their sufferings, of the cause of them, and of the temper of his mind, and his behaviour under them, as might prevent their fainting at his tribulations and even minister matter of joy and thanksgiving unto them. He tells them, that Tychicus was a beloved brother, and faithful minister in the Lord. He was a sincere Christian, and so a brother in Christ; he was a faithful minister in the work of Christ; and he was very dear to St. Paul: which makes his love to these Christian Ephesians the more observable, in that he should now part with so good and dear a friend for their sakes, when his company and conversation must have been peculiarly delightful and serviceable to himself. But the faithful servants of Jesus Christ are wont to prefer the public good to their own private or personal interests.

III. He concludes with his good wishes and prayers for them; and not for them only, but for all the brethren, v. 23, 24. His usual benediction was, grace and peace: here it is, Peace be to the brethren, and love with faith. By peace we are to understand all manner of peace; peace with God, peace with conscience, peace among themselves: and all outward prosperity is included in the word; as if he had said, peace and  grace. I wish the continuance and increase of all happiness to you. And love with faith. This in part explains what he means in the following verse by grace: not only grace in the fountain, or the love and favour of God; but grace in the streams, the grace of the Spirit flowing from that divine principle; faith and love including all the rest. It is the continuance and increase of those that he desires for them, in whom they were already begun. It follows, from God the Father, &c. All grace and blessings are derived to the saints from God, through the merit and intercession of Jesus Christ our Lord.

The closing benediction is more extensive than the former; for in this he prays for all true believers at Ephesus, and every where else. It is the undoubted character of all the saints, that they love our Lord Jesus Christ. Our love to Christ is not acceptable, unless it be in sincerity: indeed there is no such thing as love to Christ, whatever men may pretend, where there is not sincerity. The words may be read, Grace be with all them who love our Lord Jesus Christ in incorruption, who continue constant in their love to him, so as not to be corrupted out of it by any blots or seductions whatsoever; and whose love to him is incorruptible by any opposite lust, or the love of any thing displeasing to him. Grace, that is, the favour of God, and all good, (spiritual and temporal,) that is, the product of it, is and shall be with all them who thus love our Lord Jesus Christ. And it is, or ought to be, the desire and prayer of every lover of Christ, that it may be so with all his fellow-Christians. Amen, so be it.

AN

EXPOSITION,

WITH

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS,

OF THE

EPISTLE OF ST. PAUL TO THE PHILIPPIANS.

Completed by Dr. W. Harris.

PHILIPPI was a chief city of the western part of Macedonia, Ἀλέξανδρος τῆς Μακεδονίας πόλις, Acts 16. 12. It took its name from Philip, the famous king of Macedon, who repaired and beautified it; and was afterward made a Roman colony. Near this place were the Campi Philippei, remarkable for the famous battles between Julius Caesar and Pompey the Great; and that between Augustus and Antony on one side, and Cassius and Brutus on the other. But it is most remarkable among Christians for this epistle, which was written when Paul was prisoner at Rome, A. D. 62.

St Paul seems to have had a very particular kindness for the church at Philippi, which he himself had been instrumental in planting; and though he had the care of all the churches, he had, upon that account, a particular fatherly tender care of this. These whom God has employed us to do any good to, we should look upon ourselves both encouraged and engaged to study to do more good to. He locked upon them as his children, and, having begotten them by the gospel, he was desirous by the same gospel to nourish and nurse them up.

I. He was called in an extraordinary manner to preach the gospel at Philippi, Acts 16. 9. A vision appeared to Paul in the night; There stood a man of Macedonia, and prayed him, saying, Come over into Macedonia, and help us. He saw God going before him, and was encouraged to use all means for carrying on the good work which was begun among them, and building upon the foundation which was laid.
II. At Philippi he suffered hard things; he was resurrected, and put into the stocks; (Acts 16. 33.) yet he had not the less kindness for the place for the hard usage he met with there. We must never love our friends the less for the ill treatment which our enemies give us.

III. The beginnings of that church were very small; Lydia was converted there, and the jailer, and a few more: yet that did not discourage him. If good be not done at first, it may be done afterward; and the last works may be more abundant. We must not be discouraged by small beginnings.

IV. It seems, by many passages in this epistle, that this church at Philippi grew into a flourishing church; and, particularly, was very kind to St. Paul. He had reaped of their temporal things, and he made a return in spiritual things. He acknowledges the receipt of a present they had sent him, (ch. 4. 18.) and that when no church communicated with him as concerning giving and receiving besides; (v. 15.) and he gives them a prophet's, an apostle's reward, in this epistle, which is of more value than thousands of gold and silver.

PHILIPPIANS, I.

CHAP. I.

He begins with the inscription and benediction, v. 1, 2. He gives thanks for the saints at Philippi, v. 3. 6. He speaks of his great affection and concern for their spiritual welfare, (v. 7, 8.) his prayers for them, (v. 9, 11.) his care to prevent their offence at his sufferings, (v. 12, 20.) his readiness to glorify Christ by life or death; (v. 21, 26.) and then concludes with a double exhortation to strictness and constancy, v. 27, 30.

1. PAUL and Timotheus, the servants of Jesus Christ, to all the saints in Christ Jesus who are at Philippi, with the bishops and deacons: 2. Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

We have here the inscription and benediction. Observe,

1. The persons writing the epistle—Paul and Timothy. Though Paul was alone divinely inspired, he joins Timothy with himself, to express his own humanity, and put honour upon Timothy. They who are aged, and strong, and eminent, should pay respect to, and support the reputation of, those who are younger, and weaker, and of less note. The servants of Jesus Christ; not only in the common relation of his disciples, but in the peculiar work of the ministry, the high office of an apostle and evangelist. Observe, The highest honour of the greatest apostle, and most eminent ministers, is, to be the servants of Jesus Christ; not the masters of the churches, but the servants of Christ. Observe,

II. The persons to whom it is directed.

1. To all the saints in Christ who were at Philippi. He mentions the church before the ministers, because the ministers are for the church, and for their edification and benefit; not the churches for the ministers, and for their dignity, dominion, and wealth. Not for that we have dominion over your faith, but are helpers of your joy, 2 Cor. 1. 24. They are not only the servants of Christ, but the servants of the church for his sake. Ourseves your servants for Jesus sake, 2 Cor. 4. 5.

Observe, The Christians here are called saints; set apart for God, or sanctified by his Spirit, either by visible profession or real holiness. And they who are not really saints on earth, will never be saints in heaven. Observe, It is directed to all the saints, one as well as another, even the meanest, the poorest, and those of the least gifts. Christ makes no difference; the rich and the poor meet together in him; and the ministers must not make a difference in their care and tenderness upon these accounts. We must not have the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ with respect of persons, James 2. 1. Saints in Christ Jesus; saints are accepted only by virtue of their being in Christ Jesus, or as they are Christians. Out of Christ the best saints will appear sinners, and un able to stand before God.

2. It is directed to the ministers, or church-officers; with the bishops and deacons. The bishops or elders, in the first place, whose office it was to teach and rule; and the deacons, or overseers of the poor, who took care of the outward business of the house of God; the place, the furniture, the maintenance of the ministers, and provision for the poor. These were all the offices which were then known in the church, and which were of divine appointment. The apostle, in the direction of this Christian church, acknowledges but two orders, which he calls bishops and deacons. And whosoever shall consider, that the same characters and titles, the same qualifications, the same acts of office, and the same honour and respect, are every where ascribed throughout the New Testament to those who are called bishops and presbyters, (as Dr. Hammond and other learned men allow,) will find it difficult to make them a different office or distinct order of ministry in the scripture times.

III. Here is the apostolical benediction, (v. 2.) Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ. This is the same, almost word for word, in all the epistles; to teach us, that we must not be shy of forms, though we are not to be tied down to them, especially such as are not scriptural. The only form in the Old Testament is that of a benediction, (Num. 6. 24, 26.) On this wise ye shall bless the children of Israel, saying unto them, The Lord bless thee and keep thee; The Lord make his face shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee; The Lord lift up his light upon thee, and give thee peace. So in the New Testament, the good which is wished is spiritual good, grace and peace; the free favour and good will of God; and all the blessed fruits and effects of it; and that from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ; jointly from them both, though in a different way. Observe, 1. No peace without grace. Inward peace springs from a sense of divine favour. 2. No grace and peace but from God our Father, the Fountain and Original of all blessings; the Father of lights, from whom cometh down every good and perfect gift, James 1. 17. 3. No grace and peace from a Father, but in and through our Lord Jesus Christ. Christ, as Mediator, is the Channel of conveyance of all spiritual blessings to the church, and directs the disposal of them to all his members.

3. I thank my God upon every remembrance of you, 4. (Always in every prayer of mine for you all making request with joy. 5. For your fellowship in the gospel, from the first day until now, 6. Being confident of this very thing, that he who hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ: Some, by their fellowship in the gospel, understand their liberality toward propagating of the gospel, and translate it, not communication, but communication. But comparing it with Paul's thanksgiving on the account of other churches, it rather seems to be taken more generally, for the fellowship which they had, in faith and hope and love, with all good Christians; a fellowship in gospel promises, ordinances, privileges, and hopes; and this from the first day unto now.

2. For the confidence he had concerning them; (v. 6.) Being confident of this very thing, &c. Observe, The confidence of Christians is the great comfort of Christians, and we may fetch matter of praise from our hopes as well as from our joys; we must give thanks not only for what we have the present possession and evidence of, but for what we have the future prospect of. Paul speaks with much confidence concerning the good estate of others; hoping well concerning them in the judgment of charity, and being confident in the judgement of faith, that if they were sincere they should be happy. That he who hath begun a good work in you, will perform it unto the day of Jesus Christ. A good work among you—view, so may be read: understand it in the general, of the planting of the church among them. He who hath planted Christianity in the world, and preserves it as long as the world stands, Christ will have a church till the mystery of God shall be finished, and the mystical body completed. The church is built upon a rock, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. But it is rather to be applied to particular persons, and then it speaks of the certain accomplishment of the work of grace wherever it be begun. Observe here, (1.) The work of grace is a good work; a blessed work, for it makes us good, and is an earnest of good to us. It makes us like God, and fits us for the enjoyment of God. That may well be called a good work, which does us the greatest good. (2.) Wherever this good work is begun, it is of God's beginning; He has begun a good work in you. We could not begin it ourselves, for we are by nature dead in trespasses and sins; and what can dead men do toward themselves? or how can they begin to act, till they are revived in the same respect in which they are said to be dead? It is God who quickens them who are thus dead, Eph. 2. 1. Col. 2. 13. (3.) The work of grace is but begun in this life; it is not finished here; as long as we are in this imperfect state, there is still something more to be done. (4.) If the same God who begins the good work, did not undertake the carrying and finishing it, it would be for ever unfinished. He must perform it, who began it. (5.) We may be confident, or well persuaded, that God not only will not forsake, but that he will finish and crown, the work of his own hands. For, as for God, his work is perfect. (6.) The work of grace will never be perfected till the day of Jesus Christ, the day of his appearance, when he shall come to judge the world, and finish his mediacion, then this work will be complete, and the top-stone will be brought forth with shoutings. We have the same expression, 1. 10. 7. Even as it is meet for me to think this of you all, because I have you in my heart: insomuch as both in my bonds, and in the defence and confirmation of the gospel, we all are partakers of my grace. 3. For God is my record, how greatly I long after you all in the bowels of Jesus Christ.
9. And this I pray, that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge and all judgment; that ye may approve things that are excellent; that ye may be sincere, and without offence, till the day of Christ; being filled with the fruits of righteousness, which are by Jesus Christ, unto the glory and praise of God.

These verses contain the prayers he put up for them. Paul often lets his friends know what it was he longed for them, and that they might know what to beg for themselves, and he directs the things he prays for them by his own prayers; and that they might be encouraged to hope they should receive from God the quickening, strengthening, establishing, comforting grace, which so powerful an intercessor as Paul was, asked of God for them. It is an encouragement to us, to know that we are prayed for by our friends, who have reason to think, have an interest at the throne of grace for us. It teaches them that they should pray for each other; and that they might labour to answer his prayers for them; for by that it would appear that God had answered them, Paul, in praying thus for them, expected good concerning them. It is an inducement to us to do our duty, that we may not disappoint the expectations of praying friends and ministers. He prays,

1. That they might be a loving people, and that good affections might abound among them; That your love may abound yet more and more. He means it of their love to God, and one another, and all men. Love is the fulfilling both of the law and of the gospel. Observe, They who abound much in any grace, have still need to abound more and more; because there is still something wanting in it, and we are imperfect in our best attainments.

2. That they might be a knowing, judicious people; that love might abound in knowledge, and in all judgment. It is not a blind love that will recommend us to God, but a love grounded upon knowledge and judgment. We must love God, because of his infinite excellence and loveliness; and love our brethren, because of what we see of the image of God upon them. Strong passions, without knowledge and a settled judgment, will not make us complete in the will of God, and sometimes do more hurt than good. The Jews were very knowing, but not according to knowledge, and were transported by it to violence and rage, Rom. 10. 2. John 16. 2.

3. That they might be a discerning people. This would be the effect of their knowledge and judgment; That ye may approve the things which are excellent; (v. 10.) or, as it is in the margin, Try the things which differ; whether what we are engaged in is excellent, or not, by the example of the trial of them, and discern their difference from other things. Observe, The truths and laws of Christ are excellent things; and it is necessary that we every one approve of them, and esteem them such. We only need to try them, to approve of them, and they will easily recommend themselves to any searching and discerning mind.

4. That they might be an honest, upright-hearted people. Since God is true, gospel-perfection, that in which we should have our conversation in the world, and which is the glory of all our graces. When the eye is single, when we are inward with God in what we do, are really what we appear to be, and mean honestly; then we are sincere.

5. That they might be an insomuch people; that ye may be without offence until the day of Christ; not apt to take offence; and very careful not to give offence to God or their brethren; to live in all good conscience before God. (Acts 23. 1.) and to exercise ourselves to have always a conscience void of offense toward God and toward men, Acts 24. 16. And we must continue to the end blameless, that we may be presented so at the day of Christ. He will present the church without spot or wrinkle; (Eph. 5. 27.) and present believers faultless before the presence of his glory, with exceeding joy, Jude 24.

6. That they might be a fruitful, useful people: (v. 11.) Being filled with the fruits of righteousness, &c. From God is our fruit found, and therefore from him it must be asked. The fruits of righteousness are the evidences and effects of our sanctification; the duties of holiness springing from a renewed heart, the root of the matter in us; being filled with them. Observe, They who do much good, should still endeavour to do more. The fruits of righteousness, brought forth for the glory of God and edification of his church, should really fill us, and wholly take us up. Fear not being emptied by bringing forth the fruits of righteousness, for you will be filled with them. These fruits are by Jesus Christ, by his strength and grace, for without him we can do nothing. He is the Root of the good olive, from which it derives its fatness. We are strong in the grace which is in Christ Jesus, (2 Tim. 2. 1.) and strengthened with might by his Spirit, (Eph. 3. 16.) and they are unto the glory and praise of God. We must not aim at our own glory in our fruitfulness, but at the praise and glory of God; that God may be glorified in all things; (1 Pet. 4. 11.) and whatsoever we do, we must do all to the glory of God, 1 Cor. 10. 31. It is much for the honour of God, when Christians not only are good, but do good, and abound in good works.

12. But I would ye should understand, brethren, that the things which happened unto me have fallen out rather unto the furtherance of the gospel; 13. So that my bonds in Christ are manifest in all the palace, and in all other places; 14. And many of the brethren in the Lord, waxing confident by my bonds, are much more bold to speak the word without fear. 15. Some indeed preach Christ even of envy and strife; and some also of good-will. 16. The one preach Christ of contention, not sincerely, supposing to add affliction to my bonds: 17. But the other of love, knowing that I am set for the defence of the gospel. 18. What then? Notwithstanding, every way, whether in pretence, or in truth, Christ is preached; and I therein do rejoice, yea, and will rejoice. 19. For I know that this shall turn to my salvation through your prayer, and the supply of the Spirit of Jesus Christ, 20. According to my earnest expectation and my hope, that in nothing I shall be ashamed, but that with all boldness, as always, so now also Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life, or by death.

We see here the care the apostle takes to prevent their being offended at his sufferings. He was now a prisoner at Rome; this might be a stumbling-block to those who had received the gospel by his ministry. They might be tempted to think, If this doctrine was indeed of God, God would not suffer one who was so active and instrumental in preaching and propagating it, to be thrown by as a despised broken vessel. They might be shy of owning this doctrine, lest they should be involved in the same trouble themselves. Now, to take off the office of the cross, he expands this dark and hard chapter of his sufferings, and makes it very easy, intelligible, and reconcilable to the wisdom and goodness of God who employed him.

1. He suffered by the sworn enemies of the gospel, who laid him in prison, and aimed at taking away his life; but they should not be stumbled at this, for good was brought out of it, and it tended to the furtherance of the gospel; (v. 12.) The things which happened unto me, have fallen out rather unto the furtherance of the gospel. A strange providence of this, to extract so great a good out of so great an evil, as the enlargement of the gospel by the confinement of the apostle. I suffer trouble as an evil-doer, even unto bonds; but the word of God is not bound, 2 Tim. 2. 9. They cannot imprison the word of God; that has its free course, though I am confined. But how was this?

1. It alarmed those who were without; (v. 13.) "My bonds in Christ, or for Christ, are manifest in all the palace, and in all other places. The emperor, the courtiers, the magistrates, are convinced that I do not propose myself for a good man, with a good conscience. They know that I suffer for Christ, and not for any wickedness. Observe, (1.) Paul’s sufferings made him known at court, where perhaps he would never have otherwise been known; and might lead some of them to inquire after the gospel for which he suffered, which they might otherwise have never heard of. (2.) When his bonds were manifest in the palace, they were manifest in all other places. The accounts of the court have a great influence on the sentiments of all people—Regis ad excentrum totus componitur orbis.

2. It emboldened them who were within. As his enemies were startled at them, so his friends were heartenened by them. Upright men shall be astonishment at this, and the innocent shall stir up himself against the hypocrite. The righteous also shall be glad on his way, and he who and done shall be stronger and stronger, Job 17. 8, 9. So it was here; (v. 14.) Many of the brethren in the Lord waxing confident by my bonds. The expectation of trouble for their religion, in general, perhaps disheartened and discouraged them; but when they saw Paul imprisoned for Christ, they were so far from being deterred from preaching Christ, and praising his name, that it made them the more bold; for they could glory in Paul and in his bonds. If they should be hurried from the pulpit to the prison, they could be reconciled to it, because they would be there in such good company. Besides, the comfort which Paul had in his sufferings, his extraordinary consolations received from Christ in a suffering state, greatly encouraged them. They saw that who served Christ, served a good Master, who would both both crown and comfort them in their sufferings for him. Waxing confident by my bonds. Πονηρίας. They were more fully satisfied and persuaded by what they saw. Observe the power of divine grace; that which was intended by the enemy to discourage the preachers of the gospel, was over-ruled for their encouragement. And are much more bold to speak the word without fear; they see it is to their worst interest, and to their own greatest advantage. Their confidence came them nearer, and their courage preserved them from the power of fear.

II. Paul suffered from false friends as well as from enemies; (v. 15, 16.) Some preach Christ even of ever turns to our salvation, is by the supply of theiaoos and assistance of the Spirit of Christ; and prayer is the appointed means of fetching in that supply. The prayers of the people may bring a supply of the Spirit to their ministers, to enable them in suffering, as well as preaching the gospel.

2. Because it would turn to the glory of Christ; (v. 26.) where he takes occasion to mention his own entire devotedness to the service and honour of Christ. According to my earnest expectation and diligence in prayer on behalf of all saints; praying that the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, would grant you to have of the Spirit of patience and consolation, affection of love; that the work of faith might abound in love; (1 Cor. 15:10.) for the whole body of the church might be built up in love.Observe, (1.) The great desire of every true Christian is, that Christ may be magnified and glorified; that his name may be remembered, and his kingdom come. This is that which the Lord hath set his love on, and his soul delighteth in; that his name may be magnified, and that he may be glorified by his people. (Ps. 5:14.) (2.) They who truly desire that Christ may be magnified, desire that he may be magnified in their bodies. They present their bodies a living sacrifice, (Rom. 12:1.) and yield their members as instruments of righteousness unto God, Rom. 6:13. They are willing to suffer with his suffering, to die with his death, and to die with his death. (2.) To such, as are thus disposed, it is an evidence that they are of his kingdom; (v. 24.) for the glory of Christ, that we should serve him boldly, and not be ashamed of him; with freedom and liberty of mind, and without discouragement. That in nothing I shall be ashamed, but that with all boldness Christ may be magnified. The boldness of Christians is the honour of Christ. (4.) They who make Christ's glory their desire and design, may make it their expectation and hope. It shall be truly mine, it shall be mine, that shall be mine. (v. 24.) If we sincerely we pray, Father, glorify thy name, we may be sure of the same answer to that prayer, which Christ had; I have glorified it, and I will glorify it again, John 12:28. (5.) They who desire Christ may be magnified in their bodies, have a holy indifference whether it be by life or by death. They refer it to him, which way he will make them serviceable to his glory, whether by preaching or suffering, by their diligence or patience; by their living to his honour in working for him, or dying to his honour in suffering for him.

21. For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain. 22. But if I live in the flesh, this is the fruit of my labour: yet what I shall choose I wot not. 23. For I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ; which is far better. 24. Nevertheless to abide in the flesh is more needful for you. 25. And having this confidence, I know that I shall abide and continue with you all for your furtherance and joy of faith; 26. That your rejoicing may be more abundant in Jesus Christ for me by my coming to you again.

We have here an account of the life and death of the blessed Paul. His life was Christ, and his death was gain. Observe, 1. It is the most blessed character of every good Christian, that to him to live is Christ. The glory of Christ ought to be the end of our life, the grace of Christ the principle of our life, and the word of Christ the rule of it. The Christian life is derived from Christ, and directed to him. He is the Principle, Rule, and End of it. All those to whom to live is Christ, to them to die will be gain; it is great gain, a present gain, an everlasting gain. Both in the great loss of a worthy man, for he loses all his comforts and all his hopes; but to a good Christian it is gain, for it is the end of all his weakness and misery, and the perfection of his comforts, and accomplishment of his hopes: it delivers him from all the evils of life, and brings him to the possession of the chiefest good. Or, To me to die is gain, that is, "to the gospel as well as to myself, which will receive a further confirmation by the loss I shall receive by the labours of my life." So Christ would be magnified by his death, v. 20. Some read the whole expression thus; To me, living and dying, Christ is gain; "I desire no more, neither while I live nor when I die, but to win Christ and be found in him."

It might be thought, if death was gain to him, he would be weary of life, and impatient for death. N. says he, (v. 23.) "Having a desire to depart, or to be with Christ." He reckoned his hour well bestowed, if he could be instrumental to advance the honour and interest of the kingdom of Christ in the world. It is the fruit of my labour—perseverentium. It is worth while for a good Christian and a good minister to live in the world, as long as he can glorify God and do good to his church. Yet what I shall choose I know not. It was a blessed strain which Paul was in, not between two evil things, but between two good things. David was in a strain by three judgments—word, famine, and pestilence: Paul was in a strain between two blessings—living to Christ, and being with him. Here we have him reasoning with himself upon the matter.

His inclination was for death. See the power of faith and of divine grace; it can reconcile the mind to death, and make us willing to die, though death is the destruction of our present nature, and the greatest natural evil. We have naturally an aversion to death, but he had an inclination to it; (v. 23.) having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ. Observe, 1. It is living with Christ, which makes a departure desirable to a good man. It is not simply dying, or putting off the body; it is not of itself, and for its own sake, a desirable thing; but it may be necessarily connected with something else, which may make it truly so. If I cannot be with Christ without departing, I shall reckon it desirable on that account to depart. Observe, 2. As soon as ever the soul departs, it is immediately with Christ. This shall then be with me in paradise, Luke 23. 43. Absent from the body, and present with the Lord. Observe, 3. It is to be after the flesh, as well as the spirit. Which is far better, &c. is far better in an exceeding, or vastly preferable. They who know the value of Christ and heaven, will readily acknowledge it far better to be in heaven than to be in this world, to be with Christ than to be with any creature; for in this world we are compassed about with sin, born to trouble, born to sin to it: but if we come to be with Christ, farewell sin and temptation, and death also; for I am in a strain in the first in this life, God has any work for them to do. Paul's strain was not between living in this world and living in heaven; between these two there is no comparison: but his strain was between serving Christ in this world and enjoying him in another. Still it was Christ that his heart was upon: though, to advance the interest of Christ and his church, he chose rather to tarry here, where he met with oppositions and difficulties, and to deny himself for a while the satisfaction of his reward.

And having this confidence, I know that I shall able and continue with you all for your furtherance and joy of faith, v. 25. Observe here, 1. What a great confidence Paul had in the Divine Providence, that it would order all for the best to him. "Having this confidence, that it shall be needful for you that I should abide in the flesh, I know that I shall abide." 2. Whatevber is best for the church, we may be sure God will do. If we know what is needful for building up the body of Christ, we may certainly know what will be: for he will take care of its interests, and do what is best, all things considered, in every condition it is in. 3. Observe what ministers are employed for: our furtherance and joy of faith, our furtherance and joy of faith, our furtherance and joy of faith. 4. What promotes our faith and joy of faith, is very much for our furtherance in the way to heaven. The more faith, the more joy, and the more faith and joy, the more we are furthered in our Christian course. 3. There is need of a settled ministry, not only for the conviction and conversion of sinners, but for the edification of saints, and their furtherance in spiritual attainments.

That your rejoicing may be more abundant in Jesus Christ for me, by my coming to you again, v. 26. They rejoice in the hopes of seeing him, and enjoying his further labours among them. Observe, (1.) The continuance of ministers with the church, ought to be the rejoicing of all who wish well to the church, and to its interests. (2.) All our joys should terminate in Christ. Observe, 3. In good ministers we should be rejoicing in Christ Jesus; because they are but the friends of the Fridegion, and are to be received in his name, and for his sake.

27. Only let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ: that, whether I come and see you, or else be absent, I may hear of your affairs, that ye stand fast in one spirit, with one mind, striving together for the faith of the gospel; 28. And in nothing terrified by your adversaries; which is to them an evident token of perdition, but to you of salvation, and that of God. 29. For unto you it is given in the behalf of Christ, not only to believe on him, but also to suffer for his sake; 30. Having the same conflict which ye saw in me, and now hear to be in me.

The apostle concludes the chapter with two exhortations.

I. He exhorts them to strictness of conversation; (v. 27.) Only let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ. Observe, They who profess the gospel of Christ, should have their conversation as becomes the gospel, or in a subtilness and agreeableness to it. Let it be as becomes those who believe gospel truths, submit to gospel-laws, and depend upon gospel-promises; and with an answerable faith, holiness, and comfort. Let it be in all respects as those who belong to the kingdom of God, are the members of Christ, and have the Spirit of Christ. It is an ornament to our profession, when our conversation is of a piece with it. That whether I come and see you, or else be absent, I may hear of your affairs. He had spoken in v. 26. of his coming to them again, and had spoken it with some assurance, though he was now a prisoner; but he would not have them build upon that. Our religion must not be bound up in the hands of our ministers; "Whether I come or no, let me hear well of you, and do you stand fast." Whether ministers come or no, Christ is always at hand. He is nigh to us, never far from us; and hastens his second coming; the PHILIPPIANS, II.

The apostle proceeds to further exhortations to several duties to be like-minded, and orderly-minded, which he presents from the example of Christ: (v. 1-11.) to be diligent and serious in the Christian course; (v. 12, 13;) and to adorn their Christian profession by several suitable graces, v. 14, 18.

He then concludes with particular notice and commendation of two good ministers, Timothy and Epaphroditus; whom he designed to send to them, v. 19, 20.

1. If there be therefore any consolation in Christ, if any comfort of love, if any fellowship of the Spirit, if any bowels and mercies, 2. Fulfil ye my joy, that ye may be like-minded, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind. 3. Let nothing be done through strife or vain-glory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves. 4. Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others. 5. Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus: 6. Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: 7. But made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men: 8. And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. 9. Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name: 10. That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth: 11. And that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father.

The apostle proceeds in this chapter where he left off in the last, with further exhortations to Christian duties. He presses them largely to like-mindedness, and heavenly-mindedness, in conformity to the example of the Lord Jesus, the great Pattern of humility and love. Where we may observe,

1. The great gospel-precept pressed upon us; that is, to love one another. This is the law of Christ's kingdom, the lesson of his school, the filter of his family. This he represents, (v. 2.) by being like-minded, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind.

2. The same love that we are required to express to others, others are obliged to express to us. Christian love ought to be mutual love. Love, and you shall be loved.

3. The pathetic pressing of the duty. He is very importunate with them, knowing what an evidence it is of our sincerity, and what a means of the preservation and edification of the body of Christ. The importunities to brotherly love are these:

(1.) If there is any consolation in Christ, Have you experienced consolation in Christ? Experience that experience by loving one another." Thus the true and genuine love of Christ should sweeten our spirits. Do we expect consolation in Christ? If we would not be disappointed, we must love one another. If we have not consolation in Christ, where else can we expect it? They who have an interest in Christ, have consolation in him; strong and everlasting consolation; (Heb. 6. 18. 2 Thess. 2. 16.) and therefore ought to love one another.

(3.) "Comfort of love. If there is any comfort in Christian love, in God's love to you, in your love to God, or in your brethren's love to us, in consideration of all this, be ye like-minded. If ye have ever found that comfort, if ye would find it, if ye indeed believe that the grace of love is a comfortable grace, abound in it." (4.) "Fellowship of the Spirit. If there is such a thing as communion with God by the Spirit, such a thing as the communion of saints, by virtue of their being animated and actuated by one and the same Spirit; be ye like-minded: for Christian love and like-mindedness will preserve to us our communion with God, and with one another."

(1.) Here is his divine nature; Who being in the form of God, took upon him the form of a man, (v. 6.) partaking of the Divine Nature, as the eternal and only begotten Son of God. This agrees with John 1. 1. In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God: it is of the same import with being the Image of the invisible God, (Col. 1. 15.) and the Brightness of his glory, and express Image of his person, Heb. 1. 5. He thought it no robbery to be equal with God; did not think himself guilty of any evasion of what did not belong to him, or assuming another's right. He said, I and my Father are one, John 10. 30. It is the highest degree of robbery for any mere man to pretend to be equal with God, or profess himself one with the Father. This is for a man to rob God, not in riches and offerings, but of the rights of his head, Mal. 3. 8.

Some understand being in the form of God—σωμάτιον Θεοῦ, of his appearance in a divine majestic glory to the patriarchs, and the Jews, under the Old Testament, was often called the glory, and the Shekinah. The word is used with a sense by the LXX, and in the New Testament; (Mark 16. 12.) He appeared to the two disciples, in κοιμμός—another form: Matt. 17. 2. κοιμήθη—he was transfigured before them. And, he thought it no robbery to be equal with God; he did not greedily catch at, or covet and affect to appear in that glory; He laid aside the majesty of his former appearance, while he was here on earth, which is supposed the sense of the peculiar expression, σεκοιμηθησθης. Vid. Bishop Bull's Def. cap. 2. sect. 4. et alibi, and Whitby in locum.

(2.) His human nature; he was made in the likeness of men, and found in fashion as a man. He was really and truly man; took part of our flesh and blood; appeared in the nature and habitude of man. And he voluntarily assumed human nature; it was spoken according to his will. We cannot say that our participation of the human nature is ours. Herein he emptied himself; divested himself of the honours and glories of the upper world, and of his former appearance, to clothe himself with the rags of human nature. He was in all things like to us, Heb. 2. 17.

2. Here are his two estates, of humiliation and exaltation.

(1.) His estate of humiliation. He not only took upon him the likeness and fashion of a man, but the form of a servant, that is, a man of mean estate.
He was not only God’s Servant whom he had chosen, but he came to minister to men, and was among them as one who serveth in a mean and servile state. One would think that the Lord Jesus, if he would be a Man, should have been a Prince, and appeared in majesty; but quite the contrary, he took upon him the form of a servant. He was brought up early, probably working with his supposed father at his trade. His whole life was a life of humiliation, meanness, poverty, and disgrace; he had not where to lay his head, lived upon alms, was a Man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief; did not appear with external pomp, or any marks of distinction from other men. This was the humiliation of his life. What a contrast is this to the kingdom of heaven! The dying of the cross; He became obedient to death, even the death of the cross. He not only suffered, but was actually and voluntarily obedient; he obeyed the law which he brought himself under as Mediator, and by which he was obliged to die; I have power to lay down my life, and I have power to take it again; this commandment have I received of my Father, John 10. 18. And he was made under the law, Gal. 4. 4. There is an emphasis laid upon the manner of his dying, which had in it all the circumstances possible which are humbling; even the death of the cross, a cursed, painful, and shameful death; a death accursed by the law; Cursed is he that hangeth on a tree: full of pain, the body nailed through the nervous parts, (the hands and feet,) and hanging with all its weight upon the cross; and the death of a malefactor and a slave, not of a free-man; exposed as a public spectacle. Such was the condescension of the blessed Jesus.

(2.) His exaltation; Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him. His exaltation was the reward of his humiliation; because he humbled himself, God exalted him; and he highly exalted him, that he might raise him to an exceeding height. He exalted his whole Person, the human nature as well as the divine; for he is spoken of as being in the form of God, as well as in the fashion of a man. As it respects the divine nature, it could only be a recognizing his rights, or the display and appearance of the glory he had with the Father before the world was; (John 17. 5.) not any new acquisition of glory; and so the Father himself is said to be exalted. But the proper exaltation was of his human nature, which alone seems to be capable of it, though in conjunction with the divine. His exaltation here is made to consist in the exaltation of the lowest parts of his humanity, and he is exalted above every name; a title of dignity above all the creatures, men or angels. And in power, Every knee must bow to him. The whole creation must be in subjection to him; things in heaven, and things on earth, and things under the earth; the inhabitants of heaven and earth, the living and the dead. It is the name of Jesus; not at the sound of the word, but the authority of Jesus; all should pay a solemn homage to him in heart and life. Only in the name of Jesus, and the love of Jesus, and the knowledge of Jesus Christ in Lord; every nation and language should publicly own the universal empire of the exalted Redeemer; and that all power in heaven and earth is given to him, Matt. 28. 18. Observe the vast extent of the kingdom of Christ; it reaches to heaven and earth, and to all the creatures in each; to angels as well as men, and to the dead as well as the living. Thus the spiritual kingdom of Christ is observable. It is to the glory of God the Father, to confess that Jesus Christ is Lord; for it is his will, that all men should honour the Son as they honour the Father, John 5. 23. Whatever respect is paid to Christ, redounds to the honour of the Father; He who receiveth me receiveth him who sent me, Matt. 10. 40.

12. Wherefore, my beloved, as ye have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling: 13. For it is God who worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure.

He exHORTs them to diligence and seriousness in the Christian course; Work out your own salvation. It is the salvation of our souls, (1 Pet. 1. 9.) and our eternal salvation, (Heb. 5. 9.) and contains deliverance from all the evils sin had brought upon us, and exposed us to; and the possession of all good, and whatsoever is necessary to our complete and final glory and happiness. It concerns us above all things to secure the salvation of our souls; and to make sure that we experience all the blessings of heaven. If we become the objects of other things, let us take care of our best interests. It is our own salvation, the salvation of our souls. It is not for us to judge other people, we have enough to do to look to ourselves; and though we must promote the common salvation, (Jude 3.) as much as we can, yet we must upon no account neglect our own. We are required to work out our salvation, (Phil. 2. 12.) The word signifies working thoroughly at a thing, and not after pains. Observe, We must be diligent in the use of all the means which conduceth to our salvation. We must not only work at our salvation, by doing something now and then about it; but we must work out our salvation, by doing all that is to be done, and persevering therein to the end. Salvation is the great thing we should mind, and set our hearts upon; and we cannot attain salvation without the most care and diligence. He adds, With fear and trembling, that is, with great care and circumspection; "Tremble for fear lest you miscarry and come short. Be careful to do every thing in religion in the best manner; and fear lest under all your advantages you should so much as seem to come short," Heb. 4. 1. Fear is a great guard and preservative from evil.

He urges this from the consideration of their readiness always to obey the gospel; "As we have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, v. 12. Ye have been always willing to comply with every discovery of the will of God; and that in my absence as well as presence. Ye make it appear, that regard to Christ, and care of your souls, sway more with you than any other mode of seeking respect whatsoever." They were not merely awed by the apostle’s presence, but did it even much more in his absence. "And because it is God who worketh in you, do ye work out your salvation; for it is God who worketh in you. Work for he worketh." It should encourage us to do our utmost, because our labour shall not be in vain. God is ready to concur with his grace, and assist our faithful endeavours. Observe, Though we must use our utmost endeavours in seeking our own salvation, we must not suppose we can do without the help of God. Our endurance and determination must be exercised toward God, and go on, in a way whereby we shall come under the grace of God. His grace works in us in a way suitable to our natures, and in concurrence with our endeavours; and the operations of God’s grace in us are so far from excusing, that they are intended to quicken and engage, our endeavours. And work out your salvation with fear and trembling, for he worketh in you. All our working depends upon his working in us. Do not only do your utmost, but depend upon God: lest you provoke him to withdraw his help, and all your endeavours prove in vain. Work with fear, for he works of his good pleasure; to will and to do: he gives the whole ability. It is the grace of God which inclines the will to that which is good; and then enables us to perform it, and to act according to our principles. They hath wrought all our works in us, Isa. 26. 12. Of his good pleasure, As there is no strength in us, so there is no merit in us. As we cannot act without God's grace, so we cannot claim it, or pretend to deserve it. God's good will to us, is the cause of his good work in us; and he is under no engagements to his creatures, but those of his gracious promise.

14. Do all things without murmuring and disputings; 15. That ye may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation; among whom ye shine as lights in the world: 16. Holding forth the word of life; that I may rejoice in the day of Christ, that I have not run in vain, neither laboured in vain. 17. Yea, and if I be offended upon the sacrifice and service of your faith, I joy, and rejoice with you all. 18. For the same cause also do ye joy, and rejoice with me.

The apostle exhorts them in these verses to adorn their Christian profession by a suitable temper and behaviour. He teaches us

1. By a cheerful obedience to the commands of God; (v. 14.) "Do all things, do your duty in every branch of it, without murmuring. Do it, and do not find fault with it. Mind your work, and do not quarrel with it." God's commands were given to be obeyed, not to be disputed. This greatly adorns our profession, and shews we serve a good Master, whose service is freedom, and whose work is its own reward.

2. By peaceableness, and love one to another. "Do all things without disputings, wrangling, and debating one with another; because the light of truth and the life of religion are often lost in the heats and mists of disputation.

3. By a blameless conversation towards all men; (v. 15.) "That ye may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke; that ye be not iniquitous to any in word or deed, and give no just occasion of offence." We should endeavour not only to be harmless, but to be blameless; not only not to do hurt, but not to come under the just suspicion of it. "Blameless and sincere; so some read it. Blameless before men, sincere toward God. The sons of God. It becomes them to be blameless and harmless, who stand in such a relation, and are favoured with such a privilege. The children of God should differ from the sons of men. Without rebuke—without cavil. Momus was a carping deity among the Greeks, mentioned by Hesiod and Lucian, who did nothing himself, and found fault with every body and every thing. From him all carpers at other men, and rigid censurers of their works, were called Momi. The sense of the expression is, "Walk so circumspectly, that Momus himself may have no occasion to cavil at you, that the severest censurer may find no fault with you." We should aim at it, and endeavour it, not only to get to heaven, but to get thither without a blot; and, like Demetrius, to have a good report of all men, and of the truth. 3 John 12. In the midst of a crooked and perverse generation; that is, among the Heathens, and those who are without. Observe, Where there is no true religion, little is to be expected but crookedness and perverseness; and the more crooked and perverse others are, among whom we live, and the more apt to cavil, the more careful we should be to keep ourselves blameless and harmless. Abraham and Lot must not strive, because the Canaanite and Pezzizite dwelt in the land, Gen. 15. 7. Among whom ye shine as lights in the world. Christ is the Light of the world, and good Christians are lights in the world. When God raises up a good man in any place, he sets up a light in that place. Octavius may be read imperatively; Among whom shine ye as lights: Compare Matt. 5. 16. Let your light so shine before men. Christians should endeavour not only to approve themselves to God, but to recommend themselves to others, that they may also glorify God. They must shine as well as be sincere.

19. But I trust in the Lord Jesus to send Timotheus shortly unto you, that I also may be of good comfort when I know your state. 20. For I have no man like-minded, who will naturally care for your state. 21. For all seek their own, not the things which are Jesus Christ's. 22. But ye know the proof of him, that, as a son with the father, he hath served me with the gospel. 23. Him therefore I hope to send presently, so soon as I shall see how it will go with me. 24. But I trust in the Lord that I also myself shall come shortly. 25. Yet I supposed it necessary to send to you Epaphroditus, my brother, and companion in labour, and fellow-soldier, but your messenger, and him that ministered to my wants. 26. For he longed after you all, and was full of heaviness, because that ye had heard that he had been sick. 27. For indeed he was sick, nigh unto death: but God had mercy on him, and not on him only, but on me also, lest I should have sorrow upon sorrow. 28. I sent him therefore the more carefully, that when ye see him again, ye may rejoice, and that I may be the less sorrowful. 29. Receive him therefore in the Lord with all gladness; and hold such in reputation: 30. Because for the work of Christ he was nigh unto death, not regarding his life, to supply your lack of service toward me.

St. Paul takes particular notice of two good ministers: for though he was himself a great apostle, and laboured more abundantly than they all, yet he took all occasions to speak with respect of those who were far his inferiors.

1. He speaks of Timothy, whom he intended to send to the Philippians, that he might have an account of their state. See Paul's care of the churches, and the comfort he had in their well-doing. He was in pain, when he had not heard of them a good while, and therefore would send Timothy to inquire, and bring him an account; For I have no man like-minded, who will naturally care for your state. Timothy was a non-such. There were, no doubt, many good ministers, who were in care for the souls of those for whom they preached; but none comparable to Timothy; a man of an excellent spirit and tender heart; who will naturally care for your state. Observe, It is best with us, when our duty becomes a manner natural to us. Timothy was a genuine son of blessed Paul, and walked in the same spirit and the same steps. Naturally, that is, sincerely, and not in pretence only: with a willing heart and upright view, so agreeably to the make of his mind. Note, 1. It is the duty of ministers to care for the state of their people, and he concerned for their welfare; I seek not yours, but you, 2 Cor. 12. 14. 2. It is a rare thing to find one who does it naturally; such a one is remarkable, and distinguished among his brethren.

2. All seek their own, not the things which are Jesus Christ's, v. 21. Did Paul say this in haste, as David said, All men are lovers? Ps. 116. 11. Was there so general a corruption among ministers so early, that there was not one among them, who cared for the state of his people? We may not understand it so, he means generally; all, either the whole, or all in comparison of Timothy. Note, Seeking our own interest, with the neglect of Jesus Christ, is a very great sin, and very common among Christians and ministers. We are apt to prefer our own credit, ease, and safety, before truth, holiness, and duty; the things of our own pleasure and reputation before the things of Christ's kingdom, and his honour and interest in the world: but Timothy was none of those.

Ye know the proof of him, v. 22. Timothy was a man who had been tried, and had made full proof of his ministry, (2 Tim. 4.) and was faithful in all which betell him. All the churches with whom he had acquaintance, knew the proof of him. He was a great minister as he seemed to be; and Christ so as to be acceptable to God, and approved of men, Rom. 14. 18. "Ye not only know the name of him, and the face of him, but the proof of him, and have experienced his affection and fidelity in your service: that, as a son with a father, he hath served me in the gospel." He was Paul's assistant in many places where he preached, and served with him in the gospel with the internal respect to him; as a child more than a father, and with all the love and cheerfulness with which a child is serviceable to his father. Their ministrations together were with great respect on the one side, and great tenderness and kindness on the other.—An admirable example to elder and younger ministers, joined together in the same service.

Paul designed to send him shortly; Him therefore I hope to send presently, as soon as I shall see how it will go with me, v. 23. He was now a prisoner, and did not know what would be the issue; but, according as it turned, he would dispose of Timothy. Nay, he hoped to come himself; (7. 24.) But I trust in the Lord, that I also myself shall come shortly. He hoped he should soon be set at liberty, and be able to give them a visit. Paul desired his liberty, not that he might take his pleasure, but that he might do his duty. He trusted to his hope and confidence of seeing them, with a humble dependence and submission to the divine will; (1 Cor. 4. 19.) But I will come to you shortly, if the Lord will, James 4. 15. For that ye ought to say, If the Lord will, we shall live, or do this and that; so Acts 18. 21. and Heb. 6. 3.

2. Concerning Epaphroditus, whom he calls his brother, and companion in labour, and fellow-soldier, his Christian brother, to whom he bore affection, his companion in the work and sufferings of the gospel, who submitted to the same labours and hardships with himself, and their messenger, one who was sent by them to him; probably, to consult him about some affairs relating to their church, or to bring a present from them for his relief; for he adds, and him who ministered to my wants. He seems to be the same who is elsewhere called Epaphras, Col. 4. 12. He had an aptness to minister to them, and Paul was willing he should. It seems, 1. Epaphroditus had been sick; They had heard that he had been sick, v. 26. And indeed he was sick nigh unto death, v. 27. Sickness is a calamity common to men, to good men and ministers. But why did not the apostle heal him, who was indued with a power of curing diseases, as well as raising the dead? Acts 10. 10. Probably, because that was intended as a sign to others, and to confirm the truth of the gospel, and therefore needed not be exercised one towards another. These signs shall follow them who believe; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover, Mark 16. 17, 18. And perhaps they had not that power at all times, and at their discretion, but only when some great end was to be served by it, and when God saw fit. It was proper that this power should be kept in reserve. 2. The Philippians were exceedingly sorry to hear of his sickness. They were full of heaviness, as well as he, upon the tidings of it: for he was one, it seems, whom they had a particular respect and affection for, and thought fit to choose out to send to the apostle. 3. It pleased God to recover, and spare him; But God had mercy on him, v. 27. The apostle saw it was a great mercy to himself, as well as to Epaphroditus and others. Though the church was not blessed at that time with extraordinary gifts, they could even then ill spare a good minister. He was sensibly touched with the thoughts of so great a loss; Last I shall observe, that by, beside the sorrow of my own imprisonment, I should have the sorrow of his death. Or perhaps some other good ministers had died lately; which had been a great affliction to him: and if this had died now, it would have been a fresh grief to him, and sorrow added to woe.

4. Epaphroditus was willing to make a visit to the Philippians, that he might be comforted with those who had sorrowed for him when he was sick; 'That when ye see him again, ye may rejoice;' (v. 28.) that ye may yourselves see how well he is recovered, and what reason ye have for thankfulness and joy upon his account. He gave himself the pleasure of comforting them by the sight of so dear a friend.

3. Paul recommends him to their esteem and affection; 'Receive him therefore in the Lord with all gladness, and hold such in reputation: account such men valuable, who are zealous and faithful, and let them be highly loved and regarded. Show your joy and respect by all the expressions of hearty affection and good opinion.' It seems, he had taught his illness in the work of God; It was for the work of Christ that he was nigh to death, and to supply their lack of service to him. The apostle does not blame him for his indiscretion in hazarding his life, but reckons it was of God to accomplish his intent that account. Observe, (1.) They who truly love Christ, and are hearty in the interests of his kingdom, will think it very well worth their while to hazard their health and life, to do him service, and promote the edification of his church. Observe, (2.) They were to receive him with joy, as newly recovered from sickness. It is an enduring consideration to have our mercies restored to us after danger of removal; and we should make the most of them and improve what is given us in answer to prayer, should be received with great thankfulness and joy.

CHAPTER III.

He cautions them against judging seducers; (v. 1. 3.) and proposes his own example; and here he enumerates the two sorts of apostles to which his apostleship compared, (v. 1. 8.) describes the matter of his own choice, (v. 9. 16.) and closes with an exhortation to beware of wicked men, and to follow his example, v. 17. 21.

1. FINALLY, my brethren, rejoice in the Lord. To write the same things to you, to me indeed is not grievous, but for you it is safe. 2. Beware of dogs, beware of evil-workers, beware of the concision. 3. For we are the circumcision, who worship God in the Spirit, and rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh: It seems, the church of the Philippians, though a faithful and flourishing church, was disturbed by the judaizing teachers, who endeavored to keep up the law of Moses, and mix the observances of it with the doctrine of Christ and his institutions. He begins the chapter with warnings against these seducers.

2. He makes the choice of the heavenly state the by which he rested, (v. 1.) to rest satisfied in the interest they had in him, the benefit they hoped for by him. It is the character and temper of sincere Christians to rejoice in Christ Jesus. The more we take of the comfort of our religion, the more closely we shall cleave to it: the more we rejoice in Christ, the more willing we shall be to do and suffer for him, and the less danger we shall be in of being drawn away from him. The joy of the Lord is our strength, Neh. 8. 10.

2. He cautions them to take heed of those false teachers; To write the same things to you, to me in heed is not grievous, but for you it is safe; that is, the same things which I have already preached to you; as if he had said, 'What has been presented to our ears, shall be presented to your eyes; what I have spoken, shall now be written; to show that I am still of the same mind. What I decreed is not grievous.' Observe, (1.) Ministers must not think any thing grievous to themselves, which they have reason to believe is safe and edifying to the people. Observe, (2.) It is good for us often to hear the same truths, to revive the remembrance and strengthen the impression of things of importance. It is a wanton curiosity to desire always to hear some new thing.

It is a needful caution he here gives; Beware of dogs, v. 2. The prophet calls the false prophets dumb dogs; (Isa. 56. 10.) to which the apostle here seems to refer. Dogs, for their malice against the faithful professors of the gospel of Christ, barking at them and biting them. They cried up good works in opposition to the faith of Christ; but Paul calls them evil workers; they boasted themselves to be of the circumcision; but he calls them the concision; they rent and tore the church of Christ, and cut it to pieces; or contended for an abolished rite, a mere insignificant cutting of the flesh.

3. He describes true Christians, who are indeed the circumcision, the spiritual circumcision, the peculiar people of God, who are in covenant with him, as the Old Testament Israelites were; We are the circumcision, who worship God in the spirit, and rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh. Here are three characters: (1.) They worshiped in the spirit, in opposition to the carnal ordinances of the Old Testament, which consisted in meats and drinks and divers washings, &c. Christianity takes us off from these things, and teaches us to be inward with God in all the duties of religious worship. We must worship God in spirit, John 4. 24. The work of religion is to no purpose, any further than the heart is employed in it. Whatever we do, we must do it heartily as unto the Lord, and we must worship God in the strength and grace of the divine Spirit, which is so peculiar to the gospel-state, which is the ministry of the Spirit, 2 Cor. 3. 8. (2.) They rejoice in Christ Jesus, and not in the peculiar privileges of the Jewish church, or what answers to them in the Christian church—merely outward enjoyments and performances. They rejoice in their relation to Christ, and interest in him. God made it the duty of the Israelitish church to rejoice before him in the courts of his house; but now that the substance is come, the shadows are done away, and we are to rejoice in Christ Jesus only. (3.) They have no confidence in the flesh, those carnal ordinances and outward performances. We must be taken off from trusting in our own bottom, that we may build only on Jesus Christ, the everlasting Foundation. Our confidence, as well as our joy, is proper to him.

4. Though I might also have confidence in the flesh. If any other man thinketh that he hath whereof he might trust in the flesh, I more: 5. Circumcised the eighth day, of the stock of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin, a Hebrew of the Hebrews; as touching the law, a Pharisee; 6. Concerning zeal, persecuting the church; touching the righteousness which is in the law, blameless. 7. But what things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ. 8. Yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ.

The apostle here proposes himself for an example of trusting in Christ only, and not in his privileges as an Israelite.

1. He shews what he had to boast of as a Jew and a Pharisee. Let none think that the apostle despised these things, (as men commonly do,) because he had them not himself to glorify in. No, if he would have gloried and trusted in the flesh, he had as much cause to do so as any man; if any other man thinketh that he hath whereof to trust in the flesh, I more, v. 4. as he had as much to boast of as any Jew of them all. His birth-right privileges. He was not a proselyte, but a native Israelite; of the stock of Israel. And he was of the tribe of Benjamin, in which tribe the temple stood, and which adhered to Judah when all the other tribes revolted. Benjamin was the father's darling, and this was a favourite tribe. A Hebrew of the Hebrews, an Israelite on both sides, by father and mother, and from one generation to another; none of his ancestors had matched with Gentiles. He could boast of his relation to the church and the covenant, for he was circumcised the eighth day; he had the token of God's covenant in his flesh, and was circumcised the very day which God had appointed. For learning, he was a Pharisee, brought up at the feet of Gamaliel, an eminent doctor of the law: and was a scholar learned in all the learning of the Jews; taught according to the Pharisees' exposition of the law of the fathers. Acts 22. 3. He was a Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee, (Acts 23. 6.) and after the most strict sect of his religion, lived a Pharisee, Acts 26. 5. He had a blameless conversation; touching the righteousness which is of the law, blameless: as far as the Pharisees' exposition of the law went, and as to the mere letter of the law, and outward observance of it, he could acquit himself from the breach of it, and could not be accused by any. He had been an active man for his religion. As he made a strict profession of it, under the title and character of a Pharisee, so he persecuted those whom he looked upon as enemies to it. Concerning zeal, persecuting the church. He shewed that he was in good earnest, though he had a zeal without knowledge to direct and govern the exercise of it; I was zealous toward the law, and was strict in observing it, Acts 22. 3, 4. All this was enough to have made a proud Jew confident, and was stock sufficient to set up with for his justification.

II. The apostle tells us here how little account he made of these, in comparison of his interest in Christ, and his expectations from him; "But what things were gain to me, those have I counted loss for Christ;" (v. 7.) those things which I had counted gain while I was yet as much a Pharisee as I was a Pharisee of Christ, I had laid aside, and reckoned up, those I counted loss for Christ: I should have reckoned myself an unspeakable loser, if, to adhere to them, I had lost my interest in Jesus Christ." He counted them loss; not only insufficient to enrich him, but what would certainly impoverish and ruin him, if he trusted to them, in opposition to Christ. Observe, The apostle did not persuade them to do as he did, as much as he tells us he did himself. He had laid aside and reckoned up, but what he had quitted himself; or venture on any bottom but what he himself had ventured his immortal soul upon.

Yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss, for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord, v. 8. Here the apostle explains himself.

1. He tells us what it was that he was ambitious of and rejoiced in, and that was the knowledge of Christ Jesus his Lord; a believing experimental acquaintance with Christ as Lord; not a mere notional and speculative, but a practical and efficacious, knowledge of him. So knowledge is sometimes put for faith: By his knowledge, or the knowledge of him, shall my righteous Servant justify many, Isa. 53. 11. And it is the excellency of knowledge. There is an absolute and transcendental excellency in the doctrine of Christ, or the Christian religion, above all the knowledge of nature, and improvements of human wisdom; for it is suited to the case of fallen sinners, and furnishes them with all they need, and all they can desire and hope for, with all saving wisdom and saving grace.

2. He shews how he had quitted his privileges as a Jew and a Pharisee; Ye doubtless; his expression is with a holy triumph and elevation, So 25. 4. There are five particles in the original; But indeed even also do I count all things but loss. He had spoken before of those things; his Jewish privileges: here he speaks of all things; all worldly enjoyments and mere outward privileges whatsoever, things of a like kind or any other kind, which could stand in competition with Christ for the throne in his heart, or pretend to merit and desert. He had said that he did count them but loss: but it might be asked, "Did he continue still in the same mind, did he not repent his renouncing them?" No, now he speaks in the present tense; Ye doubtless, I do count them but loss. But it may be said, "It is easy to say so; but what would he do when he came to the trial?" Why he tells us, that he had himself practised according to this estimate of the case; For before I was crucified to the world, I lived as a Pharisee, and had quitted all his honours and advantages, as a Jew and a Pharisee, and submitted to all the disgrace and suffering which attended the profession and preaching of the gospel. When he embarked in the bottom of the Christian religion, he ventured all in it, and suffered the loss of all for the privileges of a Christian. Nay, he not only counted them loss, but dung, vexed—afflicted, thrown to dogs; they are not only less valuable than Christ, but the highest degree contemptible, when they come in competition with him.

Note, The New Testament never speaks of saving grace in any terms of diminution, but, on the contrary, represents it as the fruits of the divine Spirit, and the image of God in the soul of man, as a divine nature, and the seed of God; and faith is called precious faith; and meekness in the sight of God of great price, 1 Pet. 3. 4. 2 Pet. 1. 1. 8c.

9. And be found in him, not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith: 10. That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death: 11. If by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead. 12. Not as though I had already attained, or were already perfect: but I follow after, if that I may apprehend that which for which also I am apprehended of Christ Jesus. 13. Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, 14. I press toward the mark, for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

We have heard what the apostle renounced; let us now see what he laid hold on, and resolved to cleave to, and that was, 1. Christ; and, 2. Heaven.
He had his heart on these two great peculiarities of the Christian religion.

1. The apostle had his heart upon Christ, as his Righteousness. This is illustrated in several instances:

1. He desired to win Christ; and an unspoken gainer he would reckon himself, if he had but an interest in Christ and his righteousness, and if Christ became his Lord and his Saviour. That I may win him; as the runner wins the prize, as the sailor makes the port he is bound for. The expression intimates that we have need to strive for him, and reach after him; and that all is little enough to win him.

2. That he might be found in him, (v. 9.) as the masonlayer was found in the city of refuge, where he was safe from the avenger of blood, Num. 35. 25. Or it alludes to a judicial appearance; so we are to be found of our Judge in heaven, 2 Pet. 3. 14. We are undone without a righteousness wherein to appear before God, for we are guilty. There is a righteousness provided for us in Jesus Christ, and it is a complete and perfect righteousness. None can have interest or benefit by it but those who come off from confidence in themselves, and are brought heartily to believe in him. Not having my own righteousness, which is of the law; not thinking that my outward observances and good deeds are able to attain for my had ones; or that by setting the one over against the other, I can come to an account with God. No, the righteousness which I depend upon, is that which is through the faith of Christ; not a legal, but evangelical righteousness. The righteousness which is of God by faith, ordained and appointed of God.” The Lord Jesus Christ is the Lord our Righteousness, Is. 45. 24. Had he not been God, he could not have been our Righteousness; the transcendent excellence of the divine nature put such a value upon, and such a virtue into his sufferings, that they became sufficient to satisfy for the sins of the world, and to bring in a righteousness which will be effectual to all who believe. Faith is the ordained means of actual interest and saving benefit in all the purchase of his blood. It is by faith in his blood, Rom. 3. 25.

3. That he might know Christ; (v. 10.) That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings. Faith is called knowledge, Isa. 53. 11. Knowing him, here is believing him: it is an experimental knowledge of the power of his resurrection, and fellowship of his sufferings, or feeling the transforming efficacy and virtue of them. Observe, The apostle was as ambitious of being sanctified as he was of being justified. He was as desirous to know the power of Christ’s death and resurrection, killing sin in him, and raising him up to the very perfection of life, as he was to receive the benefit of Christ’s death and resurrection in his justification.

4. That he might be conformable unto him; and that also is meant of his sanctification. We are then made conformable to his death, when we die to sin, as Christ died for sin; when we are crucified with Christ, the flesh and affections of it mortified, and the world crucified to us, and we to the world, by the cross of Christ. This is our conformity to his death.

II. The apostle had his heart upon heaven, as his happiness; If by any means I might attain to the resurrection of the dead, v. 11. The happiness of heaven is here called the resurrection of the dead, because, though the souls of the faithful, when they depart, are immediately with Christ, yet their happiness is until the resurrection of the dead. It was the first act of the dead at the last day, when soul and body shall be glorified together. Aresio, sometimes signifies the future state. This the apostle had his eye upon; this he would attain. There will be a resurrection of the unjust, who shall arise to shame and everlasting contempt; and our care must be, to escape that; but the joyful and glorious resurrection of saints is regulated by eminence, because it is in virtue of Christ’s resurrection, as their Head and First-fruits; whereas the wicked shall rise only by the power of Christ, as their Judge. To the saints it will be indeed a resurrection, a return to bliss and life and glory; while the resurrection of the wicked is a rising from the grave, but a return to a second death. It is called the second resurrection, because the resurrection of the just, (John 5. 29.) and they are counted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, Luke 20. 35.

This joyful resurrection the apostle pressed toward. He was willing to do any thing, or suffer any thing, that he might attain that resurrection. The hope and prospect of it carried him with courage and constancy through all the difficulties he met with in his work. Observe, 1. He speaks as if they were in danger of missing it, and coming short of it. A holy fear of coming short, is an excellent means of perseverance. Observe, 2. His care to be found in Christ, was in order to his attaining the resurrection of the dead. Paul himself did not hope to attain it through his own merit and righteousness, but through the merit and righteousness of Jesus Christ found in him, that I may obtain the resurrection of the dead; be found a believer in him, and interested in him by faith.

He looks upon himself to be in a state of imperfect and trial; Not as though I had already attained, or were already perfect, v. 12. Observe, The best men in the world will readily own their imperfection in the present state. We have not yet attained, are not already perfect; there is still much in us wanting, in our present state of affection. If Paul had not attained to perfection, (who had reached to so high a pitch of holiness,) much less have we. Again, Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended, (v. 13.) I οὐδὲν ἐπιμέλεσα; “I make this judgment of the case; I thus reason with myself.” Observe, They who think they have grace enough, give proof that they have little enough, or rather, that they have none at all; because, whereas there is a desire of grace, and a pressing toward the perfection of grace, observe here,

(1.) What the apostle’s actions were, under this conviction. Considering that he had not already attained, and had not apprehended, he pressed forward; “I follow after,” (v. 12.) οὐκ ἔχω—I pursue with vigour, as one following after the game. I endeavour to be more grace, and do more good; and never think I have done enough; if that I may apprehend that for which also I am apprehended of Christ Jesus.” Observe, [1.] From whence our grace comes; from our being apprehended of Christ Jesus. It is not our laying hold of Christ first, but his laying hold of us, which is our happiness and salvation. We love him, because he first loved us, 1 John 4. 19. Not our keeping hold of Christ, but his keeping hold on us; not we keeping up to his grace, but he keeping up to our grace; not we not being justified by our own righteousness, but he justifying us by his mighty power through faith unto salvation, 1 Pet. 1. 5. Observe, [2.] What the happiness of heaven is; it is to apprehend that for which we are apprehended of Christ Jesus. When Christ laid hold of us, it was to bring us to heaven; and to apprehend that for which he apprehended us, is to attain the perfection of our bliss.

He adds further; (v. 13.) This one thing I do; this was his great care and concern; forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth to those things which are before. There is a sinful forgetting of past sins and past mercies, which ought to be remembered for the exercise of constant repentance and thankfulness to God. But he forgot the things which are behind, so as not to be content with present measures of grace: he was still for having more and more. So he reached forth, and

(2.) The apostle’s aim in these actions: I press toward the mark, for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus, v. 14. He pressed toward the mark. As he who runs a race, never takes up short of the end, but is still making forward as fast as he can; so they who have heaven in their eye, must still be pressing forward to it in holy desires and hopes, and constant endeavours and preparations. The fitter we grow for heaven, the faster we must press towards it. Heaven is called here the mark, because it is that which every good Christian has in his eye; as the archer has his eye fixed upon the mark he designs to hit. For the prize of the high calling. Observe, A Christian’s calling is a high calling: it is from heaven, as its original; and it is to heaven in its tendency. Heaven is the prize of the high calling; πάς ἀπόστολος— the prize we fight for, and run for, and wrestle for; what we aim at in all we do, and what will reward all our pains. It is of great use in the Christian course, to keep our eye upon heaven. This is proper to give us measures in all our service, and to quicken us every step we take; and it is of God, from him we are to expect it. Eternal life is the gift of God; (Rom. 6. 23.) and a Christian through Jesus Christ his Lord and Saviour must come to us, as it is procured for us by him. There is no getting to heaven as our home but by Christ as our Way.

15. Let us therefore, as many as are perfect, be thus minded: and if in anything ye be otherwise minded, God shall reveal even this unto you. 16. Nevertheless, whereto we have already attained, let us walk by the same rule, let us mind the same thing.

The apostle, having proposed himself as an example, urges the Philippians to follow it. Let the same mind be in you, which was in Christ Jesus. Let us see here, how he was minded; let us be like-minded, and set our hearts upon Christ and heaven, as he did.

1. He shews that this was the thing wherein all good Christians were agreed; to make Christ all in all, and set their hearts upon another world. This is that whereto we have all attained. However good Christians may differ in their sentiments about other things, this is what they are agreed in, that Christ is a Christian’s all that to rein Christ, and to be found in him, is our happiness both here and hereafter. And therefore let us walk by the same rule, and mind the same thing. Having made Christ our all to us, to us to live must be Christ. Let us agree to press toward the mark, and make heaven our end.

2. That this is a good reason why Christians who differ in these matters, should yet bear with one another, because they are agreed in the main matter: “If in any thing ye be otherwise minded; if ye differ from one another, and are not of the same judgment as to meats and days, and other matters of the Jewish law; yet ye must not judge one another, while ye all meet now in Christ as your Centre, and hope to meet shortly in heaven as your home. As for other matters of difference, lay no great stress upon them, God shall reveal even this unto you. Whatever it is wherein ye differ, the must wait till God give you a better understanding, which he will do in his due time. In the mean time, as far as ye have attained, ye must go together in the ways of God, join together in all the great things in which ye are agreed, and wait for further light in the lesser things wherein ye differ.”

17. Brethren, be followers together of me, and mark them which walk so as ye have us for an example. 18. (For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ: 19. Whose end is destruction, whose God is their belly; and whose glory is in their shame, who mind earthly things.) 20. For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ: 21. Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself. He closes the chapter with warnings and exhortations.

1. He warns them against following the examples of seducers and evil teachers; (v. 18, 19.) Many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you weeping, that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ: These were the apostles name, who yet are enemies to Christ’s cross, and the design and intention of it. Their walk is a sure evidence what they are than their profession. By their fruits ye shall know them, Matt. 7. 20. The apostle warns people against such: 1. Very frequently, I have told you often. We so little heed the warnings given us, that we have need to have them repeated. To write the same things in all my epistles, 1. 2. Feelingly and affectionately; I now tell you weeping. Paul was upon proper occasions a weeping preacher, as Jeremiah was a weeping prophet. Observe, An old sermon may be preached with new affections; what we say often we may say again, if we say it affectingly, and are ourselves under the power of it. He gives us the characters of those who were the enemies of the cross of Christ.

1. (1.) Wherein God is their belly; they mind nothing but their sensual appetites. A wretched idol it is, and a scandal for any, but especially for Christians, to sacrifice the favour of God, the peace of their conscience, and their eternal happiness, to it. Gluttons and drunkards make a god of their belly, and all their care is to please it, and make provision for it. The same observance which good people give to God, profits to their appetites. Of such he says, They serve not the Lord Jesus Christ, but their own bellies, Rom. 16. 18.

2. (2.) They glory in their shame; they not only sinned, but boasted of it, and gloried in that which they ought to be ashamed of. Sin is the sinner’s shame, especially when it is gloried in. They value themselves for what is their blemish and reproach.

3. (3.) They mind earthly things. Christ came by his cross to crucify the world to us, and us to the world; and they who mind earthly things, act directly contrary to the cross of Christ, and this great design of it. They relish earthly things, and have no relish of the things which are spiritual and heavenly; they set their hearts and affections on earthly things; they love them, and even dote upon them, and have confidence and complacency in them. He gives them this character, to shew how absurd it would be for Christians to follow the example of such, or he led away by them. To deter us all from it, he reads their doom:
(4.) Whose end is destruction. Their way seems pleasant, but death and hell are at the end of it.

What fruit had ye then in those things whereof ye are now ashamed? For the end of those things is death, Rom. 6. 21. It is dangerous following them, though it is going down the stream; for if we choose their way, we have reason to fear their end. Perhaps he alludes to the total destruction of the Jewish nation.

II. He proposes himself and his brethren for an example, in opposition to these evil examples; Brethren, be followers together of me, and mark them who walk so, as ye have us for an example, v. 17. Mark them out for your pattern. He explains himself, (v. 20.) by their regard to Christ and heaven: for our conversation is in heaven. Observe, Good Christians, even while they are here on earth, have their conversation in heaven. Their citizenship is there, vicarious: that is, we stand related to that world, and are citizens of the New Jerusalem. This world is not our home, but that is. There our greatest privileges and concerns lie. And because our citizenship is there, our conversation is there; being related to that world, we keep up a correspondence with it. The life of a Christian is in heaven, where his head is, and his home is, and where he hopes to be shortly: he sets his affections upon things above; and where his heart is, there will his conversation be.

The apostle had pressed them to follow him, and other ministers of Christ; "Why," might they say, "you are a company of poor, despised, persecuted people; who make no figure, and pretend to no advantages in the world; who will follow you?" "Nay," says he, "but our conversation is in heaven. We have a near relation, and a great pretension, to the other world; and are not so mean and despisible as we are represented." It is good having fellowship with those who have fellowship with Christ, and conversation with those whose conversation is in heaven.

1. Because we look for the Saviour from thence; (v. 20.) From whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ. He is not here, he is ascended, he is entered within the veil for us; and we expect his second coming from thence, to gather in all the citizens of that New Jerusalem to himself.

2. Because at the second coming of Christ we expect to be happy and glorified there. There is good reason to have our conversation in heaven, not only because Christ is now there, but because we hope to be there shortly. There shall change our vile bodies, that they may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, v. 21. There is a glory reserved for the bodies of the saints, which they will be instated in at the resurrection. The body is now at the best a vile body, subject to humiliation; the body of our humiliation; it has its rise and origin from the earth, it is supported out of the earth, and is subject to many diseases, and to death at last. Besides, it is often the common instrument of great sufferings, which is called the body of this death, Rom. 7. 24. Or it may be understood of its vileness when it lies in the grave; at the resurrection, it will be found a vile body, resolved into rottenness and dust; the dust will return to the earth as it was, Ecles. 12. 7. But it will be made a glorious body; and not only raised again to life, but raised to great advantage. Observe, On the firstborn of the children of God, is the glorious body of Christ; when he was transfigured upon the mount, his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light, Matt. 17. 2. He went to heaven, clothed with a body, that he might take possession of the inheritance in our nature, and be not only the First-born from the dead, but the First-born of the children of the resurrection. We shall be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the First-born among many brethren, Rom. 8. 29. Observe, (2.) The power by which this change will be wrought: according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself. There is an efficacy of power, an exceeding greatness of power, and the working of mighty power, Eph. 1. 19. It is matter of comfort to us that he can subdue all things to himself, and sooner or later will bring over all into his interest. And the resurrection will be wrought by this power. I will raise him up at the last day, John 6. 44. Let this confirm our faith of the resurrection, that we not only have the scriptures, which assure us it shall be, but we know the power of God, which can effect it, Matt. 22. 29. As Christ's resurrection was a glorious instance of the divine power, and therefore he is declared to be the Son of God with power, by the resurrection from the dead; (Rom. 1. 4.) so will our resurrection be; and his resurrection is a standing evidence, as well as pattern, of ours. And then all the enemies of the Redeemer's kingdom will be completely conquered. Not only he who had the power of death, that is, the Devil, (Heb. 2. 14.) but the last enemy shall be destroyed, that is, death, 1 Cor. 15. 26. Death shall be swallowed up in victory, v. 54.

CHAP. IV.

Exhortations to several Christian duties, as steadfastness, unanimity, joy, &c. v. 1. 9. The apostle's grateful acknowledgments of the Philippians' kindness to him, with expressions of his own content, and desire of their good, v. 10. 29. He concludes the epistle with praise, salutations, and a benediction, v. 21. 23.

1. THEREFORE, my brethren dearly beloved and longed for, my joy and crown, so stand fast in the Lord, my dearly beloved. 2. I beseech Euodias, and beseech Syntyche, that they be of the same mind in the Lord. 3. And I entreat thee also, true yoke-fellow, help those women which laboured with me in the gospel, with Clement also, and with other my fellow-labourers, whose names are in the book of life. 4. Rejoice in the Lord alway: and again I say, Rejoice. 5. Let your moderation be known unto all men. The Lord is at hand. 6. Be ye careful for nothing; but in every thing by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God. 7. And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus. 8. Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things. 9. Those things which ye have both learned, and received, and heard and seen in me, do; and the God of peace shall be with you.

The apostle begins the chapter with exhortations to divers Christian duties.

1. To steadfastness in our Christian profession, v. 1. It is inferred from the close of the foregoing chapter; Therefore stand fast, &c. Seeing our conversation is in heaven, and we look for the Saviour to come thence, and fetch us thither: therefore let us stand fast. Note, The believing hope and prospect of eternal life should engage us to be steady, and constant, in our Christian course.

Observe here,

1. The compellations are very endearing; My brethren, dearly beloved, and longed for, my joy and crown; and again, My dearly beloved. Thus he expresses the pleasure he took in them, the kindness he had for them, to convey his exhortations to them with so much the greater advantage. He looked upon them as his brethren whom he was to govern as an apostle. All we are brethren. There is difference of gifts, graces, and attainments, yet, being renewed by the same Spirit, after the same image, we are brethren; as the children of the same parents, though of different ages, statures, and complexions. Being brethren, (1.) He loved them, and loved them dearly; Dearly beloved; and again, My dearly beloved. Warm affections become ministers and Christians toward one another. Brotherly love must always go along with the brethren relation. (2.) He loved them, and longed for them; longed to see them, and hear from them; longed for their welfare, and was earnestly desirous of it; I long after you all in the bonds of Jesus Christ, ch. 1. 3. (3.) He loved them, and rejoiced in them. They were his joy; he had no greater joy than to hear of their spiritual health and prosperity. I rejoiced greatly that I found of those brethren walking in truth, that were in the truth, 3 John 1. 4. (4.) He knew them, and gloried in them; they were his crown as well as his joy. Never was proud ambitious man more pleased with the ensigns of honour than Paul was with the evidences of the sincerity of their faith and obedience. All this is to prepare his way to greater regard.

2. The exhortation itself; So stand fast in the Lord. Being in Christ, they must stand fast in him; and, in their way of walking in the church, and in the world, be of one mind, close and constant unto the end. Or, To stand fast in the Lord, is to stand fast in his strength, and by his grace; not trusting in ourselves, and disclaiming any sufficiency of our own; we must be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might, Eph. 6. 10. So stand fast, so as you have done hitherto, stand fast unto the end, so as you are my beloved, and my joy and crown; so stand fast, as those in whose welfare I have ever a care. In my prosperous life I am so nearly interested and concerned.

II. He exhorts them to unanimity and mutual assistance; (v. 2. 3.) I beseech Euodias and Syntyche, that they be of the same mind in the Lord. This is directed to some particular persons. Sometimes there is need of applying the general precepts of the gospel to particular persons and cases. Euodias and Syntyche, it seems, were at variance, either one with the other, or with the church; either upon a civil account, it may be they were engaged in a lawsuit; or upon a religious account, it may be they were of different opinions and sentiments. Pray, says he, desire them from me to be of the same mind in the Lord; to keep the peace, and live in love; to be of the same mind one with another, not thwarting and contradicting; and that they be of the same mind, the peace of the church, not acting in opposition to that.

Then he exhorts to mutual assistance; (v. 3.) and that he directs to particular persons; I entreat thee also, true yoke-fellow. Who this person was, whom he calls true yoke-fellow, is uncertain. Some think Epaphroditus, who is supposed to be one of the pastors of the church of the Philippians. Others think it was a courageous Gentile man, perhaps Paul's son, because he exerts his yoke-fellow to help the women who laboured with him. Whoever was the yoke-fellow with the apostle, must be a yoke-fellow too with his friends. It seems, there were women who laboured with Paul in the gospel, not in the public ministry; (for the apostle expressly thereby threateth that 1 Thess. 5. 14. to teach,) but by entertaining the ministers, visiting the sick, instructing the ignorant, convincing the erroneous. Thus women may be helpful to ministers in the work of the gospel. Now, says the apostle, do thou help them. They who help others, should be helped themselves, when there is occasion. Help them, join with them, strengthen their hands, encourage them in their difficulties, and.

High Cleanness, and other my fellow-labourers. Paul had a kindness for all his fellow-labourers; and as he had found the benefit of their assistance, he concluded how comfortable it would be to them to have the assistance of others. Of his fellow-labourers he says, Whose names are in the book of life; either they were chosen of God from all eternity, or registered and enrolled in the corporation and society to which the privilege of eternal life belongs, alluding to the custom among the Jews and Gentiles, of registering the inhabitants or the freemen of a city. So we read of their names being written in heaven, (Luke 10. 20.) not blotting his name out of the book of life, (Rev. 3. 5.) and of them who are written in the Lamb's book of life, Rev. 21. 27. Observe, There is a book of life; there are names in that book, and not characters and conditions only. We cannot search into that book, or know whose names are there, and what is the reason of their being there. It is a book of eternal, future, and immut-and distracting thought in the wants and difficulties of life. Observe, It is the duty and interest of Christians to live without sin; and to do so, there is a care of diligence which is our duty, and consists in a wise forecast and due concern; but there is a care of diffusion and distrust, which is our sin and folly, and which only perplexes and distracts the mind.

"Be careful for nothing, so as by your care to distrust God, and unfit yourself for his service."

VI. As a sovereign antidote against perplexing care in common things, to us constant prayer: In every thing by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known to God. Observe, 1. We must not only keep up stated times for prayer, but we must pray upon every particular emergency. In every thing by prayer. When any thing bethums our spirits, we must ease our minds by prayer; when our affairs are perplexed or distressed, we must seek direction and support.

2. We must on thins of prayer with our prayers or supplications: we must not only seek supplies of good, but own receipts of mercy. Grateful acknowledgments of what we have, argue a right disposition of mind, and are prevailing motives for further blessings.

3. Prayer is offering up our desires to God, or making them known to him; Let your request be made known to God. Not that God needs to be told either our wants or desires; for he knows them before he can suit them; but we will know them from us, and have us show our regards and concern, express our value of the mercy, and sense of our dependence on him. The effect of this will be the peace of God keeping our hearts, v. 7. The peace of God, that is, the comfortable sense of our reconciliation to God, and interest in his favour, and the hope of the heavenly blessedness, and enjoyment of it. Peace, which is God's handiwork, or standing, is a greater good than can be sufficiently valued or duly expressed. It has not entered into the heart of man, 1 Cor. 2. 9. This peace will keep our hearts and minds through Jesus Christ; it will keep them from sinning under our troubles, and from sinking under them; keep them calm and sedate, without discomposure of passion, and with inward satisfaction. Thou shalt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee. v. 5.

VII. We are exhorted to get and keep a good name; a name for good things with God and good men; Whatever things are true and honest; (v. 8.) a regard to truth in our words and engagements, and to decency and becomingness in our behaviour, suitable to our circumstances and condition of life. Whatever things are true and pure; a regard to justice and righteousness in our dealings, and a life void of a mixture of sin. Whatever things are lovely and of good report, that is, amiable; that will render us beloved, and make us well spoken of, as well as well thought of, by others. If there is any virtue, if there is any praise; any thing really virtuous in any kind, and worthy of commendation. Observe, 1. The apostle would have the Christians live in all things which were good of their heathen neighbours; "If there be any virtue, if there be any of these things; imitate them in what is truly excellent among them; and let not them outdo you in any instance of goodness."

We should not be ashamed to learn any good thing of bad men, or those who have not our advantages. 2. Virtue has its praise, and will have. We should walk in all the ways of virtue, and abide therein; and then, whether our praise be of men or not, it will be of God. In these things he proposes himself to them for an example; (v. 9.) Those things which ye have learned, and received, and heard and seen in me, do. Observe, Paul's doctrine and life were of a piece. What they saw in him, was the same thing with what they heard from him. He could propose himself as well as his doctrine to their imitation. It gives a great force to what we say to others, to have it also to what they have seen in us. And this is the way to have the God of peace with us—to keep close to our duty to him. The Lord is with us while we are with him.

10. But I rejoiced in the Lord greatly, that now at the last your care of me hath flourished again; wherein ye were also careful, but ye lacked opportunity. 11. Not that I speak in respect of want: for I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content. 12. I know both how to be abased, and I know how to abound: every where, and in all things, I am instructed both to be full and to be hungry, both to abound and to suffer need. 13. I can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth me. 14. Notwithstanding ye have well done, that ye did communicate with my affliction. 15. Now, ye Philippians, know also, that in the beginning of the gospel, when I departed from Macedonia, no church communicated with me as concerning giving and receiving, but ye only. 16. For even in Thessalonica ye sent once and again unto my necessity. 17. Not because I desire a gift: but I desire fruit that may abound to your account. 18. But I have all, and abound: I am full, having received of Epaphroditus the things which were sent from you, an odour of a sweet smell, a sacrifice acceptable, well-pleasing to God. 19. But my God shall supply all your needs according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus.

In these verses we have the thankful grateful acknowledgments which the apostle makes of the kindness of the Philippians in sending him present for his support, now that he was a prisoner at Rome. And here,

1. He takes occasion from hence to acknowledge their former kindnesses to him, and to make mention of them, v. 15, 16. Paul had a grateful spirit: for though what his friends did for him was nothing in comparison of what he deserved from them, and the obligations he had laid upon them; yet he speaks of their kindness as if it had been a piece of generous charity, when it was really far short of a just debt. If they had each of them contributed half their estates to him, they had not given him too much, since they owed him to every own soul; and yet, when they sent a small present to him, how kindly does he take it, how thankfully does he mention it, even in this epistle, when was he left upon record, and read in the churches, through all ages? so that wherever this epistle shall be read, there shall this which they did to Paul be told for a memorial of them. Surely never was present so well repaid.

He reminds them, that in the beginning of the gospel no church communicated with him as to giving and receiving, but they only, v. 15. They not only maintained him comfortably while he was with them, but when he departed from Macedonia they sent tokens of their kindness after him; and this, when no other church did so besides. None besides sent after him of their carnal things, in considera-
PHILIPPIANS, IV.

1. It did not come from discontent, or distrust of providence; not that I speak in respect of want (v. 11.) not in respect of any want he felt, or of any want he feared. As to the former, he was content with what he had, and that satisfied him; as to the latter, he depended upon the grace of God to provide for him from day to day, and thus satisfied him. So that he did not speak in respect of want any way; for I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content. We have here an account of Paul's learning, not that which he got at the feet of Gamaliel, but that which he got at the feet of Christ. He had learnt to be content; and that was a lesson he had as much need to learn as most men, considering the hardships and sufferings with which he was exercised. He was in bonds and imprisonments, and necessities, often; but in all he had learnt to be content, to bring his mind to his condition, and make the best of it.

2. He rejoiced greatly in it, (v. 10.) because it was an evidence of their affection to him, and the success of his ministry among them. When the fruit of their charity abounded toward the apostle, it appeared that the fruit of his ministry abounded among them.

III. He commends their present liberality: Norwithstanding, ye have done well, that ye did communicate with my affliction, v. 14. It is a good work to succour and help a good minister in trouble. Here see what is the nature of true Christian sympathy: not only to be concerned for our friends in their troubles, but to do what we can to help them. They communed with him in his affliction, in relieving him under it. He who says, Be ye warmed, be ye filled, and that they never want the things they have need of; what doth it profit? Jam. 1. 18. and 2, 3.

He rejoiced greatly in it, (v. 10.) because it was an evidence of their affection to him, and the success of his ministry among them. When the fruit of their charity abounded toward the apostle, it appeared that the fruit of his ministry abounded among them.

1. It did not come from discontent, or distrust of providence; not that I speak in respect of want (v. 11.) not in respect of any want he felt, or of any want he feared. As to the former, he was content with what he had, and that satisfied him; as to the latter, he depended upon the grace of God to provide for him from day to day, and thus satisfied him. So that he did not speak in respect of want any way; for I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content. We have here an account of Paul's learning, not that which he got at the feet of Gamaliel, but that which he got at the feet of Christ. He had learnt to be content; and that was a lesson he had as much need to learn as most men, considering the hardships and sufferings with which he was exercised. He was in bonds and imprisonments, and necessities, often; but in all he had learnt to be content, to bring his mind to his condition, and make the best of it.

2. This is a special act of grace, to accommodate ourselves to every condition of life, and carry an equal temper of mind through all the varieties of our state. (1.) To accommodate ourselves to an afflicted condition; to know how to be abased, how to be hungry, how to suffer want, so as not to be overcome by the temptations of it, either to lose our comfort in God, or distrust his providence, or to shrink from our condition, or to assume any other than a prosperous condition; to know how to abound, how to be full, so as not to be proud, or secure, or luxurious. And this is as hard a lesson as the other; for the temptations of fulness and prosperity are not less than those of affliction and want. But how must we learn it? I can do all things through Christ who strengthens me, v. 13. We have need of strength from Christ, to enable us to perform not only those duties which are purely Christian, but even those which are the fruit of moral virtue. We need his strength to teach us to be content in every condition.

The apostle had seemed to boast of himself, and of his own strength; I know how to be abased; (v. 12.) but here he transfers all the praise to Christ. "What do I talk of knowing how to be abased, and how to abound? It is only through Christ who strengthens me, that I can do it, not in my own strength." So much strength must be required to be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might, (Eph. 6. 10.) and to be strong in the grace which is in Christ Jesus; (2 Tim. 2. 1.) and we are strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man, Eph. 3. 16. The word in the original is a participle of the present tense, ἀνεθαλάσσεται, and denotes a present and continued act; "Through Christ, who is strengthening me, and does continually strengthen me; it is by his constant and renewed strength I am enabled to act in everything; I wholly depend upon him for all my spiritual power."

2. It did not come from covetousness, or an affection to worldly wealth; not because I desire a gift; (v. 17.) that is, "I welcome your kindness, not because it adds to my enjoyments, but because it adds to your account." He desired it not so much for his own sake, but theirs; "I desire fruit that may abound to your account, that you may be enabled to perform such a good use of your gifts, as is best that you may give an account of them with joy. It is not with any design to draw more from you, but to encourage you to such an exercise of beneficence as will meet with a glorious reward hereafter. For my part," says he, "I have all, and abound." What can a man desire more than enough? I do not desire a gift for the gift's sake, for I have all, and abound. (v. 18.) They sent him a small token, and he desired more; he makes no mark of the greatest superfluity, or a future supply; I am full, having received from Epaphroditus the things which were sent you. Note, A good man will soon have enough of this world; not only of living in it, but of receiving from it. A covetous worldling, if he has ever so much, would still have more; but a heavenly Christian, though he has little, has enough.

V. The apostle assures them, that God did accept, and would accept, their kind supply. He did accept it; It is an odor of a sweet smell; a sacrifice acceptable, well-pleasing to God. Not a sacrifice of atonement, for none makes atonement for sin but Christ; but a sacrifice of acknowledgment, and well-pleasing to God. It was more acceptable to God as it was the fruit of their grace, than it was to Paul as it was the supply of his want
With such sacrifices God is well-pleased, Heb. 13. 16.

2. He would recompense it; But my God shall supply all your wants according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus, v. 19. He does as it were draw a bill upon the exchequer in heaven, and leaves it to God to make them amends for the kindness they had shewed him. "He shall do it, not only as your God, but as my God, who takes what is done to me as done to himself. You supplied my needs, according to your poverty; and he shall supply your's, according to his riches." But still it is by Christ Jesus: through him we have grace to do that which is good, and through him we must expect the reward of it. Not of debt, but of grace; for the more we do for God, the more we are indebted to him, because we receive the more from him.

20. Now unto God and our Father be glory for ever and ever. Amen. 21. Salute every saint in Christ Jesus. The brethren which are with me greet you. 22. All the saints salute you, chiefly they that are of Caesar's household. 23. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

The apostle concludes the epistle in these verses:
1. With praises to God; Now unto God and our Father be glory for ever and ever. Amen, v. 20. Observe, (1.) God is to be considered by us as our Father; Now unto God and our Father. It is a great condescension and favour in God, to own the relation of Father to sinners, and allow us to say to him, Our Father; and it is a title peculiar to the gospel-dispensation. It is also a great privilege and encouragement to us, to consider him as our Father; as one so nearly related, and who bears so tender an affection towards us. We should look upon God, under all our weakness and fears, not as a tyrant or an enemy, but as a Father, who is disposed to pity us and help us. (2.) We must ascribe glory to God as a Father: the glory of his own excellence, and of all his mercy unto us. We must thankfully own the receipt of all from him, and give the praise of all to him. And our praise must be constant and perpetual; it must be glory for ever and ever.

2. With salutations to his friends at Philippi; "Salute every saint in Christ Jesus, (v. 21.) give my hearty love to all the Christians in your parts." He desires remembrance of the saints only to the bishop and deacons, and the church in general, but to every particular saint. Paul had a kind affection to all good Christians.

3. He sends salutations from those who were at Rome; "The brethren who are with me, salute you; the ministers, and all the saints here, send their affectionate remembrances to you. Chiefly they who are of Caesar's household; the Christian converts who belonged to the emperor's court." Observe, (1.) There were saints in Caesar's household. Though Paul was imprisoned at Rome, for preaching the gospel, by the emperor's command; yet there were some Christians in his own family. The gospel early obtained among some of the rich and great. Perhaps the apostle fared the better, and received some favour, by means of his friends at court. (2.) Chiefly they, &c. Observe, They, being bred at court, were more complacent than the rest. See what an ornament to religion sanctified civility is.

4. The apostolical benediction, as usual; The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen. The free favour and good-will of Christ be your portion and happiness."

AN
WITH PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS, OF THE
EPISTLE OF ST. PAUL TO THE COLOSSIANS.

Completed by Dr. W. Harris.

COLOSSE was a considerable city of Phrygia, and, probably, not far from Laodicea and Hierapolis; we find these three mentioned together, ch. 4. 13. It is now buried in ruins, and the memory of it chiefly preserved in this epistle. The design of the epistle is to warn them of the danger of the Jewish zealous, who pressed the necessity of observing the ceremonial law; and to fortify them against the mixture of Gentile philosophy with their Christian principles. He professes a great satisfaction in their steadfastness and constancy, and encourages them to perseverance. It was written about the same time with the epistle to the Ephesians and Philippians, Anno Domini 62, and in the same place, while he was now prisoner at Rome. He was not idle in his confinement, and the word of God was not bound. This epistle, like that to the Romans, was written to those whom he had never seen, or had any personal acquaintance with. The church planted at Colosse was not by Paul's ministry, but by the ministry of
