AN EXPOSITION, WITH PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS, OF THE PROPHECY OF HABAKKUK.

It is a very foolish fancy of some of the Jewish rabbins, that this prophet was the son of the Shunamite woman, that was at first miraculously given, and afterward raised to life, by Elisha; (2 Kings 4.) as they say also that the prophet Jonah was the son of the widow of Zarephath, which Elijah raised to life. It is a more probable conjecture of their modern chronologers, that he lived and prophesied in the reign of King Manasseh, when wickedness abounded, and destruction was hastening on; destruction by the Chaldeans, whom this prophet mentions as the instruments of God's judgments; and Manasseh was himself carried to Babylon, as an earnest of what should come afterward. In the apocryphal story of Bel and the Dragon, mention is made of Habakkuk the prophet in the land of Judah, who was carried thence by an angel to Babylon, to feed Daniel in the den; those who give credit to that story, take pains to reconcile our prophet's living before the captivity, and foretelling it, with that. Huetius thinks that that was another of the same name, a prophet, this is of the tribe of Simeon, that of Levi; others, that he lived so long as to the end of the captivity, though he prophesied of it before it came. And some have imagined that Habakkuk's feeding Daniel in the den, is to be understood mystically, that Daniel then lived by faith, as Habakkuk had said the just should do; He was fed by that word, Hab. ii. 4. The prophecy of this book is a mixture of the prophet's addresses to God in the people's name, and to the people in God's name; for it is the office of the prophets to carry messages both ways. We have in it a lively representation of the intercourse and communion between a gracious God and a gracious soul. The whole refers particularly to the invasion of the land of Judah by the Chaldeans, which brought spoil upon the people of God, a just punishment of the spoil they had been guilty of among themselves; but it is of general use, especially to help us through that great temptation with which good men have in all ages been exercised, arising from the power and prosperity of the wicked, and the sufferings of the righteous by it.

HABAKKUK, I.

CHAP. I.

In this chapter, I. The prophet complains to God of the violence done by the abuse of the sword of justice among his own people, and the hardships thereby put upon many good people. v. 1 . . 4 . II. God by him foretells the punishment of that abuse of power by the sword of war, and the desolations which the army of the Chaldeans should make upon them. v. 5 . . 11 . III. Then the prophet complains of that too, and is grieved that the Chaldeans prevail so far; (v. 12 . . 17.) so that he scarcely knows which is more to be lamented, the sin, or the punishment of it, for in both many harmless, good people are very great sufferers. It is well that there is a day of judgment, and a future state, before us in which it shall be eternally well with all the righteous, and with them only, and ill with all the wicked, and them only; so the present seeming disorders of providence shall be set to rights, and there will remain no matter of complaint whatsoever.

1. THE burden which Habakkuk the prophet did see. 2. O Lord, how long shall I cry, and thou wilt not hear! even cry out unto thee of violence, and thou wilt not save! 3. Why dost thou shew me iniquity, and cause me to behold grievance for spoiling and violence are before me; and there are that raise up strife and contention. 4. Therefore the law is slackened, and judgment doth never go forth: for the wicked doth compass about the righteous; therefore wrong judgment proceedeth. We are told, in the title of this book, (which we have, v. 1.) that the prophet was a prophet; a man divinely inspired and commissioned, which is enough; it that be so, we need not ask concerning him what it was at the place of his birth: we are also told that the book itself is the burthen which he saw; he was as sure of the truth of it as if he had seen it with his bodily eyes already accomplished.

Here, in these verses, the prophet sadly laments the inequity of the times, as one sensibly touched with grief for the lamentable decay of religion and righteousness. It is a very melancholy complaint which he makes to God, Gen. vi. 11.

1. That no man could call what he had his own; but, in defiance of the most sacred laws of property and equity, he hath power on his side, had what he had a mind to, though he had no right on his side: the land was full of violence, as the old world was, Gen. vi. 11. The prophet cries out of violence; (v. 2.) inequity and grievance, spoil and violence; In families and young relations, in neighbourhhoods and among friends, in commerce and in courts of law, everything was carried with a high hand, and no man made any scruple of doing wrong to his neighbour, so that he could but make a good hand of it for himself. It does not appear that the prophet himself had any great wrong done him, (in listing times it fared best with those that had nothing to do with the courts of the land.) But he saw and heared and he saw other people wronged, and he could not but mingle his tears with those of the oppressed. Note, Doing wrong to harmless people, as it is an inequity in itself, so it is a great grievance to all that are concerned for God's Jerusalem, who sigh and cry for abominations of this kind. He complains, (v. 4.) that the wicked doth compass about the righteous. One honest man, one honest cause, shall have enemies beset against him on every side; many wicked men, in confidence against it, run them down; may, one wicked man (for it is singular) with so many various arts of mischief sets upon a righteous man, that he perfectly besets him.

2. That the kingdom was broken into parties and factions, that were continually biting and devouring one another. This is a lamentation to all the sons of peace; There are that raise up strife and contention, (v. 5.) that foment divisions, widen breaches, incense men against one another, and sow discord among brethren, by doing the work of him that is the accuser of the brethren. Strifes and contentions that have been haid asleep, and begun to be forgotten, they awake, and industriously raise up again, and blow up the sparks that were laid up in old years. And it is blessed are the peace-makers, cursed are such peace-breakers, that make parties, and so make mischief that spreads further, and lasts longer, than they can imagine. It is sad to see that men warming their hands at those flames which are devouring all that is good in a nation, and stirring up the fire too.

3. That the torrent of violence and strife ran so strong, that hid defiance to the restrictions and regulations of laws, and the administration of justice, v. 4. Because God did not appear against them, nobody else would, therefore the law is slacke, is silent, it breathes not, its pulse beats not, (so, it is said, the word signifies,) it intermits, and judgment does not go forth as it should; no cognizance is taken of those crimes, no justice done upon the criminals; no punishment inflicted; no grace extended to the courts of equity, the righteous shall be condemned, and the wicked justified, so that the remedy proves the worst disease. The legislative power takes no care to supply the deficiencies of the law, for the obstructing of those growing, threatening mischief; the executive power takes no care to answer the good intentions of the laws that are made; the streams of justice is dried up by violence, and has not free course.

4. That all this was open and public, and impudently avowed; it was barefaced. The prophet complains that this inequity was shewed him, he beheld it which way soever he turned his eyes, nor could he look off it; spoiling and violence are before me. Note, The abounding wickedness in a nation is a very great eye-sore to good people, and if they did not see it, they could not believe it to be so bad as it is. Solomon often complains of the vexation of this kind, which he saw under the sun; and the prophet with whom he spake before, says, There are no end of captivated persons, he might not see it, Jer. ix. 2. But then must we needs go out of the world, which therefore we should long to do, that we may remove to that world where husbands and love reign eternally, and no spoiling and violence shall be before us.

5. That he complained of this to God, but could not obtain a redress of those grievances; Lord,' says he, 'why dost thou show me inequity? Why hast thou cast my lot in a time and place when and where it is to be seen, and why do I continue so journey in Mesec and Kedar; I cry to thee of this violence, I cry aloud, I have cried long; but thou wilt not hear, thou wilt not save; thou dost not take vengeance on the oppressors, nor do justice to the oppressed, as if thine arm were shortened, or thine hand heavy. Is it the heavy thunders of the wickedness of the wicked, nay, and to countenance it, by suffering them to prosper in their wickedness, it shocks the faith of good men, and proves a sore temptation to them to say, We have cleansed our hearts in vain, (Ps. lxix. 13.) and hardens those in impiety, who say, God has forsaken the earth. We must not think it strange, if wickedness be suffered to prevail far, and prosper long. God has reasons, and we are sure they are good reasons, both for the reprovers of bad men, and the rebukes of good men; and therefore, though we plead with him, and humbly expostulate concerning his judgments, yet we must say, 'He is wise, and righteous, and good, in all; and must believe the day will come, though it may be long deferred, when the cry of sin will be heard against those that do wrong, and the cry of prayer for those that suffer it.'

Behold ye among the heathen, and regard, and wonder marvellously; for I will work a work in your days, which ye will not believe, though it be told you. 6. For, lo, I raise up the Chaldeans, that bitter and nasty nation, which shall march through the breadth of the land, to possess the dwelling-places that are not theirs. 7. They are terrible and dreadful: their judgment and their dignity shall proceed of themselves. 8. Their horses also are swifter than the leopards, and are more fierce than the evening wolves; and their horsemen shall spread themselves, and their horsemen shall come from far; they shall fly as the eagle that hath hasted to eat. 9. They shall come all for violence: their faces shall sup up as the east wind, and they shall gather the captivity as the sand. 10. And they shall scoff at the kings, and the princes shall be a scorn unto them: they shall deride every strong hold; for they shall heap dust, and take it. 11. Then shall his mind change, and he shall pass over, and offend, imputing this his power unto his god.
We have here an answer to the prophet's complaint, giving him assurance that, though God bore long, he would not bear always, with this provoking people; for the day of vengeance was in his heart, and he would not tarry. The Lord will not look with pity upon them. 1. A judicial punishment, which shall be beheld and regarded among the heathen, which the neighbouring nations shall take notice of, and stand amazed at, see Deut. xxix. 24, 25. This will aggravate the desolations of Israel, that they will thereby be made a spectacle to the world. 2. An amazing punishment, so strange and surprising, and so much out of the common road of Providence, that it shall not be paralleled among the heathen, shall be sorer and heavier than what God has usually inflicted upon the nations that know him not: nay, it shall not be credited, even by those that had the prediction of it from God, before it comes, or the report of it from those that were eye-witnesses of it, when Jerusalem is cast down, and she believe it, though it be told you; it will be thought incredible that so many judgments should combine in one, and every circumstance so strangely concur to enforce and aggravate it, that so great and potent a nation should be so reduced and broken, that God should deal so severely with a people that had been taken into the bond of the covenant, and that he had done so much for their benefit. This is a great wonder, that God's people cannot but be the astonishment of all about them. 3. A speedy punishment: I will work a work in your days, now quickly; this generation shall not pass till the judgment threatened be accomplished. The sins of former days shall be reckoned for in your days; for now the measure of the iniquity is full, Matt. xxiii. 38. 4. It shall be a punishment in which much of the hand of God shall appear; it shall be a work of his own working, so that all who see it shall say, This is the Lord's doing; and it will be found a fearful thing to fall into his hands; so to those whom he takes to task. 5. It shall be such a punishment as will typify the destruction to be brought upon the despisers of Christ and his gospel, Eze. 13. 4. Behold the sword which goeth forth. The ruin of Jerusalem by the Chaldeans for their idolatry, was a figure of their ruin by the Romans for rejecting Christ and his gospel, and it is a very marvellous thing, and almost incredible. Is there not a strange punishment to the workers of iniquity? 6. The sentence itself is very dreadful and particular; (v. 6.) Lo, I raise up the Chaldeans. There were those that raised up a great deal of strife and contention among them, which was their sin; and now God will raise up the Chaldeans against them, who shall strive and contend with them, which shall be their punishment. Note, When God's professing people quarrel among themselves, smarit and devise one another, it is just with God to bring the common enemy upon them, that shall make peace by making an universal devastation. The contending parties in Jerusalem were inverte one against another, when the Romans came, and took away their place and nation. The Chaldeans shall be the instruments of the destruction threatened, who, though themselves acting unrighteously, shall execute the righteousness of the Lord, and yea, the unrighteousness of Israel. Now here we have, 1. A description of the people that shall be raised up against Israel, to be a scourge to them. (1.) They are a bitter and hasty nation, cruel and fierce, and when they are done with violence and fury; they are precipitate in their counsels, vehement in their passion, and rash in their actions. (2.) They are strong and therefore formidable, and such as there is no standing before, and yet no recoiling from; (v. 7.) They are terrible and dreadful, famed for the gallant troop they bear in the field, (v. 8.) Their horses are preferable to the sword, and pursue, and more fierce than the evening-wolves; and wolves are observed to be the most ravacious toward the evening, after they have been kept hungry all day, waiting for that darkness under the protection of which all the beasts of the forest creep forth, Ps. civ. 28. Their squadrons of horse shall be very numerous; Their horsemen shall spread themselves a great way, for they shall come from far, from all parts of their own country, and shall be dispersed into all parts of the country they invade, to plunder it, and enrich themselves with the spoil of it. And in making speed to spoil, they shall hasten to the prey, (as those, Isa. viii. 1. marg.) for they shall fly as the eagle toward the earth when she hastens to eat, and spread themselves abroad, Hebr. ii. 19. (3.) Their own will is a law to them, and, in the fierceness of their pursuits, they will not be governed by any laws of humanity, equity, or honour: Their judgment and their dignity shall proceed of themselves, v. 7. Appetite and passion rule them, and not reason or conscience: their principle is, Quia me vocavit, sic sum. (4.) They are given up to the pursuit of their own pleasures, and are so given up to it, that it is the one eye upon. This is my will, this is my command, it shall be done because I choose it. What favour can be hoped for from such an enemy? Note, These who have been unjust and unmerciful, among whom the law is slacked, and judgment doth not go forth, will justly be paid in their own coin, and fall into the hands of those who will deal unjustly and numerically with them. 2. A prophecy of the terrible execution that should be made by this terrible nation; They shall march through the breadth of the earth; (so it may be read,) for in a little time the Chaldean forces subdued all the nations in those parts, so that they seemed to have conquered the world; they overran Asia and part of Africa. Or, through the breadth of the land of Israel, which was but a corner of the world, (1.) That they shall seize all as their own that they can lay their hands on. They shall come to possess the dwelling-places that are not theirs, which they have no right to, but that which their sword gives them. (2.) That they shall push on the war with all possible vigour; They shall all come for violence, (v. 9.) not to determine any dispute by the sword, but to urge themselves with the spoil; Their faces shall be set up as the east wind; their very countenances shall be so fierce and frightful, that a look will serve to make them masters of all they have a mind to; so that they shall swallow up all, as the east wind nips and blasts the buds and flowers. Their faces shall look toward the east, (so some read it,) they shall still have an eye on the sword, but right well know the eastward from Judea, and all the spoil they seize they shall remit thither. (3.) That they shall take a vast number of prisoners, and send them into Babylon: They shall gather the captives as the sand for multitude, and shall never know when they have enough, as long as there are any more to be had. (4.) That they shall make nothing of the opposition that is given to them: They shall send the Jews depend upon their great men to make a stand, and with their conduct and courage to give check to the victorious arms of the Chaldeans? Alas, they will make nothing of them. They shall scoff (he shall, so is it in the original, meaning Nebuchadnesszar, who, being puffed up with his successes, shall scoff at the kings and commanders of the forces that think to make head against him; and the princes shall be a scorn to them, sunnequal a match shall they appear to be. Do they depend upon their gar- risons and fortified towns? He shall deride every strong hold; for to him it shall be weak, and he shall heap dust, and take it; a little soil, thrown up for ramparts, shall serve to give him all the advantage against them, and chase the force of the advance of his host, and a jest of them, and a sport of taking them. (5.) By all this he shall be puffed up with an intolerable pride, which shall be his destruction; (v. 11.) Then shall his mind change for the worse. The Spirit both of the people and of the king shall grow more haughty and insolent. Those that will not be content with their own rights, will not be content when they have made themselves masters of other people's rights too; but as the condition rises, the mind rises too; this victorious king shall pass over all the bounds of reason, equity, and modesty; and break through all their bonds, and thereby he shall offend, shall make God his Enemy, and so prepare ruin for himself by imputing this his power to his god, whereas he had it from the God of Israel. Bel and Assur, they themselves by the field gave them the glory of their successes; they were hardened in their idolatry, and blasphemously argued, that because they had conquered Israel, their gods were too strong for the God of Israel. Note, It is a great offence (and the common offence of proud people) to take that glory to ourselves, or give it to gods of our own making, which is due to the living and true God only. These closing words of the sentence give a glimpse of comfort to the afflicted people of God; it is to be hoped that they will change their minds, and grow better, and ripe for deliverance; and they did so. However their enemies will change their minds, and grow worse, and ripe for destruction, which will inevitably come in God's due time; for a haughty spirit, lifted up against God, goes before a fall.

12. Art thou not from everlasting, O Lord my God, my Holy One? we shall not die. O Lord, thou hast ordained them for judgment; and, O mighty God, thou hast established them for correction. 13. Thou art of purer eyes than to behold evil, and cannot look on iniquity: wherefore lookest thou upon them that deal treacherously, and holdest thy tongue when the wicked devoureth the man that is more righteous than he? 14. And makest men as the fishes of the sea, as the creeping things, that have no ruler over them? 15. They take up all of them with the angle, they catch them in their net, and gather them in their drag; therefore they rejoice and are glad. 16. Therefore they sacrifice unto their net, and burn incense unto their drag; because by them their portion is fat, and their meat plentiful. 17. Shall they therefore empty their net, and not spare continually to slay the nations!

The prophet, leaving received of the Lord that which he was to deliver to the people, now turns to God, and again addresses himself to him for the case of his own mind under the burthen which he saw. And still he is full of complaints. If he look about him, he sees nothing but violence done by Israel; if he look before him, he sees nothing but violence done against Israel, and it is hard to say which is the more melancholy sight: his thoughts of both he pours out before the Lord. It is our duty to be affected both with the iniquities and with the calamities of the church of God, and of the times and places wherein we live; but we must take heed lest we grow froward in our sentiments, and carry them too far, so as to entertain any hard thoughts of God, and to reproach his ways, and to wonder at his dealing with us. The world is bad, and always was so, and will be so; it is out of our power to mend it; but we are sure that God governs the world, and will bring glory to himself out of all, and therefore we must resolve to make the best of it, must be ourselves better, and long for the better world. The prospect of the prevalence of the Chaldeans drives the prophet to his knees, and he takes the liberty to plead with God concerning it. In his plea we may observe, 1. The truths which he lays down, which he resolves to abide by, and with which he endeavours to comfort himself and his friends, under the growing, threatening power of the Chaldeans; and they will furnish us with pleasing considerations for our support in the like case. 2. Our God is the Lord our God, and our Holy One. The victorious Chaldeans impute their power to their idols, but we are taught to tell them that the God of Israel is the true God, the living God, Jer. x. 10, 11. (1.) He is Jehovah, the Fountain of all being, power, and perfection; our Rock is not as theirs. (2.) He is our God. He speaks in the people's name; every Israelite may say, "He is mine"; though we are thus sore broken, and all this is come upon us, yet have we not forgotten the name of our God, nor quitted our relation to him, yet have we not disowned him, nor hath he disowned us, Ps. xlv. 17. We are an offending people, he is an offended God, yet he is ours and we will not entertain any hard thoughts of him or of his service, for all this. (3.) He is my Holy One; this intimates that the prophet loved God as a holy God, and found him pure in his holiness: "He is mine, because he is a Holy One; and therefore he will be my Sanctifier and my Saviour, because he is my Holy One. Men are unholy, but my God is holy." 2. Our God is from everlasting. This he pleads with him; Art thou not from everlasting, O Lord my God? It is matter of great and continual comfort to God's people, under the troubled present life, that God is from everlasting. This speaks, (1.) The eternity of his nature; if he is from everlasting, he will be to everlasting, and we must have recourse to this first principle, when things seen, which are temporal, are discouraging, that we have hope and help sufficient in a God that is not seen, that is eternal; "Art thou not from everlasting, and then wilt thou not make bare thine everlasting arms, in purpose things new, and things to come, and make unto thyself an everlasting name?" (2.) The antiquity of his covenant; "Art thou not from old, a God in covenant with thy people;" (so some understand it) "and hast thou not done great things for them in the days of old, which we have heard with our ears, and which our fathers have told us of; and art thou not the God of the whole earth?" The art God, and changest not. 3. While the world stands, God will have a church in it. Thou art from everlasting, and then we shall not die. The Israel of God shall not be extirpated, nor the name of Israel blotted cut, though it may sometimes seem to be very near it; like the apostle's, (2 Cor. vi. 9.) chastened, and not killed, chastened sore, but not delivered over to death, Ps. cxviii. 18. See how the prophet infers the perpetuity of the church from the eternity of God; for Christ has said, "Because I live, and therefore I will" (John xvii. 3). He is the Rock on which the church is so firmly built, that the gates of hell shall not, cannot, prevail against it. We shall not die. 4. Whatever the enemies of the church may do against her, it is according to the counsel of God, and is designed and directed for wise and holy ends; therefore we should not be afraid of it. It was God that gave the Chaldeans their power, made them a formidable people, and in his counsel determined what they should do, nor had they any power against his Israel, but what was given them from above. He gave them their commission to take the spoil, and to take the prey. Isa. x. 6. Herein God appears a mighty God, that the power of mighty men is derived from him, and it is he that directs them, and is under his check; he says concerning it, Hitherto shall it come and no farther. They whom God ordains, shall do no more than what God has ordained, which is a great comfort to God's suffering people. Men are God's hand, the rod in his hands, Ps. xvii. 14. And he has ordained them for judgment, and to execute vengeance for his people and destruction, and to give them into the hands of their enemies; and they must expect it, they shall have it; when wicked men are let loose against them, it is not for their destruction, but for their correction, and for their reformation; they are not intended for a sword, to cut them off, but for a rod, to drive out the foolishness that is found in their hearts, though they mean not so, neither do they think there is any sin in it. Note, It is matter of great comfort to us, in reference to the troubles and afflictions of the church, that whatever mischief men design to do them, God designs to bring good out of them, and we are sure that his counsel shall stand. 5. Though the wickedness of the wicked may prosper for a while, yet God is a holy God, and does not approve of that wickedness; (v. 13.) Thou art of purer eyes than he beholds evil. The prophet, observing how very vicious and impious the Chaldeans were, and yet what great success they had against God's Israel, found a temptation arising from it to say, "It is vain to serve God, and it is indifferent to him what men are." But he soon suppresses the thought by having recourse to his first principle, and by observing that God is a holy God; he cannot be, the Author or Patron of sin; as he cannot do iniquity himself, so he is of purer eyes than to behold it, with any allowance or approbation; no, it is that abominable thing which the Lord hates. He sees all the sin that is committed in the world, and it is an offence to him, it is odious in his eyes, and those that commit it are thereby made obnoxious to his justice. There is in the nature of God an antipathy to these dispositions and practices that are contrary to his holy law; and though an expedient is happily found out for his being reconciled to sinners, yet he never will or can be reconciled to sin. And this principle we must resolve to abide by, though the dispensations of his providence may for a time, and in some instances, seem to be inconsistent with it. Note, God's omnipotence at sin must never be interpreted into a giving countenance to it; for he is not a God that has pleasure in wickedness, Ps. v. 4, 5. The iniquity which, it is here said, God does not look upon, may be meant especially of the mischief done to God's people by their persecutors; though God seems to cause it to permit it, yet he does not approve of it; so it agrees with that of Balaam, (Num. xxiii. 21.) He has not beheld iniquity against Jacob, nor seen, with allowance, perseverance against Israel; which is very comfortable to the people of God, in their afflictions by the rage of men, that they cannot infer God's anger from it; though the instruments of their trouble hate them, it does not therefore follow that God does, nor, he loves them, and it is in love that he corrects them. 11. The grievance he complains of, and finds hard to reconcile with these truths; "Since we are sure that thou art a holy God, why have atheists temptation given them to question whether thou art or no? Therefore lookest thou upon the Chaldeans that deal treacherously with thy people, and hast thou been slow to deal thus with them?" Therein he speaks against God, as if he were some worldly tyrant, who blaspeth thy name, and deals thus cruelly, thus perfidiously, with thy sworn subjects, who desire to fear thy name? What shall we say to this? This was a temptation to Job; (ch. xxi. 2.) to Jeremiah, ch. xii. 1. 2. That God permitted sin, and was patient with the sinners. He looked upon them, he saw all their wicked doings and designs, and did not restrain or punish them, but suffered them to proceed in their purposes, to go on and prosper, and to carry all before them. Nay, his looking upon them intimates that he not only gave them no check or rebuke, but that he gave them encouragement and assistance, as God did to the Canaanites, and made them allied to them, and favoured them. He held his tambourine in his hand, and gave them the sacrifice and courses, said nothing against them, gave no orders to stop them. These things thou hast done, and I kept silence. 2. That his patience was abused, and, because sentence against these evil works and workers was not executed speedily, therefore their hearts were hardened, Prov. xxiv. 29. (1.) They were false and deceitful, that there was no credit to be given them, nor any confidence to be put in them. They dealt treacherously; under colour of peace and friendship, they prosecute and execute the most mischievous designs, and make no conscience of their word in any thing. (2.) They hated and persecuted men because they were better than themselves, as Cain hated Abel because his own works were evil, and his brother's righteous. The wicked devours the man that is more righteous than he, for that very reason, because he shames him; they have an ill will to the image of God, and therefore devour good men, because they bear that image. Though many of the Jews were as bad as the Chaldeans themselves, and were, yet there were such men as much more righteous, and yet were devoured by them. (3.) They make no more of killing men than of catching fish. The prophet complains that Providence having delivered up the weaker to be a prey to the stronger, they were, in effect, made as the fishes of the sea, v. 14. So they had been among themselves, praying upon one another; the greater fishes do upon the lesser; (v. 3.) and they were made so to the common enemy. They were as the creeping things, or swimming things, (for the word is used for fish, Gen. i. 20.) that have no ruler over them, either to restrain them from devouring one another, or to protect them from being devoured by their enemies. They are given up to the Chaldeans as fish to the fishermen. These proud oppressors make no conscience of killing them, any more than men do of pulling fish out of the water, so small a count do they make of human lives. They make no difficulty of killing them, but do it with as much ease as men catch fish, that make no resistance, but are ungirded and unarmed, and it is rather a pres- tice, than any pains, to take them. They make no distinction among them, but all is fish that comes to their net; and they reckon every thing their own that they can lay their hands on. They have various ways of spoiling and destroying, as men have of t'king fish. Some they take up with the angle, (v. 15.) one by one; others they catch in sheets, and by wholesale, in their net, and gather them in their drag, their enclosing net. Such variety of methods have they to destroy those by whom they hope to enrich themselves.

(4.) They gloried in what they got, and pleased themselves with it, though it was got dishonestly; Their portion is fat, and their meat plenteous; for they have no need of their oppression and fraud, they have a deal of it, and it is of the best; their land is good, and they have abundance of it. And therefore, [1.] They have great complacency in themselves, and are very pleasant, they live merrily; (v. 15.) Therefore they rejoice and are glad, because their wealth is great, and their projects succeed, for the increase of it, Job xxxi. 22. Surely they have a great conceit of themselves, are very much in love with themselves, and are great admirers of their own ingenuity and conduct; They sacrifice to their own net and burn incense to their own drag; they applaud themselves for having got so much money, though ever so dishonestly. Note, There is a proneness in us to take the glory of our outward success to ourselves, and so to bring ourselves within the power of our hands, have gotten me this wealth, Deut. viii. 17. This is idolizing ourselves, sacrificing to the drag-net, because it is our own, which is as absurd a piece of idolatry as sacrificing to Neptune or Dagon. That which makes them ad re their net thus, is, because by it their portion is fat. They that make a god of their money, will make a god of their drag-net, if they can get money by it.

Lastly, The prophet, in the close, humbly expresses his hope that God will not suffer these destroyers of mankind always to go on and prosper thus, and expostulates with God concerning it; (v. 17.) "Shall they therefore empty their net? Shall they enrich themselves, and fill their own vessels, with that which the Chaldeans, in the close of the foregoing chapter, have laid upon them, and robbed them of his glory? Is not God the King of nations, and will he not assert their injured rights? Is he not jealous for his own honour, and will he not maintain that?" The prophet lodges the matter in God's hand, and leaves it with him, as the Psalmist does, (Ps. lxiv. 22.) Arise, O God, plead thine own cause.

CHAP. II.

In this chapter we have an answer expected by the prophet, (v. 1.) and returned by the Spirit of God, to the complaints which the prophet made of the violence and injustice of the Chaldeans, and their present prosperity. The answer is, I. That after God has served his own purposes by the prevailing power of the Chaldeans, he tried the faith and patience of his people, and distinguished between the hypocrites and the sincere among them, he will reckon with the Chaldeans, will humble and bring down, not only that proud monarch Nebuchadnezzar, but that proud monarchy, for his haughtiness and thirst after dominion and wealth, for which they themselves should at length be made a prey, v. 2, 3. II. That not only the, but all other sinners like them, should perish under a divine wrath, and that the thirst after dominion and wealth, and honour, v. 9, 11. 3. Those that are injurious and oppressive, and raise estates by wrong and rapine, v. 12. 4. Those that promote drunkenness, that they may expose their neighbours to shame, v. 18. 17. 4. Those that worship idols, v. 18. 20.

1. I WILL stand upon my watch, and set me upon the tower, and will watch to see what he will say unto me, and what I shall answer when I am reproved. 2. And the Lord answered me, and said, Write the vision, and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it. 3. For the vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end it shall speak, and not lie: though it tarry, wait for it; because it will surely come, it will not tarry. 4. Behold, his soul which is lifted up is not upright in him: but the just shall live by his faith.

Here, 1. The prophet humbly gives his attendance upon God; (v. 1.) "I will stand upon my watch, as a sentinel on the walls of a besieged city, or in the borders of an invaded country, that is very solicitous to gain intelligence. I will look up, will look round, will look within, and watch to see what he will say unto me, will listen attentively to the words that come out of his mouth, and may have some whisper or word of his presence, that I may not lose the least hint of instruction or direction. I will watch to see what he will say in me," (so it may be read,) "what the Spirit of prophecy in me will dictate to me, by way of answer to my complaints. Even in an ordinary way, God not only speaks to us by his word, but speaks in us by our own consciences, whispering to us, 'This is the way, walk in it,' and so giving the voice of God in both. The prophet's standing upon his tower, or high place, signifies his prudence, in making use of the helps and means he had within his reach, to know the mind of God, and to be instructed concerning it. Those that expect to hear from God, must withdraw from the world, and get above it, must raise their attention, fix their thoughts, study the scriptures, consult experiences and the experiences, continue instant in prayer, and thus set themselves upon the tower. His standing upon his watch, speaks his patience, his constancy and resolution; he will wait the time, and weather the point, as a watchman does, but he will have an answer; he will know what God will say to him, not only for his own satisfaction, but to enable him as a prophet to give satisfaction to God's church, and answer their expectations, when he is reproved, or argued with. Herein the prophet is an example to us. 1. When we are tossed and perplexed with doubts concerning the methods of Providence, are tempted to think that it is fate, or fortune, and not a wise God, that governs the world, or that the church is abandoned, and God's covenant with his people cancelled and set aside, we must go to our God, and consider the things of Providence, and our own duties; our own heart, and God's word to us, and what God will have us do. 2. When we meet with difficulties, must do as the Psalmist, consider the days of old, and make a diligent search, (Ps. lxxxii. 17.) must go into the sanctuary of God, and there labour to understand the end of these things; (Ps. lxxxiii. 17.) we must not give way to our doubts, but struggle to make the best of our way out of them. 2. When we have been at prayer, pouring out our complaints and requests before God, we must carefully observe what answers God gives by his word, and that which is furnished and providential, to our humble representations; (when David says, I will direct my prayer unto thee, as an arrow to the mark, he adds, I will look up,) will look after my prayer, as a man does after the arrow he as shot, Ps. v. 5.) we must hear what God the Lord will speak, Ps. lxxxv. 8. 3. When we go to read and hear the word of God, and so to consult him in the knowledge of what God will thereby say unto us, to suit our case; what word of conviction, caution, counsel, and comfort, he will bring to our souls, that we may receive it, and submit to the power of it, and may consider what we shall answer, what returns we shall make to the word of God, when we are reproved by it. 4. When we are attacked by such as spared with God's providence, as the prophet had been wont to have been hasty by, besieged as in a tower by hosts of objects; we should consider how to answer them, fetch our instructions from God, hear what he says to us for our satisfaction, and have that ready to say to others, when we are reproved, to satisfy them, as a reason of the hope that is in us, (1 Pet. iii. 15.) and beg of God a month and wisdom, and that it may be given us in that same hour what we shall speak.

II. God graciously gives him the meeting; for he will not disappoint the believing expectations of his people that wait to hear what he will say unto them, but will speak peace, will answer them with good words and comfortable words, Zech. i. 13. The prophet had complained of the prevalence of the Chaldean arts; and now, to pacify him concerning it, he here gives him a further prospect of their fall and ruin, as Isaiah, before this, when he had foretold the captivity in Babylon, foretold also the destruction of Babylon. Now this great and important event being made known to him by a vision, care is taken to publish the vision, and transmit it to the generations to come, who should see the accomplishment of it.

1. The prophet must write the vision, v. 2. Thus when St. John had a vision of the New Jerusalem, he was ordered to write, Rev. xvi. 5. He must write it, that he might imprint it on his own mind, and make it more clear to himself; but especially that it might be notified to those in distant places, and transmitted to those in future ages. What is handed by tradition, is easily mistaken, and liable to corruption; but what is written, is reduced to a certainty, and preserved safe and pure. We have reason to bless God for written visions, that God has written to us the great things of his prophets as well as of his law. He must write the vision, and make it plain upon tables, must write it legibly, in large characters, so that he who reads must be enabled to see it and take it in with his mind. Thus, when he gives himself leisure to read it deliberately, may not avoid a cursory view of it. Probably, the prophets were wont to write some of the most remarkable of their predictions in tables, and to hang them up in the temple, Isa. viii. 1. Now the prophet is bid to write this very plain. Note, Those who are employed in preaching the word of God, should study plainness as much as may be, so as to make the intelligible to the meanest capacities. The things of our everlasting peace, which God has written to us, are made plain, they are all plain to him that understands, (Prov. viii. 9.) and they are published with authority; God himself has prefixed his imprimatur to them; he has said, Make them plain.

2. The people must wait for the accomplishment of the vision, before they can be said to have an appointed time to come. You shall now be told of your deliverance by the breaking of the Chaldeans' power, and that the time of it is fixed in the counsel and decree of God; there is an appointed time, but it is not near, it is yet to be deferred a great while; and that comes in here as a reason why it must be written; that it may be received afterwards, and the event compared with it. Note, God has an appointed time for his appointed work, and will be sure to do the work when the time comes; it is not for us to anticipate his appointments, but to wait his time. And it is a great encouragement to wait with patience, that, though the promised favour be deferred long, it will come at last, and be an abundant recompense for our waiting. If the end it shall speak, and yet he; we shall not be displeased at it, for it will come at the time appointed, nor shall we be disappointed in it, for it will fully answer our believing expectations. The promise must be kept, though not given by the mouth of the prophet, and it shall speak; and therefore though it tarry longer than we expected, yet we must continue waiting for it; being assured it will come, and willing to tarry until it do come. The day that God has set for the deliverance of his people, and the destruction of his and their enemies, is a day, (1.) That will surely come at last; it is never adjourned sine die against another day, but it will without fail come at the fixed time, and the fittest time. (2.) It will not tarry, for God is not slack, as some count slackness; (2 Pet. iii. 9.) though it tarry past our time, yet it does not tarry past God's time, which is always the best time.

3. This vision, the accomplishment of which is so long waited for, will be such an exercise of faith and patience, as will try and prove the hearts of all who are, or shall be, concerned in it. (1.) There are some who will proudly disdain this vision, whose hearts are so lifted up, that they seem to take notice of it; if God will work for them immediately, they will thank him, but they will not give him credit; their hearts are lifted up toward vanity, and since God puts them off, they will shift for themselves, and not be beholden to him; they think their own hands sufficient for them, and God's promise is to them an insignificant thing. That man's soul that is thus lifted up, is not upright in him; it is not right with God, is not as it should be. Those that either distrust or despise God's all-sufficiency, will not walk uprightly with him, Gen. xvii. 1. But, (2.) Those who are truly good, and whose hearts are upright with God, will value the promise, and venture their all upon it; and, in confidence of the truth of it, will keep close to God and duty in the most difficult, trying times, and will then live comfortably in communion with God, dependence on him, and expectation of him. The just shall live by faith; during the captivity good people shall support themselves, and live comfortably, by faith in these precious promises, which give a confidence of them is deferred not long, and, in the certainty of the truth of it, will keep close to God and duty in the most difficult, trying times, and will then live comfortably in communion with God, dependence on him, and expectation of him. The just shall live by his faith, by that faith which he acts upon the word of God. This is quoted in the New Testament, (Rom. i. 17. Gal. iii. 11. Heb. x. 38.) for the proof of the great doctrine of justification by faith only, and of the influence which the grace of faith has upon the Christian life. Those that are made just by faith, shall live, shall be happy here and for ever; while they are here, they live by it; when they come to heaven, faith shall be swallowed up in vision.

5. Yea also, because he transgresseth by wine, he is a proud man, neither keepeth at home, who enlargeth his desire as hell, and is as death, and cannot be satisfied, but gathereth unto him all nations, and brareth unto him all people: 6. Shall not all these take up a parable against him, and a taunting proverb against him, and say, Wo to him that increaseth that which is not his! how long? and to him that ladeth himself with thick clay! 7. Shall they not rise up suddenly that shall bite thee, and awake that shall vex thee, and thou shalt be for booties unto them? 8. Because thou hast spoiled many nations, all the remnant of the people shall spoil thee; because of men's blood, and for the violence of the land, of the city, and of all that dwell therein. 9. Wo to him that coveteth And is heavy laden with covetousness, and putteth his nest on high, that he may be delivered from the power of evil! 10. Thou hast consulted shame to thy house by cutting off many people, and hast sinned against thy soul. 11. For the stone shall cry out of the wall, and the beam out of the timber shall answer it. 12. Wo to him that buildeth a town with blood, and establisheth a city by iniquity! 13. Behold, is it not of the Lord of hosts that the people shall labour in the very fire, and the people shall weary themselves for very vanity! 14. For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea.

The prophet having had orders to write the vision, and the people to wait for the accomplishment of it, the vision itself follows; and it is, as divers other prophecies we have met with, the burden of Babylon, and Babylon's king; the same that was said to pass over and offend, ch. i. 11. It reads the doom, some think, of Nebuchadnezzar, who was principally active in the destruction of Jerusalem; or of that monarchy, or of that kind of proud arrogance, Ch. id., of all such proud and oppressive powers as bear hard upon any people, especially upon God's people. Observe,

1. The charge laid down against this enemy, upon which the sentence is grounded; (v. 3.) The lusts of the flesh, the lusts of the eye, and the pride of life, are the entangling snares of men, and great men especially; and we fear all that Bell's spirit captivates, him, for fear, are caught up by each of these. For, I. He is sensual and voluptuous, and given to his pleasures; he transgresses by wine; drunkenness is itself a transgression, and is the cause of abundance of transgression. We read of those that err through wine, Isa. xxviii. 7. Belshazzar (in whom particularly this prophecy had its accomplishment) was in the height of his transgression by wine, when the handwriting upon the wall signed the warrant for his immediate execution, pursuant to this sentence, Dan. v. 1. 2. He is haughty and imperious, he is a proud man, and his pride is a certain presage of his fall coming on. If great men be proud men, the great God will make them know he is above them. His transgressing by wine is made the cause of his arrogance and insolence, therefore, he is a proud man. He is drunk, though he makes himself as mean as a beast, yet he thinks himself as great as a king, and prides himself in that by which he shames himself. We find the crown of pride upon the head of the drunkards of Ephraim, and a wo to both, Isa. xxviii. 1. 3. He is covetous and greedy of wealth, and this is the effect of his pride; he thinks himself worthy to enjoy all, and therefore makes it his business to enrage all. The Chaldean monarchy aimed to be a universal one. He keeps not at home, is not content with his own, which he has an incontestable title to, but thinks it too little, and so enjoys it not, nor takes the comfort he might in his own palace, in his own dominion; his sin is his punishment, and his ambition his perpetual un easiness. Though the home be a palace, yet to a contended mind it is a prison. He enlarges his desires as hell, or the grave, which daily receives the body of the dead, and yet still cries, Give, give; he is as death, which continues to devour, and cannot be satisfied. Note. It is the sin and folly of many, who have a great deal of the wealth of this world, that they do not know when they have enough; but the more they have, the more they would have, and the more eager they are for it. And it is just with God, that the desires which are insatiable, should still be unsatisfied, it is the doom passed on those that love silver, that they shall never be satisfied with it, Excl. v. 10. They that will not be content with their allotments, shall not have the comfort of their achievements. This proud prince is still gathering to him all nations, and heaping to him all people, invading their rights, seizing their properties, and they must not be, unless they will be his, and under his command. One nation will not satisfy him unless he has another; and then another, and all at last; as those in a lower sphere, to gratify the same inordinate desire, lay house to house, and field to field, that they may be placed alone in the earth, Isa. v. 8. And it is hard to say which is more to be pitied; the folly of such ambitious princes as their honour in enlarging their dominions, and not in ruling them well, or the misery of those nations that are harrassed and pulled to pieces by them.

Those that shall triumph in the fall of this great tyrant, are here furnished with a parable and a taunting proverb, to take up against him. He shall say, he that draws up the insulting ditty, shall say thus, Ho, he that increases that which is not his! Aha, what is gone with him now? So it may be read in a taunting way. Or, He shall say, the just who lives by his faith, he to whom the vision is written and made plain, with the help of that shall say this; shall foretell the enemy's fall, even when he sees him flourishing, and suddenly curse his habitation, even when he is taking root, Job v. 3. He shall indeed denounce woes against him.

(1.) Here is a wo against him for increasing his own possessions by invading his neighbour's rights, v. 6.—8. He increases that which is not his, but other people's. Note, No more of what we have to do be reckoned ours, than what we came honestly by; if he will iniquity, (iniquity, which will be diminished,) it will be diminished. Let not those that thrive in the world be too forward to bless themselves in it, for if they do not thrive lawfully, they are under a wo. See here, [1.] What this prosperous prince is doing; he is labouring himself with thick clay. Riches are but clay, thick clay; what are gold and silver but white and yellow earth? They that travel through thick soil, are both near and far cut off; so are they that go through the world in the midst of an abundance of the wealth of it; but as if that were not enough, what fools are they that load themselves with it, as if this trash would be their treasure! They burden themselves with continual care about it, with a great deal of guilt in getting, saving, and spending it, and with a heavy account.
which they must give of it another day. They overlay their ship with this thick clay, and so sink it and themselves into destruction and perdition. [2.] See what people say of him, while he is thus increasing his wealth; they cry, How long? How long will it be ere he has enough? They cry to God. How long wilt thou suffer this proud oppressor to trouble the nations? Or, they say to one another, See how long it will last, how long he will be able to keep what he gets thus dishonestly. They dare not speak out, but we know what they mean when they say, How long? [3.] See what will be in the end hereof; what he has got, or will get, others shall take by violence from him. The Medes and Persians shall make a prey of the Chaldeans, as they had done of other nations, v. 7, 8. "There shall be those that will bite thee, and vex thee; from whom thou didst not fear any danger, that seemed asleep, shall rise up and snore to be a plague to thee. They shall rise up suddenly when thou art most secure, and least prepared to receive the shock, and ward off the blow. Shall they not rise up suddenly? No doubt they shall, and thou thyself hast reason to expect it, to be dealt with as thou hast dealt with others; that thou shalt be for booties unto them, as others have been unto thee; that, according to the law of retaliation, as thou hast spoiled many nations, so thou shalt themselves be spoiled too. Other nations will be the instruments of the vengeance of God upon thee."

The king of Babylon thought he had brought all the nations round about him low, that none of them should have been able to make reprisals upon him; but though they were but a remnant of people, a very few left, yet these shall be sufficient to snuff him, when God has such a controversy with him. First, For men's blood, and the blood of them that had been made in the time of his ambition and revenge, especially for the blood of Israelites, which is in a special manner precious to God. Secondly, For the violence of the land, his laying waste so many countries, and destroying the fruits of the earth, especially in the land of Israel. Thirdly, For the violence of the city, the many cities that he had turned into ruined heaps, especially Jerusalem the holy city, and of all that dwelt therein, who were ruined by him. Note, The violence done by proud men, to greaten and enrich themselves, will be called over again, (and must be accounted for,) another day, by him to whom vengeance belongs.

(2.) Here is a war against him for coveting still more, and aiming to be all the richer. v. 9-11. The covenant so lovingly bestowed upon him is so easily broken, the covenant so lovingly given to him is so easily broken by covetousness. Note, Covetousness is a very evil thing in a family; it brings disquiet and uneasiness into it; he is greedy of gain, troubles his own house; and this is what was written of God concerning them, and upon all the affairs of it. Wo to him that gains an evil gain; so the margin reads it. There is a lawful gain, which by the blessing of God may be a comfort to a house; (a good man leaves an inheritance to his children's children;) but what is got by fraud and injustice is ill-gotten, and will be bad gain, will not only do no good to a family, but will bring poverty and ruin upon it. Now observe,

[1.] What this covetous wretch aims at; it is to set his nest on high, to raise his family to some greater dignity than it had before arrived at; or to set it, as he apprehends, out of the reach of danger, that he may be delivered from the power of evil; that it may be in the power of his enemies to do him a mischief, or so much as to disturb his repose. Note, It is common for men to pretend it as an excuse for their covetousness and ambition, that they only consult their own safety, and aim to secure themselves: and yet they do but deceive themselves, when they think their wealth will be a strong city to them, and a high wall; for it is set in their own conceits, Prov. xviii. 11.

[2.] What he will get by it; Thou hast consulted, not safety, but shame, to thy house, by cutting off many people, v. 10. Note, An estate raised by iniquity is a scandal to a family. Those that cut off, or undermine others, to make room for themselves, that impoverish others to enrich themselves, and then consultation cannot but bring woe upon them a mark of infamy. Yet that is not the worst of it; "Thou hast sinned against thine own soul, hast brought that under guilt and wrath, and endangered that." Note, Those that do wrong to their neighbour, do a much greater wrong to their own souls. But if the sinner pleads, Not guilty, and thinks he has managed his frauds and violence with so much art and contrivance, that they cannot be proved upon him, let him know that if there be no other witnesses against him, the stones shall cry out of the wall against him, and the beam out of the timber in the roof shall answer it, shall second it, shall witness it, that the money and materials whereby, when he built the house, were unjustly gotten, v. 11. The stones and timber cry for vengeance, the green vs. 12. The very earth calls on the gods under the sin of man, and waits to be delivered from that bondage of corruption.

(3.) Here is a war against him for building a town and a city by blood and extortion; (v. 12.) He builds a town, and is himself lord of it; he establishes a city, and makes it his royal seat: so Nebuchadnezzar did; v. 30. (1.) Has he built the house of the kingdom? But it is built with the blood of his own subjects, whom he has oppressed, and the blood of his neighbours, whom he has unjustly invaded; it is established by iniquity, by the unrighteous laws that are made for the security of it. Wo to him that doth so; for the towns and cities thus built can never be established, they will fall, and their founders be buried in the ruins of them. Babylon, which was built by blood and iniquity, did not continue long, its decay soon came to fall; and then this wo took effect, when that prophecy, which is expressed as a history, (Isi. xxii. 9.) proved a history indeed; Babylon is fallen, is fallen! And the destruction of that city was,

[1.] The shame of the Chaldeans, who had taken so much pains, and were at such a vast expense, to fortify it; (v. 13.) Is it not of the Lord of hosts, that the people who have laboured so hard to defend their city shall labour in the very fire, shall see the out-works which they confided in the strength of set on fire, and shall labour in vain to save them? Or, they, in their pursuits of worldly wealth and honour, will exalt themselves to great heights above those who are set in their place; but the great hazard, as they labour in the fire do. The word that can be said of the labourers in God's vineyard is, that they have borne the burden and heat of the day; (Matth. xx. 12.) but these that are eager in their worldly pursuits, labour in the very fire, make themselves perfect slaves to their huts. There is not a greater drudge in the world than he that is under a great burden of covetousness. And what comes of it? Though they take a world of pains, they are but poorly paid for it; for, after all, they wearied themselves for very vanity; they were told it was vanity, and when they find themselves disappointed of it, and disappointed in it, they will own it is worse than vanity, it is vexation of spirit.

[2.] It was the honour of God, as a God of impartial justice and irresistible power; for by the r of the Chaldean monarchy (which all the world could not but take notice of) the earth was filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, v. 14. The Lord is known by these judgments which he executes; especially when he is pleased to look upon for the glory of God in the face of Christ, to make himself to be God alone, Job xl. 11, 12. See what good God brings out of the staining and sinking of earthly glory; he thereby manifests and magnifies his own glory, and fills the earth with the knowledge of it as plentifully as the waters cover the sea, which he deep, spread far, and shall not be dried up until time shall be no more. Such is the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ, given by the gospel; (2 Cor. iv. 6.) and such was the knowledge of his glory by the miraculous ruin of Babylon. Note, Such as will not he taught the knowledge of God's glory by the judgments of his hand, shall be made to know and acknowledge it by the judgments of his hand.

15. Wo unto him that giveth his neighbour drink, that putteth thy bottle to him, and makest him drunken also, that thou mayest look on their nakedness! 16. Thou art filled with shame for glory: drink thou also, and let thy foreskin be uncovered: the cup of the Lord's right hand shall be turned unto thee, and shameful spewing shall be on thy glory. 17. For the violence of Lebanon shall cover thee, and the spoil of beasts, which made them afraid, because of men's blood, and for the violence of the land, of the city, and of all that dwell therein. 18. What proflieth the graven image, that the maker thereof hath graven it; the molten image, and a teacher of lies, that the maker of his work trusteth therein, to make dumb idols! 19. Wo unto him that saith to the wood, Awake; to the dumb stone, Arise, it shall teach! Behold, it is laid over with gold and silver, and there is no breath at all in the midst of it. 20. But the Lord is in his holy temple; let all the earth keep silence before him.

The three foregoing articles, upon which the woes here are grounded, are very near akin to each other. The criminals charged by them are oppressors and extortioners, that raise estates by rapine and injustice; and it is mentioned here again, (v. 17.) the same that was said, v. 8. For that is the crime upon which the greatest stress is laid; it is because of men's blood, innocent blood, barbarously and unjustly shed, which is a provoking, crying thing; it is for the violence of the land, of the city, of the house of God, which is a curse, in which, God will certainly reckon for, sooner or later, as the Asserter of right, and the Avenger of wrong.

But here are two articles more, of a different nature, which carry a wo to all those in general to whom they belong, and particularly to the Babylonian monarchs, by whom the people of God were taken and held captives. The pronouns of drunkenness stand here impeached and condemned. Belshazzar was one of those; he was so, remarkably, that very night that the prophecy of this chapter was fulfilled in the period of his life and kingdom, when he drank wine before a thousand of his lords, (Dan. v. 1.) began the healths and forced them to pledge him. And perhaps it was one reason why the succeeding monarchs of Persia made it a law of their kingdom, that in drinking none should compel, but they should do according to every man's pleasure, (as we find, Esth. t. 8.) because they had seen in the kings of Babylon their neighbourhood, who is in want, wronging healths, and making people drunk. But the wo here stands firm and very fearful against all those, whatever they are, who are guilty of this sin at any time, and in any place, from the stately palace (where that was) to the paltry ale-house. Observe, 1. Who the sinner is, that is here article against; it is he that makes his neighbour drunk, v. 15. To give a neighbour drink, who has enough already, and more than enough, with design to intoxicate him, that he may expose himself, may talk foolishly, and make himself ridiculous, may disclose secret concerns, or be drawn in to agree to a bad bargain for himself—this is abominable wickedness; and those who are guilty of it, who make a practice of it, and take a pride and pleasure in it, are rebels against God, and God will cast them in the fire for the devil in hell, and his cursed interests, and enemies to men on earth, and their honour and welfare; they are like the son of Nebat, who sinned and made Israel to sin. To entice others to drunkenness, to put the bottle to them, that they may be allured to it by its charms, by looking on the wine when it is red, and gives its colour in the cup; or to force them to it (being obliged to it) by the club (and club-law: indeed they are) to drink so many glasses, and so filled, is to do what we can, and perhaps more than we know of, toward the murder both of soul and body; and those that do so, have a great deal to answer for.

2. What the sentence is, that is here passed upon him. There is a wo to him, (v. 15.) and a punishment, (v. 16.) he shall be turned unto him; the cup of drunkenness of his neighbour! The cup of fury, the cup of trembling, the cup of the Lord's right hand, shall be turned unto him; the power of God shall be armed against him. That cup which had gone round among the nations, to make them a desolation, an astonishment, and a hissing, which had made them stumble and fall, so that they could rise no more, shall at length be put into the hand of the king of Babylon, as was foretold, Jer. xxv. 13, 16, 18, 26, 27. Thus the New Testament Babylon, which had made the nations drunk with the cup of her fornications, shall have blood given her to drink, for she is worthy, Rev. xviii. 3, 6. (2.) Does he take a pleasure in putting his neighbour to shame? He shall himself be loaded with contempt. Thou art filled with shame, and thy neighbour also, shalt thou be filled with shame, more than ever thou wast with glory; and the glory thou hast been filled with, shall but serve to make thy shame the more grievous to thyself, and the more ignominious in the eyes of others. Thou also shalt drink of the cup of trembling, and shalt expose thyself by thy fear and cowardice, which shall shame thee, and shall make thee drink with shame; and all about thee shall load thee with disgrace, for shameful spewing shall be on thy glory, on that which thou hast most prized thyself in, thy dignity, wealth, and dominion; those whom thou hast made drunk, shall themselves spew upon it. For the violence of Lebanon shall cover thee, and the spoil of beasts; (v. 17.)
thou shalt be hunted and run down with as much violence as ever any wild beasts in Lebanon were, shall be spotted as they are, and thy male shall fall asleep; for thou art as one of the beasts that are made thee afraid, and therefore they triumph when they have got the mystery of thee." Or, "It is because of the violence thou hast done to Lebanon, that is, the land of Israel, (Deut. iii. 25.) and the temple, (Zech. xi. 1.) that God now reckons with thee, that it is the sin that now covers thee."

II. The perpetrators of idolatry stand here impeached and condemned; and this also was a sin that Babylon was notoriously guilty of; it was the mother of harlots; Belshazzar, in his revels, praised his idols. And for this, here is a wo against them, and in them against all others that do likewise, particularly the New Testament Babylon. Now see here,

1. The promoters of idolatry;--they are mad upon their idols; of the Chaldeans are said to be, Jer. i. 38. For, (1.) They have a great variety of idols, their graven images, and molten images, that people may take their choice which they like best. (2.) They are very nice and curious in the framing of them; The maker of the work has performed his part admirably well, the fashioner of his work, (Ps. cxlv. 4.) which is not at all like the model in the most skilful execution. (3.) They are at great expense in beautifying and adorning them; They lay them over with gold and silver; because they are things people love and dote upon, wherever they meet with them; they draw up their idols in them, the more effectually to court the adoration of the children of this world. (4.) They have great expectations from them; They think, and the work trusts therein as his god, puts a confidence in it, and gives honour to it as his god. The worshippers of God give honour to him, by offering up their prayers to him, and waiting to receive instructions and directions from him; and these honours they give to their idols. [1.] They pray to them, they say to the wood, Awake for our release, awake and rise to the stubble stone, Arise, and save us, as the church prays to her God, Awake, O Lord, arise, Ps. xlv. 23. They own their images to be a god, by praying to it. Deliver me, for thou art my god, Isa. xlii. 17. Deos gur vagat ille fact--That to which a man addresses petitions, is to him a god. [2.] They consult them as oracles, and expect to be directed and dictated to by them; they speak to the stubble stone, through which the Lord shall teach. What the wicked demon, or no less wicked priest, speaks to them from the image, they receive with the utmost veneration, as of divine authority, and are ready to be governed by it. Thus is idolatry planted and propagated under the specious show of religion and devotion.

2. How the extreme folly of this is exposed. God, by Isaiah, when he foretold the deliverance of his people out of Babylon, largely showed the shameful stupidity and sottishness of idolaters, and so he does here by the prophet, on the like occasion. (1.) Their images, when they have made them, are but mere matter, which is the meanest, lowest rank of being; and all the expense they are upon them, cannot advance them one step above that; they are wholly void both of sense and reason, lifeless, and speechless; it is a dumb idol, a dumb stone, and there is no breath at all in the midst of it, so that the most minute animal, that has but breath and motion, is more excellent than they. They have not so much as the spirit of a beast. (2.) It is not in their power to do their worship as any god; (Cn. xv. 16.) the nature of matter is such, that it is the more poor, if it were cast in some other form, it might be serviceable to some purpose or other of human in life; but as it is made a god of, it is of no profit at all, nor can do its worshippers the least kindness. Nay, (3.) It is so far from profiting them, that it puts a cheat upon them, and keeps them in the dark as to what they do; they are like the drunkards, as it is said, We shall told, but it is a tempest of lies; I, the Lord, presents God as having a body, as being finite, visible, and independent; whereas he is a Spirit, infinite, invisible, and independent; and it confirms those that become vain in their imaginations, in the false notions they have of God, and makes the idea of God to be precarious thing, and what every man pleases; If we will not be like the idolaters, and are all, as God says, our gods, we may say so to any of the creatures of our own fancy, though the chimera be ever so extravagant. An image is a doctrine of vanities, it is falsehood, and a work of errors, Jer. x. 8, 14, 15. It is therefore easy to see what their religion is, and what they aim at, who recommend those teachers of lies as laymen's books, which they are to study and govern themselves by; when men have locked up from them the book of the scriptures in an unknown tongue.

3. How the people of God triumph in him, and therewith support themselves, when the idolaters thus shame themselves; (v. 20.) But the Lord is in his holy temple. (1.) Our Rock is not as their rock, Deut. xxxiii. 31. Theirs are dumb idols, ours is Jehovah, the Lord of hosts, a God of mighty acts, and he is, and not, as theirs, what men please to make him. He is in his holy temple in heaven, the residence of his glory, where we have access to him in the way, not which we have invented, but which he himself has instituted. Compare Ps. cv. 3. But our God is in the heavens, Ps. xi. 4. (2.) The multitude of their gods who serve them, and so much puts them upon support, cannot thrust out our God; for there will be in his holy temple still, and glorious in holiness. They have laid waste his temple at Jerusalem, but he has a temple above, that is out of the reach of their rage and malice, but within the reach of his people's faith and prayers. (3.) Our God will make all the world silent before him; will strike the idolaters as dumb as their idols, convicting them of their folly, and covering them with shame. He will silence the fury of the oppressors, and check their rage against his people. (4.) It is the duty of his people to attend him with silent adorations, (Ps. lxv. 1.) and patiently to wait for his appearing to save them in his own way and time. Be still, and know that he is God, Zech. ii. 13.

CHAP. III.

Still the correspondence is kept up between God and his prophet. In the first chapter, he spoke to God, then God to him, and now he speaks to God. Then he, in the first chapter, was the prophet to the Lord, God spake wholly to him by the spirit of prophesy; now in this chapter, he speaks wholly to God by the spirit of prayer; for he would not let the intercours drop on his side, like a genuine son of Abraham, who returned not to his place until God had left commencing with him, Gen. xviii. 33. The prophet's prayer, in this chapter, is in imitation of David's Psalms, for it is directed to the Lord and the Lord's name is set in the prayer: the Lord's prayer. The prayer is left upon record for the use of the church, and particularly of the Jews in captivity, while they were waiting for their deliverance, promised by the prophet in the foregoing chapters; and earnestly begs of God to relieve and succour his people in affliction, to hasten their deliverance, and to comfort them in the mean time. v. 2. He calls to mind the experience which the church formerly had of God's glorious and gracious appearances on her behalf, when he brought Israel out of Egypt through the wilderness to Canaan, and there many a time wrought wonderful salvation on their behalf. v. 3. This affects himself with a holy concern for the present trouble of the church, but encourages himself and others to hope that the issue will be comfortable and glorious at last, though all visible means fail. v. 16, 19.

1. A PRAYER of Habakkuk the prophet upon Shigionoth. 2. O LORD.
HABAKKUK, III.

I have heard thy speech, and was afraid: O Lord, revive thy work in the midst of the years, in the midst of the years make known; in wrath remember mercy.

This chapter is entitled, a prayer of Habakkuk; it is a meditation with himself, an intercession for the church. Prophets were praying men, this prophet was so. He is a prophet and he shall pray for thee; (Gen. xx. 7.) and sometimes they prayed for even those whom they prophesied against. They that were intimately acquainted with the mind of God concerning future events, knew better than others how to order their prayers, and what to pray for, and, in the foresight of troublous times, could lay up a stock of prayers, that might then receive a gracious answer, and so be serving the church by their prayers when their prophesying was over. This prophet had found God ready to answer his requests and complaints before, and therefore now repeats his applications to him. Because God has inclined his ear to us, we must resolve that therefore we will call upon him as long as we live.

1. The prophet owns the receipt of God’s answer to his former representation, and the impression it made upon him; (v. 2.) “O Lord, I have heard thy speech, thy hearing,” (so some read it,) “that which thou wouldst have us hear, the decree that is gone out in heaven, and the work of God is in the hands of all flesh;” (Isa. liv. 1.) received thine, and it is before me. Note, Those that with all their prudence and diligence, do so far as they can, to attend on God, according to his own method of commandment, yet shall not be able to discover the import and meaning of the word; the way of God is higher than our way, and the thoughts of his heart than our thoughts (Isa. xlv. 7.)

2. He earnestly prays that for the elect’s sake these days of trouble might be shortened, or the trouble of these days mitigated and moderated, or the people of God supported and comforted under it. He thinks it very long to wait till the end of the years; perhaps he refers to the seventy years fixed for the continuance of the captivity, and therefore “Lord,” (says he,) “do something on our behalf, in the midst of the years, those years of our distress; though we be not delivered, and our oppressors destroyed, yet let us not be abandoned and cast off.” (1.) Do something! “thine own cause; revive thy work and come to deliver thy people;” (Isa. lxii. 11.) (that is the work of God’s own hand, formed by him, formed for him;) “revive that, even when it walks in the midst of trouble,” Ps. cxxxviii. 7. 8. Grant thy people a little reviving in their bondage, Ezra ix. 8. Ps. lxxxv. 6. Preserve alive thy work; (so some read it;) though the church be chastened, let it not be killed, though it have not its liberty, yet continue its life, give a remnant to come out of the latter generation. Revive the work of thy grace in us, by sanctifying the trouble to us, and supporting us under it, though the time be not yet come, even the set time for our deliverance out of it; whatever becomes of us, though we be as dead and dry bones, Lord, let thy work be revived, let not that sink, and go back, and come to nothing.” (2.) “Do something for thine own honour; in the midst of the years make known, make thyself known, for now verily thou art a God that hidest thyself, (Isa. xlv. 13.) make known thy power, thy pity, thy promise, thy providence in the government of the world, for the safety and welfare of thy church. Though we be buried in obscurity, yet, Lord, make thyself known; whatever becomes of Israel, let not the God of Israel be forgotten in the world, but discover himself even in the midst of the dark years, before then art expected to appear.” When in the midst of the years of the captivity God miraculously saved the three children in the fiery furnace, and humbled Nebuchadnezzar, this prayer was answered. In the midst of the years make known. (3.) “Do something for thy people’s comfort; In wrath remember mercy, and make that known; show us thy mercy, O Lord,” Ps. lxv. v. 7. They see God’s displeasure against them in their troubles, and that makes them grievous indeed; there is wrath in the bitter cup, that therefore they deplore, and are earnest in begging that in the midst of wrath God would remember mercy to them, would make it appear that he is a merciful God, and they are vessels of his mercy. Note, Even those that are under the terrors of God’s wrath, must not despair of his mercy; and mercy, mere mercy, is that which we must flee to for refuge, and rely upon as our only hope. He does not say, Remember our merit, but, Lord, remember thy own mercy.

3. God came from Teman, and the Holy One from mount Paran. Selah. His glory covered the heavens, and the earth was full of his praise. 4. And his brightness was as the light; he had horns coming out of his hand: and there was the hiding of his power. 5. Before him went the pestilence, and burning coals went forth at his feet. 6. He stood and measured the earth: he beheld, and drove asunder the nations; and the everlasting mountains were scattered, the perpetual hills did bow: his ways are everlasting. 7. I saw the tents of Cushan in affliction: and the curtains of the land of Midian did tremble. 8. Was the Lord displeased against the rivers? was thine anger against the rivers? was thy wrath against the sea, that thou didst ride upon thy horses, and thy chariots of salvation? 9. Thy bow was made quite naked, according to the oaths of the tribes, even thy word. Selah. Thou didst cleave the earth with rivers. 10. The mountains saw thee, and they trembled; the overflowing of the water passed by: the deep uttered his voice, and lifted up his hands on high. 11. The sun and moon stood still in their habitation: at the light of thine arrows they went, and at the shining of thy glittering spear. 12. Thou didst march through the land in indignation, thou didst thresh the heathen in anger. 13. Thou wentest forth for the salvation of thy people, even for salvation with thine anointed; thou woundedst the head out of the house of the wicked, by discovering the foundation unto the neck. Selah. 14. Thou didst strike through with his staves the head of his villages; they came out as a whirlwind to scatter me: their rejoicing was as to devour the poor secretly. 15. Thou didst walk through the sea with thy horses, through the heap of great waters.

It has been the usual practice of God's people, when they have been in distress, and ready to fall into despair, to help themselves by recalling to their minds encouraging passages, and reviving them, considering the days of old, and the years of ancient times, (Ps. lxxxv. 5.) and pleading them with God in prayer, as he is pleased sometimes to plead them with himself; (Isa. lxi. 11.) Then he remembered the days of old. This is that which the prophet does here, and he looks as far back as the first forming them into a people, when they were brought by miracles out of Egypt, a house of bondage through the wilderness, a land of drought, into Canaan, then possessed by mighty nations. He that thus brought them at first into Canaan through so much difficulty, can now bring them thither again out of Babylon, how great soever the difficulties are that lie in the way. Those works of wonders, wrought of old, are declared as encouraging for the greater encouragement to the faith of God's people in their present straits.

1. God appeared in his glory, so as he never did before or since: (v. 3. 4.) He came from Teman, even the rock. One from mount Paran. This refers to the visible display of the glory of God, when he gave the law upon mount Sinai, as appears from Deut. xxxiii. 23. His prosperity was borrowed. Then the Lord came down upon mount Sinai in a cloud, (Exod. xii. 20.) and his glory was as the devouring fire; not only to enforce the law he then gave them, but to assure the deliverance he had wrought for them, and to magnify it; for the first word he said there was, I am the Lord thy God, that brought thee out of the land of Egypt. That appear in this glory, am the Author of that work. Then his glory covered the heavens, which shone with the reflection of that glorious appearance of his; the earth also was full of his praise, or of his splendour, as some read it. People at a distance saw the cloud and fire on the top of mount Sinai, and praised the God of Israel, or the earth was full of his praise; Mt. vii. 29. The earth, which were to be prepared. His brightness was as the light, as the light of the sun when he goes forth in his strength: he had horns, or bright beams, (so it should be rendered,) coming out of his side or hand; rays of glory were darted forth around him; and with some rays borrowed thence it was that Moses's face shone when he came down from that mount of glory. Some by the horns, that is, his power; for the word is, coming out of his hand, understand the two tables of the law, which perhaps, when God delivered them to Moses, though they were tables of stone, had a glory round them; those books were girt with beams, and so it agrees with Deut. xxxiv. 2. From his right hand went a fiery law for them. It is added, And there was the hiding of his power; there was his hidden power, in the rays that came out of his hand; the operations of his power, compared with what he could have done, were rather the hiding of it than the discovery of it; the secrets of his power, as well as of his wisdom, are double to that which is, Job xi. 6. 2. God sent plagues upon Egypt, for the humbling of Pharaoh, and the obilige of him to let the people go; (v. 5.) Before him went the pestilence, which slew all the first-born of Egypt in one night; and burning coals went forth at his feet, when, in the plague of hail, there was fire mingled with hail; burning diseases, (so the margin reads it,) some think, those that wasted Egypt; others, the three plagues of murrain, when the Canaanites were diminished before Israel was brought in upon them. These were at his feet, at his coming, for they are at his command; he says to them, Go, and they go, Come, and they come, Do this, and they do it.

3. He divided the land of Canaan to his people Israel, and expelled the heathen from before them; (v. 6.) He stood and smote them round about, and divided them as for an inheritance to Israel his people; (Deut. xxxii. 8, 9.) He beheld, and dwelleth upon the nations that were in possession of it; though they combined together against Israel, God dispersed and discomfited them before Israel. Or, He exerted such a mighty power as was enough to shake in pieces all the nations of the earth. Then the everlasting mountains were scattered, and the perpetual hills did bow; the mighty princes and potentates of Canaan, that seemed as high, as strong, and as firmly fixed, as the mountains and hills, were broken to pieces, they and their kingdoms were totally subdued. Or, The power of God was so exerted, as to have shaken the mountains and hills; and, and Sinai did tremble, and the adjacent hills; see v. 9. His everlasting works are done, everlasting; all the motions of his providence are according to his eternal counsels; and he is the same for ever, that which he was yesterday and to-day. His covenant is unchangeable, and his mercy endures for ever. When he drove asunder the nations of Canaan, one might have seen the tents of Cushan in affliction, and the curtains of the land of Midian trembling, all the inhabitants of the neighboring countries taking the alarm; and though they were not in the commission given to Israel to destroy, nor their land within the warrant given to Israel to possess, yet they thought their own house in danger, when their neighbor's house was on fire, and therefore they were in a great fright, v. 7. Bahak the king of MeMo was so, Numb. xxii. 3, 4. Some make the tents of Cushan to be in affliction, when, in the days of judge Othniel, God delivered Cushan-rishathaim into his hand: (Judg. iii. 8.) and the curtains of the land of Midian to tremble, when, in the days of judge Gideon, a barley cake, in a dream, threw the tent of Midian, Judg. vii. 13.

4. He divided the Red sea and Jordan, when they stood in the way of Israel's progress, and yet fetched water to water out of Jordan for Israel wanted it; v. 8. One would have thought that God was displeased with the rivers, and that his wrath was against the sea, for he made them give way and flee before him, when he rode upon his horses and chariots of salvation, as a general at the head of his forces, mighty to save. Note, God's chariots are not so much chariots of state to himself as chariots of salvation to his people; it is his glory to be a Victorious Saviour. This seems to be referred to again, (v. 15.) Thou didst walk through the sea, through the Red sea, with thine horses, in the pillar of cloud and fire; (that was his chariot borne by angels;) thus then didst thou walk secure, and so as to accommodate thyself to the slow pace that Israel could go, as Jacob tenderly drove, in consideration of his weakly stock; v. 9. Thou didst walk through the heat, or midst, of great waters; and Israel likewise wasted through the deep as a horse in the wilderness, Isa. lxiii. 13, 14. When they came to enter Canaan, the overflowing of the water passed by; that is, Jordan, which at that time overflowed all his banks, was divided, Josh. iii. 15. Note, When the difficulties in the way of public good are the greatest, and when the time is most insuperable, when they rise to the height, and overflow, yet then God can put them by, break through them, and get over them. Then the deep uttered his voice, when the Red sea and Jordan being divided, the waters roared and made a noise, as if they were sensible of the restraint they were under from proceeding in their natural course, and compel the waters to give them a shock to the handles, or sides, on high, (for the waters stood up on a heap, Josh. iii. 16,) as if they would have made opposition to the orders given them; they lifted up their voice, lifted up their waves; but in vain, the Lord on high was mightier than they, Ps. xc. 3, 4. With the dividing of the sea and Jordan, notice is again taken of the trembling of the mountains, as if the stop given to the waters gave a shock to the mountains, or hills; they are put together, Ps. cxix. 3, 4. When the sea saw it, and fled, and Jordan was driven back, the mountains skipped like rams, and the little hills like lambs. The whole creation yielded, earth and waters trembled at the presence of the Lord, at the presence of the mighty God of Jacob. But (as Mr. Cowley paraphrases it)

Fly where thou wilt, thou sea, and Jordan's current cease;
Jordan, there is no need of thee;
For at God's word, wher'er he please,
The rocks shall weep new waters forth instead of these.

So here, Thou didst clear the earth with rivers;
channels were made in the wilderness, such as seemed to cleave the earth, for the waters to run in, which issued out of the rock, to supply the camp of Israel, and the rest of the people while they were led from moves. Note, The God of nature can alter and control the powers of nature which way he pleases; can turn waters into crystal rocks, and rocks into crystal streams.

5. He arrested the motion of the sun and moon, to be friend and complete Israel's victories; (v. 11.) The sun and moon stood still at the prayer of Joshua, that they might go over Jordan, if so be that the benefit of the night might favour their escape; they stood still in their habitation in the heaven, (Ps. xix. 4,) but with an eye to Gideon and the valley of Ajalon, where God's work was in the doing, and of which they, though at so vast a distance, attended the motions. At the light, at the direction of thine arrows, they went, and at the shining of thy glittering spear, they followed Israel's arrow, to favor them; according to the intimations of the arrows God shot, (as Joshua's arrows, 1 Sam. xx. 20,) and which way so ever his spear pointed, (the glittering light of which they acknowledged to outshine theirs,) that way they directed their influences, benign to Israel, and malignant against their enemies, as when the stars in their courses fought against Sisera. Note, The heavenly bodies, as well as earth and seas, are at God's command, and, when he pleases, at Israel's service too.

6. He carried on, and completed, Israel's victories over the nations of Canaan, and their kings; he slew great kings and famous, Ps. cxxxvi. 17, 18. This is largely insisted upon here, as a proper plea with God, to enforce the present petition, that he would restore them again to that land, which they were, at the time of the exodus, so to say, their own. He followed them in the land, from end to end, in indignation, as seeming to let that wicked generation of Canaanites any longer possess so good a land. He marched even fistulio—without disdain; (so some;) despising their confederacies.

(3.) He threshed the heathen in anger; trod them down, nay, he trod them out, as corn in the floor; to give them, and what they had, to be meat to his people Israel; Mic. iv. 13. (4.) He wounded the heads out of the house of the wicked; he destroyed the families of the Canaanites, and wounded their princes, the heads of their families; nay, he cut off the heads of the nations or countries, and took them even to the neck. Are they a building? They are razed even to the foundation. Are they a body? They are plunged in deep mire even to the neck, so that they cannot get out, or help themselves. He brake the heads of the levithian in pieces, Ps. lxxix. 14. Some apply this to Christ's victories over Satan and the powers of darkness, in which he wounded the heads of the confederacies of the world; Ps. cxv. 6. (5.) He struck through with his staves the head of the villages; (v. 14.) with Israel's stones God struck through the head of the villages of the enemies, whether Egypt or Canaan. Staves shall do the same execution as swords, when God pleases to make use of them. The enemy came out with the utmost force and fury, as a whirlwind to scatter me; (says Israel,) for many a time have they thus afflicted me, thus attacked me, from my youth, Ps. cxix. 1.

Pharaoh, when he pursued Israel to the Red sea, came out as a whirlwind; so did the kings of Canaan in their confederacies against Israel. Their rejoicing was as to devour the poor secretly; they were as confident of success in their enterprises as ever any great man was of devouring a poor man, though so much the less care was taken of him, for against him was carried on with secrecy. But God disappointed them, and their pride did but make their fall the more shameful, and God's care of his hower the more illustrious. (6.) He walked to the sea with his horses; (so some read it, v. 15.) he carried Israel's victories to the great sea, which was opposite to that side of Canaan at which they entered, so that they from thence to Mount Hermon and Sinai, and from Sinai to Mount Caphor, was a journey by water, and not by land.

Now there were three things that God had an eye to, in giving Israel so many bloody victories over the Canaanites. [1.] He would hereby make good his promise to the fathers, it was according to the oaths of the tribes, then heaven, ix. He had sworn this land to the tribes of Israel, it was his oath to Isaac, confirmed to Jacob, and repeated many a time to the tribes of Israel; Unto thee will I give the land of Canaan. This word God will accomplish, though Israel be ever so unworthy, (Deut. ix. 5,) and their enemies ever so many and mighty. Note, What God does for his tribes, is according to the oaths of the tribes, according to what he has said and sworn to them; for he is faithful that promised. [2.] He would hereby show his kindness to his people, because of their relation to him, and his interest in them; Thou wentest forth for the salvation of thy people, v. 13. All the powers of nature are shaken, and the course of nature changed, and every thing seems to be thrown into disorder, and all is for the salvation of God's people. There are a people in the world, who are God's people, and their salvation is that which he has in his eye, in all the operations of his providence. Heaven and earth shall sooner come together than any of the links in the golden chain of their salvation shall be broken: and even that which seems most unlikely, shall by an overruling hand be made to work for their salvation; Phil. i. 19. [3.] He would hereby give his people a form of the redemption of the world, by Jesus Christ. It is for salvation with thine anointed; with Joshua, who led the armies of Israel, and was a figure of him whose name he bare, even Jesus, our Joshua. What God did for his Israel of old, was done with an eye to his Anointed, for the sake of the Mediator, who was both the Founder and Pian ation of the covenant made with them. It was salvation with him, for, in all the salvations wrought for them, God looked upon the face of the Anointed, and did them by him.

16. When I heard, my belly trembled: my lips quivered at the voice: rottenness entered into my bones, and I trembled in myself, that I might rest in the day of trou-le: when he cometh up unto the people, he will invade them with his troops. 17. Although the fig-tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be in the vines; the labour of the olive shall fail, and the fields shall yield no meat; the flock shall be cut off from the fold, and there shall be no herd in the stalls: 18. Yet I will rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my salvation. 19. The Lord God is my strength, and he will make my feet like hinds’ feet, and he will make me to walk upon my high places. To the chief singer on my stringed instruments.

Within the compass of these few lines we have the prophet in the highest degree, both of trembling and triumphing; such are the varieties both of the state and of the spirit of God’s people in this world. There shall be no more trembling, but everlasting triumphs.

1. The prophet had foreseen the prevalence of the church’s enemies, and the long continuance of the church’s troubles; and the sight made him tremble, v. 16. This goes on with what he had said, (v. 2,) “I have heard thy speech, and was afraid; when I heard what sad times were coming upon the church, my belly trembled, my lips quivered at the voice; the news made such an impression, that it put me into a perfect ague-fit”—the blood retiring to the heart, to succour that when it was ready to faint, the extreme parts were left destitute of spirits, so that his lips quivered. Nay, he was so weak, and so unable to help himself, that he was as if rotenness had entered into his bones, he had no strength left in him: he had neither strength to stand not in himself, trembled all over him, trembled within him; he yielded to his trembling, and troubled himself, as our Saviour did; his flesh trembled for fear of God, and he was afraid of his judgments, Ps. cxix. 120. He was touched with a tender concern for the calamities of the church, and trembled for fear lest they should end at length in its ruin, and that the name of Israel would be blotted out, as did he think it any disparagement to him, or a reproach to his courage, but freely owned he was one of those that trembled at God’s word, for to them he will look with favour; I tremble in myself that I might rest in the day of trouble. Note, When we see a day of trouble approaching, it concerns us to provide accordingly, and to lay up something in store, and he help within himself at the warning, which we may get in that day; and the best way to make sure rest for ourselves in the day of trouble, is, to tremble within ourselves at the word of God, and the threatenings of that word. He that has joy in store for them that see in tears, has rest in store for them that tremble before him. Good hope through grace is founded in a holy fear. Noah, who was moved with fear, and trembled within himself at the warning, given him of the deluge coming, had the ark for his resting place in the day of that trouble. The prophet tells us what he said in his trembling: his fear was, that, when he comes up to the people, when the Chaldean comes up to the people of Israel, he will when provisions are cut off, to make it appear that man lives not by bread alone, we may have the want of bread supplied by the graces and comforts of God's Spirit, and with the supplies of them. (1.) We shall be strong for our spiritual warfare and work; The Lord God is my Strength, the Strength of my heart. (2.) We shall be swift for our spiritual race; “He will make my feet like hinds' feet, that with enlargement of heart I may run the way of his commands, and outrun my troubles.” (3.) We shall be successful in our spiritual enterprises; “He will make me to walk upon my high places; I shall gain my point, shall be restored unto my own land, and tread upon the high places of the enemy,” Deut. xxxii. 13.—xxxiii. 29. Thus the prophet, who began his prayer with fear and trembling, concludes it with joy and triumph; for prayer is heart's ease to a gracious soul. When Hannah had prayed, she went her way, and did eat, and her countenance was no more sad. This prophet, finding it so, publishes his experience of it, and puts it into the hand of the chief singer for the use of the church, especially in the day of our captivity.” And though then the harps were hung upon the willow-trees, yet in the hope that they would be resumed, and their right hand retrieve its cunning, which it had forgotten, he set his song upon Shigionoth, (v. 1.) wandering tunes, according to the variable songs, and upon Neginoth, (v. 19.) the stringed instruments. He that is afflicted, and has prayed aright, may then be so easy, may then be so merry, as to sing psalms.
