holy Ghost.

CHAP. II.
The apostle having in the foregoing chapter exhorted them to proceed and advance in the Christian race, he now comes to remove, as much as in him lay, what he could not but apprehend would hinder their complying with his exhortation. He therefore gives them fair warning of false teachers, by whom they might be in danger of being seduced. To prevent this, I. He describes these seducers as impious in themselves, and very pernicious to others, v. 1. 2. He assures them of the punishment that shall be inflicted on them, v. 3. 4. He tells us how contrary the method is, which God takes with those who fear him, v. 7. 9. IV. He fills up the rest of the chapter with a further description of those seducers of whom he would have them beware.

1. But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction. 2. And many shall follow their pernicious ways; by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil-spoken of. 3. And through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you:

In the end of the former chapter, there is mention made of holy men of God, who lived in the times of the Old Testament, and were used as the amanuenses of the Holy Ghost, in writing the sacred oracles; but in the beginning of this, he tells us they had, even in that time, false prophets in the church as well as true. In all ages of the church, and under all dispensations, when God sends true prophets, the Devil sends some to seduce and deceive; false prophets in the Old Testament; and false Christs, false prophets, and false teachers, in the New. Concerning these observe, 1. Their business is to bring in destructive errors, even damnable heresies; as the business of teachers sent of God is to shew the way of truth, even the true way to everlasting life. There are damnable heresies as well as damnable practices; and false teachers are industrious to spread pernicious errors. 2. Damnable heresies are commonly brought in privily, under the cloak and colour of truth. 3. They who introduce destructive heresies, deny the Lord that bought them. They reject and refuse to hear and learn of the great Teacher sent from God, though he be the way, the truth, and the life. They have paid a price sufficient to redeem as many worlds of sinners as there are sinners in the world. 4. They who bring in errors destructive to others, bring swift and therefore sure destruction upon themselves. Self-destroyers are soon destroyed; and those who are so hardened as to propagate errors destructive to others, shall surely and suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy.

Here in the second verse, to tell us the consequence with respect to others; and here we may learn, (1.) Corrupt leaders seldom fail of many to follow them: though the way of error is a pernicious way, yet many are ready to walk therein. Men drink in iniquity like water, and are pleased to live in error. The prophets prophesy falsely, and the people love to have it so. (2.) The spreading of error will bring up an evil report on the way of truth. See the way of the Lord, and the Way, the Truth, and the Life. Christian religion is from God of truth as the Author, and leads to true happiness in the enjoyment of the true God as the end, and works truth in the inward part as the means of acceptably serving God. And yet this way of truth is traduced and blasphemed by those who embrace and advance destructive errors. This the apostle has foretold, as what should certainly come to pass. Let us not be offended at anything of this in our day, but take care that we give no occasion to the enemy to blaspheme the holy name whereby we are called, or speak evil of that way whereby we hope to be saved.

Observe, in the next place, the method seducers take to draw disciples after them. They use figured words; they flatter, and by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simple, inducing them to give in entirely into the opinions which these seducers endeavour to propagate, and sell and deliver themselves over to the instruction and government of these false teachers, who make a gain of them whom they make their proslavets: for all this is through covetousness, with a desire and design to get more wealth, or credit or commendation, by increasing the number of their followers. The faithful ministers of Christ, who show men the way of truth, desire the profit and advantage of their followers, that they may be saved; but these seducing teachers desire and design only their own temporal advantage and worldly grandeur.

—3. Whose judgment now of a long time lingereth not, and their damnation slumbereth not. 4. For if God spared not the angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell, and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment; 5. And spared not the old world, but saved Noah the eighth person, a preacher of righteousness, bringing in the flood upon the world of the ungodly; 6. And turning the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah into ashes, condemned them with an overthrow, making them an ensample unto those that after should live ungodly.

Men are apt to think that a reprobate is the fore-runner of a pardon, and that if judgment be not speedily executed, it is, or will be, certainly reverspeople. Sodom and the neighbouring cities were no more scoured by their regular government, than the angels by the dignity of their nature, or the old world by their vast number. 2. God can make use of contrary creatures to punish incorrigible sinners. He destroyed the old world by water, and Sodom by fire. He who keeps fire and water from hurting his people, (Isa. 43. 2.) can make either to destroy his enemies; therefore they are never safe. 3. Most heinous sins bring most grievous judgments. They who are abominable in their vices, are remarkable for their plagues. They who are so may exceedingly before the Lord, must expect the most dreadful vengeance. 4. The punishment of sinners in former ages, is designed for the example of those who come after; "Follow them, not only in the time of living, but in their course and way of living." Men who live ungodly, must see what they are to expect if they go on still in a course of impiety. Let us take warning by all the instances of God's taking vengeance, which are recorded for our admonition, and to prevent our promising ourselves impunity, though we go on in a course of sin.

7. And delivered just Lot, vexed with the filthy conversation of the wicked 8. (For that righteous man dwelling among them, in seeing and hearing, vexed his righteous soul from day to day, with their unlawful deeds:) 9. The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished: When God sends destruction on the ungodly, he commands deliverance for the righteous; and if he rain fire and brimstone on the wicked, he will cover the heads of the righteous, and they shall be hidden in the day of his anger. This we have an instance of in his preserving Lot. Where observe, 1. The character given of Lot; he is called a just man; this he was to the generally prevailing bent of his heart, and through the main of his conversation. God does not account men just or unjust from one single act, but from their general course of life. And here is a just man in the midst of a most corrupt and profligate generation. 2. He is mercifully delivered from his evil. He does not follow the multitude to do evil, but in a city of injustice he walks uprightly. 2. The impression the sins of others have upon this righteous man. Though the sinner takes pleasure in his wickedness, it is a grief and vexation to the soul of the righteous. In bad company we cannot escape either guilt or grief. Let the sins of others be a trouble to us, otherwise it will not be possible for us to keep ourselves in a particular manner from our duration and continuance of this good man's grief and vexation; it was from day to day. Being accustomed to hear and see their wickedness did not reconcile him to it, nor abate of the horror that was occasioned by it. This is the righteous man whom God preserved from the desolating judgment that destroyed all round about him. From this instance we are taught to argue, that God knows how to deliver his people, and punish his enemies. It is here presupposed, that the righteous must have their temptations and trials. The Devil and his instruments will thrust sore at them, that they may fall; and if we will get to heaven, it must be through many tribulations; it is therefore our duty to reckon upon, and prepare for them. Observe, here, (1.) The Lord knows them that are his. If any man, apart him who is godly, for himself; and if there is but one in five cities, he knows him; and where there is a greater number, he cannot be ignorant of or overlook any one of them. (2.) The wisdom of God is never at a loss about ways and means to deliver his people. They are often utterly at a loss and can see no way; he can discover a great many.

10. But chiefly them that walk after the flesh in the lust of uncleanness, and despise government. Presumptuous are they, self-willed, they are not afraid to speak evil of dignities. 11. Whereas angels, who are greater in power and might, bring not railing accusation against them before the Lord. But these, as natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed, speak evil of the things that they understand not; and shall utterly perish in their own corruption; 13. And shall receive the reward of unrighteousness, as they that count it pleasure to riot in the day-time. Spots they are, and blemishes, sporting themselves with their own deceivings while they feast with you; 14. Having eyes full of adultery, and that cannot cease from sin; beguiling unstable souls: a heart they have exercised with covetous practices; cursed children: 15. Who have forsaken the right way, and are gone astray, following the way of Balaam the son of Bosor, who loved the wages of unrighteousness; 16. But was rebuked for his iniquity: the dumb ass, speaking with man's voice, for bade the madness of the prophet. 17. These are wells without water, clouds that are carried with a tempest; to whom the mist of darkness is reserved for ever; 18. For when they speak great swelling words of vanity, they allure through the lusts of the flesh, through much wantonness, those that were clean escaped from them who live in error. 19. While they promise them liberty, they themselves are the servants of corruption: for of whom a man is overcome, of the same is he brought in bondage. 20. For if after they have escaped the pollutions of the world through the knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, they are again entangled therein, and overcome, the latter end is worse with them than the beginning. 21. For it had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than, after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered to them. 22. But it is happened unto them according to the true proverb, The dog is turned to his own vomit again; and the sow that was washed, to her wallowing in the mire.

The apostle's design being to warm us of, and arm us against, seducers, he now returns to discourse more particularly of them, and give us an account of their character; and, that even those who justify the righteous judge of the world in reserving them in an especial manner for the most severe and heavy doom; as Cain is taken under special protection, that he might be kept for uncommon vengeance. But why will God thus deal with these false teachers? This he shews in what follows.

I. These walk after the flesh; they follow the devices and desires of their own hearts, they give up themselves to the conduct of their own fleshly minds, refusing to make their reason stoop to divine revelation, and bring every thought to the obedience of Christ; they, in their lives, act directly contrary to God's righteous precepts, and comply with the demands of corrupt nature. Evil opinions are often accompanied with evil practices; and who are for propagating error, are for improving wickedness; they will not sit down contented in the measure of innocence to which they have attained, nor is it enough for them to stand up, and maintain, and defend, what wickedness they have already committed, but they walk after the flesh, they go on in their sinful course, and increase unto more ungodliness, and greater degrees of impurity and uncleanness too; they also pour contempt on those whom God has set in authority over them, and requires them to honour; these therefore despise the ordinance of God; and we need not wonder at it: For they are bold and daring, obstinate and refractory, and will not only cherish contempt in their hearts, but with their tongues will utter slanderous and reprehensible words of those who are set over them.

II. This he aggravates, by setting forth the very different conduct of more excellent creatures, even the angels; of whom observe, 1. They are greater in power and might, and that even those who are clothed with authority and power among the sons of men, and much more than those false teachers, who are slandering revilers of magistrates and governors; the good angels vastly exceed us in all natural and moral excellencies, in strength, understanding, and holiness too. 2. Good angels are accusers of sinful creatures, either of their own kind, or of those who have not referred to behold the face of God, and stand before his throne, as we have, but have a zeal for his honour, and accuse and blame those who dishonour him. 3. Angels bring their accusations of sinful creatures before the Lord; they do not publish their faults, and tell their crimes to their fellow-creatures, in a way of calumniy and slander; but it is before the Lord, who is the Judge, and who is the Avenger, of all impiety and injustice. 4. Good angels mingle no bitter revilings or base reproaches with any of the accusations or charges they bring against the wickedest and worst of criminals.

Let us, who pray that God's will may be done on earth as it is in heaven, imitate the angels in this particular; if we complain of wicked men, let it be to God, and that not with rage and reviling, but with compassion and composedness of mind, that may evidence that we belong to him who is meek and merciful.

III. The apostle, having shewn (v. 11.) how unlike seducing teachers are to the most excellent creatures, proceeds (v. 12.) to shew how like they are to the most inferior; they are like the horse and mule, which have no understanding; they are as natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed. Men, under the power of sin, are so far from observing the revelation of the Lord, that they partake of their ungodliness, and will not reason, or act according to the direction thereof; they walk by sight, and not by faith, and judge of things according to their senses; as they represent things pleasant and agreeable, so they must be approved and esteemed; brute-creatures follow the instinct of their sensitive appetite, and sinful man follows the inclination of his carnal mind; these return to; for these are not only gross and lascivious, God has given them, and so are ignorant of what they might and ought to know; and therefore observe, 1. Ignorance is the cause of evil-speaking; and, 2. Destruction will be the effect of it; these persons shall be utterly destroyed in their own corruption; their vices not only expose them to the wrath of God in another world, but often bring them to misery and ruin in this life; and surely such sort of impudent contemners of virtue, who rashly uprise, and rise, and fall, and rise again in sin, is an improvement of the pleasure of sinning, most justly deserve all the plagues of this life and the pains of the next in the greatest extremity. Therefore whatever they meet with, is the just reward of their unrighteousness. Such sinners as short themselves in mischief, deceive themselves, and disgrace all they belong to; for by one sort of sins they prepare themselves for another; and their extravagant lustings, their intemperance in eating and drinking, bring them to commit all manner of lewdness, so that their eyes are full of adultery; their wanton looks shew their own impure lusts, and are designed and directed to Kindle the like in others; and this is what they cannot cease from; the heart is insatiate in lusts, and the eye incessant in looking after what may gratify their unclean desires; and they who are themselves impudent and incessant in this, are very diligent and often successful in deceiving others, and drawing others into the same excess of riot. But here observe who they are, who are in the greatest danger of being led away into error and impiety, even the unstable; those whose hearts are not established with grace, are easily turned into the way of sin, or else such sort of sensual wretches would not be able to prevail upon them; and therefore this is the greater, who are cast into the most severe, but covetous also; and these kinds of practices their hearts are exercised with; they pant after riches, and the desire of their souls is to the wealth of this world: it is a considerable part of their work to contrive to get wealth; in this their hearts are exercised, and then they execute their projects; and if men abandon themselves to all sorts of lusts, we cannot wonder at the apostles and faithful children; for they are liable to the curse of God denounced against such ungodly, unrighteous men, and they bring a curse upon all who hearken and adhere to them.

IV. The apostle (v. 15, 16.) proves that they are cursed children, even such covetous persons as the Lord abhors, by shewing, 1. They have forsaken the right way; and are the children of the right way, which is a self-deceiving way. 2. They are gone into a wrong way; they have erred and strayed from the way of life, and gone over into the path which leads to death, and takes hold of hell; and this he makes out by shewing it to be the way of Baalzamon, the son of Boazor. (1.) That is a way of unrighteousness, into which men are led by the wages of unrighteousness.
II. PETER, II.

And it is just with God to deal thus with them, because, (1.) They allure those they deal with, and draw them into a net, or catch them as fishermen do fish; and, (2.) It is with great solemnity and solemn words of vanity; love, and honour, which have a great sound, but little sense. (3.) They work upon the corrupt affections and carnal lusts of men, proposing what is grateful to them. And, (4.) They seduce persons who in reality avoided and kept at a distance from those who spread and those who embraced hurtful and destructive errors. Observe, [1.] By application and industry men attain a skillfulness and facility in promoting error; they are as artful and as successful as the fisher, who makes angling his daily employment; the business of these men is to draw disciples after them, and in their methods and management there are some things worth observing, how they suit their bait to those they desire to catch. [2.] Erroneous teachers have a peculiar advantage to win men over to them, because they have sensual pleasures to take them with; whereas the ministers of Christ put men upon self denial, and the mortality of those lusts that others gratify and please, wonder not therefore that truth prevails no more, or that errors spread so much. [3.] Persons who have for a while adhered to the truth, and kept clear of errors, may by the subtility and industry of seducers be so far deceived, as to fall into errors they had for a while escaped; “Be therefore always upon your guard, maintain a godly jealousy of yourselves, search the scriptures, pray for the Spirit to instruct and establish you in the truth, walk humbly with God, and watch against whatever may provoke him to give you up to a reprobate mind, that you may not be taken with the fair and specious pretences of these false teachers who promise liberty to all who will hearken to them, not true Christian liberty for the service of God, but a licentiousness in sin, to follow the devices and desires of their own hearts.” Zechariah’s prophecy of the sons of lying prophets, he tells us, that in the midst of all their talk of liberty, they themselves are the vilest slaves, for they are the servants of corruption; their own lusts have gotten a complete victory over them, and they are actually in bondage to them, making provision for the flesh, to satisfy its cravings, complying with its directions, and obey its commands; their minds and hearts are so far corrupted and depraved, that they have neither power nor will, to escape from the bondage of corruption to which they are subjected; they are conquered and captivated by their spiritual enemies, and yield their members servants of unrighteousness: and what a shame it is to become over and commanded by those who are themselves the servants of corruption, and slaves to their own lusts! This consideration should prevent our being led away by these seducers; and to this he adds another; (v. 20.) it is not only a shame, but it is a sin, that those are themselves the slaves of sin, and led captive by the Devil at his pleasure, but it is a real detriment to those who have clean escaped from them who live in error, for hereby their latter end is made worse than their beginning. Here we see, First, It is an advantage to escape the pollutions of the world, to be kept from gross and scandalous sins, though men are not thoroughly converted and cleanly disposed of sin, they are well succeeded by those who are truly serious, and emboldening these who are openly profane; whereas, if we run with others to the same excess of riot, and abandon ourselves to the sins of the age, we afflict and dishearten those who endeavour to walk as becomes the gospel, and strengthen the hands of those who are already engaged in open rebellion against the Most High, as well as alienate ourselves more from God, and harden our hearts against him. Secondly, Some men are, for a time, kept from the pollutions of the world, by the knowledge of Christ, who are not savingly renewed in the spirit of their mind. A religious education has restrained many whom the grace of God has not renewed; if we receive the light of the truth, and have a notional knowledge of Christ in our heads, it may be of some present service to us; but we must receive the love of the truth, and hide God's word in our heart, or it will not sanctify and save us. Thirdly, Those who have, for a time, escaped the pollutions of the world, and have been converted from false teachers: they first perplex men with some plausible and specious objections against the truths of the gospel; and the more ignorant and unstable are hereby made to stagger, and brought to question the truth of doctrines they have received, because they cannot solve all the difficulties, nor answer all the objections, that are urged by these seducers. Fourthly, When men are once entangled, they are easily overcome; therefore should Christians keep close to the word of God, and watch against those who seek to perplex and bewilder them; and that because if men who have once escaped, are again entangled, the latter end is worse with them than the beginning.

The apostle, in the two last verses of the chapter, sui sest himself to prove that a state of apostasy is worse than the state of the first conviction; for this is a condemning the way of righteousness, after they have had some knowledge of it, and expressed some liking to it: this carries it in a declaring that they have found some iniquity in the way of righteousness, and some falsehood in the word of truth: now to bring up such an evil report upon the good way of God, and such a false charge against the way of truth, must necessarily expose to the heaviest condemnation; the misery of such deserters of Christ and his gospel, is more unavoidable, and more intolerable, than that of other offenders; for, 1. God is more highly provoked by them who by their conduct despise the gospel, as well as disobey the law, and who reproach and pour contempt upon God and his grace. 2. The Devil more narrowly watches and more closely confines those whom he has recovered, after they had once gone off from him, and professed to be the followers of the Lord Jesus Christ; (Matt. 12. 43.) they are kept under a stronger guard, and no wonder it should be so, when they have licked up their own vomit again, returning to the same errors and impieties that they had once cast off, and seemed to detest and loathe, and swallow in that filthiness from which they appeared once to be really cleansed. Well, if the scripture gives such an account of Christians, as they are in the hand, and of sin on the other, as we have here in these two verses, we certainly ought highly to approve of the former, and preserve it, because it is a way of righteousness, and a holy commandment, and to loathe and keep at the greatest distance from the latter, because it is set forth as most offensive and abominable.

CHAP. III.

The apostle, drawing toward the conclusion of his second epistle, begins this last chapter of it, with repeating the account of his design and scope in writing a second time to them, v. 1, 2. II. He proceeds to mention one thing that induced him to write this second epistle, namely, the coming of the last days, Acts 2. 17. v. 3, 5. III. He instructs and establishes them in the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ to judgment, v. 8, 10. IV. He sets forth the use and improvement which Christians ought to make of Christ's second coming, viz. the growth and renovation of things, which will accompany that solemn coming of our Lord, v. 11, 18.

This second epistle, beloved, I now write unto you; in both which I stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance: 2. That ye may be mindful of the words which were spoken before by the holy prophets, and of the commandment of us the apostles of the Lord and Saviour:

That the apostle might the better reach his end in writing this epistle, which is, to make them steady and constant in a fiducial and practical remembrance of the doctrine of the gospel, he, 1. Expresses his special affection and tenderness of them, by calling them beloved, hereby evidencing that he added to godliness, brotherly-kindness; as he had (ch. 1. 7.) exhorted them to do. Ministers must be examples of this love, affection, as well as life and conversation. 2. He evidences a sincere love to them, and hearty concern for them, by writing the same thing to them, though in other words; it being safe for them, it shall not be grievous to him to write upon the same subject, and pursue the same design, by those methods which are most likely to succeed. The better to recommend the matter, he tells them, that what he would have them to remember, are, (1.) The words spoken by the holy prophets, who were divinely inspired, both enlightened and sanctified by the Holy Ghost; and seeing these persons' minds were purified by the sanctifying operation of the same Spirit, they were the better disposed to receive and retain what came from God by the holy prophets. (2.) The commandments of the apostles of the Lord and Saviour; therefore the disciples and servants of Christ ought to regard what those who are sent by him have declared unto them to be the will of their Lord; what God has spoken by the prophets of the Old Testament, and Christ has commanded by the apostles of the New, cannot but demand and deserve to be frequently remembered; and they who meditate on these things, will feel the quickening virtues thereof; it is by these things the pure minds of Christians are to be stirred up, that they may be active and lively in the work of holiness, and zealous and unwearied in the way to heaven.

3. Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts. 4. And saying, Where is the promise of his coming? For since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation. 5. For this they willingly are ignorant of, that by the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth standing out of the water and in the water: 6. Whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished: 7. But the heavens and the earth, which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment, and perdition of ungodly men.

To quicken and excite us to a serious mind and firm adherence to what God has revealed to us by the prophets and apostles, we are told that there will be scoffers, men who will make a mock of sin, and of salvation from it. God's way of saving sinners by Jesus Christ, is what men will scoff at, and in the last days, under the gospel. This, indeed, may seem very strange, that the New-Testament dispensation of the covenant of grace, which is spiritual, and therefore more agreeable to the nature of God than the Old, should be ridiculed; and that the old dispensation, but the spirituality and simplicity of New-Testament worship are directly contrary to the carnal mind of man; and this accounts for what the apostle seems here to hint at, namely, that scoffers shall be more numerous and more bold in the last days than ever before; though in all ages those who were born and walked after the flesh, persecuted, reviled, and reproached them who were born and did walk after the spirit, yet in the last days there will be a great movement of this kind, without this, all the other articles of serious godliness, and those who firmly adhere to the circumcision and self-denial which the gospel prescribes; this is what is mentioned as a thing well known to all Christians, and therefore they ought to reckon upon it, that they may not be surprised and shaken, as if some strange thing happened unto them.

Now to prevent the true Christian's being overcome, when attacked by these scoffers, we are told,

I. What sort of persons they are; they walk after their own lusts, they follow the devices and desires of their own hearts, and carnal, corrupt affections, not the dictates and directions of right reason, and an enlightened, well-informed judgment; this they do in the course of their conversation, they live as they list, and they speak as they list; it is not only their own times, but even the mind of every unregenerate sinner is, (Rom. 8.7.) alienated from God, ignorant of him, and averse to him; but they are grown to such a height of wickedness, that they proclaim openly what is in the hearts of others who are yet carnal; they say that their tongues are their own, and their strength, and time, and all; and who is lord over us? Who shall contradict or control us, or ever call us to an account? And so they seem to be confined by any laws of God in their conversation, so neither will they bear that the revelations of God should dictate and prescribe to them what they are to believe; as they will walk in their own way, and talk their own language, so will they also think their own thoughts, and form principles which are altogether their own; here also their own lusts alone shall be served by them, as Israel in their unregenerate state, and the enlightened libertines as are here described, can take a seat, at least they cannot sit in the seat of the scornful. "By this ye shall know them, that ye may the better be upon your guard against them."

II. We also are foretold how far they will proceed; they will attempt to shake and unsettle us, even as to our belief of Christ's second coming; they will scoffingly say, Where is the promise of his coming? the signs of the Christian faith will signify very little; this is that which fills up, and gives the finishing stroke to, all the rest; the promised Messiah is come, he was made Flesh, and dwelt among us; he is altogether such a one as is stated before, and has done all that for us which has been before taken notice of; these principles the enemies of Christianity have all along endeavoured to overturn; but, as these all rest upon their own minds that prevail and oppose to God, or to the other apostles have given us the most sure and satisfying evidence, it is probable that they will at last grow weary of their opposition to them; and yet, while one very principal article of our faith refers to what is still behind, and only has a promise to rest upon, here they will still attack us, even to the end of time; till our Lord is come, they will not themselves believe that they prevail and oppose to God, the other and the second coming, and do what in them lies, to put all out of countenance who seriously believe and wait for it. Now therefore let us see how this point stands, both on the believer's part, and on the part of these seducers: the believer not only desires that he may come, but, having a promise that he will come, a promise that he himself has made and often repeated, a promise received and reported by faithful witnesses, and let upon sure record, he is also firmly and fully persuaded that he will come: on the other hand, these seducers, because they wish he never may, therefore do all that in them lies, to cheat themselves and others into a persuasion that he will never come; if they cannot deny that there is a promise, yet they will laugh at that very promise, which argues with higher degrees of infidelity and contempt; Where is the promise, say they, of his coming?

III. We are also forewarned of the method of their reasoning; for while they laugh, they will pretend to argue too; to this purpose they add, that since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation, v. 4. This is a subtle, though not a solid way of reasoning; it is applied as if the fathers were made good and especially upon wicked hearts; because sentence against them is not speedily executed, therefore they flatter themselves that it never will, whereupon their hearts are fully set in them to do evil; (Ecc. 8.11.) thus they act themselves, and thus they would persuade others to act; so here, say they, "The fathers are fallen asleep, they are all dead, to whom the promise was made, and it never was made good in their time; and this is so, that there is no likelihood that it ever will be in any time; why should we trouble ourselves about it? If there had been any truth or certainty in the promise you speak of, we should surely have seen somewhat of it before this time, some signs of his coming, some preparatory steps in order to it, whereas we find this very day, all things continue as they were, without any change, even from the beginning of the creation". This is an argument which was urged no one changes in the course of so many thousand years, why should we affright ourselves as if it were to have an end? Thus do these scoffers argue! Because they see no changes, therefore they fear not God, Ps. 55.19. They neither fear him nor his judgments; what he never has done, they would conclude he never can do, or never will.

IV. Here is the falsehood of their argument detected; when they professedly had said, there had not been any change from the beginning of the creation, the apostle puts us in remembrance of a change already past, which, in a manner, equals that which we are called to expect and look for, which was the drowning of the world in the days of Noah: this these scoffers had overlooked, they took no notice of it; though they might have known it, and ought to have known it, yet this they willingly are ignorant of. It is a most important argument, which has urged no one changes in the course of so many thousand years, why should we affright ourselves as if it were to have an end? Thus do these scoffers argue! Because they see no changes, therefore they fear not God, Ps. 55.19. They neither fear him nor his judgments; what he never has done, they would conclude he never can do, or never will.
one as what God had done, to convince and persuade us the rather to believe that the other both must and will be. First, we begin with the apostle's account of the destruction which has once already come upon the world; (v. 5, 6.) By the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth standing out of the water and in the water; whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished. Originally, the world was otherwise situated; the waters were most wisely divided at the creation, and most beneficially for us; some of the waters had proper possesions besides the firmament, here called the heavens, (as it is also, Gen. 1. 8.) and others under the firmament, gathered together unto one place; there were then both sea and dry land, a commodious habitation for the children of men; but now, at the time of the universal deluge, the case is strangely altered; the waters which God had divided before, and assigned to being a part convenient receptacle, now does he, in anger, throw together again in a heap; he breaks up the fountain of the great deep, and throws open the windows, the clouds of heaven, (Gen. 7. 11.) till the whole earth was overflowed with water, and not a spot can be found upon the highest mountains but what was fifteen cubits under water, Gen. 7. 20. Thus he made known at once his terrible power and his fierce anger, and made an end of a whole world. This was the great deluge of the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished, v. 5. God is not here a change, and a most awful change: And then it is to be observed, that all this was done by the word of God; it was by his powerful word that the world was made at first, and made in so commodious and beautiful a frame and order, Heb. 11. 3.

He said, Let there be a firmament, &c. Gen. 1. 6, 7. And let the waters under the heaven be gathered unto one place, and let the dry land appear. Thus he shake, and it was done, Ps. 33. 9. Thus, says our apostle, by the word of the Lord the heavens were, as they were of old, that is, at the first creation, and the earth (as it was at first a terrestial globe) standing out of the water and in the water. Nor was it only the first frame and order of the world that is here said to be by the word of God, but the after confusion and ruin of the world, as well as the destruction thereof, was also by the same word; none but that God who stretched out the heavens and laid the foundation of the earth, could destroy and overthrow such a vast fabric at once. This was done by the word of his power, and it was also done according to the word of his promise; God had said that he would destroy man, even all flesh, and that he would do it by bringing a flood of waters upon the earth, Gen. 6. 17. This was the change which God had before brought upon the world, and which these seers had overlooked; and now we are to consider, in the second place, what the apostle says of the destructive change which is yet to come upon it; The heavens and the earth which now are, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire and judgment of ungodly men, v. 7. Here, we see that the final dissolution of the world, and which we are yet more nearly concerned in; the ruin that came upon the world and its inhabitants by the flood, we read, and hear, and think of, with concern, though those who were swept away by it were such as we never knew; but the judgment here spoken of is yet to come; and will surely come, though we know not when, nor upon what particular age or generation of men; and therefore we are not, we cannot be, sure that it may not happen in our own times: and this makes a very great difference, though it should be admitted that they were equal in every other respect; which yet must not be allowed, for there were some, though very few, who escaped that deluge. but not one can escape in this condemnation; besides, they were not in reach of the one, but are not sure that we are not in reach of the other. Now therefore to see the world to which we belong, destroyed at once: not a single person only, a particular family only, nor yet a nation, (even that which we are most nearly interested in and concerned for,) but the whole world, I say, sinking at once, and no ark provided, no possible way left of escaping for any one from the common ruin; this makes the difference between the one and the other, and what we yet are to expect. The one is already past, and never to return upon us any more; (for God has said expressly, that there shall never any more be a flood to destroy the earth, Gen. 9. 11-15.) the other is still behind, and as certain to come as the truth and the power of God can make it: the one came gradually upon the world, and was growing upon its inhabitants forty days, before it made an utter end of them; (Gen. 7. 12, 17.) this other will come upon them swiftly and all at once; (2 Pet. 2. 1.) besides, there were in that overthrow (as we have said) a few who escaped, but the ruin which yet awaits this world, whenever it comes, will be absolutely a universal one; there will not be any part but what the devouring flames will seize upon, not a sanctuary left any where for the inhabitants to flee to, not a single spot in which they may escape the day of the Lord. Though, whatever differences may be assigned between that destruction of the world and this here spoken of, do indeed represent the approaching as the most terrible judgment; yet that the world has once been destroyed by a universal deluge, renders it the more credible that it may be ruined by a universal conflagration; let therefore the seers, who laugh at the coming of our Lord, to judgment, at least consider, that there is nothing said of it in the word of God, but what is within reach of the power of God; and though they still should laugh, they shall not put us out of countenance; we are well assured that it will be, because he has said it, and we can depend upon his promise; they err, not knowing (at least not believing) the scriptures, nor the power of God; but we know, and we do or ought to depend upon, what the scripture says. What, then? Does not this contemplation of the power of God, which certainly make good, is, that the heavens and the earth which now are, which we are now related to, and which still subsist in all the beauty and order in which we see them, and which are so agreeable and useful to us, as we find they are, they are kept in store, not to be what earthly minds would wish to have them, treasures for us, but to be what God will have them, in his treasury, securely lodged and kept safe for his purposes; if it follows, they are reserved unto fire. Observe, God's following judgments are more terrible than those which went before; the old world was destroyed by water, but this is reserved unto fire, which shall burn up the wicked at the last day; and though this seems to be delayed, yet as this wicked world is upheld by the word of God, so it is only reserved for a season. His compassion is more towards the ungodly men, who will at the day of judgment deal with an ungodly world according to their deserts, for the day of judgment is the day of the perdition of ungodly men; they who now scoff at a future judgment, shall find it a day of vengeance and utter destruction; "Beware therefore of being among these seers; never question but the day of the Lord will come, and all the world will then be found in Christ, that there may be a time of refreshment and day of redemption to you, which will be a day of indignation and wrath to the ungodly world."
II. PETER, III.

one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day. 9. The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is long-suffering, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance. 10. But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burnt up.

The apostle comes in these words to instruct and establish Christians in the truth of the coming of the Lord, where we may clearly discern the tenderness and affection wherewith he speaks to them, calling them beloved; he had a compassionate concern and a love of good-will for the ungodly wretches who had rejected his ministry and his revelation, out of a peculiar respect for the true believers, and the remaining ignorance and weakness that he apprehends to be in them make him jealous, and put him on giving them a caution. Here we may observe,

I. The truth which the apostle asserts—that with the Lord one day is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day. Though, in the account of men, there is a great deal of difference between a day and a year, and a vast deal more between one day and a thousand years, yet, in the account of God, who inhabits eternity, in which there is no succession, there is no difference; for all things past, present, and future, are ever before him; and the delay of a thousand years cannot be so much to him as the deferring of any thing for a day or hour is to us.

II. The importance of this truth; this is the one thing the apostle would not have us ignorant of; a holy awe and reverential fear of God are necessary in order to our worshipping and glorifying him; and a belief of the inconceivable distance between him and us is very proper to beget and maintain that religious fear of the Lord, which is the beginning of wisdom. This is a truth that belongs to our peace, and therefore he endeavours that it may not be hid from our eyes. It is in the word of God, let not this one thing be hid from you. If men have knowledge or belief of the eternal God, they will be very apt to think him such a one as themselves. Yet how hard is it to conceive of eternity! It is therefore not very easy to attain such knowledge of God as is absolutely necessary.

In v. 9, we are told, The Lord is not slack; he does what he has promised to do; God kept the time that he had appointed for the delivering Israel out of Egypt, to a day, (Exod. 12. 41.) so he will keep to the time appointed, in coming to judge the world. What a difference is there between the account which God makes, and that which men make! Good men are apt to think God stays beyond the appointed time, as God kept the time that he had appointed for the deliverance of Israel, and he will not fail to keep the day which he has appointed. Ungodly men dare charge a culpable slackness upon God, as if he had slipt the time, and laid aside the thoughts of coming. But the apostle assures us, that what men count slackness, is truly long-suffering, and that to usward; it is a giving more time to his own people, whom he has chosen before the foundation of the world, many of whom are not as yet converted; and those who are in a state of grace and favour with God, are to advance in knowledge and holiness, and in the exercise of faith and patience, to abound in good works, doing and suffering what they are called to, that they may bring glory to God, and improve in a meetness for heaven; for God is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance. 11. Repentance is absolutely necessary in order to salvation. Except ye repent, we shall perish. Luke 13. 3, 5. 2. God has no delight in the death of sinners: as the punishment of sinners is a torment unto his creatures, a merciful God does not take pleasure in it; and though the principal design of God, in his long-suffering, is the blessedness of those whom he has chosen to be holy and to be sanctified by the true knowledge of God, and belief of the truth, yet his goodness and forbearance do in their own nature invite and call to repentance all those to whom they are exercised; and if men continue impenitent when God gives them space to repent, he will deal more severely with them; though the great reason why he did not hasten his coming, was, because he had not accomplished the number of his elect. "Abuse not therefore the patience and long-suffering of the Lord, as the unawakey and forsaking yourselves to a course of ungodliness; presume not to go on boldly in the way of sinners, nor to sit down securely in an unconverted impenitent state, as he who said, (Matt. 24. 48.) My Lord delayeth his coming, lest he come and surprise you; for, as we read, (v. 10.) The day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night." Here we may conclude.

(1.) The certainty of the day of the Lord; though it is now above sixteen hundred years since this epistle was written, and the day is not yet come, it assuredly will come; God has appointed a day wherein he will judge the world in righteousness, and he will keep his appointment. It is appointed to men once to die, and after this the judgment, Heb. 9. 27. "Settle it therefore in your hearts that the day of the Lord will certainly come, and you shall certainly be called to give an account of all things done in the body, whether good or evil; and let your exact walking before God, and your frequent judging yourselves, evidence your firm belief of a future judgment, when many live as if they were never to give any account at all." (2.) The suddenness of this day; it will come as a thief in the night, at a time when men are sleeping and secure; and if you have no more apprehension of the expectation of the day of the Lord, any more than men have of a thief when they are in a deep sleep, in the dark and silent night. At midnight there was a cry, Behold, the bridegroom comes; (Matt. 25. 6.) and at that time not only the foolish, but also the wise virgins, slumbered and slept. The Lord will come in a day when we look not for him, and an hour when men are not aware. That time which men think to be the most improper and inconvenient, and therefore are most secure, will be the time of the Lord's coming. Let us then beware how we in our thoughts and imaginations put that day far away from us; but rather suppose it to be so much nearer in reality, by how much further off it is in the opinion of the ungodly world. (3.) The solemnity of this coming; [1.] The heavens shall pass away with a great noise, (Isa. 13. 10.) and the earth shall melt with fervent heat, and the elements shall be consumed by fire. [2.] The elements shall melt with fervent heat. At this coming of the Lord it shall not only be very tempestuous round about him, so that the very heavens shall pass away as in a mighty violent storm, but a fire shall go before him, that shall melt the elements...
II. Peter, III.

of which the creatures are composed. [3.] The earth also, and all the works that are therein, whether in the earth, and all the inhabitants and all the works, whether of nature or art, shall be destroyed. The stately palaces and gardens, and all the desirable things wherein worldly-minded men seek and place their happiness, all of them shall be burnt up; all sorts of creatures which God has made, and all the works of men, must submit, all must pass through the fire, which shall be a consuming fire to all that sin has brought into the world, though it may be but a refining fire to the works of God's hand, that the glass of the creation being made much brighter, the saints may much better discern the glory of the Lord therein.

And now who can but observe what a difference there will be between the first coming of Christ and the second! Yet that is called the great and dreadful day of the Lord, Mal. 4. 5. How much more dreadful must this coming to judgment be! May we be so wise as to prepare for it, that it may not be a day of vengeance and destruction unto us. O! what will become of us, if we set our affections on this earth, and make it our portion, seeing all these things shall be burnt up? Look out therefore, and make sure of a happiness beyond this visible world, which must all be melted down.

11. Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness, 12. Looking for and hastening unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens, being on fire, shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat! 13. Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness.

14. Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless: 15. And account that the long-suffering of our Lord is salvation; even as our beloved brother Paul also, according to the wisdom given unto him, hath written unto you; 16. As also in all his epistles, speaking in them of these things; in which are some things hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest, as they do also the other scriptures, unto their own destruction.

17. Ye therefore, beloved, seeing ye know these things before, beware lest ye also, being led away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own steadfastness. 18. But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. To him be glory both now and for ever. Amen.

The apostle, having instructed them in the doctrine of Christ's second coming, takes occasion thence to exhort them to purity and godliness in their whole conversation: all the truths which are revealed in scripture, should be improved for our advancement in practical godliness: this is the effect that knowledge must produce, or we are never the better for it. If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them. Seeing all these things must be dissolved, how holy should we be, that are assured of it, departing from and dying to sin, that has so corrupted and debased all the visible creatures, that there is an absolute need of its dissolution! All that was made for man's use, is subject to vanity by man's sin; and if the sin of man has brought the visible heavens, and the elements and earth, under a curse, from which they cannot be freed without being dissolved, what an abominable evil is sin, and how much to be hated by us! And inasmuch as this will be fulfilled in order to the fitting it restored: pure and primitive beauty and excellency, how pure and holy should we be, in order to our being fit for the new heaven and new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness! It is a very exact and universal holiness that he exhorts to, not resting in any lower measure or degree, but labouring to be eminent beyond what is commonly attained; holy in God's house and in our own; holy in our worshipping of God, and in our conversing with men; all our conversation, whether with high or low, rich or poor, good or bad, friends or enemies, must be holy; we must keep ourselves unsullied from the world in all our conversations with it; we must be perfectly holy in the fear of God, and in the love of God too; we must exercise ourselves unto godliness of all sorts, in all its parts, trusting in God and dethinking in God only, who continues the same when the whole visible creation will be dissolved; devoting the whole energy of the creature of God, and designing the glorifying and enjoyment of God, who endures for ever; whereas what worldly men delight in and follow after, must all be dissolved; these things which we now see, must in a little while pass away, and be no more as they now are; let us look therefore at what shall abide and continue, which, though it be not present, is certain and not far off. This looking for the day of God, is one of the directions the apostle gives to the members of our Lord's Church, when he appeared in the form of a servant, was what the people of God earnestly waited and looked for; that coming was for the consolation of Israel, Luke 2. 25. How much more should they wait with expectation and earnestness for his second coming, which will be the day of their complete redemption, and of his most glorious manifestation! Then he shall come to be admired in his saints, and glorified with all them that believe. For though it cannot but terrify and afflict the ungodly, to see the visible heavens all in a flame, and the elements melting, yet the believer, whose faith is the evidence of things not seen, can rejoice in hope of more glorious heavens after these have been melted and refined by that dreadful fire which shall burn up all the dress of this visible creation. Here we must turn to the great subject of the Christian's views of—new heavens and a new earth, in which a great deal more of the wisdom, power and goodness of our great God and Saviour Jesus Christ will be clearly discerned than we are able to discover in what we now see; for in these new heavens and earth, freed from the vanity the former were subject to, and the sin they were polluted with, and the corruption to which they were exposed, the habitation of such righteous persons as do righteousness, and are free from the power and pollution of sin; all the wicked shall be turned into hell; those only who are clothed with the righteous-new of Christ, and sanctified by the Holy Ghost, shall be admitted to dwell in this holy place.

II. What is the ground and foundation of this expectation and hope—the promise of God. To look for any thing which God has not promised, is presumption; but if our expectations are according to the promise, both as to the things we look for, and the time and way of their being brought about, we cannot meet with a disappointment; for he is faithful, who has promised. See therefore that you delay his promise, and all the great things that are to come according to the word of God; and as to the new heaven and new earth, look for them as God has allowed and directed by the passages we have in this portion of scripture now before you, and in Is. 65. 17.—66. 22. to which the apostle may be thought to allude."

As in v. 11. he exhorts to holiness, from the consideration that the heavens and the earth shall be dissolved, so in v. 14. he resumes his exhortation, from the consideration that they shall be again renewed; "Seeing you expect the day of God, when our Lord Jesus Christ will appear in his glorious majesty, and these heavens and earth shall be dissolved and melted down, and, being purified and refined, shall be erected and rebuilt, prepare to meet him." It nearly concerns you to see in what state you are, whether you are prepared to pass sentence upon men, and to determine how it shall be with them to all eternity; this is the court of judicature whence there lies no appeal; whatever sentence is here passed by this great Judge, is irreversible; therefore get ready to appear before the judgment seat of Christ: and see to it. 1. "That you be found of him in peace, in a state of peace and reconciliation with God through Christ, in whom all the promises are yea and amen, to our Lord Jesus Christ." (2.) Peace with men, by having a calm and peaceable disposition wrought in us, resembling that of our blessed Lord. 2. That ye be found of Christ without spot, and blameless; follow after holiness as well as peace: and even spotless and perfect; we must not only take heed of all spots which are not the spots of God's children, (this only prevents our being found of men without spot,) but we must be found of Christ without spot, we must be pressing toward spotless purity, absolute perfection. Christians must be perfecting holiness, that they may be not only blameless before men, but also in the sight of God; and all this deserves and needs the greatest care, who can do it not perfectly negligently, can never do it successfully. "Now then, as ye have been found at that day of God in peace, if you are lazy and idle in this your day, in which we must finish the work that is given us to do. It is only the diligent Christian who will be the happy Christian in the day of the Lord. Our Lord will suddenly come to us, or shortly call us to him; and would you have him will be where the Judge of the earth shall be; for it is a curse denounced against him who does the work of the Lord negligently, Mark. Jer. 48. 10. Heaven will be a sufficient recompense for all our diligence and industry, therefore let us labour and take pains in the work of the Lord; he will certainly reward us, if we be diligent in the work he has allotted us; now, that you may be diligent, account the long suffering of our Lord to be salvation. "Does your Lord delay his coming? Do not think this is to give you more time to make provision for your lusts, to gratify them; it is so much space to repent and work out your salvation. It proceeds not from a want of concern or compassion for his suffering servants, nor is it designed to give countenance and encouragement to the world of the ungodly, but that men may have time to prepare for eternity. Learn then to make a right use of the patience of our Lord, who does as yet look after your life and existence, otherwise his coming will be dreadful unto you." And inasmuch as it is difficult to prevent men's abuse of God's patience, and engage them in the right improvement thereof, our apostle quotes St. Paul as directing men to make the same good use of the divine forbearance, that in the mouth, or from the pen, of two apostles the truth might be confirmed. And we may here observe with what esteem and affection the scriptures, to which he has more particularly witnessed and sharply reproved St. Peter. If a righteous man snite one who is truly religious, it shall be received as a kindness; and let him reprove, it shall be as an excellent oil, which shall soften and sweeten the good man that is reproved when he does amiss. What an honourable mention does this apostle of the circumcision make of that man who had openly, before all, reproved him, not walking according to the truth of the gospel! (1.) He calls him brother, whereby he means not only that he is a fellow-Christian, (in which sense the word brethren is used, 1 Thess. 5. 27.) or a fellow-preacher, (in which sense St. Paul calls Timothy the evangelist a brother, Col. 1.) but a fellow apostle, one who had the same extraordinary commission, immediately from Christ himself, to preach the gospel in every place, and to disciple all nations. Though many seducing teachers denied Paul's apostleship, yet St. Peter owns him to be an apostle. (2.) He calls him beloved; and they being both alike commissioned, and both united in the same service of the same Lord, it would have been very unseemly if they had not been united in affection to one another, for the strengthening of one another's hands, mutually desirous of, and desiring in one another, the success of our Lord's work. (3.) He mentions St. Paul as one who had an uncommon measure of wisdom given unto him. He was a person of eminent knowledge in the mysteries of the gospel, and did neither in that nor any other qualification come behind any of the other apostles. How desirable it is, that those who preach the same gospel, should treat one another according to the pattern. St. Peter here sets them! It is surely their duty to endeavour to love one another, and so to remove all prejudices that hinder ministers' usefulness, and to begat and improve the esteem and respect in the minds of people toward their ministers, that may promote the success of their labours. And let us also here observe, [1.] The excellent wisdom that was in St. Paul, is said to be given him. The understanding and knowledge that qualify men to preach the gospel, they have given him in a special manner; and we should seek for knowledge, and labour to get understanding, in hope that it shall be given us from above, while we are diligent in using proper means to attain it. [2.] The apostle imparts to men according as he had received from God. He endeavours to lead others as far as he himself was led into the knowledge of the mysteries of the gospel. He is not an intruder into the secrets of God, but he has not been fully assured of, and yet he does not fail to declare the whole counsel of God, Acts 20. 27. [3.] The epistles which were written by the apostle of the Gentiles, and directed to those Gentiles who believed in Christ, are designed for the instruction and edification of those who from among the Jews.
were brought to believe in Christ; for it is generally thought that what is here alluded to, is contained in the epistle to the Romans; (ch. 2. 4.) though in all his epistles there are some things that refer to one or other of the subjects treated of in this and the foregoing chapter; and it cannot seem strange that those who were pursuing the same general design, should in their epistles insist upon the same things. But the apostle Peter proceeds to tell us, that in those things which are to be met with in St. Paul's epistles, there are some things hard to be understood. Among the variety of subjects treated of in scripture, some are not easy to be understood, because of their own obscurity, such are prophecies; others cannot be so easily understood because of their excellency and sublimity, as the mysterious doctrines; and others are with difficulty taken in, because of the weakness of men's minds, such are the things of the Spirit of God, mentioned 1 Cor. 2. 14. And here the unlearned and unstable make wretched work; for they wrest and torture the scriptures, to make them speak what the Holy Ghost did not intend. Those who are not well instructed and well established in the truth, are in great danger of perverting the word of God. Those who have heard and learned of the Father, are best secured from misunderstanding and misapplying any part of the word of God; and where there is a divine power to establish as well as to instruct men in divine truth, persons are effectually secured from falling into errors. How great a blessing this is, we learn by observing what is the pernicious consequence of the errors that ignorant and unstable men fall into—even their own destruction. Errors in particular concerning the holiness and justice of God are the utter ruin of multitudes of men. Let us therefore earnestly pray for the Spirit of God to instruct us in the truth, that we may know it as it is in Jesus, and have our hearts established with grace, that we may stand firm and unshaken, even in the most stormy times, when others are tossed to and fro with every wind of doctrine.

In v. 17. the apostle gives them a word of caution, where he intimates, that the knowledge we have of these things should make us very wary and watchful, inasmuch as there is a twofold danger. First, We are in great danger of being seduced, and turned away from the truth. The unlearned and unstable, and they are very numerous, do generally wrest the scripture. Many who have the scriptures and read them, do not understand what they read; and too many of those who have a right understanding of the sense and meaning of the word, are not established in the belief of the truth, and all these are liable to fall into error. Few attain to the knowledge and acknowledgment of doctrinal Christianity; and fewer still, so as to keep in the way of practical godliness, which is the narrow way, which only leadeth unto life. There must be a great deal of self-denial and suspicion of ourselves, and submitting to the authority of Christ Jesus our great Prophet, before we can heartily receive all the truths of the gospel, and therefore we are in great danger of rejecting the truth. Secondly, We are in great danger by being seduced. For, 1. So far as we are turned from the truth, so far are we turned out of the way to true blessedness, into the path which leads to destruction. If men corrupt the word of God, it tends to their own utter ruin. 2. When men wrest the word of God, they fall into the error of the wicked, men without law, who keep to no rules, set no bounds to themselves; a sort of free-thinkers, which the psalmist detests, (Ps. 119. 113.) I hate vain thoughts, but thy law do I love. Whatever opinions and thoughts of men are not conformable to the law of God, and warranted by it, the good man disclaims and abhors; they are the conceits and counsels of the ungodly, who have forsaken God's law; and if we imibe their opinions, we shall too soon imitate their practices. 3. They who are led away by error, fall from their own steadfastness. They are wholly unhinged and unsettled, and know not where to rest, but are at the greatest uncertainty, like a wave of the sea, driven with the wind and tossed. It nearly concerns us therefore to be upon our guard, seeing the danger is so great.

Now that we may the better avoid being led away, the apostle (v. 18.) directs us what to do. And, (1.) We must grow in grace. He had in the beginning of the epistle exhorted us to add one grace to another, and here he advises us to grow in all grace, in faith, and virtue, and knowledge. By how much the stronger grace is in us, by so much the more steadfast shall we be in the truth. (2.) We must grow in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. "Follow on to know the Lord.Labour to know him more clearly and more fully, to know more of Christ, and to know him to better purpose, so as to be more like him, and to love him better." This is the knowledge of Christ the apostle Paul reached after, and desired to attain to, Phil. 3. 10. Such a knowledge of Christ as conforms us more to him, and endears him more to us, must needs be of great use to us to preserve us from falling off in times of general apostasy; and they who experience this effect of the knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, will, upon receiving such grace from him, give thanks and praise to him, and join with our apostle in saying, To him be glory both now and for ever. Amen.
