IX. The Lord Jesus Christ is the whole strength and only support of the Church; all saints rely and depend on him for grace, righteousness, justification, pardon of sin, safety, direction, and eternal life, 1 Cor. i. 30. "In the Lord shall one "Be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his ye can do nothing," John xv. 5.

X. There is a suitableness and proportion between Christ and the Church; as the Foundation is holy, divine, and spiritual, excellent in nature and form; so is the house or temple of God.

XI. The Lord Jesus Christ doth not only bear the weight of the whole church, but also all that appertain to it, all the pillars, braces, underprops, and supports viz., the prophets, apostles, ministers, &c., that are called pillars in the house of God. He bears up the covenant, the

DISPARITY.

I. This Foundation is but one whole entire stone, which adds to the strength and firmness of it, "Behold I lay in Zion for a Foundation, a stone," not stones; nothing besides Christ, nothing

METAPHOR.

DISPARITY.

II. Other Foundations are laid of senseless, breathless stone or brick ; things that are natural, things that are terrestrial, congealed into a massy lump, or artificially made and prepared.

III. Other Foundations many times decay, and by that means the whole building is in danger, and tumbles down.

so keeps and preserves it from rottenness and all manner of decays whatsoever. Living things do not rot nor putrify, as other things do. "And as the body by joints and bands from the head hath nourishment ministered and knit together, groweth and increaseth in strength and beauty," Col. ii. 19 ; so is it with the glorious body, the church and soul of a true believer, that is joined to Christ, this blessed Head and living Foundation ; "Because I live, ye shall live also," John xiv. 19.

IV. Other Foundations are laid by some man ; for as man builds the house, so he it is that first lays the Foundation thereof.

laid him by the prophets and apostles. hearts of believers. Christ is infinite. being or thing ? God first removes or razes by his Spirit all other Foundations ; he takes man's hopes off heaven, by his own works, legal conviction, tears, humiliations, vows, covenants, resolutions, &c., and in the place and room of all, lays Christ crucified, as the ground of hope and happiness.—Hence is all boasting excluded, and salvation wholly of grace, Rom. iii. 27. See Mr. Tillinghust, "Christ the only Foundation."

V. Other Foundations are laid of stones of little value and worth comparatively ; the Foundation of a house is not laid with precious stones, as jasper sapphire, beryl, jacinth, amethyst, diamond, &c.

This sets forth the excellency of a Foundation, and not only so, but it adds a lustre and glory to the house which is built upon it. The Foundation of New Jerusalem is said to be laid with all manner of precious stones ; and then you read of the excellency of the superstructure, "The building of the wall was of jasper, and the city was of pure gold," Rev. xxi. 18. O how glorious must that city needs be, that hath such a Foundation as Christ is ! and not only so, but how durable also are some precious stones : the diamond is the hardest stone, it cuts glass, there is nothing, as naturalists say, can break it ; Jesus Christ makes impression on the hard hearts of men by his graces ; O then how safe must it of necessity be for us to build upon this Foundation.

VI. A Foundation is often removed, fault being found with it, and another laid in the room of it ; a man may remove a Foundation which he hath laid at his pleasure, or may lay more Foundations than one.

VII. Other Foundations may be shaken, an earthquake may remove them out of their place.

II. Christ is a living, lively, and active Spirit, hence called "A living stone, disallowed indeed of men," 1 Pet. ii. 4, 5 ; he created the stones and dust of the earth ; as God, he hath his being of himself, and from everlasting, not made nor created.

III. Christ being a living Stone, in whom is spirit and life, doth not, cannot decay, and by this means the church of God, and every particular soul that is built upon him, stands sure ; he transforms the building into his own nature, and

IV. Christ is laid as a Foundation for us, and in our souls, by the Father ; it is God's act, and not our own ; "Behold I lay in Zion," &c. Who can lay Christ for a Foundation but God ? He was first laid by God in his decree, and then he

And lastly, by the Spirit also, is he laid in the

V. Christ the spiritual Foundation is a precious stone, "To whom coming as a living stone, disallowed indeed of men, but chosen of God and precious," Christ is not a common stone, but a choice rich stone, a stone of inestimable value and price ; "Behold I lay in Zion for a Foundation, a stone, elect and precious," Isa. xxviii. 16, 1 Pet. ii. 6.

VI. Christ is the only Foundation : as he is every way fit and meet to be laid in the bottom of the building, so he is without fault ; "And no other Foundation can be laid, than that which is laid, which is Christ Jesus," 1 Cor. iii. 11. "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other Gospel to you than what we have preached unto you, let him be accursed," Gal. i. 8.

VII. Christ is a Foundation that can never be shaken, the greatest revolutions, mutations, changings, turnings, and over-turnings that can come, cannot overturn this Foundation, nor remove it out of its place, Heb. xii. 28. Foundations of kingdoms, nations, common-wealths and constitutions of antichristian churches, may, and shall be shaken; but Christ, the Foundation of the true church, shall abide for ever.

METAPHOR.

VIII. Other Foundation cannot preserve the house that is built upon it; that may be totally demolished and destroyed, and yet the Foundation may remain.

DISPARITY.

VIII. Christ, the spiritual Foundation, is able to uphold and preserve the house or soul that is built upon him; "I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed to him," 2 Tim. i. 12. "Upon this rock I will build my Church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it," Matt. xvi. 18.

INFERENCES.

I. This informs us of the great wisdom and condescension of God, in contriving such a blessed Foundation for the Church and all true believers to build upon; it was the purpose of God to found his temple upon a sure basis, even the Rock Christ Jesus.

II. It also sets forth the happy and glorious state of the house of God; what can add greater glory to it, than to have a Foundation so precious, lasting, and permanent!

III. It shows the honour and excellency of Gospel-ministration; ministers do not only propound Christ, but in a subordinate sense, in the ministry of the word may be said to lay Christ as a Foundation; hence Paul saith, "I have laid the Foundation, &c., for we are labourers together with God," 1 Cor. iii. 9, 10.

IV. It reproves those that lay aside and reject this Foundation, and build upon others; as,

1. The papists, that build upon Peter, and on their own merits; and what their merits are, England and other nations can soon resolve.

2. The Quakers, who build upon the light of natural conscience; they refuse the person of Christ, and the valuable price of his blood, and introduce in his room an inward quality, viz., that beam of light that shines in men from Jesus Christ, considered as Creator, John i. 9.

3. Such as build but in part on Christ, come justly under the verge of this use of reprehension, because they do not lay all the stress and hope of their salvation upon this Foundation.

V. It serves also to put men and women upon trial, to see whether the Lord Christ be their only Foundation or not.

1. Do you really remove yourselves off all other Foundations?

2. Do you not build on, nor confide in pharisaical righteousness, even righteousness of your own, Matt. v. 20?

3. Do you not build upon federal holiness, and upon birth-privileges? "Think not to say within yourselves, we have Abraham to our Father," Matt. iii. 9.

4. Do you not build upon legal conviction, or outward reformation?

5. Do you not build upon a bare believing the history of the Gospel, upon the faith of credence?

6. Do you not build on a confession of sin?

7. Do you not build upon outward privileges, upon visible Church-membership, and external ordinances? remember the foolish virgins, Matt. xxv. 1—5.

8. Do you not build barely on the mercy of God, not well considering he is just as well as gracious, and will not acquit the guilty, notwithstanding your repentance and moral righteousness, without the atonement made by the blood of Christ, Exod. xxxiv. 6, 7?

9. Do you not build upon present purposes and resolutions to change your ways and course of life hereafter? is not this that which supports and stays your minds?

10. Do you not build upon learning, parts, and that knowledge you have in divine things above others?*

11. Do you not build upon men, ministers, the Church; taking all upon trust that such and such doctors and able divines say?

* See Mr. Tillinghust.

VI. This may caution all preachers of the Gospel, to take heed how, and what they build. Upon this Foundation if they build wood, hay, or stubble, they will suffer loss. Let them be very careful they preach nothing for doctrine but what Christ hath given in commission, and receive none, lay none into the building but living stones, such as are well hewed and squared, and fitted by the Spirit and word for the spiritual building: for God's temple must be built with gold, silver, and precious stones.

VII. Let all such that are not built upon this Foundation, be exhorted with all speed to get an interest in this Rock: for otherwise your building will be on the sand, and you will fall into the lowest hell at last.

VIII. It demonstrates the happy state of those that are built upon this sure Foundation, the prophets and apostles, "Jesus Christ himself being the chief Corner-stone, in whom all the building," &c., Col. ii. 9, Eph. ii. 21, 22. And let all those that speak the truth, grow up in love unto him in all things, who is the Head. Labour, to be well fixed, cemented, and united to this Foundation, that you may be established in the faith.

IX. And lastly, this may comfort the godly in the worst of times; for as it is a Foundation of God's laying, and of so excellent a nature in itself, you may be sure it is not in the power of men nor devils to raze or destroy it; be sure you shall be saved, whoever you are, that build in a right manner on the Rock of ages, the Lord Jesus Christ.

CHRIST THE CORNER-STONE.

"I lay in Zion a chief Corner-stone, elect and precious," 1 Pet. ii. 6.

"The Stone which the builders refused, the same is become the head of the Corner," Psal. cxviii. 22.

CHRIST by a Metaphor (called Anthropopatheia) is not only called a Stone, but also (by a very emphatical phrase) a Corner-stone, Ἀὐτὸν ἀκρογωνίαον, Matt. xxi. 42, Acts iv. 11, 1 Pet. ii. 6. And whereas builders place their strongest and most durable stone in the Corner-foundation, it denotes the firmness, strength, and duration of Christ, the Foundation or spiritual Stone, upon which the whole Church is built. It is said, Isa. iii. 17, "The Lord will smite the Corner of the head (so the Hebrew) of the daughter of Zion." The exterior angle of an edifice has a prospect to each side, and is put for principality, or the chief ruler, Judges xx. 2, 1 Sam. xiv. 38, Isa. xix. 13. Hence it is attributed to Christ, Psal. cxviii. 22, expounded, Eph. ii. 15, 16, 17, 20, he having the chief over-sight of, as well as he is the principal Foundation to the Church.

METAPHOR.

I. A Corner-stone sustains and upholds the building; if the corner of the house fall, the whole structure is in danger: "There came a wind from the wilderness, and smote the four Corners of the house, and it fell upon the young men, and they are dead," Job i. 19. Some stones may drop out of the middle of the building, and yet it may stand; but if the Corner or foundation gives way, down it falls.

II. Corner-stones are the medium by which the walls of the house are united in one building, cut the Corner-stones and

PARALLEL.

I. Christ may be compared to a Corner-stone in respect to sustentation; he is the Sustainer and Upholder of the Church, the great Pillar that bears up his elect. The Church's safety, peace, grace, comfort, and salvation is upheld by him: Eliakim was a type of Christ in this. "He shall be fastened as a nail in a sure place. And he shall be for a glorious throne to his Father's house, and they shall hang upon him all the glory of his Father's house, the offspring and the issue, all vessels of small quantity, from vessels of cups, to vessels of flagons," Isa. xxii. 21—24. All believers from small to great, are borne up by, and hang upon Jesus Christ.

II. Jesus Christ, that entire and glorious Corner-stone, unites Jews and Gentiles together; he hath made both one. He made them but one entire house and spiritual building; he ce-the two sides of the house are separated the one from the other.

METAPHOR.

III. The Corner-stone is for direction in a building, an underworkman is to take rule from hence. All other Stones must be laid level and even with that, not further out nor in. So that being fitly placed, they know how to proceed from thence.

I have done to you," John xiii. 15. "Having left us an example that we should follow his steps," 1 Pet. ii. 21.

IV. The Corner-stone preserves the house; hence a builder lays strong and firm stones in the Corner; for experience shows, that most of the dangerous rubs and hurts a house is exposed to,, usually fall upon the corner of it, and that keeps off hurt and wrong, that otherwise the rest of the building would sustain.

ble, O Lord; from the hands of the wicked preserve me, from the violent man, who hath purposed to overthrow my goings, Psal. xxxii. 7, and cxi. 4.

V. As the Corner-stones are the strongest for bearing and preserving, so the fairest stones for beauty and ornament. If the Corner-stones be graceful, rich, and curiously wrought, the whole building is the more comely. Much art and cost is bestowed on the Corner-stones, they are better and more rich usually than any other.

curiously wrought, if I may so say, richly and adorned with the divine nature, "Full of grace and truth," John i. 14.

METAPHOR.

I. Other Corner-stones of all material buildings are inanimate, senseless and lifeless things.

II. Corner-stones of a material house, are fashioned and laid by men.

III. Other stones may drop, or be driven out of the building, or be greatly marred, defaced, and spoiled.

IV. Corner-stones in a material house, as they strengthen the building; so they also receive strength from the building, and are some security to the Corner.

PARALLEL.

ments all believers together in one body, Eph. ii. 14, 15, he makes them one, in mutual love and affection; makes them all partakers of the same grace, and privileges, and salvation.

III. Jesus Christ is a believer's direction, he is our rule by which we must proceed in all spiritual things; that which is not done by Christ's command or example, or by plain rule and direction from him, must be all undone and pulled down again; all must run parallel with the line of Christ's doctrine or example: "Learn of me," Matt. xi. 28. And in another place, said he, "I have given you an example that ye should do as

IV. Christ preserves the Church of God; he receives all the rubs of enemies in his own person, which had they met with us, would soon have broken us to pieces, and defaced our souls. It is he who by his strength keeps those great dangers from us that we continually are exposed to from Satan, sin, and wicked men, and the wrath of God. All our strength and help is in him: what a great mercy it is, that God, the great Builder, hath chosen such a sure Stone for the Corner. "Thou shalt preserve me from trou-

V. Christ is the beauty of all God's Building; as he bears up and preserves, so he beautifies likewise the Church, and all believers. There would be no comelines in the house of God, all would be but as a deformed heap, were it not for this Corner-stone. What is the glory and beauty of the saints to Jesus Christ? "He is fairer than the children of men," Psal. xlv. 2, Ezek. xvi. 14. We have no comeliness but what he puts upon us. God hath spared no cost to place such a rare and choice Stone in the Corner. Christ is the Stone

DISPARITY.

I. Jesus Christ is a living Stone, he hath life in himself, and communicates life unto the whole building; and from hence, believers are called "Lively stones," 1 Pet. ii. 5.

II. Christ is both fashioned, polished, and laid in the spiritual building by God himself; "Behold, I lay in Zion a chief Corner-stone," 1 Pet. ii. 6.

III. Christ is a Stone that cannot be loosed nor disjointed, nor driven out of God's house, by all the skill of men or devils; nor can be marred, spoiled, or any ways hurt.

IV. Christ, the spiritual Corner-stone, receives no strength from any stone or part of the building; what need hath he of help from any of his saints? What can weak believers add of support to him?

METAPHOR.

V. Other buildings must have many stones for the Corner, cemented and joined together to complete and finish the superstructure, and those stones that are laid for one Corner, will not serve for every Corner of the same house.

VI. It is rare to see a material building to have Corners laid with precious stones, as jasper, onyx, diamond, &c.

finite worth and value, not only so in the opinion and esteem of others, but really so in himself; hence called the "Pearl of great price," Matt. xiii. 46.

1. He is precious in himself, being God co-equal and co-eternal with the Father; "The express image of his person," Heb. i. 3.

2. That he is so, it appears, in that he is the choice Diamond, the delight and Jewel of his Father's heart, his only-begotten Son, who lay in his bosom.

3. He is most precious, in that he is preferred so much above angels, and in his being able to undertake the work of our redemption, which none in heaven or earth had worth enough in them to do. Nothing less than this choice and valuable Jewel or precious Stone would be received, as a sufficient price, to satisfy the justice of God, or make full compensation for sin, the breach of God's holy law.

4. He is most precious in respect of his qualifications; he hath the fulness of the Godhead in him. "It pleased the Father, that in him all fulness should dwell," John i. 14.

5. Hence said to be "Full of grace and truth; God, even thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows," Heb. i. 9. He hath not, say divines, the fulness of parts, but the fulness of degrees: there may be some addition made to that fulness that is in believers; but there can be no addition made to his. There is in Christ, not only enough, the fulness of sufficiency, but also the fulness of redundancy. Angels may have no want, but in Christ is an overplus to redound to others. He hath enough to fill thousands and millions of thousands. "Of his fulness we have all received, and grace for grace."

6. Christ is precious in the esteem of the holy angels; the angelical host, to honour and show their high esteem and awful respect to him, at his birth sang with a loud voice, "Glory to God in the highest." They adore and worship him continually. All the godly regarded, and will for ever esteem him, as the most precious and inestimable Jewel in heaven or earth. The saints in heaven for ever proclaim his glorious worth and praise; they cry, "Power, riches, wisdom, strength, honour, glory, and blessing to the Lamb for ever and ever," Rev. v. 11, 12. To all the saints on earth he is precious. Paul accounted all things as dung, that he might win Christ, Phil. iii. 8, 9, 10. The spouse cries out, "He is white and ruddy, the chiefest among ten thousand," Cant. v. 10. Believers have parted with all things in this world freely for his sake; nay, in love to him, and to show how they did adore and honour him, have been made sacrifices in dreadful flames, rather than they would undervalue or deny his holy name. Christ is precious, very precious, most precious, always precious, altogether precious; precious in his nature, precious in his name, that is as precious ointment poured forth; precious in all his offices; his Spirit, grace, word, ordinances, and promises are precious. Can believers value him enough, who is their Life, life external, life internal, and life eternal? Christ is their light, he is their Mediator, Surety, Friend, Food, Clothing, ornaments, Portion, &c., in a word, he is all in all to them.

VII. A house, though its Corners should be laid with precious stones, and pearl, and all the structure suitable, and so thereby may be more glorious and durable than Corner-stones of other buildings, yet may it moulder away

DISPARITY.

V. Christ the Corner-stone, is but one whole entire Stone, yet every Corner of God's house hath the same Stone; and though the building be raised never so high, yet he fully supplieth each Corner from the bottom to the top, and there needs no other Corner-stone besides himself.

VI. Christ, the Corner-stone of the spiritual building, is a precious Stone: "Behold I lay in Zion a chief Corner-stone, elect and precious," 1 Pet. ii. 6. No jasper, onyx, diamond, or sapphire, is to be compared to him. He is of infinite worth and value, not only so in the opinion and esteem of others, but really so in himself; hence called the "Pearl of great price," Matt. xiii. 46.

VII. Christ being a precious Stone, never loses his strength or beauty, as he cannot be defaced by men or devils; eternity itself cannot dissolve this Stone, nor diminish its brightness, Christ is durable: heaven and earth shall fade away, and wax old, like a garment, but Jesus Christ is still the same, and his years fail not; "He be defaced, lose its beauty, is the same yesterday, to day, and for ever," Heb. xiii. 8.

METAPHOR.

VIII. Other precious Stones are of a small dimension, and of small weight; you may put many of them, the largest that were ever seen, in a small vessel or cabinet.

IX. Another precious Stone may have many excellent properties in it; but no one hath all virtues, excellencies, forms, and colours in it.

spiritual way is far more transcendent in him. He cures the sight, strengthens and cures the heart, makes fruitful, resists poison, &c. See the metaphors, "Pearl of great price, and Foundation."

DISPARITY.

VIII. Christ Jesus, the spiritual precious Stone, is exceeding great: as God, he is of infinite dimension, filling heaven and earth with his presence. He is large enough for the whole foundation, and every Corner; this one entire Stone serves for all.

IX. All manner of perfections, virtues, choice and admirable excellencies, meet together in the Lord Jesus; his brightness is far above the brightness of diamonds, his whiteness excels the whiteness of pearls; and there is no medical virtue or quality in any precious stone, but in a

INFERENCES.

I. FROM hence we may infer, that the church of God is a very rich and glorious building, as it was foretold it should be: "O thou afflicted, tossed with tempests, and not comforted; behold, I will lay thy stones with fair colours, and thy foundation with sapphire," Isa. liv. 11, 12.

II. Ascribe all the beauty and glory of the Church, and of the saints, to the Lord Jesus.

III. Bless God for this choice and precious Stone of the Corner. The more excellent Christ is, the more it should draw out and enlarge our hearts to bless and praise God for him.

IV. For trial. Is Christ precious to you? I shall lay down a few rules, whereby you may try yourselves.

1. Dost thou own Christ to be very God? He cannot be valued nor esteemed by any, as he is in himself, till they thus account of him, and believe in him.

2. Dost thou honour, adore, and obey him, as thou dost honour, adore, and obey the Father! "All men should honour the Son even as they honour the Father," John v. 23.

3. Is there nothing here below, which thou valuest and prizest above Christ? An hypocrite hath always something that lies in his bosom, which he esteems and prizes more than Christ: "their hearts go after their covetousness," Ezek. xxxiii. 31. The young man went away sorrowful, because the world was uppermost in his affection. If Christ be truly precious to any, he is superlatively precious to them, Matt. xix. 22.

4. If God should bid thee ask what thou wilt, as he did Solomon, what wouldst thou request of him? would it be, thinkest thou, this precious Stone, this Christ, this Pearl of great price, to have a right to him, to be like him, to enjoy him, to be with him for ever.

5. Is Christ much in your thoughts? "Where your treasure is, there your hearts will be also," Matt. vi. 21.

6. Hast thou denied thyself of all things, or art thou ready so to do, and to follow him; "For whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do account them but dung that I may win Christ," Phil. iii. 8, 9, 10.

7. Canst thou be satisfied with anything thou dost enjoy without him? Canst thou say, with one in another case, yet all this availeth me nothing, so long as I see not or have a clear evidence of my interest in Jesus Christ?

8. Dost thou build wholly upon him? is he all to thee? dost thou see him all in pacification? it was he that appeased the wrath of the Father, satisfied both law and justice. He is all in justification; "Who is the Lord our righteousness." He is all in election, the first and chief of his Father's choice, the way of it: "He hath chosen us in him," Eph. i. 4, 7. Is he all to thee for acceptation? "who hath made us accepted in the beloved," Rom. v. 5. He is all in conversion; it is he that shows us the necessity of it, that doth quicken and beget us by his word and Spirit: it is he that forms a new spirit in us. Is he all to thee for pardon of sin? he purchased pardon: It is by his own blood, viz., that atonement which he hath made, we come to have our sins forgiven. It is he that gives us a heart to ask it, and a hand to receive it. Is Christ all to thee in respect of every grace? he gives faith: it is he that is the Author and Finisher of it: it is he that "sheds love abroad in our hearts, by the Holy Ghost." All grace is treasured up in him, all grace is communicated to us through him. Is he all to thee in the ministry of the word? it is Christ that is preached, it is he that gives grace to preach, and opens the ear to hear the word preached, and helps the soul to receive the word. Is Christ all to thee in ordinances? the Lord's supper holds forth his death, his body broken, and his blood shed. He is the sum and substance of it. Baptism shows his burial, and his resurrection. In ordinances or duties, art thou not satisfied unless thou meetest with Christ Jesus.

9. Art thou willing to accept of Christ as the Father offers him? Art thou willing to have him to be thy Prince, as well as thy Saviour! to destroy thy sin as well as to save thy soul?

10. Dost thou long to be like him? Art thou as willing and desirous to be holy, as to be happy? to live to him here, as well as to live with him hereafter? Is every thing in Christ, or that belongs to Christ, precious to thee?

V. Reproof; this reprehends those that lay aside, and would build without this precious Corner-stone. Who they are, see metaphor, Christ the Foundation.

VI. Labour to esteem and highly value Jesus Christ. What are all things without him? if he is not precious to thee, nay thy all, all thy profit by him at last will be nothing at all; what wilt thou do at death?

Qu. Some may say, what shall we do to get Christ? to obtain him who is so precious.

1. Let thy sins go. 2. Let all thy righteousness go in point of dependence, do not trust to that. 3. Let all consultations with flesh and blood go, and close immediately with Christ. 4. Improve the means of grace God is pleased to afford thee, attend upon the ministry of the word. Lastly, here is comfort to all true believers: you that have Christ, have all; and let me tell you, you can never have less than all, for this precious Stone can never be taken away from you, having made the blessed choice, that one thing needful with Mary.

CHRIST THE WONDERFUL COUNSELLOR.

"And his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor," &c. Isa. ix. 6.

COUNSELLOR is a word of a double signification, respecting two ranks of men. (1.) Such as appertain to the high courts of princes called Counsellors of state. (2.) Such as appertain to the high courts of judicature, who are called Counsellors at law. These two ranks of men have their proper work and business peculiarly appropriated to them, &c. The first of these ranks of men are in Counsel with the king, to make and establish laws; therefore called elders, or senators, &c. 2. The proper work and business of the second rank or order of men is to unfold and plead law; therefore called barristers or Counsellors, &c. Many things belonging to each station, do very fairly agree to the Son of God, who therefore is not unfitly called Wonderful, Counsellor, &c., [Luke ii. 47. Wonderful, because the greatest and wisest that ever was. Counsellor, because his place, work, and circumstances agree thereto, as appears in these following considerations.

METAPHOR.

I. SOME Counsellors are of a noble extraction, well descended, which gives them advantages above others. Such have a double advantage. 1. In respect of honour. 2. In respect of education. Men basely or meanly born and descended, are seldom or

PARALLEL. !

I. THE Lord Jesus is of a high and sublime extraction, well descended; according to the flesh of the blood royal, of the lineage and stock of David, the king of Israel: and in respect of his Divinity, the eternal Son of God. Possessor of heaven and earth; he is Lord of the angels, and King of saints and nations: and also King of all the kings of the earth; "He that never advanced to the honour of Counsellors in the highest courts, especially of parliaments.

METAPHOR.

the greatest honour, the highest education, being by the Father, brought up with him, and daily his delight.

II. A Counsellor is brought up to useful learning for so great an employ or office; men who are illiterate being unfit for it.

knows the tempers and manners of all people. He hath received the gift of oratory from the greatest Master of tongues and languages in the world. The Son doeth whatsoever he seeth the Father do. The Lord God hath given him the tongue of the learned, &c., so that he can understand without an interpreter, and speak without human assistance, Isa. l. 4.

III. A Counsellor is a man of worth, otherwise unfit for that function, or to appertain to any court.

long standing and experience. 4. As he is united to the Ancient of days; who is the centre of all perfection.

IV. A Counsellor of state is, or ought to be a man of a high and heroic spirit, not concerned about trifles and things of an inferior nature, but mostly taken up with the more weighty and more considerable matters of the law.

together in one, all things in himself, whether they be things in heaven, or things on earth," Eph. i. 10.

V. A Counsellor of state, is chosen to that high sphere and dignity; he comes not in himself, but by choice.

VI. A Counsellor of state is admitted into the king's court; takes his place at the council-table, and his chief business lies there.

VII. A great and wise Counsellor of state, is made acquainted with the most secret purposes of the king himself, without whose counsel and consent there is nothing acted, nor brought to light.

John i. 18. "He brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel," 1 Tim. vi. 16.

VIII. A Counsellor of state is one, who is thought worthy to be the king's familiar and companion.

PARALLEL.

comes from above, is above all," Eph. iv. 6. "The second man is the Lord from heaven," 1 Cor. xv. 47. "The only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth," John i. 14; having the advantage of

II. Jesus Christ is qualified and fitted every way with heavenly learning, for the highest undertaking of this kind whatsoever, John i. l. 2; having been with God, and also is God, knows every thing, that is done in heaven and earth; people. He hath rules of judgment above others, to establish principalities and thrones in heaven, to reform nations and kingdoms, to reclaim the whole world, and bring heaven and earth into an amicable correspondence. "That he might gather

III. Jesus Christ is a man of worth, most fit to be Counsellor in the high court above, and that in these four following respects. 1. In respect of his great wisdom. 2. The knowledge of all laws and customs amongst men. 3. Of his

IV. The Lord Jesus was a man of great and noble spirit, not busied about low and inferior things, of a mean consideration; but about matters of the most weighty moment, to establish principalities and thrones in heaven, to reform nations and kingdoms, to reclaim the whole world, and bring heaven and earth into an amicable correspondence. "That he might gather

V. Christ, the great Counsellor, was elected, and chosen by God himself to act in this high sphere and capacity, called the man of his right-hand, Acts ii. 34. His elect, in whom his soul delighteth, "One chosen out of the people," Psal. lxxxix. 19.

VI. Jesus Christ was admitted into the high court of heaven, took the place there at the right-hand of the Majesty on high, in the presence and view of all the angels, and the seven spirits that are before the throne. "He is entered into heaven, and is set down at the right-hand of God," Eph. i. 20, Heb. xii. 2, and viii. 1.

VII. Christ, that great and wise Counsellor, is made acquainted with the great and wise purposes of the great and wise King of heaven and earth; nothing is hid from him as God: without him there was nothing created or done. "No man hath seen God at any time, save the only begotten that is in his bosom of the Father, he hath declared him," John i. 18. "He brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel," 1 Tim. vi. 16.

VIII. The Lord Jesus is God's familiar and companion. "Awake, O sword, against my shepherd, and the man that is my fellow," Zech. xiii. 7. "Who being in the form of God, thought it no robbery to be equal with God," Phil. ii. 6.

METAPHOR.

VI. Counsellors at law have great respect amongst men, especially those who do most need them, and make use of them.

him to be their Saviour.—“Yea, and doubtless I count all things but loss, for the excellency of the knowledge of Jesus Christ among ten thousand,” Cant. v. 10.

VII. A Counsellor at law puts an end to controversies, by non-suiting, or overthrowing the party which is on the adversaries’ side.

for thee,” &c. 2 Cor. xii. 9.—“And the &c. Rev. xii. 9.—“To this end was the works of the devil,” 1 John iii. 8.

VIII. A Counsellor at law makes contracts in great and weighty cases between parties.

he is called, “The Mediator of the New

IX. A Counsellor at law discovers flaws in evidences, to undeceive the over-credulous.

need of nothing, and knowest not that thou art wretched, and poor, and blind, and miserable, and naked,” Rev. iii. 17. “Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God,” John iii. 3.

X. A Counsellor at law is of general use to men, since their tempers have been corrupted, their manners vitiated, and a necessity of multiplying laws to corrupt them, &c.

which many go on in their errors, until they forfeit all privileges, fall under the strokes and penalties of the law, and become miserable for ever through ignorance, unbelief, and disobedience.

XI. A Counsellor at law is a pleader of causes, which is none of the least part of his work.

There are many disparities; Christ excels all other Counsellors in many respects. See Advocate.

PARALLEL.

VI. Jesus Christ hath great respect amongst men; the Turks own him for a great prophet, the papists for the Son of God, but his own disciples, that see an excellency in him, and an absolute necessity of him, make use of him, own my Lord,” &c. Phil. iii. 8.—“He is the chiefest

VII. The Lord Jesus puts an end to controversies, by non-suiting, or overthrowing the devil and all other adversaries of the soul, in their own plea:—“I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not,” Luke xxii. 32.—“My grace is sufficient dragon and his angels were thrown out of heaven,” Son of God manifested, that he might destroy the VIII. So Christ makes contracts between the great God and his people, in that weighty case that concerns their salvation; and mediates and seals the covenant between them; for which cause Covenant,” Heb. xii. 24. See Mediator.

IX. Christ hath discovered flaws in evidences, to undeceive those that have been mistaken about their right to the heavenly inheritance. “Thou sayest I am rich, and increased in goods, and have thou art wretched, and poor, and blind, and miserable, and naked,” Rev. iii. 17. “Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God,” John iii. 3.

X. So Christ is of general use to men, since the nature of mortals hath been so generally corrupted by the fall, by which means there is a necessity of him not only as a Priest to offer sacrifice for us, but also as a Prophet or Counsellor, to expound the obligations to holiness, and the spirituality of the laws of God to us; for want of

XI. Jesus Christ is a Pleader of causes, which is none of the least part of his work: for which see Advocate opened.

There are many disparities; Christ excels all other Counsellors in many respects. See Advocate.

INFERENCES.

I. Sinners may learn from hence, whither to go in all doubtful cases for counsel in all cases relating to their spiritual condition.

II. If thou dost not know the way to heaven, go to Christ by prayer, and take the directions of his word.

III. If thou dost not know how matters stand between God and thy soul, go to Christ, read his word, that will inform thee whether thy condition be good or bad: if any sin is lodged in thee or beloved, and spared by thee, he tells thee thou wilt miscarry for ever.

IV. If thou refusest to take his counsel, but rather followest the counsel of thine own heart, or the counsel of wicked relations, neighbours, or great ones of the earth, who labour to draw thy heart from God, from following the counsel of Christ, thou art undone.

V. Take heed when thou knowest what Christ’s counsel is, thou dost not reject it like the Pharisees, who refused to be baptized with the baptism of John.

SIMILE.

calls her chickens to her, when she perceives they are in danger by the kite, or any other enemy, to be destroyed.

die, O house of Israel?" Ezek. xviii. 31. Now it is to England, yea, to London: O that they would once hear Christ's call before it is too late, and the things that concern their peace be hid from their eyes! &c.

V. The Hen stands ready prepared to receive her chickens under her wings, to defend them against all violence that may happen to them.

VI. The Hen is very desirous to gather all her chickens together, and cover them with her wings; she would not have one of them wanting.

why will ye die, O house of Israel? turn and live, saith the Lord," Ezek. xviii. 31, 32. "How often would I have gathered thy children together!" &c.

VII. The Hen gathers her chickens to her; and that they may have food as well as nourishment and shelter, she looks about and scratches to get them meat.

VIII. The Hen succours, refreshes, and makes lively such chickens that are weak and hang down their wings, and can scarce go; she soon recovers them when she gets them under her wings.

IX. The Hen, it is observed, if she find any crumbs, corn, or any other good thing, she gives it to her chickens, though she want it herself: she spares out of her own mouth, and puts it into theirs.

SIMILE.

I. The Hen cannot save and defend her chickens under her wings, when she hath gathered them to her, being a poor, weak, inconsiderable creature.

II. The Hen, when her chickens are grown up, cares not for them; she will (it is noted) rather strike at them, and beat them from her.

III. The Hen loses oftentimes her chickens; the kite gets them away from her, and makes a prey of them.

PARALLEL.

and tears in his eyes, "O that thou hadst known, in this thy day, the things that belong to thy peace; but now they are hid from thine eyes! O Jerusalem, Jerusalem!" why, what is the matter? An enemy is at hand, ruin is at the door; "Why will you

V. The Lord Jesus stands with his arms and heart open, ready to receive all true penitent sinners, that come unto him; "I have spread out my hands all the day long," &c. Isa. lxxv. 2. "Come unto me all ye that labour, and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest," &c. Matt. xi. 28, 29.

VI. The Lord Jesus hath such bowels of pity and compassion to sinful mankind, that he would have none of them perish, "But come to the knowledge of the truth, and be saved," 1 Tim. ii. 2, 3, 4. How desirous is he to get them all under his wings of grace and protection; "Turn ye, turn ye, How desirous is he to get them all under his wings of grace and protection; "Turn ye, turn ye, turn and live, saith the Lord," Ezek. xviii. 31, 32. "How often would I have gathered thy children together!" &c.

VII. The Lord Jesus calls to sinners, that they may have the bread of life. "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters," Isa. lv. 1. "Eat ye that which is good; yea, the bread that never perisheth," John vi. 27. Christ gives bread that never perisheth.

VIII. All sin-sick and diseased souls that are weak and hang down their heads, or their wings, and go drooping all the day, as it were, half-dead, no sooner are they got under the wings of Christ, but he graciously succours and refreshes them, making them brisk and very lively.

IX. Christ out of his infinite bowels to his people, finding no other meat was so good and excellent for them, gave them food from heaven, even his own body, "My flesh is meat indeed," &c., John vi. 55.

DISPARITY.

I. The Lord Christ is strong and able to save, hide, and defend all his people that come to him, under his wings, being the most high, omnipotent, eternal Jehovah: "The Father and I am one;" "He thought it no robbery to be equal with God," Phil. ii. 6, 7.

II. Our blessed Saviour will never cease to take care of, and provide for his poor children; his eye is as well upon the oldest and strongest Christians as upon the weakest and youngest: "Cast all your care upon him, for he careth for you," &c.

III. The Lord Jesus Christ cannot, will not lose one of them that the Father hath given him, "Those that thou hast given me I have lost none, but the son of perdition," &c. John xvii. 12, "I give them eternal life, and they shall never perish," &c. John x. 28.

SIMILE.

IV. A Hen soon forgets her chickens, which she hath bred and brought up.

DISPARITY.

IV. Christ never can, nor will forget his saints. "Can a woman forget her sucking child, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? yea, she may, but I will not forget thee," Isa. xlix. 15, 16.

INFERENCES.

I. What great encouragement doth this similitude afford to all, yea to the vilest of sinners? O what compassion is there in Christ's heart towards you, how willing is he to gather you to himself!

II. It also informs us of that great blindness and horrid obstinacy which is in the hearts of wicked men; "How often would I have gathered Israel, and they would not be gathered! I would, but ye would not!" how dare sinners then to charge their eternal overthrow, perishing, and ruin upon the Lord Jesus Christ? "Know, O sinner, thy destruction is of thyself," Hos. xiii. 9.

III. It also truly informs us, that all safety and salvation is in the Lord Jesus Christ. Under his wings we must get if we would be secure from the enemy of our souls, and be delivered from eternal danger: "Unto him shall the gathering of the people be," Gen. xlix. 10.

IV. Of what amazing nature was the great condescension of the blessed Jesus, who made himself of no reputation! he became weak, poor, and sensible of our infirmities, touching the flesh, that we might be strong, rich, and partake of his perfections, and glorious fulness, Phil. ii. 7.

V. Here is also very much comfort to all true believers, whoever they be, that are gathered by the word and Spirit unto Christ: he will succour, guide, revive, and defend them for ever. He infinitely out-doth the Hen; his bowels exceed the bowels of the tenderest mother to her sucking child. He is strong enough also, as well as tender, not only willing but able. Fear not Satan, "he hath swallowed up death in victory." The kite hath (as one observes) as it were an aching tooth at the chickens, fain would he make a prey of them: so would the devil of believers. Christ knows how to preserve them, by gathering them all under his wings. Soul, fear not, if thou art under the protection of the Lord Jesus Christ, thou art in safety from all temporal and spiritual dangers.

VI. If Christ be so tender and compassionate unto sinners, and seeks to gather them unto him; who will pity them if they perish at last and are damned, when all is from their own vile, stubborn, and wilful obstinacy?

VII. If the Lord Jesus Christ be so tender of, and kind to his saints which he hath gathered to himself, and sheltered under his wings; then let this doctrine teach Christians in an especial manner to be kind one to another, and tender one of another, and to do their utmost endeavour to defend one another in this evil day, from the common enemy both of body and soul.

VIII. This may serve for seasonable reproof to all those, who profess the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, and hope for preservation by him, and shelter under his wings, yet, instead of endeavouring to the utmost to help one another, revile, backbite, and persecute one another, for small and circumstantial differences in profession, and thereby give the common enemy advantage over them both, "A divided house cannot stand," Mark iii. 25.

CHRIST THE CAPTAIN OF OUR SALVATION.

"To make the Captain of our Salvation perfect through sufferings," Heb. ii. 10.

THIS is a military term, the Greek ἡγεμῶν, a Captain, being derived from ἄγω, which signifies to lead: and ἀρχὴν also, a Captain, derived from ἀρχῆ which signifies beginning, chief, or government, denoting in a borrowed sense from military commanders, the rule, dominion, and principality of Christ over all, and that he leads his spiritual militia safe through all perils in their Christian warfare. Being to enter upon a military subject, and the chief of that rank, we shall consider Captain in a threefold respect.

1. In respect of his qualifications.
2. In respect of his place and office.
3. In respect of his progress or actions.

METAPHOR.

I. A Captain is supposed to be a man qualified for his place, to which there are these things necessary. 1. That he be free and willing to take that work and office upon himself; it is not meet he should be forced to do it. 2. It behoved him to be one faithful in all things to his sovereign. 3. A Captain must be valiant and courageous, not easily dismayed, though he meet with never such hard and difficult service. 4. He ought also to be well skilled in the work and duty of his place and office.

of an ill-natured king, could not make him retreat, when he had entered the field, slighted his enemies' high words and vain flourishes. "Go, tell that fox that I work miracles this day and to-morrow, and the third day I shall be made perfect," Luke xiii. 32. The contempt of his enemies, or persuasion of his friends, could not at all abate his valour, he knew he must, and resolved he would, be about his Father's business, Luke ii. 49. 4. Christ, was fitted with wisdom and understanding, he is called the wisdom of God, 1 Cor. i. 24.

II. A Captain is made so by his commission, which is his authority to act in this capacity.

from the Father. "I came not of myself, the Father sent me. I received commandment from the Father," John viii. 42.

III. A Captain hath the power of listing soldiers under his command to serve in the king's war.

Cephas, Peter, James, and John, who listed themselves under his command; with many others we read of in the Gospel.

IV. A Captain by virtue of his place and office doth nominate his officers, and appoint them their proper work, gives out his orders, beyond which they are not to venture.

maria, nor to the cities of the Gentiles, endured from on high." Add not to his

V. A Captain hath the keeping of muster-rolls, wherein all the names of his under-officers and soldiers are entered, by which he calls them over, and knows them all by name.

PARALLEL.

I. Jesus Christ, the Captain of our salvation had not only these four, but all other honourable, and necessary qualifications, that made him fit to be a Leader. For, 1. Jesus Christ was free and ready, had no force put upon him, but came voluntarily and of his own free will to undertake this office, &c., he looked round about, and saw that there was none to help or to undertake this work, then said he, "Lo, I come to do thy will, O God," Isa. lxiii. 5, Heb. x. 7, and iii. 6. 2. Jesus Christ was faithful over his own house, called the faithful and true Witness, he never so much as thought in the least of betraying of his trust. It was impossible indeed he should be unfaithful, who was without sin, the holy and immaculate Lamb of God. 3. Christ was valiant and resolute, the danger of death, and threats

II. Christ was commissioned by God, after his qualifications did commend him to this place; for though he offered freely to accept, yet he acted not of himself, but by command and authority

III. Jesus Christ hath the power of listing spiritual soldiers under his command, to serve in the wars of the soul, the battle of the Lord of hosts. He took the names of Nathaniel, Zaccheus, listed themselves under his command; with many

IV. Jesus Christ doth appoint saints their proper work, and gives forth his orders, beyond which they are not to pass. He nominated the twelve apostles to be the next to himself, and gave orders that they should not march beyond the confines of Judea, but tarry at Jerusalem till fresh supply of strength came in. "Go not to Samaria, nor to the cities of the Gentiles, endure from on high." Add not to his word, &c.

V. Christ hath a book wherein the names of his saints and faithful followers are recorded, called in scripture, "The Lamb's book, or book of life; whose names are in the book of life; the book of life of the Lamb, slain from the foundation of the world," Rev. xxi. 27, and xx. 12. He calls his own sheep by name," &c., John x. 3.

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

VI. A Captain leads his soldiers out into the field to be exercised and disciplined, to be made fit for service against the day of battle.

VII. A Captain makes a speech to his soldiers to encourage them in the way of their duty, and shows them the dangers of neglect and remissness.

Matt. v. 4,⁵ 6. "But except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven," Matt. v. 20. "Ye that have abode with me in my temptations, I appoint you a kingdom," &c. With a multitude of such like speeches which are contained in the holy Gospel, which he uttered, to encourage and animate all his disciples in their spiritual warfare.

VIII. A Captain hath power to cashier, can take in or shut out, as he seeth cause.

IX. A Captain is the Head of a company, commander over a band of men body the Church;" "given to be a Leader and Commander to the people," Isa. lv. 4, Eph. i. 21, 22.

X. A Captain when he hath taken his place, marches in the head of his company, runs the greatest hazard, deserts not his men for fear of danger.

till he suffered for their sakes, the bitter death of the cross, &c., and is spiritually with them always "To the end of the world," John xiii. 1, Matt. xxviii. 20.

XI. A Captain gives the word of command to his soldiers, which they are carefully to learn and observe.

XII. A Captain by his place is engaged to war, both offensive and defensive, as occasion shall require.

mies against him. "I came not to Matt. x. 34.

XIII. A Captain meets with enemies to try his skill and courage.

Jews, but principalities and powers, no less than Beelzebub himself, and all his train, whom he fairly engaged with eminent success, Matt. iv. 5, 6, 7.

XIV. A Captain makes use of armour and weapons, of which there is no small need in the day of battle.

VI. Jesus Christ leads his saints to the seaside, to the mountains, to the desert, to exercise and make them fit for service against the day of battle, by which he taught their hands to war, as it were, and their fingers to fight against the devil, the flesh, and the world, Matt. iv. 1, and xiii. 1.

VII. Christ made large speeches to all his followers (see his sermon on the mount) to encourage them in the way of their duty, and show them the great dangers of neglect and remissness. "Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness," &c. "Blessed are the meek," &c.,

VIII. Jesus Christ takes in and shuts out, as he sees cause; he cashiered Judas, Demas, Hymeneus, Philetus, and Alexander, and takes in Paul, Barnabas, and Apollo into his company, 1 Tim. i. 20.

IX. The Lord Jesus is the Head of all true Christians, and Commander of the Church militant in chief, all the bands of the white regiment march under his banner; "He is the Head of his

X. Christ when he was baptized by John, took his place in the ministry, as the Leader of his Church, and ran the greatest hazard; yet deserted not his followers for fear of danger; he not only loved them to the end, but did bear them company, and abode with them to the last, even

XI. Christ gives the word of command to his saints, which they are to observe. If any man will serve me, let him follow me, John xii. 26. "Teach them to observe all things that I command you," Matt. xxviii. 20.

XII. So is Christ by being the Captain of our salvation for war, not originally from his own disposition, for he is for peace; but by the resolved opposition that is in the hearts of his enemies to send peace on the earth, but to bring a sword,"

XIII. Jesus Christ met with enemies, not only flesh and blood, Eph. vi. 12, yea, potent flesh and blood, men in power and high-places, such as Herod, Pontius Pilate, and the rulers of the

XIV. Jesus made use both of armour and weapons; he saw no small need for it, viz., 1. "The breast-plate of righteousness," Eph. vi. 14, 17. When Satan, and wicked men, by their temptations would have drawn him from his allegiance, by great offers of power and glory.* 2. "The sword of the Spirit," by which he cut down the devil, and the wicked Jews, in all their assaults: "It is written, it is written," &c. 3. "The shield of faith," when he came to the last and most bloody battle of all: "For the joy that was set before him, he endured the cross, despised the shame, and sat down at the right-hand of the majesty on high," Heb. xii. 2.

METAPHOR

XV. Captains are commonly stout men, and will make good their ground against an enemy, scorn to yield till they die.

XVI. A good Captain takes care for his men to preserve and secure them, whether he lives or dies himself.

duct, no less than the Holy Ghost, the Comforter. 3. He prayed for them on earth, and he prays in heaven, to engage the protection of Almighty God for them: "Father, keep through thine own name those that thou hast given me," &c., John xiv. 16, xvii. 11—20.

XVII. A Captain hath the power to prefer his men to office, that he approves of to be fit and worthy.

Eph. iv. 11. "I thank Christ Jesus,

XVIII. A wise Captain puts the best men into the greatest service; he makes not young and unexperienced men, commanders of companies, and leaders of parties, lest the work should miscarry in their hands.

XIX. A Captain in weighty affairs is joined with the council of war, without whom there is nothing of grand importance transacted.

done at first; "All things were made that was made." When commission proper sphere, Christ was there. See Counsellor.

XX. A Captain's place is a place of honour, where the subject is justly worthy of it, and the army legally raised.

not one debauched person in the army is continued in the muster-rolls, but presently turned off, blotted out, and delivered up to Satan, when discovered by his inferior officers to be such. "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness: from such turn away, Deliver such over to Satan," 1 Cor. v. 5. Turn him into his own kingdom. "Because thou hast loved righteousness, and hated iniquity, therefore God, even thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows," Heb. i. 9. "That all men might honour the Son, even as they honour the Father," John v. 23.

XXI. A valiant and noble-hearted Captain offers terms of peace to the enemy, before he fall upon them and fight them, to prevent effusion of

PARALLEL.

XV. Jesus Christ, like a most valiant Captain, made good his ground against all the force and artillery of hell, in a glorious manner, even to the death of the cross.

XVI. Christ took great care of his saints, to preserve and secure them, however it fared with himself. 1. He left them good orders to observe in his absence, the rules of the holy Gospel. 2. He took care to send them a good guide for their conduct. 3. He prayed for them on earth, and he prays in heaven, to engage the protection of Almighty God for them: "Father, keep through thine own name those that thou hast given me," &c., John xiv. 16, xvii. 11—20.

XVII. Jesus Christ prefers his saints and followers, whom he finds worthy: "He gave some apostles, some prophets, some evangelists, pastors, and teachers, for the work of the ministry," &c., who hath put me into the ministry," 1 Tim. i. 12.

XVIII. Christ made not novices," and inexperienced christians, ministers and pastors of churches, and leaders of societies; he set Peter, James, and John to be apostles and leaders in the first place; and Paul, Sylvanus, and Timotheus, stout and brave commanders, to bring up (as it were) the rear: "God hath set forth us the apostles last of all, as it were, appointed to death," 1 Cor. iv. 9.

XIX. Jesus Christ, in all weighty affairs, is joined with the Father and Holy Spirit, the great council of heaven; and without him who is called Wonderful, Counsellor, there is nothing of grand importance transacted either in heaven or earth, Isa. ix. 6. Nay without him was nothing by him, and without him was not any thing made was given to creatures of all kinds to act in their

XX. Christ's place is a place of honour, because he was worthy, Rev. v. 3, 4, and the army that he hath raised is not a rebellious army, but legally raised, and behave themselves well; they are kept under good government and discipline,

XXI. Jesus Christ offers terms of peace and reconciliation, because he would prevent their ruin, if possible, before he fall upon them and fight against them with the sword of his mouth.

* See the nature of the Christian armour under the head of Metaphors, relating to the graces of the Spirit.

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

blood if possible.

&c. "I gave her space to repent of her fornication, but she repented not," Rev. ii. 21. "I will kill her children with death," &c.

XXII. Captains when their favour is refused, put men to the sword, and make slaughtering work in the world.

vour by Jesus Christ. See the lamentable story in Josephus, &c. And what work will shortly be made with bloody Rome, in the day of death. "Mourning and famine that is coming on apace, when she shall have blood given her to drink, and shall be utterly burnt with fire," Rev. xvi. 5, 6. And what devastation will be made by this great Captain, who is red in his apparel, and his clothes like them that tread in the wine-press, at the battle of Armageddon, when the vast armies of the beast shall be slaughtered and destroyed, by the sharp sword that goes out of his mouth, "And blood shall come forth to the horses' bridles, for a thousand six hundred furlongs," Rev. xiv. 19, 20. "The fowls of heaven shall be filled with their flesh, there shall be burying work for multitudes, seven months," Ezek. xxxix. 12. "By fire and sword shall he plead with all flesh, and the slain of the Lord shall be many," Isa. lxvi. 15, 16.

XXIII. A Captain doth not only come off a conqueror, but improves his conquests and victories to many degrees of advantage. 1. To the discouragement of adversaries. 2. In spoiling their forts and strength. 3. In the erecting trophies. 4. In disposing the prey, to gratify and reward his soldiers that engaged with him in the war.

great and small, make them rulers over cities, over all nations, to bind kings in chains, and nobles in fetters of iron; and dash them in pieces like potters' vessels, Psal. cxlix. 8, 9; give the upright dominion over them in the morning; place them upon thrones with palms in their hands; make them kings and princes in all the earth, to reign with him "Till he deliver up the kingdom to the Father," 1 Cor. xv. 24, 28, which puts a final end to all the wars: but retains the honourable title of being the Captain of our salvation, for ever, even for ever, Amen.

"Turn at my reproof," Prov. i. 23. "How often would I have gathered thy children together," &c. "Into whatsoever place you enter, say, peace," XXII. Jesus Christ, when his grace and offers of mercy are refused, hath, and will make slaughtering work in the earth. O what work was made upon Jerusalem! not long after the refusing the terms of peace, and offers of grace and fa-

XXIII. Jesus Christ at his first coming did weaken the kingdom of Satan, spoiled principalities, set up trophies of his victory, made a show of them openly, led captivity in triumph, and will complete the work of his second coming, Eph. iv. 9, Col. ii. 15. Will take the old dragon and bind him for a thousand years. And at the end of the thousand years, cast the dragon, the beast and the false prophet, into the perpetual dungeon, Rev. xx. 2, 10. He will then give a reward to all his prophets, and saints, both

INFERENCES.

I. From hence we may infer what great danger Christ's enemies are in, and the certainty of their being spoiled if they stand out against him. "The enemies of the Lord shall be broken to pieces," 1 Sam. ii. 10. "The Lamb shall overcome them," Rev. xvii. 14.

II. That it is the best for Christ's followers to keep close to their Leader, not to forsake their own Captain; they can never chose one like him: with him there is safety, and certainty of victory. Let us say to him, as Peter did, "Whither shall we go? (thou art on the strongest side) for thou hast the words of eternal life."

III. That it is the interest of all his enemies, to submit to him whilst terms of peace are offered to them, there is no standing out against him. Can thy heart endure? Can thy hands be strong in the day that he (the lion of the tribe of Judah) shall deal with thee? Many, even of the mighty, have fallen under him, the dragon and his angels could not stand before him. "How much less then man, that is a worm; and the Son of man, which is a worm?" Job. xxx. 6.

See metaphors, Consuming Fire, Ambassador, and Man of War.

CHRIST A REFINER.

"For he is like a Refiner's fire, &c. "He shall sit as a Refiner and a purifier of silver," &c. Mal. iii. 2, 3.

THIS similitude is taken from Refiners, who in crucibles melt their metal, and separate the drossy parts from that which is pure: so Christ by a divine heat and warmth refines and purifies the graces he bestows on believers, consuming the wicked and viscious parts, which are elsewhere called dross. This Refining is called the fiery trial, 1 Cor. iii. 13, &c., upon which place Chemnitius says, this fiery trial is exercised either by outward troubles, or by temptations of conscience, or by a more clear manifestations of truth by the word, which leads men from the darkness of error and ignorance to the light, which purges out those dregs that agree not with the pure graces of the Spirit.

SIMILE.

I. A Refiner is one that tries and refines metals, whether silver or gold, &c.

II. Gold, or silver, before a Refiner's fire refines it, as it is taken out of the earth, is full of drossy matter.

III. A Refiner, to purge and purify gold, that so he may make it very pure, hath his furnace, and uses fire,

IV. A Refiner knows before gold be tried and refined in the fire, it is not for his use, it it not pliable.

V. A Refiner melts the gold, and makes it very soft, and thereby makes it fit for his purpose.

of my people," Jer. ix. 7. As much as them to be pliable, that I may fit them heart soft," Job xxiii. 16.

VI. A Refiner, to hasten, and the better to accomplish his work, makes the fire more hot, or adds to the heat thereof.

will. "If need be, you are in heaviness, through manifold temptations: that the trial of your faith, being much more precious than gold," &c., 1 Pet. i. 7. "Think it not strange concerning the fiery trial, which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you," 1 Pet. iv. 12.

VII. A Refiner separates the dross from the gold, and makes it much more fine and pure than it was before, and thereby makes it very valuable. A little refined gold is much set by, and prized above that which is coarse and drossy.

PARALLEL.

I. Jesus Christ tries and refines his people, who are compared to gold; and he not only tries them, but also their graces, Lam. iv. 2.

II. The hearts of God's people before Christ, the spiritual Refiner, refines and purges them, are full of corruption, sin, and filthiness. Naturally men and women are very foul and drossy, Job xxv. 4, Matt. xv. 19.

III. Jesus Christ, that he may purge and purify his people, puts them into a furnace of affliction. "As the firing-pot for silver and the furnace for gold, so the Lord tries the heart," Prov. xvii. 3. "I will refine thee," &c. "I have chosen thee in the furnace of affliction," Isa. xlviii. 10.

IV. Jesus Christ finds that until the hearts of his people be purified and refined by him, which he doth several ways, they are not yielding and pliable in his hand, they will not submit to his will, nor be fit for his use.

V. Jesus Christ melts and softens his people by affliction, and by the Spirit. "Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, behold I will melt them, and try them; for what should I do else for the daughter if he should say, what way else can I use to bring for my purpose? "God," saith Job, "maketh my

VI. Jesus Christ, if he see that a small fire, and easy afflictions, will not refine and purify the soul of a believer, adds greater afflictions, puts them into a very hot fire, great trials according to his own wisdom, and good pleasure of his

VII. Jesus Christ, by refining his people, separates their dross from them, separates pride, passion, lukewarmness, worldly-mindedness, &c., and thereby makes them and their graces exceeding valuable. Tried faith, tried patience, tried love is highly esteemed; it is far beyond tried gold. This is the fruit of all, the taking away of your sin. "I will make a man more precious than gold, even a man above the golden wedge of Ophir. And Christ, by refining and putting the whole Church into the furnace, separates the gold, the sincere Christians from drossy hypocrites.

SIMILE.

VIII. A Refiner refines gold once and again several times, if he designs to make it very pure. We read of silver, "Seven times refined in a furnace of earth," Psal. xii. 6.

IX. A Refiner finds it necessary to add or put something of another nature into gold, an allowed proportion of alloy, whereby he opens and refines it the sooner: and indeed if something of that nature be not done, Refiners would tell you gold would be long before (if ever so well) refined, and fitted for the hammer.*

X. A Refiner doth not put his gold into the furnace, to waste or spoil it, but contrariwise that there it may be purified, not to receive loss thereby, he would not lose a grain of it.

Heb. xii. 8—10. "After he hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold," Job. xxiii. 10. He takes care that nothing be lost, none of them receive detriment thereby.

XI. A Refiner lets his gold remain no longer in the fire than until the dross be consumed, and it is made pure and fit for his purpose.

XII. A Refiner in refining his gold, wasteth his fuel.

secret way they hereby come many times to be bruised and smitten, the fire of God's wrath seizes upon them, as in the case of Pharaoh, whilst they are persecuting his people.

XIII. A Refiner resolves by putting his gold into the fire to destroy all the dross; and indeed there is nothing besides the pure gold that can endure and abide the fire: all filth and drossy matter flies away like smoke.

XIV. A Refiner finds by experience, that pure gold receives no detriment by the fire;† though it grow less in quantity, and so that way may seem to waste, yet it is much better in nature and quality.

Church thereby will shine forth more gloriously, and be consequently more acceptable unto God.

PARALLEL.

VIII. Christ, to refine and thoroughly purge and purify his Church, and the hearts of believers, puts them into one fire, one affliction, and then into another; hence God speaks of purifying his people seven times: for if ye will not for these things obey me, I will punish you seven times more according to your sins. God hath many fires.

IX. Christ adds something of another nature, other metal (as I may say) into his gold, his church and people that are in the furnace, viz., a proper measure of his word and Spirit: did not he add these to his people, to refine and purify them, they would be long in the fire before their dross would be washed and consumed away, 1 Cor. vi. 11. Nay, without the word and Spirit, afflictions could never accomplish nor perfect the work, and make them fit for his use.

X. Jesus Christ doth not put his Church, or any one believing soul, into the furnace to destroy or any ways to hurt them, but purely out of a gracious design to make them more pure and serviceable unto him. "Fathers for a few days chasten us after their pleasure; but he for our profit, that we might be partakers of his holiness,"

Heb. xii. 8—10. "After he hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold," Job. xxiii. 10. He takes care that nothing be lost, none of them receive detriment thereby.

XI. Christ will not suffer his people to remain in the furnace, or under afflictions, any longer than he sees need of it, no longer than until all their dross and filth be purged away. It is but in measure, he knows when it is enough, and then he soon abates the fire, Isa. xxvii. 7, 8.

XII. Christ oftentimes in refining of his Church, wasteth the wicked, who are his fuel, by which he many times purges them. In a secret way they hereby come many times to be bruised and smitten, the fire of God's wrath seizes upon them, as in the case of Pharaoh, whilst they are persecuting his people.

XIII. Jesus Christ by putting his children into the furnace of affliction, resolves to burn up, waste, and destroy, all hypocrites and drossy professors: in a day of fiery trial, they pass away like smoke, "But the wicked shall perish even like smoke, they shall consume, as the smoke vanisheth, so shalt thou drive them away," Psal. xxxvii. 20, and lxxviii. 2.

XIV. the Lord Jesus knows that sincere souls, or faithful Christians, will abide the day of his coming, when he sits as a Refiner, viz. in a day of distress and tribulation, Mal. iii. 2, 3, and though the Church thereby be made less in bulk or quantity, the formal and drossy part being many times more than the other; yet in quality, the

* Plin. lib. xxxiii. p. 456. Lord Bacon's Natural Hist. p. 224. † Plin. lib. xxxiii. cap. 465.

SIMILE.

XV. When a Refiner hath purged and refined gold, it is formed into choice and rare vessels, and other things fit for use and ornament.

silver," &c. 2 Tim. ii. 20. "The precious sons of Zion compared to fine gold, how are they esteemed as earthen pitchers!" &c. Lam. iv. 2. See vessels.

METAPHOR.

I. A Refiner refines but a little gold at a time; comparatively his furnace is of small dimension.

II. When a Refiner hath put gold into a crucible to be melted, in order to make it pliable and fit to be wrought, he adds a quantity or allowable proportion of alloy, which is of less value, as silver, or copper.

PARALLEL.

XV. When Jesus Christ hath thoroughly refined and purged his saints, they are made choice and golden vessels, the delight of Christ, and for the use and ornament of the Church. "In a great house there are not only vessels of gold and

DISPARITY.

I. Christ many times in one furnace of affliction, refines almost all the good, or godly ones in a whole kingdom, as he dealt with the whole house of Israel.

II. Christ when he puts his saints into his furnace, to make them malleable, and fit to be wrought by the hammer of the word into the image of God, puts in a measure of the Holy Spirit, which is of more worth and value than the gold itself, (viz., the saints;) for indeed so hard is the heart, notwithstanding the fire of that affliction, that there is no work can be made of it without the Spirit.

INFERENCES.

I. This may inform us concerning the purpose and design of Christ, respecting fiery trials, which the godly meet with in this world; that afflictions are not for the hurt or injury of the Church.

II. It also shows us what filth and corruption is in our hearts; what reason have we to bewail our inward pollution, that nothing will purge and cleanse us, but Christ's blood, his word, Spirit, and affliction! 1 John i. 7, Isa. xxvii. 9.

III. Moreover, let us learn from hence, to cry to God, when we are in the furnace, when in the fire, that Christ would apply his blood, word, and Holy Spirit to our souls; for if otherwise, all sufferings and afflictions will be unprofitable to us.

IV. And O that Christians would take heed in days of liberty and prosperity, to walk humbly and holily before the Lord, and beware lest they contract filth and pollution upon their souls, and so provoke Christ to put them into his furnace! If the shaking of the rod would bring us upon our knees, and reform our hearts and lives, Christ would not bring slaying and fiery dispensations upon us.

V. It may put us all upon the search, to see if we be sincere, gold, and not dross, Mal. iii. 18, for if we are corrupt matter, the furnace will make a clear discrimination of it; for indeed, "every man's work shall be tried so as by (or out of the) fire," 1 Cor. iii. 13.

VI. Let all professors from hence be awakened; Christ the Refiner is near, and the day of trial comes on apace; but how wilt thou stand when he appears? there is an amazing dispensation at hand, the Church of God shall be thoroughly purged and made white, the drossy Christian ere long shall be consumed, and pass away like the smoke of a Refiner's furnace.

VII. How good is God to take so great pains with us; that he might make us fit for his own use and eternal life. This way he "makes us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light," Col. i. 12. As heaven is prepared for us, so Christ is preparing us for heaven.

VIII. This may support and comfort us under affliction: "For though no chastening seem joyous at present, but grievous; yet nevertheless afterwards it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them that are exercised thereby," Heb. xii. 11.

CHRIST COMPARED TO AN EAGLE.

"Ye have seen what I did unto the Egyptians, and how I bare you on Eagles' wings, and brought you unto myself," Exod. xix. 4.

"As an Eagle stirreth up her nest, fluttereth over her young, spreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them, beareth them on her wings; so the Lord alone did lead him," &c. Deut. xxxii. 11, 12.

"And to the woman were given two wings of a great Eagle, that she might fly into the wilderness," &c. Rev. xii. 14.

SOME say, that the word aeros, Aquila, an Eagle, is derived of aerow, to be carried violently: others from an intensive a, and eros, which signifies a year, because it is lively, from whence came the proverb, Vivacior Aquila, livelier than an Eagle. Others say, that the Latin, Aquila, is derived ab aquilo colore, from its dun colour. For its swiftness, and seldom returning, Job says, chap. ix. 26, "My days pass away as the Eagle," &c.; that is, swiftly, and never to return. Because of its velocity and forcible flight, it denotes the quick invasion of an enemy, Jer. xlviii. 40, and xlix. 22, Hos. viii. 1, Micah i. 16, which describes the greatness of the calamity.

"I have borne you on Eagles' wings," Exod. xix. 4; that is, the Lord hath lovingly supported and cherished you, as Eagles do their young; who bear them safe over craggy and dangerous places, see Jer. iv. 13, Lam. iv. 19. It is said, Psal. ciii. 5, "Thy youth is renewed like the Eagle's;" that is, he hath strengthened thee so, as to go through all difficulties, &c.: Galatinus saith, that the Messiah is called an Eagle, Prov. xxx. 19, &c.

But in the texts alleged, viz., Deut. xxxii. 12, Exod. xix. 4, &c, the Lord is compared to an Eagle, with respect to the protection and safety of his people, the swiftness of his deliverances, and his tender care and affection to them.

The great Eagle, Annotators tell us,* signifieth the Lord Jesus: and it seems to be an allusion to that flight of the Church from Egypt to Canaan, which she undertook not by her own counsel, but by the Lord's command; and performed not by her own strength, but by the Lord's. As the church of Israel fled from the dragon, Pharaoh, as he is called, Ezek. xxix. 3, so the Christian Church fled from the serpent or dragon here, with two wings of a great Eagle, Rev. xii. 14.†

Now, though I deny not but these scriptures refer to God the Father; yet may they as safely, and in the judgment of some, more properly refer to the Lord Jesus Christ. Stephen, speaking of Christ, saith, "This was he that was with the fathers in the wilderness, which spake to them in Mount Sinai," &c.

SIMILE.

PARALLEL.

I. The Eagle is a royal bird,‡ the princess or queen of all the birds of the air.

II. The Eagle is a very strong fowl; naturalists speak much of the Eagle in this respect: Eagles carry the prize, saith Pliny, both for honour and strength.

III. The Eagle mounts up exceeding high, out of the reach or sight of men, Job xxxix. 27.§

IV. The Eagle hath a very piercing eye: when she is on high, can see down to the earth, nay, behold the small fish in the sea.||

I. Jesus Christ is the Prince of the kings of the earth, King of kings, and Lord of lords, Rev. i. 5, and xix. 16. As the Eagle among birds, so Christ, both amongst men and angels hath the pre-eminence.

II. The Lord Jesus Christ is called the Mighty God: "I have laid help on one that is Mighty," Psal. lxxxix. 19. For strength he is compared to a lion. What is all human and natural power, to the strength and power of Jesus Christ!

III. The Lord Jesus, after his resurrection, mounted up exceeding high, into the highest heavens, far out of the sight of man's natural eye, where he cannot be reached by wicked men or devils, Eph. iv. 12, Heb. vii. 26.

IV. Jesus Christ hath a wonderful piercing eye, seeth not only from the highest clouds, whither the Eagle mounts, but from the highest heaven; can look into the secrets of every man's heart, even into the hell of wicked men's diabolical counsels, and can thoroughly see their bloody purposes and contrivances; although they dig never so deep, yet they cannot hide themselves from his omniscience, for he sees what they are doing.

* Ainsworth, Wilson. † Ainsworth. ‡ See Caryl on Job. xxxix. 30. § Plin. lib. x. cap. 3. || Plin.

SIMILE.

V. The Eagle is a mighty swift creature: "My days are swifter than an Eagle." She is swift in pursuit of her prey, Deut. xxviii. 49, Job ix. 25, 2 Sam. i. 23, Job viii. 1.

VI. The Eagle, historians tell us,* fights with dragons and serpents and overcomes them.

VII. The Eagle hath strong and long wings, which she easily spreads forth for the succour and help of her young, Ezek. xvii. 3.

VIII. The Eagle bears and carries her young upon her wings, takes them, beareth them upon her wings, Deut. xxxii. 11, 12.

remnant of the house of Israel, who are from the womb; I will bear you, I will carry you," &c., Exod. xix. 4, Isa. xlv. 3, 4.

IX. The Eagle hides her young in high and mighty rocks, where her nest is, even in the same ragged place of inaccessible rocks.

shadow of thy wings, will I make my refuge, until these calamities be overpast, Psal. lvii. 1. See Refuge.

X. The Eagle's voice, naturalists tell us,† is so terrible, that when he is angry, he makes all living creatures to be afraid. Dracones audito clangore aquilarum, fugerunt in speluncas: the dragons when they hear the angry voice of the Eagles, fly into the dens to hide themselves.

came as a Lamb: "Art thou come to torment us before the time?" "Be wise now therefore, O ye kings; be instructed, O ye judges of the earth: kiss the Son, lest he be angry, and ye perish from the way, when his wrath is kindled but a little. Blessed are all they that put their trust in him," Psal. ii. 10, 12.

XI. The Eagle's way in the air cannot be known,

XII. Historians say, the Eagle can look on the sun in its brightest splendour without being dazzled. She tries her young ones the same way, to see whether they be her true offspring; for if they cannot behold the sun, but wink, or their eyes water, she turns them out of their nest, and disowns them, as degenerates or bastards

PARALLEL.

V. The Lord Jesus is swift when he comes to fight against the enemies of his Church, he is swift in the executing of his judgments, swift to deliver and help his people. See metaphor, Sun, Hart, &c.

VI. Jesus Christ, the spiritual Eagle, fought with that great red dragon the devil, and hath bruised the head of the dragon, Gen. iii. 15.

VII. The Lord Jesus hath strong love, enlarged and great affection, which like two long wings he stretcheth out easily in the way of his gracious providences, for the help and succour of his people; he shall arise with healing under his wings, Mal. iv. 2.

VIII. The Lord Jesus beareth and carrieth his faithful children upon the wings of his power and sovereign grace; thus he bare and carried Israel of old, "I have borne you upon Eagle's wings," "Hearken unto me, O house of Jacob, and all the

IX. The Lord Jesus hides his children in the secrets of the Almighty, that glorious Rock of ages: "Their place of defence shall be a munition of rocks," Isa. xxxiii. 16. David knew what he did, when he fled to God for shelter: "Under the

X. Jesus Christ when he utters his voice in anger, and rises up to the prey, he will cause all the inhabitants of the earth to tremble: "They will call to the hills and mountains to fall upon them, and to hide them from the face of him that sitteth upon the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb," Rev. vi. 16. Nay, the time will come, when the old dragon will be glad to fly into his den. The devils were afraid of him, when he

XI. The way of Christ's love, wisdom, providence, &c., cannot be known or found out to perfection, Job xi. 17, Eph. iii. 19.

XII. Jesus Christ hath a glorious and clear sight, can behold with open face the glory of the excellent Majesty, and the highest splendour and beauty of that immortal and inaccessible light, which no natural eye can approach unto. And although none of his people can see as he seeth, who is infinite in knowledge; yet those that pretend to be his offspring, and are not like him in grace, heavenly-mindedness, and holiness, nor endeavour after it, from that excellency they behold in it, Christ will utterly disown them, as being none of his seed or offspring, Phil. ii. 5, 6, 1 Pet. i. 16, Col. iii. 1.

* Plin. lib. x. cap. 4.

† Wolfisang. Frantz. Hist. Animal, de Aquil. 325. 338.

SIMILE.

XIII. The Eagle trains up her young to be like herself, and to mount up as she mounts XIV. The Eagle is very careful and tender of her young.

XV. Naturalists tell us,* the Eagle gives her young ones of her own blood, when she cannot get other blood for them to drink.

XVI. The Eagle is very long-lived. The Greeks express her by a word signifying longevity. And some give the reason, not only from the excellent temperament of her body, but because she lives in such a pure air, free from all evil vapours, and noisome smells.

PARALLEL.

XIII. The Lord Jesus teacheth all his people to be like himself, as far as they are able, and to mount up as with eagles' wings, and to live on high, Isa. xl. 31.

XIV. So is the Lord Jesus of his people, John xxi. 15.

XV. The Lord Jesus suffered himself to be wounded for us; his hands and feet, yea, his very heart was pierced, that we might have his blood to drink in believing: "My blood is drink indeed," John vi. 55.

XVI. The Lord Jesus Christ is not only long-lived, but he lives for ever, Rev. i. 18. He was from everlasting, and he will be to everlasting. He is the King eternal, the Father of eternity Isa. ix. 6.

METAPHOR.

THE Eagle hath many evil qualities: she is neither fair nor comely, hath no sweet voice, nor is she good for food; but she is quarrelsome, preying, devouring, solitary, envious of others, proud and lofty, the plague and torment of all other birds or fowls of the air, an enemy to peace: she has horrible claws: feeds on serpents, fish, and carrion; snatching up geese, hares, lambs, &c. Gesner reports, that a certain Eagle's nest was found, wherein three hundred ducks, one hundred and sixty geese, forty hares and many fishes. An Eagle is very crafty: she fills her wings with dust, and gets upon a stag's horns, and beating the dust and sand into his eyes, she blinds him, and then soon conquers him. She carries shell-fish on high, letting them fall upon the rocks to break them, &c.

DISPARITY.

IN all things there can be no greater disparity imaginable; and upon this account wicked men, or tyrants, are compared to Eagles.

INFERENCES.

- I. Fly to Christ, to bear you upon his wings.
- II. To hide you under the wings of his gracious protection: "Under thy wings, saith David, will I make my refuge, till these calamities be overpast," &c., Psal. lvi. 1.

CHRIST COMPARED TO A BUNDLE OF MYRRH.

"A bundle of Myrrh is my beloved unto me," Cant. i. 13.

THIS book expresses, under many different metaphors and similitudes, the greatness of Christ's love to his Church, and the sincerity of the Church's love to Christ. Sometimes you have Christ commending his spouse, sometimes the spouse speaking in praise of Christ, as she doth here, "A bundle of Myrrh, a cluster of Camphire, is my beloved unto me." A soul espoused to Jesus Christ with a great love to him, and a high esteem of him, knows not how to set out that excellent worth and beauty it beholds in him.

Myrrh is a kind of precious fruit, plentifully growing in Arabia; it is somewhat bitter, but most fragrant, and of excellent use in physick.

* Ælian. l. 14. c. xiv. See Caryl on Job xxxix.

METAPHOR.

I. Myrrh has a perfuming quality; it is a fragrant and odoriferous nature; it is used for perfuming garments, and other things, to make them cast a pleasant smell: "All thy garments smell of Myrrh, aloes, and cassia," Psal. xlv. 8. The harlot says, "She had perfumed her bed with Myrrh, aloes, and cinnamon," Prov. vii. 17.

II. Myrrh is a rare and rich perfume, a fit present for a king; hence the wise men of the east honoured Christ with Myrrh at his birth, Matt. ii. 11.

III. Myrrh hath a preserving quality; it keeps things from corruption, putrefying, and rotting. Hence the friends of Christ brought Myrrh, aloes, and other spices, for the embalming of his body after his crucifixion, John xix. 39, 40.

IV. Myrrh hath a beautifying quality. The virgins that prepared themselves for Ahasuerus, made use of Myrrh. It is good to take away the wrinkles from the face, and to make the skin smooth and shining.

V. Myrrh, that which is the right and true Arabia Myrrh, is not easily known by the vulgar, Pliny notes, Book xii. c. 26. Many cannot discover it; some take the false Indian Myrrh, that grows upon a thorny plant, for the right sort.

VI. Myrrh hath a healing quality: physicians make use of it for the removing of several distempers. Pliny Book xii. says, it dries up rheums, clears the voice, helps the ill savour of the breath, &c.

so that our prayers are heard and accepted by the Father.

VII. Myrrh was the first and principal ingredient of the holy anointing oil, that was appointed to be made use of for the anointing of Aaron,* the tabernacle, and the purtenances thereof.

PARALLEL.

I. Jesus Christ hath a perfuming virtue. See how the Church describes him for his fragrance: "Who is this that cometh out of the wilderness, like pillars of smoke, perfumed with Myrrh and frankincense, with all the powders of the merchant," Cant. iii. 6. We read of the sweet scent of the Church; but how comes she to smell so rarely, but from the communication of the sweet graces of Christ to her. Sinners are very unsavoury, until this Myrrh tree has dropped upon them.

II. Christ is the richest and purest perfume heaven and earth can afford; none so sweet. How fragrant is he in the nostrils of God the Father! He even ravishes the senses of angels and saints, makes us, and all our duties, as sweet odours unto the Father, Rev. viii. 4, 5.

III. Christ hath in him a preserving quality or power; were it not for that life he has communicated to us, for the rest of mortals, how soon would our bodies rot? But in a special manner he preserves our souls. Sin is of a rotting, stinking, and putrefying nature, compared to a leprosy, and filthy sores, Isa. i. 5, 6. Now if Christ did not drop daily a little of his Myrrh, I mean, the grace of his Spirit, into their souls, how loathsome should we soon become?

IV. Jesus Christ makes every believer beautiful; they have no comeliness but what he has put upon them. It is he that makes their faces to shine, who takes away every spot and wrinkle, and presents them a perfect beauty in the Father's sight, by imputing and imparting of righteousness unto them through faith, Ezek. xvi. 14, Eph. v. 27.

V. Christ, the true Christ of God, is not easily known to the ignorant; many take a false Christ for the true Christ. Some are so blind, that they think the light which is in every man, the light of natural conscience, is the Christ of God, and Saviour of the world.

VI. Jesus Christ hath many medicinal virtues; "By his stripes we are healed," Isa. liii. 5. He dries up all evil and offensive rheums; makes prayer, the breath or breathings of the soul, savoury; clears the voice, and helps our infirmities, by which means we pray more elegantly and fervently, in the Spirit; takes away all impediments, VII. The Spirit of Christ, and graces thereof, are compared to oil, Heb. i. 9. He is the Myrrh tree, from whence the divine oil flows, wherewith the ministers and saints of God are more or less anointed. See Oil of Gladness.

* Ainsworth.

It is called a bundle, or as Ainsworth reads it, a Bag of Myrrh :

1. To denote the plenty or fullness of that odoriferous gum.

2. A bundle or bag keeps things safe that are of worth: "The soul of my lord shall be bound in the bundle of life, with Jehovah his God," 1 Sam. xxv. 29.

1. In Christ is abundance of divine sweetness; not a sprig or two, but a great bundle; not two or three grains, but a bag filled with it, or a bundle of heavenly Myrrh.

2. Whatever is good, in Christ is laid up safely. Believers may waste or lose much of the grace of Christ in them; but none of that which is bound up in this sacred bundle can be lost.

SIMILE.

I. Myrrh has some dregs in it, though never so purely refined.

II. Other Myrrh may be bought for money.

III. Other Myrrh will lose its virtue, if kept over-long.

IV. The Myrrh-tree doth not always drop;* this gum distils but at certain seasons of the year.

DISPARITY.

I. In Christ are no dregs, no sin, nothing but what is invaluablely precious.

II. All the riches of both the Indies cannot purchase one drachm of this divine Myrrh.

III. Christ's virtue is ever the same, Heb. xiii. 8.

IV. Christ, the spiritual Myrrh-tree, is always dropping.

APPLICATION.

1. Christ is a precious Jesus, and saving grace worth the prizing; it is like to sweet-smelling Myrrh.

2. What a mercy it is to have our spiritual senses so exercised, as to discern between things that differ.

3. What eyes do they see with, that despise and slight Jesus Christ! This Bundle of Myrrh, this Rose of Sharon, this Lily of the Valleys, is not so much regarded by the most of men, as a bundle of thorns and briars.

4. You that love a sweet smell, here is a precious perfume for your unsavoury souls: notwithstanding all your rare gums, odours, and fragrant flowers, spices, and choice powders, you will smell rank and unsavoury in the nostrils of God, if you have not this bundle of Myrrh to perfume your souls and services.

5. If believers receive all their graces and sweetness from Christ, let them make grateful acknowledgments thereof to him, Rev. v. 12, 13.

CHRIST THE SAINTS' WEDDING-GARMENT.

"And he said unto him, friend, how camest thou hither, not having a Wedding-garment?" &c. Matt. xxii. 11, 12.

THIS text is part of the parable of the marriage, Matt. xxii.; and the word parable, is thus expounded by Jerome, Tom. 3. Epist. 51. ad Algastium q. 6. p. 359. Parabola, hoc est similitudo quæ ab eo vocatur, quod alteri παραβαλλεται, hoc est, assimilatur, et quasi umbra prævia veritatis est. A parable, that is, a similitude so called, because it is like another thing, and is as it were a previous shadow of truth. The word παραβολη, is derived of παραβαλλω, to compare or liken, it answers to the Hebrew משל Mashal.† In the New Testament, it signifies an enigmatical, or allegorical comparison, &c. For further account, the reader is referred to the place where we treat of parables.

The phrase ενδυμα γαμου, the Wedding-Garment, is borrowed from a custom among the ancients, where every guest at that solemnity, was arrayed in a habit peculiar to such feasts, and such as wanted it were accounted intruders, viz., such as without any right thrust themselves in. Now in this parable all orthodox expositors affirm, that by the King, ver. 2, we are to understand JEHOVAH; by his Son, the Messiah; by his servants, the ministers of the Gospel; by such that found pretences of absence, worldly-minded persons, that prefer their temporal pleasures before grace and true religion; by the invitation of the guests, the calling of the Gentiles, &c., by him that wanted the Wedding-Garment, hypocrites, or such as have not put on Christ spiritually, (that is, are not clothed with his righteousness by faith) whose doom is damnation, ver. 13. All the best expositors agree, by the Wedding-Garment is intended Christ's righteousness, or imputed righteousness, which is put on the soul by faith for justification. For the further demonstration hereof, see the following parallel.

* Pliny.

† Jansen. in Conc. Evang.

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

I. THE use and necessity of Garments came in by the fall. Adam in innocency had no need of them.

II. Garments are to cover nakedness, that shame and deformity may not appear to others; for this reason did our first parents sew fig-leaves together to cover themselves, and from hence God afterwards made them coats of skins, &c. Gen. ii. 21.

which believers commit against the Law of God. He delivers us from the curse and accusation thereof. Hence it is said, God beheld no iniquity in Jacob: He doth not see it to impute it, because it is hid under the covering mercy-seat, Jesus Christ.

III. Garments differ much in worth and excellency; we read in scripture of filthy Garments, and likewise of glorious apparel.

value, glorious apparel which by faith all true believers are clothed with.

IV. Garments are for ornament, they set off natural excellency, making men and women appear very lovely and amiable in the eyes of others.

V. Garments are of great utility in respect of defence, they secure us from many hurts and dangers, which naked ones are exposed to; they are munimenta corporis, they are as light armour to the body in winter, they save the body from piercing cold; in summer they preserve and defend from parching heat: every blast would pinch us, were it not for our Garments, every thorn would scratch us, every blow would bruise us. Robinson.

your souls," Matt. xi. 28. "My grace is sufficient for thee." 3. Christ defends us from the fiery darts and cruel assaults of Satan. "This roaring lion would tear us in pieces, if this impenetrable Garment were not between his teeth and our souls. His fiery darts would stick to the very heart, did not this Garment blunt and deaden them.

I. THE necessity of Christ and his righteousness, came in by original depravity, Gen. i. 27. Man in innocency had no need of a Saviour, was perfect and wanting nothing, Psal. li. 5, Rom. vii. 17, 18.

II. Christ is the soul's spiritual cover. 1. He hides all our natural filthiness. 2. He hides and covers all our actual sins and pollutions. 3. He covers all the spots of our holy duties.* The cherubims under the law covered the mercy-seat, the mercy-seat covered the ark where the two tables of the decalogue lay, Rom. iii. 25, Exod. xxv. 17, 18, 20, 21; this mercy-seat did typify Christ. Jesus Christ covers all the sins

III. "All our righteousnesses are as filthy rags," Isa. lxiv. 6. And in another place compared to a menstruous cloth; our best services are grievously defiled and polluted with sin. But Christ is a glorious robe, his righteousness is of inestimable

IV. Christ's righteousness put on the soul by faith, is the most beautiful ornament that ever mortals were adorned with; this makes men and women amiable and very comely in the eyes of God and the holy angels, Ezek. xvi. 12, Isa. xlv. 24, and lxi. 10.

V. The Lord Jesus, clothing us with his righteousness, defends us; 1. From sin, sin hath not power and dominion over us, it cannot bear sway or hurt the soul, because Christ hath condemned it in the flesh. It is a vanquished, wounded, and crucified enemy, Rom. xiii. 2. Christ defends us from the smarting pricks and checks of conscience, when for want of light, a believer is accused and condemned, and is driven almost into despair. Christ's righteousness is a glorious Garment to guard and keep off conscience from mauling, breaking, and bruising of him in pieces; through Christ saints obtain deliverance. "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest to notwithstanding all the malice and rage of the devil, he cannot destroy us, because we are clothed with Christ's righteousness, and have the Lord Jesus to be a cover for us. 4. Christ defends us from eternal wrath. God is to all that are naked (to all that have not Christ on for clothing) a scorching and consuming fire, the hottest flames cannot touch the body till they have burned the garments; but wrath cannot seize Christ any more, he hath overcome it, and quenched its burning; he hath lain under it once for all, and therefore it cannot seize on a believer, who is circled about with Christ, and with his righteousness as with a Garment. The fire cannot burn the man whilst the screen is between him and the flame. Jesus Christ is the believer's screen, which stands continually between him and the devouring flame of God's anger." Robinson.

* Guild. Moses Unveiled, p. 101. Mr. Robinson's Christ All in All, p. 45.

METAPHOR.

VI. Garments are prepared and made fit for the person that is to wear them, or otherwise they are not comely.

VII. When a person puts on a Wedding-Garment, all other Garments are laid aside as invaluable and unseemly for a bride to have on.

Christ on, for Christ is the only Garment for such who are naked, and see no absolute necessity of that which is by faith, in order to their being accepted in the eyes of the bridegroom.

VIII. A Wedding-Garment is usually very rich, if provided for a person of honour, a princess, or some great heiress.

dered work, and covered thee with silk; I decked thee with gold and thy raiment was of fine linen," Ezek. xvi. 10, 14. "The king's daughters were among thy honourable women," Psal. xlv. 10—13. "Upon thy right hand did stand the queen in gold of ophir."

IX. A rich and glorious wedding-garment, is put on as a sign of joy, and a good day.

cause of joy and gladness; hence saith the apostle,—As sorrowful, yet always rejoicing." "Rejoice in the Lord always, and again, I say rejoice," Phil. iv. 4; Isa. lxi. 10, 11, 2 Cor. vi. 10, 1 Thess. v. 16.

X. Those who are invited to a marriage amongst the Jews, as history tells us, if they had not on a Wedding-garment, they were not entertained, nor suffered to be amongst the guests, but were, if observed, turned out of the wedding-chamber.

less. Then said the king to his servants, bind him hand and foot, and take him away, and cast him into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and wailing, and gnashing of teeth," Matt. xxii. 11, 12, 13.

XI. The bride that is gloriously clothed, and adorned in her marriage-robcs, is delighted in, and rejoiced over by the bridegroom.

bridegroom rejoiceth over the bride, so shall thy God rejoice over thee," Isa. lxii. 5.

PARALLEL.

VI. Christ's righteousness prepared for believers, is made fit for the soul, it answers to the law and justice of God, it every way suits, accommodating every part, leaving none uncomely nor unclothed in the sight of God.

VII. When a soul puts on Christ's righteousness by faith, it lays aside its own rags, having no confidence in the flesh, Phil. iii. 8, 9, 10. If a man be not stript of all hopes, trust and reliance, in respect of his own righteousness, he will not seek for another, neither can he put order to their being accepted in the eyes of the VIII. Christ's righteousness is a very rich and glorious robe, curiously wrought, the person for whom it is provided, being nobly descended, born from above, and espoused to the Prince of heaven and earth. "I clothed thee with embroidered

IX. The righteousness of Christ put on by faith signifies joy, and a good day; the soul that is clothed with this robe of righteousness, that beautiful garment of salvation, hath infinite

X. Those that have not the spiritual wedding-Garment in the day when our bridegroom comes, shall not be entertained amongst Christ's guests, but shall be put out of the wedding-chamber, and turned into eternal darkness. "And when the king came in to see the guests, he saw there a man that had not a Wedding-garment: and he said unto him, friend, how camest thou in hither, not having on a Wedding-Garment? and he was speech-

XI. That soul that hath this Wedding-Garment on, that is clothed and adorned with Christ's righteousness, that is justified and accepted by faith; the Lord Jesus takes great delight in. "As a young man who marieth a virgin, &c., and as a shall thy God rejoice over thee," Isa. lxii. 5.

METAPHOR.

DISPARITY.

I. A Garment can cover but one at once, it cannot clothe several persons.

for him and me : Non est pallium breve quod duos operire non potest. All the elect of God, though they live in several nations, though they be a multitude which no man can number ; yet they are clothed, and sufficiently, with this one Garment. "I saw a wonder in heaven, a woman clothed with the sun," Rev. xii. 1. This woman is the Church of God, this Sun is Jesus Christ, "The Sun of righteousness," as he is called, Mal. iv. 2. All believers are covered, clothed, and adorned with one and the same garment, and every one hath it as an entire Garment to himself.

II. Every material Garment will not serve to cover every part of the body : that which is proper for the head, will not cover the loins, and that which fits the body will not fit the feet ; every part of the body hath a distinct clothing which is only proper for itself.

III. There is not one particular Garment that serveth for all uses for the body ; some robes are good for covering, but are not for beauty ; other Garments serve for ornament, but they do not serve for defence ; some Garments are good to wear in cold winter weather, but not good for the heat in the midst of summer. Persons of ability have several garments for several uses, because there is no one Garment good on all occasions.

IV. No one Garment will fit all bodies : that which fits decently on one sex, would be uncomely on another ; that which will fit a child will not fit a man, that which is proper for a prince will not become nor suit a subject.

Christ is a fit Garment for the souls of men, there is no soul too big, no soul too little, none too small, none too great for Christ's righteousness to array and cover.

V. Other Garments may be pierced, a sword may be thrust through them, they may be spoiled, burnt, or cut to pieces.

VI. All material Garments may be corrupted, moths may eat them, they may be worn out by using and turn into rags, even the strongest Garments that ever were made.

VII. The best and richest wedding Garment that ever was made, the price thereof may soon be accounted and easily reckoned up.

I. This is a large Garment, the robe of Christ's righteousness can cover many, though they be at never so great a distance. Should I say, saith Bernard, that Christ's righteousness will not serve

II. The spiritual Garment fits every part. Christ is "A diadem, or crown upon the head, and shoes for the feet." Christ's righteousness is a complete suit of apparel from head to foot ; the soul that hath this Wedding-Garment on, is perfectly and completely clothed.

III. This spiritual Garment is for all uses, and all seasons, it is both for covering and ornament ; it is as proper and necessary in winter as in summer, and in summer as in winter ; it is good for the traveller, it is the labourer's Garment, it is the soldier's Garment, it is good to fight in ; it is the prince's Garment, yea, and the subject's Garment : it is the Christian's Garment, it is very light and pleasant to walk in, and yet thick to defend from stormy weather. Christ suits all occasions, states, and conditions of the souls that have an interest in him. "He is made of God unto us wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption," 1 Cor. i. 30.

IV. This spiritual Garment, the righteousness of Christ, is as fit for one as for another, it is as fit and as proper for the peasant as for the prince ; the same Garment here that is for the man, is for the woman, for the child as for the father. "There is neither Barbarian, Scythian, Jew nor Gentile, male nor female, bond nor free, but ye are all one in Christ," Col. iii. 11. The righteousness of

V. But this Garment no dart nor spear can pierce or enter into, no devil can tear or rend it, nor can all the powers of hell, sin, or darkness burn or destroy it.

VI. But this spiritual Garment is durable and lasting, the moth cannot corrupt nor consume it, it never grows old, nor can it be worn out, it is as fresh and as beautiful at the last as at the first putting on.

VII. The worth and price of this wedding-Garment can never be valued, it is worth millions, yea thousands of millions, the riches of the whole world are nothing in comparison of it. What would a Christless soul give, in the great day for this robe, viz., to be clothed with Christ's righteousness?

METAPHOR.

VIII. Other Garments may be stained, catch spots and dirt, and many ways be defiled.

their Garments; but a Christian's wedding-robe can sustain no pollution; the life of Christ was without spot, his righteousness pure and perfect, which saints are clothed with in respect of justification: hence Christ calls his love, his dove, his undefiled one. "Thou art all fair, my love, and there is no spot in thee." See metaphor, Christ a Garment for Sanctification.

DISPARITY.

VIII. This robe cannot be defiled, the Garment of sanctification may take spots; hence we read of some who had their Garments spotted with the flesh; and of others, who had not defiled

INFERENCES.

I. This shows the miserable state of those that are without Christ; such have not on the wedding-Garment, they want that excellent robe that renders the godly person amiable in the Bridegroom's sight; and all that have it not on, shall be shut out of the wedding-chamber.

II. It shows also the happy and blessed condition of all sincere and godly ones. See Garment of Sanctification.

CHRIST THE BRIGHT AND MORNING STAR.

"I am the Root and Offspring of David, and the bright and Morning Star,"—Rev. xxii. 16.

Morning Star, in the Greek Φωσφορος, a Star of exceeding brightness, metaphorically signifies, "The shining light of the paths of the just," Prov. iv. 18, (where the Hebrew word is Lucifer, for the Morning Star) so Job xi. 17. A fuller knowledge of God by inward illumination, 2 Pet. i. 19. The king of Assyria, Isa. xiv. 12. The glorious light of eternity, Rev. ii. 28, (see Dan. xii. 3, 1 Cor. xv. 41, 42.) Lastly, Christ the Saviour of the world, Rev. xxii. 16, for which see Phil. Sacra. chap. viii., of an anthropopathy, and the following parallel.

METAPHOR.

I. The Morning Star is a very solid light, without twinkling, corrosion or sparkling, as other Stars do.

goodness; he is the same in the morning, noon, and night; "Yesterday, to-day, and for ever," Heb. xiii. 8

II. The bright and Morning Star is the harbinger to the greatest of natural joy, viz., the rising of the sun, what doth the earth desire more.

His coming was the fulfilling of God's gracious promise unto the fathers, and as the blessed manifestation of God's rich favour and good will to man; he is also the Forerunner or the Harbinger of that dominion that the just shall have in the resurrection, the morning of the longed for day. "The path of the just is as a shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day," Prov. iv. 18. "The upright shall have dominion over them in the morning," Psal. xlix. 14. "The night is far spent, the day is at hand," Rom. xiii. 11, 12. "This, above all others, is the day the Lord hath (made for good men) therein to rejoice and be glad," Psal. cxviii. 24.

III. The Morning Star is a great ornament to the heavens: this is so visible, that it needs no instances to prove it.

PARALLEL.

I. The Lord Jesus is a very solid light, whose glory is not like others who have their intermissions; but he abides steady, his glory and bright-shining is always alike; his whole course of life was as if it had been but one continued act of

II. Jesus Christ is the Harbinger of the great joy to all nations. How joyful was that time, when the day-spring from on high did first visit us? "The people that sat in darkness, saw great light, and to those that dwell in the valley of the shadow of death, great light is risen," &c.

III. Jesus Christ is not only an ornament to the Christian Church and profession, far beyond what Moses was to the Jews; but even to heaven itself, and the holy angels, who did not a little rejoice at his ascending into heaven. "God is gone up with a shout, the Lord with the sound of a trumpet; sing praises to our God, sing praises," Psal. xlvii. 5.

METAPHOR.

IV. The Morning Star is a very pleasant object to all that have eyes to behold it, and love the light.

Morning Star, as men have under the Gospel; yet that prospect he had, made him use this precious prayer; "O when shall I come and appear before God?" Psal. xlii. 2. "Then shall I be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness," &c., Psal. xvii. 15. "I have a desire (saith Paul) to depart and to be with Christ," &c., Phil. i. 23. Those that look for him do also cry, "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly."

V. The Morning Star is esteemed not a little useful to guide mariners when they have lost the light of their more common guide, viz., the Pole Star.

the sands, and the hands of all spiritual and Paul, who was most eminent, were shining lights and glorious Stars, who adorned the profession of the holy Gospel; but in all things this bright and Morning Star infinitely surpassed them in splendour and brightness, Heb. i. 3.

VI. The Morning Star is by astronomers accounted a Star of the first magnitude.

VII. The Morning Star is observed to be a terror to thieves and evil men, when they see this sun of the morning appear they haste away to hide themselves, lest the light of the day should overtake and discover them.

tion from the pinnacle of the temple, sets a squadron of the black regiment to resolve upon his death, Matt. iv. 5; knowing him to be the Fore-runner of the day, which thieves and robbers cannot endure; "come, let us kill the heir," &c., Matt. xxi. 38. They hate the light, come not to it, "Lest their deeds should be reprov'd." "They led him to the brow of the hill, that they might cast him down head-long," Luke iv. 29. The evil angels thought he came too soon, "Why art thou come to torment us before the time?" Matt. viii. 29.

VIII. The Morning Star (as other stars) is fixed in its orb, wherein it performs a constant motion.

you always, to the end of the world," Matt. xxviii. 20. "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee," or leave thee to a forsaking, Heb. xiii. 5.

IX. The Morning Star gives most light just before break of day.

their immediate successors. But the greatest light is reserved to the flying of the angel through the midst of heaven with the everlasting Gospel, before the great and notable day come, wherein the whole earth shall be lightened with his glory, both Jews and Gentiles shall acknowledge the blessed Messiah. "Arise and shine, for thy light is come, the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee. The Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising," Isa. lx. 1, 3. "The earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea," Hab. ii. 14.

X. It is the opinion of some, that the Morning Star doth send forth very blessed influences upon

PARALLEL.

IV. Jesus Christ is a very pleasant object to men that are spiritually enlightened; therefore it is that they do ardently desire to be near him, and with him where he is. David, though he had not so clear a sight and prospect of this bright and Gospel; yet that prospect he had, made him use this precious prayer; "O when shall I come and appear before God?" Psal. xlii. 2. "Then shall I be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness," &c., Psal. xvii. 15. "I have a desire (saith Paul) to depart and to be with Christ," &c., Phil. i. 23. Those that look for him do also cry, "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly."

V. Jesus Christ is highly esteemed by all that sail heaven-wards, no steering the right course without him; he gives good assurance to all that follow him, "They should not abide in darkness, but have the light of life." The following of Christ Jesus is the most certain way to avoid the rocks, and temporal enemies.

VI. Jesus Christ is really the most excellent and chiefest light that ever God set in the Church; Moses and the prophets, John Baptist, and the three beloved apostles, Peter, James, and John, who adorned the profession of the holy Gospel; but in all things this bright and Morning Star infinitely surpassed them in splendour and brightness, Heb. i. 3.

VII. Jesus Christ is a great terror not only to wicked men, but wicked angels, to all that love darkness more than light, they hate him and fear him, they consulted against him, and more times than once attempted to pluck this Star out of the firmament, so that they might walk in darkness, carry on their black designs and deeds without discovery. Satan attempted his destruction from the pinnacle of the temple, sets a squadron of the black regiment to resolve upon his death, Matt. iv. 5; knowing him to be the Fore-runner of the day, which thieves and robbers cannot endure; "come, let us kill the heir," &c., Matt. xxi. 38. They hate the light, come not to it, "Lest their deeds should be reprov'd." "They led him to the brow of the hill, that they might cast him down head-long," Luke iv. 29. The evil angels thought he came too soon, "Why art thou come to torment us before the time?" Matt. viii. 29.

VIII. Jesus Christ is constant in his orb or station, he is a Priest for ever, a prophet to guide for ever, a King to govern for ever; he leaves not his office as inconstant men do, but makes good his word as settled in heaven. "And lo, I am with you always, to the end of the world," Matt. xxviii. 20. "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee," or leave thee to a forsaking, Heb. xiii. 5.

IX. Jesus gave a great light unto the world by the ministry of John, by the appearance of himself, and by the ministry of the apostles and their immediate successors. But the greatest light is reserved to the flying of the angel through the midst of heaven with the everlasting Gospel, before the great and notable day come, wherein the whole earth shall be lightened with his glory, both Jews and Gentiles shall acknowledge the blessed Messiah. "Arise and shine, for thy light is come, the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee. The Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising," Isa. lx. 1, 3. "The earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea," Hab. ii. 14.

X. Jesus doth send forth very blessed and sweet influences upon the bodies and souls of men that are under his gracious rule and dominion; it is

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

those bodies that are under its dominion.

XI. The Morning Star doth chiefly govern pleasant and delightful plants.

who is King of kings, and Lord of lords; yet his chief rule and government is over the pleasant and delightful plants, the saints who are on the earth, the excellent in whom is all his delight; it is they that hear his word, obey his voice, and do his will, &c. The hundred forty and four thousand are pleasant and delightful ones; (1) "The Father's name is upon them; (2.) They are not defiled with women; (3.) They follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth," Rev. xiv. 1, 4, and vi. 17. These are governed by the Lamb.

XII. The Morning Star is accounted the master planet, for moderation; said to cause gentle storms in winter, and moderate heat in summer.

he troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me. If I go away, I will come again and receive you to myself, that where I am, you may be also," John xiv. 1, 3. When hot and fiery, he cools and abates choler, "You know not what spirit you are of. The Son of man came not to destroy men's lives, but to save them. Love your enemies." "Learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and you shall find rest for your souls," Matt. xi. 28, 29.

XIII. The Morning Star is said to be the cause of beauty.

eousness, by which they are justified. 2. In respect of grace and virtue, by which they are adorned. 3. In respect of good life and conversation, which arises from his Spirit, doctrine, and good example. "By him all that believe are justified," Acts xii. 39. —"But the fruits of the Spirit are love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance," Gal. v. 22. "You are complete in him, who is the Head of all principalities and powers."

XIV. The Morning Star doth most service in winter, because the greatest part of that season is night and darkness.

Mediator: but when the winter is past, his office of priesthood and mediatorship shall cease; "Then shall the Son deliver up the kingdom to the Father, and God shall be all in all," 1 Cor. xv. 24.

XV. The Morning Star hath an honourable name, it is called the son of the morning.

he hath a name above every name," "Thou shalt call his name Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins," The rulers set themselves against the Lord and his anointed. And we believe that thou art Christ the Son of the living God. God is gone up with a shout. This is the true God, and eternal life; Lord of all, Lord of glory, Prince of life, Prince of peace, Prince of the kings of the earth. The day Star from on high, that bringeth life and immortality to light, by the Gospel. He hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than the angels, Phil. ii. 9, Matt. i. 21, Acts. iv. 26, John vi. 69, Psal. xlv. 5, 1 John v. 20, Rev. i. 5, 2 Tim. i. 10, Heb. i. 4.

XVI. The Morning Star is known to be the evening star as well as the Morning Star, and in both respects is useful to the world.

he who sends down the Holy Ghost. "If I go away, I will send you another Comforter, the Spirit of truth," &c. John xvi. 7, 8.

XI. Jesus Christ, though all power in heaven and earth be given unto him, by whom kings reign and princes decree judgment and justice, nobles rule, even all the judges of the earth,

XII. Jesus Christ is the Master of all moderation both for soft words and gentle instructions, who by good doctrine did so eminently qualify his followers, that he fitted them for every season; when cast down, he comforteth them with good words and promises: "Let not your hearts

XIII. Jesus Christ is really the cause of all beauty to the true Church, and to all the members thereof. 1. In respect of imputed right-

XIV. Jesus Christ doth greatest kindness in the winter, or dark time of the Church; then it is he maketh intercession, manifesteth care, and sends relief and succour to the saints, performs all the parts of a merciful High Priest and the darkness gone, and the night quite spent, then

XV. Jesus Christ hath a very honourable name. Jesus, which is Saviour, Christ, which is anointed; "The Son of God, the only begotten, well beloved; the Emmanuel, God with us; and

XVI. Jesus Christ is Omega as well as Alpha, the Finisher as well as the Author or beginner of our faith; the rear-guard, as well as the Captain of our salvation; gives the latter, as well as the first fruits of the Spirit; trains as well as conducts; he rewards according to the works of piety and goodness, as well as he commands to do them; he concludes this day of grace when he comes to judge, as well as he began it when he came to save. He ushers in the dismal night of darkness to the wicked, as well as he ushers in the day of glad tidings and great joy to the righteous; he appears after the going down of the sun, and shutting up of mercy, as well as before the rising of the sun, and clear approach of mercy; he is a har-binger to captivity, as well as to the year of jubilee and deliverance; he sends down to hell and darkness, as well as he sends up to heaven and glory. "I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end," Rev. i. 8. "Looking unto Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our Faith," Heb. xii. 2.

METAPHOR.

XVII. The Morning Star, though it may be obscured by mists, fogs, clouds, and dark vapours; yet nothing can hinder its course, but it constantly keeps its motions and circle in the heavens, cannot be prevailed against by any malignant power whatsoever. Thieves and evil men like not its appearance, yet cannot obstruct its motion in the firmament, nor stop its light from shining on the earth.

powers of earth or hell. Herod, Pontius Pilate, the High-Priest, the whole body of the Jews, the Romans, Mahometans, and Papists that hate him and his glorious appearance, cannot obstruct his motion and operation in the Church or world, nor in any-wise extinguish his light from its glorious splendour. "Hereafter shall they see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory," Matt. xxiv. 30. "It is hard for thee to kick against the pricks," Acts ix. 5. "The disciples waxed bold and multiplied." The blood of the martyrs was the seed of the Church. O Galilean! thou hast overcome me, saith wicked Julian. "On this Rock will I build my Church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it," Matt. xvi. 18. The administration of Christ is like "The path of the just, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day." Of his kingdom there shall be no end; upon the throne of David, to order and establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth, even for ever," Isa. ix. 7.

XVIII. The Morning Star, as it hath those properties and excellencies already expressed; so lastly, it exceeds all others stars for brightness and glory.

METAPHOR.

I. The Morning Star did not make itself, nor other stars.

thou, Lord, in the beginning didst lay the foundations of the earth, and the heavens are the work of thy hands," Psal. cii. 25.

II. The sun, and Morning Star, are two things: for the Morning Star is much inferior to the sun in light and glory.

person, and he upholds all things by the word of his power," Heb. i. 3.

III. The Morning Star gives but eternal light to the corporal sense.

truly follow him out of darkness, and bestoweth on them the light of life," John viii. 12.

PARALLEL.

XVII. Jesus Christ, and the light of the Gospel, although sometimes obscured by the means of misty foggy clouds, powers of darkness, ignorance, unbelief, and heresy; yet nothing can hinder its course, but it constantly keeps his glorious circle in his dispensation, and keeps a continual motion in a way of divine Providence until the time of his kingdom and patience be over. "He that hath promised to come, will come, and will not tarry," Heb. x. 37. "The Lord whom ye seek, will suddenly come to his temple," "Behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me," Rev. i. 7. He cannot be prevailed against by any malignant XVIII. Jesus Christ in all that hath been or can be said, exceeds in brightness and glory; for, as hath been manifested, he is the brightness of his Father's glory, in which respect he exceeds angels and men: for, though he was the offspring of David, yet he is the bright and Morning Star," Rev. xxii. 16.

DISPARITY.

I. Jesus Christ, the bright and Morning Star, made the orbs wherein the Stars are fixed with the sun, moon and all the world besides. "And lay the foundations of the earth, and the heavens

II. Jesus Christ thought it no robbery to be equal with God, Phil. ii. 6, 7. And he is not only the bright and Morning Star, but also the Sun of righteousness, (see Sun.) "The brightness of his Father's glory, and the express image of his

III. Jesus Christ gives eternal light, which illuminates the minds and souls of all believers. This is the true light, who is not only the light of the world, "But delivereth also all those that

METAPHOR.

DISPARITY.

IV. The Morning Star gives light only in the night, but loseth its glory when the sun ariseth, ness, and the darkness comprehended it not," John i. 25. "He is the Lord that is an everlasting light," Isa. lx. 20.

V. The Morning Star gives light only to the visible world.

need of sun or moon to shine in it, but the Lord God and the Lamb is the light thereof. "Ye are come to Mount Zion, to God the Judge of all, and to Jesus the Meditator," Heb. xii. 22, 24.

VI. The Morning Star shall fall from heaven, or be dissolved at the general conflagration of the world; "the heavens and the earth that now is are reserved," &c.

art the same, and thy years fail not; Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever," Psal. cii. 25—27, Heb. viii. 8.

IV. Jesus Christ giveth light continually, and can never lose his glory, because a greater light than he cannot arise; "The night and the day are alike to him," "The light shineth in darkness," John i. 25. "He is the Lord that is an

V. Jesus Christ gives light only to the visible and celestial too, to this world, and to the world to come, or heavenly Jerusalem, which city hath no

VI. Jesus shall never fall from heaven, nor be dissolved, but abide and continue when the heavens shall be no more. "And thou, Lord, hast laid the foundations of the earth, and the heavens are the work of thy own hands: they shall wax old as doth a garment; and as a vesture shalt thou change them, and they shall be changed; but thou

INFERENCES.

I. What great love doth God bear, and what care doth he take of believers, in placing such a Star as Jesus Christ is, to be a Light unto them, to direct them how to steer their course in the darkest time, so as to shun all dangerous rocks and sands, and arrive in safety at the desired and longed-for haven?

II. How safe are they that do always steer their course by his light and follow his conduct? they shall not be at a loss in their journeys and voyages, nor suffer shipwreck by rocks, sands, and storms," "But shall have the light of life, shall never perish. Believe in the Lord Jesus, and thou shalt be saved," Acts xvi. 31.

III. This may show also the certainty of their perishing in the dark and in the deep that continue their course to the end of their voyage, without the light and guidance of this bright and Morning Star: "This is the condemnation, that the light is come into the world, and men love darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil," John iii. 19.

IV. Hence all true Christians (that have experimentally enjoyed enlightenings, refreshings, and guidance by Jesus Christ, as the bright and Morning Star) may be stirred up and persuaded yet more and more to look unto Jesus, who is not only the Author and Finisher of their faith, but causeth his glorious light to shine upon their path; by reason whereof, the nearer they approach to the end of their joyful journey or race, "The more and more will the light shine unto the perfect day," Prov. iv. 18, "Take heed therefore to that more sure word of prophecy, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day Star arise in your hearts," 2 Pet. i. 19.

V. Lastly, if Christ be the bright and Morning Star; then let us look and wait for the day, which he is the Fore-runner of; seeing that the morning Star hath appeared and is up, be sure the day is at hand, and a glorious day it will be to them who are prepared for it.

THE COMING OF CHRIST COMPARED TO THE COMING OF A THIEF IN THE NIGHT.

"But you yourselves know perfectly, that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night." 1 Thess. v. 2.

THERE are various opinions concerning the day of the Lord, or coming of Christ, spoken of, Matt. xxiv. Luke xxi. 2 Pet. iii. 9, 10; and in this text But if the scope of the text be but carefully considered, it will clearly appear, that the coming of Christ here spoken of, is his coming, at the last day to judgment, when the dead shall be raised. Read the latter part of the fourth chapter, &c.

Why the day of the Lord is compared to the coming of a thief in the night, will appear by the following parallel.

METAPHOR.

I. The coming of a thief in the night, is with a design to circumvent an unwatchful house, to take his prey.

to look for, no heaven to be sought, no hell to be avoided; to such he will come, and seize them for his prey, to cut them asunder, and appoint them their portion with unbelievers and reprobates.

II. A Thief comes provided for his purpose, with a resolution to fight, and instruments to make way to his design, keys to unlock doors, bars to break them open, or the like.

III. A Thief comes at a time when all is still, and people are least thoughtful of danger, but are careless, at ease, even asleep upon their beds, thinking themselves secure, until they are invaded, and their goods taken away.

IV. The coming of a Thief into a house puts the careless family into a great fright, when they see themselves surprised and cannot tell how to help it.

will they say to the rocks and mountains, fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb; for the great day of his wrath is come, and who shall be able to stand?" Rev. vi. 16, 17.

V. The approach of a Thief in the night makes the poor amazed family forget all their former pleasures and enjoyments, and expect no more than their lives for a prey, and glad would they be of them too.

VI. At the coming of a thief in the night, execution is oftentimes done, to the ruin of the people where he comes.

world, were it in their possession, for save them from the dreadful judgment,

SIMILE

I. A Thief comes with a wicked intent, to gratify his wicked will unrighteously.

II. A Thief's coming may be prevented.

PARALLEL.

I. The coming of Christ, or day of the Lord, will be with design to circumvent the careless professors, who sleep in a sinful secure state, as if there were no God to fear, no Jesus Christ

II. Even so will the Lord Jesus Christ, at his second coming, be provided for his purpose, with fire and sword to accomplish his design, which is to make a desolation in the earth: "For by fire and sword shall the Lord plead with all flesh, and the slain of the Lord shall be many. He shall

III. The day of the Lord will come, when all is still, and the world least thoughtful of danger, but are careless, eating, and drinking, and marrying, and sleeping, till the heavens rend asunder, the archangel utter his voice, and the Judge himself come upon them: "But as the days of Noah were, so shall the coming of the Son of man be," Matt. xxiv. 37.

IV. The day of the Lord will in like manner put the sleepy generation (that shall then be into a great and dismal fright, when they see themselves on a sudden surprised, but know no way of escape: men starting, women quaking, beasts crying, but none to help them. "Then

V. The coming of the day of the Lord will make the world much amazed, and forget all their former pleasures and enjoyments, as if they had never been, and would gladly accept of their lives for a prey, to be extinguished, or cease to be; but, alas! it is in vain, nothing but hell and eternal burnings remain for them, where they shall be always dying, yet never die.

VI. By the coming of the day of the Lord there will be such execution done, as will be to the utter ruin and un-doing of wicked men, who shall be stripped of all they have formerly set their hearts upon, and would now give the whole so much grace as would help them to heaven, and Matt. xxv 8.

DISPARITY.

I. The Lord cometh with a good intent, to fulfil his Father's will, to save his people from their troubles, and to render justice to God's enemies.

II. But the coming of the day of the Lord cannot be prevented: "The day of the Lord will come, in which," &c., 2 Pet. iii. 10.

SIMILE.

DISPARITY.

III. The Coming of a Thief is but to a few, and the damage he does is but to a few families.

III. The coming of the day of the Lord, and the dismal effects of it will be to all the wicked: "The Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints, to execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly," &c., Jude 14, 15.

INFERENCES.

1. Reproof. 2. Caution. 3. Exhortation.

(1.) Reproof to ungodly men; that there should be such a day to come, and notice given of such a thing, and they so heedless and careless about it.

(2.) Caution to the godly, to take heed, and carefully mind the counsel of Christ, and warnings of his servants, unto such a due watchfulness, as may prevent the danger of being found sleeping, and so the day come upon them unawares, Mark xiii. 35, 36, 37, Luke xxi. 34, 36.

(3.) Exhortation to all, both good and bad, to make ready, for only they that shall be found ready will go in with him to the marriage-chamber; the door will be shut against all others, whether professors or profane: "Be ye therefore ready, for at an hour you think not of the Son of Man cometh," Matt. xxv. 10, and xxiv. 44.

CHRIST THE JUDGE OF ALL.

"And he commanded us to preach unto the people, and to testify, that it was he that was ordained of God, to be the Judge of the quick and dead," Acts x. 42.

THE term κρίτης, a Judge, is derived of κρίνω, to judge, which word has various significations. And though the word [Judge] is not brought here as a metaphor, Christ being really and properly a Judge, yet it being a phrase alluding to earthly Judges, we shall, for edification sake, run the parallel, wherein are amply set forth the qualifications and properties, as well as the authority of a temporal Judge, the correspondent analogy and disparity, when applied to Christ, the Judge of (των ζωντων και νεκρων;) the living and the dead.

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

I. A Judge necessarily supposes a people under a law to be judged by; for there can be no action where there is no object, nor any exercise of power, or judicial proceeding, without a subject.

II. A Judge is, or ought to be a person fit for the place and office whereto he is called.

1. A Judge ought to be a man of great wisdom and prudence.

He is called, as hath been often hinted,

2. A Judge is a man of knowledge it is necessary that he should be well acquainted with all the laws of his sovereign.

precepts contained therein, Matt. v. 6, 7.

3. A Judge is, or ought to be, a man of goodness, not subject to anger, malice, or revenge, and it is very requisite it should be so, otherwise great damage might ensue,

I. Christ's being called a Judge, doth clearly hold forth, that there are a people to be judged by him; "Before him shall be gathered all nations," Matt. xxv. 32. "We must all appear before the judgment-seat of Christ," 2 Cor. v. 10. "I saw the dead, both small and great, stand before God," Rev. xx. 12, 13.

II. Jesus Christ infinitely excels other Judges in respect of fitness to this office, or excellency of qualifications, as will appear by what follows:

1. Christ is wise, not only far beyond David and Solomon, but all the angels in heaven: the learned amongst the Jews admired his wisdom: "The wisdom of God," 1 Cor. i. 24.

2. Jesus Christ fully knows all divine laws, as well that which is written in the heart of man, as that which was written in tables of stone; and then as to the law of the Gospel, that is called the law of Christ, because he gave forth all the

3. The Lord Jesus Christ is full of goodness, full proofs of which he gave before his advancement to his dignity. He is not forward to accuse, is free from anger, not subject to take advantage by the weakness of an offender, but upon the ill disposition of the Judge.

we have in what Christ said to the woman taken in adultery: "He that is without sin, let him throw the first stone," &c., John viii. 7.

4. A Judge is, or ought to be, a man of justice and impartiality, that will not respect persons in judgment, take bribes, or know the faces of any, though never so great among men. Aaron was not to know his father nor mother in judgment.

64; that is, as a Judge, to arraign them for their injustice, cruelty, &c.

5. A good and upright Judge is a man of courage and boldness, will not say to the wicked, "Thou art righteous;" nor excuse the faults of great men through fear.

them, and mountains to cover them, to hide them from the face of him that sitteth upon the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb," Rev. vi. 16, 17.

METAPHOR.

III. The place and work of a Judge is grounded upon good reason: 1. The honour of the sovereign. 2. The reasonableness of sovereignty and authority. 3. The justness of the laws. 4. In respect of the subject.

his laws, which are "Holy, just, and good," Rom. vii. 12. There is nothing amiss, no fault can be found in them. 4. In respect of his subjects: "God is not unrighteous, to forget their work of faith, and labour of love," &c., of the godly: and it is a righteous thing with him to recompence the ungodly according to their deeds: "He shall render unto every man, according as their works shall be," Rev. xxii. 12.

IV. A Judge is appointed to his place and office; he acts not of himself, but by commission.

"God judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son," John v. 22. It is he that is ordained of God to be the Judge of the quick and dead. "He hath appointed a day, in which he will judge the world in righteousness, by that man whom he hath ordained," Acts xvii. 31. "It is appointed unto men once to die, and after death the judgment, to which end Christ shall appear the second time," Heb. ix. 27.

V. A Judge hath his set time or days limited, wherein to keep a general sessions, or hold a solemn assize, for the honour of his sovereign lord the king.

VI. A Judge, when he hath received his commission, and the set day is come, hath power to summon all parties concerned, and order all offenders to appear before him in judgment.

4. The Lord Christ is a man of justice, that will not be flattered with fair words. His impartiality appeared in the days of his flesh. He told Nicodemus, a great ruler, that he must be born again, John iii. 3, called Herod the king a fox. He told the rulers of the Jews, that they should "Hereafter see the Son of man sitting at the right-hand of power and glory," Matt. xxvi.

5. The Lord Jesus, though he be a Lamb for meekness, and a dove for innocency, yet he is a lion for boldness and courage, and in his time will show himself to be so to all the ungodly of the earth, whether kings, captains, or mighty men: "They shall cry to the rocks to fall upon them, and mountains to cover them, to hide them from the face of him that sitteth upon the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb," Rev. vi. 16, 17.

PARALLEL.

III. The work assigned to the Lord Jesus, as a Judge, is grounded upon the highest reason: 1. The authority of God the Father, who hath committed all judgment into the hands of the Son. 2. The reasonableness of his authority: He gave to all their being, and therefore may challenge a right more than earthly sovereigns, to sit as Judge over them. 3. The equity of

IV. The Lord Jesus Christ is appointed to take the place and office of a Judge; he acts not of himself, but by commission from the great and mighty Potentate of the whole universe.

V. In like manner is there a set time, a certain day limited, for the Lord Jesus, the great Judge, to keep a general sessions, and hold a solemn assize, for the honour of the eternal God, called the day of judgment. "It shall be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of judgment, than for that city," Matt. x. 15.

VI. The Lord Jesus, as supreme Judge, by virtue of his authority and commission, when the set time is come, will summon the whole world, even all offenders, to appear before his judgment-seat: "The time is coming, when all that are in their graves shall hear his voice, and come forth," John v. 28. "The trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible," 1 Cor. xv. 52. "There shall be a resurrection from the dead, both of the just and unjust," Acts xxiv. 15, "The Lord shall descend from heaven, with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first," 2 Cor. v. 10, "We must all appear before the judgment-seat of Christ," &c.

METAPHOR.

VII. A Judge, after this great appearance upon his summons, enters upon his work, which consists chiefly in three great points:

1. To open the law.
2. To examine witnesses.
3. To arraign the offenders.

of three sorts: 1. God, that wrote the law of nature after an invisible manner on the hearts of men: "I will come near you to judgment, and be a swift witness against you, saith the Lord," Mal. iii. 5. 2. Moses, that delivered the law to Israel; "There is one that accuseth you, even Moses, in whom you trust," John v. 45. 3. The apostles that published the Gospel-law, not to Jews only, but to the Gentile world: these will appear not only to judge the twelve tribes of Israel, but the Gentiles, whose persons and works also must be tried by Christ, as well as the Jews: "He shall judge the secrets of all men," Rom. ii. 16.

VIII. A Judge charges matter of fact in judgment, and proceeds to clear proof and evidence, by a sufficient number of proper witnesses touching the same.

1. The scripture will not else be fulfilled, and made good, which doth fully assert the "Bringing to light the hidden things of darkness, and making manifest the counsels of the heart." 2. The ungodly will not otherwise be convinced of all their ungodly deeds, and all "their hard speeches, which ungodly sinners have spoken against the Lord," Jude 15. 3. The judgment will not otherwise appear just, upon which the glory of the Judge doth so much depend: it is for his glory to overcome when he judgeth.

And unless matter of fact be charged, due proportions will not be weighed out and awarded according to the desert, with clearness and satisfaction, either in a way of mercy or just severity, to all spectators. Therefore the Gentiles shall be charged with matter of fact against the law of nature: "Whoremongers and adulterers God will judge," Heb. xiii. 4. The Jews shall be charged for rejecting Moses, and killing the prophets. The Jews and Gentiles jointly, that they have neglected faith and charity, under the vouchsafement of the Gospel, Matt. xxv. 41, 42. "He shall judge the secrets of men by Christ Jesus, according to my Gospel," Rom. ii. 16.

The fore-mentioned witnesses are sufficient to prove matter of fact, both in point of number and capacity. The first and chief witness will be God himself, who knew all things, and there can be nothing hid from him. The second witness will be conscience, which was and is with men in all places and actions, which man could never leave at home, nor shun its company, when he went out, or when he came in. It is with him in its most secret retirements, and has often told him, that there is one above, even God, that seeth all things, Rom. ii. 15.

Besides these two witnesses that are of such mighty credit, there may be three more added, namely 1. The good angels, which are much busied in this world to watch men, and inspect their ways. 2. The evil angels, who are never out of men's company, and have voluntarily of their own accord been accusers of the brethren, who will give testimony at the bar of Christ against their own proselytes, if God call for it. 3. The ordinary companions of transgressors, with whom counsel was held about evil projects, designs, and actions of murder, theft, drunkenness, and adultery, whose tongues shall, no doubt, be as ready to accuse their comrades, as to confess their own faults, concerning whom we are informed, that not only "every knee shall bow, but every tongue shall confess," &c.

PARALLEL.

VII. The Lord Christ, immediately after summons, upon this great appearance before his dread tribunal, enters upon his last and great work. First, to open the three great law-books, that men have lived under, viz.: 1. The law of nature. 2. The law of Moses. 3. The Gospel-law. The Judge being set, the books are opened; next in order the witnesses appear, and first those that gave the laws; and they are

VIII. Jesus Christ will judge the world, viz., all men, both Jews and Gentiles, according to their works: "God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil," Eccl. xii. 14. The necessity of which appears in these four cases:

METAPHOR.

IX. A Judge, by this order and method of proceeding, keeps up the honour of the law, which he makes his rule in all his acts of judgment.

X. A Judge is very terrible upon the seat of judgment, in three respects: 1. He is clothed with majesty. 2. He hath very great attendants, as the sheriffs, justices of the peace, and the gentry of the country about him. 3. He passeth a solemn and fatal sentence upon guilty criminals.

countenance as the sun shining in its strength; and his voice like the roaring of a lion, the noise of thunder, or the sound of many waters," Isa. lxiii. 2, Rev. i. 13, 14. 2. He will have great attendance, even all the angels in heaven: "When the Son of man shall come, and all the holy angels with him, he shall sit upon the throne of his glory," Matt. xxv. 31. All the saints that ever were in the world since the beginning thereof, shall sit upon the throne with him. "The Lord my God shall come, and all the saints with him," Zech. xiv. 5. "Know you not that the saints shall judge the world?" 3. He will pass a most solemn and fatal sentence upon the ungodly: "They shall not stand in the judgment, nor sinners in the congregation of the righteous," Psal. i. 5. The sentence will be, "Depart from me, ye workers of iniquity, I know you not. Go, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels," which, with the consequences of it, and reasons assigned, you have at large, Matt. xxv. from 41, to the end. O! the sad shrieks, the hideous noises, the woeful and lamentable outcries, from high and low, that will attend this solemn sentence, which no tongue of man is able to express.

XI. A Judge hath the command of officers to see sentence executed as pronounced, as sheriffs, deputy sheriffs, with keepers of prisons, and the like.

and condemned crew; take and bind them hand and foot, and it follows, "These shall go away into everlasting punishment," Matt. xxv. 46.

PARALLEL.

IX. Jesus Christ will magnify the law and make it honourable, in that the word or law spoken by angels, by Moses, by himself, and his holy apostles, shall be the rule of judgment at the last day.

X. Jesus Christ, the high and great Judge of heaven and earth, at the end of the world, on his judgment-seat, will be very terrible in three respects. 1. He is set forth as being clothed with majesty, as Judges are with their scarlet robes: "Red in his apparel, clothed with a garment down to his foot, girt about the paps with a golden girdle; his hair like wool, as white as snow: his eyes like a flame of fire, and his feet like fine brass, as if it burned in a furnace; his strength; and his voice like the roaring of a lion, the noise of thunder, or the sound of many waters," Isa. lxiii. 2, Rev. i. 13, 14. 2. He will have great attendance, even all the angels in heaven: "When the Son of man shall come, and all the holy angels with him, he shall sit upon the throne of his glory," Matt. xxv. 31. All the saints that ever were in the world since the beginning thereof, shall sit upon the throne with him. "The Lord my God shall come, and all the saints with him," Zech. xiv. 5. "Know you not that the saints shall judge the world?" 3. He will pass a most solemn and fatal sentence upon the ungodly: "They shall not stand in the judgment, nor sinners in the congregation of the righteous," Psal. i. 5. The sentence will be, "Depart from me, ye workers of iniquity, I know you not. Go, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels," which, with the consequences of it, and reasons assigned, you have at large, Matt. xxv. from 41, to the end. O! the sad shrieks, the hideous noises, the woeful and lamentable outcries, from high and low, that will attend this solemn sentence, which no tongue of man is able to express.

XI. So Jesus Christ, the universal and supreme Judge, hath the full command of all the good and elect angels, who attend the court at the great assizes, to see that no resistance nor escape be made, but that sentence be fully executed upon all the treasonable, black, rebellious,

INFERENCES.

If there be a Judge, a time, a place, and work of Judgment, we do infer these three things.

I. How great need unbelievers, rebels, traitors, and all offenders have of pardon, there being nothing else will stand them in stead when they appear before the great Judge, where there will be no pleading, not guilty, because of full evidence to matter of fact; no pleading ignorance, because a known and established law is broken; no benefit of petitions, because the King is gone off the mercy-seat; no relying upon the wrong verdict of corrupt jurors, because no such persons will be found there to afford help. Nothing avails with the Judge in this judgment-day, Matt. xxii. 13, but a white stone, a wedding-garment, the spotless righteousness of Jesus Christ: all who want this robe will in that day be speechless.

II. How sad will it fare with all those that go out of this world without faith in the Son of God, without the pardon of their sins! Woe, unto such in that day that ever they were born. Look to it, all you unbelievers, swearers, whoremongers, persecutors, liars, sabbath-breakers, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God, covetous persons, proud persons, thieves, drunkards, and backsliders, what will you do in that day? as sure as God liveth you will be all condemned (unless you repent and believe in Christ, 1 Cor. vi. 9, 10, Luke xiii. 3, 5.) "to the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone," Rev. xxi. 8. What will you do in this day of visitation?

who shall plead for you, now you have lost the prevailing Advocate? where will sinners and ungodly ones appear? How will you be able to look the Judge in the face? How can you escape this judgment, that have neglected so great salvation?" Heb. ii. 3. How can you escape the damnation of hell, that have no Christ, no faith, no pardon.

III. But thrice happy are they who appear before this great and mighty, this high and terrible Judge, with a white stone, with a wedding robe, with a pardon under hand and seal.

1. The law is silent, being fully answered.

2. The Judge smiles, and takes knowledge of them as the favourites of heaven, "Well done, good and faithful servant," &c. "Come ye blessed of my Father, enter into the joy of your Lord.—Inherit the kingdom prepared for you," &c., Matt. xxv. 34.

3. The witnesses are freed from trouble, and excused from giving testimony against them, because guilt was owned, the fact was confessed, a self-judgment passed, and the King's pardon obtained, "Through the redemption that is in Christ's blood, Rom. iii. 35. and viii. 33, 34. "Now if God be for us, who can be against us?" If God justify, who shall condemn? Who shall lay any thing to the charge of God's elect? Who shall condemn if Christ hath died, shed his blood, and sent his Spirit to seal that pardon? God the chief witness is pleased, conscience is purged; peace being there, its power to accuse is gone, the inward thoughts are for excusing altogether. What remains now but liberty proclaimed? "There is no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit," Rom. viii. 1. And the joyous jubilee sounded forth; "Lo, this is our God, we have waited for him, the Lord is our Lawgiver, our Judge, our King; he is come to save us, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation. He is come to be glorified in his saints, and admired in all them that believe; sing praises to our God, sing praises to our King, sing praises to our Judge, sing praises. Glory be to God, and to the Lamb, to the King, and to the Judge for ever and ever, world without end, Amen."

CHRIST COMPARED TO THE BRAZEN SERPENT.

"As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up: That whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life," John iii. 14, 15.

METAPHOR.

I. THE people were stung with fiery serpents, and thereby mortally wounded.

II. Neither Moses, nor the law, could cure the people that were stung with those fiery serpents, but the Brazen Serpent.

III. The Serpent of brass was to be lifted upon a pole.

IV. After many people died that were stung, the Brazen Serpent was appointed to be lifted up, as an ordinance of healing.

V. A Serpent wounded, and a Serpent healed. The first that wounded had poison in him; but the second, though called a Serpent,

PARALLEL.

I. SINNERS are stung with sin, that is like the sting of a serpent; "The poison of asps is under their tongue," Rom. iii. 13. Sin wounds the soul, "My wounds stink and are corrupt." See more where sin is compared to a Serpent."

II. So neither the law nor Levite, nor any creature could cure mankind, nor redeem them from the sting of sin and death, but only Jesus Christ.

III. So Christ was lifted up, upon the cross, and is lifted up in the ministry of the word, and the ordinances of the Gospel, and thereby in the hearts of believers, John xii. 34.

IV. So after mankind sinned, and was brought under death, Christ came by the appointment of God to die and be crucified, or lifted up upon the cross to heal and recover us of our wounds.

V. So (saith Mr. Guild)* as the first Adam lost mankind, the second Adam redeemed mankind. The first had sin and venomous poison in him by means of his hearkening to the old Serpent; the

* Moses Unveiled, p. 85.

METAPHOR.

was without poison or sting; it had the similitude of a Serpent, but had no venom.

VI. The Brazen Serpent was not forged by man's hand or hammer, but in a mould in the fire.

VII. It was made of brass and not of gold; which metal besides that it is of a fiery colour, and so might resemble the colour of the Serpent, is also strong and durable. "Is my strength," saith Job, "the strength of stones, or is my flesh of brass?"

VIII. They that looked up to the Brazen Serpent, though ever so grievously wounded and stung, yet were healed and saved from death.

IX. They that looked upon their sores and grievous wounds, and not to the sign that was erected by God's appointment, died, notwithstanding the Serpent of Brass.

X. If they sought to surgeons or physicians, or used any salves or medicines of their own, or others, yet they perished.

Christ, and look up to him as crucified, to satisfy for their sins, are like to perish for ever.

Let the men that talk of the light within look to this.

XI. The Brazen Serpent was an unlikely thing or way to human reason, to heal such deadly wounds.

ishness; but unto them that are called,

XII. He that had a weak eye or eyes, and yet looked up to the Brazen Serpent, was cured.

First, one comes to him, and saith, "If I can but touch the hem of his garment, I shall be whole," Mark v. 28. The second saith, "Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me whole," Luke v. 12. The third said, "If thou canst do any thing, have compassion on us, and help us," Mark ix. 22. One would think the last had no faith at all, it seemed so weak, he questioned the power of Christ. A weak faith, if true, will justify and save the soul, as well as a strong faith.

XIII. It was a wonderful means of cure and undeservedly appointed by God, of his mere pity, against the merit of those murderers.

what manner of love is this!" &c., 1 John iii. 1.

PARALLEL.

second though called a sinner, and made to bear our sins, and had the similitude of a sinful man, but yet without sin, Heb. vii. 26, 27.*

VI. So Christ was not begotten by man, but conceived by the Holy Ghost in the womb of the Virgin.†

VII. So was Christ sent not with outward glory or worldly pompous show, but mean and humble in outward appearance; brass being strong, &c., in this respect, it might figure out the strength of Christ, who was able by the power of the God-head to endure and overcome all his tribulations.‡

VIII. So they who look up to Christ by a true faith, though ever such great sinners, shall be healed and saved from eternal death. By recovery of natural life in the Israelites, was figured eternal life by Christ.

IX. So they who are bitten and grievously wounded with sin, if they fix their eyes thereon, and grieve and mourn in the sight of it, and do not look unto Christ by believing, despair and die eternally, notwithstanding the blessed Saviour.

X. So whosoever seek to any for help but Christ, or endeavour by their own works, or reformation of life, to have peace with God; or trust to, and rely upon the bare mercy of God, considering his justice; and do not come to Jesus

XI. So Christ crucified is to the Jews, and many others in the world, an unlikely way to save men's souls: "We preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumbling-block, and to the Greeks foolishness, the power of God," &c., 1 Cor. i. 23, 24.

XII. So he that hath but a weak faith, yet looks up unto Christ, shall be saved. We read of three degrees of faith in the Gospel, and yet the weakest obtained help and cure from Christ.

XIII. So is the death of Christ to sinful and rebellious mankind, an admirable work of unmerited mercy, infinitely above what we deserved; it was not only above, but against our merits: "God so loved the world," &c. John iii. 16. "Behold

METAPHOR.

I. The Brazen Serpent cured only the wounds of the body, and saved thereby only from temporal death.

DISPARITY.

I. Christ cures all the diseases and wounds of the soul, and thereby saves from eternal death. See Physician.

* Ainsworth.

† Guild.

‡ Ainsworth.

METAPHOR.

II. The Brazen Serpent retained not always its virtue to cure: also it was not to be worshipped, it was gross idolatry so to do: and when in the days of Hezekiah it came to be that way abused, it was destroyed,

DISPARITY.

II. Christ, the Antitype of the Brazen Serpent, retains the like virtue and efficacy to save that ever he had, ought to be worshipped, is "the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever," Heb. xiii. 8.

INFERENCES.

This shows not only the necessity of a Saviour, but also of faith in him. None were healed but those that looked up to the Brazen Serpent; so no man shall be saved, but he that looks up by faith to Jesus Christ.

1. Look up timely.
2. Look up daily, for sin daily wounds thee.
3. Look up with a fixed or single eye.

CHRIST IS ALL AND IN ALL.

"Where there is neither Greek, nor Jew, circumcision, nor uncircumcision, barbarian, Scythian, bond, nor free; but Christ is All, and in all," Col. iii. 11.

Now to conclude with the second head of metaphors, similes, types, parables, and other borrowed terms, concerning the Lord Jesus, I may well infer from the whole of what hath been said, "That Christ is All and in all." The words are a proposition, in which you have,

1. The subject, but Christ.
2. The predicate, "He is All and in all."

Christ is All, in all things that are necessary to salvation, and that to all persons that do believe on him. Christ is a believer's All; and he esteems him so to be: not to exclude the persons of the Father, and of the Holy Ghost; for what Christ is as God, they all are, being but one and the same eternal Being: so that he that honoureth the one, honoureth the other also; he that honoureth the Son, honoureth the Father, and the Holy Ghost.

I. Christ is All in all in the first creation, (though this I do not say is directly intended in this place.)

1. He was before all things.
2. He is the Original of all creatures, the Founder, or, to use the scripture phrase, "the Beginning of the creation of God," Rev. iii. 14. "He made all things, all things were made by him, and without him was not anything made that was made," Heb. i. 2, 3.
3. "He upheld all things by the word of his power, &c., and by him all things do consist," Col. i. 16, 17.
4. As he was before all, the Original the first Former of all things, and as he upholdeth them; so likewise for him all things are and were created.
5. He hath the disposing of all things: "By him kings reign, and princes decree justice," Prov. viii. 15. "All power is given unto him in heaven and earth," Matt. xxviii. 18. "He hath the keys of hell and death. He sets up, and pulleth down, kills and makes alive at his pleasure."
6. "He is heir of all things." He hath universal Lordship over angels, saints, wicked men, and devils. See Christ the Heir.

II. But more directly, "Christ is All in All in the second creation.

1. He is the Substance of all shadows: "Which are shadows of good things to come, but the body is of Christ," Col. ii. 17.
2. He is the Antitype of all types, the All which Moses and the prophets pointed to.

3. He is All in all in pacification, and reconciliation of God to man, and of man to God: "He hath abolished in his flesh the law of commandments, contained in ordinances, for to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace," Eph. ii. 15.

4. Christ is All in all in sanctification, and payment of our debts: "He was made sin for us, that knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him." "The Lord hath laid on him the iniquities of us all," 2 Cor. v. 21, Isa. liii. 6.

5. Christ is All in all in justification: "He is the Lord our righteousness," Jer. xxxiii.

16. It is in him all the families of the earth and every believing soul is justified: "In the Lord, shall one say, have I righteousness and strength," Isa. xlv. 24.

6. Christ is All in all in election, he is the Root of it, the first of election, the sum of our election; we are chosen in him, for him, and given to him: none shall be saved but such as are elected; but had it not been for Christ, none had been elected; had not Christ been found as the fruit of the wisdom of God, what would have signified election, the fruit of the grace of God?

7. Christ is All in all in vocation; he it is that hath called us, and that makes that calling effectual to us: "Who hath saved us, and called us, not according to our works, but according to his purpose and grace," 2 Tim. i. 9.

8. Christ is All in all in sanctification: "But of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption," 1 Cor. i. 30. "He hath loved us, and washed us from our sins with his own blood," Rev. i. 5.

9. Christ is All in all in acceptance: "He hath made us accepted in the Beloved," Eph. i. 6.

10. Christ is All in all in respect of salvation, he is the Author of salvation: "I looked, and there was none to uphold, therefore mine own arm brought salvation." "He hath no partner or competitor: "His name shall be called Jesus, because he shall save his people from their sins." "Neither is there salvation in any other," Acts iv. 12.

11. He is All in all in conversion. (1.) It is he that shows the soul the need and necessity of it. (2.) He it is that quickeneth us: "You hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins," Eph. ii. 1. (3.) He it is that hath begotten us by his word and Spirit, and hath given a new heart to us, and hath planted a new principle of life in us.

12. He is All in all in the pardon of sin. (1.) He purchased pardon for us. (2.) He gives us a broken heart in order to it, and a heart to ask it, and a hand to receive it. (3.) Pardon is given for his name's sake.

13. Christ is All in all in every grace. (1.) He gives faith: "To you it is given in the behalf of Christ, not only to believe on him, but also to suffer for his sake," Phil. i. 29. (2.) It is he that hath "shed abroad the love of God in our hearts, by the Holy Ghost," Rom. v. 3, 6. All grace is treasured up in him: "Of his fulness have we all received, and grace for grace," John i. 16. He is the Author, Increaser, and Finisher of our faith, and all other graces in us, Heb. xii. 2.

14. Christ is All in all in the ministry of the word. (1.) It is Christ that is preached: "We preach Christ crucified," 1 Cor. i. 23. (2.) It is Christ that gives grace and gifts to preach: "To me is the grace given, that I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ," Eph. iii. 8. (3.) It is he that ordains and appoints men to this work, and puts all true preachers into the ministry. (4.) It is he that opens the mouth to speak, and the ear and heart to hear and receive the word. Take Christ away, and what Gospel can be preached? &c. What is Paul? and what is Apollos? I am nothing. Gospel ministry and ministers are nothing without Christ. "So neither is he that planteth any thing, neither he that watereth, but God that giveth the increase," 1 Cor. iii. 7.

15. He is All in all in every ordinance.

First, in baptism. 1. This ordinance shows forth Christ's death. 2. It holds forth his burial: "We are buried with Christ in baptism," Rom. vi. 4. 3. It holds forth his resurrection; take Christ away, and what signifies baptism?

Secondly, In the Lord's supper, Christ is All in all. 1. It holds forth that his body was broken, and his blood was shed. 2. It shows his love to us, and his suffering for us.

Thirdly, In prayer Christ is All in all. 1. We must ask in his name. 2. By the help of his Spirit. 3. It is he that presents and makes our prayers acceptable to God.

4. What is prayer, or any duty saints can perform, if they meet not with him in it, and if it be not done to his glory? An ordinance without Christ, is but as a cabinet without a jewel, or a shell without a kernel.

16. Again, Christ is (as one saith) all from the Father, All to the Father, and All with the Father.

(1.) All from the Father: "I am come that they may have life, (life here and life hereafter,) and that they might have it more abundantly," John x. 10. The life of grace, and of glory, are by Christ.

(2.) Christ is All to the Father: "I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life." Every word here hath its article in the Greek: "No man cometh to the Father, but by me," John xiv. 6. Christ is the Way wherein, the Truth whereby, and the Life whereunto we walk: Christ is the Way without error, the Truth without falsehood, and the Life without death. Truth lies between the way and life, as if the way to life were through truth.

(3.) Christ is All with the Father: "I know thou hearest me always." Christ hath God's ear at all times. He is the object of the Father's delight: "This is my beloved Son in whom I acquiesce;" so the Greek: * it is an emphatical word, and signifieth an infinite affection, Matt. iii. 17.

17. Christ is All in all in respect of merit: he hath merited all for us, and conveys all to us. As we have all propter Christum, so we receive all we have per Christum, through Christ. He is not only the Fountain, but the medium or conduit-pipe.

18. Christ is All in all, or the sum of the whole Gospel; all the good here, or the promised good we shall receive hereafter, is through him; he is virtually every thing to us, in every condition. (1.) Art thou sick? Christ is thy Physician, and thy physic too. (2.) Art thou poor? Christ is thy riches. (3.) Art thou weary? Christ is thy Rest: "I will give you rest," Matt. xi. 28, 29. (4.) Art thou in trouble? (5.) Christ is thy peace: "This Man shall be thy peace when the Assyrians comes into our land." Art thou a stranger? He is thy Way, and the End of thy journey. (6.) Art thou despised and contemned by men? Christ is thy honour: "To you that believe he is precious;" in the Greek, "He is an honour."

Quest. Who is he that makes Christ his All?

Ans. 1. He makes Christ his All, that owns him, believes in him, obeys, worships, and adores him, as "God over all," Rom. viii. 5.

2. He that loves him above all.

3. He that denies himself of, and forsakes all for Jesus Christ's sake, and follows him.

4. He that aims at Christ, and exalts him in all he is, hath, doth, or undergoeth: "Yea, doubtless I account all things but loss, for the excellency of the knowledge of Jesus Christ my Lord, for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do account them but dung, that I may win Christ," Phil. iii. 8, Gal. ii. 20.

5. He makes Christ his All, that wholly lives by him, for him, and to him.

6. He makes Christ his All, who cannot be satisfied with any thing this world affords, or can afford, without him.

7. The man that makes Christ his All, will not take any of his right and honour from him; he will not diminish his glory, or ascribe that to the creature which belongs to Christ.

8. He that makes Christ his All, will not be contented with any ordinance or duty, if he have not his influencing, quickening, and comforting presence.

9. He makes Christ his All, who, when it comes in competition, will let all go, even his own life, before he will part with him.

10. He that makes Christ his All, likes and loves him in all: he loves not the saints chiefly because they are of his opinion in every thing, but for that of Christ he sees in them.

11. He makes Christ his All, that longs above all things to be like him, and to have his image implanted in his heart.

Quest. Why doth a true Christian make Christ his All?

1. Because he is "God over all," Rom. ix. 5. It were a sin thus to exalt him, were he not God.

2. Because he hath a name given him above all, above every name: "At the name of Jesus every knee shall bow," &c., Phil. ii. 9, 10.
3. Because Christ hath suffered and done all those things for us, which we should have done and suffered.
4. Because a believer sees himself unable to do any thing without him.
5. Because he is made of God All in all things to them.
6. Because nothing is of any worth in a saint's eye, without Christ.
7. Because in having Christ, he hath All.

APPLICATION.

Is Christ All! then this reproves them that esteem any thing here in this world above him.

1. It reproves such as esteem the pleasures, honours, and profits of this world above him.

2. It reproves, and may eternally shame them that esteem their sins and base hellish lusts, more than him. Many will adventure the loss of Christ, rather than forego their evil courses.

3. It reproves them that esteem and exalt Christ in some things only; he is not All in all to them.

4. How then doth it reprove them that make Christ nothing at All, who wholly cast him away, and build their hopes of salvation upon another foundation?

Secondly. Be advised from hence, whosoever thou art, to make Jesus Christ thy All.

MOTIVES.

1. Thou hast nothing that will stand thee in any stead, until Christ be thy All.

2. If thou hast not Christ to be thy All, thy knowledge and profession of him will not prove to be worth any thing at last.

3. If thou hast not Christ for thy All, when death comes, what will become of that thou hast? thou wilt then have nothing.

Quest. How shall a person come to have Christ to be his All?

Ans. 1. He must let all his sins go.

2. He must let all his consultings with flesh and blood go.

3. He must let all his own righteousness go, so as not to rest and depend upon it for salvation.

Thirdly. This affords much comfort to the godly.

1. Is Christ thy All? thou hast a great All; what can there be more? thou mayest say with Jacob, "I have enough;" the word is, All.

2. Thou canst never lose thy All, because thou canst not lose thy Christ.

3. Thou canst never be undone, though thou lose All thou hast in this world for Christ's sake, because to thee Christ is All and in all.

METAPHORS, ALLEGORIES, SIMILIES, TYPES, ETC.,

RESPECTING

THE HOLY SPIRIT,

THE

THIRD PERSON OF THE BLESSED TRINITY.

THE HOLY GHOST A COMFORTER.

"And I will pray the Father and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever,"—John xiv. 16.

"And the Comforter which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things," &c., Verse 26.

THE Comforter, Παράκλητος, or the Advocate : "He shall give you another Comforter." The word [Paraclet] in the Greek comes from a word of large signification, and consequently may be rendered Advocate, Exhorter, or Comforter.

I. A Comforter implies one or more to be in trouble and distress, or attended with sorrow and affliction : a man that is not in any trouble, stands not in need of a Comforter.

joyce ; and ye shall be sorrowful, but

II. It implies or holds forth, that those who are troubled, and in a sorrowful condition, are capable of relief and succour.

fort. Such as have committed the unpardonable sin, or are already in hell, are incapable of receiving true peace and comfort ; but so it is not with God's people. Whatever their state and condition be, it admits of relief, though through Satan's temptations they are sometimes backward to take hold of it.

III. Comforter is a name or appellation belonging to a person, or a personal appellation.

other Divine Persons : "Baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." "There are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Son, and the Spirit ; and these three are one," Matt. xxviii. 19, 1 John v. 7. 2. He hath also the names proper to a Divine Person only, for he is called God : "Why hast thou lied unto the Holy Ghost ? thou hast not lied unto man, but unto God," Acts v. 3, 4. 3. He hath personal properties assigned him, viz., a will : "He divideth to every man severally as he will ; and an understanding : "The Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things

I. The saints and people of God are in this world attended with manifold troubles, afflictions, and sorrows : "Many are the afflictions of the righteous ; for all the day long have I been plagued, and chastened every morning," Psal. lxxii. 14. "Verily, verily, I say unto you, that ye shall weep and lament, but the world shall rejoice ; and your sorrow shall be turned into joy," John xvi. 20.

II. The disciples of Christ, though they mourn here or are in a sorrowful state, upon many considerations, yet they are capable of comfort, and fit subjects of it ; they are not such as utterly refuse, or are unable to receive relief and com-

III. The Holy Spirit is a Divine Person ; he is placed in the same rank and order, without any note of difference or distinction, as to a distinct interest, in the Divine nature, with the of God." 4. He is a voluntary Author of divine properties; he of old cherished the creation, he formed and garnished the heavens; he inspired, acted, and spake in and by the apostles. 5. The same regard is to be had to him in faith, worship, and obedience, as unto the persons of the Father and the Son; for our being baptized in his name, is our solemn engagement to believe in him, yield obedience to him, and worship him, as it puts the same obligation upon us to the Father and Son

METAPHOR.

IV. A choice and true Comforter takes care to come unto a person he loveth, at the greatest time of need, when he is most cast down and comforted. Thus the Jews came to Mary, to comfort her, when they heard that her brother Lazarus was dead; and Job's friends, when he was in the depth of sorrow, came to comfort him.

V. A Comforter imports a person able and willing to comfort and relieve such as are in a sorrowful, mournful, and afflicted condition.

do: "Nevertheless, I tell you the truth, it is expedient for you that I go away;" pray mind the reason our Saviour gives for it: "If I go not, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him," John xvi. 7.

VI. A faithful Comforter manifesteth much love and tenderness to his oppressed and afflicted friend; particularly, 1. In coming to him. 2. In supplying the want he sustains of those things he is deprived of.

VII. A wise Comforter uses many and weighty arguments to infuse comfort into a distressed and disconsolate soul: it is not enough to come and give a bare visit and look upon a friend, but to take apt and suitable words and motives to do it.

The Spirit usually comforteth believers in and under their sorrows and afflictions.

(1.) By showing them whatsoever Christ hath done and suffered for them.

(2.) By opening and applying the gracious promises of Christ unto them, "He shall bring whatsoever I have said to your remembrance."

(3.) By sealing up Christ's love unto them; "As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten." It is no sign they are hated by Christ, or not in his love and affection, that they are chastised and so often under this and the other exercise of affliction; and this the Spirit labours either by his word, or ministers, and other ways to convince them of.

(4.) By showing from the word that the like afflictions, if not greater, many of God's children have met with before them, or are now under, "Knowing that the same afflictions are accomplished in your brethren that are in the world;" what are thy sorrows, saith the Spirit, to those that holy Job and many of the blessed martyrs met with?

(5.) By showing them the design and gracious end of God in all his dispensations and afflictions: he doth it not simply for his own pleasure as an act of sovereignty, "But for our profit, that we might be partakers of his holiness," Heb. xii. 10. This is the

PARALLEL.

IV. So the Holy Spirit comes unto a gracious person in the time of greatest need, when he is most dejected and comforted, whether it be under temptation, affliction, or persecution, for Christ's sake. Hence the apostle saith, "When we came into Macedonia, our flesh had no rest, but we were troubled on every side; without were fightings, and within were fears; nevertheless, God that comforted those that are cast down, comforted us," &c., 2 Cor. vii. 5, 7. "I will not leave you comfortless, I will come unto you," John xiv. 18.

V. The Holy Spirit is able and willing at all times to comfort sincere Christians in their afflictions. Such is the power, ability, and efficacy of the Spirit upon this account, that it is more capable and able to comfort believers, than the bare bodily presence of The Lord Jesus is able to

VI. The Holy Spirit doth manifest much love and tenderness to believers, which appears, 1. In his coming to them that are poor and contemptible in the eyes of the world. 2. By making up the want of Christ's bodily presence. 3. In bearing repulses from them; how often hath the Spirit been slighted, and his motions rejected, instead of being friendly entertained, when in love he comes to them.

VII. The Holy Spirit doth not only come and give poor believers a bare visit in their distresses, but also uses fit and suitable ways and means to comfort and support their souls, "He shall bring all things unto your remembrance that I have spoken unto you," John xiv. 26. "He shall take of mine and shall show it unto you, and he shall show you things to come," &c., John xvi. 15.

fruit of all, the taking away of your sins, it is for the trial of your graces; saith the Spirit, "When he hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold," Job xxiii. 10. It is to convince the devil and wicked men, that they are sincere and upright ones, and do not follow Christ for loaves. "Doth Job (saith Satan) fear God for nought? But put forth thine hand now, and touch all that he hath, and he will curse thee to thy face," Job i. 9, 11. God, saith the Spirit, hath brought this and the other troubles upon thee, to clear thy innocency, and to show that Satan is a liar.

(6.) But showing them that all their afflictions are but short lived, that they will soon be over, they will last but a moment.

(7.) That they will add to their advantage here and hereafter. "Our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory," 2 Cor. iv. 17. It is, saith the Spirit, to show forth the excellent nature of true grace; faith, love, and patience never shone forth in their proper lustre and glory, until they come under exercise. "The trial of your faith is much more precious than gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire," 1 Pet. i. 7. And it will hereby be found unto praise, honour, and glory, at the appearing of Jesus Christ.

(8.) The Spirit comforteth believers, by showing them that all their sorrows will in a little time be turned into gladness. "Now ye are sorrowful, but I will see you again, and your hearts shall rejoice, and your joy no man taketh away from you." "Ye shall be sorrowful, but your sorrow shall be turned into joy." "Those that go forth weeping, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again rejoicing, bringing their sheaves with them." "God will give unto them (saith the Spirit) that mourn in Zion, beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garments of praise for the spirit of heaviness, that they may be called trees of righteousness, the planting of the Lord, that he may be glorified," Isa. lxi. 2, 3.

(9.) The Spirit comforteth by showing believers that all their sorrows will be in this world, the wicked have their sweet things here, and the godly have their bitter things here; but as the wicked shall have nothing but bitter hereafter, so the godly shall have nothing but sweet hereafter. "Son, remember that thou in thy life-time receivedst thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things, but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented," Luke xvi. 25.

(10.) The Spirit comforteth by convincing believers, that God doth not punish them as their sins deserve; "He hath visited thee little or nothing," saith Elihu, so the word will bear it. The least mercy is more than we deserve; he hath not dealt with us after our sins, nor rewarded us according to our iniquities.

METAPHOR.

VIII. A Comforter sympathizes with him he comes to visit, to comfort him in his grief and trouble. "Job's friends lifted up their voice, and wept, and they rent every one his mantle, and sprinkled dust upon their heads: so they sat down with him upon the ground seven days, and seven nights," &c., Job ii. 12, 13.

IX. A true Comforter will intercede to others, (to administer support and relief) in whose power it is to succour, as well as himself.

mind of the Spirit, because he maketh God," Rom. viii. 26, 27. Hence the word Advocate or Comforter.

X. A true Comforter will search into a person's state and condition, to know how it is with him, that thereby he may the better under-

PARALLEL.

VIII. The Holy Spirit sympathizes with every gracious soul in their distresses and troubles (according as God in his word speaks to our capacities,) "In all their afflictions he was afflicted; his soul was grieved for Israel." And in that of the eighth chapter to the Romans, the Spirit particularly is said to sigh and groan after such a sort that cannot be uttered, Rom. viii. 26. And hence the apostle exhorts the saints not to grieve the Holy Spirit of God, whereby they are sealed to the day of redemption, Eph. iv. 30.

IX. "Likewise the Holy Spirit also helps our infirmities; for we know not what to pray for as we ought: but the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groans, which cannot be uttered. And he that searcheth the hearts knoweth what is the intercession for the saints, according to the will of X. The Holy Spirit searches the heart and reins of every soul he comes to comfort, to discover the state and condition of a person to him; David cries out, "Search me, O God, and know stand how to speak a word of comfort to him.

METAPHOR.

XI. A Comforter sometimes is slighted, by the person or persons he comes to visit, and administers succour unto, and all his good and sweet advice is not regarded for a time.

XII. A Comforter many times keeps his friends from utter despondency, and wonderfully revives and consoles his soul, and thereby makes sighing and heaviness to fly away. "The moving of my lips should assuage your grief," Job xvi. 5.

XIII. A faithful and true Comforter will not only give his distressed and disconsolate friend a visit, but if he sees there is need of it, will make his abode, even stay with them many days; Job's friends did so.

from me," Lam. i. 16; yet his supporting presence is ever with them. "I will pray the Father, and he shall send you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever, even the Spirit of truth," &c., and he is said to dwell in us, and to make his abode with us. "But if the Spirit of him that raised Jesus from the dead, dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead, shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you."

XIV. A good and faithful Comforter is highly esteemed and greatly beloved by his friend, especially when the work of him is known, or he is sensible of the profit and much good effected by him.

XV. A faithful Comforter will deal plainly with his friend, and not speak peace and comfort when he knows there is not just and good reason so to do, but will reprove sometimes also if he find cause for it.

rit of consolation: the humble, sincere,

METAPHOR.

I. ANOTHER Comforter, though wise and very compassionate, and every way capable to speak words to a disconsolate person, yet finds sometimes the condition of his friend to be such, that all he can say and do will not take place, nor administer present relief to my heart," Psal. cxxxix. 23. "I the Lord search the heart," &c., Jer. xvii. 10. "He that searcheth the heart," &c., Rom. viii. 27. "The Spirit searcheth all things, &c., 1 Cor. ii. 10.

PARALLEL.

XI. So the Holy Spirit is sometimes slighted and grieved, through the power of temptation, by a believer, and his sweet and heavenly advice is not minded, nor followed as it ought to be, but all comfort is rejected for a time, but afterwards (though sometimes long first,) the soul with joy takes hold of it, Eph. iv. 30.

XII. The Holy Spirit keeps the heart of a believer from utter despondency, and greatly revives and consoles him; hence the apostle saith, "God hath given us everlasting consolation, and good hope through grace," 2 Thess. ii. 16. "We are troubled on every side, but not in distress; we are perplexed, but not in despair," 2 Cor. iv. 8. "I have seen his ways, and will heal him also, and restore comforts to him," &c., Isa. lvii. 18.

XIII. The Holy Spirit knows there is an absolute necessity for him not only to give the saints a visit and immediately be gone, but also to abide with them always, for they cannot be without his glorious presence one moment: it is true sometimes they may be without his eminent comforting presence, which causes the Church to cry, "The Comforter that should relieve my soul is far

XIV. The Holy Spirit is exceedingly prized, and much beloved by every godly man, but more especially when they find by experience the great worth of him, and the great good and profit they receive by his means.

XV. The Holy Spirit deals faithfully with every man, he will not speak peace to any person but to those to whom it doth belong, nor at a time when the soul is fallen into any sin, or under some great temptation to sin, but will at such times rather rebuke and reprove them. The Spirit is first, a Spirit of burning, and then a Spirit of consolation: the humble, sincere,

PARALLEL.

I. THE Holy Spirit sometimes finds a gracious person very much disturbed and cast down under heavy pressures of affliction, and that no other can comfort him; yet when he comes to a resolution to relieve, refresh, and comfort him, all his sorrow, temptations, and disquietudes fly away. Let a saint be never so sad, if the Spirit see it is a fit time to speak peace and comfort to him, him, but after all, remains very sad and disconsolate.

METAPHOR.

II. Another Comforter many times misses the case of a poor, afflicted person, and thereby cannot accomplish the work; this did Job's Comforters, they mistook his case, whereby they proved miserable Comforters to him.

III. Other Comforters are many times wearied out, and leave their friends in the midst of their sorrow.

IV. Another Comforter may be absent, nay at a great distance when his poor distressed friend stands in most need of him; besides, he can visit but a few persons at one and the same time, and cannot be at above one place at once.

V. Other Comforters can speak to the ear, but scarce able to reach the heart; Spira had many words of comfort spoken to his ear, but they could not speak to his heart.

cells all other Comforters, he can in a moment cause all sorrow to cease, by speaking to the heart.

DISPARITY.

he doth it effectually. "If he speak peace, who can cause sorrow?" "For I have satiated the weary soul, and I have replenished every sorrowful soul," Jer. xxxi. 25.

II. But the Holy Spirit never doth, nor can mistake any person's condition. Being God, he knows, and is the Searcher of the heart; all things lie naked and open to his eyes. "The Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God!"

III. But the Holy Spirit cannot be wearied nor tired out. "The Creator of the ends of the earth fainteth not, there is no searching of his understanding," Isa. xl. 28.

IV. But the Holy Ghost is omnipotent. "Whither shall I go from thy Spirit? or whither shall I fly from thy presence?" Psal. cxxxix. 7. He is always near, and at hand, and needs none to bring him news how it goes with any person. Being the omniscient God, he can visit thousands, and ten thousands at one and the same time; is every where, not circumscribed nor limited to place.

V. The Spirit can speak to the heart of a poor sinner. "I will (saith God) allure her, and bring her into the wilderness, and speak comfortable words unto her." In the Hebrew, loquar super cor, or ad cor ejus, "I will speak to her heart," Hos. ii. 14. In this the Holy Spirit infinitely ex-

INFERENCES.

I. WE may infer from hence, the great love of Christ to his own people, he will not leave them comfortless, nor send one to them that is not able to speak peace, or administer true comfort and consolation to their souls.

II. It should teach us in our trouble, to cry for the Holy Comforter to come unto us.

III. It reproves such, who deny the Holy Ghost to be God, and a divine Person; this being an appellation that properly belongs to a distinct person.

IV. Let us take heed we never grieve the Holy Spirit, who is such a choice and blessed Friend to us.

V. It may also caution every soul against receiving comfort, when God by the Spirit speaks it not to them.

1. The Holy Spirit speaks not comfort to any unconverted souls, who love and live in their sins, but rather terror.

2. The Holy Spirit speaks not comfort to carnal and loose professors, and hypocrites in the Church, "That have lamps and no oil," Matt. xxv. 3: the name of Christ upon them, but not his nature in them; much knowledge, but want charity: "Fearfulness will (saith the Spirit) surprise the hypocrite," Isa. xxxiii. 14.

3. The Spirit speaks no comfort to an apostate and backslider in heart and life; he tells them, "They shall be filled with their own ways, and led aside with the workers of iniquity," Psal. cxxv. 5.

4. The Spirit speaks no comfort to the moral person, who wholly rests upon his own righteousness, and sees no need of a Saviour, nor of "The righteousness of God, which is by faith in Jesus Christ."

5. The Spirit speaks no comfort to persecutors and murderers of the godly,—to cursed plotters and haters of the true religion, and lovers of idolatry, such that worship the Beast, and are followers of the Romish church, or upholders of the same ; “ They (the Spirit saith) shall drink of the wrath of God, and be tormented with fire and brimstone for ever and ever,” Rev. xiv. 9—11.

But the Spirit speaks comfort to all true penitent ones ; to such, who though they have been great sinners, yet now loathe themselves in a true and thorough sense thereof, and forsake it.

1. To those who do believe and wholly rely upon Jesus Christ for life and salvation.
2. To those who desire to be holy as well as happy, to have their sins mortified as well as pardoned, to be sanctified as well as saved, to live to God here as well as to live with God hereafter.
3. To such who are universal in their obedience, that take up their cross and follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth.
4. To such that obey the precepts of God, as well as believe the promises.
5. In a word, to all sincere and upright ones.

Quest. How doth the Spirit speak comfort to the souls of men ?

- Ans. 1. Usually by bringing Christ's word and promises to their remembrance.
2. By using many arguments, some of which I have hinted at already.
 3. By his shining influences, sweet and comfortable operations upon the soul.
 4. By sealing up Christ's love, and giving good hope and assurances of eternal life unto them.

THE HOLY SPIRIT COMPARED TO THE WIND.

“ Awake, O north Wind ; and come, thou south, and blow upon my garden,” &c. Cant. iv. 16.

“ The Wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh,” &c., John iii. 8.

“ And suddenly there came a sound from heaven, as of a rushing mighty Wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting,” &c., Acts ii. 2.

THE Hebrew word רוח, and the Greek, το πνευμα, (which comes from a verb that signifies to breathe, or to blow) signifies sometimes air, sometimes wind, and sometimes a spirit. The several metaphorical meanings of Wind may be read in our Philologia Sacra, to which we refer you. Sometimes it denotes things that are vain, light, and empty ; as Eccles. v. 16, Hos. xii. 1, &c. In the texts cited, by an express similitude it is compared to the Holy Spirit, as you may see in the following parallel.

METAPHOR.

I. The Wind is invisible ; no man ever saw it, nor is the way of it known ; it passeth the skill of man, to find out from whence it cometh, and whither it goeth, John iii 8.

II. The Wind blows at God's command ; he is said to hold the Wind in his fist.

III. The Wind has a purging quality in it ; it cleanseth and purifieth the air, which otherwise would be hurtful and prejudicial to man ; it drives away those ill vapours and stinks that arise from the earth.

PARALLEL.

I. The Holy Spirit is invisible, and works invisibly ; none of the ways and operations thereof can be perceived or seen by mortal eyes : “ Neither doth the natural man understand the things of the Spirit, nor can he,” 1 Cor. ii. 14. The workings and operations thereof are of a hidden and mysterious nature, hardly to be found out by the godly themselves.

II. The operations of the Spirit are from God ; it is he that causes or commands the spiritual winds to blow upon the souls of men and women.

III. The Holy Spirit cleanseth the soul of a sinner, purging out all those hurtful fumes, that arise from the inward corruption of the heart ; it expels and works out deadness and indisposedness to good, and removes those things that cause a man to be unsavoury in his place and generation, and which indeed make him not to savour of the things of God.

METAPHOR.

IV. The Wind hath a cooling property; how much do people in hot countries desire to have the Wind blow, to lay the extremity of heat.

upon the soul. The desire after evil is

V. The Wind hath a clearing quality, dispersing clouds, and causing serenity, expelling all mists and fogs, which darken the air.

VI. The south Wind, as naturalists observe, is of a thawing quality, which experience oft-times shows to be true.

VII. The Wind is of a searching quality; it finds out the most hidden places, it passes through the most private corners, and undiscernible crannies.

VIII. The Wind, naturalists observe,* has also a drying and ripening property; it dries up filthy and unclean places, that are not passable, and helps to ripen things for harvest.

IX. The motions of the Wind are various; sometimes it blows one way, and sometimes another; when it blows on high in one part of the kingdom, it is low, or hardly blows at all in another part: its several motions also have various effects and properties.

the weeds and worms of our corruptions. blows, which is warm, comfortable, and the Spirit, are signified thereby, as the learned observe.†

X. The Wind blows freely where it lists; we cannot command the Wind to blow when and how we would.

XI. The Wind blows and worketh sometimes powerfully, strongly, and irresistibly; it hath a mighty force in it, bearing down all that stands in its way; it turns up the cedars of Lebanon, rends the mountains, and breaks rocks in pieces.

PARALLEL.

IV. The Spirit also is of a cooling nature, which abates the burning lust of concupiscence, and the scorching of Satan's fiery darts and temptations, Eph. vi. 16, (as is further opened in the metaphor of Water). How comfortable is it in time of temptation, to have the Wind of the Spirit blow presently allayed thereby.

V. The Holy Spirit disperseth the clouds of ignorance and darkness in the understanding, and drives away those mists of temptation, which cause men to lose their way, and by its powerful influence makes fair weather in the soul, Eph. i. 18.

VI. The Holy Spirit melts or thaws the cold and frozen heart of a sinner. The hearts of men are naturally congealed, like ice, hard and obdurate; but no sooner doth the Spirit come to blow upon it, but this hardness thaws and dissolves into a flood of tears, Acts ii. 36, 37.

VII. The Holy Spirit tries the heart and reins, and finds out the very thoughts of men; it is said, "To search all things, yea, the deep things of God," 1 Cor. ii. 10. "It pierceth even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, joints and marrow, and is a discernor of the thoughts and intents of the heart," Heb. iv. 12.

VIII. The Spirit dries up the filthy issue of our sinful humours, which make our way to heaven very hard and difficult; and also ripens us, like wheat, for the Lord's harvest. It is by the influence of the Spirit, that we are "made meet for the inheritance of the saints in light," Col. i. 12.

IX. The Spirit moves and operates variously; sometimes it blows upon one people, and sometimes upon another; sometimes upon one church it blows powerfully, when upon another at that time its operations are hardly discernable. Again, sometimes the north Wind of the Spirit blows, which is sharp, cold, and nipping, (rebukes and reproofs of the Spirit, and afflictions, are like the blowing of the north Wind) which tends to kill

And then again, at another time the south Wind refreshing; peace, inward joy, and consolation of

X. The Spirit of God is a free Agent; it moves, blows, and operates as it pleaseth; it is not at our command. "But all these things worketh the one and the same Spirit, dividing to every one severally as he will," 1 Cor. xii. 11.

XI. The Holy Spirit is powerful in its operations, there is no standing before it. It brings down and levels all high, mighty, lofty, and towering thoughts of men; when in good earnest it begins to work upon the heart, no opposition that is made against it is able to stand. Though Satan and evil relations, may endeavour to obstruct its workings, and hinder the soul in its purposes and resolutions heaven-wards; yet nothing is effectual to impede the powerful influences of the Spirit and grace of God; mountains of sin and opposition are broken in pieces by it. When it once blows briskly upon the soul, it presently cries out, "Lord, what wouldst thou have me to do?" Immediately, saith Saul, "I conferred not with flesh and blood," Gal. i. 16.

* See Plin. lib. ii. cap. 19.

† See Gardener.

METAPHOR.

XII. The Winds many times by their blowing cause rain, by dissolving the clouds.

XIII. Men observe or take good notice of the blowing of the wind, and by certain signs, viz., by beholding the clouds, vanes, &c., they know which way it blows.

Spirit blows. 1. If the desires of the soul be after God and holiness, it is one sign the wind is in a right point. 2. If the understanding be enlightened, and clouds of ignorance scattered, the affections changed, so that heavenly objects are principally delighted in; if the will be brought to yield, and readily to submit to the will of God, the Spirit blows the right way. 3. If a man leave his old and evil courses and company; if that which was once pleasant to him, be now become grievous to him: if his discourse be savoury, and his life holy, you may know which way the Wind blows: "They that are after the Spirit, do mind the things of the Spirit," Rom. viii. 5. 4. If there be new habits wrought in the soul, so that although a man may sometimes be obstructed in his way, and hindered in his course heaven-ward, yet immediately, as it were by a natural or divine instinct, he falls into his former way and course of grace and holiness again; it is a sign which way the wind blows. You know the Wind is sometimes obstructed or stopped in its usual course, by houses or trees, &c., so that you can hardly discern by vanes or smoke, &c., which way it is; so it may be with a Christian. Besides, sometimes you can scarcely perceive any wind to blow at all, no more can you the operations of the Spirit.

XIV. The Wind, naturalists observe, causes some flowers to wither, and hang down their heads.

flesh is grass, and the goodliness thereof is as the flower of the field: the grass withereth, the flower fadeth, because the Spirit of the Lord bloweth upon it," Isa. xl. 6, 7.

XV. The Wind, though it be invisible, and cannot be seen, yet it may be heard, and its effects are seen, and its influences evidently felt and experienced by all.

the workings of the Spirit formed into another likeness, and become pious, and truly religious; that tongue that was wont to blaspheme God, they now hear to praise and admire him, &c. And believers themselves clearly feel and experience the blessed effects and operations thereof in their own souls.

XVI. The Wind cherishes and causes plants and grass to grow and thrive; as it is observed by some, that nothing will grow and thrive without it. It is thought, that the roots of things being moved by the wind, it causes them to root the more, making the ground to give way unto them, by which means they take the faster root.

PARALLEL.

XII. The Spirit dissolving the clouds of iniquity, waters the heart with tears of repentance and godly sorrow.

XIII. The blowings or operations of the Holy Spirit ought carefully to be observed, with the access and recess thereof; for a Christian can make no earnest of the duties of religion, unless these winds blow. Moreover, there are certain signs, whereby a man may know which way the

XIV. The Spirit of God blowing upon the soul of a sinner, causes his pride and external glory to fade away, which is compared to the flower of the field, "The rod hath blossomed, pride hath budded," Ezek. vii. 10. "All

XV. The Holy Spirit, though it be invisible, and its operations mysterious, and not to be discerned by many men, yet they may see and hear the effects of it, they may perceive what alteration and changes it makes in this and that man: such as were very vicious and ungodly, are by the Spirit: "God is a Spirit, and they in truth," John iv. 24.

XVI. The Spirit of God causes the saints to grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. The Spirit moves upon the affections, and every other faculty of the heart, and by that means causes the seed of grace to take the deeper root. The ground or spirit of a Christian must be broken, and loosened from the world, and from the love of sensual things more and more, by the wind of the Spirit, or he will not be fruitful in grace and good works.

METAPHOR.

XVII. The Wind is useful for navigation, to carry a ship from one port unto another; for if the Wind do not blow, they are becalmed; nor can they sail at all without it.

XVIII. The Wind is very profitable to fan or winnow wheat, to sever the chaff or light seed from the good corn or grain.

his people, but by his word and Spirit? It is that which cleanses and makes them pure from the dross and pollutions of sin and wickedness, as the apostle observes, 1 Cor. vi. 11.

XIX. The Wind rises high, and blows powerfully; sometimes it riseth on a sudden, and at other times gradually.

XX. Naturalists tells us,* that an earthquake is occasioned by the Wind; certain exhalations, or wind, being got into the earth, shade it.

tion thereby. A man never trembles as he should, till the Spirit enter into him. Saul was taken with such a trembling, when the Spirit entered into him, and began to work, that he could not stand upon his feet.

METAPHOR.

I. Some Winds are sent in judgment, to destroy and overthrow; which many times blow down houses and trees, and make great desolation: witness that prodigious Wind in the year 1661.

II. Some Winds are of a blasting nature, and cause the fruit to fall before it be ripe.

III. There hath been a Wind, in which the Lord hath not appeared, 1 Kings xix. 11.

name, there am I," saith Christ, Matt. xviii. 20.

IV. Some Winds are compared to words, and speeches of one that is desperate.

PARALLEL.

XVII. Unless the Spirit blow upon the Soul, or upon the Church, they lie becalmed, and cannot sail towards the haven of eternal happiness; no duty or service, performed in public or private, can avail any thing; we get not a bit of ground, nor any real advantage by them, unless they are performed by the help and influence of that worship him must worship him in Spirit and XVIII. The Holy Spirit winnows and fans God's people, who are compared to wheat and good grain. It is said of Christ, "His fan is in his hand, and he will thoroughly purge his floor," Matt. iii. 12. How doth Christ fan and purge It is that which cleanses and makes them pure from the dross and wickedness, as the apostle observes, 1 Cor.

XIX. The Spirit of God sometimes comes on a sudden upon a soul, and by its powerful operation, in a short space makes a great and wonderful change; as appears in the case of Saul; but at other times it raiseth and worketh upon some men's hearts gradually.

XX. The Holy Spirit, when it gets into the heart of a man, by its powerful operation it makes him tremble, and shakes him to pieces, as it were, causing strange, though glorious workings in the inward man. This he doth by setting the evil of sin before his eyes, and his woeful condition he should, till the Spirit enter into him. Saul was taken with such a trembling, when the Spirit entered into him, and began to work, that he could not stand upon his feet.

DISPARITY.

I. But the Spirit being the great promise of the Father, and the fruit and effect of Christ's ascension, is sent in mercy to strengthen and establish, and is so far from destroying or overthrowing, as that it causeth the Church in general, or a Christian in particular, to take the more firm root, and stand the faster, Eph. iii. 17, Col. ii. 7.

II. But the Spirit, as compared to the north and south Winds, ripeneth a Christian in grace, and causeth the spices thereof to flow forth, Cant. iv. 16. Grace ripeneth and fitteth for glory. Psal. lxxxiv. 11.

III. But there is no greater demonstration of the Lord's presence with his people, or with a soul, than by the indwelling of his Spirit, John xiv. 17. "Where two or three are gathered together in my

IV. "But no man speaking by the Spirit, calleth Jesus accursed," 1 Cor. xii. 3. Men are by the Spirit brought into their right minds: witness the Prodigal, Luke xv.

* See Pliny; also Speculum Mundi, p. 173.

METAPHOR.

V. Sometimes Wind is made use of to set forth that which is vain and empty, Prov. xi. 29.

VI. Some Winds are without rain. "Whoso boasteth himself of a false gift, is like clouds and Wind without water," Prov. xxv. 14.

VII. If some Winds be observed, men must not plough nor sow their seed: "He that observeth the Wind, shall not sow, and he that regardeth the clouds, shall not reap," Eccles. xi. 4.

VIII. Man's iniquity is compared unto the Wind.

tifying of all sin and iniquity whatsoever.

DISPARITY.

V. But wherever the holy scriptures make mention of the Holy Spirit, it is to set forth persons and things, as they are, substantial; neither is there any thing that is more opposite to lightness or vanity, than the work of grace wrought by the Spirit in the hearts of believers, Gal. v. 22.

VII. But the Wind of the Spirit is always attended with sweet dews and showers of rain, being frequently thereunto compared in scripture.

VI. But whosoever plougheth or soweth, in expectation of a blessed crop, must observe the Wind of the Spirit, without which his ploughing and sowing will be altogether unprofitable, if not sin.

VIII. But contrary-wise, there is no work of the Spirit in the hearts of men, but what is directly contrary thereunto, and tends to the mor-

INFERENCES.

I. We may infer from hence, how hard a thing it is for us to know the nature of the work of the Spirit in regeneration upon another man's heart, some of its operations being so secret and invisible.

II. Let it teach us to pray to God, that he would be pleased to raise this Wind, and cause it to blow briskly upon our souls and churches. And let us be contented with that Wind of the Spirit which God sends to blow upon us, whether it be the north Wind of affliction, adversity, and rebuke, or the south wind of peace, joy, and prosperity, both being absolutely necessary; as we would have the one, so we cannot be without the other.

III. Bless God when you find the influences of the spiritual Wind upon your own souls, or upon the souls of others.

IV. Let it be also a warning to all true believers, as they would be preserved in their Christian course, and be kept from being tossed to and fro, and so from the danger of rocks and sands, to take heed in steering their course, by what wind they sail, because there are some Winds of doctrine, that arise from "The sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive," Eph. iv. 14; called also, "Divers and strange doctrines," Heb. xiii. 9.

THE HOLY SPIRIT COMPARED TO FIRE.

"Quench not the Spirit," 1 Thess. v. 19.

In this place the Spirit of God, in his gifts and operations, is compared to Fire, which is largely opened under the head of metaphors that respect the Word, to which we refer you.

THE HOLY SPIRIT COMPARED TO THE OIL OF GLADNESS.

"Therefore God, thy God hath anointed thee with the Oil of Gladness above thy fellows," Psal. xlv. 7.

"But ye have an unction from the Holy One, and ye know all things. But the Anointing, which ye have received from him, abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you; but, as the same Anointing teacheth you all things," &c., 1 John ii. 20, 27.

By a metaphor called an anthropopathy, Oil or anointing is attributed to God, Psal. xlv. 7, Heb. i. 9, Cant. i. 3, where the Holy Spirit with his gifts are understood. Which appears by comparing this place with Isa. lxi. 1, Acts x. 38, John iii. 34, where the unction of Christ as King and Priest, is treated of. Hence comes the derivation of the name of our Saviour, who is called Χριστός Xristos, Uctus, Anointed, John i. 25, and iv. 25, τελειοχρῆν, by way of eminency. Believers, in a measure, are made partakers of this unction, who by true faith adhere to Christ the chief Head.

METAPHOR.

I. Oil is of a softening and mollifying nature, a sovereign good for all hard tumours in the body.* The prophet complains, that the sores of Judah were not mollified with ointment, Isa. i. 6.

II. Oil is of a healing nature, the Samaritan poured Oil and wine into the man's wounds who fell among thieves, Luke x. 34. Oil searcheth into the bottom of wounds.

III. Oil, Pliny saith, is contrary to scorpions, and in a wonderful manner expels dangerous venom and poison, that may accidentally be taken into the body; it secures the vitals from the penetrating insinuations thereof, which else would seize upon and destroy them.

ye shall all likewise perish," Luke xiii. 3. "For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh, and these are

IV. Oil will hardly, if at all, mingle or incorporate with other liquid things: it is observed, put it into what you please, it will not be kept under, but will get uppermost.†

V. Oil warmeth, comforteth, and refresheth the body, it being anointed and bathed therewith.‡

warm the inward man: hence it is compared to fire, and called the Spirit of life, and blessed Comforter, Acts ii. 3, 1 Thess. v. 19, Rev. xi. 11, John xiv. 16.

VI. Oil cannot be dried up by the heat of summer, as water and other liquid things will; it will keep and maintain its being against the scorching heat of the sun.

Comforter, that shall abide with you for

VII. Oil, according to Pliny, cleareth the eye-sight mightily, and disperseth mists and clouds that cause dimness in the same.

wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of him, that the eyes of their understanding being en-

PARALLEL.

I. The Spirit softens a hard heart, assaureth and brings down those obdurate and hard swellings of pride and vain glory, which naturally are in the souls of men and women, making them willing and pliable to the will of God.

II. The Spirit opens the heart, and searcheth into every corner thereof, it is said to search all things: there is no sin nor secret corruption, but it will find it out; and when it hath softened and mollified the heart and conscience, it doth in a gracious manner heal it.

III. The Spirit is contrary to Satan that old serpent, and all the cursed and killing venom and poison of sin, and doth wonderfully expel and purge it out of the soul, when God is pleased to give a suitable measure thereof; it secureth from the insinuations of sin, and it will cause a man to vomit it up by unfeigned repentance, by which means, the life of the soul is preserved: for if by the operation of the Spirit, sin is not vomited up, death will certainly follow. "Except ye repent,

3. "For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh, and these are contrary the one to the other," Gal. v. 17.

IV. The Spirit of God will never mingle, nor become one with the flesh; the Spirit is from above, and ever endeavours to be uppermost, in what heart soever it is, it will not be under the command of sin nor Satan. "Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfil the lusts of the flesh."

V. The Spirit wonderfully revives, comforteth, and infuseth spiritual warmth and heat into the soul of a believer, when he is anointed with it; and indeed nothing else will refresh, enliven and warm the inward man: hence it is compared to fire, and called the Spirit of life, and blessed Comforter, Acts ii. 3, 1 Thess. v. 19, Rev. xi. 11, John xiv. 16.

VI. The Spirit cannot be dried up by the heat of persecution, nor the scorching beams of Satan's temptations, that will live and abide the same in the souls of sincere converts, losing none of its gracious influences and operations. "And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter," John xiv. 16. See Comforter.

VII. The Spirit cleareth the eyes of the understanding, it is called eye-salve, and from hence the apostle prayeth for the Ephesians, "That the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, would grant them the Spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of him, that the eyes of their understanding being enlightened, they might know what was the hope of his calling," &c., Eph. i. 17, 18. Clouds and mists of darkness are upon the eyes of all that have not received the Spirit, so that they cannot behold things afar off.

* Plin. lib. xxiii. p. 160.

† Venijn.

‡ Plin. p. 432.

METAPHOR.

VIII. Oil is excellently good to open obstructions, and help them who cannot breathe freely.*

to Almighty God : "Likewise the Spirit helpeth our infirmities : for we know not what we should pray for as we ought, but the Spirit maketh intercession," &c., Rom. viii. 26. "No man can say Jesus is Lord, but by the Holy Ghost," 1 Cor. xii. 3.

IX. Oil is a fat and feeding substance, it is a very nourishing thing, it is thought there is nothing more wholesome to the body of man.

and makes fat the bones of his saints, Isa. xxv. 6, lviii. 11.

X. Oil eaten with some other things that have some hurtful quality, maketh them very good and nourishing, whilst others who eat them without Oil are surfeited thereby become deadly and destructive to wicked men, their table, bed, and all they enjoy are made snares to them. "Take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness, and the cares of this world," &c., Luke xxi. 34.

XI. Oil, naturalists tell us, is good against shaking, tremblings, and convulsions, which many are troubled with, so that on a sudden sometimes they fall down and foam at the mouth.†

spirits ; which have troubled many with strange convulsions, shakings, and tremblings in this nation ; so that, as my author saith, they have even foamed at the mouth, when quakerism first came up amongst us.

XII. Oil was made use of under the law, in cleansing him who had the plague of the leprosy. "The priest was to put oil on the tip of his right ear, and upon the thumb of his right hand ; and the remnant of it upon his head," Lev. xiv. 17, 18.

filthiness." "Now are you clean through the word that I have spoken to you," "The words that I have spoken to you, they are the spirit and the life," Ezek. xxxvi. 25, 26, 27, John xv. 3, and vi. 63.

XIII. Oil is used for lamps, whereby they burn long, and give light to them that are in the house, the use whereof is very well known to all.

PARALLEL.

VIII. The Spirit of God is the only remedy for all obstructions of the inward man, those that scarce breathe or pray at all, by receiving a measure of the Spirit, breathe out freely their desire

IX. The Spirit feeds the soul, yea, it makes it fat and well-liking ; nothing nourishes comparable to the Spirit ; the word and ordinances of God, are but dry bread to it : this is the chief of those fat things full of marrow, by which God feasts,

X. The Spirit of God being received and lived upon, the abundance of the things of this world, that have in them by means of sin, some hurtful and surfeiting quality, are made hereby very good and profitable to believers ; but for want of the Spirit's seasoning and sanctifying, they

XI. The Holy Spirit is of exceeding great use against all tremblings and convulsions of the soul in evil times, it frees the godly from all slavish fears, which shake some men for want of it, out of their faith, honesty, and religion ; and it keeps sincere ones steadfast and immoveable, from being shaken by false doctrine and lying

XII. The Holy Spirit is made use of by the Lord Jesus Christ, our heavenly High-priest, in cleansing the leprosy of sin, he puts it into, or upon, every faculty of the inward man, the will, the affection, the understanding, the conscience, the head, the hand, the heart, the whole soul is anointed therewith, before it be pronounced clean by the Lord. "I will put my Spirit within you, and you shall be clean from all your

XIII. The Spirit of God is that spiritual Oil, that the wise virgins took in their vessels and in their lamps, by which means they were accepted by the bridegroom ; and the foolish for want of it, their lamps of profession went out, and they not suffered to go into the wedding-chamber, Matt. xxv. 8, 10.

* Plin. lib. xxiii. p. 162.

† ibid.

METAPHOR.

XIV. Oil hath a beautifying virtue; the virgins that were prepared for the Persian king, used ointments to make them fair, for six months space they used sweet odours, and six months Oil of myrrh. This Oil, naturalists say, hath a beautifying quality, and fetcheth wrinkles out of the skin. David speaks of Oil, saying, it makes the face to shine.

through my comeliness, which I had put upon thee," &c., xvi. 14. How glorious and beautiful to be hereby? "And all that sat in the council, looking steadfastly on Stephen, saw his face appear as if it had been the face of an angel," Acts vi. 15.

XV. There are some men that cannot endure Oil, they love it not, will not be persuaded to put a little into their mouths, they are naturally averse to it.

of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned," 1 Cor. ii. 14.

XVI. The joints and limbs being anointed with some sort of Oil, it will very much strengthen them, and make a man more agile, nimble and fit for motion.

XVII. The priests, kings and prophets under the law, were anointed with Oil.

METAPHOR.

I. Other Oil is of an earthly extract, and several sorts of it are prepared and made fit for use by the art and wisdom of man, being extracted from earthly things.

II. There is not one sort of Oil, that hath all kind of excellent qualities in it; that which may be good to beautify and of a sweet scent, may not be medicinal.

III. Oil will not last long, its virtue is soon gone, it quickly decays and becomes unsavoury.

PARALLEL.

XIV. The Holy Spirit hath an excellent beautifying quality, there is no scar, spot nor deformity in the soul, but the Spirit can purge and cleanse it, they that are anointed with this Oil, shine in the eyes of God and good men; it will make a Blackmoor white and beautiful, fetches out those wrinkles and foul stains and spots, that naturally are in the souls of men and women; it takes of Christ's beauty, and puts it upon the soul, and so places a shining lustre upon the inward man. "Thy beauty, for it was perfect

XV. There are some, nay many men in the world, that love not, like not the Spirit, they are naturally so averse to it, that they will not be persuaded to make trial of it; they cannot believe there is any sweetness, benefit, or savour in it. "The natural man receiveth not the things

XVI. The Spirit is good to strengthen the weak and decayed hands and knees of a poor saint; and thereby makes the soul more fit for motion Godwards, lively, quick, agile, and fit for heavenly service.

XVII. "The Lord Jesus was anointed with the Spirit, that Oil of gladness above his fellows," Heb. i. 9. Moreover every minister of the Gospel must be anointed therewith, or he is not accepted of God.

DISPARITY.

I. The Spirit is from above, and without beginning, "Flowing from the throne of God and the Lamb," Rev. xxii. 1. But the Comforter, even the Spirit of Truth which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me," John xv. 26.

II. The Spirit hath all excellent qualities in it; it will not only beautify and perfume, but it is also a sovereign good for healing all distempers of the soul: what rare property is there in any sort of Oil, but the Spirit in an heavenly manner far excels it.

III. The Spirit abides the same, never corrupts, nor loseth its virtue, it lasteth from everlasting to everlasting.

INFERENCES.

I. From hence we may see the excellent nature, properties, and usefulness of the Spirit.

II. It may move and stir us up to pray to the Father for fresh anointings.

III. Let us ascribe all tenderness and brokenness of heart, to the mollifying virtue of this precious Oil.

IV. When ye see choice and excellent Oil, think seriously on the Holy Spirit.

V. Labour to get much of it in your vessels, lest your lamps go out, and you go to buy when too late.

THE HOLY SPIRIT THE EARNEST OF THE SAINTS INHERITANCE.

"After ye believed, ye were sealed with the Spirit of Promise; which is the Earnest of our Inheritance," &c., Eph. i. 13, 14.

METAPHOR.

I. An Earnest is usually part of the best things which are in common use and estimation among men; as gold, silver, &c.

II. An Earnest imports some thing bought or sold, as also an agreement, or consent between two parties, for the confirming of some contract or promise, which before was not settled.

say, the bargain punctually observed, hath given us an Earnest, to wit, his Spirit, and we receiving of it, show our assent and consent to the contract, to serve the Lord and become his for ever, Rom. xii. 2, 1 Cor. vi. 19, 20.

III. An Earnest is given as a pledge of some future good thing, purchased or promised to a person.

grace is promised to them. "Who hath also sealed us, and given us the Earnest of the Spirit in our hearts," 2 Cor. i. 22.

IV. An Earnest oftentimes of a great bargain or purchase is a considerable sum, twenty or thirty pounds, sometimes more hath been given in Earnest of an inheritance; an Earnest is commonly proportioned according to the worth or value of the purchase.

"Love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, faith, meekness, temperance," &c., Gal. v. 22, 23. One particular fruit of the Spirit, viz., peace, is such an inestimable jewel, that the apostle saith, "It passeth all understanding," Phil. iv. 7.

V. An Earnest is that which confirms or makes sure a bargain or contract between two parties, by the means of which each claims his own interest and property.

dwelt in him, and he in us, because he

VI. An Earnest puts a bar to any who would unjustly stop, disannul, or make void the covenant agreed upon.

mine own, I have agreed, covenanted, and sold myself to him. "Depart from me, ye evil-doers; for I will keep the commandments of my God," Psal. cxix. 115. "The Lord rebuke thee, Satan," &c., Zech. iii. 2. And hereby God looks upon himself concerned to secure and make sure of the soul to preserve his right and interest he hath in his people against all enemies, that he may not lose his bargain.

VII. An Earnest confirms a bargain, so that it gives assurance to

PARALLEL.

I. The Holy Spirit, viz., the gifts, graces, and operations thereof, is part of the best things which the great God, in this world, gives unto his dear children.

II. The Earnest of the Spirit doth also denote, as is observed by some, that spiritual bargain which is made between God and a believer. The Lord in a solemn contract, requires of us our whole soul, life, strength, the best we are, and are capable to perform for the glory of his holy name; and to the end he might have, as I may

III. The Spirit is given by the Father to believers as a pledge or Earnest of the blessed inheritance, which Christ purchased by his blood for them, and upon the account of his own free

IV. The Spirit which God giveth to believers, as the earnest of eternal life, is a great sum, or that which is of considerable value; the purchase being infinite or invaluable, it is meet the Earnest should bear some proportion to it; who is able to account or reckon up the worth of the Spirit of God, which is the Earnest of the saints inheritance? We may judge of the value and excellency of it by the fruits thereof, which are

V. The Earnest of the Spirit which God hath given to his people, confirms that mutual contract and agreement which is between him and them: God hereby claims a new covenant-right to believers, and believers claim interest and property in God. "Hereby we know that we hath given us of his Spirit," 1 John iv. 13.

VI. The Earnest of the Spirit prevents Satan from stepping in to break and make void the spiritual bargain, or contract between the soul and the Lord Jesus Christ. A saint can by this means say, I have received Earnest of God, I am not

VII. The Spirit confirms the covenant of grace so to believers, that it gives them an ashim that receives it, of the inheritance or purchase of whatsoever it is in Earnest.

METAPHOR.

VIII. An Earnest, though it may be in itself, something of considerable value; yet it is always far short in worth to that which it is the Earnest of.

IX. An Earnest, as it is something given of a valuable consideration, to confirm a bargain; so the person that receives it, immediately enjoys it, he hath it in hand for his present profit and advantage; and many times a man hath nothing else to live upon till he receive the whole sum, but the Earnest-money.

X. There is always some distance of time between the laying down of the Earnest of an inheritance, and full enjoyment of it, or entering into the possession thereof.

die, and not the full fruition or perfect enjoyment of it till the resurrection: "Henceforth is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which God, the righteous Judge, will give me at that day," &c., 2 Tim. iv. 8.

METAPHOR.

I. An Earnest among men is usually a certain sum, either more or less, of gold or silver, which are but corruptible and earthly things.

II. The best and greatest purchase an Earnest among men is given for, consists of temporal things, that pass away and perish, as all sublunary things do.

III. Sometimes among men, a person who has given Earnest, for such or such a commodity, does afterwards recant his bargain.

Christ. And believers have no cause up to God, both body and soul, all they are, and are capable to do, for the glory of free-grace; for their gain will be unspeakable thereby: "Godliness is profitable to all things, having the promise of the life that now is, and that which is to come;" it is great gain, 1 Tim. iv. 8.

IV. Sometimes the purchaser loses his Earnest, by flying from the bargain, and so never has the inheritance.

V. Amongst men, the Earnest of an inheritance is given by the purchaser to the seller, and he expects surance of eternal life and glory to come; hence it is called, "The Earnest of the saints inheritance, until the redemption of the purchased possession," Eph. i. 14.

PARALLEL.

VIII. The gifts, influences, and graces of the Holy Spirit, though they are in themselves of great worth and value, and accordingly greatly prized by the godly; yet not to be compared to the full fruition of God and the glorious inheritance which the Spirit is given as the Earnest of.

IX. The Spirit which is the Earnest of glory, is given to believers for their present profit; God's infinite favour bestows grace, peace, joy, and the like, whilst saints are in this world: and indeed it is upon this Earnest-money they live, and it is so much as is sufficient to bear all their charges, and defray all their expenses till they receive the everlasting kingdom, 1 Cor. xii. 7, Gal. v. 22, 25.

X. There is also a distance of time between the saints receiving the Spirit, which is the Earnest of that glorious inheritance, and the full possession of it. They receive the Spirit as the Earnest when, or soon after they believe, the time when they receive the inheritance is not till they

DISPARITY.

I. The Earnest of the saints' inheritance is of an inestimable value, being of an heavenly and sublime nature, the holy, blessed, and eternal Spirit of God, in the operation, gifts, and graces thereof.

II. The Holy Spirit is the earnest of "An inheritance, incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for us," 1 Pet. i. 4. "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life," Rev. ii. 10.

III. There never will be any recanting about giving or receiving this spiritual Earnest; God will never repent that he gave his Spirit to his faithful children, it being bestowed upon them as the result of his eternal purpose in Jesus to recant their bargain, in yielding themselves up to God, both body and soul, all they are, and are capable to do, for the glory of free-grace; for their gain will be unspeakable thereby: "Godliness is profitable to all things, having the promise of the life that now is, and that which is to come;" it is great gain, 1 Tim. iv. 8.

IV. God will never, can never lose those souls for whom he gave his Son, as the price of their redemption, and his Spirit as an Earnest to make sure of them: "My Father which gave them me is greater than all, and none is able to pluck them out of my Father's hands," John x. 29.

V. The spiritual Earnest is given by the Father, upon the account of Christ's purchase, unto believers. The Lord Jesus bought the inhesomething of equal worth for that he parts withal for it.

VI. An Earnest among men is given by the purchaser, with an intent or design to advantage himself thereby ; it is chiefly his own interest and profit which he aims at in this action.

ritance, and received the Earnest of it for us, as Mediator, who freely gives it to us ; out of his own good will he bestows it upon us, as an assurance of the full possession of eternal life.

VI. The Lord giving his Spirit as the Earnest of future blessings, designs (it is acknowledged) his own glory thereby ; but chiefly the profit will be ours : it was our good, our advantage Christ designed and aimed at, in dying for us, in giving his Spirit to us.

INFERENCES.

I. What admirable grace and favour is here ! Did God give Christ to die for us, to redeem us from sin and wrath to come ? and did he receive the Holy Spirit as Mediator, to give it unto us, the Earnest of that purchased possession ? Let this be to the praise of his glory. Christ purchases that we might possess. Others purchase that they may inherit themselves, and give Earnest to make sure of the estate to themselves ; but the Lord Jesus needed not to do so, he was Heir from everlasting, and all that he did as a Mediator was for us, to enrich and make us happy and blessed for ever.

II. If God hath given to believers the Holy Spirit, as the Earnest of their inheritance, let them take heed they do not go about to defraud him of his bargain : they are not their own, they are "Bought with a price," 1 Cor. vi. 19, 20 ; and they have consented to this holy contract, by taking an Earnest from his hand. It is great injustice to deprive or keep back any part of a lawful bargain from the buyer, especially when he hath given Earnest for it.

III. This shows what certain hopes and good assurance a godly man hath of eternal life : it is bought or purchased for him, it was given by promise to him, the promise is sealed ; nay, more than this, he hath received a pledge or Earnest of it. What little ground is there then for any soul to despond, or doubt of the eternal inheritance ? The holy God deals with us after the manner of men, about the great concerns of another world ; the bare promise of God would be security enough, we need not require a seal of an Earnest of him. O how doth divine goodness condescend to poor creatures, that the Heirs of promise might have strong consolation ? Heb. vi. 18.

IV. From hence believers may learn to repel and withstand the temptations of Satan. "Simon," saith our Saviour, "Satan hath desired to have you," &c., Luke xxii. 31 ; but might not Simon (and so consequently every true Christian) say, I am not mine own, thou comest too late, Satan, I have received Earnest of a better estate, of a better kingdom than thou hast ; I have given up myself to Jesus Christ, and he hath taken possession of me by his Spirit, that I might possess and enjoy him to eternity.

V. And let sinners, who would have an interest in God, and enjoy this eternal inheritance, learn from hence the ready way to come to it.

First, they must believe : the saints that are sealed with the Spirit, which is the Earnest of the purchased inheritance, are said to trust in God, after they heard the word of truth, the Gospel of their salvation : "In whom (saith the apostle) after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise : which is the Earnest of our inheritance, until the redemption of the purchased possession, to the praise of his glory," Eph. i. 13, 14.

Secondly, as they must hear, attend upon the word, go out of themselves to Christ, rely upon him, and trust in him, believe and receive the record God hath given of his Son ; so they must submit to his ordinances. The Spirit is promised to those that keep his commandments, John xvi. 15, 16. If this be done in truth and sincerity, you shall certainly receive the earnest of future happiness, as well as others.

VI. Those that would have a trial of their estates and conditions, who desire to know whether they have received the Spirit of God or not, may read the metaphor where the Holy Spirit is compared to a Seal. Nothing is more needful ; all may see from hence to make sure of the Spirit : take heed you be not mistaken about it, &c.

And let them that have received it, live upon it. Such need not fear wanting any good thing ; this Earnest-penny will, as hath been shown already, defray all their charge whilst they are in this world. It is a great sum ; God gives like himself, and answerable to that inheritance prepared and purchased for believers.

VII. What fools are they that slight and despise this Earnest? God offers men in the Gospel everlasting life, and to assure them of it, promises them, if they will come to his terms, to give them his Spirit as the Earnest thereof; "Turn you at my reproof; behold, I will pour out my Spirit upon you, ^{and} I will make known my words unto you," Prov. i. 23.

THE HOLY SPIRIT COMPARED TO A SEAL.

"In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the Word of Truth, the Gospel of your Salvation; in whom also after that ye believed, ye were Sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise," Eph. i. 13.

"And grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are Sealed unto the day of Redemption," Eph. iv. 30.

A Seal is an instrument fitted to make an impression or mark, by which a man knows the thing done, whatsoever it be, to be his own and not another's act; as also to ratify and make authentic bonds, covenants, &c. And to open this metaphor of believers being sealed by the Holy Spirit, these things are meet to be noted.

1. The letter written, or the vessel filled with treasure, every true Christian.
2. The wax appointed to the Seal, and that is the heart, the relenting and pliable heart of a sinner, Heb. x. 16.
3. The Sealer, that is, as some conceive, the Father, or the Lord Jesus Christ; others more immediately the Holy Spirit, or third Person of the Trinity.
4. The Seal, as some understand, is the Word of God, others the Spirit; we include both jointly considered.
5. The Sealing or active impression, is the act of applying the Word in the ministry of the Gospel, by the help of the Spirit, to the soul.
6. The print or passive impression, or image of the Seal left in wax, is called the image of God, or knowledge, faith, love, truth, holiness, &c., which are originally in God, and communicated to us by the Word and Spirit from him.*
7. The end of Sealing, which is secrecy, property, and security, which things will appear more fully in opening the Metaphor.

METAPHOR.

I. A Seal (especially if it be the king's Seal,) is highly prized, and very carefully kept.

II. A Seal makes an impression in the wax like itself, or leaves a resemblance of it.

III. Before the Seal can make an impression, the wax must be melted, or made pliable, soft, and fit to take it.

David speaking, "I am poured out like water, and all my bones are out of joint: my heart is like wax, it is melted in the midst of my bowels."

IV. The Seal alters the form of the clay it is set or stamped upon. A piece of clay is a rude lump, without form or figure, saith Mr. Caryl; but if you take a Seal and stamp upon it, that clay receives any figure, or coat of arms, that is engraven upon it, Job xxxviii. 14.

PARALLEL.

I The Holy Spirit is the King's Seal, the glorious King of heaven and earth, and therefore is highly valued and prized by every true Christian.

II. The Holy Spirit makes an impression on the heart, there is in a believer a similitude, a likeness or resemblance of God; every saint hath the image of the Spirit upon him, he is holy, harmless, heavenly, &c.

III. Before the Holy Spirit Seals any person to the day of redemption, the heart is broken, softened, and made pliable by the word, and powerful operations of grace, and so made fit to take that heavenly impression. And thus you have water, and all my bones are out of joint: my heart

IV. The Spirit makes a change upon the soul of a man or woman that receives the impression of it, it alters every faculty, and puts a new form or figure, as it were, upon it. Man naturally is a rude lump, a gross and confused piece, by reason of sin, till the Spirit stamp upon him, or infuse into him new habits.

METAPHOR.

V. A Seal is to confirm and make sure bonds, contracts, or covenants that are made between man and man. If an honest man make a promise of such and such things to his friend, he thinks he hath ground to hope those good things, so promised him, are his own, but if he give it under his hand-writing, he concludes he is more sure; but if the writing, covenant, or promise be sealed, it is as firm and as sure as he can desire to have it.

VI. A Seal is used to distinguish or differ things one from another, whereby property is known and secured; a merchant knows his goods from other men's by the Seal or mark he sets upon them.

VII. A Seal is used to confirm and make laws authentic; till they have the king's Seal stamped upon them, they oblige not the subject to obedience.

of spiritual worship, traditions, and institutions, enjoyed by any potentate, assembly, or council whatsoever, that were not thus Sealed or witnessed to, are utterly to be rejected, Mark xvi. 20, Heb. ii. 3, 4.

VIII. A Seal is used to secure, preserve or keep safe several things, which otherwise might be spoiled, run out, and become good for nothing. Things that we would not have any to touch, nor meddle with, we set a Seal upon.

God in the forehead," &c. "And it was commanded them, that they should not hurt the grass of the earth, neither any green thing, neither any tree, but only those men, which have not the Seal of God upon their forehead," Ezek. ix. 4, Rev. vii. 3, and ix. 4.

IX. A Seal many times is counterfeited by ill men, they endeavour to imitate it as nigh as they can, to cheat poor ignorant people thereby.

X. A Seal is used to hide or keep back others from the knowledge of things; if a man have any thing to write unto his friend that he would not have others know, he seals up his letter, upon the account of secrecy, though it is likely afterwards, in convenient time, those things so concealed are discovered.

PARALLEL.

V. The Holy Spirit confirms and makes sure covenant and promises of God to believers, Psal. xxii. 24. God hath not only made gracious promises to them, of pardon, peace, and eternal life, &c. But he hath left these promises written in the holy scriptures; and not only so, but such is his great love and kindness to them, he hath given them his Seal, they have his promise, his word, and his Spirit also, that they might not doubt of the truth and stability of his covenant, 2 Cor. i. 22. "We are his witnesses of these things, and so is also the Holy Spirit, whom God hath given to them that obey him, Eph. i. 13, Acts v. 32.

VI. The Holy Spirit distinguishes or differs one man from another; God hath set his Seal or mark upon all his people. "The Foundation of God remaineth sure, having this Seal, The Lord knoweth them that are his," 2 Tim. ii. 19. "If any man hath not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his," Rom. viii. 9.

VII. The Holy Spirit is the broad Seal of heaven, by which all the laws and institutions of the Gospel were ratified and confirmed, with signs and wonders in the primitive times; by which means they come to be authentic, and everlasting laws, obliging all men to obedience; and all laws of institutions, enjoyed by any potentate, assembly, or council whatsoever, that were not thus Sealed or witnessed to, are utterly to be rejected, Mark xvi. 20, Heb. ii. 3, 4.

VIII. The Spirit secures, preserves, and keeps safe all true believers, from the danger they continually are exposed to, from sin, Satan, and the ensnarements and mischiefs of this evil world. Satan, nor wicked men, must not, cannot destroy the servants of God, because of the mark or Seal he hath set upon them. "Set a mark upon the men that mourn," &c. saying, hurt not the earth, &c., till we have sealed the servants of our

IX. The Spirit is oftentimes counterfeited by Satan, who transforms himself into an angel of light, as do his ministers, as if they were the ministers of righteousness; hence they pretend to light, spirit, and holiness, and beguile the ignorant and unwary souls to their eternal ruin.

X. The Holy Spirit hath hid or Sealed up some things from some men; "Bind up my testimony, Seal the law amongst my disciples," Isa. viii. 16. Many things are hid from saints themselves, in dark and mysterious prophecies in the holy scripture. "Seal up those things which the seven thunders uttered," &c. Yet in due time those things shall be revealed, and not only so, but the saints of God themselves, by the Spirit are such a sealed and hidden people, that but a very few can read and understand them, though legible to be read of all the chosen and elect seed, and heirs of promise, and in that great day they shall be known to all the world.

METAPHOR.

I. A SEAL among men, after a bond or covenant is sealed therewith, may be defaced or broken, and thereby the said bond or covenant may lose its virtue, efficacy, and not be deemed good and authentic in law.

II. A Seal among men can make no impression without a hand, or one to seal therewith.

III. A Seal is an instrument made by the hand of some artificer of earthy matter or substance, and makes only a human or external impression.

IV. A Seal may be lost, or grow old and defective, and so make no perfect and clear impression.

DISPARITY.

I. THE Holy Spirit having once made a gracious and glorious impression in the soul of a man, neither devil, nor any other enemy can ever, by all their strength and skill utterly deface, tear or break it, so as to make the covenant of grace to lose its virtue and become of none effect to the soul; hence believers are said, "To be sealed to the day of redemption," Eph. iv. 30.

II. The Spirit is not only the Seal, but the Sealer, he makes the impression, needing no other, and also is the Seal by which the impression is made.

III. The Spirit is an uncreated being, or an immortal substance, and makes a divine and heavenly impression in the mind or soul of a man or a woman, which by the operation of God's grace is made pliable and meet to receive it.

IV. The Spirit can never be lost, grow old, be wore out, or become defective; so that the impression it now makes, is the same in every respect with that it made five thousand years ago.

INFERENCES.

I. FROM hence we may perceive by whom the change and difference is made, which is in any person. Man is born in sin, and rather resembles Satan, and bears his image, than the character and likeness of God, until the Holy Spirit stamp a new and heavenly character upon him, or infuse a spiritual habit into him. "Who makes thee to differ from another, or what hast thou, which thou hast not received?" &c.

II. It may serve to stir every one up, to examine their hearts, whether they have received the impression of this spiritual Seal; as is the Seal, such is the impression it makes, "They that are after the Spirit, mind the things of the Spirit," Rom. viii. 5. But we all with open face, beholding as in a glass, the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image, from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord," 2 Cor. iii. 18.

III. For further trial take these few notes following.

1. Were your hearts ever humbled in the sense of sin, broken in pieces, melted, made soft, and pliable to receive the seal? The heart of man naturally is hard and obdurate, and will not take the spiritual impression.

2. Did the Spirit ever set home, and seal any promise in particular, or promises in general upon your hearts, so that you can say with the prophet David, "Lord remember the word unto thy servant, upon which thou hast caused me to hope?" Psal. cxix. 49. The Ephesians are said "To be sealed with the Spirit of promise," Eph. i. 13.

3. Are you formed into the likeness and image of the Spirit? There is in that soul that is sealed by the Spirit, a certain impression of divine light; former darkness flies away, and the eyes of the understanding are enlightened, the soul sees an excellency in God, and Jesus Christ, a transcendent beauty in divine objects, and values the knowledge of Jesus Christ and him crucified, above all the things in this world. Phil. iii. 9—12.

4. Are you holy, heavenly, spiritual? Are there principles of true piety and godliness wrought in you? Do you love God because he is holy, and love his word because of the purity of it? Do you breathe and pant after a further conformity and likeness to him?

5. Is thy heart washed from its filthiness? If thou art not cleansed from thy former wickedness, and swinish nature, thou mayest assure thyself thou hast not the Spirit of God in thee, thou art far from being sealed therewith. It is by the virtue of those promises that are imprinted upon the soul by the Holy Ghost, that a man comes to "Cleanse himself from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, and to perfect holiness in the fear of God," 2 Cor. vii. 1.

6. Doth not thy heart condemn thee, for allowing thyself in any known sin, or for living in the continual neglect of any one known duty? "The Spirit witnesseth with our spirits, that we are the children of God." Where it is a sealing Spirit, it is a witnessing Spirit. It compares the heart and life of man with the rule of the word: and if the bent and stream of the soul be heaven-ward, and his sincere design is after God, and to live to him in this world, as well as to live with him in the world to come; to be holy here, as well as to be happy hereafter; then the Spirit witnesses for him: but if otherwise, it witnesses against him, and his own spirit condemns him.

IV. Moreover, this may inform sincere Christians to their unspeakable joy, how firm and sure the covenant of grace is to them. "They are sealed with the Holy Spirit unto the day of redemption;" they are marked for heaven, and cannot lose their title to the eternal inheritance, because they cannot lose the Seal of it: as they have received the earnest of it, so they have the witness and seal of it, that it might be every way firm and sure to them.

V. Let all who possess the Gospel, and pretend to the Spirit, strive to get this Seal. It is not enough to read of the covenant of God, and to have some external knowledge of it, and dispute about it: but labour to get it Sealed to you by the Holy Spirit.

VI. If the Spirit be the earnest and Seal of this blessed inheritance, do not grieve it; this is the counsel the apostle gave to the Ephesians. Do not quench the motions of it, nor turn a deaf ear to the tender and gracious reproofs it daily gives you. Do not give way to sin or Satan; neglect not your duties; pray often, and hear the word, and be found in your places where the word and Spirit hath directed you: live in love, and "Let all bitterness, wrath, anger, clamour, and evil-speaking be put away from you, with all malice: and be kind one to another, and tender-hearted, forgiving one another, as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you." And hereby you will not grieve the Holy Spirit, whereby you are Sealed unto the day of redemption.

Lastly, Take heed Satan does not deceive thee with a counterfeit Seal. Many are confident they have the Spirit, light, and power, when it is all mere delusion. The Spirit always leads and directs according to the written word: "He shall bring my word," saith Christ, "to your remembrance." Some men boast of the Spirit, and conclude they have the Spirit, and none but they, and yet at the same time cry down and vilify his blessed ordinances and institutions, which he hath left in his word, carefully to be observed and kept, till he come the second time without sin unto salvation.

THE HOLY SPIRIT COMPARED TO A RIVER.

"There is a River, the streams whereof make glad the city of God," Psal. xli. 4.
 "He that believeth, out of his belly shall flow Rivers of living water," John vii. 38.
 "And he showed me a pure River of water of life, as clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God, and the Lamb."

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

I. Every River hath a proper head or fountain, from whence it doth proceed.

Father, he shall testify of me," John xv. 26. "It proceeds out of the throne of God, and the Lamb," Rev. xxii. 1.

II. A river hath much water in it, a cistern or vessel will contain but small quantities; some Rivers contain abundance, and can never be emptied.

and tens of thousands, have drawn out of it, have been filled with it, have had their measures of it, as God in his wisdom saw good to communicate it to them; yea add, our blessed Saviour received it without measure: and yet the river is as full as ever in itself, where is no emptying of it.

I. The Holy Spirit is said to proceed from the Father: "But when the Comforter is come whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me," John xv. 26. "It proceeds out of the throne of God,

II. The Holy Spirit is called a River, not a cistern, not a vessel, to denote that fulness of the water of life which is in it, the abundance of heavenly blessings that flow from it; all the godly in all ages, from the beginning of the world, have been supplied from this River: thousands,

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

III. A River lieth open and free to all: every man that passeth by makes use of a River, if he need it. Fountains or conduits are many times sealed, or locked up, and it is hard to come at water out of them; but a River doth freely send forth its streams, that run continually, never cease day nor night.

IV. Many Rivers are very deep. Although in some places they may be so shallow, as that a man may wade in them; yet in some other places they are mighty, deep, and dangerous, so that none dare adventure into them: hence marks and bounds are many times set up to give notice.

having set bounds by the word how far that they adventure no further.

V. A River is the proper element of fishes, and many living creatures; they are produced by it, and live in it.

VI. A River is good to wash in, to cleanse, purge, and carry away filth, and noxious pollution.

of you, but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God," 1 Cor. vi. 11.

VII. A River hath its banks to keep it in its proper bounds, and make it run into its own channel, by which means people know whither to go, if they would partake of the benefit of its waters.

River runs: "Where I record my name, I will come unto thee, and will bless thee." Acts ii. 1—5; when the disciples were assembled together, they met with the Spirit, that being their duty, and Christ's institution.

VIII. Some rivers overflow their banks at some certain times, and greatly enrich the soil, and make it fruitful; as particularly, the River Nile in Egypt.

beyond his usual method; being a free agent, may if he please, anticipate his own order. He hath promised to open Rivers in the desert: "And it shall come to pass in that day that the Lord shall bear off from the channel of the River, unto the stream of Egypt," Isa. xxvii. 12. God meets with some, as he met with Paul, who was running from him. The scripture speaks of a time, "When the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth, as the waters cover the sea. In that day this River shall overflow, and cover the whole world. There shall be on every high mountain, and on every high hill, Rivers and streams of water. I will open Rivers upon high places, I will make the wilderness a pool of water, and the dry land springs of water." "Behold, I will do a new thing, now it shall spring forth, shall ye not know it: I will even make a way in the wilderness, and Rivers in the desert: the beasts of the field shall honour me, the III. The Holy Spirit is a River that lieth open to all poor sinners: whoever will, may come to these waters; none are forbidden, no restraint is laid on any soul that desires to have them: "I will give freely to him that is thirsty, even the waters of life," Rev. xxii. 17, "Ho every one that thirsteth, come to the waters, &c., Isa. lv. 1.

IV. This spiritual River is wonderfully deep, there is no searching out the depths thereof. "Who knows the mind of the Spirit, but he that searcheth all things," Rom. viii. 27. The purposes, decrees, and secret ways of the Spirit, are unknown to men in many respects, though some of his ways, influences, and operations are discernable. Believers may adventure a little way, as far as their bounds and limits permit them. We must not pry too curiously into the depths of God, he we should go, and let all take heed on their peril

V. The Holy Spirit is the proper element of all true believers; they are born by the Spirit, live by the Spirit, and walk in the Spirit. Ministers are fishers of men, John iii. 5, Gal. v. 26. See the parable of the Net.

VI. This River is good to wash, purge, and carry away filth, and all abominable pollution of sin, both in souls, churches, and nations, where the water of this River runs: "Such were some

VII. The Spirit hath its proper bounds, and always runs in its spiritual channel, viz., the word and ordinances, God's public and private worship: and thither all must have recourse, that would receive the precious and glorious blessings and benefits thereof; if you would have these sacred waters, you must observe the channel where this

VIII. This spiritual River hath several times overflowed, there being a redundancy of water in it. Great multitudes have been marvellously watered, and made fat and fruitful on a sudden, and shall again when the time is come. God sometimes extends mercies and Gospel blessings dragons, and the owls; because I give waters in the wilderness, and rivers in the desert, to give drink to my people, my chosen," Isa. xxx. 25, and xliii. 19, 20.

IX. A River is profitable for commerce, traffic, and navigation; it is the means of conveyance of the rich commodities of one kingdom to another, and one city to another: by which means, people, cities, and nations are greatly enriched. What a great convenience is the River Thames to the city of London! By this means also one friend can soon go to another, and often hear each from the other.

ous: "There is a River, the streams whereof make glad the city of God, the holy place of the tabernacle of the Most High," Psal. xli. 4. By means of this River we often take a voyage to our Father, and come to Jesus Christ, and daily in the word hear from them: "For through him we both have access by one Spirit to the Father."

X. Some Rivers run very swiftly, bear down all before them, are so impetuous that they cannot be stopped in their course and channel. A swift stream best washes away all filth.

wouldest thou have me to do?" Acts ix. 6. When God causeth its passage to be clear, it bears down all opposition, carries away our slavish fears, our unbelief, our earthly-mindedness, and all consultings with flesh and blood, making thereby our souls very clean, washing us as in a stream which is very powerful, carrying away all our great defilements. It is not in the skill of men or devils to stop this River, even the strong operations of the Spirit, in a person, church, or nation, when God opens the sluices for it.

XI. Some Rivers environ towns, and are instead of other fortifications to them, making them strong, and hard to be taken.

against him," Isa. lix. 19. Those that are environed by the Spirit, need not to fear the stormings of men or devils, even those churches or souls, who enjoy the smooth and sweet streams of this River.

XII. A River causes those trees that are planted by the side of it, to thrive and grow exceedingly. The waters softening the ground, their roots spread forth, they flourish; when those that are planted on heaths, and barren mountains, wither and fade away in a time of drought.

spreadeth forth his root by the River, and shall not know when heat cometh, but her leaf shall be green; and shall not be careful when the year of the drought cometh, neither shall cease from yielding fruit," Jer. xvii. 8.

XIII. A River is very pleasant and delightful, as well as profitable to them that dwell by it; and they can take their walks by the sides thereof.

IX. The Holy Spirit is gloriously advantageous for spiritual commerce and traffic. It is that which, by the use of ordinances, conveys the riches of heaven to dwellers here below: "He shall receive of mine, and show it unto you; he will bring all things to your remembrance." It is the Spirit that stores the city of God with all its divine riches. There is no trading to heaven, but by sailing in this River; faith can do nothing without it. If these waters do not run, our souls can make no good return from the celestial shore. The church, and every family of the godly, would soon be starved, were it not for this heavenly and spiritual River; hence it is said to rejoice the righte-

X. This spiritual River, as it is deep, so it is very swift, though it be not always discerned to be so by us, nor doth the stream indeed seem to us to run always with a like motion. But when God doth, as it were, open the flood-gates, then it runs very swift, and is so impetuous, that it drives all down before it: "Lord, said Saul, what

XI. This River is a believer's strength; "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord," Zech. iv. 6. It is the church's sure fortification: "When the enemy comes in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard

XII. Those churches or souls, who enjoy the blessed streams of this spiritual River, grow, flourish, and bring forth much fruit. "He shall be like a tree planted by the Rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in due season, his leaves shall not wither," Psal. i. 1, 3. "They shall spring up as among the grass, as willows by the water-courses," Isa. xli. 4. "Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord, whose hope the Lord is: for he shall be as a tree planted by the waters, which

XIII. This spiritual and heavenly River yields the church, and all true believers, much joy and sweet delight; no pleasures like those that flow from the Spirit: "The fruit of the Spirit is joy, peace," &c., Gal. v. 22. And sometimes when they partake of these celestial streams, they are so delighted thereby, that they cannot forbear breaking forth into singing: "There is a River, the streams whereof make glad the city of God," &c.

METAPHOR.

XIV. A River carries, or conveys, by the help of boats, and other vessels, many things and persons, (whose purposes and intentions are that way steered) into the ocean.

XV. Sometimes a River is so still, calm, and quiet, that you cannot discern any motion; and then without mere human artificial means, no ship, boat, or vessel can sail or move along.

seem like vessels becalmed; no duty in it, being only performed by abilities.

XVI. Some Rivers divide one country or nation from another.

XVII. After a great rain, a River rises higher, runs more swift, by reason of the land-floods that come down and run into it.

XVIII. A River will carry and bear up a ship of a great burthen, and many other heavy things; and according as its waters run, either more slowly or swiftly, so do those things which sail or swim along in it.

XIX. The water of a River and running streams, is usually more clear and savoury, than pools of standing waters. A River purgeth itself: and if a branch or small stream run through a loathsome ditch, it carries away the pollution of it.

XX. The waters of a River are good to drink, and satisfy thirst.

METAPHOR.

I. All earthly and elementary Rivers have a beginning.

II. Other Rivers are fed by springs or fountains, &c. They have not their waters from themselves; a River is not the same with the head or original from whence it proceeds.

PARALLEL.

XIV. This spiritual River, in the use of the ordinances and appointments of the Gospel, will carry a soul, whose purpose and serious intention is bent that way, to God, the Ocean of all fulness, and into the great depths of everlasting bliss.

XV. The Spirit of God sometimes seems not to strive or move at all upon the hearts of men and women, not only upon the wicked, of whom God hath said, "My Spirit shall not always strive with man," Gen. vi. 3, but also, the godly themselves cannot sometimes perceive a visible or sensible operation thereof. And then their spirits or service performed hath any life or active strength of natural or acquired parts and

XVI. This spiritual River divides the church from the world, believers from unbelievers: "For who maketh thee to differ from another? and what hast thou which thou didst not receive?" 1 Cor. ix. 7.

XVII. After brokenness of heart, or a multitude of unfeigned tears, and true contrition of soul, how high do the waters of the Spirit rise? how doth peace and joy abound in the inward man?

XVIII. This spiritual River carries and bears up the weight of the whole church, which sails like a ship along these waters; and every saint, notwithstanding all those heavy weights of sin, and other unprofitable burthens, that are in and about them, is sustained by these divine waters.

XIX. The Spirit is a pure stream, as clear as crystal; its waters are sweet and savoury, and wheresoever they come, they cleanse and wash away all corruption, Rev. xxii. 1. No man's heart, though it be never so much polluted and foul, like a stinking ditch, yet if a small stream or branch of this River be let into it, and hath a free passage, but it will carry away all the filth and pollution thereof, 1 Cor. vi. 11.

XX. The waters of this River are exceeding good for the soul to drink, and nothing else can allay or satisfy the inward thirst and desire thereof, John iv. 13, 14.

DISPARITY.

I. This River, the Spirit, is from everlasting to everlasting, without beginning, and without ending

II. This River, the Spirit, is a fountain as well as a stream; though it is said to proceed from God, yet it is God himself. But Peter said to Ananias, "Why hath Satan filled thine heart, to lie to the Holy Ghost? Thou hast not lied to man, but to God," Acts v. 3, 4. "There are three persons that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost ; and these three are one," 1 John v. 7. "The Spirit of the Lord hath made me," &c., Job xxxiii. 4. The Spirit knoweth all things, sheweth us things to come, is the object of divine worship ; the sin against the Spirit can never be forgiven. From all which instances, it is evident that the Spirit is God. See the metaphor Light, Book III.

III. Other Rivers are subject to decay, do not always run with the same strength ; a dry summer makes abatement of its waters ; many Rivers have been quite dried up : God threatened the Egyptians, that he would deal so with the River Nile, Isa. xi. 15.

IV. The waters of natural Rivers only cleanse and wash the body from external filthiness.

V. Other Rivers may grow muddy, foul, and unsavoury, the water not good, nor wholesome to drink of.

VI. Other Rivers may be locked up, or turned another way ; it is possible to turn the channel and course thereof. Many Rivers have been made to forsake their ancient currents. This goodly River, which feeds London, may be locked up, and turned another way by an enemy.

VII. Other Rivers may be frozen up ; though running streams do not freeze so soon as standing waters, yet sometimes they freeze also.

VIII. Other Rivers breed noxious creatures of strange and different qualities, creatures that will eat and devour one another.

IX. The length, breadth, and depth of other Rivers may be measured, and are of a small dimension comparatively.

of by the prophet. "Afterwards he measured a thousand cubits, and it was a River that I could not pass over, for the waters were risen, waters to swim in, a River that no man could pass over," Ezek. xlvii. 5.

III. This River, the Spirit, never decayeth : it hath as much water in it as ever it had ; it is as broad, as deep, and as full now as it was at the beginning, though many thousands have taken plentifully of it. No draught can abate its crystal streams ; it is infinite in itself. Though God hath provided a channel of ordinances, to convey some of its waters to his chosen, yet it cannot be circumscribed nor limited, as it is in itself.

IV. The water of this River cleanseth the soul and conscience ; it washeth away all spiritual or internal pollution and uncleanness.

V. This spiritual River can never be fouled, nor made muddy, nor be unsavoury ; it is beyond the power of men or devils to corrupt the Spirit of God.

VI. The River of the Spirit cannot be diverted, or forced to leave its channel. It is impossible to lock it up, or turn its course. How can men of finite beings, obstruct the infinite God in his way and manner of working ? "Whither shall I go from thy Spirit ?" Psal. cxxxix. 7. "I will work and who shall let it ?"

VII. This River can never be frozen. The bleakest wind, the sharpest air, the coldest season, cannot change it. The divine waters run as freely in the cold winter, as in the heat of summer ; they are of a very warming and comforting quality.

VIII. This spiritual River bringeth forth only creatures of a harmless quality. All believers, so far as they are regenerated, are the production or offspring of the Spirit, and are of the same holy, heavenly, merciful, and harmless disposition.

IX. This River is of great dimension : "Who by searching can find out God to perfection ?" His length, breadth, and depth, are past finding out. The Spirit is incomprehensible, an immense and infinite Being. These waters are like those spoken

INFERENCES.

I. We may perceive from hence the excellency and necessity of the Holy Spirit : He is much more useful and necessary to the Church, than Rivers of waters are to the world : for our hearts are naturally dry and parched, like the heath in the wilderness, and it is the Spirit that moisteneth them ; our hearts are hard, and the Spirit mollifieth them ; they are naturally filthy, and he washeth and cleanseth them ; yea, our hearts are barren, and the waters of this River make them fruitful.

II. It also sheweth us the excellency of ordinances, which are as the channel in which the waters of this River run, or the pipes through which these streams are conveyed to the soul.

III. Bless God for this River, for his opening a free passage through Jesus Christ, for its flowing forth unto us, and for casting us, the people of England, to live by the side of such a crystal stream. O what a happy land is that, which hath a River of water of life running through it!

IV. When you see profitable and delightful streams, think seriously on this heavenly River.

V. Let all be persuaded to come to this River: "Ho! every one that thirsteth, come to the waters," &c., Isa. lv. 1.

FOUR MOTIVES CONSIDERABLE.

1. Consider, have you not great need to have your hearts purged and softened by this spiritual River, &c.

2. There is no other River, no other way, no other fountain, that can supply your wants. If you wash yourself with snow-water, it will not do away your filth; if you could bathe your souls in a River of tears, yet unless you be washed in Christ's blood through the Spirit, your sin will cleave to you.

3. This River is large enough; and yet as it is large, it is free. All may come and partake of these waters; none are excepted: "Whoever will may come and take of the water of life freely," Rev. xxii. 17.

4. This River is near, the streams thereof run by your doors.

VI. Moreover, from hence let professors try themselves, whether they have been washed and bathed in this River, and have tasted of its water, yea, or no.

Art thou mollified? Is thy heart made tender? Art thou cleansed? Is thy life and heart made holy? Art thou healed of the sores and wounds of sin? These waters have a healing virtue in them; they will heal a wounded spirit, a galled conscience; they are good to clear the sight, causing one to see far off. Are the eyes of thy understanding enlightened? Dost thou prize the ordinances of God, that convey these waters of life unto thy soul? Is the water of this River sweet to thy taste? Is this River thy chief element? Dost thou live in the Spirit and walk in the Spirit? Eph. i. 18.

VII. When you remove from one place to another, from one country to another, from one land to another, be sure to plant yourselves near the channel of this River, go not from these waters: labour to live near the ordinances of God, and where the water of life is to be had.

VIII. Pray fervently, that God would never turn the course of this River another way. What would become of God's Church in England, were it not for this crystal Stream?

THE HOLY SPIRIT COMPARED TO WATER.

"Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you," &c., Ezek. xxxvi. 25.

"He that believeth on me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. But this spake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him, should receive," &c., John vii. 38, 39.

In both these places, and divers others, the Holy Spirit is compared to Water.

METAPHOR.

I. WATER for its rise, is from the ocean; thence it comes, and thither it returns.

II. Water. cleanses from filth and pollution. Clothes and other

PARALLEL.

I. THE Spirit flows from God, the Ocean of all fulness. "But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of Truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me," John xv. 26.

II. The Spirit of God purges and washes the conscience from the horrid defilement of sin.

METAPHOR.

things that are defiled, are usually washed and made clean in Water. It is indeed the bath of nature, which the God of nature hath appointed for the cleansing of things or creatures that are polluted.

III. Water hath a cooling virtue, it cools the earth after a vehement hot and parching season; so the sweating traveller cools himself by washing in Water. When the sun by its scorching beams hath made a room hot, wash it with Water, and it is brought immediately into a cool temper.

vii. 6, 7. The Spirit cools this heat, partly by subduing the lustings of the flesh, and partly by strengthening the renewed part. Jesus Christ opens the oven of a distempered heart, and by casting the Water of the Spirit upon it, brings it into a cooler temper. When Saul was in that hot and raging heat, to shed the blood of the saints, the Spirit quickly allays his rage and fury, Acts ix.

IV. Water makes the earth fruitful, it is of a fructifying nature. How barren? how unprofitable is it in a great drought? the grass fadeth, withereth, and is dried up; but when a soaking shower falls upon it, how green and flourishing is it immediately made thereby.

V. Water softens and mollifies the earth. David speaking of the earth, saith, "Thou waterest the ridges thereof, and makest it soft with showers," Psal. lxxv. 10.

soft, mollified, and melted, willing to do

VI. Water hath a healing virtue in it. Some great wounds have been healed only by washing in Water. Some Waters in England are sovereign good to cure many distempers and diseases of the body, like the pool called Bethesda, John v. 2, 3, 4.

VII. Water is so necessary a thing, that we cannot live without it, many have perished for want of it.

VIII. Water is good to quench one's thirst, to allay the heat of our stomachs, and to satisfy the longing desire, and remove the

PARALLEL.

"I will sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean from you filthiness." "And such were some of you, but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of our Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God," 1 Cor. vi. 11. The Spirit cleanseth, by applying Christ's blood, and by creating clean dispositions in the soul. See River.

III. The Spirit hath a cooling virtue in it. The heart of a man is subject to great heats, sometimes it is sweltered with temptation. Satan by shooting with fiery darts, puts a believer into violent heats. As the hart is by the hunter put in a foaming sweat, and brays after the Water-brook; so Satan, that blood-hound, makes the soul thirst after the Water of life, Psal. xlii. 1, 7. Sometimes men are put into great heats by prevailing and raging corruptions; "They are (saith the Lord) as an oven heated by the baker." Hos.

IV. The Spirit wherever it falls, makes the soul fruitful. Men's hearts are naturally barren, and like the parched heath in the desert; but when this sacred rain comes down upon them, they quickly look green, and in a glorious manner fructify and bring forth the fruits of righteousness; as appears in the case of Zaccheus, no sooner did he receive of this divine Water, and salvation was come to his house, but he cries out, "the half of my goods I give to the poor," Luke xix. 8.

V. The Spirit softens the hard and flinty heart, by applying the blood of Christ. No sooner doth the Water of the Spirit come down upon a stubborn and rocky-hearted sinner, but he is made tender and pliable thereby. "Lord," saith Saul, "what wilt thou have me do," Acts ix. 6. He was

VI. The Spirit heals all the wounds and diseases of the soul. "Lord, be merciful unto me, and heal my soul," saith David, "for I have sinned against thee." "He sent forth his word and healed them," Psal. xli. 4, and cvii. 20. No soul that ever took down one draught of these waters, but was cured of whatsoever disease he had. It searches to the bottom of every sore, and purges out the corruption, and then by applying the blood of Christ it heals the soul of all its wound perfectly.

VII. The Spirit is of absolute necessity, without it we cannot live to God, cannot live the life of faith, the life of holiness; many perish and are utterly lost for want of the Spirit, for not coming to these Waters.

VII. The Spirit of God allays that great drought that is in men and women naturally after perishing things. "But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him, shall never intolerable pains that rise from an excess of drought.

METAPHOR.

IX. Water is free and cheap, easy to come at, it doth not cost us much, it is a common element, none are barred from it.

X. Water is necessary to quench fire; when by treachery of enemies, our houses have been set on fire over our heads, how serviceable have we found water to be to quench it!

METAPHOR.

I. Other Water many times doth prove prejudicial to the body; when it is received at certain times too freely, it surfeits, and endangers the life.

II. Water, (whether taken in the common acceptation, elementary Water, or cordial Waters, or spirits prepared by art) are not waters of life; no Water can beget life, nor give life to the dead.

of Christians lively, and increases life in them. 4. It is called Water of life, because it brings unto everlasting life. "The Water that I will give him, shall be in him a well of Water, springing up into everlasting life," John iv. 14.

III. Water may be defiled, made muddy, and become unwholesome and unfit to drink or wash in.

PARALLEL.

thirst," &c. John iv. 14. It greatly satisfies the spiritual desires of the soul, giving peace, inward contentment and joy through believing.

IX. The Spirit and the blessings thereof are free. "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters!" "Whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely," Isa. lv. 1, Rev. xxii. 17.

X. The Spirit quenches the fire of lust, the fire of pride, the fire of passion, which Satan and our own treacherous hearts are ready at every turn to kindle in us, and which would, were it not for this sacred Water, burn and consume our souls, and bring us to utter desolation.

DISPARITY.

I. The Spirit never hurts any who drink thereof, though in never so great a heat; you may freely take down this Water, and not be hurt thereby, it surfeits none, no danger of drinking to excess here.

II. The Spirit is called the Spirit of life, and Water of life, and may fitly be so termed. 1. Because it begets spiritual life in all poor dead sinners. 2. Because it maintains life: that which gives life and being to us, as we are men or Christians, preserves the same, whether it be natural or spiritual. 3. Because it makes the hearts of no filth; it is impossible to defile this water, or make it unfit for the souls of sinners. See River.

INFERENCES.

I. From hence we may infer, that those who have not received of the Spirit, or drank of this sacred Water, have no spiritual life in them. "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his," Rom. viii. 9. Those that have not this clean Water sprinkled upon them, their filthiness remains.

II. What fools are those men, who refuse to drink of the Water of life? It is but drinking, and live for ever!

III. Be exhorted to pray earnestly, long for, and endeavour after a participation of the Spirit. How ready are men and women to go to this well and that well to drink Water, for the help and healing of bodily distempers, go many miles, dispense with all other affairs, that they may be recovered of external diseases: but how few enquire after the Water of life, or leave all their secular business for the good and health of their immortal souls! To persuade you to accept of counsel, take these few motives.

You are invited; "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters," &c. Isa. lv. 1. Waters are free, you may have them, if you have a heart and will in you to them; the well is open, and Christ stands with his arms spread forth to call and embrace you. "If any man thirst, let him come to me and drink," John vii. 37.

THE HOLY SPIRIT A WITNESS.

"It is the Holy Spirit that beareth Witness, because the Spirit is truth. He that believeth on the Son of God, hath the Witness within himself," 1 John v. 6, 10.

"The Spirit itself beareth witness with our Spirit," Rom. viii. 16.

"My conscience also beareth me witness in the Holy Ghost," &c., Rom. ix. 1.

A WITNESS is absolutely necessary for the keeping up of justice, deciding all matters of moment, or to the putting an end to controversies that may arise between parties; and for the confirming and establishment of truth.

METAPHOR.

I. Witness imports something to be done, that is to be attested when it shall be required, or when there is need of it.

done by the means and power thereof.

II. A good Witness is a just and impartial person, one that will tell only the truth.

III. A good and faithful Witness decides and ends controversies upon trial the right way.

tain; will not clear the guilty, viz., him that believeth not, notwithstanding his seeming zeal, holiness, &c., nor condemn the holy and sincere person, notwithstanding the weakness and infirmities of his life.

IV. One Witness is not sufficient to the deciding of some differences, in some cases there should be more than one Witness. "In the mouth of two or three Witnesses, shall every word be established."

V. A Witness is highly esteemed, and his testimony prized by a man falsely accused, when his life lies at stake thereby; especially when such clear evidence is given in for the defendant, that tends to the clearing up his innocence and absolutely to acquit him, and to his great honour, set him at liberty, notwithstanding those cruel and false accusations of his enemy.

As much as if he should say, though many Witnesses are against me, yet I will keep my conscience clear, I will not have my own heart to charge me, or witness against me as long as I live.

VI. A good Witness many times gives in such clear proof and circumstances, to the deciding of controversies and ending differences,

PARALLEL.

I. There is something done by Christ for us, and in us, which it is needful there be a witness of, to confirm and establish both. (1.) Whatever the Lord Jesus did in the days of his flesh, as the sent-one of the Father, was borne Witness to by the Holy Spirit, by those mighty works which were (2.) The Lord Jesus hath also done great things which the Holy Spirit beareth Witness.

II. The Holy Spirit is a just and impartial Witness. "The Spirit beareth Witness, because the Spirit is truth," 1 John v. 6.

III. So the Holy Spirit decides and ends the great doubt that arises in the heart about the work of grace being the right way; will not speak peace to him to whom it doth not appear.

IV. So in the great case of interest or no interest in Jesus Christ, or about faith and regeneration, there must be two or three witnesses, no more is required. First, the Spirit of God.

And secondly, our spirit, or the testimony of our own conscience. "The Spirit itself beareth Witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God," Rom. viii. 16.

V. When the Spirit of God, with a man's own conscience, gives in evidence for him touching his sincerity, when accused by Satan and by wicked men, and slandered as a vile hypocrite, as Job was, it doth clear him and make his heart light; and how doth he prize and esteem such a friend? Alas! had not a Christian the Witness in himself, to clear and bear up his soul, he would sink down many times into utter despondency; but this made holy Job to triumph over all his enemies; "Behold, my Witness is in heaven, and my record is on high," Job xvi. 19.

VI. So the Holy Ghost gives in such clear demonstration and proof to the clearing up of a man's evidence for heaven, that when all cases are clearly considered, a poor saint, though doubt-that the matter appears exceeding plain in the sight of all persons.

METAPHOR.

trial, it appears that those qualifications mentions, concerning the truth of grace, he then finds he hath no more cause to doubt of the goodness of his condition.

VII. A good and faithful Witness brings a man sometimes off triumphantly, that all were ready to conclude was a dead man.

the testimony of our conscience, that in simplicity and godly sincerity, we have had our conversation in the world," &c., 2 Cor. i. 12.

VIII. A Witness is so necessary to confirm bonds, contracts, and solemn covenants, that they are not looked upon authentic and good in law without it.

PARALLEL.

ful before, comes to a good and full satisfaction therein. God's Spirit and conscience compares a man's state with the word of God; and if upon triumph, notwithstanding his case may seem very dangerous by means of strong accusations of Satan, as it was with Job. "For this is our rejoicing, in simplicity and godly sincerity, we have had our VIII. So the Spirit of God confirms the covenant of grace to the soul of a believer, for when the true fear of God is wrought in the heart, the Spirit witnesseth to it, and thereby assures us, that all the promises that are made therein, are undoubtedly our own, and shall be performed to us.

INFERENCE.

How happy is the state of the godly, what good assurance have they of eternal life. They have received an earnest of it, it is sealed unto them, and they have two infallible Witnesses to confirm it to them. See Conscience a Witness.

THE HOLY SPIRIT A TEACHER.

"For the Holy Ghost shall teach you in the same hour what ye ought to say," Luke xii. 12.
 "But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you," John xiv. 26.

THE Holy Spirit is the great Teacher of the Church, and every particular saint and member thereof, unto whom the accomplishment of that great promise is committed; "And they shall be all taught of God," John vi. 45.

METAPHOR.

I. A Teacher is a personal appellation.

II. A Teacher implieth one or more, that needeth instruction, or teaching: it argues weakness of knowledge and want of understanding in some persons, about such things, they ought to be well instructed in.

III. It behoveth an able Teacher to have great knowledge and understanding himself, in all those things and mysteries he instructeth others in.

IV. A spiritual and able Teacher openeth divers dark, deep, hidden, and mysterious things to the understandings of men.

revealed unto the apostles and prophets by the Spirit," Eph. iii. 5.

PARALLEL.

I. The Holy Ghost is a Divine Person. See Comforter.

II. There is no man whatsoever but needeth the divine teaching and instruction of the Holy Ghost; "For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of a man which is in him? even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God," 1 Cor. ii. 11.

III. The Holy Ghost hath great knowledge, yea, he is infinite in understanding, there is nothing that he is ignorant of, that either concerns God's honour, or our good; "The Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God," 1 Cor. ii. 10.

IV. The Holy Ghost openeth many dark, and deep mysteries: what hidden mysteries did he reveal to the prophets, and open and unfold to the blessed apostles? "Which in other ages were not made known unto the sons of men, as is now

METAPHOR.

V. A divine and able Teacher by this means greatly enlighteneth the world, and causeth darkness and ignorance to fly away, enriching men's minds with the precious knowledge of sacred truths.

VI. An able Teacher instructeth ignorant persons by degrees, as they are able to take in, conceive, and apprehend things, first to read the a, b, c, and then the Bible, and afterwards the Grammar, or any other things of learning they desire to be instructed in.

Christ, his Priesthood, and other things relating to him as Mediator; together with many dark sayings and prophecies of the scripture, which those who are unlearned, (viz., who have not the Spirit's Teachings) wrest unto their own destruction: "I have many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now," John xvi. 12.

VII. Some Teachers teach their scholars out of a book; their great business is to help them rightly and distinctly to understand that.

"He shall teach you all things, and shall bring my words to your remembrance; He shall take of mine and show it unto you," &c. John xiv. 26; that is, he shall open and explain my word and doctrine to you. How ignorant are some men of the scriptures, and of those glorious mysteries contained therein. Notwithstanding all their human learning (or that knowledge they have of Hebrew, Greek, and Latin) for want of the Spirit's teaching.

VIII. A Teacher exerciseth much patience towards them whom he instructeth; especially when he meets with such that are very dull and unapt to learn, he is forced to take much pains with them.

IX. Some Teachers though very deserving, have been greatly slighted by those very persons they have showed much love to, and taken great pains with for their good, which hath sorely grieved them.

X. Some Teachers, after they have found those, whom they were employed to teach and instruct, grown to such a great degree of stubbornness and obstinacy, that they have utterly despised and refused to be taught by them, and have cast all counsel behind their backs; then they have left them, and wholly given them up as hopeless persons.

DISPARITY.

V. The Holy Ghost inspiring, and Teaching the prophets and apostles (who were the holy pen-men of the sacred scripture) hath greatly enlightened the inhabitants of the earth, where their record is known, and also when he hath opened the eyes of the understandings of men in those profound and glorious mysteries contained in the holy scripture, how are their minds enriched with the knowledge of divine truths?

VI. The Holy Ghost teacheth and instructeth poor sinners gradually, first the a, b, c, of religion, viz., the knowledge of sin, and their lost and undone condition thereby; the vanities of this world, together with the necessity of a Saviour: and then, in the second place, he instructeth them in higher mysteries, opening and explaining the covenant of grace, as also the glorious mystery of union and communion with God, the mystery of the Trinity, the incarnation of Christ, his Priesthood, and other things relating to him as Mediator; together with many dark sayings and prophecies of the scripture, which those who are unlearned, (viz., who have not the Spirit's Teachings) wrest unto their own destruction: "I have many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now," John xvi. 12.

VII. So the Holy Ghost teacheth sinners the knowledge of the scripture: for as the Spirit gave them forth, so he is the best interpreter of them: "Then opened he their understandings, that they might understand the scriptures," Luke xxiv. 25.

VIII. So the Holy Ghost exerciseth much patience towards sinners, whom he comes to teach and instruct in the way of salvation; mankind being generally very dull and unapt to learn the knowledge of themselves, sin, Christ, and salvation; therefore he drops now a word, and then a word, for their conviction.

IX. So, many men that the Holy Ghost hath showed much love unto, and laboured greatly with, have notwithstanding slighted and disregarded all his counsel and instruction; like as Israel did of old. "Thou gavest them thy good Spirit to instruct them, and witheldest not thy manna from their mouth," &c. Neh. ix. 20.

X. So the Holy Ghost, who laboured to instruct the old world, finding they were grown to a fearful degree of hardness, rebellion, and obstinacy, utterly refusing to return or be reformed, after he had waited many years upon them, left them to perish in their sins, God declaring sometimes before the flood came upon them, "that his spirit should not always strive with man," Gen. vi. 3; and in like manner the Spirit deals with stubborn, obstinate sinners; for after long-waiting and abused patience, he leaves them, and gives them utterly up to their own heart's lust, and to walk in their own counsel.

XI. Godly Teachers are so great a blessing to people, that it is a great loss to lose them; nay, a sore and lamentable judgment upon the Church and the world to be deprived of, or have their Teachers taken away from them or forced into a corner.

XI. The Holy Ghost is such a great blessing to the Church and the people of God, nay, and unto sinners too, that there can come no greater judgment upon them; than to be deprived of this sacred and heavenly Teacher, though it is sad with the Church, "when her Teachers are removed into a corner,* and her eyes see them not; yet we had better loss all our Teachers, and that utterly, than lose this great Teacher only; for though he be pleased to make use of them, he can teach effectually and savingly without them, were they removed and taken away; but they cannot teach without him unto the least spiritual advantage; and those who pretend to be Teachers of others, and yet despise his teaching-assistance, will once find they undertook a work which was none of theirs."

INFERENCES.

I. Is the Holy Ghost the great Teacher? how dare any then reproach and vilify him, or slight his teaching, or those who are led and instructed by him?

II. It may also stir up all persons to a readiness and willingness of heart and mind to be taught and instructed by him.

Quest. How may we know, say some, the Spirit's teaching? Who are they that are taught and instructed by him?

Ans. This you may take as an undoubted truth, the Spirit never teacheth any thing contrary to the written word, because so the world might be at a certainty about a good and true Teacher in matters of religion; the Spirit hath left us the holy scripture, and he always teacheth as that teacheth, opening and explaining what dark and obscure things are contained therein; so he that walketh faithfully up to the written word, is led and taught by the Spirit.

Quest. But doth not the apostle say, "We have an unction from the holy one, and know all things, and need not that any man teach us?" 1 John ii. 20, 27. We need no other Teacher therefore but the Spirit.

Ans. That is a great mistake, and apparent wresting of the text; for the Spirit of God, that holy unction, was in the primitive saints in a more glorious measure than he is in any now, and yet Christ called forth and ordained divers other Teachers for them, who were to build them up in their most holy faith; "And the things (saith Paul to Timothy) that thou hast heard of me, among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also?" 2 Tim. ii. 2. A Gospel-ministry is to abide till Christ's second coming, they are appointed for the gathering together, building up, and perfecting of the saints, "Until we all come into the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man," Eph. iv. 13. Therefore the meaning of the Holy Ghost in that place is this, we need not that any man teach us, but as that anointing teacheth; if any man teach us such and such things that are not written; things that the Spirit never taught in the word of God, we ought not to hearken to them: we need no teaching but that which is according to the Spirit's teachings, and agreeable to its blessed rule, left upon record, viz., the holy scriptures of truth.

THE HOLY SPIRIT COMPARED TO A DOVE.

"And he saw the Spirit of God descending like a Dove, and lighting on him," Matt. iii. 16.

THE Holy Spirit is represented by a Dove, or appeared in the shape of a Dove, and may in some things be resembled thereto.

SIMILE.

I. A Dove is a bodily substance, or hath a subsistence of his own.

II. "As at the beginning of the creation, saith a reverend divine the Spirit, כרררר incubabat, came and fell on the waters,* cherished the whole, and communicating a prolific and vivific quality into it, as a fowl or Dove in particular gently moves itself upon its eggs, until with, and by its generative warmth it hath communicated vital heat unto them."

III. A Dove is a meek, harmless and innocent creature; "be ye harmless as Doves."

IV. A Dove hath a quick, sharp sight or eye, as it is hinted, Cant. i. 15, and iv. 1.

V. A Dove brought tidings to Noah of the ceasing of the flood of waters, and so consequently, that the wrath of God was abated likewise.

VI. A Dove is a most swift creature: hence David cries out, "O that I had the wings of a dove! then would I fly away, and be at rest," Psal. iv. 6.

the Holy Ghost can quickly come to the aid and succour of a believer, when in trouble or beset with temptation, or to strengthen him when he hath any great work and business to do for God. That Spirit appeared like a Dove, and yet the learned tells us, "It was of a fiery colour, and we must not think this substance, saith Mr. Blackwood, or body resembled by a Dove, to be hypostatically united to the Holy Spirit, as the human nature of Christ is to the divine; but as angels appeared oftentimes men in human bodies, and laid them down again; so did the Holy Ghost."

THE HOLY SPIRIT THE SAINTS' GUIDE.

"He will guide you unto all truth," &c., John xvi. 13.

"As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the Sons of God," Rom. viii. 14.

The Spirit is the saints' Guide.

METAPHOR.

I. A Guide is very necessary for strangers in a wilderness where there are many ways and turnings.

PARALLEL.

I. So the Holy Ghost hath a personal existence, it was εἰς σωματικόν, a bodily shape, and that περιεραῖς, of a Dove.

II. "So now, saith he, at the entrance of the new creation, the Spirit comes as a Dove upon Christ who was the immediate Author of it, and virtually comprised it in himself, carrying it on by virtue of his presence with him; and so this is applied in the Syriac Ritual of baptism, composed by Severinus; and the Spirit of holiness descended, flying in the likeness of a Dove, and rested upon him, and moved upon the waters."

III. So the Holy Spirit is of a most sweet, meek, pure and Dove-like disposition, the perfection of all excellent qualities being in him, as well as upon the Dove Christ, as he was figured forth thereby.

IV. The Holy Spirit hath a quick and sharp sight, can discern the very thoughts and intentions of the heart; what can be hid from his eyes, "Before whom all things lie naked and bare?" Heb. iv. 13.

V. So in the assumption of this form, there may be some respect had to Noah's Dove, signifying peace and reconciliation by Christ, and the ceasing of the wrath of God to all those who shall fly to the Lord Jesus, and rest upon him by a lively faith.

VI. The Holy Ghost is swift; God is said to fly upon the wings of the wind; "The Spirit is God, and the flight of the Dove," saith reverend Blackwood, Matt. iii. 16, denotes the divine influence of the Spirit coming from heaven into the members of Christ, as well as into the head;

I. So the guidance of the Holy Spirit, as it is contained in the holy scripture, is necessary to believers whilst they pass through the wilderness of this world, where one says, this is the way, and another that.

METAPHOR.

II. An eminent and able Guide is well skilful in all ways, and able to give directions in the most difficult cases that are very hard to find out.

Holy Spirit, 2 Pet. ii. 21. There is no precept nor promise of God needful for the children of men to be instructed in, but the Spirit in the holy scripture hath left it upon record for our direction and consolation; and whatsoever is hard to be understood, that is contained therein; "The Spirit that searcheth all things," can open and explain it to a gracious soul: the Spirit guides in the way of morality, in the way of faith and Gospel-obedience, in the way of church-constitution and discipline, and in Gospel-holiness and conversation.

III. A Faithful Guide gives notice of all the dangers that are in the way, and shows also how a poor traveller may escape them, and so go safe unto his desired place.

women walk in; the Spirit hath told us positively, if we go in that way, we shall perish for ever: "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God," John iii. 3. Secondly, the great danger of the way of presumption. Thirdly, the danger of despair. Fourthly, the danger of idolatry, heresy, and error. Fifthly, the danger of disobedience to Christ's commands, Acts iii. 22, 23. Sixthly, the danger of loving or liking of any one sin. Seventhly, the danger of hypocrisy. Eighthly, the danger of apostacy, &c.

IV. An able Guide frees a man, that commits himself to his guidance, from many cares and fears that attend such who have lost their way, and have no Guide.

V. An able and faithful Guide gives plain and full direction to the ignorant, so that they cannot well miss the way, if so be they exactly follow his directions.

METAPHOR.

I. Other Guides, though very skilful, and have good knowledge of a way or matter they undertake to guide men in, may, notwithstanding in some things, miss; being not infallible, cannot give infallible demonstrations to all doubtful persons that they are right, and that those who follow their directions, shall never go astray.

or inspiration, and yet cannot prove and demonstrate what they say to be true, by such ways and means that no deceiver can pretend unto, or do the like, &c., lie, and abuse the Holy Ghost, who is a certain and infallible Guide.

PARALLEL.

II. So the Holy Spirit is able to Guide poor sinners in all the ways of God; he led Moses and the prophets under the law, and led the apostles and all the primitive Christians, under the Gospel-ministration. Holy men of God spake as they were moved and guided by the

III. The Holy Spirit hath in the holy scripture (for in that are contained all the directions of the Spirit, touching all matters and cases to salvation) given notice to all spiritual travellers of all the dangers that may attend them in the way to heaven. First, the danger of unregeneracy, the common road that most men and

IV. So the Holy Spirit frees a poor saint from many fears and cares, which attend others, whilst he wholly commits himself to the guidance of God's word, and to the directions of the Spirit: many are at a loss, and know not what to do, nor which way to go, whilst he rests satisfied, resolving to go wholly by this Guide.

V. So the Holy Spirit in the scripture of truth, hath given such plain and clear directions in all cases of moment about faith and holiness, that the ignorant and unlearned cannot miss the way to heaven, if they carefully observe the rules laid down therein.

DISPARITY.

I. But the Holy Spirit in such a glorious manner, by many signs and wonders, so confirmed the way to heaven, (as they are recorded in the holy scripture) that those that follow his counsel, shall not go astray; he is an infallible Guide, and never imposed any rules, laws, or precepts upon men, but left such convincing evidence of the truth of his testimony, that there remains no just ground for a doubt or objection; as might be shown in respect of the giving forth both of the law and Gospel: therefore those who pretend they are led by the Spirit and demonstrate what they say to be true, by such ways and means that no deceiver can pretend unto, or do the like, &c., lie, and abuse the Holy Ghost, who is a certain and infallible Guide.

INFERENCES.

Bless God for this spiritual Guide in matters of faith and practice, and that there are such sure rules left by him in the written word. What should we have done, had God never afforded us such a Teacher and Guide as the Holy Ghost is?

1. For man naturally is blind; I will lead the blind in ways they knew not, &c.
2. There are many by-ways, and were there not one sure and perfect Guide, how could a man find his way? It is as easy for one man to say he is led by the Spirit and inspiration, as it is for another; and how shall a man, were it not for the word, know which of them is in the right?
3. Some pretend they are led by the Spirit, and they walk quite contrary to the scripture which contains all the truth of God necessary to be known, believed and practised in order to salvation: "He shall guide you into all truth, he shall bring my word to your remembrance," 2 Tim. iii. 16, 17, John xvi. 13.

Quest. How shall we know who follows the Spirit's guidance?

Answ. Art thou led to repent, to leave thy sins, to believe in Christ, to obey his commands, to live a godly life, to keep a good conscience towards God, and towards men? these are part of those things the Spirit guides men in, and such who thus live, "are led by the Spirit of God, and are the sons of God," Rom. viii. 14.

METAPHORS, ALLEGORIES, SIMILES, TYPES, ETC.,

THAT RELATE TO THE MOST SACRED WORD OF GOD.

BOOK III.

THE WORD OF GOD COMPARED TO LIGHT.

“Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet, and a Light unto my path,” Psal. cxix. 105.

“We have also a more sure Word of prophecy whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a Light that shineth in a dark place,” &c. 2 Pet. i 19.

“Lest the Light of the glorious Gospel of Christ who is the image of God should shine upon them,” &c. 2 Cor. iv. 4, 6.

In handling this Metaphor we will (1.) Show what Light is. (2.) Give its various acceptations. (3.) Run the parallel, and largely open the properties of Gospel Light; concluding with practical improvements upon that and some dependant and collateral points.

Light properly taken, is thus defined, Lux est claritas seu splendor in Corpore luminoso, vel extra a corpore luminoso exiens—that is, Light is a clarity, brightness or splendour in a luminous body, or proceeding from it—it is called in Hebrew מאור (or) from whence comes the Greek opao, cerno, to behold, which cannot be done, but where there is light. The Hebrew word מאור Maor is properly a lightsome or lucid body, as the sun, moon, and stars, Gen. i. 14, 15. The Greeks call it Φως, Matt. xvii. 2, Acts xxvi. 23; The Latins lux and lumen. It is threefold viz. there is a natural Light, a Light of grace, and a Light of glory; the first is common to all that have the sense of seeing, the second to believers only on earth, the third to the saints and glorified spirits in heaven.

The second sort of which we treat, proceeds from Christ who is called the Light, John i. and his Gospel, which is also called Light, because it has the same influence and efficacy in illuminating the minds of men (which without it are spiritually dark) as the sun and other lucid bodies have, to help our corporeal eyes in the discovery of objects.

Light metaphorically is put for life itself, Job iii. 16, 20, 21. (2.) For any prosperity and joy of mind arising from thence, Esth. viii. 16. (3.) For the open and manifest state of things, Matt. x. 27, Zeph. iii. 5, John iii. 21, 1 Cor. iv. 6. (4.) For favour and good will, Prov. xvi. 15. (5.) For the mystery of regeneration, (1.) with respect to the original cause of it, viz., the Word and Spirit of God, Psal. xliii. 3, Prov. vi. 23, Isa. ii. 5, 20, 2 Cor. iv. 6, 1 John ii. 8. (2.) With respect to the formal cause, which is the saving knowledge of Christ, and true faith, Acts xxvi. 18, Eph. v. 8, 1 Pet. ii. 9, 1 John i. 7. Hence believers are called the sons of Light, Luke xvi. 8, Eph. v. 8. 1 Thes. v. 5, and the graces of the Spirit and effects thereof, the armour of Light, Rom. xiii. 12. (3.) With respect to the final cause, the last scope and effect of faith, which is life eternal, Isa. lx. 19, 20, John viii. 12, Acts xxvi. 23, 2 Tim. i. 10, &c.

More particularly by a Metaphor Light is put for knowledge, Dan. v. 11, Isa. lx. 3. For believers, Eph. v. 8, for the ministers of the Gospel, Matt. v. 14, for God himself, 1 John i. 5. Natural Light was the first perfect creature that God made of this visible world, Gen. i. 3.

Light is put for the morning, Neh. viii. 3, “And he read unto them—from the Light (so the Hebrew) until mid-day”—noon-light in the Hebrew זאחרים Zocharajim) signifies double Light, or that which is extraordinary shining. The devil is called an angel of Light, 2 Cor. xi. 14; that is, by himself or agents he assumes a specious and seeming sanctity on purpose to ensnare and deceive the godly. God is said to "dwell in unapproachable Light," 1 Tim. vi. 16, that is, in such transcendent glory, that no mortal eye can approach unto. There is nothing so illustrious and glorious as Light, hence the joys of heaven are set out by it.

In what respect the word is compared to Light, take as followeth.

METAPHOR.

I. Light is pleasant and very comfortable. "Truly Light is sweet," saith Solomon, "and a pleasant thing it is for the eyes to see the sun," Eccl. xi. 7. How grievous is it to be blind, or to be kept in a deep and dark dungeon without seeing or beholding the Light.*

II. Light hath a penetrating quality, it is of such a piercing and subtle nature, that it conveys itself into the least crevice; you can hardly make a fence so close as wholly to keep out light.

It is a hard matter for a man, though never so wicked, to shut out or prevent the Light of God's word from darting into and piercing of his evil and accusing conscience.

III. Light makes manifest. Great Light discovers and makes things manifest, causing them to appear as they are in their proper nature: which in the dark, many times are taken to be that which indeed they are not. When you would see what a thing is, that you may make a true judgment of it, you bring it to the Light. "Whatsoever maketh manifest," saith the apostle, is Light, Eph. v. 13.

6. It makes known the Lord Jesus Christ and his blessed design in coming into the world: his incarnation, nativity, life, death, resurrection, ascension, and intercession, &c.

7. It discovers how God is to be worshipped: all his laws, ordinances, and institutions are revealed by it.

8. It discovers the true church, which otherwise cannot be known.

9. Lastly, It makes manifest whatsoever is needful or necessary to be known, believed, or practised in order to salvation, 2 Tim. iii. 15—17.

IV. Light hath a directive virtue, it guides men in their way: the traveller by the benefit of Light sees what path to keep; and how to avoid the dangers that may attend, should he turn to the right hand or to the left.

PARALLEL.

I. The word or Gospel of Jesus Christ is very pleasant, and a delightful thing. How woeful was the state of England in former times when men were kept in the dungeon of Popish darkness, without the precious Light of God's word. Light is compared to gladness, and a good day, Psal. xcvi. 11. Many good days have we enjoyed since God sent out his Light and truth amongst us, Psal. xliii. 3.

II. The word of God is of a searching and penetrating nature, the apostle saith, "It is quick and powerful, sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and Spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intentions of the heart," Heb. iv. 12.

III. The word and blessed Gospel of Christ is so great a Light, that it makes wonderful discoveries to the children of men.

1. It makes manifest not only that there is a God, but also what a God he is. Not only his being, but also his manner of being.

2. It discovers the creation of the world.

3. The state of man, before he fell and after his fall.

4. The horrid nature of sin.

5. The secret counsel and eternal love of God to lost man, together with the severity of God towards fallen angels.

6. It makes known the Lord Jesus Christ and his blessed design in coming into the world: his incarnation, nativity, life, death, resurrection, ascension, and intercession, &c.

7. It discovers how God is to be worshipped: all his laws, ordinances, and institutions are revealed by it.

8. It discovers the true church, which otherwise cannot be known.

9. Lastly, It makes manifest whatsoever is needful or necessary to be known, believed, or practised in order to salvation, 2 Tim. iii. 15—17.

IV. The word of God directs and guides men in the right way. Hence David saith, "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a Light unto my paths," Psal. cxix. 105. God is gracious unto mankind in this respect, viz., he leaves them not at an uncertainty without an infallible guide in matters of religion. Take away this unerring rule, and what confusion would the Christian world be in: one man might say this is the way, and another that; I walk, saith one, by the guidance of the Spirit, and so saith another that teacheth quite contrary things. Saith a third you are both out of the way, it is I alone that am led by inspiration and ye are in darkness. Others plead for the Pope and general Councils, which have been miserably contradictory one to another, and none of these can give better demonstrations, touching the truth of what they preach and practice, than the rest; being not able to confirm their doctrine by miracles; and so consequently how shall a poor doubtful soul be directed in the way to heaven by either or any of them. For were not the holy scripture the rule; but contrariwise the Light within, or inspiration, &c., then must a man be able to confirm and prove what he saith in such a way, or by such means that no deceiver or impostor can pretend unto, or do the like Object. But is not the Spirit of God above the scriptures, which you call the word? did not the Spirit give forth the scriptures? If so, sure then that is of the greatest authority and only Light that can best direct men into the right way.

* Γλυκυ φως, sweet is the Light.

Ans. That the Holy Spirit or third Person of the holy Trinity is a greater Light than the Holy Scripture is not denied, by virtue of which holy men of old were inspired that gave them forth; yet the question is, whether any man now hath such a measure of the Spirit in him which is a greater Light than the written word, and to whom others are bound to adhere and be directed by: for it is this only which is denied.

METAPHOR.

V. Light hath a cheering, warming, and reviving quality. Light contributes much to the vegetation, growth, and life of plants and other creatures: Light and motion are the cause of heat which the heavenly bodies send down upon earth. Light is that instrument whereby all influences of heaven are communicated and dispersed to the world.

VI. Light hath a purging and purifying virtue. Fogs and mists that are gathered in darkness are dispersed and scattered when the Light comes, hence Light is called the refining-pot of nature. The world, saith a worthy divine, would be an unwholesome pest-house if it had no Light.

spiritual sense, were it not for the Light

VII. Light is of an undefileable nature. Though it pass through sinks and most polluted places, yet it contracts no defilement; it cleanseth all things, but is defiled by nothing. It is a quality so spiritual that nothing can fasten upon it to pollute it.

VIII. Light is glorious for beauty and splendour. Hence the glory of heaven is called Light. There is nothing of all created beings so glorious as the Sun, and Light is

PARALLEL.

V. The word and Gospel of Christ hath a cheering and quickening virtue. "This is my comfort in my affliction, thy word hath quickened me," Psal. cxix. 50. And in another place, "I will never forget thy precepts, for with them thou hast quickened me," Psal. cxix. 93. As it is grievous to be spiritually blind, or in the dark region and dungeon of idolatry, sin, and unbelief; so on the other hand how comfortable is it to enjoy the blessed word and Gospel of Jesus Christ!

VI. The word and Gospel of Christ hath a cleansing, purging and purifying virtue in it. "Wherewith shall a young man cleanse his way?" by taking heed thereto according to thy word," Psal. cxix. 9. "Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you," John xv. 3. The Gospel and word of God disperseth and scattereth all the fogs and mists of darkness and error. It is the refining-pot of truth. What an unwholesome pest-house would the world be in a and excellent virtue of God's holy word.

VII. The word and Gospel of God is very pure and of an undefileable nature, Psal. cxix. 140. What filthy sinks hath it passed through, and what means hath been used by the Popish adversaries and others to corrupt and pollute it, and yet no defilement cleaveth to it, it remains unmixed, and pure, still shining forth gloriously; such is the excellent nature of it, it purifieth the hearts and lives of men, and nothing can fasten upon it to pollute it.

VIII. The word and Gospel of Christ is called by the apostle, "The glorious Gospel," 2 Cor. iv. 4, the Gospel is exceeding full of glory. There is nothing in it but that which is very glorious. Here you have a resplendency and shining forth

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

a resplendency and shining forth of it. of the Sun of Righteousness. Gloria quasi clara, saith Aquinas, because glory is the bright shining forth of excellency, now it is transcendent excellency and splendour shines forth, as may be demonstrated many ways.

1. It is glorious, in respect of the Author and Fountain from whence it proceeds.
2. It is glorious in a comparative sense.
3. It is glorious in respect of itself.

First, As Light is glorious because it is the most excellent rays, resplendency, and shinings forth of the sun; so is the Gospel, because it is the glorious shining forth and resplendency of Jesus Christ the Sun of Righteousness.

Secondly, It is glorious in a comparative sense, it excels the law, hence called a better Testament; though that was glorious, yet it had no glory in this respect, by reason of the glory that excelleth, 2 Cor. iii. 10.

I. The Gospel excels the law in respect of the names of the one and the names of the other.

1. The law is called the letter; the Gospel, the ministration of the Spirit.
2. The law is called a ministration of death, the Gospel a ministration of life.

II. The Gospel excels in glory above the law.

1. In regard of the light and perspicuity of it, the law was full of obscurity, clothed with many ceremonies and mysterious sacrifices.

2. They were at a great loss touching the main drift and end thereof, 2 Cor. iii. 13. God spake as it were under a veil.

III. The Gospel is clean and plain; Christ beheld, heard, handled, &c., the mysteries long hid, opened, and explained fully: "We behold with open face," &c., 2 Cor. iii. 17, 18.

IV. The law was appointed to be but a leading ministration, and in subserviency to the Gospel, our schoolmaster to bring us to Christ, Gal. iii. 24.

V. The Gospel is more glorious, or excels the law in respect of the strength of the one and weakness of the other; "What the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sent forth his Son," &c., Rom. viii. 3.

The law wounds, but cannot heal; it shows a man he is dead; but it cannot give him life; it shows man he is naked, but it cannot clothe him.

The Gospel gives life, heals, clothes and comforts; the one shows we are in prison, the other brings us out, no salvation by the one, and none without the other.

VI. The Gospel excels in glory above the law, in regard of the discovery there is made therein of the grace and mercy of God; the one shows God is just and severe, and will not clear the guilty; the other shows he is not only just, but also gracious. If any grace shone forth under the law, it was only beams of Gospel light darting forth darkly in it.

VII. The Gospel is more glorious in regard of the chief administrators of the one and of the other. The one were, (1.) Angels, "If the word spoken by angels were stedfast; who have received the law by the disposition of angels and have not kept it, Heb. ii. 1, 2, Acts vii. 53. (2.) Moses, a servant, one that spake on earth, the other Christ, the Lord of life and glory who speaks from heaven. "How shall we escape if we turn away from him that speaketh from heaven?" Heb. xii. 25.

VIII. The Gospel excels the law in respect of priesthood. Aaron and his sons were priests of the law, Christ is the only Priest of the Gospel.

1. The priests of the law were but men, no more than men; Christ, God-man.
2. They had infirmities, sin and guilt in their hearts and lives as well as others. Christ had none, in his mouth was found no guile.
3. They were made priests without an oath, but Christ with an oath, Heb. vii. 21, so greater solemnity at his instalment into office.
4. They could not continue by reason of death, and they truly were many because they were not suffered to continue, by reason of death; but Christ dieth not, "He ever liveth to make intercession for us, but this man because he continueth for ever hath an unchangeable priesthood," Heb. vii. 23—25.

5. Christ was more merciful and filled with greater bowels than they, "He hath compassion on the ignorant, and on them that are out of the way," Heb. v. 2.

6. Christ as Priest, was the substance, the antitype of Aaron and his priesthood.

7. There is completeness and perfection in Christ's Priesthood; but it was not so touching Aaron's. "If therefore perfection were by the Levitical priesthood, &c., the law, that made nothing perfect," Heb. vii. 11, 19.

IX. The Priesthood of Christ under the Gospel excels Aaron's in respect of word and office, &c.

1. He was to enter into the holy place.

2. To appear before God.

3. To bear the sins of the people, Exod. xxviii. 38.

4. To make an atonement, Lev. xvi. 32.

5. To judge of uncleanness, Lev. xiii. 2.

6. To offer incense, Lev. xvi. 17, 18.

7. To determine controversies, Deut. xvii. 8.

8. To bless the people: and many other things which Jesus Christ infinitely excels in.

1. Christ is entered into the true holy place, Sanctum sanctorum, the holy of holies, heaven itself.

2. He appears really before God for us, being set down on the right hand of the majesty on high, &c.

3. He hath, as the great Antitype, borne our sins in his own body upon the tree.

4. He hath made a complete and perfect atonement.

5. He judges our uncleanness both of the heart as well as of the flesh.

6. He resolves all our doubts, ends controversies; speaks peace to the disconsolate, a word in season to him that is weary.

7. He offers incense; "And there was given him much incense that he should offer it with the prayers of all saints," Rev. viii. 3.

8. He gives down all blessings; "Him hath God sent to bless you in turning away every one of you from his iniquities," Acts iii. 26.

X. The Gospel excels the law in respect of sacrifices.

1. Those sacrifices under the law were not so excellent, there was not that worth in them as in the sacrifices of the Gospel. What was the blood of bulls, bullocks, and lambs? These were part of those legal sacrifices.

Christ offered up his own body, poured forth his precious blood to take away our sins.

2. They were offered often to atone for iniquity daily, every year;

But Christ hath offered up himself in sacrifice once for all. "By one offering he hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified," Heb. x. 14: that which they were always or continually doing, and yet could not accomplish, he did by one single sacrifice, and that for ever.

XI. The law required perfect righteousness, and nothing less would be accepted, and so consequently no soul could thereby be delivered from terror and bondage; but the Gospel (through Christ's perfect righteousness acted in his own person for us) accepts of sincerity in the room and stead of the perfect keeping the whole law.

XII. In respect of the extent of the one and of the other.

The law was only given to Israel, or unto the lineal seed of Abraham and to the proselyte stranger; he dealt his laws and statutes to Israel, he did not so to any nation, &c.

The Gospel is extended to all the people and nations under the whole heavens: "Go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature," Mark xvi. 15. "Whosoever believeth in him shall not perish but have eternal life," John iii. 16.

XIII. The Gospel excels the law in the easiness and sweetness of it; the precepts of the law were many more in number, and hard to learn and remember, and very difficult and painful some of them to do (particularly circumcision) and also very chargeable beyond what the Gospel is : " My yoke is easy, and my burden is light," Matt. xi. 28, 29.

XIV. The Gospel is glorious above the law in regard of the promises of it, called better promises, better covenant, better hope, Heb. vii. 19.

XV. It is more glorious in respect of its duration ; the law was but for a time. The servant abides not in the house for ever, but the Son abides for ever. An everlasting covenant, an everlasting priesthood, an everlasting Gospel. John viii. 34. No other ministration to be looked for till the end of the world.

Thirdly, The Gospel is glorious in respect of itself. (Here we shall be large.) If we have respect to the historical part, the Gospel contains a glorious history ; there is that in it which may affect every person, please every curiosity ; what is there in any history which may commend or illustrate its glory and excellency which the Gospel comes short in ?

1. Some persons delight to read and hear histories that treat of love, and amorous stories.

2. Some are more affected with such that treat of martial exploits or achievements of wars, of the conquering of kingdoms and nations, and overcoming mighty champions, &c.

3. Some rather commend such histories that treat of those great rarities which are in many nations and kingdoms of the world, and of the cities, laws, customs, and other things of the like nature that are in some countries.

4. Others are more pleased with such histories that treat of things different from all these.

Now the Gospel of Christ contains variety of matter upon every respect ; what is there famous, rare delightful, or marvellous, but it is out-done here ?

First, concerning love ; what history may compare with the Gospel in this respect ? Here you have an account of a mighty King whose dominions, power, and glory was infinite, who was higher than the highest, and ruled over all ; who had but one Son and he most dear to him and lay in his bosom, the joy and delight of his heart, the very express image of the Father ; whose beauty, loveliness of his person, and other personal excellencies and perfection, had we the tongue of men and angels, we could not set forth the thousandth part thereof. This glorious King had a mind to dispose of his Son in marriage, and to this end very easily proposed the matter to him, and whom he had chosen for him. As also the ways, means, and manner how or what he must do in order to obtain her for himself. To which the Son with abundance of joy consented. And so it fell out, that the person agreed upon to be the intended spouse, was once in great favour with this mighty King, and a near dweller to him in Eden : but for horrid rebellion and treason was banished his presence and was fled into a far country. And now there was no way for the glorious Prince to accomplish his business but he must suit himself in a fit equipage, and take a journey into that country where this creature was strayed to.

1. Now were the nature and glory of a kingdom considered, which Jesus Christ left, or the place from whence he came.

2. The greatness of his glory there, and excellency of his Person.

3. The length of the journey he undertook.

4. The nature of that doleful and miserable place or country into which he came.

5. His great abasement or manner of his coming.

6. What he met with, or how entertained at his first arrival.

7. What the quality and condition of the creature was, for whose sake he came.

What he suffered and underwent from the greatness of that precious love he bore to the said creature.

9. And how after all this he was slighted and rejected by this rebellious one, and of his much patience and long-suffering before he took his last denial, together with the powerful arguments and ways he used, and doth use, to obtain the soul's affection. If these things, I say, were considered, this history will appear to every discerning person the most pleasant and glorious for love that ever mortal had. See metaphor Bridegroom.

Secondly, should we speak of warlike achievements, what history in this respect can compare the history of the Gospel? was there ever such a champion as Jesus Christ, or such terrible battles fought as were fought by him? as witness that glorious battle of his with Satan the mighty king of the bottomless pit: also those conflicts he had with sin and wrath in the garden; and last of all with death the king of terrors, over all which he obtained a perfect conquest, Matt. iv. 3, 11.

Thirdly. As touching great rarities and wonderful things, which some histories abound withal; none afford such wonder as doth the Gospel; is it not marvellous that a woman should compass a man? That he that made the world should be born of a woman? That the ancient of days should become a child? That death should be destroyed by death, and many other like mysteries the Gospel abounds with.

Secondly, As the word and Gospel of God is glorious in respect of the historical part thereof, so its glory appears in respect of those titles or epithets given to it.

I. It is called the word of reconciliation.

1. Because it shows how peace and reconciliation is made between an offended God and offending creatures.

2. Because by it terms of reconciliation are offered to poor sinners.

3. Because it is the medium or means God offered to remove the enemy that is in sinners' hearts.

II. It is called the Gospel of the grace of God, and may well be so termed, Acts xx. 24.

1. In respect of the testimony that is borne therein of God's great grace and favour to men in giving Jesus Christ for them.

2. In respect of its being the clearest discovery of God's grace, that ever was afforded to the children of men.

3. Because it is the instrument or means by which God works grace, or makes the souls of men gracious, who were once void thereof and ungodly, so that "Faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the word of God," Rom. v. 17.

4. Because it is the way by which God increaseth, strengthens, and perfects his blessed grace in the souls of his elect, Eph. iv. 12.

III. The Gospel is called the Gospel of peace, Eph. vi. 15.

1. It is a message of peace: "Peace, peace to him that is afar off, and to him that is near." "And came and preached peace to you which were afar off, and to them that were nigh," Isa. lvii. 19, Eph. iii. 17.

2. Because it is that, which being received, alone pacifies the conscience of a wounded sinner, "He sent his word and healed them," Psal. cvii. 20.

3. Because as an instrument it brings the soul into a state of peace and friendship with God, and reconciles men one to another.

IV. It is called "the Gospel of the kingdom," Matt. xxiv. 14.

1. Because it discovers the Gospel Church, which is called often in the holy scripture, "The kingdom of God," Luke x. 11.

2. It shows the way into the kingdom of God.

3. It fits and prepares men and women for Christ's spiritual kingdom, Matt. xi. 12.

4. It contains all the laws, and ordinances, and customs of the kingdom.

5. It enriches all the true and sincere subjects of the kingdom.

6. In it are contained all the privileges and immunities of the kingdom.

7. It shows men the ready way to the kingdom of glory, and from hence may fitly be called the Gospel of the kingdom.

V. The Gospel is called "The word of life," Phil. ii. 16.

1. Because it shows who is our life, Col. iii. 4.

2. It shows the way how we come to be made alive, viz., by Christ receiving the Spirit of life for us, as Mediator, and laying down the price of his own blood; he died that we might live. "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly," John x. 10.

3. The Gospel may be called the word of life, because by the help of the Spirit it works life in us, it is hereby we are quickened, and raised from death to life, "The dead," saith our Saviour, "shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear shall live," John v. 25.

4. It is by the word and Gospel of God life is maintained in us, it is the support of our spiritual life.

"Man lives not by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God," Matt. iv. 4.

5. It leads to eternal life, all those who believe and follow the holy rules and directions thereof.

VI. The Gospel is called "The power of God unto salvation," Rom. i. 16, i. e. a mighty and glorious instrument or means of God's saving power: metalepsis.

VII. The Gospel is called the joyful sound; the law was a sound of fears and terror, a sound or voice of words that were exceeding dreadful. The Gospel is the antitype of the sounding of the trumpet of the great jubilee, to proclaim full liberty and freedom from all bondage and tyranny of sin, Satan, hell, and wrath, Heb. xii. 19, Lev. xxv. 8—10.

VIII. The Gospel is called the unsearchable riches of Christ, Eph. iii. 8.

1. It shows how rich our Mediator and Husband is, "In him are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge," "it pleased the Father that in him all fulness should dwell," Col. ii. 3, and i. 19.

2. It shows the nature of his riches both of grace and glory.

3. The Gospel makes all spiritually and gloriously rich, who truly receive it, though never so poor before, Eph. i. 17, 18, and iii. 16.

4. All true riches are communicated to us through the Gospel, such that would have this golden ore must dig in this mine; this is the field where the pearl lies hid.

IX. The Gospel is called "The Word of faith," Rom. x. 8.

1. It presents the object before the soul.

2. It opens the way to see this object.

3. It gives, by means of the Spirit, a hand to take hold of the object.

X. The Gospel is called the faithful word. Because whatever his promises are, they are faithfully performed, Tit. i. 9.

XI. It is called the ministration of the Spirit, 2 Cor. iii. 9, because through it persons come to receive the Spirit, "Received ye," saith the apostle, "the Spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith," Gal. iii. 2.

XII. It is called the Gospel of salvation.

1. It interesteth the soul, through the Spirit, unto salvation, as well as shows the way of it.

2. There is no other way of salvation but that which is revealed or manifested therein.

XIII. It is called the glorious Gospel of God.

1. The glory of God shines forth in it.

2. It was the glorious contrivance of his eternal wisdom.

3. It wholly exalts God, and sets him forth in all his blessed and most glorious attributes and perfections, beyond what any other ministration whatsoever doth.

XIV. The Gospel is called a book, Rev. xxii. 18.

1. Yea, it is a book by the inspiration of God, as all holy scriptures were. All other books, save the Bible, are human, but this is sacred and divine.

2. There is a blessing pronounced to him that reads this book, Rev. i. 3.

3. And a much greater blessing to him that understands it, and keeps the things therein contained.

4. It is a book of all truth and no error, can that be said of any other book?

5. It is a book ratified and confirmed by wonders.

6. It is a book that all other books point to. Moses points to it, the Prophets point to it, all holy books of godly men point to it.

7. It is a book that all good and godly books are out of.

8. It is a book that hath filled the world with good and profitable books. These things considered, may serve as a sound gradation to set forth the glory of the Gospel and word of God.

Thirdly, To come more directly unto the thing itself to set forth and further illustrate the glory and splendour of the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

1. It is glorious in respect of the time and contrivance of it. It was found out or contrived before the world began. Hence Christ is said to be a Lamb slain before the foundation of the world.

2. It is brought in as a result of that great and glorious council which was held in eternity. Hence Jesus Christ our Mediator is said to be delivered up by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God—God, that is Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, all agreed that the second Person should assume man's nature, and by shedding of his blood proclaim peace and reconciliation to sinners. "The counsel of peace," saith the Prophet, "shall be between them both," Zech.

3. It may not be unnecessary to note here the matter this great council had before them, and did then debate about, and that was how a way might be found out that God might display his own glory and magnify himself in every one of his glorious attributes, particularly how the two great attributes of justice and mercy, might meet together in sweet harmony and shine in equal glory, that God who is just might appear so, and yet be exceeding gracious.

4. It was to find out a way how in a glorious manner God might destroy the works and designs of the devil: for to this purpose we read, the Son of God was manifested.

5. It was a council held upon the account of sinful man, lost man, (whom God then saw dead and fallen) how he might be delivered from sin and eternal wrath; it was not a council held to ruin and destroy men, but to save and make them happy, This is the third thing to illustrate this great truth that the Gospel or word of Christ is a glorious Gospel.

Fourthly, The Gospel is glorious upon the consideration of that revelation there is in it of God, personally considered, or the Persons of the blessed Trinity, or God's manner of being.

1. Though God be often called a Father in the Old Testament, yet how hard is it without the help of the Gospel to find out where he is so called or taken in distinction from the Son and Holy Spirit. Since the Father, as many divines observe, in some places of scripture respects all the three Persons, and hence the Jewish Rabbies, who allow not of the New Testament, manifestly declare their ignorance touching this great truth of the Trinity, though that may in part be imputed to that judicial blindness they are left under, yet it must be granted there is in the Gospel a more clear and full discovery of this glorious mystery than in the law, or Old Testament, how plainly and by manifest testimony is this borne witness to.

1. By the angels, Luke i. 32.

2. By that voice from the excellent glory, Matt. iii. 17, 2 Pet. i. 17.

3. By the testimony of Christ himself. "I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth—even so Father—the Father that sent me is with me—the Father loveth the Son—the Father hath not left me alone—I and my Father are one;" and it is observed that he calls God Father near a hundred times in the Gospel of John.

4. By the testimony of the holy apostles, how clearly is this witnessed by them, especially the blessed beloved apostle, and Paul the great apostle of the Gentiles!

Fifthly, The Gospel appears yet to be more glorious upon the consideration of the glory of every one of the Persons in the blessed Trinity which shine forth most excellently therein.

1. In respect of the Father, who did not design to avail his own glory, but to greatness and magnify it by the Gospel. For though the Lord Jesus be held forth in the Gospel as touching his Deity to be equal with the Father, yet this doth not, must not, lessen or diminish the Father's glory; all are to honour the Son as they honour the Father, but not above the Father, nay, what can or ever did demonstrate or greatness the honour which is due to God the Father, like the honour and adoration ascribed and given to him by the Lord Jesus as Mediator? O how did he strain to set out and promote the glory of God the Father; "My doctrine is not mine, but the Father's that sent me." "As the living Father sent me, and I live by the Father," &c. "My Father is greater than I, I honour my Father, but ye dishonour me, for I have not spoken of myself, but the Father which sent me, he giveth me commandment what I should say, and what I should speak," John vi. 57, xiv. 28, and xii. 49.

Quest. Where doth the Gospel manifest the Father's glory?

Ans. The Father's glory shines forth therein to admiration, in respect to his infinite grace, love, and rich bounty to poor perishing men.

1. What relief, succour, and saving benefit any sinners do receive in this world, or have the promise of receiving in the world to come, the Gospel wholly ascribes it in the first place to God the Father; his compassion, his bowels, and his love and bounty, are set forth in the Gospel to be such to his poor creatures, that no tongue is able to express it. He is great and glorious; Alexander is said to give like himself, be sure the Father hath out-done him and Araunah too. He gives not to kings, but like a king, yea like the King of kings, he is wonderful, in grace and rich bounty, he is wonderful.

II. Consider, what it is he hath given, what he hath parted with for and to poor sinners; has he not parted with his choicest jewel, his best and choicest treasure? "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him might not perish but have everlasting life," John iii. 16.

If it had been a servant, his Noah, his Abraham, his Moses, his David, his grace and bounty had been great: but, alas, they could not redeem us, none were found worthy to open the book nor loose the seals thereof, amongst all the children of men or saints of God that ever lived.

Or had it been an angel, one of the glorious Seraphims or Cherubims, the favour had been unspeakable, considering what we were: but to think it was and must be his Son; his only begotten Son that lay in his bosom, his dearly and well-beloved Son in whom he was well pleased, a Son that never offended, a glorious Son, the joy and delight of his heart.

III. Consider, whither he sent this his dear Son, and wherefore.

1. He sent him into the world.
2. Into a sad world, a strange country where he was not known.
3. He sent him amongst enemies, amongst wicked men, such as hated him and his Father.
4. Nay amongst devils.
5. He sent him to be abused, he was vilified, contemned, and spit upon, "He was despised and rejected of men," Isa. liii. 3.
6. Nay he sent him to die, to pour forth his soul to death, to become a ransom for many, he commanded him to lay down his life, John x. 8.

IV. Consider for whose sake he sent him to suffer all this.

1. Was it for his friends, such that he was beholden to?
2. Or was it for some dear relation?
3. Or was it for some worthy or deserving creature that had merited such favour and grace from him?

No, it was for such that were his enemies, who deserved nothing but hell and eternal wrath for ever.

V. And lastly, consider, what was his great and glorious design in all this.

1. Which was to make peace, "God was in Christ reconciling the world to himself," 2 Cor. v. 19.
2. To espouse and marry poor sinners to himself for ever.
3. To convey a gracious and legal pardon to them, and to wash them from their sins in the blood of his everlasting covenant, Acts v. 21, Rev. i. 5.
4. To bestow the blessing of adoption upon them, i. e., to make such his own children by favour and grace who were his enemies and children of wrath by nature, 1 John iii. 1.

5. To purchase a kingdom for them.

6. To save them from eternal wrath and death, and to bestow upon them eternal life.

And thus the glorious mercy of God the Father shines forth in the Gospel; for these things fully set forth that the Father is gracious. And in the next place let me speak a little of his justice also, for his glorious justice as well as mercy shines forth in the Gospel.

First, it must be considered that justice as well as mercy is in God, as his mercy is infinite, so is his justice, Exod. xxxiv. 7.

Secondly, it must be granted also that justice was injured by the fall and sin of man, and called for satisfaction, which was signified, 1. By the execution of the sentence pronounced upon the account of man's disobedience. 2. By turning him out of the garden. 3. By the flaming sword. 4. By the law upon Mount Sinai. 5. By many severe expressions and fearful threatenings mentioned in the holy Scriptures, "God is angry with the wicked every day," his soul loathed them, "He has whet his sword," &c., Psal. vii. 11, Zech. xi. 8.

Thirdly, in the next place consider justice must be satisfied or we must be damned, that God will not save in a way of mercy to the wronging of his justice.

Fourthly, it behoveth us therefore to know what will satisfy God's justice and appease his wrath. And, indeed nothing less will do this than perfect and complete obedience to the law for the time to come, and a plenary compensation for the wrong done in time past. Thou must be holy, pure, without sin in thine own person, or have such a righteousness by faith imputed to thee.

What will the sinner now do? May be he will say, I will cast myself upon the mercy of God, that is thy only way, but if thou hast not an eye to the atonement and satisfaction made by Christ Jesus, thou wilt perish notwithstanding; for he that said he was gracious, abundant in goodness and truth, said also he would by no means quit the guilty. Exod. xxxiv. 7, 8.

The Gospel shows God's wrath must be appeased, and that it must be appeased by sacrifices, but should we sacrifice 1000 rams or 10,000 rivers of oil; nay, do as the Gentiles did, sacrifice our children, or cause them to pass through the fire as the Jews did to Moloch, and give the fruit of our body for the sin of our soul, it will not be accepted.

And as a child cannot by being sacrificed, make an atonement for sin, neither can any man's brother do it for him, "They that trust in their wealth and boast themselves in the multitude of their riches: none of them can by any means redeem his brother, nor give to God a ransom for him; for the redemption of their soul is precious," &c., Psal. xlix. 7, 8.

What will the sinner now say, or what course take, that he may please God, pacify his wrath and be saved? may be he will say, I will reform, I will amend my life: this is good, but alas it will not do: because thou owest ten thousand talents. Will promising, nay endeavouring, to run more in debt pay off the old score? Well saith the sinner, if it be so, I will repent and mourn for my sins and pour forth tears before God, and see if that will do. Alas! shouldst thou weep rivers of tears, nay, couldst thou weep rivers of blood, and nothing but weep as long as thou livest on earth, yet this will not satisfy the justice of God, nor make a compensation for thy iniquity, this shows God is just indeed: and thus glorious justice shines forth in the Gospel.

And now to satisfy divine justice, Jesus Christ, as the act of mercy is constituted and appointed by the great God to be our Surety, who entered into a covenant to pay all, and discharge such sinners who shall believe on him: and that there is no pardon nor salvation but by this way, viz., by Christ.

- (1.) I shall show.
- (2.) Show why salvation is by Christ Jesus.
- (3.) Answer an objection.

I. That it is so, see Acts iv. 12, where the Apostle Peter speaking of Jesus Christ saith, "Neither is there salvation in any other, for there is no other name under heaven given whereby we can be saved." Compared with Acts xiii. 38, Heb. x. 5: but further to demonstrate it must be so.

1. Because Christ is said to bear our sins, that is, he was constituted and placed by the Father as Mediator in our room to bear the punishment due to us for our iniquities, Isa. liii. 4, 5, 6, 1 Pet. ii. 24.

2. Because the scripture saith, without shedding of blood there is no remission, and that no other blood would do but the blood of this immaculate Lamb, Heb. ix. 22.

3. Because Christ is said to make peace, reconcile and bring us near to God by his blood, Eph. ii. 13—15.

4. Because we are said to be bought with a price, or redeemed and purchased by the Lord Jesus, "The Son of Man came not to be ministered to, but to minister; and to give his life a ransom for many," 1 Cor. vi. 20, 1 Pet. i. 18, 19, Matt. xx. 28.

5. Because our acceptance with God is through Christ, wherein he has made us accepted in the beloved, and this is through the imputation of Christ's righteousness, Acts xx. 27.

God imputeth not our sins to us, they are laid upon another, viz., our Surety, "He was made sin for us, who knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him," Eph. i. 6, Isa. xlv. 24, 2 Cor. v. 20.

6. Because it is said there is no salvation but in and through him, and all that we receive, whether grace here or glory hereafter is for his sake.

Quest. Why is salvation by Jesus Christ, and by the shedding of his blood?

Ans. 1. Because of the absolute purpose and decree of God, God has decreed this way and no other way to save sinners, Acts iv. 12, 1 John ii. 12.

2. I might show the necessity of salvation by Christ from the nature of sin which men stood charged with; sin is so contrary to God he could do no less than require the satisfaction of his own offended justice.

3. In respect of the law, perfect righteousness being required of man in point of justification.

4. Salvation came in this way that God might be glorified in every attribute, and eternal life be "wholly God's free grace, through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, Rom. iii. 24, 25.

Quest. How can we be said to be freely forgiven our sins in a way of grace and favour, if Christ hath made a full compensation to the justice of God for them.

Ans. It is wholly of grace, though not without atonement and redemption made by Christ's blood, which might be made appear many ways.

1. In that God is so gracious as not to require satisfaction of us, and to impute our trespasses to us, 2 Cor. v. 19.

2. Because God was at his own free choice whether he would bring forth a Saviour for us or not.

3. Because the Surety is wholly of his own providing, and nothing but his love and precious grace moved him to send him into the world, 1 John iv. 14.

Moreover it is further demonstrated by God's gracious acceptance of this satisfaction for us and not for others; for though there be a worth and sufficiency in it for all, yet it is only made effectual unto them, for whom it was intended or appointed by that glorious agreement or compact between the Father and the Son in eternity, John iii. 16.

5. It is further manifest also in respect of God's gracious goodness, in affording us the knowledge of this blessed atonement; there is an absolute necessity of faith in order to a sure interest into this salvation, and faith comes by hearing the word preached; had not God afforded us the Gospel, we should have known no more of this glorious mystery of redemption, nor had any more faith than Pagans and Infidels, Rom. x. 14, 17, Eph. iii. 4, 5, Gal. i. 14, 15.

6. It appears to be wholly of God's free grace; upon the consideration of God's working those meet qualifications in order to pardon and salvation, viz., it is he that gives a broken heart and repentance; it is he that works faith in us, and by whom we are begotten to a lively hope.

7. Lastly, It is of his own free grace, in that he parted with and spared not his own dear Son rather than we should die in our sins, who could not fail nor be discouraged, but was every way capable to accomplish the work of salvation for us, Isa. xlii. 4.

1. He was a Person holy and undefiled, yea, without the least stain or spot of sin.

2. He was one that was free and could dispose of himself to be a Surety and Sacrifice for others.

3. He consented and agreed with the Father to undertake this glorious work and office, Heb. x. 7.

4. He was able to overcome all difficulties and thereby fully discharge the sinner.

5. One so glorious in nature, that from the excellency and worth of his Person satisfaction comes to be received. Thus the Gospel appears glorious as it makes manifest, and does reveal the glory of God the Father.

First, I shall show you the Gospel is glorious as it discovers and holds forth the glory of the Lord Jesus Christ, the second Person of the Trinity.

1. The Gospel reveals the Son clearly who was long prophesied of and pointed at, and that more principally in five respects.

(1.) In respect of his glorious Person.

(2.) In respect of his glorious offices, as Mediator.

(3.) In respect of his glorious love.

(4.) In respect of his glorious riches.

(5.) In respect of his glorious power, Headship, and sovereignty.

The Gospel is glorious in respect of the chief subject thereof, Jesus Christ.

And first in respect of the excellency of his Person; which had I the tongue of men and angels, I could not declare the hundredth part thereof; so far doth he excel in personal excellencies and perfections the children of men, what can one think of Christ, speak of Christ, hear of Christ, or read in the holy scripture of Christ, but may affect our hearts? the Gospel is a glorious subject, but it is Christ who is the glorious subject of the Gospel: as all we have flows from or through the Gospel to us, so all the Gospel hath in it, flows from Christ. That he is excellent and glorious in this respect is expressly declared in the holy scriptures, "Thou art more excellent," saith the Psalmist, speaking of Christ, "than the mountains of prey." And in another place, "Thou art fairer than the children of men, or sons of Adam, grace is poured into thy lips." "My beloved is white and ruddy, the chiefest among ten thousand, he is altogether lovely." "He is the brightness of the Father's glory, and the express image of his Person," Psal. lxxvi. 4, and xlv. 2, Cant. v. 10, 16, Heb. i. 3.

That his glory is very great, might be demonstrated by two or three arguments.

1. Because he is the object of the Father's delight, nay, the Father himself commends his beauty and glory to the children of men.

2. Because, in that the holy angels are taken with him, the angels stand and wonder, "He was seen of angels," such a person they never beheld before, and they worship him, 1 Tim. iii. 16.

3. Because saints and all truly enlightened souls do admire him, and know not how to set him forth, Paul "accounted all things loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ," Phil. iii. 8.

4. He is called the desire of all nations.

1. There is enough in him to fill the desire of all nations.

2. None ever in any nation that had a true sight of him but did desire him.

3. The nations will never be satisfied until they have and do enjoy him, and are under the influences of his glorious grace and government.

4. Because there never were any who saw his glory but did admire it.

Quest. Wherein do his personal excellencies consist?

Ans. In his being man, such a man, "There is one God, and one Mediator between God and man, The Man Christ Jesus:" 1 Tim. iii. 5, compared with Acts ii. 22, Heb. vii. 24, 1 Tim. iii. 5.

Quest. What a man is Christ?

Ans. A Man of men, the Son of Man, a Man without spot, fault, or stain of sin, the excellency of human nature, made like unto us in all things, sin only excepted.

He is not only glorious in respect of his being Man, such a Man, but in respect of his being God also, in this he excels! Oh here, in this his glory shines forth as the Light ; " the Spirit shall come upon thee, and the power of the highest shall overshadow thee : therefore also that holy thing that shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God," Luke i. 35.

1. He is called God, " But unto the Son he saith, thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever," &c. Heb. i. 8.

2. Not only God, the mighty God ; " His name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the mighty God, the everlasting Father," &c. Isa. ix. 6.

3. Not only God, the mighty God, but also the true God ; And we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jesus Christ, this is the true God and eternal life," 1 John v. 20.

4. He is called the only wise God.

Lastly. He is called God blessed for ever, " Whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is God blessed for ever, Amen," Rom. ix. 5.

Secondly, The Gospel declares that he made the world, this proves that Christ is God and greatly magnifies his glory, he that made the world must needs be God eternal, for none could do that but the glorious Jehovah ; it is ridiculous and most absurd to think that the creature could make itself before itself was. God in respect of his infinite glory and wisdom upon this account expostulated and reasoneth with his people, glorying if I may so say, in the greatness of his power and majesty, and thereby proving his ineffable essence and dreadful Godhead, Isa. xl., and all the gods of these nations to be but idols, and that the same power in respect to creating, which is ascribed to the Father, is attributed to Jesus Christ. See John i. 1, 2. " For by him were all things created that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible," Col. i. 16, &c., compared with Heb. ii. 10.

Thirdly, The Gospel shows that Jesus Christ did not only create, but also doth uphold all things that are created, " Who being the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his Person, and upholding all things by the word of his power, when he had by himself purged our sins, sat down on the right-hand of the majesty on high," &c. " He is before all things, and by him all things consist," Col. i. 17.

Fourthly, The Gospel shows that Jesus Christ knows all things, such knowledge is too wonderful for men or angels. In several places of scripture, the blessed God doth prove his glorious Being by his omniscieny, and that the like in respect of knowledge is said of Christ, is evident, " And he said unto him, Lord thou knowest all things," John xxi. 17 ; compared with John ii. 24, 25, " But Jesus did not commit himself unto them because he knew all men, and needeth not that any should testify of him, for he knew what was in man ;" in another place it is said, he knew from the beginning who they were that believed not, and who should betray him.

Fifthly, The Gospel declares that Jesus Christ searches the heart ; (though this argument depends upon the last, yet for illustration sake I make another of it) he that searches the heart, ought to be acknowledged and owned to be the Almighty and eternal God, for who can find out the depths and deceits thereof but the infinite Majesty ? " The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked, who can know it ? I the Lord search the heart and try the reins," Jer. xvii. 9, 10 ; as if he should say, there is none, save myself alone knoweth or can know it ; but that the Lord Jesus who died for our sins " searcheth the heart and reins," he himself positively asserts it, Rev. ii. 23, " I will kill her children with death (speaking of the woman Jezebel) and all the churches shall know that I am he which searcheth the reins and the heart, and will give unto every one according as his work shall be."

Sixthly, The Gospel shows that Jesus Christ is the first and the last, and he that is the first and the last, must of necessity be acknowledged to be the everlasting and eternal God, for from this very ground and consideration the Almighty argues and reasons with his people of old to convince them of his Deity, and that there is no other God besides himself, " I am the first, and I am the last, and besides me there is no God," Isa. xlv. 6, compared with Isa. xlviii. 12, " Hearken unto me O Jacob, Israel my called, I am he, I am the first and I am the last," &c. And that the same is spoken of the Lord Jesus Christ ; see Rev. i. 8. " I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and ending, which is, and which was, and which is to come, the Almighty." Ver. 17, " And when I saw him, (saith John) I fell at his feet, and he laid his right-hand upon me, saying, I am the first and the last."

Seventhly, The Gospel declares that spiritual worship or divine adoration, doth appertain or belong to Jesus Christ, which proves undeniably he is God eternal and from everlasting; for that it is idolatry spiritually, to adore and worship a creature. That Christ was and ought to be worshipped with the same worship that is due to the Father; see Matt. viii. 2, and xxviii. 17, Luke xxiv. 52, John ix. 28, and v. 33. "And again, when he bringeth his first-begotten into the world, he saith, and let all the angels of God worship him."

Eighthly, The Gospel shows Jesus Christ hath power to forgive sins; none have power to forgive sins but God. Ergo, Jesus Christ is God, Matt. ix. 1, 2, 5, 6, Mark iii. 5, 6, Luke v. 21, Rom. x. 9, 12, 1 Cor. i. 2, John ii. 19, 21, and x. 18, Phil. ii. 5, 6, 7, Heb. xii. 2, Matt. iii. 11, Mark i. 4, Eph. iv. 8, 11.

Ninthly, He to whom the saints ought and do pray, is the most high God; but the Gospel shows the saints do and ought to pray to the Lord Jesus Christ, therefore he is the most high God.

Tenthly, The Gospel shows that Jesus Christ had not only power to lay down his own life, but also to take it up again, "Destroy this temple and in three days I will raise it up again, but he spake of the temple of his body." This proves clearly his divinity, for who besides him that was God could give resurrection to himself.

Eleventhly, He that was in the form of God, and thought it no robbery to be equal with God, and whom the scripture calls God's fellow, must needs be God blessed for ever: but Jesus Christ was in the form of God, and thought it no robbery to be equal with God, and is called God's fellow, therefore he is God.

Twelfthly, He that is the object, author and finisher of the true believer's faith, is God eternal, blessed for ever, Amen. But Christ is the object, author and finisher of true believers' faith, Ergo.

Thirteenthly, He that hath power to baptize with, and give the Holy Spirit, and the saving graces thereof, is God. But the Lord Jesus Christ hath power to baptize with and give the Holy Spirit, Ergo. "He shall baptize you with the Holy Spirit and fire." "When he ascended up on high, he gave gifts to men," &c.

Fourteenthly, He who can in his own name, and by his own power and authority, give power or privilege to others to become the sons of God, must needs be God. But the Gospel shows that this power the Lord Jesus Christ hath, Ergo—"He came unto his own and his own received him not, but as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believed in his name," John i. 11, 12. He adopts, regenerates, and makes men and women God's children by the effectual workings of his own blessed Spirit in their hearts, by which they are interested into all the privileges, promises, and blessings of the covenant of grace, which none can do but God alone.

Fifteenthly, He that is the believer's life is God; but Jesus Christ is the believer's life: therefore God, Deut. xxx. 20.

Sixteenthly, He that is omnipresent must be God: but the gospel shows the Lord Jesus is omnipresent; who can go out of Christ's presence? "Lo, I am with you always to the end of the world," Col. iii. 4, Matt. xxviii. 20.

Seventeenthly, He that sees all things, or before whom all things are naked and bare, and hears all the cries and prayers of his people in what place or corner of the earth soever they live; is God. But all this the Gospel shows to be true of the Lord Jesus Christ: Ergo. * John i. 48, Acts ix. 11.

Eighteenthly, He that is the Saviour of all the elect and chosen people of the Lord, is God: but Jesus Christ is the Saviour of all such and therefore God. How often is he called our Saviour, "Neither is there salvation in any other." "His name shall be called Jesus." Acts iv. 12.

Nineteenthly, He that can and will raise the dead by his own power at the last day, is God. But Jesus Christ will raise the dead by his own power at the last day; Ergo, "No man can come to me except the Father which hath sent me, draw him, and I will raise him up the last day. Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming in which all that are in the grave, shall hear his voice and shall come forth," &c. John vi. 44, and v. 28.

* Bernardus non vidit omnia.

Thus we have briefly showed the Gospel is glorious in respect of the revelation that is made therein of the Lord Jesus.

First, In respect of the excellency of his Person, which we have showed appears by his being man.

Secondly, By his being God, which has been evinced.

Thirdly, His glory and excellency consisteth in his being both God and man ; truly man and truly God in one Person. Can heaven and earth make a lovely and an admirable beauty ? O then Christ is he.

He is David's Root, and David's Offspring ; David's Lord, and David's Son. See metaphor Branch and Root.

Quest. What kind of beauty and perfections, is the beauty and are the perfections of our Lord Jesus Christ ?

Ans. You have heard it is the beauty of God ; the beauty of man, the perfection of those beauties, which are in God and man, But to answer this question more distinctly ;

1. He is the original of all beauties and perfections of beauty, that is in angels, the soul, the body, the face of a man, the sun, the stars, the firmament, &c.

2. His beauty is a desirable beauty, "Saw ye him whom my soul loveth," "With my soul have I desired thee in the night," Isa. xxvi. 9. "One thing have I desired of the Lord, and that will I seek after : that I may dwell in the house of the Lord for ever, that I may behold the beauty of the Lord, and enquire in his temple," Psal. xxvii. 4. And hence he is called the desire of all nations.

3. It is a holy and chaste beauty, there is no snare nor pollution in it ; Joseph was a beautiful person, but it was attended with a snare, here you may look, and love, and fear no danger.

4. It is a real beauty, not a seeming beauty, a paint on a wall. What is human beauty to the beauty of the Son of God ? Prov. xxxi. 30.

5. Christ's beauty is a soul engaging beauty, how did it make Moses to leave all, Peter and John leave all ! Whoever saw him and could forbear to love him, neglect all and follow him ?

6. It is a communicative beauty, he can transmit his beauty to the making others beautiful, "And thy renown went forth among the Heathen for thy beauty, for it was perfect through the comeliness which I put upon thee," &c., Ezek. xvi. 14.

8. It is a satisfying and delightful beauty, it fills and contents each soul to the full who beholds it.

8. It is a mystical and hidden beauty, carnal eyes cannot see it, they behold no beauty nor comeliness in him to desire him, Isa. liii. 2.

9. It is an admirable and wonderful beauty : angels in heaven, and saints on earth, are amazed and astonished at the sight thereof.

10. It is a lasting and never-fading beauty : the beauty of mortals is like a flower which withereth and passeth away in a moment.

"You gentle youths whose cluster breasts do beat
With pleasing raptures, and love's gen'rous heat :
And virgins kind, from whose unguarded eyes
Passion oft steals your hearts by fond surprise :
Behold the object, this alone is he !
Ah none like Christ did ever mortals see !
He is all fair ; in him's not one ill feature :
Ten thousand times more fair than any creature,
That lives, or ever lived on the earth,
His beauty so amazingly shines forth.
Angelic nature is enamour'd so,
They love him dearly, and admire him too.
His head is like unto the purest gold ;
His curled tresses lovely to behold.
And such a brightness sparkles from his eyes,
As when Aurora gilds the morning skies :

And though so bright, yet pleasant like the doves;
 Charming all hearts, where rest diviner loves.
 Look on his beauteous cheeks, and thou wilt spy,
 The Rose of Sharon deck'd in royalty.
 His smiling lips, his speech, and words so sweet,
 That all delights and joy in them do meet.
 Which tend at once to ravish ear and sight,
 And to kiss all heavenly souls invite.
 The image of his Father's in his face:
 His inward parts excel, he's full of grace.
 If heav'n and earth can make a rare complexion,
 Without a spot, or the least imperfection;
 Here, here it is; it in this Prince doth shine:
 He's altogether lovely, all divine.
 If you his beauty saw, his riches weigh;
 'Twill charm your eyes, your best affections sway,
 And in dark minds Light up eternal day.
 He's fairer than all others; beauty such,
 As none can be enamour'd of too much.
 This object choose, yield him a holy kiss
 That thou at last may'st sing, raptur'd in bliss,
 My well-beloved's mine, and I am his.

}

}

Secondly. Christ is glorious in respect of his offices as Mediator. See Mediator; also King, Priest, and Prophet.

Thirdly. As the Gospel is glorious upon the consideration of the revelation or discovery which is made therein of Jesus Christ, in respect of the excellency of his Person and perfections, so likewise it is glorious as it reveals or makes known his glorious love to the children of men.

Christ's love held forth in the Gospel is glorious love.

1. From the earliness of it, he loved us from everlasting. "We love him because he first loved us." He loved us when we had no love to him; nay, when we were his enemies and hated him, 1 John iv. 19.

2. Christ's love is a glorious love upon account of the freeness of it, there was no constraint laid upon him to fix his eye upon fallen man, the soul is Christ's own free and voluntary choice, and he doth not begrudge us his love, he doth not think he is too high, too rich, too honourable, or too good for poor sinners, Hos. xiv. 4.

3. Christ's love held forth in the Gospel is a glorious love, in that it is a drawing, engaging, or attracting love, it is like Elijah's mantle which he cast upon Elisha; Christ's love hath a kind of compulsion in it, not by violence but by sweet influence, Hos. xi. 3, 1 John iv. 19, 1 Kings xix. 20.

4. Christ's love held forth in the Gospel is a glorious love, in that it is an undeserved love, an unmerited love. Where is the soul that can say it deserves Christ's love? some will say, O such a person is worthy, she deserves and merits your love, but it cannot be said so here, Luke xiv. 23.

5. Christ's love held forth in the Gospel is a glorious love, in respect of the strength of it; what Solomon speaks of love, is true in respect of Christ, His love is stronger than death," Cant. viii. 6.

1. Consider from whence it brought him.

2. Consider whither it brought him.

3. Consider how it stript him and disrobed him.

4. Consider what he endured and underwent, as the effect of his great love and affection.

5. Christ's love held forth in the Gospel is a glorious love, because it is a matchless love, it is wonderful, it is so deep no finding of a bottom, so long no measuring of it, none ever loved, as Christ loved us, "He hath loved us and washed us from our sins in his own blood," Eph. iii. 17, 18, 19. Rev. i. 5.

6. Christ's love is a glorious love, in that it is a conjugal or an espousal love, Christ loves not as a master loves his servant, nor (only) as the father loves his dear child, but as a bridegroom his spouse, the choice and delight of his heart, or as a man loves his dear wife.

7. Christ's love held forth in the Gospel is a glorious love, in that it is an abiding and eternal love, nothing can separate the soul from Christ's love; "Having loved his own that were in the world, he loved them unto the end," Rom. viii. 35, John xiii. 1.

8. Christ's love is a glorious love, because it is a love of complacency, he takes delight in his love, and in the soul beloved. Christ loves all men with a love of pity, but he loveth his elect with a love of complacency.

9. Christ's love held forth in the Gospel is glorious love, because it draws forth or doth beget glorious love in the soul to him; the love which is in us to him, is but the glorious effect of his love to us. It makes us to love him so as to admire him, not being able to set his worth and excellency forth: glorious love causeth a longing and languishing until the soul enjoy Christ, it is with the soul as it was with Ahab touching Naboth's vineyard. Christ runs much in the mind and thought of such; yea, and it makes them willing to go through hardships and difficulties for him as Jacob did for Rachel; such will abide with Christ in adversity as Jonathan did with David, it carries the soul to love Christ above all other things, Cant. v. 16.

Glorious love is attended with fruit, "Simon son of Jonah lovest thou me more than these? Feed my sheep."—"If you love me, keep my commandments," John xx. 16, xiv. 15.

Such delight in Christ's presence, and greatly prize every token of his divine love and grace, and mourn at Christ's absence, nothing will comfort if Christ be gone. Glorious love leads the soul to visit Christ often, and to love them that he loves, and long to look for his appearing.

Thirdly, The Gospel is glorious in respect of the glorious subject of it, viz., Jesus Christ upon the consideration of the discovery there is made therein of his glorious riches. 1. The Gospel shows that Christ is rich. 2. In what respect he is rich. 3. That he is gloriously rich; it also reveals why he is held forth to be so rich.

1. Riches imply plenty, and plenty of good things, whether it lie in money, lands, houses, wares, &c.; he that hath abundance of either, having absolute property in them, is accounted rich. In Christ are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge, Col. ii. 3.

1. Christ is rich in wisdom.

2. Christ is rich in grace, Eph. i. 7.

3. Christ is rich in goodness, Rom. ii. 4.

4. Christ is rich in glory, Eph. i. 18, and iii. 16.

Quest. How did Christ come by his riches?

Ans. 1. He was rich from eternity, he is God, and so all things in heaven and earth are his, "All things that the Father hath, are mine," saith Christ, John xvi. 15.

2. He is rich as Mediator; "So it pleased the Father that in him all fulness should dwell," "he was made heir of all things," Heb. i. 2.

3. The Gospel shows the Father hath given all things to him, he came by them as the free donation of the Father, Matt. xxviii. 18, John. xiii. 3.

4. Christ obtained his riches also by conquest, he has recovered them for us by overcoming his and our enemies, all the riches Christ hath as Mediator, he got by conquest, as Israel got Canaan; sin and Satan, those spiritual thieves had robbed us of our riches, but Jesus Christ hath rescued or recovered them again out of the hands of these robbers.

5. Christ, as the Gospel shows, hath obtained his riches by purchase, grace is purchased, gifts are purchased, glory is purchased, the Church which is called his inheritance is purchased, heaven is purchased, Eph. iv. 8, and i. 14, Psal. lxxviii. 54, Acts. xx. 27.

Quest. How do you make it appear that Jesus Christ is gloriously rich?

Ans. 1. Because he had enough to pay all our debts, yet never a one of us owed less than ten thousand talents, Matt. xviii. 24.

2. Christ's riches were glorious riches, because they will satisfy glorious justice, which no other riches could do, no, not the riches of ten thousand worlds, nor all the worth and riches of the angels of heaven.

3. Because he provides for and maintains all in heaven and earth at his own charges, and as all have their beings from him, so likewise they are fed and sustained by him, they all eat at his table, none keeps such a house, hath such a family as Christ, he has a good stock, great comings in that thus abundantly layeth out, Psal. civ. 24, Col. i. 16, 17.

4. That Christ's riches are glorious riches, appears in that he hath enriched so many men and women since the world began, and not only so, but also with variety of choice and precious riches. Oh what abundance of souls hath the Lord Jesus enriched, thousands and ten thousands! How many before the law, and under the law and under the Gospel! Who can account or reckon up the number? John declares the number of them that he beheld round about the throne to "be ten thousand times ten thousand, and ten thousands of thousands." Rev. v. 11. How many hath he made great, advanced on high, honoured greatly on earth, bestowed vast treasures upon, how many millions hath he adorned and gloriously decked with jewels, precious stones, and pearls of inestimable value, and yet himself never the poorer.

5. Christ's glorious riches appear in that he is generally rich; rich in all things, all the gold and silver and precious stones in the world are his, he is the proper Proprietor of them, "The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof. The cattle upon a thousand hills." The wool, flax, and oil are his, nay moreover all divine virtues and spiritual gifts are his, he is rich in wisdom and knowledge, in grace and glory.

6. That Christ is gloriously rich, appears in that he has a kingdom, yea, a glorious vast and resplendent kingdom and crown to give to every one of his faithful followers. Every saint shall have a kingdom and crown that fadeth not away; "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life," Rev. ii. 10.

7. Because his riches are of such an excellent nature that they enrich the soul of man; other men may have vast riches, may have store of gold and silver, and other good things, and yet none of these riches can enrich their souls, spiritually they may be poor and miserable notwithstanding their great abundance.

8. That Christ is gloriously rich, appears in that he has enough to enrich all, come who will, thousands and tens of thousands, yea millions of thousands if they come to him, he has riches of grace and glory for them all. Oh! there is abundance, yea, a redundancy of grace and riches in Christ, he is as full of grace as the sea is full of water, or the sun is full of light.

9. Christ is gloriously rich, because his riches are incomparable, in respect of their nature and quality; "Happy is the man (saith Solomon) that findeth wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding, for the merchandize of it is better than the merchandize of silver, and the gain thereof than fine gold; she is more precious than rubies, and all the things thou canst desire are not to be compared unto her," Prov. iii. 13, 14, 15. A little faith though it be but as a grain of mustard-seed is worth more than thrones, crowns, and kingdoms of the earth, one drachm of grace is better than all the gold of Ophir.

10. Christ's riches are glorious riches, because they cannot be spent, Christ's treasury is inexhaustible, it can never be drawn dry, Christ gives abundantly out, but never wastes his stores, nor hath a farthing the less, the riches of Christ are unsearchable. O! the height, the depth, the breadth, and length of Christ's riches! Who can find out the bottom of his rich love and grace, the bottom of his rich wisdom and knowledge? We may well cry out upon this account, with the apostle, "O! the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out!" Rom. xi. 33.

11. Christ's riches are glorious riches, because his riches are harmless, (as a divine will observes) they are riches that will not hurt nor harm the souls of such that possess them, never were any made worse by being spiritually rich. The riches of the world have undone many, they have been as thorns to them, by which they have been pierced through with many sorrows. Many will one day curse the day that ever they had such store of earthly riches; riches are a snare to the possessors, hence Christ saith, it is hard for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of heaven.

12. Christ's riches are glorious riches, because they are satisfying riches. Silver and gold will not satisfy; "He that loveth silver shall not be satisfied with silver, nor he that loveth abundance of increase," Eccl. v. 10. He that has Christ and his riches has enough, nay he has all, he has pardon and peace of conscience; what can he desire more that has God and Christ and a title to heaven. Hence the Scripture saith, he shall abide satisfied; such thirst no more, their inordinate desire after the world is allayed, John iv. 13, 14.

13. Lastly, Christ's riches are glorious riches because they are permanent, they are lasting, yea, everlasting riches. Other riches fly away like smoke, they are here to day and gone in a moment with one spark of fire, or with one blast at sea, but Christ's riches are durable, "Riches and honour are with me, yea, durable riches and righteousness," Prov. viii. 18.

Quest. Thirdly. Why is Christ held forth in the Gospel to be thus gloriously rich?

Answ. 1. That the doubts and scruples that are in sinner's hearts might be removed is there enough in Christ, is there enough grace, enough pardon, enough strength? &c.

2. Because the Gospel holds Christ forth to be the store-house of all divine grace and blessings; he is ordained to convey all spiritual riches to his Church and every member thereof.

3. To allure and engage souls to love him and close in with him; how can any refuse such a friend, reject such a Saviour, that is so beautiful to look upon, and also so exceeding rich?

4. That it might leave all men and women without excuse in the great day: what will they have to say that reject such a Saviour, that turn their backs upon such a Christ, when they are called to answer in the day of judgment?

5. To relieve the tempted soul.

6. To strengthen the faith and cheer the hearts of all that do believe in him.

Fourthly. The Gospel is glorious in respect of Christ, the glorious object of it, as it reveals his glorious power.

Power in scripture is taken in two manner of ways, or it shows a two-fold power in Christ.

1. A commanding power, his power of sovereignty, or regal power, that which we call authority.

2. The power of working or effecting that which he would have done. Some have power to command, but want a power to effect that which they command; cannot accomplish what they would have done, but what Christ commands he can do or cause to be done at his pleasure.

1. I shall show that the power of Christ is a glorious power.

2. Show why Christ hath such power.

I. Christ hath a commanding power, he hath great authority, he hath a regal power of superiority over all.

1. Over angels.

2. Over the Church.

3. Over the devils.

"I will lay upon the shoulders of Eliakim, the keys of the house of David," Isa. xxii. 22. Keys is a borrowed speech signifying government and legal power, Christ hath the keys of David, Rev. iii. 7. All power in rule and government, in commanding, forbidding, punishing, binding, loosing, damning, saving, is in Christ's hand: see Christ the Head, and Heir of all things. Keys of hell and death signifieth Christ's regal power over the devils, and delivering up unto death and hell, or keeping out of it.

4. Over men, mighty men, kings of the earth, "He is the only Potentate, King of kings and Lord of lords," 1 Tim. vi. 15. They are all his subjects, shall and must submit to him. He hath universal power, therefore a glorious power; the sun, the moon, the stars, the winds, the seas obey him, Rev. xix. 17.

Christ's power is absolute, he bears the image of God, he is God; as you heard before. None hath absolute power but God; he doth what he pleaseth.

6. Christ's power is just, therefore glorious in power; it is not a might without right; it is in him essentially as God, and is given to him as Mediator; in the one respect he derived it from none, in the other sense he received it from the Father, Matt. xxviii. 18.

7. Christ's power is infinite; he made the world, he upholds the world, therefore glorious in power. He could have made a thousand worlds, can do beyond all that we can conceive or speak, Eph. i. 21, 22.

8. Christ's power is glorious because he can bring all other power to nought in a moment at his pleasure, whether of man or devils.

9. Christ's power is a glorious power, in that it is an everlasting power. Men may be powerful for a time, but they may soon lose it; must die, and so cannot hold it long, but Christ "Sits King for ever, his power is from everlasting to everlasting, of his kingdom there shall be no end," Psal. cxlv. 13, and lxvi. 5.

10. Christ's power is dreadful, he looketh upon the earth and it trembles, he can make all tremble before him; who can thunder like God? Job xl. 9.

1. He has a glorious commanding voice.

2. A glorious restraining voice, what is swifter than the sun, which he can stop in a moment.

3. Glorious in his reproving voice, Psal. l. 21.

4. In his threatening voice, Rev. ii. 16, 23.

11. He hath a glorious, victorious, conquering, and subduing power; he hath overcome sin, the devil, death, hell, &c.

12. Christ's power is glorious, because nothing is too hard for him to do, nay, nothing is hard for him to do; he can do what he will with a word of his mouth.

13. Christ's power extends not only over the body but over the soul also; works mightily in us as well as for us, and can do wonderful things by weak instruments, by foolish and contemptible ones in the eye of the world. What mighty things did he do by a few poor fishermen, and others not accounted of?

14. Lastly. Nothing is hard for Christ to do, though all the devils of hell, and men on earth oppose and resist him. "I will work and who shall let it?" Isa. xliii. 13.

Quest. Why hath Christ as Mediator such great and glorious power given him?

Ans. 1. For the greatness of his work he is to accomplish.

2. Because no souls, whatsoever discouragements they meet with, should despair in coming to him or in relying upon him.

3. That he might be feared and dreaded by all, yea, that his very enemies might tremble before him.

4. That he might be honoured and adored. Honour belongs to sovereignty.

Thirdly. As the Gospel is glorious in respect of the revelation made therein of God the Father and our Lord Jesus Christ; so likewise in respect of the Holy Ghost; the Gospel shows the Spirit in himself to be a distinct, living, powerful, intelligent, divine Person. Not only a distinct self-subsisting Person, but also a participant of the divine nature, not the chief of all created spirits, and so the head of all good angels, as some imagine, but that he is uncreated, truly and really God, co-eternal with the Father and the Son. This we shall speak of a little with his glorious work of office and operations.

First, the word of God holds forth and positively declares that the Holy Spirit is, in himself, a distinct intelligent divine Person, and which ought to be believed concerning this great truth, viz., the Deity and Personality of the Holy Ghost, may be seen in the ensuing testimonies, according as they are collected to our hands by a revered divine,*

"By the word of the Lord were the heavens made, and all the host of them by the Spirit of his mouth," Psal. xxxiii. 6.

"By his Spirit he hath garnished the heavens," Job xxvi. 13.

"Thou sendest forth thy Spirit, they are created," Psal. civ. 30.

"Baptising them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," Matt. xxviii. 19.

"That scripture must needs have been fulfilled which the Holy Ghost by the mouth of David spake," Acts i. 16.

"Peter said to Ananias, why hath Satan filled thy heart to lie to the Holy Ghost," Acts v. 3. "Thou hast not lied to man but God," verse 4.

"Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you," 1 Cor. iii. 16.

"All these worketh that one and the self-same Spirit, dividing to every man severally as he will. And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which worketh all in all," 1 Cor. xi. 6.

"The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost be with you all," 2 Cor. xiii. 14.

"Take heed to the flock over which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers," Acts xx. 28.

"All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men, but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men," Matt. xii. 31.

"Whither shall I go from thy Spirit?" Psal. cxxxix. 7.

"But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things," John xiv. 26.

"The Holy Ghost shall teach you in the same hour what you ought to say," Luke xii. 12.

"And as they ministered to the Lord and fasted, the Holy Ghost said, separate me Barnabas and Paul for the work whereunto I have called them," Acts xiii. 2.

"They being sent forth by the Holy Spirit departed," &c., verse 4.

"It is evident upon consideration that there is not any thing which we believe concerning the Holy Ghost, but that it is plainly revealed and declared in these testimonies.

"He is directly called God, Acts v. iii., which the Socinians will not say is by virtue of an exaltation unto an office or authority, as they say of the Son; that he is an intelligent, voluntary divine Person, he knoweth, he worketh as he will, which things if in their frequent repetition they are not sufficient to evince an intelligent agent, a personal substance, that hath being, life, and will; we must confess that the scripture was written on purpose to lead us into mistakes and misapprehensions of that we are under penalty of eternal ruin, rightly to apprehend and believe. It declareth also, that he is the Author and Worker of all sorts of divine operations requiring immensity, omnipotency, omniscency, and all other divine excellencies unto their working and effecting. Moreover, it is revealed that he is peculiarly to be believed in, and may be sinned against. Also that he together with the Father and Son created the world, 'The Spirit of God hath made me,' Job xxxiii. 4; that he is the Author of all grace in believers and order in the churches. The sum is, that the Holy Ghost is a divine, distinct Person, and neither merely the power or virtue of God, nor any created Spirit whatsoever. This plainly appears from what is revealed concerning him, for he who is placed in the same series or order with divine Persons, without the least note of difference, or distinction from them as to an interest in personality; who hath the names proper to a divine Person only, and is frequently and directly called by them; who also hath personal properties, and is the voluntary Author of personal divine properties and the proper object of divine worship, he is a distinct divine Person. And if these things be not a sufficient evidence and demonstration of a divine, intelligent substance, I shall, as was said before, despair to understand any thing that is expressed and declared by words. But now thus it is with the Holy Spirit according to the revelation made thereof in the word and Gospel of God."

One consideration which hath in part been before proposed, I shall premise, to free the subject of our argument from ambiguity. And this is, that this word or name Spirit is used sometimes to denote the Spirit of God himself, and sometimes his gifts and graces, the effects of his operation on the souls of men, and this our adversaries in this cause are forced to confess, and thereon in all their writings distinguish between the Holy Spirit and his effects. This alone being supposed, I say it is impossible to prove the Father to be a Person, or the Son to be so, both which are not acknowledged any other way than we may and do prove the Holy Ghost, to be so. For he to whom all personal properties, attributes, adjuncts, acts, and operations are ascribed, and unto whom they do belong, and to whom nothing is or can be truly ascribed, but what may and doth belong unto a person, he is a Person, and him we are taught to believe so to be. So we know the Father to be a Person; as also the Son. For our knowledge of things is more by their properties and operations than by their essential forms, especially is this so with respect to the nature, being, and existence of God, which are in themselves absolutely incomprehensible: now I shall not confirm the assumption of this argument with reference unto the Holy Ghost from this or that particular testimony, nor from the assignation of any single personal property unto him, but from the constant uniform tenor of the scriptures in ascribing all those properties unto him. And we may add hereunto that things are so ordered in the wisdom of God, that there is no personal property that may be found in an infinite, divine nature, but it is in one place or other ascribed unto him.

First, he is placed in the same rank and order without any note of difference or distinction as to a distinct interest in the divine nature, that is, as we shall see, personality, with other divine persons; Matt. xxviii. 12, "Baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." 1 John v. 7, "There be three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost, and these three are one." 1 Cor. xii. 3—6, "No man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost;" "Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit, and there are differences of administrations, but the same Lord, and there are diversities of operation, but it is the same God which worketh in all." Neither doth a denial of his divine being and distinct existence, leave any tolerable sense unto these expressions. For read the words of the first place from the mind of the Socinians, and see what it is can be gathered from them; "Baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the virtue or efficacy of the Father." Can any thing be more absonant from faith and reason, than this absurd expression? And yet it is the direct sense, if it be any, that those men put upon the words. To join a quality with acknowledged persons, and that in such things and cases, as wherein they are proposed under a personal consideration, is a strange kind of mystery, and the like may be manifested concerning the other places.

Secondly, He also hath the names proper to divine persons only. For he is expressly called God, Acts v. He who is termed the Holy Ghost, ver. 3, and the Spirit of the Lord, ver. 9; is called also God, ver. 4. Now this is the name of a divine Person, on one account or other. The Socinians would not allow Christ to be called God, were he not a divine Person, though not by nature, yet by office and authority. And I suppose they will not find out an office for the Holy Ghost whereunto he might be exalted, on the account whereof he might become God, seeing this would acknowledge him to be a Person which they deny. So he is called the Comforter, John xvi. 7. A personal appellation this is also, and because he is the Comforter of all God's people, it can be the name of none but a divine Person. In the same place also it is frequently affirmed that "he shall come, and he shall and will do such and such things," all of them declare him a person.

Thirdly, He hath personal properties assigned unto him, as a will; "He divideth to every man severally as he will," 1 Cor. xii. 11, and understanding, "The Spirit searcheth all things, yea the deep things of God," 1 Cor. ii. 10. As also the actings that are ascribed unto him are all of them such, as undeniably affirm personal properties in their principle and agent. For Fourthly, He is the voluntary Author of divine operations; he of old cherished the creation. "The Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters," Gen. i. 3. He formed and garnished the heavens; he inspired, acted, and spake in and by the prophets. "Well spake the Holy Ghost by Isaiah the prophet unto the fathers," Acts xxviii. 25, 26. "But holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost," 2 Pet. i. 21. He regenerateth, enliveneth, sanctifieth, comforteth, instructeth, leadeth, guideth, all the disciples of Christ, as the scriptures every where testify. Now all these are personal operations, and cannot with any pretence of sobriety or consistency with reason be constantly and uniformly assigned unto a quality or virtue. He is as the Father and Son, God, with the properties of omniscience and omnipotence, of life, understanding, and will; and by these properties, works, acts, and produceth effects according to wisdom, choice, and power.

Fifthly, The same regard is had to him in faith, worship, and obedience, as unto the other Persons of the Father and Son. For our being baptized into his name is our solemn engagement to believe in him, to yield obedience to him, and to worship him, as it puts the same obligation upon us to the Father and the Son. So also in reference unto the worship of the Church, he commands that the ministers of it be separated unto himself. "The Holy Ghost said, separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them," "So they being sent forth by the Holy Ghost departed," Acts xiii. 2, 4. Which is comprehensive of all religious worship of the Church.

And on the same account is he sinned against, as Acts v. 3, 4, 9; for there is the same reason of sin and obedience. Against whom a man may sin formally and ultimately, him is he bound to obey, worship and believe in him. And this can be no quality but God himself, for what may be the sense of this expression, thou hast lied to the efficacy of God in his operations? Or how can we be formally obliged unto obedience to a quality? There must be an antecedent unto faith, trust and religious obedience be supposed as the ground of rendering a person capable of being guilty of sin towards any. For sin is but a failure in faith, obedience, or worship. These therefore are due unto the Holy Ghost; or a man could not sin against him so signally and fatally as some are said to do in the foregoing testimonies.

I say therefore unto this part of our cause, as unto the other, that unless we will cast off all reverence of God, and in a kind of Atheism, (which as I suppose, the prevailing wickedness of this age hath not yet arrived unto) say that the scriptures were written on purpose to deceive us, and to lead us into mistakes about, and misapprehensions of, what it proposeth unto us, we must acknowledge the Holy Ghost to be a substance, a Person, God, yet distinct from the Father, and the Son. For to tell us, that he will be our Comforter, that he will teach us, lead us, guide us, that he spoke of old, in and by the Prophets, that they were moved by him, acted by him, that he searcheth the deep things of God, 1 Cor. ii. 10; works as he will, that he appointeth to himself ministers in the Church: in a word to declare in places innumerable what he hath done, what he doth, what he says and speaks, how he acts and proceeds, what his will is, and to warn us that we grieve him not, sin not against him, with things innumerable of the like nature, and all this while to oblige us to believe that he is not a Person, an Helper, a Comforter, a Searcher, a Willer, but a quality in some especial operations of God or his power and virtue in them, were to distract men, not to instruct them, and leave them no certain conclusion but this, that there is nothing certain in the whole Book of God. And of no other tendency are these and the like imaginations of our adversaries in this matter. Dr. Owen.

Secondly. The Gospel is glorious in respect of the revelation made therein of the Spirit touching his glorious works and operations.

1. The framing, forming, and miraculous conception of the body of our Lord Jesus Christ in the* womb of the blessed Virgin, was the peculiar and special work of the Holy Ghost. This work I acknowledge in respect of designation, and the authoritative disposal of things is ascribed unto the Father, for so the Lord Christ speaketh unto him, "A body hast thou prepared me," Heb. x. 5; but this preparation doth not signify the actual forming and making ready of that body, but the eternal designation of it, as prepared in the council and love of the Father. As to the voluntary assumption, it is ascribed to the Son himself, Heb. ii. 14, "Forasmuch as the children were partakers of flesh and blood, he himself partook of the same." He took unto him a body and soul, entire human nature, as the children or all believers, the same synecdochically expressed by flesh and blood, ver. 16. "He took on him the seed of Abraham." But the immediate divine efficiency in this matter was the peculiar work of the Holy Ghost, Matt. i. 18, "When his mother Mary was espoused to Joseph, before they came together she was found to be with child of the Holy Ghost." Luke i. 35, "The Angel answered and said unto her, the Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God."

* Maximum in tota creatura testimonium de divinitate Spiritus Sancti corpus Domini est; quod ex Spiritu Sancto esse creditur secundum Evangelistam, Matt. i. Sicut Angelus ad Josephum dicit, Quod in ea natus est de Spiritu Sancto est. Athanasius de fid. un. et Trin.

Creatrix virtus altissimi, superveniente Spiritu Sancto in virginem Mariam, Christi Corpus fabricavit; quo ille usus Templo sine viri natus est semine. Didym. de Sp. Sanct. lib. 2.

(1.) The Person working is the Holy Ghost, he is the wonderful Operator in this glorious work, and therein the power of the Most High is exerted. For the power of the Most High is neither explicatory of the former expression, the Holy Ghost: as though he were only the power of the Most High. Nor is it adjoining of a distinct agent or cause unto him, as though the Holy Spirit and the power of the Most High were distinct agents in this matter, only the manner of his effecting this wonderful matter, concerning which the blessed Virgin had made that enquiry, how can this thing be, seeing I know not a man.

"The Holy Ghost," saith the angel, acting in the power of the Most High, or in the infinite power of God, shall accomplish it.

(2.) As the human nature of Christ was formed by the miraculous working of the Holy Ghost, he was hereby formed absolutely innocent, spotless and free from sin, as Adam was in the day he was created.

(3.) The Spirit also—the Gospel shows—in a peculiar manner anointed him with those extraordinary powers and gifts, which were necessary for the exercise and discharge of his office; "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek," &c. Isa. lxi. 1, Luke iv. 18.

4. It was in an especial manner by the power and operation of the Holy Ghost, by which he wrought all those great and miraculous works, by which he attested and confirmed his doctrine. Hence it is said, God wrought miracles by him, "Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God by miracles, wonders and signs which God did by him." He affirmed that what he did, he did by the finger of God; that is, by the infinite power of God; hence these mighty works are called δυνάμεις, powers, because of the power of the Spirit of God put forth for their working and effecting. See Mark vi. 5, Acts ii. 22, Luke xi. 20, and iv. 36.

5. The Lord Jesus was guided, directed, comforted, and supported in the whole course of his ministry, temptations, obedience, and sufferings by the Spirit, he was led thereby into the wilderness presently after he was baptized; the Holy Spirit guided him to begin his contest with Satan. The continuation of discourse in Luke will not admit that any other Spirit can be intended, "and Jesus being full of the Holy Spirit returned from Jordan and was led by the Spirit into the wilderness," namely, by that Spirit which he was full of. And it was by the Spirit's assistance, that he was carried triumphantly through the course of his temptations, in the power of the Spirit he returned ἐν τῇ δυνάμει τοῦ πνεύματος into Galilee, that is, powerfully enabled by the Holy Spirit unto the discharge of his work, Luke iv. 14.*

6. Moreover the Scripture affirms that he offered himself up unto God through the eternal Spirit: some understand by the eternal Spirit in this place is meant the divine nature, his Deity giving sustenance unto his human nature in the sacrifice of himself, in that he had power to lay down his life, and to take it up again; yet many able divines, both ancient and modern, do judge that it is the person of the Holy Ghost that is intended, Heb. ix. 4.†

7. It is also thought by the learned, that the Holy Spirit was eminently concerned in raising him up again from the dead; but we cannot dwell upon that here.

8. The work of the new creation is managed and gloriously carried on by the workings and operations of the Holy Ghost; it is the work and office of the Spirit to make the whole work of the mediation of Christ effectual to the souls of the elect.

9. All those glorious and extraordinary gifts that were poured forth either upon the prophets or apostles were by the operations of the Holy Spirit, 1 Cor. xii.

10. The gift of prophecy, whether ordinary or extraordinary, was always the immediate effect of the operation of the Spirit who inspired the penmen of Holy Scripture, both of the Old and New Testament, in the writing and giving of them forth, and in the opening and explaining of them to the sons of men. "The prophecy came not in old time by the will of man, but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost," 2 Pet. i. 21.

11. The Holy Ghost supplies the bodily absence of Jesus Christ, and by him he doth accomplish all his promises unto his church.

12. As he represents the person and supplies the room, person, and place of Christ, so he worketh and effecteth whatever the Lord Christ hath taken upon himself to work and effect towards his saints; whereas the work of the Son was not his own work, but rather the work of the Father; so the work of the Holy Spirit, is not his own work, but rather the work of the Son, by whom he is sent and in whose name he doth accomplish it. "Howbeit when the Spirit of truth is come, he will guide you into all truth, for he shall not speak of himself, but whatsoever he shall hear that shall he speak, and he will show you things to come. He shall glorify me, for he shall receive of mine and shall show it unto you. All things that the Father hath are mine, therefore I said he shall take of mine and show it unto you," John xvi. 13, 14, 15.

* Dr. Owen.

† Dr. Owen, p. 143.

13. The Holy Spirit is the Spirit of grace, and the immediate efficient cause of all grace and gracious effects in men; wherever there is mention made of them, or any fruits of them, it must be acknowledged as part of his work, though he be not expressly named, &c.

Grace is taken two ways in scripture.

(1.) For the grace, free love, and favour of God towards us.

(2.) For the gracious, free, and effectual operations in us.

In both senses the Holy Spirit is the Author of it as unto us; in the first as to its manifestation and application; in the second as to the operation itself. The nature, excellency, and glory of grace in the latter sense we shall in the next place insist upon.

But since some men in these days as in former times do much eclipse the glory of the Spirit touching the work of grace and operation of the Spirit in regeneration, or the quickening them who are dead in trespasses and sins, in affirming that saving conversion doth principally consist in a moral suasion:

It may not be amiss to add something briefly here in confutation of these men whose principles are in our judgment fairly stated by the Reverend Doctor Owen.*

(1.) They say that God administereth grace unto all in the declaration of the doctrine of the law and Gospel.

(2.) That the reception of this doctrine, the belief and practice thereof, is enforced by promises and threatenings.

(3.) That the things revealed, taught, and commanded are not only good in themselves, but so suited unto the reason and interest of mankind, as that the mind cannot but be disposed and inclined to receive and obey them unless overpowered by prejudice and a course of sin.

(4.) That the consideration of the promises and threatenings of the Gospel is sufficient to remove these prejudices and course of sin.

(5.) That upon a compliance with the doctrine of the Gospel and obedience thereunto, men are made partakers of the Spirit, with other privileges of the New Testament, and have a right unto the promises of the present and future life.

This, saith the Doctor, is a perfect system of Pelagianism. Those that would see his answer hereunto, may read from page 257, to page 286.

That we say this, viz., that mere moral suasion, without powerful influences and divine operations of the Holy Ghost, will not bring a person effectually to believe and close in with Jesus Christ, or work true conversion in the soul, though we always say the power which the Holy Ghost puts forth in regeneration is such in its acting or exercise, as our minds, wills, and affections are suited to be wrought upon and to be affected by, according to their nature and natural operations, "Turn thou me, and I shall be turned," "Draw me, we will run after thee." He doth not act in them otherwise than they themselves are meet to be moved and move, to be acted and act, according to their own natural power and ability. He doth not in our conversion possess the mind with any enthusiastical impression, nor acteth absolutely upon us, as he did in extraordinary prophetic inspirations of old: when the mind and organs of the bodies of men were merely passive instruments moved by the Spirit above their own natural capacity and activity; not only as to the principle of working, but as to the manner of operation. But he works on the minds of men in and by their own natural actings through an immediate influence and impression of his power. "Create in me a clean heart, O God." "He worketh to will and to do." He therefore offers not violence or compulsion unto the will. This, that faculty is not naturally capable to give admission unto. If it be compelled it is destroyed. And the mention that is made in scripture of compelling, ("compel them to come in") respects the certainty of the event, not the manner of the operation on them.

* Dr Owen in his Book, entitled, ΠΙΝΕΥΜΑΤΟΛΟΓΙΑ, or a Discourse of the Spirit, page 256.

But whereas the will in the depraved condition of fallen nature, is not only habitually filled and possessed with an aversion to that which is good spiritually (alienated from God), but also continually acts in opposition unto it, as being under the power of the carnal mind, which is "enmity against God," and whereas this grace of the Spirit in conversion doth prevail against all this opposition, and is effectual and victorious over it; it will be enquired how this can otherwise be done but by a kind of violence and compulsion, seeing that we have evinced already, that moral suasion and objective allurements are not sufficient thereunto.

Ans. It is acknowledged, that in the work of conversion unto God, though not in the very act of it, there is a reaction between grace and the will, their acts being contrary, and that grace is therein victorious; and yet no violence or compulsion is offered unto the will.

1. The opposition is not ad idem. The enmity and opposition that is acted by the will against grace, is against it as objectively proposed unto it. So do men resist the Holy Ghost; that is, in the external dispensation of grace by the word. And if that be alone they may always resist it; the enmity that is in them will prevail against it, "Ye always resist the Holy Ghost."

The will therefore is not forced by any power put forth in grace in that way wherein it is capable of making opposition unto it, but the prevalence of grace is of it as it is internal, working really and physically, which is not the will's opposition, for it is not proposed unto it, as that which it may accept or refuse, but worketh effectually in it.

2. The will, in the first act of conversion, as even sundry of the schoolmen acknowledge, acts not but as it is acted, moves not but as it is moved, and therefore is passive therein in the sense immediately to be explained. And if this be not so, it cannot be avoided, but that the act of our turning unto God is a mere natural act, and not spiritual or gracious. For it is an act of the will not enabled thereunto antecedently by grace. Wherefore it must be granted, and it shall be proved, that in order of nature, the acting of grace in the will in our conversion is antecedent unto its own acting, though in the same instant of time, wherein the will is moved it moves; and when it is acted it acts itself, and preserves its own liberty in its exercise. There is therefore herein an inward Almighty sacred act of the power of the Holy Ghost producing or effecting in us the will of conversion unto God, so acting our wills, as that they also act themselves and that freely, so Austin. cont. duas epistol. Pelag. Lib. I. Cap. xix. Trahitur, (homo) miris modis, ut velit, ab illo qui novit intus in ipsis cordibus hominum operari, non ut homines, quod fieri non potest, nolentes credant, sed ut volentes ex nolentibus fiant.

The Holy Spirit, who in his power and operation is more intimate, as it were, to the principles of our souls than they are to themselves, doth with the preservation, and in the exercise of the liberty of our wills, effectually work our regeneration and conversion unto God. This is the substance of what we plead for in this cause, and which declares the nature of this work of regeneration, as it is an inward spiritual work; I shall therefore confirm the truth proposed with evident testimonies of scripture, and reasons contained in them or deduced from them.

1. Because the work of grace in conversion is expressed by words denoting a real internal efficiency, such as creating, quickening, forming, giving a new heart, &c.

* Christus non dicit, duxerit, ut illic aliquo modo intelligamus precedere voluntatem, sed dicit, traxerit, quis autem trahitur si jam volebat? et tamen nemo venit nisi velit, trahitur ergo miris modis ut velit, ab illo qui novit intus in ipsis hominum cordibus operari, non ut homines, quod fieri non potest, nolentes credant, sed ut volentes ex nolentibus fiant. August. cont. duas Epist. Pelag. cap. 19.
Certum est nos velle, cum volumus, sed ille facit ut vellemus, de quo dictum est, Deus est qui operatur in nobis velle. Idem de Grat. et. lib. Arbit. cap. 16.

2. It is attributed to be wholly of grace, to the end God might have all the glory, and all boasting might be excluded.

But (1.) The doctrine of these men, as the doctor observes, ascribes the whole glory of our regeneration and conversion unto ourselves, and not to the grace of God, for that act of our wills on this supposition, whereby we turn unto God, is merely an act of our own, and not of the grace of God; this is evident, for if the act itself were of grace, then would it not be in the power of the will to hinder it.

(2.) This would leave it absolutely uncertain notwithstanding the purpose of God, and the purchase of Christ, whether ever any one in the world should be converted unto God, or no. For when the whole work of grace is over, it is absolutely in the power of the will of man whether it shall be effectual or no. And so absolutely uncertain, which is contrary to the covenant, promise, and oath of God, unto and with Jesus Christ.

(3.) It is contrary to express testimonies of scripture innumerable, wherein actual conversion unto God is ascribed unto grace as the immediate effect thereof. This will further appear afterwards. "God worketh in us to will and to do;" the act therefore itself of willing in our conversion, is of God's operation, and although we will ourselves, yet it is he who causeth us to will, by working in us "to will and to do," Phil. ii. 13.

And if the act of our will in believing and obedience, in our conversion to God, be not the effect of his grace in us, he doth not "work in us both to will and to do of his own good pleasure."

1. The work of conversion itself, and in particular the act of believing, or faith itself, is expressly said to be of God, to be wrought in us by him, to be freely given unto us from him; the scripture saith not that God gives us ability or power to believe only, namely, such a power as we may make use of, if we will, or do otherwise, but faith and conversion themselves are said to be the work and effect of God.

Object. But it may be objected that every thing which is actually accomplished is in potentia before. There must therefore be in us a power to believe before we do so actually.

Ans. 1. The act of God working faith in us, is a creating work, "For we are his workmanship created in Christ Jesus," Eph. ii. 10, and "he that is in Christ is a new creature." Now the effects of creating acts are not in potentia any where but in the active power of God, so was the world itself before its actual existence. This is termed potentia logica; which is no more but a negation of any contradiction to existence; not potentia physica which includes a disposition to actual existence. Notwithstanding therefore all these preparatory works of the Spirit of God which we allow in this matter, there is not by them wrought in the minds and wills of men such a next power, as they call it, as should enable them to believe without further actual grace working faith itself. Wherefore with respect to believing, the first act of God is to work in us to will; so Phil. i. 13, "He worketh in us to will." This God worketh in us by that grace which Austin and other learned men call gratia operans.

2. Faith and repentance. It is said to be given of God. "Him hath God exalted to be a Prince and a Saviour, to give repentance unto Israel and remission of sin," Acts v. 31. "To you it is given in behalf of Christ, not only to believe but to suffer for his sake," Phil. i. 29. "By grace ye are saved through faith, and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God," Eph. ii. 8. Our own ability, be it what it will, however assisted and excited, and God's gift, are contrary distinguished. If it be of ourselves it is not the gift of God; if it be the gift of God, it is not of ourselves, and the manner how God bestows this gift upon us is declared, ver. 10, "For we are his workmanship created in Christ Jesus unto good works." And from hence faith is called the faith of the operation of God.

3. Love, that precious prevailing grace, is planted in the soul by the Spirit causing the soul with delight and complacency to cleave unto God and his ways. "The Lord God will circumcise thine heart to love the Lord," Deut. xxx. 6. "Hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost," Rom. v. 5. "The fruit of the Spirit is love," Gal. v. 22.

4. It might be further demonstrated by considering how conversion, with the manner how it is effected, is set forth in the holy scripture; "The Lord thy God will circumcise thine heart and the heart of thy seed, to love the Lord thy God with all thine heart," &c. Deut. xxx. 6. What is this but the putting off the body of sin? Col. ii. 11. This is the immediate work of the Spirit of God, no man ever circumcised his own heart. "A new heart also will I give you, and a new Spirit will I put within you, and will take away the stony heart," Ezek. xxxvi. 26, that is, that impotency and enmity which is in our hearts unto conversion.

5. The work of grace upon the soul is called a vivification, we are by nature dead in sins and trespasses; in our deliverance from thence we are said to be quickened. "The dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and live," being made alive; now no such work can be wrought in us by an effectual communication of a principle of spiritual life, and nothing else will deliver us. Some think to evade the power of this argument by saying all these expressions are metaphorical, and arguing from them is but fulsome metaphors. And it is well if the whole Gospel be not a metaphor unto them.*

But if there be not an impotency in us by nature unto all acts of spiritual life, like that which is in a dead man unto acts of life natural. If there be not an alike power of God required unto our deliverance from that condition; and the working in us a principle of spiritual obedience as is required unto the raising of him that is dead, they may as well say the Scripture speaks not truly, as that it speaks metaphorically.

6. Believers are said to be begotten and born again of the Spirit, by which it appears that our regeneration is not an act of our own. I mean not so our own as by outward helps and assistance to be educed out of the principles of our nature. "Of his own will begat he us by the word of truth," &c. James i. 18. "Born again not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible," &c. 1 Pet. i. 23. "Which were born not of blood, nor of the will of man, but of God," John i. 13. This being so, it behoved them who plead for an active interest of the will of man in regeneration, to produce some testimonies of scripture where it is assigned unto it, as the effect unto its proper cause; where it is said that a man is born again or begotten anew by himself. And if it be granted, as, it must be so, unless violence be offered not only to the scripture, but reason and common sense, that whatever be our duty and power herein, yet these expressions must denote an act of God, and not ours; regeneration being thus proved to be the glorious working and operation of the Holy Ghost, we shall now proceed to show further, the nature and excellency of grace as it shines forth in the Gospel, and is experienced by every sincere Christian.

1. Gospel grace is glorious, because, when received in truth, it delivers the soul from bondage, it breaks the bonds. For the soul is not set at liberty by the bare shedding of Christ's blood, without the application of it by the Spirit or infusion of grace into the heart.

2. The Gospel through the grace of it when received in truth, opens blind eyes, it makes them see, that never saw, in a spiritual sense, before; it opens their eyes that were born blind; how blind was Saul till the Gospel grace shone upon him or rather in him?

3. The Gospel through the grace of it, when received in truth, raises the dead soul to life. It is hereby we come to be quickened, the flesh profiteth nothing, it is the Spirit that quickeneth; that is, the human nature without the divine cannot accomplish salvation for us; nor shall any soul receive any saving benefit by the flesh, or death of Christ, unless he be quickened by the Spirit.

4. The Gospel in the grace of it, when received in truth, casts out that cursed enmity that is in the heart against God, and thereby reconciles the sinner to the blessed Majesty of heaven.

5. The grace of the Gospel works regeneration, makes the sinner another man, a new man. It forms the new creature in the soul.

1. It infuses new qualities.
2. It makes the proud person humble, and not to vaunt himself.
3. It makes the unclean person chaste, and to loath lascivious thoughts.
4. It makes hard-hearted sinners full of bowels.
5. It makes the impenitent soul to bear all things.

6. It makes the covetous person liberal, and to distribute to the poor.
 7. It makes the worst husband the best husband, the worst wife the best wife, the worst children the best children, the rebellious ones to be obedient ones.

6. The Gospel in the grace of it, brings the soul into union with God. No grace, no Christ. God is the fountain of this union, Christ is the conduit-pipe as Mediator; the Spirit and the grace thereof is the stream. Union is let into the soul at this door; no grace, no God, no union with him, and no communion with him.

7. The grace of the Gospel washeth the polluted soul; it cleanseth the filth of the heart and pollution of the life. "He put no difference between them and us, purifying their hearts by faith," 1 Cor. vi. 11, Tit. iii. 4, 5, Acts xv. 9.

8. The grace of the Gospel, or saving operations of the Spirit, heals the wounded soul, "He poured in oil and wine," &c. Luke x. 34.

9. Gospel grace gives the soul a right to all the blessings of a crucified Christ, is that which puts on the wedding garment. It was a pretty saying of a good man,

1. The Father weaves this garment, he was first concerned about it, he prepared the matter with which it is made.

2. The Son made it, he has wrought righteousness for us.

3. The Spirit puts it on.

10. The grace of the Gospel makes a glorious soul, a glorious man, a glorious woman, a glorious family, a glorious church, a glorious city, a glorious kingdom, where it is generally received in truth.

It makes a glorious soul; it finds it naked, and clothes it. It finds it starved, as it were, and feeds it. It finds it wounded, and heals it. It finds it cold, and warms it. It finds it unclean, and sanctifies it. It finds it poor and enriches it. It finds it in bonds, and sets it at liberty. It finds it an enemy to God, and reconciles it. It finds it condemned, and justifies it. It finds it dead, and gives it life.

11. The grace of the Gospel adorns the soul, it puts ornaments upon the head, and chains beyond those of gold, upon the neck. It decks it with jewels, "I decked thee with ornaments, I put bracelets upon thy hands, and a chain on thy neck; I put a jewel on thy forehead, ear-rings in thine ears, and a beautiful crown on thy head; thou wast decked with gold and silver, with silk and brodered work," Prov. i. 9, Ezek. xvi. 12, 13. It puts a ring on the finger, it adorns the soul with a meek and a quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price, Luke xv. 22, 1 Pet. iii. 4.

12. The grace of the Gospel makes a man behold a beauty and glory in the Gospel, to love it, and to suffer for it. The Gospel is worth little in the sight and esteem of that man, that has not the grace of the Gospel. What is the word of grace without the grace of the word?

13. Gospel grace is an excellent preservative against the plague of sin. No pestilence so bad as this. "How shall I," saith Joseph, "do this thing and sin against God?" It is also a potion to work it out, as well as to preserve from it.

14. Gospel grace is good, really good, always good and glorious at all times; it is good in health, the soul cannot have health without it; good in sickness, it is good in prosperity, it is good in adversity, it is good in good times, and woe to them that want it in bad times; we are blessed that have it, but they are cursed that are without it, whatsoever profession they make. For the profession of the Gospel without the grace of the Gospel will do a man no good; it is but the name without the nature; the cabinet without the jewel; the lamp without the oil.

15. The grace of the Gospel makes men like to Christ, to love Christ, and to die for Christ.

16. Gospel grace makes men to live to God; they live to themselves that have it not; they live to God that have it. It makes men wise, to be men of understanding, to live sober to themselves, to live righteously to men, and to live holy towards God, to live in subjection to God, to obey God, to delight in God, and to live in obedience and subjection to his Church.

11. The Gospel is glorious in respect of the tenders and offers made therein to the sons of men.

Quest. What is tendered ?

Ans. Repentance is tendered, pardon is tendered, peace is tendered, bread and water of life is tendered, perfect righteousness is tendered, adoption is tendered, glorious liberty is tendered ; in short, God is offered, he makes a tender of himself. Christ is tendered with all his benefits, who is the pearl of great price, worth millions ; yea more than ten thousand worlds ; a marriage with Christ is tendered, the Spirit is tendered with all the blessings of it, a kingdom is offered in the Gospel, a crown is offered, a crown of endless glory, a crown that fadeth not away, eternal life is tendered.

Quest. Who is it that makes these tenders and offers in the Gospel ?

Ans. The great God, he that has them to bestow, and a right to give them.

Quest. Whom are they offered to ?

Ans. To such that were his enemies, rebels, even the worst of sinners ; in a word, whoever will, he that hath a will to receive them may have them, Rev. xxii. 17.

Quest. Upon what terms are they offered ?

Ans. Freely, offered without money and without price, though a man, as to righteousness, hath nothing of worth nor beauty in him, being in himself but a lump of sin and filthiness, yet he may have these things, they are offered unto such, Isa. lv. 1, 2, 3.

They are sincerely and faithfully offered, God doth not mock men and women, offer them such things as these, and yet never intend to bestow them upon them ; if they have a heart and a mind to them, my life for theirs they enjoy all these and many more like glorious good things. Nay, and more than this, they have been often tendered with much affection and in bowels of compassion, God bewails, and Christ bewails, the state of such who do refuse them. O ! then what fools are mortals to slight and reject these tenders !

III. The Gospel is glorious in respect of the glorious things that are brought about and accomplished thereby.

The first I shall mention is reconciliation, which is a glorious blessing ; what is more fully opened and held forth in the Gospel than reconciliation with the means and manner how, and by whom accomplished ? which will appear

1. By considering the parties reconciled.
2. By considering the nature of the breach that was between them.
3. By considering the means and manner how it is accomplished.
4. By considering the fruits and effects of it.

First, Considering the parties that were at variance, who by the Gospel are reconciled, God and man, the infinite God, the holy God and man, these were at enmity ; it is sad when a difference rises in a family, in a congregation, in a city, in a kingdom, or between one kingdom and another : but much more sad is it to have God and sinners at enmity. Adam runs from God, hides himself, he knew God was now become his enemy ; the word declares the creature to be God's enemy, whilst he stands in old Adam in the state of nature ; " And you that were sometimes alienated and enemies in your mind," &c. Col. i. 21. And then God declares himself to be the sinner's enemy, he is angry with the wicked every day ; he is said to fight and war against them, which plainly shows he is their enemy. But now what a glorious blessing is this to have these two parties reconciled, " When we were enemies we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son ! " " You that were enemies in your minds by wicked works, (or as in the margin, by your minds in wicked works,) yet now hath he reconciled in the body of his flesh through death," Rom. v. 10, Col. i. 21, 22.

Secondly, Gospel reconciliation appears to be a glorious reconciliation, if we consider the nature of the breach that was between them.

1. It was an old breach, no sooner was man made, but straightway he became an enemy to God ; nay, every soul that comes into the world, comes into it an enemy of God, or in a state of enmity.

2. It is so great a breach that all the angels in heaven, nor all the saints on earth, could not make up.

3. It was such a breach that lays the soul obnoxious to God's fearful curse.
4. It is such a breach that makes the creatures of God at enmity with one another, and mankind in danger of being devoured by them: and also hath set man one against another.
5. It is such a breach that sets man against himself, it hath caused his own conscience to be his enemy, and to accuse, and fight against him and condemn him; "If our hearts condemn us, God is greater," &c., 1 John iii. 20, 21.
6. It is such a breach, that unless made up will produce an eternal separation from God, "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels," &c., Matt. xxv. 41.

Thirdly, it is a glorious reconciliation, if we consider the means and manner how and by whom it is brought about and accomplished; every Person in the glorious Trinity hath a hand in it and is eminently concerned about it. "God was in Christ reconciling the world to himself." "All things are of God, who hath reconciled us unto himself by Jesus Christ," &c., 2 Cor. v. 18, 19. The Lord Jesus the second Person is employed, (or as we may see from hence,) as one fitly qualified to make up this dreadful breach: and in order thereunto he took our nature on him. There was a necessity of Christ's coming to reconcile God and man: God, his law and justice was wronged, and God was resolved to have this wrong made up and his justice satisfied, which none but Christ could do, God was there to be reconciled, yet nevertheless he will (wherein he was wronged) be righted, and have his justice fully and completely satisfied. Christ knew what would appease and satisfy both law and justice, what he hath done hath infinite worth and efficacy in it; this way tends most to glorify God the Father, the Son is glorified most this way, the Spirit is glorified this way, and there was no way like this to melt the sinner's heart, to abase him, and lay him at the feet of God. See Christ the Mediator, &c.

2. Christ doth not only reconcile God to the creature, but also reconciles the creature unto God; he undertakes to bring God near to man, and man near to God; whose heart is full of sin and enmity to his Maker, and not subject to his law; he lays his hands upon both: the first is done by his death. Christ, like Jonas, is cast into the sea, as it were, of wrath, to make a calm. The second is done by the Spirit, he breaks the heart, changes the inward qualities and evil dispositions; he takes away the heart of stone, and gives a heart of flesh.

Fourthly, Gospel reconciliation is glorious in respect to the nature of it.

1. It is a free reconciliation; it is a work of free-grace alone: it is not of man. "Not of him that willeth, or him that runneth; but of God that sheweth mercy," Rom. ix. 16. Hence the apostle saith, "All things are of God;" speaking of reconciliation.

2. It is a mysterious reconciliation, "We speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom, which God ordained before the world began to our glory," 1 Cor. ii. 7. "The Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God;" this is one of those deep things, which many because they cannot comprehend it in their own natural wisdom, cavil against.

3. It is a certain reconciliation, 'God is at peace and fully reconciled in Jesus Christ. Christ shall not, will not lose his glorious design in coming into the world, taking our nature on him, and dying the cursed death of the cross. Those therefore that are brought to accept of the terms of peace and reconciliation as offered in the Gospel, stand in a state of real peace and friendship; neither let any one imagine that after all these glorious transactions of the blessed Trinity about this work, that the issue of the whole in order to the making it effectual, depends upon the will and power of man.

4. The soul is taken into perfect love and union with God; God hereby entirely loveth us, and is so for us, or on our side, that his friends and allies become our friends and allies, and all our enemies become his enemies; so that what is done to us, he takes as done to himself.

5. It is an honourable reconciliation; it is a reconciliation upon honourable terms, God differeth not in any of his glorious attributes; if God had passed by our offences so that we had had pardon and reconciliation without more ado, without a compensation for sin, the devils perhaps, saith a divine,* might have cried out against him, and have said, where is the glory of thy justice? These have sinned against thee, as well as we, and the breach they have made upon thy justice, is no ways made up: but now their mouths are stopped for ever. This reconciliation will be to the glory of God in the sight of angels and men to eternity, and it is that which God rejoices in as being exceedingly pleased with it, seeing his honour is made up in this reconciliation.

6. It is an abiding, firm, and everlasting reconciliation; there is nothing can make a breach between God and his people any more; the union cannot, shall not be broken, it is beyond the power of devils, men, sufferings, nay, or sin either, to do it. "Who shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord?" Rom. viii. 39.

Fifthly, Gospel-reconciliation is glorious in respect of the fruits, effects, and consequences of it.

1. In that all that enmity that was between God and the soul comes hereby to be removed, and man consequently to have peace with God. "For he is our peace who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us, having abolished in his flesh, &c. and that he might reconcile both unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby, and came and preached peace." "Being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ," Eph. ii. 14—17, Rom. v. 1.

2. Peace of conscience is another fruit and effect of this reconciliation.

3. There are also, as the effects of this reconciliation, peace and sweet harmony in the soul between all the faculties; they do not fight as formerly one against another, the conscience drawing one way, and the will another; the will opposing that which conscience would have done; the judgment may be convinced in some measure as Balaam was, who cried out that God's ways were best, "How goodly are thy tents, O Jacob, and thy tabernacles, O Israel!" Numb. xxiv. 5, and yet the affections may be for sin, and love the wages of unrighteousness.

4. The next thing that I might mention is joy in the Holy Ghost: when once a soul knows he is reconciled to God, then he comes not only to have peace, but also to be filled with joy in believing; "The kingdom of God is not meat and drink, but righteousness and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost."

5. Free access to God is another fruit and effect of Gospel-reconciliation; such may go with boldness to the throne of grace. "Through him we both (i. e., Jews and Gentiles who believe) have access by the Spirit to the Father," Eph. ii. 18.

6. Hence there is a free and blessed trade opened between heaven and earth, between God and the soul; as in countries that are in war one with another, there can be no trade nor traffic between them, but when peace is made, and a sure league concluded betwixt them, trade is open again; so is it between God and the soul when reconciled.

7. By this means we come in a special manner to be under the care and protection of God; there shall not one hair fall to the ground without the leave and permission of God; he has hereby interested himself in all our concerns, and many other blessed effects attend our reconciliation with God, which are elsewhere insisted upon. See Mediator.

Sixthly, the Gospel is glorious in respect of remission or pardon of sin. Gospel-remission is a glorious remission:

I. By considering who it is that is pardoned, or who they are that God forgives?

1. Rebels, such that had broken an holy and just law.

2. Rebels to God, such that had conspired against him, joined and sided with Satan against the Majesty of heaven.

3. Such that were greatly in debt, owed ten thousand talents, and nothing to pay. See Metaphor, poor.

4. Such that were liable to eternal wrath.

II. By considering the causes, and chief ground or way of pardon, Christ's blood must be shed to procure it; "Without shedding of blood there is no remission of sin," Heb. ix. 22.

III. By considering the nature and effect of pardon.

1. All sins that ever the poor sinner committed are promised to be forgiven.
2. For ever forgiven.
3. The pardoned person is not only forgiven, but justified also.
4. None can condemn such.
5. They have peace with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ.

IV. And lastly, Gospel remission is glorious in respect of God that gives forth the pardon, "I am he that blotteth out thine iniquity," Isa. xliii. 25. This antidotes the soul against the venom of Satan's temptations.

1. He pardons the sinner that hath power to do it; who but God can forgive sin?
2. Who can accuse the soul? I will, saith Satan; thou art a sinner: What then, saith the soul? See what I have here, behold a pardon from the King himself.
3. None can revoke this pardon, or make it ineffectual.
4. God himself never repents the giving it to any poor believer; as others cannot, so he will never revoke free Gospel pardon and remission himself.

Seventhly, The Gospel is glorious in respect of peace, the fruit and effect of grace; not peace with God, for that we have already spoken of, but peace of conscience. "Great peace have they that love thy law," &c. "My peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you, let not your hearts be troubled;" "Let the peace of God rule in your hearts," &c., John xiv. 27.

Eighthly, The Gospel is glorious in respect of the ordinances and institutions of it, which we shall insist upon, under its proper head; particularly that of baptism and the Lord's Supper, which will be made appear to be glorious ordinances.

Ninthly, The Gospel is glorious in respect of the promises thereof.

The promises of God in the Gospel given through Christ are great, glorious, and exceeding precious. The promises may be compared to the Land of Promise, they flow with milk and honey, they are like a rich mine, abounding with precious treasure, the further you dig, the more precious gold you will find. Or they may be compared to a lovely and choice garden, that abounds with all sorts of rare and excellent flowers; but it is a garden always green and flourishing; flowers that know no drought nor winter, that never decay; not only for pleasure, but for profit. A Gospel promise is something that God hath engaged to give to Christ, or unto us through Christ, or for his sake.

And they consist either in his free bestowing of good, or his gracious removing of evil. In his bestowing of good here, or good hereafter; or in removing of evil here, or evil hereafter. And they either are absolute or conditional.

Gospel promises are glorious promises, called precious promises; and better promises than those of the law or first Testament.

I. This appears if we consider who it is that makes and gives these promises forth, viz. the great God, Rom. i. 2. Men think they have enough when they have the promise and word of a king, touching this or that, to rely upon; but what is the promise or word of an earthly king, to the promises of the King of heaven and earth, they oftentimes fail in their promises; but this King never did.

II. Glorious, if we consider the time when given, and that was before the foundation of the world. "In hopes of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began," Tit. i. 2, 3.

III. Glorious promises, if we consider the vileness, unworthiness, and nothingness of them, as they are in themselves, to whom the promises are made.

IV. Gospel promises are glorious promises, considering through whom and by what means they are given; Christ procures the promises as well as remission, by pouring forth his precious blood, he paid dear for them; that the slave might be adopted and saved, the Son is sacrificed.

V. They are free promises; not made for any merit or worthiness in us, but purely proceed from the free grace and favour of God, Tit. iii. 5, and therefore glorious. God doth not sell himself, his Son, and precious promises, to sinners, but they are given freely, "Without money, and without price;" not for thy beauty, righteousness, excellence, &c. He that hath promised to love us freely, pardons us freely. "Thou hast bought me no sweet cane without money, neither hast thou filled me with the fat of thy sacrifices; but thou hast made me to serve with thy sins, thou hast wearied me with thine iniquities. I, even I, am he that blotteth out thy transgression for mine own sake, and will not remember thy sins," Isa. xliii. 24, 25.

Salvation is freely promised, "Not by works of righteousness that we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost," Tit. iii. 5.

VI. Gospel promises are glorious, if we consider the extent of them; they run not only to the lineal seed of Abraham, but to all believers, to Jew and Gentile, bond and free, none are excluded: "Whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely," Rev. xxii. 17.

VII. Gospel promises are glorious promises in respect of what is given:

1. Christ is given, God hath given his Son, not only for the sinner, but to the sinner. Christ promiseth to give himself, offers to betroth himself to us for ever. The Spirit is promised with all the blessings, grace, gifts, and operations thereof, Hos. ii. 16, 19, Isa. lxii. 5.

2. God promises in the Gospel to give himself, "I will be your God, and you shall be my people." This promise is the highest, the fullest, and sweetest of all promises; Austin speaking of it, breaketh forth in admiration, "What is better than this goodness! What is or can be greater happiness than this! Can God give any thing greater than himself."

3. Whatsoever he is, has, or can do, in a gracious way, is promised to be given in this one promise. He is one eternal, all-sufficient, immutable, infinite, glorious, incomprehensible, omniscient, omnipresent, holy, and gracious God. His goodness, truth, power, wisdom, mercy, loving-kindness, faithfulness, is engaged for believers.

4. O what is in man that thou art mindful of him? Is all below thyself too little and not good enough for man, that thou givest thyself to fill and satisfy him? All that God is or hath so far as communicative is promised, &c. life, light, grace, strength, wealth, riches, pleasure, honour, is the believer's.

5. Whatsoever he can do so far as comports with his own glory and our good, is promised, viz. to feed, support, suppress fears, prevent danger, keep in or deliver out of trouble, &c.

6. The greatness of this promise will appear by considering what all other things are in comparison of God; if heaven be nothing, what is earth in comparison of him? all other things come from him as water from a fountain; what are all things without him, either spiritual or temporal? Consider the necessity of him. Men make a shift to live without enjoying God (though such are dead whilst they live) but know not how to die without him; nothing but God is a suitable good for the soul. It is not clothes that can clothe it; it is not silver, gold, nor pearl can adorn it; it is not fire that can warm it, nor bread can feed it, nor wine can cheer it, nor money can satisfy it, nor earthly friends comfort it; it is God only that can supply all the wants and necessities of the soul.

7. This is a great promise, because nothing is yours till God is yours: by union with him the soul is interested into all spiritual and temporal good things.

8. It is a part and portion which can never be spent; you may live upon God, there is enough in him for millions, and millions of millions; Psal. lxxiii. 25. See God a Portion. God is better than heaven, better than grace, better than glory, better than things present, or things to come; the promises are like a rich ring of gold, but this is the rare diamond in that ring; it is the crown, the top, excellency of all promises; his wisdom is the soul for direction, his power for protection, his grace for its acceptance, his Spirit for its consolation, his creatures on earth to serve us, his angels to guard us, his ordinances to feed and strengthen us, his grace to adorn us, his riches to advance and crown us to eternity.

This is a great promise, the greatest promise; God gives Light when he gives himself, he gives life when he gives himself. God is Light without obscurity, how sweet is that Light! He is Life without mortality, how sweet is that Life! Peace without perplexity, Love without mutability, how sweet is such love! God fills and satisfies all that enjoy him; beyond God the heart can desire nothing.

VIII. Promises of the Gospel are glorious and precious promises, if we consider the seasonableness and suitableness of them.

Rest is promised to the weary	} Soul.
Food to the hungry
Clothes to the naked
Pardon to the guilty
Liberty to the captive
Strength to the weak
Health and healing to the sick and wounded
Courage to the faint-hearted
Riches to the poor and needy
Light to the blind
Life to the condemned

Were a man cast for life and condemned to die a painful and horrible death, suppose it were to be burnt or roasted alive, and a pardon should be proffered to him in the very nick of time, how sweet and precious would that be to him; even so seasonable and sweet are the promises of the Gospel to poor condemned sinners. God gives them into the soul when it sees it is just dropping into hell, to be burnt for ever in eternal flames.

IX. Promises of the Gospel are glorious in respect of the firmness and stability of them. Gospel promises are firm and sure promises.

1. Made or given forth by one who cannot lie nor deny himself. "In hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began," Tit. i. 1; 2 Tim. ii. 13.

2. They are not yea and nay, not uncertain, doubtful, mutable, and variable, but yea and amen in Christ Jesus. God ever kept his promise with his people, 2 Cor. i.

1. He promised Noah he would not drown the world any more; and how graciously hath he kept that promise, and continued the token of it in the cloud unto this day?

2. God promised Abraham a son, and will work miracles rather than not make that promise good.

3. God promised to give the land of Canaan and rest therein to his seed; how punctual was he in performing of it, as Solomon well observes, 1 Kings viii. 56, "Blessed be the Lord, that hath given rest to his people Israel, according to all that he promised." "There hath not failed one word of all his good promise," &c. It was declared to Abraham that his seed should be strangers in the land of Egypt four hundred years; and Moses shows that at the end thereof, nay the very self-same day, the Lord brought them out of the said land, Exod. xxii. 41.

4. God promised to send a Saviour, and accordingly when the fulness of time was come, he sent him into the world.

5. And, that Gospel promises might be firm and sure to all the faithful and covenant people of God, they are put into Christ's hand, who having shed his blood to procure the good promised, hath received the promises for us as our Trustee, Acts ii. 33, "Therefore being by the right-hand of God exalted, and having received the promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath shed forth this, which ye now see and hear."

6. That the promises might be made sure to all the seed, Christ hath brought himself under an obligation to make them good. And the Lord Jesus is not only engaged, but the Father also, Luke xxiv. 49.

1. In respect of his goodness and mercy, Heb. x. 23, 1 John i. 9.

2. In respect of his faithfulness and truth, 1 Cor. x. 13.

3. Nothing can hinder or obstruct God in accomplishing whatsoever he hath promised.

4. They must be made good because of the nature of the covenant, it is ordered in all things, and sure, 2 Sam. xxiii. 5. It is unto God as the waters of Noah, Isa. liv. 10. They are left in Christ's last will and Testament, that was confirmed by his blood, Heb. ix. 15, 16, 17. See Testator.

"And for this cause he is the Mediator of the New Testament, that by means of death for the redemptions of the transgressions that were under the first Testament, they which are called, might receive the promise of eternal inheritance."

5. But if all this be not enough, God hath engaged himself by oath to make them good; he hath, if I may so speak, pawned his own being, life, power, truth, and holiness, upon the performing whatsoever he hath promised to his own covenant-people, for "when God made a promise to Abraham, because he could swear by no greater, he swore by himself, (Gen. xxii. 16, 17,) saying, surely in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thee." And so after he had patiently endured, he obtained the promise; for men verily swear by the greater, and an oath of confirmation is to them an end of all strife. Wherein God more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath: that by two immutable things in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us," Heb. vi. 13—18. May not this cause a believer to venture upon a promise of God, and to rest satisfied until it be accomplished.

X. Gospel promises are glorious promises, because they are generally and more especially soul or spiritual promises. What is it to have a promise of such or such an estate or lordship, or to be blessed in the basket and store, or with all earthly good things? these are the blessings, it is granted, that worldly men seek after; "I have goods," Luke xii. 19, saith the rich glutton, "laid up for many years;" blind wretch! but how poor and miserable was his soul! Now Gospel promises are of a spiritual, heavenly, and sublime nature, as you have heard before; soul-food, soul-strength, soul-health, soul-riches, soul-place, soul-liberty, soul-life; a Christ, a kingdom, and crown that fadeth not away, for the soul.

XI. Gospel promises are glorious promises, because it is by virtue of these thou comest to take hold of, and obtainest an interest in the Lord Jesus Christ. Is not that a precious promise that will make thee sure of a Saviour? a bare promise for (of his) interest, is security enough, though he has condescended in a gracious manner to us not only to make over himself and eternal life to our souls by promise; but hath given us an earnest also in our hearts; nay, more than that, "sealed us also by his Spirit unto the day of redemption," Eph. i. 13, and iv. 30. See Earnest, and Seal, under the head of metaphors respecting the Spirit.

The promises are the ground of faith and hope; that faith is a fancy, and that hope will be but as a spider's web, that is not grounded upon the promise of God.

XII. Gospel promises are glorious in a comparative sense above the promises of the law.

1. Better in respect of perspicuity or clearness of them, those were promises under obscure types and shadows; justification was held forth by several sacrifices, burnt-offerings and sin-offerings, &c. Sanctification held forth unto several ceremonial washings.

2. Better in regard of the nature or quality of them; the former were generally promises of temporal or earthly things, Deut. xxviii. 34.

3. In respect of the efficacy and power that is in these, over what was in the other. "The law made nothing perfect," Heb. vii. 19. Many blessings were made indeed in case of obedience, but the law gave no power to perform the condition, or help the soul in that obedience.

4. They are better in regard of extent or duration.

XIII. Gospel promises are glorious in respect of the variety of them; there is variety of all good things promised therein, answering to every condition the creature may be under. They tend in a sweet manner to remove all objections, doubts, and discouragements of the soul whatsoever, as you may perceive by taking a brief taste.

Obj. I am a vile sinner, saith the soul, mine iniquity is gone over mine head as a heavy burden; they are more than can be numbered, and are ever before me; I have sinned against light and knowledge, and hated instruction. Is there any hope or promise for such a wretch, such a rebel and monster of wickedness as I am?

Answ. See the promise, "How long, ye simple ones, will ye love simplicity, and the scorers delight in their scorning, and fools hate knowledge? turn at my reproof: behold I will pour out my Spirit upon you, I will make known my words unto you. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him, and to our God, and he will abundantly pardon." "Come unto me all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest," Prov. i. 22, 23, Isa. lv. 7, Matt. xi. 28.

Here are promises that may be grounds of encouragement to the vilest sinner. Were there no promises but to righteous persons, or to men and women, so and so qualified, it were sad. But through Christ, and in closing with him in the Gospel, there is pardon offered to sinners as sinners, though they have been very vile and notorious in wickedness.

Obj. But alas, saith the soul, I have made God mine enemy; his curse and judgments are denounced against me; I may say with Job, God pursues me, Job vi. 4. And hell is ready to receive me; "Whilst I suffer his terrors, I am distracted," Psal. lxxxviii. 15.

Ans. The storm of God's wrath is over in Christ: where God remits the sin, he remits the punishment. "Go, and proclaim these words towards the north, and say, return, and I will not cause mine anger to fall upon you: for I am merciful, saith the Lord, and I will not keep anger for ever," Jer. iii. 12. "He retaineth not his anger for ever, because he delighteth in mercy."

Obj. But alas, I am ignorant of God and of Christ, and know not God; and he will come in flaming fire to take vengeance on such, 2 Thess. i. 7, 8. Woe is me.

Ans. God hath promised to teach thee the knowledge of himself, and to guide thee in the way thou shouldest go. "Good and upright is the Lord, therefore will he teach sinners in the way," Psal. xxv. 8. Nay, and though thou be blind, see what a gracious promise he makes, Isa. xlii. 16, "I will bring the blind by a way that they know not, and I will lead them in the paths they have not known. I will make darkness light before them, and crooked things straight; these things will I do unto them, and not forsake them."

Obj. But my heart is dead and obdurate, you know not the naughtiness of it; O! I am a filthy creature, I cannot mourn nor melt under the word of God.

Ans. "And they shall loathe themselves for the evils they have done," Ezek. xx. 43; and not only for what they have done, but also for the baseness of their vile, stubborn, rebellious, and whorish heart, as is mentioned by the same Prophet; and see what a promise God is pleased to make to those polluted and hard-hearted ones. "A new heart also will I give you, and a new Spirit will I put within you; and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you a heart of flesh," Ezek. xxxvi. 26. God has promised to pour out the Spirit of grace, and that he will melt thee under the sense of thy sin, and cause thee to mourn in a right manner for thy sin. God will not only break thy stony heart, but will also take it away. O blessed promise, he will take it away because it is good for nought; it is not fit to be wrought upon, it is not soft or pliable, there is no mending of it, it must be new made, new cast, like a cracked bell, before God's Image can be formed in it, or engraven upon it, &c.

Obj. Aye, but I have been so vile and wicked, that I know not what evil things I could do more against God, than made I have done.

Ans. So it is said of Judah and Israel, Jer. iii. 5. "Behold, thou hast spoken, and done evil things as thou couldest;" yet mind the promise of God to them, "Return,—and I will not cause my anger to fall upon you: I am merciful, saith the Lord, only acknowledge thine iniquity," &c. ver. 12, 13.

Obj. But I cannot think there is mercy and pardon for me; it cannot enter into my thoughts.

Ans. "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the ungodly man his thoughts, and turn to the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him, and to our God, and he will abundantly pardon: for my thoughts are not your thoughts, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my thoughts higher than your thoughts," &c. Isa. lv. 7, 8, 9.

But saith another soul, I have backslidden from God, there is therefore no comfort and salvation for me.

Ans. "I will heal thy backslidings, and love thee freely," Jer. iii. 12, 14, Hos. xiv. 4.

Obj. But this and the other sin and corruption will be too hard for me; "I shall one day fall by the hand of Saul," saith David; so may I say in respect of one base sin that waylays me, and doth always beset me.

Ans. Soul, thou shalt not finally be overcome, though thou fall thou shalt rise again; what saith God to thee, "I will subdue your iniquities?" Micah vii. 18, 19. "Sin sweet cane without money, neither hast thou filled me with the fat of thy sacrifices; but thou hast made me to serve with thy sins, thou hast wearied me with thine iniquities. I, even I, am he that blotteth out thy transgression for mine own sake, and will not remember thy sins," Isa. xliii. 24, 25.

Salvation is freely promised, "Not by works of righteousness that we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost," Tit. iii. 5.

VI. Gospel promises are glorious, if we consider the extent of them; they run not only to the lineal seed of Abraham, but to all believers, to Jew and Gentile, bond and free, none are excluded: "Whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely," Rev. xxii. 17.

VII. Gospel promises are glorious promises in respect of what is given:

1. Christ is given, God hath given his Son, not only for the sinner, but to the sinner. Christ promiseth to give himself, offers to betroth himself to us for ever. The Spirit is promised with all the blessings, grace, gifts, and operations thereof, Hos. ii. 16, 19, Isa. lxii. 5.

2. God promises in the Gospel to give himself, "I will be your God, and you shall be my people." This promise is the highest, the fullest, and sweetest of all promises; Austin speaking of it, breaketh forth in admiration, "What is better than this goodness! What is or can be greater happiness than this! Can God give any thing greater than himself."

3. Whatsoever he is, has, or can do, in a gracious way, is promised to be given in this one promise. He is one eternal, all-sufficient, immutable, infinite, glorious, incomprehensible, omniscient, omnipresent, holy, and gracious God. His goodness, truth, power, wisdom, mercy, loving-kindness, faithfulness, is engaged for believers.

4. O what is in man that thou art mindful of him? Is all below thyself too little and not good enough for man, that thou givest thyself to fill and satisfy him? All that God is or hath so far as communicative is promised, &c. life, light, grace, strength, wealth, riches, pleasure, honour, is the believer's.

5. Whatsoever he can do so far as comports with his own glory and our good, is promised, viz. to feed, support, suppress fears, prevent danger, keep in or deliver out of trouble, &c.

6. The greatness of this promise will appear by considering what all other things are in comparison of God; if heaven be nothing, what is earth in comparison of him? all other things come from him as water from a fountain; what are all things without him, either spiritual or temporal? Consider the necessity of him. Men make a shift to live without enjoying God (though such are dead whilst they live) but know not how to die without him; nothing but God is a suitable good for the soul. It is not clothes that can clothe it; it is not silver, gold, nor pearl can adorn it; it is not fire that can warm it, nor bread can feed it, nor wine can cheer it, nor money can satisfy it, nor earthly friends comfort it; it is God only that can supply all the wants and necessities of the soul.

7. This is a great promise, because nothing is yours till God is yours: by union with him the soul is interested into all spiritual and temporal good things.

8. It is a part and portion which can never be spent; you may live upon God, there is enough in him for millions, and millions of millions; Psal. lxxiii. 25. See God a Portion. God is better than heaven, better than grace, better than glory, better than things present, or things to come; the promises are like a rich ring of gold, but this is the rare diamond in that ring; it is the crown, the top, excellency of all promises; his wisdom is the soul for direction, his power for protection, his grace for its acceptance, his Spirit for its consolation, his creatures on earth to serve us, his angels to guard us, his ordinances to feed and strengthen us, his grace to adorn us, his riches to advance and crown us to eternity.

This is a great promise, the greatest promise; God gives light when he gives himself, he gives life when he gives himself. God is light without obscurity, how sweet is that light! He is life without mortality, how sweet is that life! Peace without perplexity, love without mutability, how sweet is such love! God fills and satisfies all that enjoy him; beyond God the heart can desire nothing.

VIII. Promises of the Gospel are glorious and precious promises, if we consider the seasonableness and suitableness of them.

Rest is promised to the weary	}	Soul.
Food to the hungry
Clothes to the naked
Pardon to the guilty
Liberty to the captive
Strength to the weak
Health and healing to the sick and wounded
Courage to the faint-hearted
Riches to the poor and needy
Light to the blind
Life to the condemned

Were a man cast for life and condemned to die a painful and horrible death, suppose it were to be burnt or roasted alive, and a pardon should be proffered to him in the very nick of time, how sweet and precious would that be to him; even so seasonable and sweet are the promises of the Gospel to poor condemned sinners. God gives them into the soul when it sees it is just dropping into hell, to be burnt for ever in eternal flames.

IX. Promises of the Gospel are glorious in respect of the firmness and stability of them. Gospel promises are firm and sure promises.

1. Made or given forth by one who cannot lie nor deny himself. "In hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began," Tit. i. 1; 2 Tim. ii. 13.

2. They are not yea and nay, not uncertain, doubtful, mutable, and variable, but yea and amen in Christ Jesus. God ever kept his promise with his people, 2 Cor. i.

1. He promised Noah he would not drown the world any more; and how graciously hath he kept that promise, and continued the token of it in the cloud unto this day?

2. God promised Abraham a son, and will work miracles rather than not make that promise good.

3. God promised to give the land of Canaan and rest therein to his seed; how punctual was he in performing of it, as Solomon well observes, 1 Kings viii. 56, "Blessed be the Lord, that hath given rest to his people Israel, according to all that he promised." "There hath not failed one word of all his good promise," &c. It was declared to Abraham that his seed should be strangers in the land of Egypt four hundred years; and Moses shows that at the end thereof, nay the very self-same day, the Lord brought them out of the said land, Exod. xxii. 41.

4. God promised to send a Saviour, and accordingly when the fulness of time was come, he sent him into the world.

5. And, that Gospel promises might be firm and sure to all the faithful and covenant people of God, they are put into Christ's hand, who having shed his blood to procure the good promised, hath received the promises for us as our Trustee, Acts ii. 33, "Therefore being by the right-hand of God exalted, and having received the promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath shed forth this, which ye now see and hear."

6. That the promises might be made sure to all the seed, Christ hath brought himself under an obligation to make them good. And the Lord Jesus is not only engaged, but the Father also, Luke xxiv. 49.

1. In respect of his goodness and mercy, Heb. x. 23, 1 John i. 9.

2. In respect of his faithfulness and truth, 1 Cor. x. 13.

3. Nothing can hinder or obstruct God in accomplishing whatsoever he hath promised.

4. They must be made good because of the nature of the covenant, it is ordered in all things, and sure, 2 Sam. xxiii. 5. It is unto God as the waters of Noah, Isa. liv. 10. They are left in Christ's last will and Testament, that was confirmed by his blood, Heb. ix. 15, 16, 17. See Testator.

"And for this cause he is the Mediator of the New Testament, that by means of death for the redemptions of the transgressions that were under the first Testament, they which are called, might receive the promise of eternal inheritance."

5. But if all this be not enough, God hath engaged himself by oath to make them good; he hath, if I may so speak, pawned his own being, life, power, truth, and holiness, upon the performing whatsoever he hath promised to his own covenant-people, for "when God made a promise to Abraham, because he could swear by no greater, he swore by himself, (Gen. xxii. 16, 17,) saying, surely in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thee." And so after he had patiently endured, he obtained the promise; for men verily swear by the greater, and an oath of confirmation is to them an end of all strife. Wherein God more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath: that by two immutable things in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us," Heb. vi. 13—18. May not this cause a believer to venture upon a promise of God, and to rest satisfied until it be accomplished.

X. Gospel promises are glorious promises, because they are generally and more especially soul or spiritual promises. What is it to have a promise of such or such an estate or lordship, or to be blessed in the basket and store, or with all earthly good things? these are the blessings, it is granted, that worldly men seek after; "I have goods," Luke xii. 19, saith the rich glutton, "laid up for many years:" blind wretch! but how poor and miserable was his soul! Now Gospel promises are of a spiritual, heavenly, and sublime nature, as you have heard before; soul-food, soul-strength, soul-health, soul-riches, soul-place, soul-liberty, soul-life; a Christ, a kingdom, and crown that fadeth not away, for the soul.

XI. Gospel promises are glorious promises, because it is by virtue of these thou comest to take hold of, and obtainest an interest in the Lord Jesus Christ. Is not that a precious promise that will make thee sure of a Saviour? a bare promise for (of his) interest, is security enough, though he has condescended in a gracious manner to us not only to make over himself and eternal life to our souls by promise; but hath given us an earnest also in our hearts; nay, more than that, "sealed us also by his Spirit unto the day of redemption," Eph. i. 13, and iv. 30. See Earnest, and Seal, under the head of metaphors respecting the Spirit.

The promises are the ground of faith and hope; that faith is a fancy, and that hope will be but as a spider's web, that is not grounded upon the promise of God.

XII. Gospel promises are glorious in a comparative sense above the promises of the law.

1. Better in respect of perspicuity or clearness of them, those were promises under obscure types and shadows; justification was held forth by several sacrifices, burnt-offerings and sin-offerings, &c. Sanctification held forth unto several ceremonial washings.

2. Better in regard of the nature or quality of them; the former were generally promises of temporal or earthly things, Deut. xxviii. 34.

3. In respect of the efficacy and power that is in these, over what was in the other. "The law made nothing perfect," Heb. vii. 19. Many blessings were made indeed in case of obedience, but the law gave no power to perform the condition, or help the soul in that obedience.

4. They are better in regard of extent or duration.

XIII. Gospel promises are glorious in respect of the variety of them; there is variety of all good things promised therein, answering to every condition the creature may be under. They tend in a sweet manner to remove all objections, doubts, and discouragements of the soul whatsoever, as you may perceive by taking a brief taste.

Obj. I am a vile sinner, saith the soul, mine iniquity is gone over mine head as a heavy burden; they are more than can be numbered, and are ever before me; I have sinned against light and knowledge, and hated instruction. Is there any hope or promise for such a wretch, such a rebel and monster of wickedness as I am?

Answ. See the promise, "How long, ye simple ones, will ye love simplicity, and the scornors delight in their scorning, and fools hate knowledge? turn at my reproof: behold I will pour out my Spirit upon you, I will make known my words unto you. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him, and to our God, and he will abundantly pardon." "Come unto me all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest," Prov. i. 22, 23, Isa. lv. 7, Matt. xi. 28.

Here are promises that may be grounds of encouragement to the vilest sinner. Were there no promises but to righteous persons, or to men and women, so and so qualified, it were sad. But through Christ, and in closing with him in the Gospel, there is pardon offered to sinners as sinners, though they have been very vile and notorious in wickedness.

Obj. But alas, saith the soul, I have made God mine enemy; his curse and judgments are denounced against me; I may say with Job, God pursues me, Job vi. 4. And hell is ready to receive me; "Whilst I suffer his terrors, I am distracted," Psal. lxxxviii. 15.

Ans. The storm of God's wrath is over in Christ: where God remits the sin, he remits the punishment. "Go, and proclaim these words towards the north, and say, return, and I will not cause mine anger to fall upon you: for I am merciful, saith the Lord, and I will not keep anger for ever," Jer. iii. 12. "He retaineth not his anger for ever, because he delighteth in mercy."

Obj. But alas, I am ignorant of God and of Christ, and know not God; and he will come in flaming fire to take vengeance on such, 2 Thess. i. 7, 8. Woe is me.

Ans. God hath promised to teach thee the knowledge of himself, and to guide thee in the way thou shouldest go. "Good and upright is the Lord, therefore will he teach sinners in the way," Psal. xxv. 8. Nay, and though thou be blind, see what a gracious promise he makes, Isa. xlii. 16, "I will bring the blind by a way that they know not, and I will lead them in the paths they have not known. I will make darkness light before them, and crooked things straight; these things will I do unto them, and not forsake them."

Obj. But my heart is dead and obdurate, you know not the naughtiness of it; O! I am a filthy creature, I cannot mourn nor melt under the word of God.

Ans. "And they shall loathe themselves for the evils they have done," Ezek. xx. 43; and not only for what they have done, but also for the baseness of their vile, stubborn, rebellious, and whorish heart, as is mentioned by the same Prophet; and see what a promise God is pleased to make to those polluted and hard-hearted ones. "A new heart also will I give you, and a new Spirit will I put within you; and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you a heart of flesh," Ezek. xxxvi. 26. God has promised to pour out the Spirit of grace, and that he will melt thee under the sense of thy sin, and cause thee to mourn in a right manner for thy sin. God will not only break thy stony heart, but will also take it away. O blessed promise, he will take it away because it is good for nought; it is not fit to be wrought upon, it is not soft or pliable, there is no mending of it, it must be new made, new cast, like a cracked bell, before God's Image can be formed in it, or engraven upon it, &c.

Obj. Aye, but I have been so vile and wicked, that I know not what evil things I could do more against God, than made I have done.

Ans. So it is said of Judah and Israel, Jer. iii. 5. "Behold, thou hast spoken, and done evil things as thou couldest;" yet mind the promise of God to them, "Return,—and I will not cause my anger to fall upon you: I am merciful, saith the Lord, only acknowledge thine iniquity," &c. ver. 12, 13.

Obj. But I cannot think there is mercy and pardon for me; it cannot enter into my thoughts.

Ans. "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the ungodly man his thoughts, and turn to the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him, and to our God, and he will abundantly pardon: for my thoughts are not your thoughts, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my thoughts higher than your thoughts," &c. Isa. lv. 7, 8, 9.

But saith another soul, I have backslidden from God, there is therefore no comfort and salvation for me.

Ans. "I will heal thy backslidings, and love thee freely," Jer. iii. 12, 14, Hos. xiv. 4.

Obj. But this and the other sin and corruption will be too hard for me; "I shall one day fall by the hand of Saul," saith David; so may I say in respect of one base sin that waylays me, and doth always beset me.

Ans. Soul, thou shalt not finally be overcome, though thou fall thou shalt rise again; what saith God to thee, "I will subdue your iniquities?" Micah vii. 18, 19. "Sin shall not have dominion over you, for ye are not under the law, but under grace," Rom. vi. 14, Psal. lxxvii. 3.

Obj. But Satan will be too many and mighty for me, he will break my bones, and devour me at one time or other.

Answ. But what says God, the promise runs, he shall but bruise thy heel, not break thy head: he has also promised to "bruise Satan under thy feet shortly," Rom. xvi. 20. "My grace is sufficient for thee," 2 Cor. xii. 9.

Obj. But I have no power to stand, I shall fall when persecution comes, I shall not be able to go through fiery trials.

Answ. I will give thee power, saith the Lord, "He giveth power to the faint, and to them that have no might." "Fear not, worm Jacob, and ye men of Israel, I will help thee, I will uphold thee, &c.; when thou goest through the fire I will be with thee," &c.

Obj. If I follow God and his ways, my friends will leave me, nay, my father and mother will forsake me, and how shall that loss be made up.

Answ. "When my father and mother forsake me," saith David, "the Lord will take me up;" "I will never leave thee, saith God, nor forsake thee," Psal. xxvii. 10, Heb. xiii. 5.

Obj. But what shall I do for a father?

Answ. "I will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty," Jer. iii. 19, 2 Cor. vi. 18.

Obj. But I am weak, and not able to speak when I am brought before rulers for Christ's sake.

Answ. "Take no care, it shall be given to you the same hour."

Obj. But notwithstanding all this, I am afraid I shall deny the faith, and depart for ever from God.

Answ. "I will put my fear in their hearts, that they shall not depart from me."—"My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me, and I give them eternal life, and they shall never perish, neither shall any pluck them out of my hands," Jer. xxxii. 40, John x. 27, 28.

Obj. But strange evils have befallen me.

Answ. "All things shall work together for good."

Obj. I am afraid I shall want bread.

Answ. "The young lions want and suffer hunger, but they that fear the Lord shall not lack any good thing."—"He will give grace and glory: and no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly."

Obj. But those that live godly are in danger to be undone, to follow Christ is the way to lose all, say what you will.

Answ. "Godliness is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." It is the only way to grow rich; those that lose any thing for Christ's sake, shall have a hundred-fold in this life, and in the world to come life everlasting.

Obj. But I may lose my life if I keep faithful to the Lord Jesus.

Answ. "He that loses his life for my sake, shall find it;" all such shall have an heavenly life for an earthly one, an eternal life for a transitory one; and thus by the help of the Spirit, the promises sweetly tend to answer all doubts and objections that may arise in poor sinners, or in the hearts, of weak believers, which is the last thing I shall mind, as to the glorious excellent nature of Gospel promises.

Tenthly, the Gospel is glorious in respect of the privileges thereof; here I might insist upon adoption or sonship, free access to the throne of grace, a dwelling-place in God's house, right to the ministry, and all the gifts thereof; whether Paul or Apollos, all is yours, and right to partake of the prayers of the Church, and many other privileges that occasionally have been mentioned, which here I shall omit.

Eleventhly, the Gospel is glorious in respect of the salvation brought about by the Lord Jesus, as recorded and revealed therein. That Gospel salvation is a glorious salvation doth appear from what hath been said.

1. In respect of God, who in his eternal wisdom, first found it out, or was the contriver of it.

2. In respect of Christ, who is more immediately the Author thereof, Heb. v. 9.

3. In respect of the price of this salvation, viz., the blood of Jesus Christ.

4. In that all the glorious attributes shine forth in their own glorious splendour and lustre therein. They all meet together in sweet harmony: righteousness and truth meet together, justice and mercy do, as it were, kiss each other, as hath already been hinted; the Gospel shows that God in magnifying one attribute, doth not eclipse the glory of another.

5. In respect of the publishers of it.

(1.) The angels.

(2.) The Lord Jesus himself.

(3.) The Apostles.

6. In respect of all other salvations: what was that glorious salvation God wrought for Israel at the Red Sea, in comparison of the salvation of the Gospel by the Lord Jesus? Many conclude that salvation of Israel, and other great salvations spoken of in the Old Testament, were as types and shadows of this.

7. In respect of the confirmation of it by signs and wonders, and divers miracles and gifts of the Holy Ghost, the dead were raised, the blind saw, the temple rent asunder, the sun darkened, the graves opened, the Spirit miraculously given down, and all to confirm the salvation of the Gospel, Heb. ii. 3, 4.

8. Gospel salvation is a glorious salvation in respect of the workings and operations of the Holy Spirit upon the heart, in order to the initiating of the soul in the grace and blessings thereof, as hath been shown already. The Holy Trinity is employed and concerned in bringing about and finally accomplishing of this salvation.

9. In respect of the seasonableness of it; every thing therein being gloriously fitted and suited as to time, and the necessity of poor sinners; "In due time Christ died for the ungodly." See Promises.

10. Upon consideration of what we are hereby delivered from, viz., sin, Satan, the law, wrath of God, death, and everlasting burning.

11. In respect of all those things and blessings we are hereby invested with, and hope to receive.

12. Gospel salvation is glorious, because it is a free salvation; "Not by works of righteousness that we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us," Tit. ii. 5.

13. Because it is a full salvation; it supplies the soul with all things it wants, whether grace, light, power, wisdom, peace, or any thing else in order to initiate into it, or the perfect accomplishment of it.

14. Because it is a sweet soul-satisfying salvation. Every one that sees his interest in it, may say with good old Simeon, "Now let thy servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation."

15. It is a certain and sure salvation.

16. It is an eternal salvation. "Israel shall be saved in the Lord, with an everlasting salvation." "And being made perfect, he became the Author of everlasting salvation to all them who obey him," Heb. v. 9.

INFERENCES.

I. This may inform and fully convince all considerate persons, what the reason and cause is that the devil is such an implacable enemy to the Gospel, and uses all means imaginable to prevent it or hinder the light thereof from shining into our hearts; "If our Gospel be hid it is hid to them that are lost; in whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them that believe not, lest the light of the glorious Gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them," 2 Cor. iv. 3, 4.

II. It also shows us what a great blessing God hath bestowed upon this nation.

III. It may be a means to stir up all poor sinners to believe and obey it, to prize and esteem it.

IV. It may teach us to contend earnestly for it, and to hold it fast, in spite of all opposers whatsoever.

V. What motives might hence be inferred to prevail with all sincere believers to be earnest with God, that they may behold in this glass more of his glory, to the end it may by its reflected rays, change them into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord. That it may shine into their hearts,

(1.) As they would be as burning and shining lights to others.

(2.) As they would live in the joy and comfort of it themselves.

(3.) As they would approve themselves Wisdom's children, by justifying and standing by, and for, this glorious Gospel held forth in the word of God, in the worst times.

VI. If the Gospel be so glorious, it may put each man upon examination, dost thou perceive and clearly behold the glory which shines forth in it? Some, it is to be feared, never saw the Gospel in the glory of it; it is as a sealed book to them; they see but the outside of the book, they are not able to discern the lustre and glory which is contained in it; "The god of this world hath blinded the minds," saith the apostle, "of them that believe not, lest the light of the glorious Gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them," 2 Cor. iv. 3, 4.

Some men commend the Gospel only because it contains so many righteous and good laws, and holy rules of justice and morality, teaching men to live soberly, and to do as they would be done unto, but see but little more in it; which shows, these men have but little of the mystery, and glory of the Gospel opened to them; for though it be granted, this it is one part of the excellency of it, yet it is not the chief, as appears by what hath been said.

Again there are others who seemingly are much affected with the Gospel, that book of books, and yet cry up, and magnify the light within above it, as if that were a more perfect rule than the holy Gospel, and word of God; which shows how little of the Gospel glory appears to them.

In the last place, if the Gospel be so glorious, O! pray, whosoever thou art, that God would be pleased to open thine eyes, that thou mayest see it so to be, and cry mightily, that he would be pleased never to take it away from this poor nation, nor suffer its glory and brightness to be eclipsed by letting in Popish darkness again amongst us. If we once lose the Gospel, we may all cry Ichabod, the glory is departed from England: and with the Church of old, say, "The crown is fallen from our heads, woe unto us that we have sinned."

Quest. But some may say, why doth Satan endeavour to hide the Gospel?

Ans. 1. It is because he is such an implacable enemy to mankind; he cannot endure the light himself, and he would not (such is his hatred to us) have the light of the Gospel shine upon us.

2. Because of that malice he bears to the Lord Jesus, he would fain keep men ignorant of a Saviour; not only out of hatred to man, but also out of implacable enmity to the Lord Jesus Christ, that so he may as much as lies in him, hinder our Saviour's chief design and intention in coming into the world; which was to bring men out of darkness into the light.

3. Because he knows whilst he can keep men ignorant of the Gospel, he hath them fast enough, what profession soever they make of religion, though they hear, read, pray, gives alms, nay, and in many things reform their lives; yet if they see not the way of salvation as it was revealed in the Gospel, he matters it not, they still remain his captives.

4. Because it is hereby his kingdom is like to fall; it is the light of the Gospel, that tends to the utter overthrow and ruin of the kingdom of darkness.

What wonderful things hath the Gospel done in the world, and what power is there in it, by the help of the Holy Spirit to dethrone Satan, and break all his chains to pieces! therefore he bestirs himself to hinder the breaking out of the light and knowledge in every nation, and causes fierce opposition to be made against those who endeavour to supplant him, and lay open his grand designs. This informs us how it comes about there is so much ignorance and gross darkness in the world; not only in Popish countries, but also where the Gospel is preached. Though men hear it preached every day, yet, O! how blind and ignorant are many sinners. Men are satisfied with the bare notion of things, and name of Christians, never minding religion in good earnest, but in a most dreadful manner, are grown so fool-hardy, and venturous, as to venture and expose their souls to eternal ruin. The devil hath blinded their minds; this also shows us from whence it is, there are, and formerly have been, so many false and detestable opinions, errors, and cursed heresies in the world. Alas, the devil this way, endeavours to obstruct and hinder the Gospel from being received, he has indeed striven for a long time wholly to overthrow the very foundation of the Christian religion, and to bring in another Gospel; he strives to cheat men of the true Saviour, and in his stead to preach another, of whom the scripture is wholly ignorant; how many have impudently asserted the Light in all men to be the true Christ, and Saviour of the world? He doth not strive to take away his glorious sovereignty, and set up another universal head, who hath power to make laws, and repeal them in matters of religion at his pleasure, as the followers of the beast affirm, but now of late endeavours to take away the very Person of the Holy Jesus. Also to change the ordinances, or wholly to deny them, hath been, and is another of his stratagems, which witness to the true Christ, his death, burial, and resurrection. And lastly, Satan hath always endeavoured also to bring into contempt the ministers of the gospel, or else raise up persecutions upon them; and all these things he doth to hinder the gospel from shining, or obstruct the promulgation thereof.

THE KISSES OF CHRIST'S MOUTH.

"Let him Kiss me with the Kisses of his mouth, for thy love is better than wine," Cant. i. 2.

"LET him," that is, Christ, "Kiss me." By these expressions, (saith Ainsworth and others*) the Church desireth to have Christ manifested in the flesh. Others by Kisses, understand most friendly, familiar, and sensible manifestations of love, for they are so amongst friends; as it was betwixt Jonathan and David, and so it is between husband and wife. It is evident that Kisses are mentioned on sundry occasions used for divers ends, and signifying several things.

1. We read of a Kiss of salutation, 1 Sam. xx. 41, 1 Thess. v. 26.
2. A Kiss of valediction, Ruth ii. 9.
3. A Kiss of reconciliation, 2 Sam. xiv. 33.
4. A Kiss of subjection, Psal. ii. 12.
5. A Kiss of approbation, Prov. xxiv. 26.
6. A Kiss of adoration, 1 Kings xix. 18.
7. A traitorous Kiss, Matt. xxvi. 49.
8. A Kiss of affection, Gen. xlv. 15.

And since the Church desires in the plural number, Kisses of Christ's Mouth, it may refer.

1. To a Kiss of reconciliation, or manifestation of peace, unity, and friendship.
2. A Kiss of affection, which is very sweet, to have Christ express or manifest his gracious love to her.
3. A Kiss of approbation, which is, saith Mr. Guild, sweetest of all.

The text is purely allegorical, as the whole song is acknowledged to be by all divines.

METAPHOR.

I. KISSES betoken love and good-will to the party they are given to.

II. They betoken a hearty conjunction, and cordial union of two parties.

III. They betoken such a friendship, as allows a liberty of access and communication at all times.

"With my soul have I desired thee in the night," Cant. v. 2, Isa. xxvi. 9.

IV. They leave such impressions, as engage the affections to a future remembrance to the object.

PARALLEL.

I. THE spouse in the text desires of the Lord Jesus, tokens, or further manifestations of his love and good-will to her.

II. The Church desires further tokens and assurances of that blessed conjunction and union, that is between herself and the Lord Jesus Christ.

III. Gracious souls desire a more near access unto Christ, and spiritual intimacy and communion with him: "O when wilt thou come unto me!" "It is the voice of my Beloved that knocketh."

"With my soul have I desired thee in the night," Cant. v. 2, Isa. xxvi. 9.

IV. The spouse desires such favour, and manifestations of Christ's love and grace, that she may never forget his love: "We will remember his love more than wine," Cant. i. 4.

* Ainsworth, Guild, Sibbs, Durham, Wilson, Glassius, Illyricus, in locum.

V. They oblige the giver to show further favours, and acts of love and kindness, to the party he bestows them on.

elect. Let him seal up his love to us promises, and we are sure enough.

VI. They are a confirmation of the endeared love and reality we profess.

VII. They are the privilege and right (in a more peculiar manner) of covenant relations, as husband and wife, &c.

VIII. In reconciliation, after a seeming breach between dear relations, they are highly prized and longed for by the party offending.

IX. A Kiss is looked upon as a very high honour, when received by an inferior person from a great king or prince, and begets in others a longing after the like manifestation of sovereign grace and favour.

X. They are very sweet and comfortable to very dear friends, after long absence.

XI. They are the first ceremony or initiation of kind and comfortable entertainment; as in the case of the profuse and extravagant Prodigal, Luke xv. 20.

XII. To be admitted to Kiss the hand of a prince, is a great honour, because of his royalty and grandeur; but to Kiss his Mouth, is extraordinary, and only allowed to great favourites.

V. The spouse desires, as doth every gracious soul, that Christ would lay himself under such obligations of love and friendship to her, that he may never forget her. The death of Christ is the greatest expression of his affection to his by the Kisses of his Mouth, viz., by his gracious

VI. The spouse desires the greatest confirmation of Christ's love and gracious affection to her, to have clear evidence of her union with him, and eternal life.

VI. Manifestations of Christ's love do belong properly to the Church, and covenanted people of God. Hence the spouse presumes to speak thus unto her beloved, "Let him Kiss me with the Kisses of his Mouth." I have the liberty and privilege to request it of him.

VIII. Manifestations of Christ's love are greatly prized by gracious persons, after there hath been a seeming strangeness or breach in their apprehension between them, knowing they were wholly in the fault, and the only cause of the breach.

IX. The love-tokens, or expressions of Christ's blessed favour to the spouse, makes the daughters of Jerusalem to long after Christ's favour as well as she: "Whither is thy beloved gone, O thou fairest among women, that we may seek him with thee?" Cant. vi. 1. This was after she had declared, "his Mouth is most sweet, he is altogether lovely," cant. v. 16.

X. How sweet and exceeding comfortable are the Kisses of Christ's Mouth, or evidence of his love, after a long time of spiritual desertion.

XI. Manifestations of Christ's and the Father's love are glorious tokens or acts of acceptance of poor sinners, who having been very vile and rebellious, return home at last to their Father's house, and embrace a precious Saviour.

XII. The Kisses of Christ's mouth, who is the only King and blessed Potentate of heaven and earth, are in an infinite honour; can a poor creature be more eminently dignified?

"Let him Kiss me with the Kisses of his mouth."

By Mouth, annotators generally understand, is meant his holy Word, or his own lovely and gracious doctrine; that is, let me have expressions, or give evidence of thy love to me from thy word: "Kiss me with the Kisses of thy Mouth," by metonymy of the cause, viz. cum causa organica, sive sermonis formandi instrumentum, pro ipso sermone sive loquela ponitur: That is, when the organical cause, or the instrument that forms speech, is put for the speech itself; as the Mouth is put for testimony, Deut. xvii. 6, and xviii. 19, Matt. xviii. 16, which is expounded, John viii. 17, "It is also written in your law, that the testimony of two men is true." The mouth is also put for a command or appointment, as Gen. xlv. 21, where the Mouth of Pharaoh (so it is in the Hebrew) signifies the command of Pharaoh: so the Mouth of the Lord is put for his command, word, and appointment, Exod. xvii. 1, Numb. iii. 16, 39, xxiv. 13, and xxvii. 14, Deut. i. 26, 43, and xxxiv. 5. Where the Hebrew פִּי juxta os Domini, at the Mouth of the Lord, with us translated, word, is by the Targum attributed to Jonah. Uzziel rendered על נשיקה מימיו אדוני, ab osculum verbi Domini, to the Kiss of the word of the Lord. "Lying lips do not become a prince;" that is, lying words. Now the reason why the Church desires Kisses of Christ's Mouth, may be as followeth.

METAPHOR.

I. Kisses of the mouth are expressions of high favour, much more than to kiss the hand.

II. Kisses of the Mouth have virtue in them; they tend to increase love in the object, or beget more ardent affection.

Lord Jesus; "Woman, thy sins are forgiven thee," Luke vii. 49.

III. Kisses of the mouth are plain and visible evidences of cordial affections, and many times put a person out of doubt about the reality of the giver's love.

upon which thou hast caused me to hope," Psal. cxix. 49.

IV. The Mouth is the instrument or medium to convey the inward conceptions of the heart and mind, whether it respects thoughts or actions, to the knowledge and understanding of others.

Matt. xi. 29, Heb. xi. 2, John x. 10, and xx. 30.

METAPHOR.

I. Others many times kiss them they do not love out of compliment.

II. Others give sometimes a flattering and dissembling Kiss; like that of Absalom's kissing the people, thinking thereby to steal away their hearts from David his father.

III. Others salute persons oftentimes with an unchaste and wanton Kiss.

IV. Others Kiss when they design to murder. Thus Joab kissed Abner, and slew him: Judas our Saviour, and thereby betrayed him.

PARALLEL.

I. Christ in a high manner expresses his favour and exceeding great affection unto his people in his word; "I lay down my life for my sheep." "Greater love than this hath no man," John x. 15, and xv. 13.

II. Evidences of Christ's love from his word and gracious promises are full of life and virtue; they wonderfully draw out the soul in love and longings after Christ. How did that sweet word (or Kiss) of Christ to Mary endear her to the

III. Evidences or manifestations of Christ's love to a believing soul, are clear demonstrations of Christ's real affection. When a promise is set home, and imprinted upon the soul or spirit of a doubting Christian, it causes all his fears to fly away: "Remember thy word unto thy servant,

IV. The word of Christ is the way or glorious medium he makes use of, to convey or make known those gracious, high, and eternal conceptions of his heart and mind to his elect; also hereby he opens and explains to us the end of his coming into the world, and his design in dying, and in all things he did, which otherwise would have been hard to us to have found out, John i. 1,

DISPARITY.

I. Christ never vouchsafes any the Kisses of his Mouth, but to those that he dearly loves.

II. Christ always, when he vouchsafes his gracious favour to any soul, doth it in all simplicity and integrity of heart; in his heart is no guile or deceit.

III. All Christ's Kisses are holy, chaste, heavenly, harmless, and innocent.

IV. Christ's design is to save those whom he kisses: "He came to seek and to save that which was lost." "I come that ye might have life."

INFERENCES.

I. From hence we may perceive what a vast difference there is betwixt the godly and the wicked. The one have their hearts set upon heavenly objects, the other on carnal; the desires of the one are holy, heavenly, and spiritual; the desires of the other are fleshly, earthly, and sensual.

II. If the Kisses of a Saviour, or evidences of his love be so sweet, methinks this should stir up all to desire Kisses of Christ's Mouth.

III. It may be some souls are ready to enquire, how may I come to attain this great happiness and honour, to be embraced in the arms of the Lord Jesus?

1. Wouldest thou have the Kisses of his Mouth? Thou must with Mary Magdalene, fall down, and kiss his feet, and bedew them with the tears of a broken heart; be humbled for thy sin.

2. If thou wouldest have him give thee a Kiss of reconciliation and affection, do thou kiss him with a Kiss of subjection: "Kiss the Son lest he be angry," Psal. ii. 12.

If thou want motives, take these following:—

1. The Father presents his Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, before your eyes in the Gospel (as he doth the like himself) as a person every way deserving your love and affection, to see whether you will respect him or not.

2. The Father highly honoureth the Son; he hath given all things into his hand, he is his heir.

3. The Father hath sent him into the world to seek himself a spouse.

4. He became flesh, that he might be a fit object for sinners.

5. Christ hath a great desire to give himself unto you, and so become yours for ever.

6. He hath abundance of love, great and strong affection.

7. Christ left his glory, and came into the world in a low and contemptible condition, and denied himself for thy sake, and wilt thou not accept of him?

8. Shall he die, and come through a sea of blood to engage thy affection, and wilt thou yield him a Kiss of subjection?

9. Shall he send his ministers, as spokesmen, to entreat you, and will you say nay?

10. Shall he move you by the motions of his Spirit, and checks of conscience; and will you still refuse to close in with him?

11. Shall he knock loud and long, and cry continually to you, and can you still stand it out against him?

12. Will not your gain and preferment be great? What honour and dignity, excelling union with Christ, can you think to meet withal?

13. Are you not like to be miserable at last, if you die before you have an interest in him: "If any love not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be Anathema Maranatha."

IV. But some may say, how comes it to pass the spouse is so bold, and thus familiarly speaks to Christ, "Let him kiss me?" Should not fervour of affection have with it humility of reverence?

To this says Bernard, Ne causamini præsumptionem, ubi affectio urget; reclamat pudor, sed urget amor, qui nec consilio temperatur, nec pudore frænatur. Do not plead presumption, where affection presses forward; be neither kept back by advice, nor restrained by bashfulness, in your approaches to Christ. Besides, saints, who truly love Christ, may boldly come to Christ. Tokens of love, and evidences of divine favour, are the proper rights and privileges of believers; they may be bold with their dearest friend.

THE WORD OF GOD COMPARED TO A NET.

"Again, the kingdom of heaven is like a Net cast into the sea," Matt. xiii. 47.

Some understand by the Net, and kingdom of heaven, that our Saviour intends the Church, others the Gospel. It may have respect to both, but in my opinion it is more clearly applicable to the Gospel.

METAPHOR.

I. A Net is made or prepared, as a convenient thing to catch fish.

II. A Net is made use of by skilful fishers; it requires wisdom rightly to use it, to the end it is

PARALLEL.

I. The Gospel, or word of God, is appointed to catch or convert the souls of men; "Fear not, from henceforth thou shalt catch men," Luke v. 10.

II. The word of God is made use of by skilful and able ministers; and it requires much spiritual wisdom, rightly to use it for the conversion of appointed. A fisher uses oftentimes much policy and craft, in putting in and drawing of his net.

PARABLE.

III. A Net is cast into a multitude of waters, at an adventure, the fisherman not knowing whether it may catch many, or few, or any at all.

IV. A fisherman works hard with his Net, sometimes a great while together, and catcheth nothing.

laboured all night, and have taken nothing," Luke v. 5.

V. A Net takes fish of every sort, some great ones, and some little ones, some good, and some bad; as it is expressed in this Parable.

Magdalene and Paul were before converted; and some that are not such great and capital offenders; for though every man is a great sinner in a proper sense, yet comparatively some are greater, or more guilty, and profane than others; "And there was a woman in the city that was a sinner." Not but that all the women in the city were sinners, but this woman was a notorious one, or one noted and eminent for wickedness. Also the Gospel and church of God takes some bad professors, and counterfeit Christians, as well as such as are sincere.

VI. A Net takes fishes out of their own natural element; and as soon as they are taken out of the water they die.

VII. A Net takes or compasses sometimes a multitude of fishes at once. When Simon Peter put in his Net at the special command of Jesus Christ, he enclosed a great multitude of fishes, Luke v. 6.

VIII. A Net, though it be cast into the sea, and has taken many fishes, yet it is not known of what kind or sort they be, until the Net is drawn up.

IX. After the fisherman hath drawn his Net about so long, that he concludes it hath taken all it is like to enclose and compass in, he then draws it to the shore, and severs the good from the bad; the good he puts into vessels, and the bad he throws away.

cast into the sea, that taketh of all sorts, which when it is full, men draw it to land, and gather the good into vessels, and cast the bad away; so shall it be at the end of the sinners. Paul being crafty, tells the Corinthians, he took, or caught them with guile, 2 Cor. xii. 16.

PARALLEL.

III. The Gospel is preached by a faithful minister to a multitude of people, who are compared to waters in many places of scripture, and yet he knows not, when he preaches, or casteth his Net in, whether he shall take many or few souls, nay, whether one sinner shall be reached or converted thereby, or not.

IV. So a minister sometimes labours a long while together, and takes much pains in preaching the Gospel, and yet converts not one soul; "Who hath believed our report?" &c., Isa. liii. 1. They may sometimes say with Peter, "We have laboured all night, and have taken nothing," Luke v. 5.

V. So the Gospel Net takes hold of some of every sort and degree of men; some great and honourable, rich and mighty in the world, though not many such; some little ones, such as are mean and poor in the world. Again, some great and notorious sinners are taken, such as Mary

Magdalene and Paul were before converted; and some that are not such great and capital offenders; for though every man is a great sinner in a proper sense, yet comparatively some are greater, or more guilty, and profane than others; "And there was a woman in the city that was a sinner." Not but that all the women in the city were sinners, but this woman was a notorious one, or one noted and eminent for wickedness. Also the Gospel and church of God takes some bad professors, and counterfeit Christians, as well as such as are sincere.

VII. The Gospel Net also sometimes takes hold of, or incloseth many sinners at one cast. At one sermon three thousand souls were converted, by that glorious preacher, and famous fisher of men, the Apostle Peter, Acts ii. 37, 41.

VIII. So the Gospel and Church of God, though it take many souls, yet it is not fully known of what sort they be, until the time come that Christ draws the Net up.

IX. The Gospel and Church of God having taken many sinners, or all being brought in, that are to be taken by this spiritual net, Christ will, as it were, at the last day draw it to shore, and then he will sever the good from the bad, the sheep from the goats, the sincere ones from hypocrites; and the one shall be saved, and the other thrown away, viz., be damned. "Again the kingdom of heaven is like unto a net that is world; the angels shall go forth, and separate the bad from the good, and shall cast them into the furnace of fire; there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth," Matt. xiii. 47—50.

PARABLE.

I. A fisherman has one Net prepared to take small fishes, and another to take great ones.

II. A Net many times proves defective, and comes to be broken, and by that means the fisherman loses his draught of fishes.

III. A Net takes fishes out of their own natural element, to their great hurt; the fisher's design in taking them, being to kill and to destroy them.

DISPARITY.

I. The Gospel, or word of God, is but one and the same Net; which takes the great and small metaphorical fishes.

II. There is no deceit in the word, the Gospel Net is never faulty; nor is it from thence so few sinners, or spiritual fishes are taken, but rather from themselves, and Satan, who endeavours to obstruct, as much as in him lies, their being thereby, 2 Cor. iv. 3, 4.

III. The Gospel-Net takes sinner's out of their natural state, viz., ways of sin and wickedness, for their great good and advantage; it being the design of God, and his servants, the ministers of his word, to save their souls alive thereby, Isa. lv. 3, Prov. viii. 35, and xxii. 4, John iii. 36, Rom. viii. 1.

INFERENCES.

I. This parable informs us, how useful the Gospel, and the ministry thereof is, to take and gather in souls to Jesus Christ.

II. Moreover, That all who seem to be wrought upon by the word are not sincere converts; a Net takes bad fishes as well as good.

III. It also shows us what will become of the false professors at the last day. The bad fishes shall be cast away; the rotten and unsound professor, as well as the openly profane person, that never made any profession, shall be both cast into a furnace of fire, there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth.

THE WORD OF GOD COMPARED TO GOLD.

"More to be desired are they than Gold, yea, than much fine Gold," Psal. xix. 10.

"The law of thy mouth is better to me than thousands of Gold and Silver," Psal. cxix. 72.

Though these scriptures do not directly compare the word of God to gold, but rather set out the great excellency of it above Gold, and show the great disproportion there is between Gold and it; yet we shall (as some divines have done) run a parallel between Gold and the word, and then in our usual method show the disparities.

SIMILE.

I. Gold is a precious sort of metal, and it is esteemed the chiefest of all minerals.*

II. Gold contains much in little; a small quantity of Gold is worth much brass, &c. †

Him should all fulness dwell," 1 Tim. iii. 16; Col. i. 19. Very much is contained in one of these short sentences.

III. Gold is a weighty and firm sort of metal.

PARALLEL.

I. The word of God is very precious, and so esteemed by all true Christians: "Thy word is very pure, therefore thy servant loveth it." "I esteem the word of thy mouth above my necessary food," Psal. cxix. 140, Job xxiii. 12.

II. The word contains much in little. "Fear God," O how much is contained in that! "God manifest in the flesh;" "Christ the image of the invisible God;" "It pleased the Father, that in

III. The word of God is ponderous, and very weighty. The words of men are oftentimes

* See Plin. lib. 13. p. 465.

† Greenhil.

airy and empty, and, when weighed in the balance, as light as vanity, and not to be regarded; but what God speaks, is firm. And such as find it not heavy and weighty now, so as to let it sink into their hearts, shall find it will one day sink them down to hell: "The words that I speak shall judge you at the last day," John xii. 48.

SIMILE.

IV. Gold hath much beauty and splendour in it; the colour shines and is glorious.

V. Gold is made use of to deck and to adorn with. The father of the prodigal called for a ring to put upon his finger. Nay, more than this, the crowns of kings and princes are usually made of Gold.

of old, "The crown is fallen from our head, woe to us that we have sinned," Lam. v. 16. The law of God is said to be "An ornament unto the head, and chains about the neck," called (Cant. i. 10) "Chains of Gold."

VI. Gold is used to make vessels. We read, that God appointed under the law many vessels to be made of pure Gold; divers such were in Solomon's temple, all which were figurative.

VII. Gold is durable, it abides the fire; it will not lose or waste by being put into the furnace, as other metals will.

away, but my word shall not pass away," Matt. v. 18. "All flesh is grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of the field: the grass withereth, and the flower thereof fadeth away. But the word of the Lord endureth for ever: and this is the word which by the Gospel is preached to you," 1 Pet. i. 24, 25.

VIII. Gold enriches him that finds much of it; it is esteemed as a precious and principal treasure,* and as such, both in former and later times, hath it been hid and laid up: "Thou shalt heap up gold as the dust," &c., Job xxii. 24. "Tyrrus heaped up silver as the dust, and fine Gold as the mire of the streets," Zech. ix. 3.

IX. Men take much pains to get Gold, they dig through hills and mountains for it, and endure much labour and pain before they can obtain it.

they must do it carefully, vigorously, virtue, and excellency of the word, so as to make it their own, they must seek for as hidden treasure, Prov. ii. 4.

X. Gold is a sort of metal that is often tried, to see if it be what

PARALLEL.

IV. So is the word of God. The Gospel is said to be glorious, it is indeed transcendently excellent; its glory shines forth, and may be demonstrated many ways, 2 Cor. iv. 4. See metaphor Light.

V. The word of God most gloriously decks and adorns every true Christian, that hath store of it in his heart, in whom it dwells richly. The Church is said to be clothed with wrought Gold; the word of God, and the graces thereof, are doubtless intended thereby. The Gospel is the saint's crown and royal diadem; should God suffer it to be taken away, they may cry out with Israel

VI. The word of God is made use of by Jesus Christ, to make many golden vessels, golden saints, golden churches; called by the Spirit "golden candlesticks," Rev. i. 20. No people in the world are so glorious, precious, and amiable, as God's people. See Candlestick and Vessel.

VII. The word of God is durable. All the endeavours of wicked men from time to time have been to destroy the word; it hath been in many fires, as I may say, and yet it remains and abides the same. "Heaven and earth shall pass

VIII. The word of God is of a soul-enriching nature; it enriches the mind with the wisdom and glorious knowledge of Jesus Christ, and blessed experience of his rich love and grace: "Let the word of God dwell in you richly, in all wisdom," Col. iii. 16. No treasure is like to the treasure of God's word: "We have this treasure in earthen vessels," 2 Cor. iv. 7. (See metaphor Treasure.) David hid it, Psal. cxix. 11, and Mary, as a precious treasure, laid it up in her heart.

IX. So those that would be enriched with the word of God, have much of it in their heads and hearts, must take pains; they must dig in these golden mines, as it were, for it. "Search the scriptures," saith Christ, John v. 39. It is a word taken from miners, such as seek for gold;

X. The word of God is called a tried word; it has been tried by many thousand Christians, it is taken to be, whether it be so good, pure, &c.

SIMILE.

never failed them that trusted to it. "As for God, his way is perfect." "The words of the Lord are pure words, as silver is tried in a furnace of earth, purified seven times," Psal. xviii. 30, and xii. 6.

XI. Men that get much Gold, are sometimes set upon by thieves, and are in great danger of being robbed; and from hence take care to secure it, and themselves, as well as they can.

is it beset by bold, impudent, and bloody Romanish thieves? What is the reason? Why, England is rich, it hath got much Gold in it, much of the word of God; here are a rich people, many rich churches, rich souls; and therefore this grand thief hath consulted with many of his company, to set upon us, and rob us of all our treasure. And hence it is we take, or ought to take such care, to secure the word of God, and ourselves from being undone by losing it.

XII. Gold is known to be a rich and sovereign cordial, and excellent good to cure several diseases of the body, particularly the king's evil.

SIMILE.

I. Gold and earthly treasures are, by the permission of God, at the will and command of men. Daniel tells us, that the vile person shall have power over the treasures of Gold and silver, &c. They may take away, and dispossess us of the best of earthly things.

II. Gold may canker and corrupt: "Your Gold and silver, is cankered, and the rust of them shall be a witness against you," James v. 3.

the word of God, which liveth and abideth for ever," 1 Pet. i. 23.

III. Though Gold will do many things for the body, yet it cannot profit the soul; it will beautify and enrich the outward man, but it cannot beautify, purge, or enrich the inward man.

IV. Gold and silver will not satisfy or fill the craving desires of man: "Neither is the eye satisfied with riches." "He that loveth silver, shall not be satisfied therewith," Eccles. iv. 8, and v. 10.

PARALLEL.

and found to be what it is taken to be, viz., pure Gold, sacred truth; yea, and "sweeter than the honey, or the honey-comb," Psal. cxix. 103. It "As for God, his way is perfect." "The words of the Lord are pure words, as silver is tried in a furnace of earth, purified seven times," Psal.

XI. Those people, or particular souls, that do possess and enjoy much of the glorious word of God, are in danger of being set upon by spiritual thieves and robbers; Satan, and many others his emissaries, will be sure to assault such. What experience hath England had of this for many years, but more especially of late? How do possess and enjoy much of the glorious word of God, are in danger of being set upon by spiritual thieves and robbers; Satan, and many others his emissaries, will be sure to assault such. What experience hath England had of this for many years, but more especially of late? How

XII. So the word of God is by all true Christians known, and by common experience found, to be a most sovereign cordial for the soul, to revive and comfort a desponding and drooping spirit; excellent good to cure inward distempers.

DISPARITY.

I. The word of God received into the heart, viz., into the affection and understanding, &c., no man can take it from us; it is not in their power to rob and dispossess us of this sacred Gold. They may take away our Bibles out of our hands, but cannot take the word of God out of our hearts, as it is engraven upon the fleshly tables thereof.

II. The word of God is incorruptible, so pure, that it can never canker, neither lose any of its excellent glory, beauty, and virtue, it admits not of any rust or pollution: "Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth for ever," 1 Pet. i. 23.

III. The word of God enriches, beautifies, and purges the soul: "Now are you clean, through the word that I have spoken unto you," John xv. 3. He is spiritually the richest man, that hath most of the word of God abiding in him, who hath store of precious promises laid up against a time of need.

IV. The word of God received in truth, is of a soul-satisfying nature: "The fear of the Lord tendeth to life, and he that hath it shall abide satisfied," &c., Prov. xix. 23. This is that water of life, that whosoever drinketh thereof shall thirst no more; have no more an inordinate and unsatisfiable desire after worldly things. See Water.

INFERENCES.

I. From hence you may see who are the richest men in the world.

II. It reproves them that desire Gold above the word, and that labour for it above the blessings of the word, and grieve more for the loss of it, and of other earthly treasure, than for the loss of the word, and other spiritual good things.

III. It may also stir up all to hold fast the word, and every part and parcel of it. Let the saints of God in England consider the worth of the word, and that it is more precious than Gold. How will men expose themselves, before they will be robbed of thousands of Gold and silver?

IV. Esteem the precepts and promises, and every jot and tittle of God's word above Gold. Be not careless of it, nor throw it by, but lay it up as carefully as you lay up Gold, hide it in your hearts.

THE WORD OF GOD CALLED MILK.

"As new-born babes desire the Milk of the Word, that ye may grow thereby," 1 Pet. ii. 2.
"For every one that useth Milk is unskilful in the Word of Righteousness, for he is a babe," Heb. v. 13.

By Milk here, we must understand the doctrine of the Gospel, which is easily taught unto the capacities of such as are children in understanding.

METAPHOR.

I. Milk is good to nourish the body; and physicians tells us, where it is well digested, it maketh good blood.

II. Milk is proper food for children, and new-born babes; it nourisheth them exceedingly; they grow and thrive thereby, though they have nothing else to feed upon.

III. New-born babes greatly desire and long after the Milk of the breast.

IV. Milk is a restorative, excellent good in consumptions, or for them that be lean.*

V. Milk was one of those choice blessings that Canaan did abound with; it is called "a land flowing with Milk and honey;" as much as to say, it is a land of rare and choice good things.

PARALLEL.

I. The Word of God is good food for the soul: "Man liveth not by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God," Matt. iv. 4. Where the Word of God is received, and well digested in the understanding, it tends to make a sound Christian.

II. The Word of God is proper food for those that are born again by the Spirit, or are truly regenerated. Such, like new-born babes, grow and thrive by feeding spiritually upon the Word, precepts, and promises of God; and many have lived upon it, and have been satisfied thereby, when they have had nothing else to feed upon.

III. So, upright and faithful Christians greatly thirst after and desire the Word of God: "As new-born babes, desire the sincere Milk of the Word," 1 Pet. ii. 2.

IV. The spiritual Milk of the Word is an excellent restorative for a consumptive, wasted, and decayed Christian: "they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength," Isa. xl. 31.

V. The holy Word of God is one of the choicest blessings God hath bestowed upon his Church and people. Those that would see the excellency of the Word and Gospel of Christ, may read the metaphor Light.

APPLICATION.

You may know by this, whether you are born again or no. Do you cry for, and greatly desire the pure Word of God, the sincere Milk of the Word, without human mixtures and ceremonies? The Word of God feeds best, when it is without any composition of human invention.

* Schola Salernit, cap. 43.

THE WORD OF GOD COMPARED TO STRONG MEAT.

"But Strong Meat belongeth to them that are of age," &c. Heb. v. 14.

As the Word of God is called Milk, so it is also Strong Meat. By Strong Meat, is meant the more profound, perfect, and mysterious doctrine of the Gospel, which is to feed strong Christians.

METAPHOR.

I. Strong Meat is not meet or convenient food for babes; if they could eat it, yet they want strength to digest it.

taken in) is for them; Strong Meat belongs to strong Christians, men of experience, Heb. v. 12, 13, 14.

II. If children, after they are grown up, and arrived to years of maturity, refuse Strong Meat, and cannot feed upon any thing but milk, there may be cause to fear they are some way defective or diseased.

III. Strong Meat yieldeth strong and perfect nourishment; such as can feed upon, and well digest it, are more able and capable for business, than those that only feed or live upon milk.

PARALLEL.

I. There is something contained in the Word of God, that young Christians, who are like new-born babes, cannot receive it, so as to understand it; it is not proper for them. The milk of the Word, (such things as are easily

II. So if Christians, who have been a great while converted, and in the profession of the Gospel, and yet cannot take in, nor feed upon any thing but the milk of the Word, Strong Meat being offensive to them, it argues some great defect in their understanding, or that they are spiritually distempered.

III. So those Christians that can feed upon the Strong Meat of the Word, who in their understandings can in some measure relish and digest the mysteries of the Gospel, or those deep things of God, get most spiritual strength, and are more fit for business than the weak, who only live upon milk, 1 Cor. ii. 10.

THE WORD OF GOD COMPARED TO HONEY.

"Sweeter than Honey, and the Honey-comb, to my taste," Psal. xix. 10.

"How sweet are thy words unto my taste! yea, sweeter than the Honey unto my mouth!" Psal. cxix. 103.

"But it shall be in thy mouth as sweet as Honey," Rev. x. 9.

SWEETER than Honey, or the Honey-comb; not only the most fine and delicate Honey, but all things which be delightful and pleasant to the taste, by a Synecdoche. Because nothing is so precious and pleasant as gold and Honey, thence comparisons are taken from these rather than other things, to express the very great worth and sweetness of God's Word. Wilson.

SIMILE.

I. Honey is exceeding sweet to the taste; "What is sweeter than Honey?" Judg. xiv. 18.

II. Honey, if it be added or put into other things that are bitter, it will take away, in a great measure, the bitterness thereof, and so cause a man to receive it down with less difficulty.

PARALLEL.

I. So the Word of God is very sweet and pleasant to the taste of gracious souls. What is more desirable to a sincere believer, than the sacred precepts and promises of the Gospel?

II. So if the soul be under affliction, temptation, persecution for Christ's sake, which are bitter things in themselves, yet if God be pleased to add or put into this bitter, but some of the sweet promises of the Word, how wonderfully is the bitterness abated, and with what ease can a Christian bear up under them!

SIMILE.

III. But notwithstanding Honey is so sweet and pleasant, yet there are some men that do not care for it: "The full soul loatheth the Honey-comb."

trash of this world, that they loathe the

IV. Naturalists affirm, that Honey is good to dissolve and dissipate tumours and swellings, and to mollify hardness; and that it is of an healing nature, and serveth for an infinite number of uses.

V. Honey is also of a purging quality.

through the word that I have spoken unto you," Psal. cxix. 9, John xv. 3.

SIMILE.

I. There are several hurtful qualities in Honey, which may be prevented by taking the advice of the learned physician.

II. There is much dross in Honey.

PARALLEL.

III. Though the word of God is so precious and desirable, yet there are many wicked and ungodly ones, that cannot endure it. A vile Papist, in the massacre of Ireland, took up a Bible and cursed it, saying, "that hath done all the mischief." Sinners are so glutted with the filthy

IV. The Word of God is of most sovereign virtue to dissolve and dissipate all spiritual tumours of the soul, and to mollify and break in pieces the hardness of the heart. How did it mollify the hearts of the three thousand Peter preached unto, Acts ii. 36, 37. See Hammer.

V. The Word and Spirit of God, when they operate together in the soul, are the best spiritual purgation in the world: "Now, are ye clean,

DISPARITY.

I. There are no hurtful qualities in the Word of God; that needs no human skill to correct or clarify it.

II. There is none in the word of God: "Thy word is very pure, therefore thy servant loveth it." Psal. cxix. 140.

INFERENCES.

Hence let us learn, with the industrious bee, to gather some Honey out of every flower of God's word. How doth that little creature labour in the summer, to store herself with food against winter! Let every Christian learn of them, but more especially the ministers of God's word, that their lips may drop like the Honey-comb. And let examine, whether we ever as yet experienced the word sweet as Honey to our taste?

THE WORD OF GOD COMPARED TO FIRE.

"His Word was in mine Heart, as a burning Fire," &c., Jer. xx. 9.

"Is not my Word like as Fire," chap. xxiii. 29.

"Quench not the Spirit," 1 Thess. v. 19.

The Holy Spirit and word of God, is, and may be fitly compared to Fire.

METAPHOR.

I. Fire is of an illuminating or enlightening quality.

"The entrance of it gives Light," Psal. cxix. 130. "By it the eyes of our understanding are enlightened:" by which we know the riches of his glory, Eph. i. 17, 18. See metaphor Light.

II. Fire is of a warming and heating quality; there is not only illumination, but calefaction.

III. Fire will burn any combustible matter it can seize upon, separating metal from rust and dross; it discovers whether metals be of a current or counterfeit

PARALLEL.

I. The Word and Spirit is Light. "The commandment is a lamp, and the law is Light; enlightening the eyes," Psal. xix. 8, Prov. vi. 23.

II. The Word and Spirit of God, give heat and warmth to the benumbed soul of a poor sinner; they give zeal and fervency, that is, heat of spirit to serve the Lord.

III. The Word and the Spirit of God burns and consumes all that is fit fuel for it; when thoroughly kindled upon the souls and consciences of men, it destroys the hay, stubble, word, chaff, &c., of sin and corruption; and base alloy. Whatever Fire seizes effectually upon, it converts it into a flame.

METAPHOR.

causes the soul to burn in love to Christ, to be lifted up with transported ardency of affection after him, and desiring to be united to him also, Luke xxiv. 32. All men are to be tried whether with respect to doctrines or practices by God's word; and what disagrees with this standard, or will not bear touch with this touch-stone, is to be rejected as counterfeit, and of no value.

IV. Fire is of an ascending quality, greedily mounting to its proper seat, and will not rest till it incorporate with its own elements. Earth and water incline to their own centres, though sometimes artificially made to ascend.

corrupt things. "They shall dwell on

V. Fire is of a melting and softening quality; iron, and other metals are made pliable by it, and fit to receive any figure whatsoever, as wax keeps the impression of the seal.

VI. Fire hath a vivifying, enlivening, and quickening quality; it refreshes and restores that heat and warmth, which the prevailing cold deprives us of.

VII. Fire is of a comforting and consoling quality and nature.

VIII. Fire is of a penetrating or piercing nature, there is no pore or secret passage of the body thrown into it, but it pierces it.

IX. Fire is of an assimilating quality, that is, it changes all materials into its own nature, or sets them on Fire.

X. Fire is a very profitable element, there is a necessity for it; many trades cannot be followed without it, nor can men and women live without it.

David, "Above thousands of gold and every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God," Matt. iv. 4. A Christian can perform no duty aright acceptable to God, without the divine help and influences of the Spirit of God.

XI. Fire is sometimes quenched, and in a great measure put leaves no metals in the building unconsumed, save what is built upon the foundation Jesus Christ, who like gold, silver, and precious stones, will endure the Fire, 1 Cor. iii. 11—15. It also

PARALLEL.

IV. The Word of God when it hath by the Spirit kindled the soul of a sinner, it immediately causes his affections and desires to ascend and mount up to heaven, as to its centre and only place of satisfaction, leaving, as the Fire only leaves ashes, his dreggy and impure part behind; the soul seems to be then on the wing wholly for heaven, too pure and refined for communion with high," Isa. xxxiii. 16.

V. The Word by the Spirit, softens the hard and stony heart, and makes it a heart of flesh; disposes the soul, and makes it fit to receive or take the seal or heavenly impression, and image of God. See Seal.

VI. The Word and Spirit quickens the soul of a sinner; nay, raises to life those who have been, in a spiritual sense, "Dead in sins and trespasses," Eph. ii. 1. "It is the Spirit that quickens, the flesh profits nothing," John vi. 63. "The law kills, but the Spirit gives life," Rom. viii. 2.

VII. The Spirit of God, called the Comforter, administers the greatest, nay, the only consolation to the soul of believers: O what comforts have some dejected Christians received from the gracious promises of God's word! John xiv. 16, 17.

VIII. The Word and Spirit of God searches all the faculties and powers of the soul; it penetrates not only the head but the heart, judgment, affections, conscience, will, &c. It leaves no corner unvisited, no secret place undiscovered, Heb. iv. 12.

IX. The Word and Spirit of God makes the soul spiritual, transforms the carnal mind, and makes it partaker of its own divine nature; it sets it in a flame of love and spiritual zeal for Christ and his blessed truth, John iii. 6, 1 Cor. ii. 15, and vi. 17, 2 Pet. i. 4.

X. The Word and Spirit of God is of such absolute necessity, that saints cannot live one moment without it. Hence the Spirit of Christ is called, "The Spirit of Life," Rev. xi. 11. Moreover, the Word of God was esteemed by Job, above his necessary food, Job xxiii. 12; and by silver." "Man lives not by bread alone, but by

XI. So is the divine Fire many times quenched, and put out in great measure, to the

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

out, to the damage of those for whom it was kindled.

hurt and damage of Christians. "Quench not the Spirit," 1 Thess. v. 19.

METAPHOR.

DISPARITY.

I. Fire is an external element, and only useful for the profit and comfort of the outward man.

I. The Spirit of God and his Word are divine, sacred, and heavenly; profitable to the soul of man.

II. Fire is a bad master; when it has got to a head and violently breaks out, it doth much mischief, and destroys wonderfully.

II. The Word and Spirit of God never hurts or injures those that it gets the mastery and victory over; if it destroy it is only sin, and such things that would ruin and spoil the soul; happy are those, in whom the Word of God and his Spirit doth reign and predominate.

INFERENCES.

If this be so, take heed you do not quench the Word or Spirit of God; which you may be said to do:

I. By abating of the Spirit's heat in its operations, or by diminishing or lessening the graces and good motions thereof, when the Spirit loses the vigour of his operations, as when zeal decays, convictions wear off, and affections die; this is like slaking the heat, and lessening the burning of Fire.

II. When men do not only diminish and lessen the burnings and operations of the Spirit in the graces, influences, and motions thereof, but yield to sin and the devil, so far as to put the Fire quite out: the common motions and operations of the Spirit may be quite extinguished. "Give us of your oil, for our lamps are gone out," Matt. xxv. 8. We read of some twice dead, plucked up by the roots."

Quest. Which way may the Spirit and the Word of God be quenched?

Answ. By withholding of Fuel. "Where no wood is, the Fire goes out," Prov. xxvi. 20. We feed that Fire which we would not have extinguished; we labour to add fit matter to it, that we may keep up the heat and burning of it. Persons may be said to quench the Spirit, when they neglect the means which God hath appointed for the keeping, feeding, and preserving of it in its full vigour, heat, and operations in the soul; when they neglect prayer, reading, hearing of the Word, meditations, the Fire of the Spirit, zeal and fervency soon decays.

2. The Spirit of God may be quenched, by neglecting to stir it up. Paul exhorts Timothy "To stir up the gift that was in him." If Fire be not stirred and blown up, it will soon lessen its burning, and go out. "No man stirreth up himself to take hold of thee," Isa. lxiv. 7. It is not enough to pray, read, and hear the Word; but to stir up ourselves to do these duties of religion fervently: if there be never so much wood on the Fire, yet, if it be not blown and stirred up, the dead ashes will obstruct the burning. So in like manner, though men be never so much in the performance of religious duties, yet if they let the ashes of formality and deadness remain upon their hearts, the Fire of the Spirit decays.

3. Fire is quenched by opposing somewhat of a contrary nature and quality to it, as water, or the like. Fire and water are contrary the one to the other, by reason of their contrary qualities; a little water will weaken and lessen the burning of Fire, and if a man pour in much of it, it will soon quite extinguish it; so in like manner the Word and Spirit, by suffering a little sin and corruption to remain in the heart or life, will soon decay in its operations. Sin is unto the Spirit, as water to the Fire. "The flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh, and these two are contrary the one to the other," Gal. v. 17.

But now, if a man yield to some sins, to some heinous sins, or once lay the reins loose as it were upon the neck of his lusts, plotteth and premeditates sin; regards it, likes it, and watcheth an opportunity to sin; this will soon, like much water, quench the fire; also sin reiterated and often committed, though not so notorious or scandalous, hath the like effect. The frequent acting of sin, is like a continual dropping upon the Fire, nothing more dangerous than a trade in sin.

That you may escape this great evil, of quenching the Word and Spirit, observe these following particulars :

(1.) Consider, it is a Divine spark, which is kindled in your souls, it is heavenly Fire, it is a holy and sacred thing ; men know not what they do when they quench the motions of the Spirit, and will not suffer the Word to kindle in them.

(2.) Consider, who it is that hath kindled this Fire in thee, or strives to do it ; is it not the Almighty, the ever blessed God ? Wilt thou adventure to put out the Fire which the Majesty of heaven and earth hath kindled in thee ?

(3.) Consider, how much pains God hath taken to kindle it ; how long was it, and what means did the Lord make use of before he could cause (to speak after the manner of men) the Word to take hold of thee ? Did he not send a spark upon thee at one sermon, and then blow upon it, that it might break out into a flame ? and then send another spark, another sermon, and then another, and another, and may be after all, he brought thee into affliction, and used many ways to effect this great and good work of his own Spirit and grace upon thy heart ; and wilt thou adventure to mar and spoil this work, and quench this Fire ? Which is thus of the Lord's kindling. If a father, mother, or any eminent superior should take much pains, and be at great charge to kindle a Fire, and a child should know this, and yet adventure to throw water upon it, and put it out ; or yield to a cursed foe of theirs so to do, would it not be judged a notorious offence ?

(4.) Consider the gracious design of God in kindling this divine Fire in the soul ; it is that he might raise thee to life, give thee light, melt thy hard heart, and make it fit to receive an heavenly impression ; it is to cement and unite thy heart to himself, that thou mightest glorify him, enjoy him, and be glorified with him for ever.

(5.) Consider, if this Fire go out, thou canst never kindle it again ; it is beyond thy skill and wisdom. If thou quench another Fire, it may be thou mayest kindle that again, and make it burn as before ; but it is not in thy power to make this Fire burn. "Of his own will begat he us, with the Word of truth," James i. 18. "As many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name : who were born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God," John i. 12, 13. He is said, to begin this good work in us, "He is the Author and Finisher of our faith," Phil. i. 6. "Lord, thou wilt," saith the prophet, "ordain peace for us, for thou also hast wrought all our works in us," Isa. xxvi. 12.

(6.) Consider, thou knowest not whether God will ever set about this work again, or no, shouldest thou hearken to thy lusts and Satan's temptations, to quench the Spirit and put out those good motions and desires that are in thy mind ; remember that word, "My Spirit shall not always strive with man," Gen. vi. 3. And also what our Saviour in the Gospel spake concerning Jerusalem, "O ! that thou hadst known, even thou at least in this thy day, the things that belong to thy peace, but now they are hid from thine eyes," Luke xix. 42.

(7.) Consider, it is grievous to the Spirit to be quenched, the Spirit is thy great Friend, thy Comforter ; the Spirit helps thee at every dead lift, "And maketh intercession for thee with groanings, which cannot be uttered," John xvi. 17, Rom. viii. 26. And therefore do not grieve him ; wilt thou quench and put out the motions of such a friend ? "Grieve not the holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed to the day of redemption," Eph. iv. 30.

(8.) Consider, the Spirit is thy Light, put out the Spirit, and thou wilt become a dead man ; or lessen his burnings and gracious operations, and thou wilt become a dying man : wouldest thou not have thy eyes out of thy head nor thy life out of thy body ? then do not quench the Spirit, the eye and life of thy soul.

(9.) Consider, what the cause and reason is, men quench the Spirit.

1. Is it not because they would be indulged in their sins, and lie down on the bed of sloth and carnal security ? Men put out their Fire when they have a mind to go to bed.

2. Is it not because the Fire burns too hot for them ? it hath kindled such a Fire in their consciences, that scorcheth them so sorely, that they know not how to endure it ; and from hence wickedly go about to quench the Spirit. Thus it was with Felix, he heard Paul preach of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come, and he trembles, his conscience smote him ; but now to quench the Spirit and allay that heat he might find within, he sends away Paul: "When I have," saith he, "a convenient time, I will call for thee."

3. Is it not because this Fire of the Word and Spirit is too chargeable and costly for them? They, like men, grudge that which the Fire consumes, or will, if it be kept burning. The young man in the Gospel was not willing to sell his possession, and part with all for Christ. When men see they must part with so much to the minister, "God having ordained that they who preach the Gospel, should live of the Gospel," and as much to the poor saints, and besides all this be exposed to suffer the prosecution of such and such penal laws: this great charge they see already fall upon them, and what further they know not may fall upon them by keeping up the Fire of the Word and Spirit, the thoughts of which they cannot bear; and from hence wickedly go about to quench the Spirit.

4. Do not men quench the Fire, or lessen its burning when it makes the pot boil over, when they fear that all that is in the pot or vessel will be lost? Even so some men, when the Fire of the word and Spirit is so hot and strong, that it is like to boil out a beloved lust which they have prized for its profitableness, like a right-hand, or for pleasure, like a right-eye, then they hasten to lessen the Fire; and like Judas, think there needs not be so much waste. Now what a vile thing, saith one, is this, to quench the fire of the Spirit, * rather than the scum and filthiness of sin should be worked and boiled out thereby? See how God threatens such, Ezek. xxiv. 6, "Woe to the pot whose scum is therein, and whose scum is not gone out of it?" Therefore saith God, ver. 11, "set it empty upon the coals, that the brass of it may be hot and may burn, and that the filthiness of it may be molten in it, that the scum of it may be consumed. She hath wearied herself with lies, her scum shall be in the Fire. In thy filthiness is lewdness." Her obstinacy was such, that though God had made use of means to purge her, she refused to be purged. And therefore God pronounced that dreadful threatening against her, "Thou shalt not be purged from thy filthiness any more." Some are not willing to part with their sins, they would keep the poisonous liquor and scum in the vessel, and for this the vessel and scum must be burnt together, and shall never be parted.

5. Do not men quench the Fire, and put out their candle when it is like to expose them to danger, when thieves and cursed enemies are abroad? Out of fear they keep all close, and are not willing any should see Fire-light nor candle-light, nor any thing that should discover them. So out of fear in time of common danger, some men quench the Fire of the word and Spirit; the word like a candle, is thrust under a bushel or under a bed, and the motions of the Spirit for a public testimony are put out.

6. Men quench the Fire, saith the same author, when it is like to set the house on Fire; so some professors quench the Spirit, when they see what fiery trials they are like to pass through, if they continue in the heat of their zeal.

7. Some men quench the Fire when they are warm enough without it; they warm themselves by the spark of their own kindling, these, saith God, "shall lie down in sorrow," Isa. i. 11. They conclude their own righteousness, and their old ways and conversation will be sufficient, and so "Turn with the dog to his vomit, and with the sow that was washed, to her wallowing in the mire," 2 Pet. ii. 22.

8. Some men let the Fire go out, saith he, through a multitude of business; their minds being taken up with other things, they forget it: so some men forget the word, Spirit, and religion, being like Martha, "troubled about many things." Now what a wicked thing is it from all, or any of these causes, to quench the Spirit, Luke x. 11.

(10.) Consider, it is by the Spirit thou must "mortify the deeds of the flesh," which thou must do or be damned, Rom. viii. 13. And how canst thou do that, when the Spirit is quenched? It is no marvel if corruptions prevail, when the Spirit is put out that should burn them up.

(11.) Consider, it is by the Spirit and word, which is called the sword of the Spirit, by which you should wrestle, and resist all the temptations of Satan; but when the Fire of the Spirit is quenched, it puts an opportunity into Satan's hand, to kindle the Fire of pride, malice, and lust of concupiscence in thy heart; when the Spirit is quenched, and the sword thrown away, what execution can be done upon this spiritual enemy.

* See Theophilus Palwohele, of quenching the Spirit, page 33.

(12.) Consider, it is by the help and influence of the Holy Spirit thou must perform all duties of religion, or they will never be accepted of God; and how can that be done when the Spirit is quenched, and the motions and operations thereof cease?

If the word and Spirit be compared to Fire, let us bless God for kindling this Fire in our hearts and nation, and pray that he would be pleased to blow more and more upon it, that it may burn up all the chaff and dross of our corruptions, and inflame our souls with a greater degree of love to God, and zeal to religion.

And let us take heed we do not quench the Spirit in others. Wicked men would fain put this Fire quite out; what unwearied attempts have they made from time to time in this and other nations, to extinguish the light of the word? Ungodly Papists cannot endure the heat of this Fire, they are not more ready to kindle other Fires, to the spoiling and impoverishing of the kingdom, than they are to put out this: they will not suffer it to burn in themselves, so they, as much as in them lies, endeavour to quench it in others; like those men whom our Saviour reprehended in the days of his flesh, who would not go into heaven themselves, nor suffer them, who would go thither, to enter in.

But in the last place, let them, and all other wicked persons, take heed how they quench this divine Fire; for if it burn not up their sins and corruptions, and kindle grace and holiness in them, they must burn one day in hell: for either this Fire must be suffered to burn in them, or they be condemned to eternal burning for quenching of it.

THE WORD OF GOD COMPARED TO A HAMMER.

"Is not my Word like as a Fire, saith the Lord? and like a Hammer that breaketh the rock in pieces?" Jer. xxiii. 29.

In these words, the Word of God is compared to Fire, which we have already spoken of.

2. As the Word is compared to Fire; so likewise to a Hammer.

3. The heart of a sinner is compared to a rock. We shall here only speak of the Word as it is compared to a Hammer.

SIMILE.

I. A Hammer is a fit instrument to break rocks, and beat stones in pieces, &c.

II. A Hammer can do nothing of itself without the hand that uses it.

III. According to the strength, design, and wisdom of the workman, a Hammer doth effect this or that, &c.

IV. A hammer is not only a fit instrument to break things in pieces withal; but also to drive home nails, &c., and to clench and fasten them also.

goads and nails, given from one shepherd," Eccles. xii. 11.

PARALLEL.

I. The Word of God is prepared by the Almighty, a fit means to break in pieces the stony and rocky hearts of sinners.

II. The Word of God cannot of itself break in pieces the sinner's heart: God must use it by the hand of the Spirit, if ever it accomplish that for which he sent it.

III. So according to the design, wisdom, and strength the Holy Ghost is pleased to put forth upon the heart of a sinner, is the nature of the work that is effected or accomplished thereby.

IV. So the Word of God in the hand of the Spirit is very useful to drive home and fasten (1.) the nails of conviction: (2.) To drive home and fasten precepts; (3.) To drive home and fasten promises. God is the "great Master of assemblies, who fastens the Words of the wise as

INFERENCES.

1. Examine yourselves: have you experienced the Word to be like a Hammer? (1.) Have you been broken in pieces by it? Have you been under grief and trouble for your sins?

- (2.) Are you broken off from your sins ?
 (3.) Are your hearts soft ?
 (4.) Hath the word and Spirit of God fastened convictions so upon you, that you cannot get free of them ? Do they abide like a nail in a sure place ? Have the precepts of God in like manner been drove home, that you cannot rest till you have submitted to them ? have promises been so fastened, as that you believe, and stedfastly apply them to your own souls ?

- II. If you would have the word of God break your hard and rocky hearts, then,
 (1.) Consider the severity of it, touching the threatenings thereof, Gal. iii. 10, Mark xvi. 16, Luke xiii. 5.
 (2.) Consider what hath been executed upon such who break the Word. 1. Adam. 2. The old world. 3. Korah and his company. "Those that broke Moses' law, died without mercy under two or three witnesses," Heb. x. 28.
 (3.) Consider the truth of the word, Matt. v. 18, Job xxxvi. 17, Luke xxi. 22.
 (4.) The power and authority of the Word.
 (5.) The torment of the damned.
 (6.) Read often, and consider the sufferings of Christ.
 (7.) Cry to God, that he would be pleased to take the Hammer of the Word into the hand of the Spirit, and smite your rocky hearts. See Simile, Stony and Rocky Heart.

THE WORD OF GOD THE SWORD OF THE SPIRIT.

"And the Sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God," Eph. vi. 17.

Two things may be enquired into, and in both these respects we shall run the parallel.

1. Why the Word of God is compared to a Sword ?
 2. Why the Word is called the Sword of the Spirit ?
1. Some take, as Mr. Gurnall observes,* the abstract here to be put for the concrete, πνευμα for πνευματικόν, Sword of the Spirit, for the spiritual Sword ; as if it were no more but to take the spiritual Sword which is the Word of God, according to that of the apostle, 2 Cor. x. 4, "The weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty ;" that is, spiritual weapons : indeed Satan being a spirit, must be fought with spiritual weapons ; and such is the Word of God, viz., a spiritual Sword ; but this though true, reacheth not the full sense of the place, where πνευμα is taken personaliter, for the person of the Holy Spirit.

METAPHOR.

I. A Sword is a weapon generally made use of by all soldiers of every rank and quality : the captain, as well as the ordinary soldier, hath and ought to have his Sword.

II. A Sword is a weapon by which they do not only defend themselves, but also do great execution upon their enemies.

enemies of the soul. (1.) The Word is a defensive weapon. Saith David, "By the Word of thy lips, I have kept me from the paths of the destroyer." "Unless thy law had been my delight, I should have perished in my affliction," Psal. xvii. 4, and cxix. 92. (2.) Offensive ; by it our blessed Captain made the prince of darkness fly. "It is written, thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God," Matt. iv. 7.

PARALLEL.

I. The Word of God, the spiritual Sword, every Christian, of what rank or quality whatsoever, maketh use of, and cannot, ought not to be without it ; the Captain General fought with this weapon himself ; ministers, as well as every private Christian, ought always to be armed herewith, Matt. iv. 4—8.

II. So the Word of God is a spiritual weapon, by which a Christian doth not only defend himself from the danger of sin, and Satan, the world &c., but by it he offends, yea, cuts down and overcomes and vanquishes all these and other cruel

* Gurnall's Christian's Armour, page 297.

METAPHOR.

III. A Sword is a keen, sharp, piercing weapon; it will enter into the body, and pierce the very heart of a man.

preached the word to them, it is said,

IV. A Sword is an honourable weapon, and of great antiquity; it hath been in use from the beginning, a weapon that no enemy hath any just cause to quarrel with.

any cause to except against it, or to quarrel with the holy scripture.

V. Some Swords have two edges, they will cut both ways, they will cut backwards and forwards, as they go in and as they come out.

reprobate in order to damning, to such it may be called a killing letter. "To the one we are the savour of life unto life, to the other the savour of death unto death," 2 Cor. ii. 16.

VI. A Sword will cut off a member; many a leg and arm have been cut off therewith.

VII. Some wounds of a Sword are so mortal, that there is no cure for them.

VIII. A Sword is borne oftentimes before a magistrate, to signify authority and justice. "He bears not the sword in vain," Rom. xiii. 4.

IX. A Sword is a victorious weapon, it hath done great execution in the world. Joshua made great slaughter upon the seven nations of Canaan with the Sword; it is said, he puts all the souls in several cities to the edge of the Sword.

PARALLEL.

III. "The Word of God is sharper than any Sword," Heb. iv. 12. If the Spirit use it, it will soon enter into and pierce the heart of a sinner, as appears by that notable instance concerning those Jews that put the Lord Jesus to death; whilst Peter they were pricked in their hearts," Acts ii. 37.

IV. The Word of God is an honourable weapon, our Saviour and all holy prophets and good men would never else have made use of it: it is also of great antiquity, the writings of Moses, as it is observed by divers, were before any human records. No devil nor vile heretic hath

V. "The Word of God is quick and powerful, sharper than any two-edged Sword;" it hath a two-fold operation at one time, as it is used by the ministers of the Gospel, it wounds the souls of the elect in order to healing, and it wounds the

reprobate in order to damning, to such it may be called a killing letter. "To the one we are the savour of life unto life, to the other the savour of death unto death," 2

VI. The Word of God hath cut off many a member of the old man, it will cut off a right-hand lust of profit, or a right-eye lust of pleasure.

VII. So some wounds that many sinners receive, are such, that there is no cure for them, viz., such who have sinned the unpardonable sin. "There is a sin unto death," 1 John v. 16.

VIII. He that bears the Word of the Spirit, shows he is a man that hath great authority for what he says, and that he is a person for right and justice; it is that which decides all doubtful cases, &c.

IX. So the Word of God, the Sword of the Spirit, is a glorious and victorious weapon, which will appear, if we consider how many it hath struck down dead, and sentenced to eternal death; how many strong enemies hath been slain and subdued by it, strong lusts, strong devils, strong and vile heretics; it is a victorious Sword. It is called the Sword of the Spirit.

1. Because it is a spiritual weapon, but that is not all.

2. Because the Spirit is the Author of it, a weapon it is, saith Gurnal, page 297, which his hand alone formed and fashioned, it came not out of any creature's forge, "Holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost," 2 Pet. ii. 21.

3. The Holy Spirit is the only true interpreter of the word, whence we have that known passage of Bernard; Quo Spiritu factæ sunt scripturæ, eo Spiritu legi desiderant ipso etiam intelligendæ. The scriptures must be read, and can be understood by no spirit, but that alone, by whom they were made.

4. Because the Spirit only can give the Word its efficacy and power in the soul; it is the office of the Spirit, Sigillare animum rerum creditarum. Except he lay his weight on the truths we read, and hear, to apply them close, and as it were cut their very image in our minds and hearts, they leave no more impression than a seal sets upon a stone or rock. The Spirit will do nothing for believers without the word, and they can do nothing to purpose without him, the Word is the Sword, and the Holy Spirit of Christ the arm that wields it: so that,

5. The like use that a sword is of to a soldier in war; the same is the Word to the Spirit in order to the cutting down, and spoiling all his and other's enemies.

INFERENCES.

I. This may teach believers, what excellent use the Word is of in all their spiritual wars with the devil, sin, and all other mortal enemies of their souls.

II. It may inform us what the great design of Satan is, in seeking so many manner of ways to take away the Word of God from us, or in making it of little or no use to us.

III. This justly reproveth the cursed Papists and Church of Rome, in respect of their cruelty to the souls of men, in disarming them of their weapons; a people disarmed are soon overcome, and made a prey to their enemies; how can we defend ourselves when our Sword is taken out of our hands? They have some fig-leaves, saith one, to hide their shameful practice; they endeavour to persuade men they do them a kindness thereby, lest they should cut their fingers with it, &c. How doth the apostle condemn speaking in the church in an unknown tongue? All men are exhorted to read the scriptures, "search the scriptures;" but the Pope makes it no less than death, if not damnation, for the laity to have them in their own language to read or search, fearing lest it should spoil his trade.

IV. It reproveth them for casting such contempt upon the scriptures, as if they were insufficient to direct us in the way of salvation. What horrid blasphemy and reproach is this, saith the same author, to the great God, to send his people into the field, and put such a wooden Sword in their hands, as is not sufficient to defend themselves or vanquish their enemies? and how much contrary is it to that of the apostle to Timothy, who saith, "It is able to make us wise unto salvation through faith in Christ Jesus; perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works," 2 Tim. iii. 15, 17.

V. Let us bless God and be truly thankful, we have this weapon left us yet; this is in our hands, and that all the world may know it hath done great things in our hearts. Let every Christian and true Englishman resolve to die upon the spot, rather than lose the Word, or suffer their Sword to be taken from them.

VI. Let it also caution all Christians to take heed how they engage their enemy without their Sword.

VII. Labour also to know the right use of it, and how, and when to offend your enemy hereby. Satan is a cunning warrior: sometimes when thou art tempted to sin, may be he will tell thee it is a little one, what is a merry jest? to sport and game, to drink and carouse a little? when thou art thus beset draw thy Sword. "Make no provision for the flesh." "If ye live after the flesh, ye shall die." "Put off the former conversation." "Without holiness no man shall see God." "How shall I do this thing, and sin against God?" Rom. xiii. 14, and viii. 13, Heb. xii. 14.

VIII. Again, on the other hand, may be he will aggravate thy sin, to drive thee into despair, and tell thee by his evil suggestions, that there is no mercy for thee; then draw thy Sword again. "But he that confesseth and forsaketh his sin, shall find mercy," Prov. xxviii. 13. "I desire not the death of him that dieth," Ezek. xviii. 32. All manner of sin and blasphemy against the Father and the Son shall be forgiven unto men," &c. Matt. xii. 31, "Such were some of you," &c. 1 Cor. vi. 11.

IX. Yield up all your sins, though never so pleasant and profitable, to the edge of the Sword.

X. Prize and highly value the holy scriptures, the Word of God, and say, as David once did when he wanted a Sword, and it was told him there was none but the sword of Goliath, "none like that." Satan will, it is feared, ere long, make a diligent search for arms; do as David hid, hide thy Sword: "Thy Word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against thee," Psal. cxix. 11. Get many promises ready against thou be beset.

THE WORD OF GOD COMPARED TO LEAVEN.

"Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto Leaven, which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened," Matt. xiii. 33.

SOME understand by Leaven in this place the Word of God, others grace; the one concludes it is the word of grace, the other the grace of the word; a third sort understand the Church of God is intended by it.

The Word and grace of God may be compared to Leaven in three or four considerations.

PARABLE.

I. Leaven is of a diffusive quality; it infuses itself into every part, till the whole lump be leavened.

II. Leaven is of an assimilating quality; it turns the meal in which it is hid into its own nature.

qualities thereof, and works divine and glorious and visible change in the heart and life.

III. "The woman took the Leaven and hid it in the meal." Leaven must be hid, so that it may leaven the meal the better.

IV. Leaven secretly and invisibly worketh and altereth the meal, and maketh a change therein, turning of it into dough.

V. Leaven doth not change the whole three measures of meal, all at once, but it accomplishes its work by degrees.

yet the work of conversion, and holiness before it be perfected.

VI. "A little Leaven will leaven the whole lump," 1 Cor. v. 6, Gal. v. 9.

PARABLE.

I. Leaven is taken in the scripture in an evil sense for hypocrisy, evil doctrine, malice, and wickedness, from that sour quality that is in us.

II. This may further inform us, touching the nature of the Word and grace of God. And from hence we may be able to make some judgment, whether conversion be truly wrought in our souls? or whether the kingdom of God, where Christ spiritually rules, which is righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Spirit, be in truth begun in us or not?

PARALLEL.

I. The Word and grace of God is of a diffusive nature; it will where it is received in a spiritual sense, leaven every faculty of the soul, until the whole man, body and spirit, be leavened therewith. By three measures of meal, some understand the body, soul, and spirit to be meant.

II. The Word of God, where it is in truth received, such is the assimilating nature thereof, doth convert by its powerful operation the whole soul into its own likeness, it changes the evil spiritual qualities in the room of them, making a

III. The Word of God must be received into the heart, it must be hid as it were there like seed that is covered in the earth; that so it may have its blessed effect, in order to leaven the soul in a spiritual sense the better: "Thy Word have I hid in my heart," Psal. cxix. 11.

IV. So the workings and operations of God's Word are secret and invisible; our Saviour alludes to this, when he compares the work of the Spirit in regeneration to the wind, as is well observed, the Word and Spirit work secretly, their operations are invisible to the outward eye.

V. So the Word and grace of God, work not that blessed change in the soul all at one instant; but grace is carried on in believers by degrees. I deny not, but at the first infusion of grace or act of faith, a man is really and actually justified; is gradually carried on, and may be a great while

VI. So a small quantity, or but a dram of true grace will spiritually Leaven and change the whole man; hence grace in the beginning is compared to a grain of mustard seed.

DISPARITY.

I. The Word of God hath no unpleasant or scouring quality in it, but contrariwise it is the only means through the Spirit to purge out that old Leaven, whether it be evil doctrine, hypocrisy, malice, or wickedness, that sourereth and corrupteth the whole man.

THE WORD OF GOD COMPARED TO A GLASS.

"Beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord," "And like unto a man, beholding his natural face in a Glass," 2 Cor. iii. 18, James i. 23.

BERNARD understands by Glass here, to be meant the Gospel, with divers others; and we see no cause to question this exposition.

SIMILE.

I. A Glass is a medium, that represents persons and things unto the sight of our external eyes.

II. Some Glasses show us such things, that we cannot see, nor discern without them, as common experience shows, which are called perspective Glasses.

manner of being, or the glorious Trinity; the conception, birth, life, death, resurrection, and ascension of the Lord Jesus Christ; as also God's positive law and instituted worship.

III. A Glass seems to bring such things near to us that are at a great distance. Some by looking in a Glass have discovered things and persons many miles off, as if they were just by them.

IV. A true Glass shows or represents unto a man his own natural face; by looking therein he may see what manner of man he is; he may take a plain view of himself whether fair or deformed.

V. A Glass is used by some as a thing to dress themselves in; by it they know how to put on their attire, and to deck themselves with all their ornaments; if any thing be wanting or amiss, which they would have on, they soon perceive it by looking in a Glass.

VI. A Glass is a thing that some persons take much delight to look into.

VII. He that would have a full or plain sight of a person or persons that he hath a desire to behold in a Glass, must look therein with open face, he must not look askint upon it.

were upon it, seem to look towards God, when his heart is more upon other things and objects: "We with open face," &c. "If thy eye be single, thy whole body is full of light."

VIII. A man that beholds his natural face in a Glass, and goes his way, soon forgets what manner of man he was; if he saw spots or blemishes, or other deformity in his face, or any uncomely features, he soon forgets them.

PARALLEL.

I. The Gospel is the best medium which represents God the Father, the Lord Jesus Christ, and Holy Spirit, angels and saints, with things past, present, and to come, to our spiritual sight, or to the eyes of our faith.

II. The Word of God shows us such things and mysteries, that without it we could not see nor have the least knowledge of; as the manner of the creation of the world in six days; the cause why God sets his bow in the cloud; the glorious attributes of God, together with God's

III. The word and Gospel of God brings things that are afar off, very near; it represents to our faith the judgment-day, and shows us how matters and things shall be managed then; who shall be cleared, and who condemned; it brings near to the eye of our faith, the glorious kingdom of Jesus Christ, and many things of like nature.

IV. So the Word of God shows forth, not only the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ, as also what this world is, what sin is, &c., but it shows what man is before grace, how wretched, blind, naked, deformed, polluted! and also after grace through Christ, how happy, adorned, beautiful, and glorious.

V. So the Word of God is absolutely needful or necessary for all Christians to look into, who would dress and deck themselves with the ornaments of grace, that they may be comely in the sight of God. By looking into the Word they may see what ornaments are wanting, and how to put them on so as to be completely dressed, and every way ready for the Bridegroom's coming.

VI. The Word of God is a thing that all true Christians take much delight to behold, daily pry and look into by reading and meditation; "His delight is in the law of the Lord, and in his law he doth meditate both night and day," Psal. i. 2.

VII. So he that would have a clear sight of God in his glorious attributes and perfections, must look into the Gospel with open face; he must look with a full and single eye, as one that is resolved by the help of the Spirit, according to the nature of his sight, to see what may be beheld therein; and not cast a squint look as it

VIII. So he that doth cast but a transient look into the Word of God, or is but a bare hearer thereof, may, whilst the Word is a preaching, see, or have some sense of his sin, and deplorable condition he is in by nature, and be somewhat troubled for it awhile; but not putting into practice what he hears, but turning to his former course again, he soon forgets what a deformed and miserable wretch he is, which is the principal imports of that text in James.

SIMILE.

IX. If a man look into a Glass, he sees there but the image, resemblance, or representation of a person or a thing, not the person or the thing itself.

SIMILE.

I. One Glass hath not all the properties which we have here mentioned.

II. Some persons use too frequently to look into a Glass, as others do, to an evil end, viz., to paint, patch, and spot their faces, and to see their vain beauty, which tends to increase pride, and foolishly to lift themselves up.

There are divers other disparities which we pass by; they are the contrivance and workmanship of man, and brittle things, &c., besides many of them are false, not giving a true representation of persons and things, &c.

PARALLEL.

IX. So a Christian that looks into the Word and Gospel to behold the glory of God, hath but the sight of the image, resemblance, and representation of God shining therein before his eyes.

DISPARITY.

I. The Gospel or word of God is a spiritual perspective Glass, as well as a looking Glass.

II. A Christian cannot look too often into God's Word, provided he do not neglect his particular calling in so doing, or let one duty interfere with another; neither doth his looking into the Word of God tend to lift him up, but rather to humble and abase him; for the more we see of God, the more with Job and Isaiah, we shall abhor and be ashamed of ourselves.

INFERENCES.

I. Let this teach every soul the folly of spending so much time in looking into a carnal Glass to see their own faces, and vainly to trim and deck their heads and bodies, whilst they greatly neglect looking into this Glass, wherein the glory of God in a glorious manner may be seen. See Metaphor Light. And thereby they may learn how to make themselves ready for Christ's coming, as also what their happy condition is, if truly in Christ.

II. When you see a Glass, or enjoy the useful benefit thereof, remember the Glass of God's Word; and as you slight not, nor throw away that Glass by which you obtain your end, viz., a medium to behold what you desire: be persuaded never to slight or throw away the Word of God, but improve it to the end, for which God gave it, till you come to have the faculty so suited and fitted to behold the object, that shall see as you are seen, and know as you are known; which will be in a state of glory, and not till then.

III. To inform the poor, dark, and blind world, that as a Glass of what nature soever it be, yet it is altogether useless to a blind man, till his eyes be opened; so till God open blind eyes, poor fallen man cannot see the glory of God, nor understand this glorious Gospel or Word of God.

IV. Let it persuade all Christians, who do steadfastly believe that the holy scriptures or Word of God, are, or may be compared to a Glass in many of the particulars aforegoing, to look more into it with earnest prayer, that as it is a Glass as clear as crystal; so the eyes of their understanding may be opened, to the end they may, in a Glass, "Behold the glory of the Lord, and be changed into the same image, from glory to glory, even as by Spirit of the Lord," 2 Cor. iii. 18.

PROFESSING THE GOSPEL COMPARED TO THE PLOUGH.

"He that puts his hand to the Plough, and looks back, is not fit for the kingdom of heaven," Luke ix. 62.

"He that puts his hand to the Plough," &c. Our Saviour means, preaching, owning, or professing the Gospel.

The professing the Gospel may in divers respects be compared to a Plough.

METAPHOR.

I. A Plough is an instrument made fit for the husbandman, to break up and till his ground.

II. The Plough cannot break up the ground of itself; it must be held and drawn, or nothing can be done by it.

III. It is a hard and difficult thing to plough up some ground, especially that which is rocky, full of roots, or hath long lain fallow.

IV. The Plough pierces deep into the earth, makes, as it were, deep gashes or wounds in the heart of it, discovering what sort of earth it is.

V. The work of the Plough is but opus ordinabile, a preparative work in order to sowing the seed.

VI. It is best Ploughing, when the earth is prepared and mollified by the showers of heaven, then the work goes on sweetly.

VII. The Plough turns up by the roots, and kills those rank weeds that grow in the field.

VIII. That field is not well Ploughed up where the Plough jumps and skips over some part of it, making baulks; and it must turn up all the whole field alike.

IX. New ground is much more easily Ploughed, than that which hath lain a long time untilled.

X. In the last place, and more directly to the main drift and scope of the text, the Plough must be held throughout the whole journey; a man must not put his hand to it, and presently grow weary, and look back confesses the Gospel, and looks back, is not fit for the kingdom of heaven," Luke ix. 62.

PARALLEL.

I. The Gospel is an instrument, prepared and made fit by the Almighty, to break or Plough up the fallow ground of our hearts, Hos. x. 12.

II. The Gospel must be believed and professed by us; we must lay our hand on it, and by the power of the Spirit it must, as it were, be drawn upon our hearts, or it can do nothing.

III. So it is a very difficult thing to convince and humble the hard and obdurate heart of a sinner, which is compared to a stone, and as firm as a rock: "Shall horses run upon the rocks? will one Plough there with oxen?" Ezek. xxxvi. 26, Amos vi. 12.

IV. The Gospel pierces the heart of a sinner by powerful convictions: "When they heard this they were pricked," κατενυσαν, punctim cædo, pungendo penetro, or pierced point blank, to the heart, Acts ii. 37. Then the word divided, as it were, between the soul and spirit, laid the heart open, made a discovery of what was hid within.

V. So the Gospel and Word of God, as a Plough, by its powerful convictions upon the conscience, is but a preparative work, in order to the sowing the seed of grace in the heart, Hos. x. 12, 13.

VI. Never doth the Word of God so kindle work in Ploughing up the fallow ground of the heart, as when the Gospel-clouds dissolve, and the true grace and love of Jesus Christ comes sweetly showering down upon it.

VII. So the word God by its powerful convictions and operations upon the heart kills sin at the root, causing the soul to loathe what it formerly loved.

VIII. That heart is not savingly wrought upon, where one lust is spared, and left untouched, or when it reacheth not to changing the evil qualities of every faculty. The Word must not reach the conscience only, but the judgment, will, and affections also.

IX. So youth, before evil habits, or a custom and course of sin, be taken, and more abundantly cleave to them, are, as it is found by experience, sooner wrought upon by the word of God, than old sinners, when sin hath got root in their hearts.

X. So the Gospel, and the profession thereof, must be held, owned, acknowledged, and professed, in truth, and in uprightness of heart, constantly, to the end, even through the whole journey, length, and race of our lives: we must not "grow weary, nor faint in our minds," Gal. vi. 9. "He that sets his hand to the Plough, i. e.

INFERENCES.

I. This may convince all persons, what need there is of the Spirit to join in, and work with the word: "For our Gospel came not to you in the word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance," 1 Thess. i. 5.

II. See that your whole soul be wrought upon, that there be a work upon every faculty thereof.

III. Take heed of a long continuance in a course of sin. Let the old sinner tremble, but if wrought upon in his old age, admire the infinite grace of God.

IV. From hence you may perceive the hardening nature of sin.

V. Tremble at the thoughts of apostacy, and take heed you do not shrink your hands off in the day of trial, or refuse to Plough, because it is cold, or because the sun shines hot, &c.

Mr. JOHN FLAVEL's Poem upon the PLOUGH.

There's skill in Ploughing, that the Ploughman knows :
 For if too shallow or too deep he goes,
 The seed is either buried, or else may
 To crows and rooks become an easy prey.
 This, as a lively emblem, fitly may
 Describe the blessed Spirit's work and way,
 Whose work on souls with this doth symbolize ;
 Betwixt them both thus the resemblance lies :
 Souls are the soil, the Gospel is the Plough ;
 God's workmen hold, the Spirit shows them how.
 The Spirit draws, and in good ground doth bless,
 His workmen's pains with sweet and fair success.
 In hearts prepared God scatters in the seed,
 Which in its season springs. No fowl or weed
 Shall pick it up, or choke this springing corn,
 Till it be housed in the heavenly barn.
 When thus the word Ploughs up the fallow ground,
 When with such fruits his servants' work is crowned,
 Let all the friends of Christ, and souls say now,
 As they pass by these fields, God speed the Plough.

THE WORD OF GOD COMPARED TO SEED.

"The Seed is the word of God," Luke viii. 11.

METAPHOR.

I. Good Seed is prepared by the husbandman, and is reserved out of the choicest wheat and principal barley ; it is that which the husbandman highly esteems and values.

II. The ground before the Seed be sown, is ploughed up, and made fit to receive the Seed.

III. The husbandman either sows the Seed himself, or employs a Seedsman to sow it, one that hath skill in that employment.

IV. When Seed is cast into the earth, it must be covered, or else the birds may pick it up ; besides, it will not otherwise so well take root.

our hearts : "Let the word of God dwell in you richly," Col. iii. 16. We ought to labour to understand it, to love it, and keep it in our memories, yea, and to let it be well rooted in every faculty.

PARALLEL.

I. The word of God is a choice and precious thing, and that which God highly values, and accounts of : "He hath magnified his word above all his name," Psal. cxxxviii. 2. "Thy Word is very pure," Psal. cxix. 140.

II. Our hearts are naturally hard, and have need to be ploughed up, which is also done by the word and conviction of the Spirit ; hence the Gospel is called a plough. See Plough.

III. Jesus Christ is the spiritual Seedsman : it is he that sows the Seed, who wants neither care nor skill to do it : "The sower is the Son of man," Matt. xiii. 37.

IV. So the Word of God ought to be hid or covered in our hearts, that Satan may not steal it away from us, and that it may take good root downward, and bring forth fruit upward. David hid the word of God in his heart, Psal. cxix. 9.

It is not enough to have it in our heads, but in

METAPHOR.

V. Seed lies some time in the ground, before it spring up; clods also sometimes hinder it from springing up.

VI. Frost and snow conduce very much to the well-rooting of the seed; they tend also to kill the weeds, which otherwise might choke it under the clods; by which means it roots, spreads, and flourishes more abundantly.

VII. The earlier the seed is sown, the better it is rooted and enabled to endure the sharpness of the winter.

much to the strengthening of grace, enabling the soul to hold out in an evil day. It was a great advantage to Timothy, that he knew the holy scriptures from a child, 2 Tim. iii. 15.

VIII. Some Seeds which the sower sows fall upon stony places, and some on thorny ground, as experience shows, which Seed brings not forth fruit unto perfection; and some also falls by the high-way-side, which the birds devour.

the Word, and it becometh unfruitful. The other hear the Word, and understand it not; then cometh the devil, called the fowl of the air, and catcheth away that which was sown in the heart; this is he that receiveth Seed by the highway side."

IX. Fruitfulness of Seed depends much upon the sun shining, and the rain falling upon it; by this means it is quickened, and abundantly springs up.

X. Weeds many times come up with the Seed, and if they be not plucked up, or weeded out, they will hinder the growth of the Seed, if not quite choke it.

of the grace of God; lest any root of bitterness spring up, and trouble them," Heb. xii. 5.

XI. The good ground only brings forth fruit unto perfection.

XII. Men are very diligent and industrious in sowing their Seed, they are up early, and labour hard, morning and evening.

XIII. Wind and storms do not prevent sowers in the sowing of their Seed; but let the wind be high or low, blow from the north, or from the south, yet they do and will sow.

XIV. Men usually are not sparing of their Seed, but scatter it

PARALLEL.

V. The Word of God does often, like Seed, lie hid for a while in the heart of a sinner, before it eminently show itself. Clods of corruption, and temptations, hinder its growth and springing up.

VI. So affliction, when sanctified to gracious persons, which they meet with after their conversion, and many times in their very seed-time, tends to kill the weeds of corruption, and breaks and mollifies the heart by which means they come to be better rooted in grace, and strengthened in holiness.

VII. So when the Word of God is early received in the love of it, (when a young person is sanctified in the bud) grace many times flourishes more abundantly. Such have great advantage above others. Long experience tends

VIII. The Seed of God's Word, which the Son of man by his faithful ministers soweth in the ministration of the Gospel, falls oftentimes, upon "a hard and rocky-hearted sinner, who, though he receive the Word with much seeming joy, yet in time of persecution falls away: because of the Word he is offended," Matt. xiii. 21. "Others like thorny ground, receive the Seed; but the cares of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, choke

IX. So the fruitfulness of the word in men's hearts, depends upon Christ's gracious blessing, and shining upon it, and the Spirit's bedewing and watering it: "It is God that gives the increase," 1 Cor. iii. 6.

X. So when the word of God is received in truth into the heart, sin and corruption will, if not carefully weeded out, spring up, and hinder the growth of the spiritual Seed, Matt. xiii. Hence the apostle gives charge to the saints, "That they should look diligently, lest any fail

XI. So none but honest and sincere Christians stand in the day of trial, and bring forth fruit unto eternal life, Matt. xiii. 23.

XII. So much as God hath set to preach his Word, do diligently attend their ministry, early and late, in season and out of season, "As knowing that their labour shall not be in vain in the Lord," 1 Cor. xv. 58.

XIII. Even so hath the seed of the Word been sown in all ages, notwithstanding the storms have beaten, and the wind of persecution hath blown very roughly, sometimes one way, and sometimes another; yet this hath not in the least prevented the sowing of the spiritual Seed of the word.

XIV. How plentifully hath the word of God been preached in England, and in other countries.

METAPHOR.

abroad so plentifully, that all and every part of the field which they intend to sow, may be sown there-with.

you, since the day ye heard of it, and knew the grace of God in truth," Col. i. 6.

PARALLEL.

And how plentifully was this spiritual Seed dispersed by the apostles and servants of Christ. They went every where preaching the Word. "Which is come unto you, as it is all in the world, and brings forth fruit, as it doth also in

METAPHOR.

I. Some men, either through want of judgment or to save charge, sow bad Seed, such as will not bear much fruit, although the ground whereon it is sown be never so good.

II. No seed that men sow can be at all fruitful, or yield increase, except the plough go before to break up the ground, which the Seed cannot do of itself by any art of man.

III. Many men have sowed good Seed, and that upon good ground, and it hath taken root, and flourished, and yet by some accident or other, they have had a bad harvest, brought but little corn into the barn, or sometimes none at all, Hag. i. 6, 9.

IV. The Seed which men sow is not quickened, except it die, 1 Cor. xv. 36.

DISPARITY.

I. But the Seed of the Word of God is good Seed, and was never sown into good ground, that is, a good and honest heart, but it took root, and became fruitful, as all true believers have experienced.

II. But the Word of God, through the mighty operation of the Spirit, is not only Seed, but also the spiritual plough, by which the fallow ground of the heart is broken up, and made fit for itself to sink into, and take deep root there.

III. But never was the Seed of God's Word sown in a good and honest heart, taking root there, and flourishing, but a blessed harvest always followed; nay, "though they sow in tears, they shall reap in joy: he that goeth forth, and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him," Psal cxxvi. 5, 6.

IV. But the Word of the Lord dieth not, but liveth and abideth for ever: "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life," John vi. 63.

INFERENCES.

I. It may inform us, that the cause why some persons fall away, and "turn with the dog to his vomit, and with the sow that was washed, to her wallowing in the mire," is because they were never sincere, nor upright in heart. The honest and upright soul falls not away, cannot fall so as never to rise again, but brings forth fruit to everlasting life, as our Saviour clearly shows.

II. O then let men and women take heed to their own hearts, and see whether they were ever thoroughly broken in the sight and sense of their sin. The Word and Gospel must first be a plough unto them, to break up the stony and fallow ground of their hearts, before, like Seed, the word can be received by them.

III. Remember, that notwithstanding a poor soul may meet with many storms, and go through much difficulty and trouble, both within and without, rise early, and lie down late, whilst he keeps his hand on the Lord's plough, in this Seed-time of the world, yet the harvest will make amends for all: "You that have sowed in tears, shall reap in joy." Nay, the day is at hand, wherein both the sower and the reaper shall rejoice together.

THE WORD OF GOD COMPARED TO RAIN.

"My doctrine shall drop as the Rain," &c., Deut. xxxii. 2.

SIMILE.

I. RAIN is the immediate and proper work of God; He gives us Rain from heaven, and

PARALLEL.

I. THE word of God, and the blessings that attend it, are all from God, it is he that makes the divine Rain to fall upon men's souls fruitful seasons." "Are there among the vanities of the Gentiles they that can cause Rain? or can the heavens give showers? Art not thou he, O Lord?" Jer. xiv. 22.

METAPHOR.

II. Rain falls by divine direction and appointment; God causes it to rain upon one city, and not upon another, Amos iv. 7. You often see a cloud dissolve and spend itself upon one place, when there is not a drop within a few miles of it; one land may have rain and a fruitful season, when another may have none.

III. There is a great deal of difference in the showers of Rain that fall upon the earth, sometimes you have it in small drops; a drizzling Rain which comes gently, but continuing long, it waters the earth and the fruits thereof thoroughly, going to the very root; at other times it comes down in a hasty and violent manner, causing the streams to run, but it is gone presently, and doth but little good.

IV. Some people in the world have no Rain, as the Egyptians; for it is said, that it seldom or never rains there.

V. Rain comes down successively and gradually, now a little and then a little; it doth not fall at all one time, before it give over, but it comes now a shower and then a shower, as the earth and fruits thereof need it.

then another, now one promise is rained down, then another. 1. Christ would that his people should have a constant dependance on himself. 2. He would have them wait upon every sermon, upon every ordinance and opportunity. 3. He would not have them surfeit upon his Word, therefore he observes a successive distillation of the blessings thereof upon them. 4. He would have every doctrine, and precept, and promise soak into their hearts. 5. Christ would endear every drop of his grace, and morsel of his Word to his people; he would have them lose nothing be bestows, and therefore gives it them as they are able to receive it. 6. The souls of believers are like narrow-mouthed vessels, they cannot receive much at a time without spilling. 7. We are such bad husbands, Christ will not trust us with all at once.

VI. The Rain comes down, as is noted of dew, irresistibly; when God doth, by his Word of command, speak to the clouds to distil it down upon the earth, it is not in the power of all the creatures to hinder its falling.

PARALLEL.

you are not to look upon those truths that ministers dispense as the mere effects and fruits of their inventions and parts: "He is the minister of God," &c., the office is from heaven, the doctrine he preaches is from heaven, the efficacy and success of it is from heaven: "what I received of the Lord, I delivered also unto you," 1 Cor. xi. 23.

II. So the Word of God is sent to one people and not to another, to one kingdom and not to another; what glorious influences of the Gospel hath God sent to this land! and what a drought and scarcity is there of it in many others not far off: and what precious showers have some places had in England beyond what others enjoy? "To you is the Word of this salvation sent," Acts xiii. 26; it comes not by chance, but by commission and the special command of God.

III. The Word of God in like manner sometimes comes down moderately, yet continuing long before God takes it away from a people or soul, at length it proves effectual, and thoroughly waters and soaks their barren hearts, and makes them fruitful; but at another time, the Word in a sermon, comes like a sudden spout of Rain, seeming to carry all before it, and startles the sinner, but it is soon over, and doth but little good, it abiding not upon the conscience.

IV. So there are some people, nay, many in the world, that never had the Gospel preached as yet to them.

V. So the Word drops and distils like Rain and showers that water the earth, now a little and then a little, as the condition of the soul requires; a drop in this sermon, and a drop in another sermon; "precept must be upon precept, and line upon line; here a little and there a little," Isa. xxviii. 10; now one comforting influence and then another; now one quickening impulse and then another.

1. Christ would that his people should have a constant dependance on himself. 2. He would have them wait upon every sermon, upon every ordinance and opportunity. 3. He would not have them surfeit upon his Word, therefore he observes a successive distillation of the blessings thereof upon them. 4. He would have every doctrine, and precept, and promise soak into their hearts. 5. Christ would endear every drop of his grace, and morsel of his Word to his people; he would have them lose nothing be bestows, and therefore gives it them as they are able to receive it. 6. The souls of believers are like narrow-mouthed vessels, they cannot receive much at a time without spilling. 7. We are such bad husbands, Christ will not trust us with all at once.

VI. The Word falls upon sinners. When God gives command with mighty power, the influences of the Word and Spirit work with mighty efficacy upon the heart; the Word is quick and powerful, it breaks the heart in pieces; in conviction it causes the sinner to cry out, Lord, what wilt thou have me do? it shall accomplish that for which it was sent. See Light.

METAPHOR.

VII. Rain is most beneficial to the earth, when there come sweet, warm rays of the sun with it, or as clear shining after it, then herbs, flowers, and corn, as also other fruits, grow abundantly.

VIII. Rain is necessary at seed-time, to make the earth ready and fit to receive the seed; "Thou visitest the earth, and waterest it; thou greatly enrichest it with the river of God, which is full of water: thou preparest them corn; thou waterest the ridges abundantly, thou settlest the furrows thereof; thou makest it soft with showers, thou blessest the springing thereof, thy paths drop fatness," Isa. xxx. 23, Psal. lxxv. 9, 10. This is called the former Rain, and as it is necessary at or about seed-time, so also it is needful at earing-time, to ripen the corn, and to bring it to perfection; both these are needful to produce a good harvest, both the former and latter Rain.

IX. Rain makes the earth soft and tender, which otherwise would be very hard and dry, and unfruitful, as we see in time of great drought.

X. After much Rain, sometimes comes a great drought.

shuts up heaven. Ministers are like clouds without Rain.

XI. Clouds let down the Rain upon the earth; God makes use of them as vessels to retain the water, and that also at his pleasure, they may let it out, and distil it down upon the earth.

XII. Rain hath been sent down from heaven as the answer of prayer; prayer hath as it were opened the windows of heaven, that it might Rain upon the earth.

mouth boldly, to make known the mystery of the Gospel," Eph. vi. 19, 2 Thess. iii. 1.

XIII. Rain cometh down from heaven, and returneth not thither, without answering the end for which it is sent.

METAPHOR.

I. Rain is not necessary at all times; there are seasons when the husbandman craves none; he is sometimes afraid of a shower, and prays for fair weather; Rain in harvest is not welcome.

PARALLEL.

VII. So it is in respect of the Gospel, when the Sun of righteousness shines upon the soul, under the Word and blessed doctrine thereof, O! this makes a believer, and all his graces, to flourish exceedingly!

VIII. The Gospel hath a two-fold use and benefit, it is necessary as the former Rain at the beginning or first working of grace upon the heart; so it is needful afterwards, to ripen and prepare the soul for heaven. "Be glad then ye children of Zion, and rejoice in the Lord your God, for he hath given you the former Rain moderately; and he will cause the Rain to come down, the former Rain and latter Rain," &c. We cannot be without either; we shall soon decay in our spirits, if we have not spiritual moisture of the grace and Word of God upon our souls; the ministry of the Word is not only appointed to implant grace in us, but also to perfect grace so rooted and implanted.

IX. So the Word of God makes the hard and flinty hearts of sinners very soft and tender; it is of a mollifying fructifying nature, it makes the saints fruitful in grace and good works.

X. So after great plenty of divine and spiritual Rain, when people are glutted with a fulness of Gospel-mercies, God sometimes sends a drought, XI. Ministers are the spiritual clouds that God hath appointed to retain the Word and saving knowledge of divine things, so that they may also at his command let the water of life down, or distil it upon men's souls. See Clouds.

XII. Divine Rain hath been sent down as the answer of fervent prayer; the prayer of the godly hath prevailed with the Almighty, for sending of the Word and Spirit down upon the world, and Church of God! hence Paul earnestly begs the saints' prayers, that he "might open his mouth boldly, to make known the mystery of the Gospel," Eph. vi. 19, 2 Thess. iii. 1.

XIII. "So," saith the Lord, "shall my Word be that goeth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it," Isa. lv. 10, 11.

DISPARITY.

I. The Word of God is necessary at all times: "preach the Word, be instant in season and out of season:" there is indeed no time, but this divine Rain is needful, and we cannot say we want it not, for we cannot be without it one day.

METAPHOR.

II. Rain is no distinguishing argument between good and bad men; it falls promiscuously upon the righteous and the wicked; for though it does not fall every where, in every city and place, yet where it comes, it usually falls alike.

DISPARITY.

II. But the word of God and blessings thereof, are a distinguishing sign of God's special favour: the peculiar drops of divine grace are not communicated to all alike, though all may have the word preached to them: "My word, saith Christ, hath no abiding in you."

INFERENCES.

I. PRAY that the divine clouds may be filled with spiritual Rain.

II. And know from hence the necessity of the Word, that there is as much need of the Word, for the growth and comfort of the soul, as there is of Rain for the growth of the fruits of the earth.

III. How blind are they who are offended at the doctrine of the Gospel!

IV. Hath the word, like Rain or dew fallen upon your souls? Consider the effects of Rain, and examine yourselves thereby.

V. When ye see it rain upon the earth, think upon the Word and doctrine of the Gospel, with secret groans and desires of heart, that your souls may be made fruitful by it.

VI. And lastly, take heed you do not provoke God to shut up heaven, that there be no more Rain. God can make spiritual clouds empty, or scatter them in a way of judgment; now your eyes behold your teachers, and they seem like clouds filled with water; but he can soon cause them to be driven into corners, as a punishment for your sins, or make them like clouds without Rain, that so you may know what it is to abuse the spiritual plenty you have so long enjoyed, by feeling want and scarcity, that may be over all the land: "Behold, the day is come, saith the Lord, that I will send a famine in the land; not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the word of the Lord," Amos viii. 11.

THE WORD OF GOD COMPARED TO THE DEW OF HEAVEN.

"My doctrine shall drop as the rain, my speech shall distil as the Dew," Deut. xxxii. 2.

METAPHOR.

I. Dew falls insensibly and invisibly; you may be in the field all night, and not perceive the dew fall, and yet find great dew upon the grass.

II. As Dew comes down undiscernibly, and invisibly, so also very sweetly, and in a mild manner.

III. Dew is of a fructifying nature; for falling especially on herbs and tender plants, it soaks into the roots of them, and makes them fruitful.

the Dew unto Israel, and he shall grow as the lily," Hos. xiv. 5.

PARALLEL.

I. So the operations and blessings of the Word, and graces thereof, are invisible; we feel the work, but the manner of the working thereof is unknown to us. No man can see the conversion of another, saith an eminent minister,* nor can we discern his own. The word works by little and little, like as the Dew falls.

II. So the Gospel comes upon some men in a sweet and mild manner; it distils as it were upon them like Dew, although on others, it is true, the Word comes like a mighty and fierce rain. See Rain.

III. So the Word of God causes the soul to grow in grace, it makes the precious plants of God's vineyard to be green, and flourish in all the fruits of the Spirit. The saints at Thessalonica, after they received the word, their faith grew exceedingly, 2 Thess. i. 3. "I will be as the lily," Hos. xiv. 5.

* Dr. Sibbs.

METAPHOR.

IV. Dew comes down irresistibly ; who can stop or hinder the Dew from falling on the earth ?

V. Dew doth usually fall in the night.

Dew will fall no more ; no more preaching, nor means of grace will then be afforded to sinners, neither will saints have need of it : “ For when that which is perfect is come, then, and not till then, will that which is in part be done away,” 1 Cor. xiii. 10.

METAPHOR.

I. Dew is not sufficient to water some ground, nor to make the new-mown grass to spring and grow ; that needs a plentiful rain.

PARALLEL.

IV. Who can hinder or stop the Word from operating upon the sinner’s heart ? If God will work, who shall let ? “ My Word shall not return to me in vain, it shall accomplish that for which I sent it,” Isa. lv. 11.

V. So the Word only comes upon men’s hearts like Dew, whilst the night of this world continues. In the state of glory, the perfect day, this

DISPARITY.

I. THE Word of God is not only a Dew, that sweetly waters and refreshes the tender herbs ; but also it is sufficient to soak and well water the driest ground : hence it is compared to rain, as you heard before.

THE GOSPEL COMPARED TO A TREASURE.

“ But we have Treasure in earthen vessels,” &c., 2 Cor. iv. 7.

WE shall first show, that the Word and Gospel of Christ is a Treasure, yea, most choice Treasure, though it be never so much slighted by wicked men.

Secondly, We shall run the parallel, &c.

Argu. 1. That which is set forth by the choicest and rarest things in the whole world, must needs be a Treasure ; but the Gospel is set forth by the choicest and rarest things, as gold, silver, precious stones, &c., therefore the Gospel is a Treasure.

2. That which is of such value, that its worth cannot be known or computed, must needs be a Treasure : but the Gospel is invaluable, Ergo, &c.

3. That by which the grace and love of God is communicated, must needs be a Treasure, or that which is of great worth : but the Gospel is that by which the grace and love of God in Christ is communicated, Ergo, &c.

4. That which the best, wisest, and holiest men have esteemed and prized above all earthly and worldly things, must needs be a Treasure : but such have so prized the Gospel, and Word of God, Ergo, Psal. cxix. 14, 127, Job xxiii. 12.

5. That which good and holy men have died for, rather than to part with, must needs be a Treasure, or that which is of great worth ; but holy men have rather chosen death, than to deny or part with the Gospel ; Ergo, Phil. i. 7, Heb. x. 29, and xi. 26, Acts xx. 24.

6. That which enriches all that really partake of it, or enjoy it, must needs be a Treasure : but the Gospel doth so, Rom. xi. 12, Ergo, &c.

METAPHOR.

I. RARE or excellent Treasure is more in quality than quantity, more in worth than show.

II. Treasure enricheth those that have it.

III. Treasure hath a great influence upon the hearts of the sons of men.

PARALLEL.

I. The Gospel is much in little ; it hath been of that esteem, that in the time of its scarcity, a load of hay hath been given for one leaf of the epistle of James in English. See the Word of God compared to Light.

II. So doth the Gospel. How many, poor, miserable, wretched men and women have not only been supplied, as to their need, but enriched thereby.

III. So hath the Gospel, through the Spirit ; and therefore the lip of truth said, “ Where your Treasure is, there will your heart be also,” Matt. vi. 21.

METAPHOR.

IV. Treasure is much sought after with great care and pains; and when obtained, men are very loathe to part with it.

V. Treasure is usually kept in some strong or secure place, to the end it may be safely preserved.

VI. Treasure sometimes signifies store and plenty of good things, Prov. xv. 6.

VII. Much Treasure makes men great and honourable in the world.

VIII. Treasure will carry a man a great way, in and through great straits, afflictions, sorrows, and sufferings.

METAPHOR.

I. All Treasures here, be they ever so rich or rare, yet they are but earthly, or from the earth.

II. Earthly Treasures are corruptible, and many times are spoiled; they become worth little or nothing. "Lay not up Treasure on earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt," Matt. vi. 19, 21.

III. Earthly Treasures, though they may go far, and supply many bodily wants, yet they cannot supply soul-wants.

IV. The poor have but little of worldly Treasure, and therefore it is they are accounted poor; it is mostly in the hands of the great men of the earth.

V. Men by their natural care and industry may get worldly Treasure, and grow rich thereby.

VI. Worldly Treasure may be taken away by thieves, as well as eaten by moths.

PARALLEL.

IV. What pains did the holy men of old use, in seeking after a discovery of the truth of the Gospel, and of the things therein contained! And what a cloud of witnesses are there, who rather than they would part with this Treasure, parted with their lives, and all they had.

V. So the Word and Gospel of God hath been preserved in the worst of times, when the great design of men and devils hath been to destroy or corrupt it: "Thy word have I hid in mine heart," Psal. cxix. 11.

VI. There are store of good things held forth in the Gospel, viz., Christ, grace, glory, and every good thing else, with him and by him.

VII. Faith in the Gospel raiseth to great honour. O! what dignity ariseth from that noble birth that is from above! until which, how mean and disgraceful an object is fallen man!

VIII. So the Gospel and the grace of it, O how far, and through what difficulties, will it carry a man! With what contentment have Christians behaved themselves in the want of all outward enjoyments, having had a little of this Treasure!

DISPARITY.

I. But such is the glory of the Gospel, as that it is a Treasure from heaven, and of an heavenly product and extract.

II. But the Gospel, and grace thereof, is a Treasure incorruptible, it cannot putrify, or be spoiled; its splendour and glory is durable: "But of incorruptible,—the word of God, which liveth and abideth for ever," 1 Pet. i. 23.

III. But the Gospel, or Word of God, extendeth to the supply both of the soul and body. The Gospel heard and received by faith, makes up a full supply to the soul of whatever it needs: "My God shall supply all your wants," &c., Phil. iv. 19.

IV. But it is evident, that the poor receive the Gospel; and James saith expressly, that "God hath chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith," &c., James ii. 5. The poor of this world have generally most of this sacred Treasure, and so are the rich men.

V. No man whatsoever, though ever so worldly wise, ingenious, careful and industrious, in laying out all his natural parts, can enrich himself with this sacred Treasure: "What hast thou which thou hast not received?"

VI. But the Gospel is a Treasure that cannot be taken away by thieves, nor can the moth corrupt it; it is called the everlasting Gospel, Luke xii. 33, Rev. xiv. 6.

I N F E R E N C E S.

I. This shows who are truly rich men and women in the world, and what is indeed the true Treasure, that will make them so here, and to eternity, James ii. 5, 2 Cor. vi. 10.

II. It shows the folly and madness of those that slight and despise the Gospel, Heb. ii. 2, 3, Jer. viii. 8, 9.

III. What strong motives might I produce in order to the getting of this Treasure?

1. Would you have riches for ever, would you have durable riches? &c.

2. Would you be defended, and know how to subsist another day? then get much of this Treasure!

Quest. But is not this the way to be in the more danger? For it is not the poor that the thief cares to meddle withal, but the rich: we see what assaults they meet withal that have this Treasure, therefore it is best to be at ease and quiet, and forbear to meddle with it.

Answ. God's power and strength is laid out for its preservation, and of the vessels in whom it is. It is God's Treasure, and the vessel too, for his people are his peculiar Treasure: "He will keep it night and day, lest any hurt it," Isa. xxvii. 3, meaning his people, whom he hath enriched with this Treasure.

Quest. But why is this Treasure put into such earthen vessels; is it not in the greater danger therefore to be lost, they being so subject to be broken?

Answ. 1. They are, though mean in the world's eye, and also in their own, yet, chosen and sanctified vessels, and fitted for the Lord's use; so that the Treasure can suffer no loss by the vessel.

2. The power of God is the more manifested, in preserving this Treasure in an earthen vessel.

Object. But these vessels may be, nay, have been, and are often broken, and turned to dust.

Answ. Yet God never wanted a vessel for this Treasure; nay, those that are turned to dust are not destroyed; they are but dissolved, that the Treasure might be the more diffusive, and spread itself. The blood of the saints hath been the seed of the Church, 2 Cor. iv. 8—11, 1 Cor. vi. 14.

METAPHORS, ALLEGORIES, SIMILIES, TYPES, ETC.,

RESPECTING THE

GRACES OF THE HOLY SPIRIT,

AND THE

BLESSED ORDINANCES OF THE GOSPEL.

BOOK IV.

GRACE COMPARED TO SALT.

"Have Salt in yourselves," &c., Mark ix. 50, ἔχετε ἐν ἑαυτοῖς ἀλας, &c.

TOUCHING the several metaphorical notations of this term, Salt, we shall refer you unto the eleventh chapter of Philologia Sacra.

By Salt in this place, is meant the blessed and most precious grace of the Spirit.

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

I. SALT is of a searching quality; if it be laid or rubbed upon meat, it will pierce and search it to the very bone.

be any sin hid, it will search and find it out.

II. Salt is of a purging, cleansing, and purifying nature, it will work out blood, filth, &c., as common experience shows.

III. Salt hath a preserving quality; it will not only purge corruption out of meat, but also preserve meat, and other things, from corruption and putrefaction.

IV. Salt seasons things, causing that to taste savoury, which otherwise would be no way pleasant, wholesome, or good for the body. "Can that which is unsavoury be eaten without Salt?" Job vi. 6.

V. Salt is of universal use throughout the world; it is the one thing needful among men;

I. TRUE grace, or the spiritual operation of the Spirit, is of a searching nature; it will, when received in truth, infuse itself into every faculty of the soul: "The Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God," 1 Cor. ii. 10. If there

II. Grace is of a purging and purifying virtue; it will not only search corruption out, whether it be in the heart or life, but also in a blessed manner purge and work it forth: "He that hath this hope, purifieth himself, even as he is pure," 1 John iii. 3.

III. Grace preserves the soul from all manner of sin and defilements; it will not suffer a saint to "Run with others to the same excess of riot;" "But teacheth us to deny all ungodliness, and worldly lusts, and to live righteously, soberly, and godly in this present world," 1 Pet. iv. 4, Tit. ii. 12. "How shall I do this thing, and sin against God?"

IV. Grace seasons a Christian; it makes him savoury to God, and to all good men, savoury in his words, savoury in his dealings and commerce, savoury in all his whole conversation; not only savoury himself, but seasoning others also; hence called the Salt of the earth. "Let your speech be alway with grace, seasoned with Salt: that ye may know how to answer every man," Col. iv. 6.

V. Grace is absolutely necessary; it is the one thing needful to salvation, without which there is no getting to heaven. The advantages all it is said to season all things; we receive great advantage by it. It is known to be exceeding necessary both by sea and land.

METAPHOR.

VI. Salt, as Pliny, and other naturalists say, is exceeding good against the sting of serpents, and will destroy worms that breed in the body, and hath many other medicinal virtues in it.

VII. Salt was made use of under the law in sacrifices: "And every oblation of thy meat-offering shalt thou season with Salt. With all thy offerings thou shalt use Salt," Lev. ii. 13.

METAPHOR.

I. SALT is natural, or else made by art, or salt water, ashes, fire, &c. Pliny says,* that in India they have Salt out of quarries of stone.

II. If meat be quite corrupted, putrified, stink, and is loathsome, Salt cannot recover it, nor make it savoury.

III. Salt may lose its saltness or savour, and become good for nothing, but to be trodden under the foot of men.

IV. Things may be over-salted or seasoned, so that they may be spoiled, and become unwholesome to human bodies.

PARALLEL.

believers receive thereby are wonderful. All men, of what rank or quality soever, stand in need of grace; they had better be without gold, than without grace. It is good in every place and condition: men need it as well at sea as at land, in sickness and health.

VI. Grace is a most sovereign remedy against sin, that sting of the old serpent, and there is nothing like it to kill the worm of conscience, that is bred by means of corruption of the inward man, and there gnaws, and greatly torments the soul; and many other soul-medicinal virtues it hath.

VII. Grace must be made use of in all our spiritual sacrifices and offerings unto God. We must pray with grace, and sing with grace, and do all in God's worship with grace in our hearts; nothing we do will be accepted without it. "Every one shall be Salted with fire," or seasoned with affliction, "and every sacrifice shall be Salted with Salt," viz., grace, Mark ix. 49.

DISPARITY.

I. GRACE is supernatural. No man hath the divine influence and operation of the Spirit of God naturally, nor can he get in by any human contrivance or art whatsoever; it is the gift of God, John i. 14.

II. But if the soul be wholly, or in every faculty thereof corrupted, stinks, and is loathsome in the nostrils of God, yet grace can quickly recover it, and make it very savoury and sweet to God and good men.

III. Grace cannot lose its excellent savour. Christians, may lose much of their Salt, or decay in grace; but grace, be it little or much, will never lose its own precious virtue.

IV. But no man can be over much seasoned with grace; never had any Christian too much of this spiritual Salt in him. The more you receive and take in of this, the better you will be seasoned thereby.

INFERENCES.

I. From hence we may infer, that grace is the principal thing.

II. How unsavoury are all graceless persons! "The whole world lieth in wickedness." They are like putrified or stinking carrion in a common-sewer, as the Greek word there signifieth.

III. This may stir up all ungodly ones to look out and cry mightily for grace, the excellent nature of which is set forth under the metaphor Light.

IV. Let all who profess themselves Christians, examine themselves thoroughly, whether they be Salted with grace, or not. Are you savoury men and women? What is your communication, your speech, your conversation? &c.

V. Take heed you lose none of this divine Salt; you will soon become unsavoury, if you have not Salt in yourselves.

VI. You that should season others, should have much Salt in your own hearts and lives. "Ye are the Salt of the earth."

* Plin. lib. 31. p. 414, 415.

THE GIRDLE OF TRUTH.

"Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with Truth," &c. Ephes. vi. 14.

A Girdle is properly a Belt, used to be worn by soldiers, to preserve the breast and belly.

Truth hath various acceptations in the holy scriptures, some of which, (according to Wilson and others,) you may take as follows.

1. The most perfect divine essence, which is truth itself, and the Author of all Truth, in his creatures: "Thou hast redeemed me, O Lord God of Truth," Psal. xxxi. 5.
2. Jesus Christ: "I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life," John xiv. 6.
3. The statutes, precepts, and promises of the law of Moses: "Thy commandments are Truth," Psal. cxix. 151, 142.
4. The whole word of God, both law and Gospel: "Thy word is Truth," John xvii.
17. "Whereof ye heard before, by the word of the Truth of the Gospel," Col. i. 5.
5. The light of nature in man since the fall, to help him to know God so far, as to leave him without excuse: "Which hold the Truth in unrighteousness," Rom. i. 18.
6. True religion taught and contained in the Gospel: "Who hath bewitched you, that you should not obey the Truth?" Gal. iii. 1, Tit. i. 1.
7. Truth of grace, sincerity, void of deceit in the heart and life. I have walked before thee in Truth," Isa. xxxviii. 3. "Thou lovest Truth in the inward parts," Psal. li. 6.
8. Fidelity and faithfulness between man and man, Jer. v. 1, 2.
9. Judgment and true justice, "Truth is fallen in the streets."
10. Most true, far from all deceit. "The judgments of the Lord are Truth," Psal. xix. 9.
11. Truth signifieth sincerity from the heart, with assent of the mind, as one truly purposeth, &c., without hypocrisy.

(1.) But that which is principally intended by the Girdle of Truth according to expositors, is, first, the doctrine of the Gospel, called the word of Truth.

(2.) Truth of grace and sincerity of heart, called, "The unleavened bread of sincerity and Truth." 1 Cor. v. 8.

By loins is meant the mind, "Gird up the loins of your mind," &c. A Christian should be of a sound judgment; he should be girt about, as with a Girdle, with truth and sincerity, "Hold the mystery of faith in a pure conscience," 1 Tim. iii. 9. Maintain the true religion, and be sincere and upright in the profession of it. Why Truth in both these respects is compared to a Girdle, will appear by what follows.

METAPHOR.

I. A Girdle was used in former times by soldiers, it was part of their habit and armour.

II. A Girdle cleaves close to a man when it is well girt to him, and it is not easily unbuckled by an adversary.

III. A Girdle compasseth a man about.

rightness; God hath set bounds to his people, out of which they must never go: we must not swerve aside to the right-hand or left, nor play the hypocrite, for such that do so, cannot be said to be girt about with Truth.

IV. A Girdle strengthens the loins of a soldier, or him that is well girt therewith: "Gird up thy loins, and arise and speak unto them all that I command thee; be not dis-

PARALLEL.

I. The true doctrine of the Gospel, or the holy principles of religion and sincerity, are of great use among Christ's spiritual soldiers, in order to the arming them completely.

II. So the Truth of Christ, should be fastened in our hearts and judgments, that we may not be wavering in our minds; "Stand fast in the faith," &c. 1 Cor. xvi. 13. Sincerity ought to cleave to our inward parts, as a Girdle doth to the loins of a man.

III. So the Truth of Christ, and sincerity of heart, should compass Christians about, they ought to keep always in the bounds of Truth and up-

IV. The true doctrine of the Gospel, or that religion that is according to godliness, joined with sincerity of heart, is the strength of every Christian or soldier of Christ; if he have not this Girdle on, his loins are loose and weak, and mayed," Jer. i. 17. As much as if God should say, be strong for thy work. "Thou hast girded me with strength," &c. "Their loins shall be loosed;" "I will loose the loins of the kings: "He weakeneth the strength of the mighty," Job xii. 21, the Girdle of the strong: so the Heb.

METAPHOR.

V. A Girdle was used to gird on the other parts of the soldier's armour, "Let not him that girdeth on his harness boast himself, as he that putteth it off," 1 Kings xx. 11.

VI. Girding up the loins, notes a preparation for battle and war. Thus David spake of Christ, "Gird thy sword on thy thigh, O most Mighty," Psal. xlv. 3. "Let not him that girdeth on his harness boast," &c

We should be ready to dispute, fight, make war, as good soldiers of Christ. Opponents are like combatants; controversial divinity, saith Mr Caryl, on Job xxxviii. page 35, is called polemical divinity. Disputes are word-wars; and there have been as hot wars made by the pen, as ever were by the sword. "Gird up now thy loins," &c. saith God to Job. The Lord seems to send him a challenge to the battle, by a further debate: arm thyself like a mighty man, get ready for the duel, for I am resolved to try what a man thou art in arguing. A saint being girt with Truth and sincerity, is fitted for any conflict.

VII. We read of girding up the loins for travel, or when a man is to take a journey. Thus Elisha said to Gehazi, "Gird up thy loins and take my staff in thine hand, and go thy way," 2 Kings iv. 29. It was the fashion in those Eastern countries, where they wore their garments long, and ordinarily loose, to gird them up, by which they could travel better.

VIII. There is mention made of girding up the loins, in order to serving, and attending on business: "Which of you, saith Christ, having a servant ploughing, or feeding cattle, will say unto him by and by, when he is come from the field, go and sit down; and will not rather say, gird thyself, and serve me?" &c. From hence we may see, girding is preparatory to serving or waiting: it also denotes preparation for our labour or work.

PARALLEL.

"he is as unstable as water," as Jacob speaks of Reuben, Gen. xlix. 2, 3. Let Truth go, let one Truth go, and how doth it weaken our hands? Or profess it with a false and deceitful heart, and how unable to stand against the assaults of the enemy? On the other hand, when a person is well girt with Truth in both these respects, he is thereby made strong and courageous.

V. Truth is that which fasteneth or girdeth every part of the Christian's armour, sincerity completes and perfects all; what will a man's faith, hope, righteousness, signify without the Girdle of Truth, unless he keep within the bounds of Christian doctrine, and is sincere and upright in the profession thereof.

VI. So the apostle would have saints stand, or be ready to engage their spiritual enemies, "Having their loins girt about with Truth," Eph. vi. 14. Such a person is prepared to encounter with all adversaries of the soul. We should be girt with the Truth, and girt for the Truth; that is, as another apostle speaks, to "Contend for the faith once delivered to the saints," Jude 3.

VII. So Christians should have their loins girt about with Truth and uprightness, that they may be fitted and prepared to travel heavenwards. God's people are strangers and pilgrims whilst in this world, and are travelling to their own country; and to have their minds well girt up with Truth, will be a great help to them in their journey. A storm of persecution may soon blow away the loose garment of profession, if a person be not girt with the Girdle of Truth and sincerity.

VIII. Truth and sincerity prepares and fits the mind for Christ's work and service: "Let your loins be girt about, and your lights burning, and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their Lord," Luke xii. 35, 36. He is always well girt with Truth and uprightness, that is ready to wait upon, or do work for the Lord Jesus. Careless, slothful, and unsound persons are ungirt, and so unblest. A saint in doing of his work, whether it be heart-work, or hand-work, ought to be well-girt, viz., perform all in Truth and uprightness. Ministers must preach nothing but Truth; and as they must preach nothing but Truth, so they must preach in Truth, or in sincerity of heart. "Some preach Christ," saith the apostle, "but not sincerely," Phil. i. 16. Their minds were not girt with Truth. All our prayers ought to be put up in Truth: "God is near to all that upon him in Truth," Psal. cxlv. 19. All works of charity ought to flow from a pure heart, viz., to be done in uprightness and simplicity, according to the direction given by the Lord in his word, both for matter and manner.

METAPHOR.

IX. A Girdle is a great ornament, used to be put on uppermost, to cover the joints of the armour, which if seen, would cause some uncomeliness; for though the armour was closely knit and clasped together, yet some gaping was subject to be betwixt piece and piece; and therefore they used to put over these parts a broad belt or Girdle, which did serve not only to fasten the other armour together, but it made the soldier appear more comely in his harness and accoutrements.

2. Mean parentage, or a low descent, is much despised in the world; but how base soever the stock, and ignoble the birth be, when true grace and sincerity comes, it makes the house and person illustrious, and very glorious: "Since thou wert precious in mine eyes, thou hast been honourable," Isa. xliii. 4. Sincerity sets a mark of honour upon a person, or a people. If you see this flourishing, though in a mean cottage, it tells you a great prince, nay, an heir of heaven dwells there. Sincerity brings the creature into alliance with the Most High and glorious King of heaven and earth. Who dares say, a child of God, the spouse of Christ, and heir of heaven is of an ignoble birth and pedigree?

3. It covers poverty, which exposeth to great contempt. There is none so rich as a godly sincere person; he is daily let into God's treasury, Christ's storehouse is always open unto him: "All is yours," 1 Cor. iii. 22.

4. To want parts, and to be a person of no name, and of small endowments, exposeth to disdain; none are more contemptible in the eye of the wise and vain glorious world, than such. But alas! an honest heart, one that is sincere, excels beyond all comparison the proudest, most renowned, and applauded for human wisdom, parts, and elegancy in the world.

5. It covers all sinful comeliness, and all the godly man's failings, whether they be sins of omission or commission; for sincerity is that excellent quality to which pardoning mercy is annexed. It is Christ in a proper sense that covers all sin, but he will cover the sins and failings of none but such as are sincere: "Blessed is the man whose sins are covered," &c., Psal. xxxii. 1. The upright man's righteousness is accepted through Christ, though he be never so infirm, or attended with miscarriages: though God does not like his sin for his sincerity, yet God will not unsaint him because of his sin.

X. The priest under the law wore a Girdle,* which was made of fine linen, and of blue, purple, and scarlet; the Hebrew doctors say, it was about three fingers broad; it was curiously woven, as Josephus observes, with pictures of flowers.† This Girdle (saith Ainsworth) signified the girding up the loins of our minds with

PARALLEL.

IX. Sincerity is a glorious ornament. A Christian hereby appears very comely in the sight of God, and it greatly tends to hide and cover all the infirmities of this life; for the saints' graces are not so close, nor their lives so exact, but in the best are found defects and weaknesses, which are so many gaps in his armour: but sincerity covers all, so that he is not put to shame by them.

1. Sincerity covers all outward blemishes, or want of outward beauty, that great idol of the world. Sincere persons, if they be not so fair and comely as some others, yet being holy and upright, sincere and virtuous ones, how amiable are they rendered hereby in the sight of all good men; it covers all things that seem to render a saint dishonourable or uncomely.

X. Truth and sincerity is not only an ornament, but a most glorious ornament, being that which was figured out by the priest's Girdle, rarely made with curious flowers. This is as a choice golden Girdle, curiously wrought by the Spirit of God, which all the priesthood of Christ have on, 1 Pet. ii. 5. It is made of a complication of every grace. Sincerity is not alone; many choice divine flowers interwoven together, in making of the Girdle of truth.

* Ainsworth.

† Josephus Antiquit. Book 8. chap. 2.

strength, justice, and virtue, Eph. vi. 14. Also we read of Christ's being girt with a golden Girdle, Rev. i. 13.

METAPHOR.

I. BESIDES other great disparities between other Girdles, and the Girdle of Truth, this is one, viz., other Girdles may be lost; or be corrupted; they may rot, and pass away, like that which Jeremiah had, Jer. xiii. 7, which was "Marred and profitable for nothing."

II. Other Girdles are only made for the body.

DISPARITY.

I. BUT the Girdle of Truth can never be lost. Sincerity in the heart of a believer is so fast tied to him, or twisted about him, that he can never lose it. I never yet read of a man that was perfect and upright in heart and life in the sight of God, that ever lost his sincerity, so as to die an hypocrite; though he may in some things be guilty of hypocrisy, yet he cannot absolutely become an hypocrite. This Girdle cannot rot, or be corrupted.

II. But Truth and sincerity is a Girdle for the soul, by which the mind is stayed and strengthened.

INFERENCES.

THIS should teach every professor to labour after, if they have not yet got the Girdle of Truth.

1. Because the design of Satan is, to corrupt men in their judgments, and make them zealous for false ways. Paul's jealousy of the Corinthians was, "Lest the old serpent should beguile them through subtilty, and corrupt their minds from the simplicity of the truth," 2 Cor. xi. 1, 2, 3.

2. Because of the damning nature of heresy and hypocrisy, which our Saviour, as well as the apostle, often warns us of, Luke xii. 1, 2 Thess. ii. 10.

3. Because those who are well girt about with Truth, are established ones. Deceivers are subtil, and false doctrine is of a bewitching nature; the wary and established soul nevertheless is not soon overcome. "In vain is the net spread in the sight of any bird." "Be no more tossed about with every wind of doctrine." Children are most in danger of the poison, 2 Pet. i. 12, and iii. 15, Gal. iv. 1, Prov. i. 17, Eph. iv. 14.

4. And as false doctrine is of a corrupting nature, so likewise is hypocrisy, hence compared to leaven, Luke xii. 1. As sincerity leaveneth in a good sense, so hypocrisy is compared to leaven in a bad sense, from that souring, infusive, and corrupting quality which is in it.

Directions about putting on the Girdle of Truth.

1. Take heed of a counterfeit Girdle; see that what you own and practise for Truth have the stamp of God upon it.

2. Take up nothing upon trust: do not receive this or that, because such and such men believe so, and practise so; neither men nor ministers are your rule, but the word of God.

3. Put not this Girdle of Truth on in notion only; what will the knowledge of Truth signify in thy head, if the loins of thy mind be not girt with it?

4. Take heed of being prejudiced against the Truth, because of the unworthiness of them who posses it.

5. If thou hast not yet gotten the Girdle of truth, buy it now; as Solomon adviseth "Buy the Truth, and sell it not," Prov. xxiii. 23. The price of Truth may quickly rise high.

6. Let falsehood go, let thy sins go, let thy own righteousness go, in point of reliance or dependance upon it, so as to trust it for justification and eternal life.

7. Come up to the price of Truth; do not cheapen it only, but come up to the price, though it cost thee a right-hand lust of profit, or a right-eye lust of pleasure; thou must deny thyself.

Labour to know the excellency of Truth.

1. It is pure, Psal. cxix. 140.

2. It will cleanse and purify the heart, John xvii. 17, 19; and cover all the infirmities of thy life, as was hinted before.

3. It will make you free: "Ye shall know the Truth, and the Truth shall make you free," John viii. 32.

4. It is strong; Truth is too hard and strong for all its opposers; as the young man said, "Great is the strength of Truth." There is no breaking of this Girdle.
5. Consider what God's people have suffered before they would part with Truth, what torments and tortures they have endured.
6. There is no managing the spiritual war without the Girdle of Truth.

Marks of sincerity.

First, Negatively.

1. He is not a perfect and sincere Christian, whose heart is not changed, who is not renewed, or who hath not a principle of divine grace or spiritual life in him.
2. He is not a perfect and sincere person, that wants any essential part of a Christian; as he is not a perfect natural child, that wants an arm, an eye, or a leg. See Matt. xix. 21. "One thing thou lackest," if thou wouldst be perfect, or approve thyself sincere, "go thy way, and sell what thou hast," &c.
3. He is not a sincere person, whose heart is lifted up in him, Hab. ii. 4.
4. He is not a sincere man, that is not upright in all his dealings and converse with men; if he want moral uprightness, his religion is good for nothing.

Secondly, In the affirmative.

1. A sincere and upright Christian is known by the way he goes in: "The high-way of the upright is to depart from evil," Prov. xvi. 17.
 - (1.) He escheweth all evil, the smallest, as well as the greatest.
 - (2.) He leaveth it willingly, he hates it; he doth not part with it as a man parteth with his friend, but as a man parteth with his most deadly and mortal enemy.
2. A sincere person hath a right faith, and a good and well enlightened judgment. Rotten principles make rotten Christians. There are some men who are of "Corrupt minds, reprobate, or of no judgment, concerning the faith," 2 Tim. iii. 8.
3. He hath an holy and upright end; he desires to live to God's glory, and to serve him in sincerity. Paul resolved, "Christ should be magnified in his body, whether it were by life or by death."
4. He walks by a true and exact rule; "As many as walk according to this rule, peace on them, and mercy, and upon the Israel of God," Gal. vi. 16.
5. He labours to keep all God's commandments. Thus did David, who was "a man after God's own heart," Psal. cxix. 9; and thus did Zachary and Elizabeth, who "walked in all the commandments of the Lord blameless," &c. Luke i. 6.
6. He desires to be sanctified, as well as to be saved; to be made holy, as well as to be made happy.
7. He is as willing to do for God, as to receive from God; for the work, as well as the wages.
8. He strives as much against the evils of his heart, as he does against the evils of his life.
9. He is a man always for God, in bad times as well as in good times.
10. He is the same in private as in public; he is at home what he seems to be abroad.
11. He loves and prefers God and Christ above all. Thus David, Psal. lxxiii. 25, and Paul, Phil. iii. 8, 9.
12. He can go on in God's ways and services with abundance of content, without respect to any outward profit or applause, or being taken notice of by men. His satisfaction consisteth not in the approbation of men, but by the approbation and commendation of God. His own conscience gives testimony and evidence of the sincerity of his heart. Thus Paul, "This is our rejoicing, the testimony of our conscience," &c. 2 Cor. i. 12.

THE BREAST-PLATE OF RIGHTEOUSNESS.

"And having on the Breast-Plate of Righteousness," &c., Eph. vi. 14.

1. There is a moral, legal, and evangelical Righteousness.
- Now a moral or legal Righteousness will not save or defend the saint, or spiritual soldier of Jesus Christ, from his enemy: "Except your Righteousness exceed the Righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye can in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven." Matt. v. 20 Paul valued not his own righteousness that was of the law. All our Righteousness, viz., that which flows not from faith, or from a renewed principle of the Spirit, is but as filthy rags. Therefore that cannot be the Righteousness here intended.

II. Evangelical Righteousness is two-fold :

1. Imputed.
2. Imparted.

First, The Righteousness imputed is that which was wrought by Christ for the believer in the days of his flesh, by his active and passive obedience to the law of God, which is put upon the soul by faith, called "the Righteousness of God by faith," Phil. iii. 9.

Secondly, the Righteousness imparted is that which is wrought by Christ in the soul; it is a supernatural work, or a new life planted in the heart of every believer, by the powerful operations of the Holy Ghost, whereby he is made holy, and enabled to approve himself to God and men, in all purity of life and conversation.

By the Breast-plate of Righteousness in the text, we understand the Righteousness of sanctification is principally intended; for otherwise this piece of Christian armour would interfere with the shield of faith, which comprehends the Righteousness of justification. See Shield. It is, we say, a principle of new life, which the Spirit works in the heart of a believer; hence the several graces of holiness are called "The fruits of the Spirit," Gal. v. 22. Man by the fall had a double loss; first, the love of God; secondly, the image or likeness of God: Christ restores both to his children; the first, by his Righteousness imputed; the second, by his Spirit imparting the lost image of God to them, which consists in Righteousness and true holiness. Who but a man can impart his own nature and beget a child like himself? So who but the Spirit of God can make a creature like God, by causing him to partake of the divine nature?

1. This is that principle of new life, viz., an inward disposition, and divine qualities, sweetly, powerfully, and constantly stirring up and inclining to that which is holy, and spiritually good.

2. The work of the Spirit in this respect was not to recover what was dying, but to work life de novo in a soul quite dead; hence called a creating, quickening, forming, and renewing work.

3. It is a supernatural principle, by which we distinguish it from Adam's righteousness, which was co-natural to him, as sin is to us. Holiness was as natural to him, as health was to his body; they both resulted ex principijs recte constitutis, from principles pure and rightly disposed.

Why Righteousness is called a Breast-plate, will appear by the following parallel.

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

I. A Breast-plate is a main and principal piece of armour, that belongs to a soldier.

II. A Breast-plate is a piece of armour that every soldier ought to have on when he engages his enemy; he must not come into the field without it.

III. A Breast-plate preserves the principal part of the body, viz., the breast, where the very vitals of a man are closely couched together, and where a shot or a stab is more deadly, than in other parts, that are more remote from the fountain of life. A man may outlive many wounds received in the

I. Righteousness in like manner is a principal thing belonging to all Christians, who are called soldiers of Christ: "Endure hardness as a good soldier;" &c., 2 Tim. ii. 3.,

II. Righteousness is so necessary for every believer, that he ought not, cannot be without it; there is no engaging an enemy of the soul without a principle of holiness be wrought in him.

III. Righteousness and holiness preserve the principal part of a Christian, viz., his soul. Satan aims to hit him there where he may dispatch him soonest. A wound in a man's credit, estate, relations, &c., hazard not the life of his soul; but sin exposes it to imminent danger. This is that dart, that "struck the young man through the liver, as a bird hasteth to the snare, that knoweth not it is for his life," Prov. vii. 23. And this is arms or legs, but a stab in the heart is a certain messenger of death.

METAPHOR.

IV. A Breast-plate is made and prepared for a soldier, before he puts it on. It is not his own work, but the work of a skilful artist.

V. A Breast-plate much emboldens a soldier, and makes him fearless, that as he cannot be easily killed, so hereby he cannot be soon cowed. When a soldier sees himself unarmed, he begins to tremble; but when he hath on a good helmet, and a plate of proof on his breast, he is not quickly dismayed, but adventures upon the point of the sword.

VI. The Breast-plate and girdle were both joined or buckled together.

having on the Breast-plate of Righteousness," Eph. vi. 14. Which is taken twofold, as hath been showed: first, for the truth of doctrine, or a good and orthodox judgment; all the principles of true religion, that are essential to salvation. Secondly, grace, or sincerity of heart. In both these respects, truth must be clasped to, or joined with Righteousness, and a holy life. Solomon saith, "two are better than one:" so may I say here, a good doctrine with a good conversation, is better than a good doctrine without a good conversation, or a good conversation without a good doctrine; as a man must have the one, so he must not be without the other; "woe to him that is alone," for the Spirit will not be his strength. An evil and corrupt doctrine may be of as dangerous a nature as an evil and debauched life. See 2 Pet. ii. 1, 2, "Who privily bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction," &c. In vain is a man's outward holiness, or moral sincerity, if he be tainted with heretical and damnable principles; and as vain is it for a man to hold the true doctrine of the Christian religion, if he be not sincere, and live a holy life.

INFERENCES.

This may inform us, what need there is for every Christian to get and keep on the Breast-plate of Righteousness; not only to get a renewed principle of grace in his heart, but also to maintain the power of godliness in his life and conversation. This he ought strenuously to labour after, and that for several reasons.

First, In regard of God, whose main design in giving grace, and implanting a divine principle in his people, is to make them holy; to this end he hath put this Breast-plate upon them.

1. In regard of the design he hath to bring them into union with himself, and in marrying them to Jesus Christ, which is, that they might bring forth fruit to God.

2. They are regenerated by the Spirit, that they might be holy: "A new heart, and a new Spirit will I put within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and keep my judgments, and do them," Ezek. xxxvi. 26, 27. "We are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them," Eph. ii. 10.

PARALLEL.

that which Satan strives to tempt, entice, and draw a saint to yield unto. Hence he should be careful to put on his Breast-plate of Righteousness, which whilst he has on, he is safe from the deadly stab of the enemy.

IV. Righteousness, which is the saint's Breast-plate, is wrought in him by the Holy Spirit, who is a most wise and skilful workman. Our own Righteousness is good for nothing, hence called dead works, because they are works from one dead in sin, and spring not from a principle of inward spiritual life.

V. Thus Righteousness defends and animates the soul and conscience, when a man in the midst of the greatest danger can lift up his hands without spot. Holiness fills a soul with courage, so that he can look in the very face of grim death; whereas guilt, which is the nakedness of the soul, puts the stoutest sinner into a shaking fit of fear. "The wicked flee, when no man pursueth; but the righteous are as bold as a lion," Prov. xxviii. 1. No sooner did Adam see his Breast-plate was off, and that he was naked, but he was afraid, and ran away, to hide himself from God.

VI. So Righteousness and truth must meet, and be joined together in every Christian which is held forth by the copulative And, "Stand therefore, having your lions girt about with truth, and

3. It is the design of God in all his ordinances. The word of God is both seed to beget, and food to nourish holiness begotten in the heart. Every part of it contributes to this design abundantly. The preceptive part affords a perfect rule of holiness; the promises present us with admirable encouragements, to entice and allure us thereunto; the threatenings, are to deter and keep back from that which is contrary to it.

4. It is the design of God in all his providences, to make his people more holy. The afflictions he brings upon them, are to refine and purify them: "This is the fruit of all, the taking away of your sin." See Refiner.

5. Saints are called God's witnesses; they should from hence endeavour to shine forth in their testimony for him. What he speaks in his word, touching his justice, holiness, and utter hatred of sin and ungodliness, they ought not only with their lips, but also with their lives, to bear witness unto.

Secondly, In regard of Satan, whose great design is against the holiness of the Saints. How doth it behove them to walk with all circumspection, since they are continually besieged and assaulted by so strong an enemy? As God's great design is to further and prompt to holiness; so Satan's great design is to hinder and obstruct it: and what should be our chief care to defend, but that which our adversaries' thoughts and plots are most laid to assault and storm?

Thirdly, saints should labour to have this Breast-plate on, viz., be holy, in regard of the world: "Ye are the light of the world. Let your good works so shine before men," &c., Matt. v. 14, 16.

1. If these lights become darkness, or are darkened, no marvel if men stumble: "Woe unto the world because of offences; but rather woe to him by whom the offence cometh." "Ye are the salt of the earth;" But if the salt have lost its savour, it is no wonder if the world stink and be unsavoury.

2. Wicked men, saith a worthy minister, know not the principle by which you walk, they cannot possibly discern the excellency of that way and religion which you profess; but they can discern and make some judgment of your conversations; nay, and their eyes are upon you, they watch to see your failings. Spots are soon espied in your coats; for though they love not holiness themselves, yet they expect that those that profess themselves to be saints should be holy. How should this teach you to get on this Breast-plate!

3. This may greatly work upon the ungodly, with whom you live and daily converse; nay, those that will not be won by the word, possibly may, and many times have been, won and converted this way, 1 Pet. iii. 1, 2.

4. This will however convince them, that you are the servants of God, and heaven-born souls; it will silence them, and stop their mouths; "That whereas they speak evil of you, they may be ashamed that falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ," 1 Pet. iii. 16.

5. This will leave the world without excuse in the great day.

Fourthly, You should labour after holiness, in regard of the Gospel itself which you profess. That will this way gain much credit in the world. Nothing brings religion into greater contempt, or causeth it to be more slighted by the ungodly, than the loose, carnal, and unholy lives of those who profess it.

Fifthly, You ought to labour after a godly life, in regard of the sincere and holy ministers of the Gospel, and other faithful saints and soldiers of Christ. What can comfort and delight their souls more than the holy, humble, and fruitful lives of believers? The saints, those excellent ones, were all David's delight, Psal. xvi. 3, and Paul accounted them his joy and crown. But if they be proud, peevish, covetous, carnal, and walk like other Gentiles, what wounds and grieves them more! This made David weep, yea, "Rivers of water to run down his eyes;" and Jeremiah to "Wish his head were water, and his eyes a fountain of tears, that he might weep day and night," Jer. ix. 1. "Many walk, saith Paul, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you weeping, they are enemies to the cross of Christ; whose end is destruction, whose God is their belly, whose glory is in their shame, who mind earthly things," Phil. iii. 18, 19.

Sixthly, Christians, in regard of themselves, ought to labour after Righteousness, and true holiness; for this only will be the best evidence to them of the truth of grace received, and of their interest in Jesus Christ. What will all other attainments and privileges signify, if they be not holy?

1. By this means they will be able to hold up their heads in the day of trial: "For our rejoicing is this, the testimony of our conscience, that in simplicity and godly sincerity, not by fleshly wisdom, but by the grace of God, we have our conversation in the world," &c., 2 Cor. i. 12.

2. These are the men it will go well with, whatever comes: "Say unto the righteous, it shall go well with them," &c. Isa. iii. 10.

3. These shall have peace in Christ, though they shall have trouble in the world; peace whilst they live, and peace when they die: "Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright; the end of that man is peace," Psal. xxxvii. 37.

4. These need not fear the assaults of Satan, they have armour of proof on, a Breast-plate, that will preserve their souls from death: "There is therefore now no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit," Rom. viii. 1.

Seventhly, Christians should labour to have on this Breast-plate of Righteousness, in regard of the excellency of it. It is that which God himself is clothed with; it is that which makes angels to shine gloriously in heaven. A man is hereby capacitated to have communion with God: "Shall the throne of iniquity have fellowship with thee?" &c. Psal. xciv. 20.

Eighthly, and lastly, in regard of the necessity of it: for "Without holiness no man shall see the Lord."

Quest. How should we put on the Breast-plate of Righteousness?

Answ. 1. In heart; we must be inwardly holy, holiness must begin there. First "make the tree good," &c.

2. In life. Negative holiness doth not only consist in the leaving all gross sins, but in abstaining from all appearance of evil, and to leave and abstain from it from right principles; and not only to leave it, but to loath it.

Again, it consisteth in keeping up all holy and religious duties, viz., reading, hearing, praying, distributing to the poor, conforming to all moral and positive precepts; to be holy at home, in the family, in the church, in the world, to exercise a good conscience towards God, and towards men, Acts xxiv. 16. This is to put on the Breast-plate of Righteousness.

I might give many directions about putting it on, and also show some of Satan's cunning stratagems, in endeavouring to make useless this blessed piece of the Christian's armour, in laying discouragements in the way of true piety; or by persuading persons they have this Breast-plate on, when it is a counterfeit one. He persuades men, that moral Righteousness will serve their turn, and sufficiently preserve them from eternal death. But this shall suffice in this place.

THE SHIELD OF FAITH.

"Above all take the Shield of Faith, &c., Eph. vi. 16.

FAITH is a grace, a most precious and excellent grace of the Spirit of God, whereby the soul is enabled to believe, or go out of itself, and wholly to rely and rest upon Christ crucified, or on his active and passive obedience, upon the warrant of the promise for justification and eternal life.

METAPHOR.

I. A Shield is a piece of armour that soldiers were wont to carry with them into the field, when they were to engage their enemies.

II. A Shield is a piece of armour made for defence.

III. A Shield is not for the defence of any particular part of the body, as almost all other pieces are. The helmet is fitted for the head, the breast-plate is designed

PARALLEL.

I. Faith is a part of a Christian's spiritual armour. All Christ's soldiers ought to carry this weapon into the field with them, when they engage the enemy of their souls: "Above all, take the Shield of Faith."

II. Faith is of excellent use to defend the soul from all spiritual dangers of sin and Satan, and other enemies.

III. So the grace of faith defends the whole man, every part of a Christian. First sometimes Satan's temptations are levelled against his head, and if he can hit him there, he wounds sorely. He will be disputing against this truth, for the breast; so others have their several parts which they are fastened to: but a shield is a piece that is intended for the defence of the whole body. It was wont to be made very large, for its broadness called Supra of Super, a door, because so long and large, as in a manner to cover the whole body; to which that place alludes. "Thou, Lord, wilt bless the righteous; with favour thou wilt compass him about as with a shield," Psal. v. 12.

METAPHOR.

blind reason: what I cannot comprehend, I will believe. Thus Abraham, "Not being weak in Faith, considered not his own body now dead," &c., Rom. iv. 19. Sense and reason would have made sad work at such a dead lift, but Faith brought him off victoriously.

Secondly, Sometimes Satan strives to hit the conscience, all his assaults and fiery darts are at another season aimed at that, to wound that, to cause horror and terror within, by setting the evil of sin, and of his own heart, and the infirmities of his life, before him. Satan sets our sins before us, not to humble us, but to wound us; he shows our sins to us, but hides a Saviour from us. Satan hath sometimes tempted gracious persons to lay violent hands upon themselves, when the heinous nature of their sin hath appeared to them, and the danger they are in thereby; as it was with the poor jailor, Acts xvi. But now Faith prevents and keeps off all the danger, and quencheth this fiery dart. Christ died for sinners, for the chiefest of sinners; and though thou be a sinner, a great sinner, the worst of sinners, yet saith faith, thou art but a sinner, and there is mercy for such. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved:" if thou canst believe, and throw thyself on Christ, thy sins shall not be thy ruin.

Thirdly, He labours to ensnare the affections of the soul, or deaden its fervent love to Jesus Christ, by presenting the pleasures and profits of this world to it. Thus he served our Saviour himself. But now Faith shields off this dart also, by showing the excellency of the Lord Jesus to the soul; and that all things without him, and in comparison of him, are nothing, nay, less than nothing: and also by setting the world to come, and the glory thereof, before the eyes of the soul. "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, and the evidence of things not seen," Heb. xi. 1.

IV. A Shield, though heavy, and somewhat unwieldy, to such as have not skill and strength to use it; yet it is a moveable piece of armour, which an expert soldier, with a watchful eye, can turn this way, and that way, to stop a dart or brow from lighting on any part that they were directed to by the enemy.

V. A Shield doth not only defend the whole body, but it is a defence to other parts of a soldier's armour also; it keeps off the dart from the helmet and breast-plate likewise.

holiness in the soul, will avail any thing

VI. A Shield hath been of wonderful advantage to soldiers in former times, when it was in use; it hath preserved them in the time and that truth, and make a Christian doubt concerning them if possible, because his own reason cannot comprehend them: as perhaps it may be about the Deity of Christ, or the holy Trinity, how they can be three, and yet but one; or about satisfaction, how the debt is paid, and yet the sinner freely pardoned, &c. Now Faith is as a Shield to a saint at this time, and interposeth between a Christian, and this arrow of Satan; it comes in to the relief of the saints' weak understanding, as seasonable as Abishai the son of Zeruiah did to David, when the giant Ishbi-benoh thought to have slain him. I will trust the Word of God, saith the soul, rather than my own pur-blind reason: what I cannot comprehend, I will believe. Thus Abraham, "Not being weak in Faith, considered not his own body now dead," &c., Rom. iv. 19. Sense and reason would have made sad work at such a dead lift, but Faith brought him off victoriously.

PARALLEL.

Secondly, Sometimes Satan strives to hit the conscience, all his assaults and fiery darts are at another season aimed at that, to wound that, to cause horror and terror within, by setting the evil of sin, and of his own heart, and the infirmities of his life, before him. Satan sets our sins before us, not to humble us, but to wound us; he shows our sins to us, but hides a Saviour from us. Satan hath sometimes tempted gracious persons to lay violent hands upon themselves, when the heinous nature of their sin hath appeared to them, and the danger they are in thereby; as it was with the poor jailor, Acts xvi. But now Faith prevents and keeps off all the danger, and quencheth this fiery dart. Christ died for sinners, for the chiefest of sinners; and though thou be a sinner, a great sinner, the worst of sinners, yet saith faith, thou art but a sinner, and there is mercy for such. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved:" if thou canst believe, and throw thyself on Christ, thy sins shall not be thy ruin.

Thirdly, He labours to ensnare the affections of the soul, or deaden its fervent love to Jesus Christ, by presenting the pleasures and profits of this world to it. Thus he served our Saviour himself. But now Faith shields off this dart also, by showing the excellency of the Lord Jesus to the soul; and that all things without him, and in comparison of him, are nothing, nay, less than nothing: and also by setting the world to come, and the glory thereof, before the eyes of the soul. "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, and the evidence of things not seen," Heb. xi. 1.

IV. Faith is a piece of Christian armour, which unskilful professors are not ready to use, but an experienced soul can turn it any way to keep off the arrow and fiery darts of Satan from hurting or wounding him. He observes what part the enemy aims to hit, or how the temptation is laid. It is a great point of Christian wisdom rightly to exercise the Shield of Faith; a man must be sure to have a watchful eye upon his adversary, or else, for all his Shield, he may soon be wounded.

V. Faith doth not only defend the whole soul, but also it is a safeguard to all the other parts of a Christian's armour; it is that which secures hope, the helmet of salvation, for without Faith, hope would soon be broken to pieces. Also it secures the breast-plate of righteousness; for neither Christ's righteousness, nor any inherent

VI. Faith hath been of wonderful use to the saints of God in all ages; it is that which hath preserved them when hard beset, in the greatest danger imaginable: "I had fainted unless I had of battle from death, and many mortal wounds. Hence God is pleased to call himself a Shield, signifying thereby his sure and safe protection to his people in time of trouble and temptation. "Fear not, Abraham, I am thy Shield."

METAPHOR.

Chrou. xii. 10, 2 Sam. viii. 7, Ezek. xxvii. 11.

PARALLEL.

believed," Psal. xxvii. 13. If he at that time had not had Faith to Shield him, he had been lost. All the mighty men of God, saith Ainsworth,* by the Shield of Faith in God and Christ, have done many mighty works, as the apostle bringeth a cloud of witnesses in to prove, Heb. xi. And hence Shields, saith he, were hanged up in David's tower, for monuments and signs of victory, 2

METAPHOR.

I. A SHIELD that soldiers use in battle is an instrument made by man.

II. A Shield is not used by soldiers in all countries.

III. A Shield may be broken and utterly lost.

IV. A Shield can only save and defend from temporal enemies.

DISPARITY.

I. FAITH is a precious grace or fruit of the Spirit of God: "The fruit of the Spirit is Faith," &c., Gal. v. 22.

II. Faith is of use by all spiritual soldiers in every nation; and it is as much in use now by them who truly believe, as ever it was.

III. A Saint's Faith may receive some detriment, but it cannot be utterly broken or lost. "I have prayed for thee, that thy Faith fail not," Luke xxii. 32.

IV. Faith shields and defends the soul from all the fiery darts and assaults of Satan.

INFERENCES.

I. FROM hence we may infer, that Faith is an excellent grace; and not only so, but we may perceive the necessity of it in all our spiritual conflicts.

II. Labour to find out the right use of it in time of temptation and under all the assaults of Satan.

III. It shows how safe and happy all they are, who truly believe, or have obtained the Faith of God's elect; and how miserable such be that are without it.

IV. Labour therefore above all to take the Shield of Faith; for though all other graces are necessary, as the Girdle of Truth, the Breast-plate of Righteousness, &c. Yet these and all other graces have their efficacy, as they work, and are in conjunction with Faith. We receive benefit from them, as they receive power, and are influenced from hence; so that Faith hath the precedency.

FAITH MORE PRECIOUS THAN GOLD.

"That the trial of your Faith being more precious than Gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire," &c., 1 Pet. i. 7.

THERE are divers acceptations of the word $\pi\acute{\iota}\sigma\tau\iota\varsigma$, Faith.

1. Faith or fidelity, or faithfulness in keeping promise, whether respecting God or man: "Shall the faith of God be made of none effect?"

2. It is taken for the doctrine of the Gospel: "Many were obedient to the Faith," Acts vi. 7.

3. It is taken for the dictates of conscience, allowing of things indifferent in themselves: "Hast thou Faith? have it to thyself," Rom. xiv. 22.

4. Credence, or the belief of the history of the scriptures. "King Agrippa, believest thou the prophets? I know thou believest," Acts xxvi. 27. This is called by some, historical or dogmatical Faith; by others, the Faith of credence.

5. A certain and steadfast belief of some strange and wonderful effects. "These signs shall follow them that believe: 'in my name they shall cast out devils,'" &c., Mark xvi. 17. "And though I have all Faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing," 1 Cor. xiii. 2. This is called the Faith of miracles.

* Ainsworth on Cant. iv. 4, p. 32.

6. A naked knowledge of God, joined with an outward and bare profession of the Gospel. "Even so Faith, if it hath not works, is dead," James ii. 17.

7. It is taken for a strong belief or confidence in prayer. "The prayer of Faith shall save the sick," James v. 15.

8. It is taken for a holy, firm, and well-grounded belief, and steadfast reliance upon the merits and righteousness of Jesus Christ, for justification and eternal life; or a going out of ourselves, fetching all our hope and comfort from him, and his glorious undertakings. This is that most noble and precious grace, that is wrought in the soul by the Spirit, which is compared to Gold, &c.

Faith is as precious as Gold, nay, more precious; tried Faith is better than tried Gold, than Gold tried or refined in the fire.

METAPHOR.

I. GOLD is precious in some countries upon the consideration of the scarcity of it; there is but little of it to be had, and that hard to come by. Things are esteemed precious upon this account: "In those days the word of the Lord was precious, there was no open vision."

II. Gold is very desirable. Men that know the worth of it, search diligently for it; they work in mines, labour hard, undergo much difficulty to obtain it.

III. Gold must be tried. Many take that for pure Gold, that is counterfeit metal, and thereby cheat themselves, or are deceived by others.

IV. Gold is tried by a touch-stone; men can soon discern if it be naught, when they prove it that way.

scriptures, and he will soon discover what Faith he hath.

V. The best Gold is very precious, a most rare and choice thing, in respect of its own intrinsic virtue; and from hence it is so much prized and coveted by the children of men. It is called precious, from the excellent nature and worth of it. It is a most sovereign cordial.

elect," Tit. i. 1. (4.) It is called "Unfeigned Faith," 1 Tim. i. 5, 2 Tim. i. 5. (5.) It is called "Faith that works by love," Gal. v. 6. (6.) It is called "Faith of the operation of God," Col. ii. 12. (7.) It is called "Precious Faith," 2 Pet. i. 1. (8.) It is called "Holy Faith." (9.) It is called the "Faith of the Son of God." Its excellent names set forth its transcendent nature.

2. Faith is precious in respect of the means of its procurement, or the price that was laid down for the obtaining of it, viz., the precious blood of Christ; for had not Christ died, we should never have had one drachm of it; it is given to us as the fruit and effect of his glorious undertaking.

3. Faith is precious in respect of the Fountain from whence it proceeds.

4. Faith is precious in respect of the means by which it is wrought in the soul, viz., by the word and Spirit of God in a wonderful manner, even like as God "wrought in Christ, when he raised him from the dead," Eph. i. 19, 20.

PARALLEL.

I. TRUE Faith is precious upon the account of the scarcity of it. Though there is great talk of it everywhere, it is in all people's mouths yet the right kind is very precious; few have so much as one drachm of it in their hearts; it is very hard to obtain.

II. All understanding men, who are convinced of the nature and usefulness of Faith, seek for it as for hid treasures; they endeavour to improve all opportunities for the obtaining of it.

III. So Faith must be tried; for there is nothing men are more mistaken or deceived in. There is abundance of counterfeit Faith in the world.

IV. Faith must also be tried by the true touch-stone, viz., the Word of God. If a man fear his faith be not of the right kind, let him bring it thither; i.e. examine the nature and quality of it, by the marks laid down in the holy

V. True faith is a most precious grace in respect of its own intrinsic virtue, and from hence true Christians esteem so of it. The price thereof is above rubies, it is far more precious than Gold that perisheth; which will appear by the induction of the following particulars.

1. In respect of the names or appellations given to it in holy scripture. (1.) It is called lively Faith. (2.) It is called effectual Faith, 1 Thess. i. 3. (3.) It is called "The Faith of God's

5. Faith is precious in respect of the object it takes hold of, or fasteneth upon, viz., God the Father, the Holy Spirit, but more immediately Christ crucified. "Ye believe in God believe also in me."

6. Faith is precious in that it joins or unites the soul to Christ, it makes us one with him, as it were, flesh of his flesh, bone of his bone, a lively member of that body whereof he is the Head. It is that which ties the conjugal knot between him and every believer.

7. It is the eye of the soul; no man without it can behold Jesus Christ, nor the fulfilling of the future promises. "Abraham by faith saw the day of Christ."

8. Hereby a Christian is made a child of God. "To as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believed on his name," John i. 12. "Ye are all the children of God, by Faith in Christ Jesus," Gal. iii. 26.

9. It is the only way or means God is pleased to take, to deliver the souls of men from sin, wrath, and eternal death.

10. It is that which interests the soul in all the sweet and precious promises of the covenant of grace. See Light.

11. It is the instrument of salvation. "Believe in the Lord Jesus, and thou shalt be saved."

12. Faith is a most excellent and precious thing, upon the account of the fruits of it, viz., life, light, peace, purging, boldness at the throne of grace, joy in the Holy Ghost, hope, and good assurance of eternal life.

13. Faith is precious in respect of that glorious power and virtue that is in it. It is medicinal, and the most sovereign antidote and cordial in the world. (1.) It will expel poison. (2.) It will perfectly, as it applies the blood of Christ, cure a wounded conscience. (3.) It will bear up and revive a fainting spirit; "I had fainted unless I had believed." Psal. xxvii. 13. (4.) It is good against the feebleness of the knees, and weakness of the hands. (5.) It is a most excellent thing against fear, and tremblings of the heart, "But when he saw the wind boisterous, he was afraid; and beginning to sink, he cried, saying, Lord, save me. And immediately Jesus stretched forth his hand, and caught him, and said unto him, O thou of little Faith!" Luke viii. 23, Matt. xiv. 30. (6.) It is a precious remedy against the stone of a hard heart; it will dissolve it, break it in pieces, and cure the soul perfectly of it, Ezek. xxxvi. 26. (7.) It cures all manner of inward deadness, it may well be called "Lively Faith, or Faith of the operation of God," Col. ii. 12. (8.) It is good against the dimness of the eyes, it helps them that cannot see afar off. (9.) It is a most sovereign thing against evil spirits; it will resist the devil, and make him fly. (10.) It is excellent good to purge and work out all those noxious and evil humours of the inward man, cleansing and purifying the heart. (11.) It is good against the falling sickness. Believers stand by Faith, but if through a temptation they should fall, Faith will help them up again. David and Peter had not so much Faith as to keep them from falling, yet they had enough to raise them up again when they were fallen. It is an universal remedy, it cures all the diseases of the soul; so that we may say with the woman, (let the distemper be what it will) "If I can but touch the hem of his garment, I shall be healed."

14. Faith is precious, because it shields and gloriously preserves the whole soul from all dangers; it is that which works with, and tends to the perfecting of all other graces in us.

15. It was by Faith that saints, in every age of the Church, were enabled to undergo and suffer all those hard and bitter tortures and torments they met with for Christ's sake, Heb. xi.

16. It is that which helps the godly to overcome the world. "He that is born of God overcometh the world; and this is the victory which overcometh the world, even our Faith," 1 John v. 4.

METAPHOR.

VI. Gold is often tried and refined in the fire; we read of Gold seven times refined: "The refining-pot is for silver, and the furnace for Gold," Prov. xvii. 3.

PARALLEL.

VI. Faith is often tried in the fire or furnace of affliction: "Think it not strange concerning the fiery trial, which is to try you," &c., 1 Pet. iv. 12. "He shall sit as a refiner's fire, and as a purifier of silver, &c., and purge them as gold and silver," &c., Mal. iii. 2, 3. God this way tried Abraham's Faith, together with the Faith of many others, of whom we read, "I will bring the third part through the fire, and I will try them as Gold is tried," Zechar. xiii. 9.

METAPHOR.

VII. Tried Gold is much better than that which is not tried, nor refined in fire.

trial of your Faith is much more precious than Gold, though it be tried in the fire," &c., 1 Pet. i. 7.

VIII. Gold tried in the fire is of an enriching nature; if a man has much of it, it enriches him greatly. We esteem him a very rich man, that hath great store of tried Gold in his own possession.

METAPHOR.

I. Gold is naturally an earthy sort of metal, it is from beneath, and therefore corruptible: "Not with corruptible things, as silver and Gold which perish!"

II. Tried gold may make a man renowned and great on earth, and adorn the body or habitation where he dwells; but it avails not the soul any thing; it will not enrich or make honourable, or beautify that, &c.

III. Tried Gold may be utterly lost; a man may have much of it to-day, and none to-morrow; thieves may rob him of it, &c.

PARALLEL.

VII. Faith that is tried is of wonderful value, much more to be prized than that which was never brought under exercise. How excellently did Abraham and Job's Faith shine, when tried. "The Abraham and Job's Faith shine, when tried." "The Abraham and Job's Faith shine, when tried," &c.,

VIII. So Faith that is tried in the furnace, is of a soul enriching nature; he that hath much of this Faith is a very rich man, a rich saint. "God hath chosen the poor of this world, rich in Faith, and heirs of the kingdom," James ii. 5.

See more of the nature of Gold, in the metaphor Gold, where the word of God is compared to it.

DISPARITY.

I. Faith is a divine and precious grace, or a supernatural thing; it is from above, wrought in the soul by the operation of the Spirit of God, and therefore incorruptible; an heavenly principle, or seed, that shall never fail, "Till we receive the end of our Faith, the salvation of our souls," 1 Pet. i. 9.

II. Faith, true Faith, Faith tried in the fire, makes believing men and women renowned in grace and godliness, and adorns the soul, church, and people where it is. None shine forth in that beauty and splendour, as those do, who have much Faith.

III. True Faith cannot be utterly lost. A man may lose somewhat of the strength of it; he may decay in this grace, as well as in others; but he can never lose the habit, the seed, or truth of Faith itself. "I have prayed for thee, that thy Faith fail not," Luke xxii. 31, 32.

INFERENCES.

FIRST, Information. How greatly are some mistaken about this precious and most noble grace; for we may infer from hence,

1. That true Faith is not a simple or bare believing there is a God; the devils have this kind of Faith; they also believe and tremble.

2. That it is not a mere or bare believing the truth of the holy scriptures. The Jews believed the scriptures, and thought by them to have eternal life, and yet were enemies to Jesus Christ.

3. That it is not a bare believing Christ died for sinners: most ungodly people in England believe that.

4. That cannot be a true Faith, which swearers, drunkards, whoremongers, and all other ungodly and profane persons have.

5. That a man may leave all gross sins, and assent to many truths of the Gospel, and yet have no true Faith.

6. Nay, that a man may be baptized, take upon him the profession of the Gospel, and suffer many things, and yet not have one drachm of saving Faith; as appears by the foolish virgins, Judas, and Simon the sorcerer, and many others.

7. Nay, a man may seem to hear the word with joy, and yet have no true Faith. A temporary Faith, is not the Faith of God's elect, or that Faith that is more precious than Gold, &c.

Quest. How may a man know true Faith from that which is common, and mere counterfeit?

Answ. 1. There is in that person, who savingly believes in Christ, a true knowledge of God, and of Jesus Christ, the true Saviour: it takes hold on the right object. "Dost thou believe on the Son of God? Who is he, Lord?" &c., John ix. 24, and 35, 36. "How shall they believe on him whom they have not heard?" Rom. x. 14.

2. There must be a true knowledge of, and a free and full assent and consent to the truth of that which is contained in the holy scriptures, concerning God, Christ, and salvation, and all other essential principles of true religion. It is not enough to believe as the Church believes, as some ignorantly teach and affirm.

3. He that hath obtained true Faith, hath had his understanding enlightened, to see what his state and condition was by nature; he hath been under humiliation for sin, Acts ii. 37, 2 Cor. vii. 9—12.

4. He seeth also, that all his own righteousness will avail him nothing in point of justification and acceptance with God. Without Christ, his prayers, tears, reading, hearing, and alms-deeds, will not save him. To trust to any of these, he sees is the way to make faith void. The Jews built upon this foundation, and thereby missed of salvation, Rom. iii. 8, and x. 23.

5. There is in that soul where true Faith is wrought, or where the seed of it is sowed, a desire after Christ, not simply after his merits, but also after union, and intimate acquaintance with him. "Yea, doubtless, I account all things but loss, for the excellency of the knowledge of Jesus Christ, my Lord; for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do account them but dung, that I may win Christ," &c., Phil. iii. 8. A true enlightened soul looks first to Christ's person, as being affected with his beauty, and sweetness of his love; and then to the goods and riches he possesseth: as a woman newly married, looks first to her husband, and then to the inheritance, or else is little better than an harlot.

6. But did I say, a desire after Christ? Be not mistaken, to think that every desire after him is a sign of true Faith. (1.) It is a fervent desire; such desire him more than all the world. That soul pants after him, and union with him, more than after heavenly glory. It greatly endears Christ to the soul. "He is the chiefest of ten thousand," Cant. v. 10, Psal. lxxiii. 25. (2.) It is such a desire, as in a hungry man, nothing will satisfy him but bread; so nothing will satisfy a true believer, but Christ, the Bread of life.

7. If a man hath true Faith, he knoweth the time when he was without it; he knoweth he was once blind, and without God and Christ. I will not say, he knows the very instant when God wrought it in his soul; but he can say with the man whose eyes Christ opened, "Whereas I was blind, I now see," John ix. 25.

8. And not only so, but he knows the way and means by which he obtained it, viz., either by hearing, or reading, or meditating on the Word of God; either in the free tender of Christ to sinners in general, or to dejected, burthened, and heavy-laden sinners, in particular.

9. Faith is usually obtained of God in a constant and laborious seeking and crying to him for it. What pains hath it cost you, sirs? Precious Faith is not easily attained to. What conflicts have you found within? Satan ever makes strong resistance, there is nothing he strives to obstruct or hinder more.

10. What love to God hath thy Faith wrought in thee? True Faith works by love. "Mary believed, and loved much."

11. Hath thy Faith purified thy heart? Hast thou seen its horrid filth and pollution? And dost thou long after purity? not only to have thy sins pardoned, but also purged away, and the power and dominion thereof destroyed?

12. What alteration in the course of thy life hath Faith wrought? Faith made Jordan go back. There is a turning the whole man to God, a glorious change in every faculty, in heart, and also in life. "Half my goods," saith Zaccheus, "I give to the poor," Luke xix. 8. And in the Acts it is said, "Those that used unlawful arts, burned their books," Acts xix. 19. "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature," 2 Cor. v. 17.

13. Faith leads the soul to receive Christ in all his offices, not only as a Saviour, but also as a Sovereign: not only as a Priest, to die, and appease the wrath of God for us, but also as a prince, to rule and reign in us.

14. What obedience therefore flows from thy Faith? Dost thou boldly and visibly profess Jesus Christ, following him whithersoever he goeth; not closing in with one of his precepts only, but obeying all of them from thy heart, which thou art convinced of, and knowest to be thy duty. "Then shall I not be ashamed, when I have respect to all thy commandments," Psal. cxix. 6.

15. What peace hath Faith brought to thy soul? "Being justified, by Faith we have peace with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ," Rom. v. 1.

Secondly, From what hath been noted we may infer, there is an absolute necessity of Faith,

1. In respect of Gospel-revelation. "Without Faith it is impossible to please God," Heb. xi. 6.

2. There is no salvation without it, Rom. iii. 26. Thou must be beholden to another for a righteousness, because thou hast broken the law, that pronounceth the curse against thee; thou hast none of thy own that will be accepted in the sight of God. "He that believeth not shall be damned." "Unless that ye believe that I am he, ye shall die in your sins," John viii. 24.

3. There is a necessity of Faith, because all boasting is excluded. God's design in our salvation is, wholly to exalt his own free grace. It is of Christ's procurement, and thou must go unto him for it, or go without it.

Thirdly; If faith be much more precious than Gold, then labour for it above Gold; be not contented with a little of it, but wisely provide yourselves with good store. Grow in Faith, get a strong Faith.

Quest. Will not a small or weak Faith save us, as well as a strong?

Ans. Yea, if it be of the right kind, though never so small, the person that hath it, is as fully justified, as if he had the greatest degree and measure of it. Yet it concerns thee to get a strong Faith, for these reasons following:

1. Because thou mayest meet with strong assaults and temptations from Satan, and thou hast no way to resist him but by the shield of Faith, and it may be a little Faith will not be sufficient to withstand those exercises and assaults thou mayest meet with.

2. Because God expects much Faith of those he hath afforded much means unto: "I looked that it should bring forth grapes," Isa. v. 4; God looks for fruit, answerable to the cost and charge he hath been at with a people, or a particular person.

3. Because God may bring you into such a condition, that you may have nothing else to live upon, "The fig-tree shall not blossom, neither fruit be in the vines," &c., Hab. iii. 17. That is a time for the saints to live by faith; and if their faith be small, what will they do then?

4. Because as thy Faith is more or less, so will thy inward peace and joy be in Christ Jesus. He that hath but a small degree of faith, is often at the foot of the hill, and under doubtings and becloudings in his own spirit.

5. Because such as have but little faith, will find the way to heaven harder, and more difficult, than they who have much of it, or are strong in Faith. Weak folks are hard put to it to get up a high hill.

6. Because it is a strong Faith that glorifies God most, as it appears in respect of Abraham. "He being not weak in Faith, considered not his own body being dead—He staggered not through unbelief, but was strong in Faith, giving glory to God," Rom. iv. 19, 20.

Quest. But what is the cause that some Christians are so weak in Faith?

Ans. 1. Some are but just brought forth, lately converted, they are like new-born babes: can you expect a child in a cradle, should be as strong as such as are twenty or thirty years old?

2. Perhaps some have but little Faith, because they want the means of it, which others have; it may be they have more law preached to them than Gospel, more terror from Sinai, than joy from Mount Zion.

3. Again, some may be weak in Faith, because they pore more upon their own inward corruptions, than they meditate on Christ's righteousness, more on their own emptiness, than on Christ's fullness. They see their debts, but have not their eyes upon their Surety, who hath discharged and blotted all out.

4. Others may have little Faith, because they do not improve that which they have, they are not industrious traders, they do not labour after, and cry to God for more Faith. The way to grow rich, is to be diligent. "Lord, increase our Faith."

5. Some have no more Faith, because they give way to temptations, and let their inward corruptions too much prevail. Weeds will hinder the growth of precious flowers: self-love, worldly pleasure, pride, and passion, choke and obstruct its growth. Faith is a tender herb.

6. Perhaps Christians have no more, because they mind not those precious grounds and encouragements, which God in his mercy hath offered for the increase, strengthening, and growing of Faith.

Quest. How may I know a weak Faith from a strong?

Ans. 1. A weak Christian, one weak in Faith, looks more within than without, grounds more on the good desires and heavenliness of his affections, than the covenant and promise of God: now a strong Christian looks to Christ. "Because I live, ye shall live also," John xiv. 19. It is not because my affections live, my obedience lives, or I have life, in obedience, or performance of external duties, but because Christ lives, "by whom I live," Gal. ii. 20.

2. A weak Christian consults more the power of the enemy, than he doth the strength of God, Christ, and the Holy Spirit; and is much acted by sense, in respect of means, how this or that should be done: "Can God furnish a table in the wilderness?" Psal. lxxviii. 19. But a strong saint believes in hope against hope; a strong Faith takes up in the power, grace, and sufficiency of God: "The Lord is on my side, I will not fear what man can do unto me," Psal. cxviii. 6.

3. A weak Faith grows weaker and weaker, and ready to let go its hold at every discouragement. If a corruption or temptation prevail, all his hope of heaven is almost gone presently. Thus it was with Peter, "Help, Lord, I perish." But strong Faith is rather strengthened thereby; as appears by the woman of Canaan. You may judge of a strong Faith by its power over the enemy. "I have written unto you, young men, because you are strong, and the Word of God abideth in you, and you have overcome the wicked one," 1 John ii. 14.

4. A weak Faith is much for doing, that so he may have peace and comfort within: "What must I do," &c., Acts xvi. 30. And as his obedience to God is kept up, so is his comfort; not but that great peace is to them that keep the law, and that are found in the way of obedience. But a strong Faith, in all it doth, is kept up by Christ's doing, by Christ's obedience; he sees his acceptance comes in through the Lord Jesus' undertaking for him.

5. A weak Faith is subject to rest too much upon the means, and outward ordinances. He performs duty, and is found in the appointments of Christ, because of the fat and sweet of them, or some present comforts of the Spirit in the performance of them, rather than because commanded of God, and to manifest his obedience and subjection unto him; and if he meet not with his expectation, he is ready presently to faint, and be discouraged, and concludes the ordinances do not belong to him, or he is not a converted person, &c., or else thinks wholly to neglect them for time to come.

6. A weak believer is ready to judge of his justification, by his inward sanctification. When he finds eminent power over sin, then he begins to conclude he may be in a saved state; though I do not say, that a man is actually justified, before he may be in some measure or degree made holy; where the one is, the other will follow, as the effect the cause.

Quest. How may a weak Faith or hand be strengthened, and feeble knees confirmed?

Ans. 1. Consider a weak Faith is precious, a little gold is gold, a little water is water: thou art a believer, though thou art but a weak believer.

2. A weak Faith, being true, may in time prove strong, and grow to be a great Faith.

3. Though thou hast but a weak Faith, it will save; doubtless some weak eyes beheld the brazen serpent, and were healed.

4. Weak Faith, if it be true, shall never fail totally, nor be taken away: He that is the author of it, will likewise be the finisher. "Being confident of this very thing, that he that hath begun a good work in you, will perform it to the day of Jesus Christ," Phil. i. 6.

HOPE COMPARED TO AN HELMET.

"And take the Helmet of Salvation," &c. Eph. vi. 17.

"And for an Helmet, the Hope of Salvation," 1 Thess. v. 8.

AN Helmet is a piece of armour for the head, commonly called a head-piece.

Hope, the Word is derived from חָוָה Havah, which signifieth to expect or wait; and it notes a very vehement intention both of body and mind, in waiting, expecting, or hoping; when a man waits, as it were, stretching forth his spirit or his mind, putting himself out exceedingly to hope or wait for a thing.

Hope is a divine and supernatural grace or fruit of the Holy Spirit, and may be thus described:

First, It is a patient and well-grounded expectation of whatsoever God hath promised. God is the Author of it, called the Hope of Israel, and the God of Hope. The believer is the subject of this Hope. The Object, in a strict sense, is God, who comprehends all the good that saints dwell in the Faith and expectation of: "what wait I for? my Hope is in thee," in a large sense, it is the good of promise not in hand, or already accomplished, but to be performed hereafter: "Hope that is seen, is not Hope; for what a man seeth, why doth he yet Hope for it?" Rom. viii. 24. Futurity is intrinsic to Hope's object, and distinguisheth it from Faith, which gives a present being to the promise, and is ἐλπιζομενων υποστασις, "the substance of things hoped for," Heb. xi. 1. The good of the promise hath a kind of substance by Faith in the soul; it is in heaven, as it were, in an interview; it brings the Christian and heaven together, as if he were there already.

Why Hope is compared to an Helmet, will appear in the following parallel.

METAPHOR.

I. The Helmet defends the head, that eminent part of the body, from the dint of bullet or sword.

that faith which men have, without a well-grounded-Hope of future life? Devils have a kind of faith, they believe, but have no Hope. Faith eyes the promises; and Hope preserves the soul from Satan's wounds, keeping it in a faithful and steadfast expectation of the fulfilling of them: by which means a saint is helped cheerfully to suffer the loss of all other things; and that in judgment, hoping it will be made up again to him in another world: like as Hope causeth the husbandman to cast his choice and precious seed into the earth: "He that plougheth, plougheth in hope," 1 Cor. ix. 10; he hopes for a greater increase at harvest. So a merchant ventures much treasures at sea, as far as the Indies, in Hope; for had he not good Hopes of advantageous returns, all would account him a fool so to do.

II. The Helmet maketh a soldier fearless, and very courageous in the day of battle, for if his head and heart be well defended, he is in no great danger of his life.

if the judgment, will, affection, and conscience of a believer be preserved from the mortal wounds of the adversary, he is safe, and out of danger, which is all done by this part of the Christian's armour. How confidently and daringly did Goliath come forth against Israel, with his Helmet of brass, and other furniture, as if he had been so enclosed in his armour, that it was impossible for any one to prevail against him. This made him carry his crest so high, and to defy a whole host. Though he was mistaken in his armour, yet here is an Helmet, &c., that whosoever wears it shall never be put to shame for his holy boasting. God himself allows him so to do, and will bear him out in the rejoicing of his Hope. "They shall not be ashamed that wait for me." Therefore, saith David, "Though an host shall encamp against me, my heart shall

PARALLEL.

I. Hope of heaven defends the principal parts and faculties of the soul, from the dangerous assaults of sin and Satan, particularly the judgment, which most expositors understand is intended by the head. What avails

II. In like manner, Hope of heaven makes a saint very courageous for Christ, and his blessed interest. "Hope maketh not ashamed," Rom. v. 5. It is the Hope of heaven, that causeth saints to endure afflictions and persecutions with patience, and not to fear the faces of their enemies: for not fear," &c, "My head shall be lifted above mine enemies," Isa. xlix. 23, Psal. xxvii. 3. Two things make the head hang down, fear and shame; now hope easeth the Christian's heart of both these, and so forbids him to give any sign of a desponding mind, by a dejected countenance, in the worst of times: "When these things come to pass, then lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh," Luke xxi. 28.

METAPHOR.

III. An Helmet tends to the complete harnessing and setting out of a soldier, to meet his enemy, by which means he is terrible to behold, as experience shows; for how fierce doth an army of soldiers look, when armed cap-a-pie? And especially the head-piece tends to do it. Many have been struck with great trembling, by beholding an army of soldiers with Helmets on.

dread of them upon all the nations under the whole heavens; who heard the fame of them, and trembled not? Dent. ii. 2. "The people heard, and were afraid; sorrow took hold on the inhabitants of Palestina. The dukes of Edom were amazed; the mighty men of Moab, trembling took hold upon them. All the inhabitants of Canaan melted away, and dread fell upon them," Exod. xv. 14, 15, 16, Psal. xlviii. 5, 6. And thus will it be again, when God brings forth the sons of Zion against the sons of Greece, every way completely armed, with shield and Helmet, as an "Army with banners," Zech. ix. 13.

IV. An Helmet, as well as other pieces of armour, must not be put off, or laid aside, until the battle be over. There are some instruments and engines used in war, that are made use of but now and then; but the shield, breast-plate, and Helmet, &c., are necessary continually, when arms are employed.

V. A soldier, that hath his complete armour on, (as the having on the helmet doth import, because it is usually the last piece of armour defensive that is put on) is ready for service, when the captain commands him forth; and from hence he is animated, and becomes very diligent, and doth great execution oftentimes upon the enemy; yea, and more is expected from him, than from one that is unarmed.

METAPHOR.

I. An Helmet which men use in war, hath been, may be pierced through, to the loss of the life of the soldier that hath it on.

II. An Helmet used in war amongst men, though it may pre-

PARALLEL.

III. A well-grounded hope of salvation, and of victory against the enemy, tends to the complete harnessing, or fitting out of every true Christian, to meet and encounter with the adversary, by which means also they are said to be as terrible as an army with banners, which Mr. Ainsworth applies to this armour. "The weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God, to the pulling down of strong-holds," &c. 2 Cor. x. 4. Israel being completely furnished with armour of proof, who were a people saved by the Lord, the shield of their Hope, and who was the sword of their excellency, God hereby put the fear and dread of them upon all the nations under the whole heavens; who heard the fame of them, and trembled not? Dent. ii. 2. "The people heard, and were afraid; sorrow took hold on the inhabitants of Palestina. The dukes of Edom were amazed; the mighty men of Moab, trembling took hold upon them. All the inhabitants of Canaan melted away, and dread fell upon them," Exod. xv. 14, 15, 16, Psal. xlviii. 5, 6. And thus will it be again, when God brings forth the sons of Zion against the sons of Greece, every way completely armed, with shield and Helmet, as an "Army with banners," Zech. ix. 13.

IV. So Hope, the Helmet of salvation, must be taken by every true Christian, and never laid aside, until the field be won, and all the enemies subdued. Hence saith the apostle, "Gird up the loins of your minds, be sober, and Hope to the end, for the grace that shall be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ," 1 Pet. i. 13. "Now abideth faith, Hope, and charity," 1 Cor. xiii. 13. "We desire every one of you to show the same diligence, to the full assurance of Hope, unto the end," Heb. vi. 11, 12.

V. So a soldier of Jesus Christ, having the whole Christian armour on, is ready for any service or suffering for his captain, and waits but for the word of command, and he adventures forth as Abraham did, not knowing whither he went. Hope of salvation particularly maketh a man very active; it is called a lively Hope; more is expected from him, than from one that is hopeless. Alas! he goes on without any heart, that hath no grounded Hope of heaven, and the blessed enjoyment of God and Christ for ever.

DISPARITY.

I. But this spiritual Helmet, called the Hope of salvation, which hath God, and all good both here and hereafter, for its object, against this there can be no assault made, nor force of weapon used to the endangering of the life of the soul.

II. But a well-grounded Hope, the Helmet of salvation, doth wonderfully preserve the conserve the head from danger, yet it cannot preserve the breast, but that may be wounded by sword or dart.

METAPHOR.

III. Men may have Helmets on, and yet notwithstanding lose the day, be overcome, and fly before their enemies, with shame and disgrace.

DISPARITY.

science, as well as the judgment, from being corrupted by the wounds of error, and rotten principles, carried on by the cunning craftiness of men, whereby they lie in wait to deceive.

III. But he that engageth in this spiritual armour, of which the Helmet is a part, "Having on the whole armour of God," Eph. vi., doth not only make a Christian to withstand the enemy, but also to stand against any assault. "Hope of salvation maketh not ashamed," Rom. v. 5.

INFERENCES.

I. From hence you may perceive, how exceeding useful Hope is to all true Christians, in their spiritual warfare with the enemies of the soul.

II. It shows that a Christian's life is a life of Hope or expectation : the promises of God are not presently accomplished ; he seems to stay long, ere he makes good what he hath engaged to give to them.

III. And though he stay long before he performs his promises to us, yet they shall be accomplished at last, in the best time, to the eternal joy of our hearts. "Hope deferred makes the heart sick, but when it comes, it is a tree of life." "The vision is for an appointed time, but at the end it shall speak, and not lie," &c.

IV. That though God stay long before he performs his word and promises, yet it is our duty to wait patiently till it be fulfilled. "Wait for it, because it shall surely come," &c.

V. That Hope pacifies and quiets the soul of a believer, till the promises be accomplished and fulfilled.

It may also serve to caution every Christian to take heed he does not take a counterfeit Helmet. There is a Hope that will prove like a spider's web. Though a true and lively Hope maketh not ashamed, yet some men will one day be ashamed of their Hope, &c. See Hope the Anchor of the Soul.

HOPE COMPARED TO AN ANCHOR.

"Which Hope we have as the Anchor of the Soul, both sure and steadfast," &c., Heb. vi. 19.

HOPE is not only compared to an Helmet, but also to an Anchor, as the Soul is compared to a ship, which metaphor is opened under its proper head.

Quest. What is this Hope that is called the Anchor of the soul ?

Ans. 1. Negatively. It is not a Hope of being rich, great, and mighty in the world. They esteem not things below at such a rate, as to make them their Hope. "If I have made gold my Hope, or have said to the fine gold, thou art my confidence," &c., Job xxxi. 24. Gold is put here, by a synecdoche of the part for the whole, for all earthly things ; so that whereas Job saith, "If I have made gold my Hope," his meaning is, if I have made any good things on earth my Hope.

There is great difference, saith Mr. Caryl, between hoping for gold, and making gold our Hope : we may hope for worldly good things, but we must not make any thing of this life our Hope. And further he saith,

To make gold, either gotten, or to be gotten, our Hope, implies these four things :

1. An high estimation of it, as that which can do great things for us, or stand us instead, beyond any other thing, to make us happy.

2. A longing desire after it. There is always so much desire of that we hope for, that the thing hoped for is sometimes expressed by the desire. Hope deferred maketh the heart sick ; but when the desire, that is, the thing hoped for, "cometh, it is a tree of life," Prov. xiii. 12.

3. Utmost and unwearied endeavours to obtain it. That which a man makes his Hope, he will make his work, and never ceaseth working till he hath attained it, or is convinced there is no possibility of attaining it.

4. To make good our hope, implieth much trouble and anxiety of mind, when once we see our endeavours ineffectual and unsuccessful about the attaining of it. "If Hope deferred make the heart sick," as was hinted before, then when Hope dies, or as Zophar speaks, Job xi. 20, is as the giving up of the ghost," the heart must needs die too.

2. It is not hope of length of days: "If I wait, the grave is my house," &c.

But then, 2. Positively, it is a patient and well grounded expectation of the accomplishment of what God hath promised. Faith sees the promise, and beholds it though afar off: "Abraham saw my day," saith Christ: but then in comes Hope, and keeps the soul alive, in a well-grounded expectation of the fulfilling and accomplishment of it. See the description of it where faith is compared to an Helmet.

Why hope is compared to an Anchor, may appear by what followeth.

METAPHOR.

I. An Anchor is a good stay and security to a ship in a storm. What would the mariner do, had he not an Anchor to cast out of the ship, when he is in danger of rocks and sands?

II. An Anchor takes hold of some thing which is out of sight.

III. An Anchor, when it takes hold of a rock, or firm ground, fastens and stays a ship more steadily, preserving it from suffering shipwreck.

IV. An Anchor would be of no use without the cable to which it is fastened.

V. An Anchor, that it may be of advantage to a ship, requires skill rightly to cast it.

METAPHOR.

I. An Anchor is cast down into the sea, river, &c.

II. An Anchor may let go its hold, or be broken, and so become useless to a ship, by which means the ship may be lost.

they might turn away with their faces ashamed. If their Hope should fail them, they would have no refuge left. If Hope hold, all holds: but if Hope be gone, all is gone. Neither is it to be thought, that the Hope of holy Job, Heman, and others, who in trouble spake of their "Hope being gone, and perished from the Lord," was indeed utterly lost and perished, but that it was only so in their own apprehension, they being in great depths of despondency, and under sad desertion of spirit. Like as the Church was, when she said, "My God hath forsaken me, my God hath forgotten me;" which God himself graciously answers, it was not so, nor could be so. A saint's standing in Christ is firm; the covenant is ordered in all things, and sure. But to confirm this glorious truth, and make it yet more clear, and that I may leave no room for an objection, that Hope is both sure and steadfast, &c., consider the many strong bars that are cemented together, as so many bars of iron, hammered by the Spirit, to the making of this blessed Anchor of the soul both sure and steadfast.

PARALLEL.

I. So hope in God, through Christ, is a most excellent stay for the soul of a believer, in a day of trouble and persecution. "They suffered joyfully the spoiling of their goods, knowing in themselves, they had in heaven a better and enduring substance," Heb. x. 34. "We are saved by Hope," &c. It stays the soul, as an Anchor does the ship.

II. So Hope, the Anchor of the soul, takes hold of something which is not seen with carnal eyes, which is within the veil, &c.

III. So Hope, the Anchor of the soul, taking hold of Christ, who is called a Rock, stays the soul in a perilous time most firm and steadily, so that it is safe from spiritual shipwreck.

IV. So Hope without faith is of no use, nor can avail the soul any thing in time of need; those two graces always co-operate, and work together for the help and succour of a believer.

V. Hope, the Anchor of the soul, must be rightly cast, or else it will not profit a saint any thing in the day of trouble. It must be "Cast within the veil, whither the Forerunner is for us entered, even Jesus," &c., Heb. vi. 19, 20.

DISPARITY.

I. Hope, the Anchor of the soul, is cast upward; the saint's Hope is in heaven.

II. Hope, the Anchor of the soul, is both sure and steadfast; hence it is said, "Hope maketh not ashamed." If their Hope was not firm, or were there any danger of its being lost or broken, the saints of God were in a sad condition, and

First, The love of God is a sure ground of the saint's Hope. "I have loved thee with an everlasting love," &c., Jer. xxxi. 3. "If his children forsake my law, and walk not in my judgments; if they break my statutes, and keep not my commandments: then will I visit their transgressions with the rod, and their iniquity with stripes. Nevertheless, my loving-kindness will I not utterly take from him, nor suffer my faithfulness to fail: my covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing which is gone out of my lips," Psal. lxxxix. 30—34. "The Lord thy God in the midst of thee is mighty; he will save, he will rejoice over thee with joy, he will rest in his love, he will joy over thee with singing," Zeph. iii. 17. "I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord," Rom. viii. 38, 39. If the love of God be from everlasting to everlasting to them that fear him; if he rest in his love; if he will not remove his loving-kindness from them, notwithstanding their sins and infirmities; if nothing can separate them from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord; then the Hope that believers have in God is both sure and steadfast.

Secondly, God hath chosen, elected, and predestinated believers in Christ unto eternal life. "For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate, to be conformed to the image of his Son. Moreover, whom he did predestinate, them he also called; and whom he called, them he also justified; and whom he justified, them he also glorified," Rom. viii. 29, 30. The same persons that are predestinated, are called; and the very same that are called, are justified; and the very same who are justified, are, or shall be glorified: therefore the Hope that believers have, is both sure and steadfast.

Thirdly, Christ's death is a sure ground of Hope. "Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died." "I lay down my life for my sheep." Christ in an especial manner laid down his life for those which the Father gave to him, with an absolute purpose and intention eternally to save them: and he shall not lose his purchase, nor miss of the merit of his most precious blood; therefore the saint's Hope is both sure and steadfast.

Fourthly, Christ's resurrection is a sure ground of Hope. Christ rose again from the dead, to justify all those who truly believe in him. "Who shall condemn? It is Christ that died, yea, rather that is risen again."—"Who was delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification," Rom. viii. 34, iv. 25. Thus Christ, by his resurrection, doth actually justify all that believe in him; therefore the saint's Hope is both sure and steadfast.

Fifthly, The intercession of Christ is a sure ground of Hope. "Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea, rather that is risen again, who is even at the right-hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us," Heb. vii. 25, "Seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for us." "Father, I will that those also whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am," &c., John xvii. 24. "I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not," Luke xxii. 32, 1 John ii. 1, 2, "If any man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous." Christ prays the Father, that all his children may be kept from falling, that their faith fail not, that they may have their sins pardoned, and may be where he is, &c. And he is always heard and answered by the Father: "I know thou hearest me always." Therefore the saint's Hope is both sure and steadfast.

Sixthly, The covenant of grace is a sure ground of Hope. "Although my house be not so with God, yet he hath made with me an everlasting covenant, ordered in all things, and sure; for this is all my salvation, and desire, though he make it not to grow," 2 Sam. xxiii. 5. "For the mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed; but my kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall the covenant of my peace be removed, saith the Lord that hath mercy upon thee," Isa. liv. 10. The covenant stands in Christ, it was made in him, he undertook to perform the conditions of it by his Spirit, in behalf of all true believers, as their Surety. We stand not in Christ in the new covenant, as we stood in Adam, in the old. Adam was a person, that might, or might not stand, it was in his own power to stand or fall; but the covenant of grace is more firm and sure in many respects, especially in regard of the excellency, power, ability, and immutability of Jesus Christ, who as the second Adam, and public person, hath undertaken for all his seed. If our standing was in the new covenant, as Adam's was in the old, doubtless we should not continue in our steadfastness one moment; for if he was overcome by Satan, that had no evil or depraved nature in him, for Satan to fasten a temptation upon, how should we escape him, that have such a body of sin and death in us, even the seed or root of all corruption, our hearts being like tinder, ready to take with every spark of the devil's kindling. "I will make an everlasting covenant with them, that I will not turn away from them, to do them good: but I will put my fear into their hearts, that they shall not depart from me," Jer. xxxii. 40. As God will not turn away from us, so he will not suffer us to depart from him. This is not like the covenant he first made. Therefore the saint's Hope of salvation is both sure and steadfast, an Anchor that will hold, and cannot be broken.

Seventhly, The fulness of grace which is treasured up in Christ for believers, is a sure ground of Hope. "It pleased the Father, that in him should all fulness dwell," Col. i. 19. "And of his fulness have we all received, and grace for grace," John. i. 16. Hence it is that all the wants of believers are supplied: "But my God shall supply all your needs, according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus," Phil. iv. 19. Inasmuch that whenever any, though the meanest and weakest saint, is in need of support or help, in time of great and imminent danger, he may not only have supply in one respect, but a full and complete supply in all respects, answerable to the various exercises that believers meet with in their Christian course, to the end they may not miscarry, or suffer shipwreck; for that in Christ they have a fulness of wisdom to instruct and counsel them, a fulness of love and care to guide them, a fulness of power and strength to hold them up, that they may be safe, and to stay them from sinking, as he did Peter, who, when under the fear of miscarrying, cries out to Christ for help; a fulness of pity and compassion, to commiserate them in all their distresses; and a fulness of grace and mercy, to pardon and fully blot out all their sins and failings, and be with them in all their sorrows and sufferings. Therefore the saint's Hope of salvation is both sure and steadfast.

Eighthly, The mercy of God is a sure ground of Hope. If the mercy of God can fail, the saint's Anchor may fail; but the mercy of God endureth for ever. "Behold, the eye of the Lord is upon them that fear him, upon them that hope in his mercy," Psal. xxxiii. 18. "I trust in the mercy of God for ever and ever," Psal. lii. 8. "Where is the sounding of thy bowels, and thy mercies towards me? Are they restrained?" Isa. lxiii. 15. The saints of God, as appears from hence, trust in the mercy of God, and that endureth for ever and ever. His bowels to his people can never fail. "Can a woman forget her sucking child, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? Yea, she may, but I will not forget thee." Therefore the saint's Hope is both sure and steadfast.

Ninthly, The promise and oath of God are a sure ground of hope. "For men verily swear by the greater, and an oath for confirmation is to them an end of all strife. Wherein God willing more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise, the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath: that by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have strong consolation, who have fled for refuge, to lay hold upon the Hope set before us: which Hope we have as an Anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast," Heb. vi. 16, 17, 18, 19. "In Hope of eternal life, which God hath cannot lie promised, before the world began," Tit. i. 2. "As God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them, and I will be their God, and they shall be my people," 2 Cor. vi. 16. If the promise and oath of God be not enough to assure believers of their safe and firm standing in Christ, and of their assurance of heaven, nothing is. Therefore the saint's Hope is both sure and steadfast.

Tenthly, That relation which believers stand in unto God, is a sure ground of Hope. He is the Father, and they are his dear children; he is their Husband, they his spouse: will a dear father suffer his dear children to perish, and be torn in pieces, if he hath power to help? Or the dear husband his dear wife? The love of God to his saints exceeds the love and pity of either father or husband; therefore Hope, the Anchor of the soul, is both sure and steadfast.

Eleventhly, The power of God is a sure ground of Hope. "My sheep hear my voice, and follow me, and I give them eternal life, and they shall never perish, neither shall any pluck them out of my hand. My Father that gave them me is greater than all, and none is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand." John x. 27, 28, 29. "Who are kept by the power of God, through faith, unto salvation." If the power of God be sufficient to keep believers from falling, and preserve them to his heavenly kingdom, then their Hope is both sure and steadfast.

Obj. But it is through faith they stand, and their faith may fail ?

Ans. Christ, as I showed before, hath prayed, that their faith fail not ; and besides he is the Author, Increaser, and Finisher of it. " He that hath begun a good work in you, will perform it unto the day of Christ," Phil. i. 6.

Twelfthly, Regeneration is a sure ground of Hope. " That which is born of the flesh, is flesh ; that which is born of the Spirit is Spirit," John iii. 6. " Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible," &c., 1 Pet. i. 23. Such as is the seed, such is the product of it : the seed being immortal, by which the saints are regenerated ; sure this may be sure ground of Hope, that they shall not perish. There is in them an holy and divine principle, so that they cannot sin unto death, or lose eternal life.

Let us now put all these together, and then doubtless we shall conclude, that the saint's Hope of heaven is no fancy, but like an Anchor that is both sure and steadfast.

INFERENCES.

FIRST, examine yourselves, what Hope you have ; there is a false Hope, as well as a true. What is the ground of thy Hope ?

1. Some ground their Hope of heaven upon outward prosperity. This is the worldling's Hope. They conclude God loves them, and will give heaven to them, because he hath given them so much of the earth, not remembering, that God gives some men their portion in this life : " Remember, son, thou in thy lifetime receivedst thy good things," &c., Luke xvi. 25.

2. Some ground their Hopes of heaven upon civility, and external righteousness ; they live sober and honest lives, and are not guilty of any gross sins. This is the moral man's Hope, the Pharisee's, the young man's in the Gospel ; the foolish virgins had this Hope, and yet lost heaven.

3. Some ground their Hopes of heaven upon the merits of their own works. This is the Papist's Hope ; for though they place some Hope in Christ, yet they put confidence in their own works. Now this is to cast Anchor on the sands. First ; that which merits must be our own ; but none of our good works are our own. They are our own subjective, because wrought in us, and they are ours in regard of the benefit of them ; but in respect of the original they are none of ours, they are the fruits of the Spirit ; it is God hath wrought all our works in us. Secondly ; they must be complete and perfect, or not meritorious : but the best works performed by us are both impure and imperfect, more dross than gold. Thirdly ; that which merits must not be due upon any other account ; paying debts is not meritorious : now there is nothing that we do, or can do, but it is due, it is a debt we owe to God ; we owe him all we have, are, or can perform : therefore saith Christ, " When you have done all, say, you are unprofitable servants."

Secondly, It shows, that the Hope of believers is a glorious Hope, the apostle saith, a blessed Hope, that is the stay or Anchor of the soul, &c., Tit. ii. 13.

Thirdly, All those that have not this precious grace, are at present in a Hopeless condition.

Quest. How may a man know whether he hath a true and well-grounded Hope ?

Ans. 1. If thou hast a lively Hope, thou art born again ; the new birth entitles to a new Hope. What Hope can a man have of heaven, if he be not converted ? " Unless a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God," 1 Pet. i. 3, John iii. 3.

2. A true and well grounded Hope is attended with a train of other graces. " Tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience, and experience Hope, and Hope maketh not ashamed, why ? because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost," Rom. v. 3, 4, 5. Those that have the grace of Hope have the graces of faith and love, and all other fruits of the Spirit, more or less, in them.

3. Hope purifies the heart. " He that hath this Hope in him, purifieth himself, even as he is pure," 1 John iii. 3. If thou hast an unsanctified heart never boast of thy Hope ; it makes not only the heart holy, but the life also.

4. Hope of salvation is grounded upon the promises of God. The promises give interest, and upon interest ariseth Hope ; therefore he that hath not taken hold of God's promise by faith, is destitute of Hope, the Anchor of the soul. " Remember thy word unto thy servant, upon which thou hast caused me to Hope," Psal. cxix. 49.

5. Hope keeps the soul in a steady and sure expectation of the good promises, under affliction and sufferings; a saint is hereby stayed and quieted, whilst he is exposed to the loss of all other things for Christ's sake. "They took patiently the spoiling of their goods, knowing in themselves, they had in heaven a better and more enduring substance," Heb. x. 34.

6. True Hope makes a Christian very lively, and valiant for Christ, and his truth; it fills the soul full of spiritual activity; it is called "a lively Hope;" it makes him bold, and not ashamed of the cross, &c.

LOVE COMPARED TO DEATH, AND THE GRAVE, AND TO COALS AND FLAMES OF FIRE.

"Love is strong as Death, jealousy is cruel as the Grave: the Coals thereof are coals of fire, which hath a most vehement Flame," Cant. viii. 6.

"Many waters cannot quench Love, neither can the floods drown it," &c. ver. 7.

THE grace of Love which Christ hath infused into the heart of his spouse, and all gracious ones, is compared by the Holy Ghost in these scriptures to three things, which are of a powerful and prevailing nature, against whom there is no standing; first, Death; secondly, the Grave; thirdly, Coals and Flames of Fire: which show forth the vehement power and force of divine love to Jesus Christ; which cannot be quenched.

First; Love is compared to Death and the Grave.

METAPHOR.

I. Death and the Grave overcome the strongest men, it prevails over the most powerful, wise, and learned in the world; neither can the most mighty monarch encounter Death, or stand before it; there is no discharge in that war.

II. Death and the Grave seize upon every part of the corporeal or mortal body.

METAPHOR.

I. Death and the Grave put an end to natural life, and so cause all motions or actions from thence to cease.

II. Death overcomes and destroys that which we would, if possible, keep, viz., our lives, that are most dear to us.

though it be to the loss of life, yet Love takes away the fear of Death, and makes the soul willing to part with life for Christ's sake.

PARALLEL.

I. So Love, that is in the heart of a sincere Christian, prevails against all difficulties and oppositions, temptations, afflictions, and most cruel sufferings and torments, that can be exercised upon them, as appeared by the blessed martyrs. Nothing is too hard for Love, it cannot be subdued, it overcomes all sin and suffering whatsoever.

II. So Love, when shed abroad in the heart, seizeth upon all the faculties of the soul. Hence it is, that true Christians are said to love Christ with all their hearts, and with all their souls.

DISPARITY.

I. But Love hath that virtue, as it is a grace of the Spirit, that it sets all the faculties of the soul upon acts of a spiritual life. None are so lively as those that truly Love Jesus Christ.

II. Love only overcomes that which is offensive and contrary to us, or that stands in opposition to the soul's union with Christ, making that which would be injurious to flesh and blood, to become profitable and advantageous; yea, though it be to the loss of life, yet Love takes away the fear of Death, and makes the soul willing to part with life for Christ's sake.

LOVE COMPARED TO COALS AND FLAMES OF FIRE.

METAPHOR.

I. Coals and Flames of Fire are of a burning and consuming quality.

PARALLEL.

I. The grace of Love kindled in the soul of a believer, burns up and consumes that inordinate desire which is naturally in the heart, after the things and vanities of this world; it eats up and consumes all carnal and sensual lusts whatsoever; all fleshly and combustible stuff, or things that stand in the way, are burnt up and destroyed by it.

METAPHOR.

II. Coals and Flames of fire are of a purging and purifying quality.

III. Coals and Flames of Fire are of a melting and softening nature; they make things tender and pliable, meet to receive the impression of a seal, &c.

IV. Some Fire is so vehement, that water thrown upon it will not quench it, but rather cause it to burn more fierce and vehemently.

believers; when temptations of one sort fail, he trieth others: he offers worldly pleasures, honours, riches, yea, all the goods, as I may say, of his house; but all is in vain, nothing will quench this divine Flame; the true Christian utterly contemns him, with all he hath. The grand design of Satan's courting a man, with all his offers, "all this will I give thee," &c., is to gain his Love, or draw off his affections from Jesus Christ. If this way will not do, he tries another, and brings afflictions and crosses upon the soul; but over these likewise is a saint a conqueror. Which makes the apostle break forth into this holy triumph: "Who shall separate us from the Love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? "no, none of these things can:" "for I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the Love of God, that is in Christ Jesus our Lord," Rom. viii. 35—39.

V. Fire hath Light with it.

VI. Coals and Flames of Fire afford heat, they are of a warming and reviving nature.

VII. Flames of Fire ascend, or tend continually upwards.

See more of the nature and quality of Fire, where the Word of God is compared to it.

METAPHOR.

I. Fire is from beneath, it is earthly, and one of the four elements.

II. A violent Fire may be quenched, and all natural and elementary Fire shall be put out. Mount Ætna shall not burn always.

PARALLEL.

II. So the grace of Love purgeth, cleanseth and purifieth the soul; the dross and filth of the heart and life being wasted away, a Christian is made holy, sanctified, and heavenly thereby.

III. So the grace of Love softens the heart, and melts it, makes it pliable, and very fit and capable to receive the impression and divine image of God.

IV. The grace of Love is of such a strong and vehement nature, that it is impossible utterly to quench or extinguish it in the soul, though the devil daily use all his strength and skill to do it. Many ways he continually assaults and vehement nature, that it is impossible utterly to quench or extinguish it in the soul, though the devil daily use all his strength and skill to do it. Many ways he continually assaults

V. So the grace of Love is attended with the knowledge of Christ, who is the object of Love: ignoti enim nulla cupido.

VI. So the grace of Love heats our cold and frozen hearts; it warms and revives them with sweet and blessed Love and zeal of God, and his glory.

VII. So the grace of Love darts the desires of the soul heaven-wards: "Such have their affections set on things above," Col. iii. 1, 2.

DISPARITY.

I. The grace of Love is from above, it is a supernatural grace, it grows not in nature's garden: "But the fruit of the Spirit is Love."

II. But the grace of Love, this divine Fire, can never be quenched, it shall burn to eternity. "Charity never faileth," &c.

INFERENCES.

By these things, works, and operations, we may try whether we have true Love to Jesus Christ or no. And for a further help therein, see the following metaphor.

CHRIST'S LOVE COMPARED TO WINE.

"For his Love is better than Wine," Cant. i. 2.

WHEREAS Christ's Love is preferred to Wine, it is to be understood synecdochically; so Ainsworth. Wine here is put for the most pleasant, joyful, refreshing, and cordial things; as bread by the same figure is frequently put for such things as strengthen, &c.

METAPHOR.

I. WINE is the fruit of a good tree, a choice and precious plant, and it is the best of natural liquors.

II. Wine is pleasant, delectable, and sweet to the taste.

III. Wine is to be had only in some particular countries; some people never taste of it as long as they live.

IV. Wine is highly esteemed and valued when the excellent virtue thereof is known.

V. Men will not part with store of the best Wine for toys and trifles.

If a man would give all the goods of Christ's Love, it would be contemned, Cant. viii. 7.

VI. Wine is of a singular use to revive and make glad the disconsolate spirit: "Give Wine to him that is of a heavy heart."*

VII. Wine causes a man, if he drink freely of it, to forget his sorrows.†

while it lay under, Rom. vii. 10, 15, 18, 24, 25.

VIII. Wine, naturalists tell us, repairs decayed nature. A man may faint by some sudden qualm, and need a cordial; and that which may revive the spirit, may not recover a man out of a consumption, or one brought by a languishing distemper almost to the grave.

IX. Wine was used in legal sacrifice in time of the law.

PARALLEL.

I. The Love of Christ is the fruit of the choicest plant that ever was planted. Men and angels are not to be compared to him. [See Vine.] And his Love is the best and choicest of Love. Wine is natural, but his Love is divine and supernatural. None ever Loved, as Christ Loved.

II. There is nothing so pleasant and delectable to a believing soul, as the manifestation of Christ's Love; it excels all things for sweetness.

III. Christ's Love is not known to many that live in the world; divers never tasted of it, do not know how good it is; die without any sight or assurance of Christ's Love.

IV. Christ's Love is esteemed by all that know his worth; they value him above Wine, or gold or the best of earthly things.

V. Saints will not part with the Love of Christ for all the good things of this world; they are but trifles and vanity, in comparison of his Love. his house to a saint, so that he would part with Cant. viii. 7.

VI. The Love of Christ is the most sovereign thing in the world, in the manifestation of it, to revive and comfort poor disconsolate souls. "Thou hast put more gladness in my heart, than in the time when their corn and Wine increased," Psal. iv. 7.

VII. The evidence or manifestation of Christ's Love to a poor soul, doth cause it to forget all its former bitterness, terror of the law, and horror of conscience for sin, which possibly for a great VIII. The grace and love of Christ will recover strength that hath been lost. A saint may faint, and need a cordial, by means of a temptation, when grace is not much decayed in him. A draught of Christ's Love, I mean, the manifestations of it, will recover, in a spiritual sense, a Christian that has been a great while consumptive, whose vitals are impaired, and he almost dead.

IX. The grace of Love, the fruit of the Spirit, which flows from Christ, is the only ingredient to stir up our devotion. We can perform no services acceptably without Love: "Let all your works be done in charity." And when the soul hath sweet manifestations of Christ's love to it, how sweetly doth it go on in God's worship!

* Vina parant animos. Ovid.

† Cura fugit, diluiturque Merc. Ovid.

METAPHOR.

X. Wine is good, as it may be used, to heal some sorts of wounds.

XI. Wine is good to stir up courage in hostile encounters; it makes a man brisk and valiant.

ness, and over all is more than a conqueror. "Nothing shall separate us from the Love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

XII. Wine is used at marriage-feasts, and in great banquets.

Wines upon the lees; of fat things full of marrow, of Wines upon the lees well refined," Isa. xxv. 6.

XIII. Wine may be taken to excess.

XIV. Wine daily drunk, without fresh supplies, will not hold out long.

XV. Wine will decay by long keeping; it will wax sour, and become nauseous and unsavoury.

PARALLEL.

X. The Love of Christ will heal a broken heart. There is no salve, both in the nature and effects thereof, to cure a wounded spirit, like assurance of Christ's love.

XI. The Love of Christ breaking in upon the soul, makes a Christian courageous, and very valiant in that spiritual warfare he is engaged in; he is hereby animated to endure all manner of hardness. "Nothing shall separate us from the Love

XII. The love of Christ is more than a banquet of the greatest varieties to a gracious soul; it affords choice food. "A feast of fat things, of marrow, of Wines upon the lees well refined,"

XIII. But none can have too much of Christ's Love.

XIV. Christ's Love is like a fountain of living water, or an inexhaustible treasure.

XV. Christ's Love, the longer we enjoy it, the sweeter it is; and sweetest of all it will be at the last.

INFERENCES.

BUT from whence is it that believers do thus prize and esteem Jesus Christ, and his Love? First, From the excellency of his person. [See Rose of Sharon, and Lily of the Valleys.] "He is fairer than the children of men."

Secondly, From the sense of his great Love to them; "We Love him, because he first Loved us."

Thirdly, From the consideration of those hard things he suffered for their sakes.

Fourthly, Because of the savour of his good ointment. "He hath shed his Love abroad in their hearts, by the Holy Ghost," Rom. v. 5.

Fifthly, Saints value Christ's Love above Wine, because his Love is beyond all comparison, most sweet and consolatory.

1. His Love was in him early, betimes, before ever the earth was formed, or the foundations thereof laid; his heart's desire and Love was first set upon us, Prov. viii. 31.

2. His Love is of an attracting nature, (that the spouse knew well enough.) He is like the loadstone; he draws all hearts after him, that have a taste or touch of him, Jer. xxxi. 3, 1 John iv. 19.

3. It is boundless; like the Nile, it overflows all banks and bounds; it knows no limits.

4. It is a delighting Love: "His delight was with the sons of men," Prov. viii. 30. He takes complacency in the soul he Loves.

5. It is a free Love, without foreseen merit or worth in the object. When man lay weltering in his blood, loathsome and filthy, Christ Loved him," Hos. xiv. 4, Ezek. xvi. 3, 4, 5, 6, 9.

6. Christ's Love is hot and fervent; much water cannot quench it: it hath a vehement flame, Cant. viii. 6, 7.

7. It is a matchless Love, far beyond the Love of Jacob to Rachel, or Jonathan to David.

8. It is an incomprehensible Love, it passeth knowledge. You may sooner find out the depth of the sea, the height of heaven, tell the stars, or count the sands of the sea-shore, than find out or measure the Love of Christ. It is a lasting, abiding, and eternal Love. "His Loving-kindness he will never take away." This makes the Church so much to desire the manifestations of the love of Christ, and in this is his love better than wine.

But who are they that thus prize and esteem the love of Christ? Take some brief notes of them.

1. Such cannot tell how to praise Christ, nor set forth his excellency, as they would; they cannot sufficiently exalt him. 2. Such are in a longing and languishing condition, till they see him. 3. Cannot be satisfied, till they get to some good and well-grounded assurance of an interest in him. 4. Christ runs much in their minds. 5. Such love Christ, what state soever they are in. 6. Such keep his word. 7. They Love Christ above husband, wife, children, &c., nay, more than life itself. 8. They Love to hear of him, and often from him. 9. They highly value every special token of his Love. 10. They rejoice in his presence. 11. They grieve and mourn at his absence. 12. If they have grieved him, cannot rest until they see his reconciled face again. 13. They love his image wherever they see it; Love all the godly, the poorest saint, as well as the richest. 14. They love to be like him in grace here, as well as in glory hereafter. 15. They are troubled when he is dishonoured. 16. They are greatly concerned for his name, kingdom, and interest in the world. 17. They often visit him in closet-duties. 18. Take great care to please him. 19. Will suffer for his sake, when called to it. 20. Long for his appearance.

BAPTISM A BURIAL.

Expounded and practically improved, Rom. vi. 4, and Col. ii. 12.

“Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized (εἰς Χριστὸν Ἰησοῦν) into Jesus Christ,” that is, into the profession of his faith, confession of his name, and communion with his Church, “were baptized into his death,” Rom. vi. 4.

“Buried with him in baptism, wherein ye are also risen with him,” &c., Col. ii. 12.

For the opening of this metaphorical text, we will show.

1. The literal signification of the word Baptism.
2. The metaphorical signification thereof.
3. What Burying literally and tropically is.
4. Give a symbolical parallel between Baptism and a Burial.
5. Produce some inferences from the whole.

In showing the signification of the word Baptism, we will with all impartiality give the judgment of the learned. The word is Greek, and we are to seek its meaning from the learned in that tongue, of whose writings we have carefully examined the most noted, some of which are, Scapula, and Stephanus, Pasor, Minshew, and Leigh's Critica Sacra. Grotius, Vossius, Causabon, Selden, Mr. Daniel Rogers, Mede, Chamier, Dr. Taylor, Dr. Hammond, Dr. Cave, Hesychius, Bundeus, Beza, Erasmus, Buchanan, Luther, Illyricus, Zanchy, Glassius, &c., who with all the learned of any note, that are impartial, agree with one voice, that the primary, proper, and literal signification of βαπτίζω, Baptizo, is, Mergo, immergo, submergo, obruo, item tingo, quod fit immergendo; that is, to drown, immerge, plunge under, overwhelm, as also to dip, which is done by plunging. And it is certain the ancients so understood it, as appears by their constant practice of dipping such as were baptized; as Tertullian says of his trine-immersion, ter mergitmur, that is, thrice are we dipped. And that the change of the rite to Aspersio, or sprinkling, was invented to accommodate the tender bodies of infants, in these northern parts, when the practice of Baptising them prevailed, is generously confessed by Vossius, and most of the learned.

In a less proper or remote sense, because all things that are washed are dipped in, or covered all over with water, it is put for washing, Luke xi. 38, Heb. ix. 10, Mark vii. 4. And we dare modestly assert, that no Greek author of any credit, whether Heathen or Christian, has ever put Baptising for sprinkling, or used those words promiscuously. The Greeks have a peculiar word to express sprinkling, viz., εὐχέλω, which they use when they have occasion; as might be abundantly shown, if needful.

From this proper signification arise some metaphorical notations : as,

1. From the signification of drowning, (they are the words of Vossius,* in Theol.) it is put for affliction, because they that are afflicted are as it were drowned in the gulph of calamities, Matt. xx. 22, Mark x. 38, Luke xii. 50. Baptismus non significat afflictionem quamlibet, sed vehementem, et forinsecus irruentem, ut sunt in scripturis undæ persecutionum et tribulationum, quibus qui merguntur et obruantur, baptizari videantur, Estius ad 1 Cor. xv. 29. That is, Baptism denotes not every light affliction, but that which is vehement and overwhelming : as there are waves of persecutions and tribulations mentioned in scripture ; so such as are drowned and overwhelmed by them, may seem to be baptized, Matt. xx. 22, 23, Mark x. 38, 39, Luke xii. 50. The reason of the metaphor is taken from many and deep waters, to which calamities are compared, Psal. xviii. 16, "He drew me out of great waters," Psal. xxxii. 6, and lxix. 1, 2, &c.

2. It is put for the miraculous effusion of the Holy Spirit upon the apostles, and other believers in the primitive Church, because of the analogical immersion or dipping, (for so, as we have proved βαπτίζω signifies) : for the house where the Holy Spirit came upon the apostles was so filled, that they were, as it were, drowned in it : or the reason of the metaphor may be from the great plenty and abundance of those gifts, in which they were wholly as it were immersed, as the baptized are dipped under water, Acts ii. 3, Matt. iii. 11, Mark i. 8, Luke iii. 15, John i. 33, Acts i. 5, and xi. 16. When fire is added, it is a symbol of external manifestation.

3. It is put for the miraculous passage of the Israelites through the Red Sea, 1 Cor. x. 2, which was a type of Gospel-baptism.

These reasons of the metaphor are evident and convincing demonstrations, that the signification of Baptism is to dip or plunge ; for sprinkling can bear no analogy with them.

The word is expressed in the Old Testament by the Hebrew טָבַל, Tabal, which the Septuagint (or the seventy learned interpreters) render by βαπτίζω, Baptiso, to dip ; as these texts shows, Gen. xxxvii. 31, Exod. xii. 22, Lev. iv. 6, 17, and xix. 16, ix. 9, Deut. xxxiii. 24, Numb. xix. 18, 2 Kings v. 14, &c.

Hence also the Baptized are said to be dead and buried, in allusion to the putting of dead men into the earth, and covering them therewith ; to which we proceed,

What burial in a natural sense is, every man knows : and in our text it is a metaphor, the symbolical analogy of which with Baptism follows in the parallel.

METAPHOR.

I. WHEN one is buried, it imports him to be dead, for none but such ought to be buried.

This may be evidenced by this consideration, that Baptism is an illustrious symbol of the death of Christ our Saviour, who died for us. "I am he that was dead, and am alive ; behold, I live for evermore." The true administration of this sacrament visibly figures it to us ; and to that end it was instituted, viz., to confirm that great and glorious truth of his being really a man, and so capable of suffering or passing through the death of the cross, Rom. vi. 3—5, into which death we are baptized ; and then being dead to sin, and to this world, we are to live in newness of life amongst the saints in the kingdom of God.

II. When one is buried, he ought to be covered all over with earth, else it is no burial.

nifications of the word, as is largely opened. 3. From scripture practice, which always was by dipping, as all the learned that are impartial acknowledge. 4. From the constant practice of antiquity, who retained the right form until Clinical Baptism, viz., such who deferred their Baptism till their sick bed came to be used about Cyprian's time, in the third century. These Clinici, so called, because εν τη κλινῃ

PARALLEL.

I. WHEN one is Baptized he ought to be dead to sin, that is, converted by the power of God's Word to Gospel truth, which always makes the soul loathe and detest sin ; and then that soul might be said indeed to be dead to sin.

II. When one is Baptized, he ought to be covered all over with water, or else it is no Baptism. Which fully appears. 1. From the nature of Burial. 2. From the proper and metaphorical significations of the word, as is largely opened. 3. From scripture practice, which always was by dipping, as all the learned that are impartial acknowledge. 4. From the constant practice of antiquity, who retained the right form until Clinical Baptism, viz., such who deferred their Baptism till their sick bed came to be used about Cyprian's time, in the third century. These Clinici, so called, because εν τη κλινῃ καὶ κοιμῶντες, baptized in their bed, were such as delayed their baptism until their death-beds, because they believed it would take away all sin, and that there was no pardon if they sinned after receiving it; yet not daring to go out of the world without this great badge of Christianity, deferred it till they thought they were in danger of death; and since they could not without peril of life be dipped, sprinkling was invented to serve the turn. For a like reason, as was said before, they changed the mode of administration with respect to infants, when their baptism was introduced, out of regard to their tender constitutions, especially in cold countries and seasons. This was the original of sprinkling, and sprung purely from the abuse of Baptism, and the want of a right subject: as by divine aid, shall be demonstrated in a particular sheet, impartially, and from undoubted authority.

* A notione quæ mergere significat, profluit ea quæ pro affligere usurpatur, quia qui affliguntur, calamitatum gurgite quasi merguntur.

One may with as much reason be said to be Buried, when clay or earth is thrown upon his head only; as to be Baptized, when water is poured upon his head or face: and if the one be no burying, it is as certain the other is no Baptism. And he that affirms, that sprinkling may represent or symbolically express the death, Burial, and resurrection of Christ, does at the same time speak without colour of truth, word of sense, and against all the reason in the world. As breaking of the sacramental bread, visibly betokens that Christ's body was broken; and as the pouring forth of the sacramental wine, represents the gushing forth of his blood; so the sacramental dipping in water, viz., Baptism, represents his death and Burial; and the coming from under the water, his resurrection, 1 Cor. xv. 2, 3, 4.

METAPHOR.

III. Burial precedes the resurrection, or raising of the dead body to a state of immortality.

PARALLEL.

III. The immersion of the party baptized, precedes his emersion, or coming out of the water; which symbolizes or answers to two things: 1. The resurrection of Christ, 2. Our rising again to newness of life: "Buried with him in Baptism, wherein ye are also risen with him," &c., as in the text.

INFERENCES.

I. From the whole we may rationally conclude, that the administration of this great ordinance by sprinkling, (which comports not with the literal nor metaphorical signification of the word, nor those great mysteries represented by it, viz., the death, Burial, and resurrection of Christ) is disorderly, and should be rectified.

II. It is a motive to excite us to admire and reverence the great grace and goodness of Christ, who hath given us such a visible symbol of his death, Burial, and resurrection; not only to confirm our faith, but also to prevent our being deceived by any seducing spirits.

III. It is not to be wondered at, that such as deny the man Christ Jesus, but preach up the light within to be a Saviour, should reject these two great ordinances stated in the scripture, viz., Baptism and the Lord's supper, because such as deny the substance, are necessitated to deny the sign. Persons of this judgment may be easily confuted: for whenever the term Baptism is mentioned, and God or Christ represented as the Agent, it must be understood of the Baptism of the Spirit, in the sense before spoken of. Whenever Baptism is mentioned as the act of any apostle or minister of the Gospel, it denotes water-Baptism, because these have neither power nor commission to Baptize with the Spirit, and with fire. And when ever the Baptism of blood and suffering is mentioned, it must be understood of persecutors, or ungodly men, who murder, destroy, or afflict the godly; for neither God, without blasphemy, nor good men, without a wrong application of the term, may be said to Baptize that way. So that when we meet with the act of Baptism, as the act of a good man, we must of necessity understand it of water-Baptism, in the same method and mode of administration, as was practised by the apostles and primitive Christians; and that being a positive institution, with respect to the subject and manner of administration, is not to be deviated from, upon any pretence whatsoever, unless we will suppose the laws of the Almighty to be in the power of man, so as that he may dispense at pleasure with them; which is not to be done without sufficient authority from God himself, which is no where to be found.

IV. If the laws of the great unerring Sovereign of all things ought to be observed without variation, unless it be by his express direction: then we are to conform exactly to his order, in this part of the evangelical law, and to practise it no otherwise than he has prescribed, because it was so delivered to the saints.

V. We would caution all that would approach to this sacred evangelical ordinance, unless they be dead to sin, that is, such as truly and really hate wickedness, and the empty vanities of the world; and unless they have a prospect of, and long to have an interest in that never-fading inheritance, promised by our dear Lord Jesus to his children; not to profane this blessed institution: because, if they want the due qualifications of serious and converted souls, viz., faith, repentance, and good lives, they are hereby entitled, not real members of Christ, but hypocrites, and incur as great a hazard, as such do who eat and drink unworthily of the Lord's supper.

THE LORD'S SUPPER.

"For I have received of the Lord, that which also I delivered unto you, that the Lord Jesus, the same night in which he was betrayed, took bread," 1 Cor. xi. 23.

"And when he had given thanks, he brake it, and said, Take, eat, this is my body which is broken for you: This do in remembrance of me," Verse 24.

THE Papist's affirm, that after the words which they call the words of consecration, spoken by their Mass-priest, the bread is changed into the real body of Jesus Christ; and many of the blessed martyrs, in Queen Mary's days, were burned to ashes for denying this transubstantiation. Which absurd and monstrous conceit of theirs hath been learnedly confuted by many ancient and modern writers, so that it may be thought needless to add any thing here upon that account; yet that we may make our way the more plain to these metaphorical and figurative expressions used by our Saviour, when he instituted the holy sacrament of the Supper, saying, "This is my body," something briefly we shall offer, in confutation of their pernicious doctrine; which may soon be done, for they confute themselves, in saying, that the sacrament is a feast for our souls, and not for our bodies: now what is my soul the better, when I eat the very body of Christ? Christ is eaten and received spiritually: "Whoso eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath everlasting life," and I will, saith Christ, "Raise him up at the last day," John vi. 54. Therefore the eating of Christ's flesh cannot intend the receiving of the sacrament of the Lord's supper: for if it did, it would be a very easy way for the vilest sinner to go to heaven.

But to come directly to the business in hand: either Christ spoke figuratively, when he said, "This is my body," or he did not? And that the words cannot be taken in a proper sense, is evident; for it is impossible for words to express any thing more plainly, than that by this is meant the bread. It is said, that "Christ took bread, and brake it, and gave it, and said, Take, eat, this is my body;" where this necessarily relates to that which Christ took, brake, and gave. Also the apostle saith positively thrice in a breath, that it is bread: "As often as ye eat this bread," &c., 1 Cor. xi. 26. "And whosoever shall eat this bread," John vi. 15. "The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ?" 1 Cor. x. 16. Also the participation of the sacrament is called, "Breaking of bread," Acts ii. 46, and xx. 7, which Popish authors themselves understand of the sacrament. Now can any be so ignorant and foolish, to believe it is Christ's proper and real body, which the Holy Ghost calleth so often bread, after it is blessed, &c.

Object. By this, say some of the Papists, is neither intended the bread, nor Christ's body; but in general, this substance which is contained under this species.*

Ans. "What do they mean? Are there any more substances under those species, besides the bread first, and afterwards the body of Christ? Do not they affirm, as soon as ever it ceaseth to be bread, it becometh the real body of Christ? Then surely if it be a substance, according to what they say, it must either be bread, or the body of Christ, or no substance at all."

Object. Christ's body is after the manner of a spirit, taking up no room, so that head, hands, feet, are altogether in the least crumb of the host.

Ans. "In arguing thus, as a learned man observes, they plead for the propriety of words, and destroy the propriety of things. How can they say it is properly a body, which wants the essential properties of a body, which is to have quantity, and take up room; take away this, and the body may properly be a spirit, for it is that only which differenceth it from a spirit."

* Bellarmin. de Euch. l. 3. c. 12.

But further, to show how idle and absurd it is to take our Saviour's words in a proper sense, we shall show that it is utterly against sense and reason, as well as contrary to scripture, as you have heard.

First, It is against sense. What greater evidence can there be of things, than what sense affordeth? But if this which the Papists affirm, about the consecrated bread being the real body of Christ be true, the senses of all the world are deceived; for since the great argument for Christianity, as all agree, was the words that Christ spoke, and the works which Christ did; now how could we be sure he did so speak, or so work, if we may not credit the reports of our eyes and ears? This was St. Luke's great evidence of the truth of what he wrote, that it was delivered to him by eye-witnesses, Luke i. 1, 2, and St. John's: "What we have seen with our eyes, and our hands have handled of the word of life," 1 John i. 1. And St. Paul's for the resurrection, "That he was seen of Cephas, then of the twelve, then of the five hundred brethren at once," 1 Cor. i. 5, 6. Even Thomas's infidelity yielded to this argument, "That if he did thrust his hand into Christ's side, he would believe," John xx. 25. Christ judged this was a convincing argument, when the apostles thought they had seen a spirit: "Handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as you see me have," Luke xxiv. 39.

But now if after the words of consecration, there is under the species of bread, the nature and properties of flesh, then are the senses of the wisest of mortals deceived: and if our senses be deceived here, they are not, as a late author, Dr. Tillitson, observes, to be trusted in any other thing; no, not when they are most sure that we see father, or mother, or wife, or children. Can we be sure, "This is my body," is written in Matt. xxvi. 26, Mark xiv. 22, Luke xxii. 19, 1 Cor. xi. 24? For may not those words be some other words? Why should we trust our eyes? What if we should tell the Papists, these words, "This is my body," are neither in this chapter, nor anywhere else written in the New Testament, and grow confident of it, and tell them the words are, This is not my body; it is the bricks that were laid to build Babel, it is the gates of Solomon's porch: this is the shew-bread that Abimelech gave to David, the bottles that Abigail took from Nabal? If they tell us, we are strangely deceived, and the sense of all that we can read will give it against us; may not we tell them as well, when they say, This is the real body of Christ, when it is nothing but a wafer-cake, That they are strangely deceived, and that the senses of all, that can either see, taste, smell, or feel, will give it against them? This being so, what reason is there for them to burn us, because we cannot see the bread to be Christ's real body, more than there is for us to kill them, because they cannot see that it is the gates of Solomon's porch.

Secondly, It is against reason. And shall any conclude, that it is any principle of the Christian religion, that is contrary to, and utterly against reason? For it would make us believe things that are absolutely impossible, and gross contradictions. Though some things may be above reason, yet they themselves confess no principle of religion can be against it.

Obj. But they say, We imagine many things impossible, that really are not so; and further intimate. If we can prove any real impossibilities, which this doctrine forceth them to believe, they will yield to us: for they with us condemn the Lutheran opinion, that Christ's body is every where, because it is impossible; and therefore expound those words, "I am the vine, I am a door," &c., figuratively, as we do, because it is impossible for him who is a man, to be a vine, or a door, &c. See Mr. Pool, p. 107.*

Answ. It is no less impossible for the bread to be Christ's real body. "Why might not the vine, as well as the wine, be by transubstantiation converted into Christ's real substance? I think, saith Mr. Pool, the mother as good as the daughter. And especially since Christ saith, I am the vine, might not they have devised another transubstantiation, to make Christ's words good?"

But to proceed to show how irrational and absurd their notion is, and what they hold, as you heard, that Christ's whole body is present in every crumb of bread, &c., and yet do affirm, Christ's body is, entire and undivided, and also believe it is really in heaven, in such a proportion or bigness as he had upon earth. Now then, saith Mr. Pool, according to their doctrine, the same body of Christ is bigger than itself, and longer than itself, and which is worse, Christ is divided from himself. I know not what can be more impossible, than to say, That all Christ is at Rome, and all at London, and all in heaven, and yet not all in the places between.

* See a book called Scripture Mysteries, p. 279.

Object. All this the Papists say, may be done by God's Almighty power.

Ans. Then by the same Almighty Power, it is possible for any other man to be in so many places: for it matters not that Christ should be invisible in so many places, and another should be there visibly; or that Christ is there in so little a bulk, and another must be in a greater. And if this be so, what monsters follow from hence? Can any devise greater absurdities than they believe, if in very deed they believe what they say, and daily affirm? Suppose now John to be by divine power at the same time at Rome, at Paris, and at London: wherever John is alive, it follows he must have power to move himself, or else no living creature. Then John at Rome may walk towards London, and the same John at London may walk towards Rome: and so they may meet, shall I say, the one the other, and you may be sure it will be a merry meeting; it were worth enquiring, how long they will be ere they come together. Then again, at Rome all the parts of John may be excessively hot, and at London excessively cold, and at Paris neither hot nor cold. This is beyond all romances that ever were devised. Besides, John may be sorely wounded at Rome, and yet at London may sleep in a whole skin; John may be feasting at Rome, and fasting at London, in the same moment.

Object. You talk at this rate, because you measure God by yourselves, whereas he can do more than you or I can do.

Ans. There are some things, which it is no dishonour to God to say he cannot do them, because they are either sinful, (so God cannot lie,) or absolutely impossible. God himself cannot make a man to be alive and dead at the same time; God cannot make the whole to be less than a part of it; he cannot make three to be more than threescore; he cannot make a son to beget his father; he cannot make the same man to be born at several times, as Papist authors confess, and therefore in like manner he cannot make the same body to be in two several places, for this is not one jot less impossible than the other: but they must believe, Christ may have ten thousand bodies at one time, or so many as there are priests to consecrate the bread, and distinct congregations to celebrate the holy Supper."

Object. These indeed are great difficulties to human reason, but reason is not to be believed against scripture.

Ans. True, but this is their hard hap, this doctrine of theirs is against scripture, as well as reason, in as much as it is highly dishonourable to Christ, whose honour is the great design of scripture. What a foul dishonour is it to him, to subject him to the will of every mass-priest, who, when he pleaseth can command him down into bread! And what a dishonour is it, that the very body of Christ may be eaten by rats and worms, and may be cast up by vomit, and the like, as Aquinas, affirms,* and that their church in her missals hath put this amongst other directions, That if worms or rats have eaten Christ's body, they must be burned; and if any man vomit it up, it must be eaten again, or burned, or made a relie? And yet this is no more than their doctrine will force them to own; for if they will believe Christ's own words in one place, as well as in another, he assureth us, that whatsoever, without exception, "Entereth into the mouth, goeth into the belly, and is cast forth into the draught," Matt. xv. 17.

Object. What dishonour is this more to Christ, than to have fleas suck his blood when he was on earth.

Ans. Very great dishonour! For though in the days of his flesh it was no dishonour to him, as it was necessary for us that he suffered so many indignities, and died, yet now being risen from the dead, "He dieth no more;" and it must needs be a great wrong, injury, and dishonour to him, to be crucified again, and be brought back to those reproaches which he long since left; and all this to no purpose, and without any profit to us. Again the scripture approveth and useth this argument, that his body cannot be in two places at one and the same time. It is the angels' argument, "He is not here, he is risen," Matt. xxviii. 6, plainly implying, that he could not be here and there too. Or must we say, the argument used by the angels of God is weak or deceitful, that theirs may be strong and true?

Object. Have we not many examples in holy scripture, which show that Christ may be in divers places at one time? Was he not in heaven when he appeared to St. Paul, Acts ix. 3. Paul saith, "He was seen last of all of him," and yet he was not then in heaven?*

Answ. What sight it was that Paul had of Christ, is not declared; however, it is evident it was a vision that he had of him, for so he calleth it: but that this proves the body of Christ to be in two places at once, doth not in the least appear. Stephen also saw Christ; and if it should be granted, as some affirm, that he saw his real glorified body, doth it follow, the body of Christ was then in two places? The heavens might be opened, and his sight so strengthened that he might have a sight of the blessed Jesus, whom Stephen said, he saw "Standing on the right-hand of God," Acts vii. 56.

Object. The Papists say, Christ's real body is in the eucharist invisibly, and so the angels might mean, he was not there visibly, when they said, "He is not here, he is risen."

Answ. To this saith Mr. Pool, If a man being sought after, should hide himself in some corner or hole of the house, and pursuers should ask for him, could any with a good conscience say, he is not here, because he is invisible? None sure but a Papist, who is so well skilled in equivocation, would give such an answer. Our Saviour every where makes these two opposites, his being in the world, and going to heaven. John xiii. 1. The hour was come, that he should "Depart out of this world unto the Father." It seems they could have taught him the art of going thither, and remaining here as the same instant. They have an excellent faculty, as he had, who said, since he could not give content in going, nor staying: he would not go, nor stay: for they know how a man may both go from a place and stay in it, at the same time. I know not what can be more plain, if they did not wilfully shut their eyes. Christ saith expressly, "Me you have not always with you:" that is, his bodily presence; for as touching his divine presence, so he is always with his people unto the end of the world, Matt. xxviii. 20. Besides, their doctrine destroys the truth of Christ's human nature. We read of Christ, "He was in all points like unto us, sin only excepted." His body was like ours, and therefore impossible it should be in a thousand places at once, which according to their doctrine it is. This turns Christ's body into a spirit; nay, indeed, they make his body more spiritual than a spirit; for a spirit cannot be in several places, divided from itself. The soul of man, if it be entire both in the whole, and in every part of the body; yet it is not divided from itself, nor from its body, nor can it be in two bodies at the same time, as all confess; much less can it be in ten thousand bodies at once. Whenever any angel comes to earth, he leaves heaven. So that this quite destroys the truth of Christ's human body.

Object. Much of what we say here, the Papists say, was true of Christ's body in the days of his infirmity; but when he was risen from the dead, then he received a spiritual body, as it is said ours shall be at the resurrection, 1 Cor. xv.

Answ. This is but a fig-leaf; for they ascribe these monstrous properties to Christ's body before its resurrection; for they say, the flesh and blood of Christ were really in the sacrament which the disciples received while Christ lived. Secondly, Christ's resurrection, though it heightened the perfection, yet it did not alter the nature and properties of his body, nor give it the being of a spirit: for after he was risen, he proves that he was no spirit by this argument, "Handle me, and see: for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as you see me have," Luke xxiv. 39. By this it appears, that their doctrine destroyeth the truth of Christ's human body; at least it destroys the main evidence of it against those who affirmed that Christ had only a phantastical body, namely, that he was seen, and felt, and heard; for the Papists say, that sense is not to be believed. Again this doctrine of theirs destroyeth the truth of Christ's ascension into heaven; for he is not ascended, if he hath not left this world, but is here in the sacrament. Nothing can be more clear, than that Christ did visibly and locally leave this world, when he went up into heaven, Acts i. 9, 10. That being once there, "The heavens must receive," or contain "him, until the time of the restitution of all things," Acts iii. 21. And that at the last day he shall come visibly and locally from heaven, 2 Thess. i. 7. But that he shall come down a thousand times in a day, at the command of every mass-priest, or that he should have such power as to make the body of his Saviour, is such a dream as the scripture speaketh not one syllable of, nor can any rational man believe it. Besides, their doctrine destroyeth the very essence of a sacrament, which consists of two parts, an outward element or sign, and the inward grace signified by it.

* See a Popish Book called, The Portraiture of the True Church, p. 152.

These things being well considered, it is evident these words, "This is my body," are to be taken figuratively, i. e., this is a sign of my body, or this is the sacrament of my body; so that from the manner of the words spoken by Christ, there is no necessity to take them as the Papists do, seeing it is so frequent with the Holy Ghost to use metaphors in this kind; I need not name them, considering it is the subject of our present work. "The seven kine are seven years; the seven ears of corn are seven years;" the stars are the angels of the seven churches; the seven heads are seven mountains, &c. Christ is called a rock, a lamb, a lion, a door, together with many other things, which we have spoken unto. See the second head of Metaphors, Similies, &c.

The saints are called sheep, branches, &c. "The meaning of all this is," saith Dr. Preston, "they are like such and such things; but yet it is the manner of the scripture-speech and therefore, saith he, it is not necessary those words should be taken in a proper sense, as they are by the Papists.*

Object. "But," saith the worthy doctor, "you will object: yea but in a matter of this moment, as a sacrament, the Lord speaks distinctly and expressly; there he useth no metaphor, though in other cases he doth.

Ans. "To this," saith he, "I answer briefly: It is so far from being true, that he useth them not in the sacrament, that there are none of all the sacraments but it is used, viz., in the sacrament of circumcision, "this is the covenant," &c. In the sacrament of the passover, which were the sacraments of the old law, the lamb is called the passover. In this very sacrament, to go no further, for instance, take but the second part of it, 'This is the cup of the New Testament in my blood:' here are not one, but divers figures. The cup is taken for the liquor in it; the wine in the cup is taken for Christ's blood; 'This is the New Testament,' &c. that is, the seal of the New Testament." Here is figure upon figure, saith Mr. Pool, and yet the Papists have the impudence to reproach us for putting in but one figure, which they confess the Holy Ghost frequently maketh use of. Wonder, O heavens! and judge, O earth, whether those men do not strain at gnats, and swallow camels, &c.

This openeth a way for us to our next work, which is to run the parallel concerning those figurative and metaphorical expressions of the Lord Jesus Christ, used at the institution of the holy eucharist, Matt. xxvi. 26, "Jesus took bread, and blessed it, and brake it, and gave it to his disciples, and said, Take, eat, this is my body."

METAPHOR.

I. Christ took Bread after he had supped, &c.

II. Christ blessed the Bread: "he took the Bread, and gave thanks."

III. Christ brake the Bread. Corn, we know, is bruised, or ground in a mill, that so it may become meet Bread for our bodies.

IV. Christ gave the Bread to his disciples: "He took Bread, and blessed it, and brake it, and gave it to his disciples."

V. The disciples took the Bread. Note by the way, it is called Bread when Christ took it, it is called Bread after he blessed it, and it was Bread the disciples took.

PARALLEL.

I. This, in the judgment of some divines, notes God's choosing or taking Christ from among men, to be a sacrifice for our sins.

II. Christ sanctified himself; he was set apart to that glorious work and office he came to do.

III. Christ was bruised or pierced for our sins, he was broken as it were in the mill of God's wrath, which was due to us for our sins, that he might become meet food for our souls; "It pleased the Father to bruise him," Isa. liii. 10.

IV. Signifying not only his giving himself for us, but his giving himself freely with all his benefits to us.

V. Which holds forth our taking or accepting of Christ the Bread of Life, as the food of our souls.

* Dr. Preston on the Saint's Qualifications, p. 478.

METAPHOR.

VI. The disciples ate the Bread. Bread will do us no good, unless it be taken and eaten.

VII. Bread is the stay and staff of man's natural life: "I will break the staff of bread," Ezek. iv. 16. It is that which preserves the life of the body.

VIII. Bread is the best of earthly blessings; hence in scripture it is sometimes put for all good things, Isa. lv. 1, 2.

was theirs. Hence he is called the IX. Bread is of a satisfying nature; hence God saith, "He will satisfy his poor with Bread.

X. Bread is made of seed, or corn, which before it riseth, or becometh fruitful, or yields increase is sowed, and dies. "Verily, verily, I say unto you, except a corn of wheat fall into the ground, and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit," John xii. 24.

of Christ. Such hath been the fruit of the preaching of Christ crucified, that multitudes of sinners thereby through the Spirit have been converted to God, whence also hath sprung forth a seed to serve him, whom he hath accounted to the Lord for a generation; of all which he will not suffer one grain to be lost, but will raise it up at the last day.

A parallel much like this might be run, in respect of the Cup or spirit of the wine. See Wine.

PARALLEL.

VI. Unless we receive Christ by a lively faith, and feed upon him, that is, fetch all our comforts from him, relying wholly by faith upon him, he will avail us nothing to eternal life: "Unless ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you," John vi. 53.

VII. Christ is the stay or staff of the life of our souls: "When Christ, who is our Life, shall appear," &c., Col. iii. 3. Christ preserveth the life of our inward man: "Because I live, ye shall live also."

VIII. Christ is the best and chiefest blessing that ever God gave to his people; he comprehends all other good: he that hath Christ hath every thing. "All things are yours," 1 Cor. iii. 22. Why so? because they had an interest in Christ, Christ

IX. Christ received by faith, most sweetly fills and satisfies the soul of a believer. "He that eateth of the Bread of life, and drinketh of the water of Life, shall hunger or thirst no more," John iv. 14. Such have what they desire.

X. The Lord Jesus, like a seed of corn, was sown, and did die, that so he might not remain alone, in the perfect enjoyment of himself, but for great increase, viz., to raise up with him all his elect; he was content, when his hour was come to yield himself up to death. He died, and rose again, and thereby bringeth forth much fruit. All that ever were, or shall be quickened, and raised out of a state of death by sin, were, and shall be quickened by the death and resurrection

INFERENCES.

I. The apostle saith, "That what he received of the Lord Jesus, he delivered to the saints: how the Lord Jesus, the same night in which he was betrayed, took Bread, and blessed it," &c. "And in like manner took the Cup, when he had supped," &c., 1 Cor. xi. 23—25. From whence we infer, that whatsoever we do in the worship of God, we must see we have a command from God to warrant our practice, and also exactly to do it according to the pattern he hath left us, or directions he hath given us; we must not add to, nor diminish from, nor alter any thing of the words of the institution; if we do, God will not hold us guiltless.

II. This rebukes the Papists, who deny the people the holy Cup of our Lord, and give the sacrament, or holy ordinance, only in one kind, when nothing is more clear, than that Jesus Christ gave his disciples the Cup, as well as the Bread.

Quest. Why did Christ institute this holy ordinance, and give it to his disciples, the very night in which he was betrayed?

Ans. 1. To strengthen their faith in an hour of temptation, that was just at the door, and ready to come upon them. When is a cordial more necessary, than when the patient is ready to faint, and his spirits fail? Christ saw what a sad qualm was coming upon poor saints, and therefore gives them this soul-reviving cordial, to bear up their spirits.

2. Because the last words of a dying friend are mostly kept in mind, or tokens of love given by him are chiefly borne in remembrance.

Quest. Who ought to partake of the holy Eucharist?

Answ. 1. None but such who are true converts, or who sincerely believe in the Lord Jesus Christ; for this is an outward sign of an inward grace received. Those who have not spiritually received Christ by faith, ought not to come to the holy Supper of the Lord.

2. It appertaineth to none, but such converts as are baptized. "Those that received the word were baptized; and they continued in the apostles doctrine and fellowship, in breaking of bread, and prayer," Acts ii. 40, 41, 42. We read of none that received the Lord's Supper, but baptized persons.

3. Such who are fallen into any gross and scandalous evil, and under the suspension or sentence of the Church, ought not to partake of the holy Supper of the Lord, until they have repented, and given satisfaction to the Church, and are received again into fellowship.

4. Those who cannot discern the body of the Lord broken, so as to look unto and behold Jesus Christ crucified for them, but eat it as common bread, ought not to come to this ordinance; such, amongst others, if they come, are unworthy receivers.

Quest. What is required of persons who come to partake of this holy ordinance?

Answ. They ought to examine themselves; it requires due preparation, which doth consist in these four or five particulars.

1. A sincere confession of those sins, which we find out upon diligent search and examination.

2. Godly sorrow for the same, manifested by putting away the filth of the flesh. We must come with clean hands, and a pure heart.

3. We ought to forgive those who have offended us. Christ commands us to be reconciled to our brother. The apostle exhorteth us to lay aside all malice. We must not "Keep the feast with the leavened bread of malice and wickedness," 1 Cor. v. 8.

4. Faith in the death and blood-shedding of Jesus Christ.

5. We ought to do it in remembrance of his death.

(1.) With an affectionate remembrance. The sight of our eyes ought to affect our hearts.

(2.) A sorrowful remembrance, in contemplation of what our sins brought upon our dear Saviour: they were the thorns, as I may say, that crowned him, and the nails that fastened him to the cross.

(3.) With a sin-loathing and self-abhorring remembrance.

(4.) With a thankful remembrance. Though we have cause of sorrow, considering the nature of our sin, and horrid evil thereof; yet there is great cause of joy and thanksgiving, to behold a Saviour, who in bowels of love died to redeem and save us from them.

Quest. How may a Christian, with much comfort, upon examination, receive the Lord's Supper?

Answ. 1. If there be no sin in thy heart or life, which thou regardest, or dost allow thyself in, bearest with, or connivest at.

2. If thou dost loathe sin, as well as leave it; when it is not only out of thy conversation, but out of thy affection also. To hate and loathe sin, is more than to leave it; persons never willingly leave or forsake what they love.

3. If thou canst say in truth, that thou wouldest be made holy, and dost labour after it, as well as to be made happy; to be thoroughly sanctified, as well as to be saved; live to God here, as well as live with God hereafter; to have sin mortified as well as pardoned.

4. If Christ be most precious to thee, and hath the chiefest room in thy heart. If upon trial thou findest these things are in very deed wrought in thee, thou mayest with much comfort come to the sacrament.

Quest. Of what use is the sacrament of the Lord's Supper?

Answ. 1. It shows the horrid nature and evil of sin, in that nothing could expiate it, nor satisfy the justice of God, or make a compensation for it, but the blood of Jesus Christ.

2. It shows the wonderful love of God to poor sinners, in giving up his own dear Son, to die the cursed death of the cross for us.

3. It shows the wonderful love of Jesus Christ, who freely laid down his life for our sakes. "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friend;" "but Christ hath laid down his life for us, when we were enemies to him by wicked works," John xv. 13, Rom. v. 8—10.

4. It tends to increase our love to Christ, and our faith in him.

5. It shows us that Christ is our Life, and how and by what means we come to be saved.

6. It seals the covenant of grace to us, giveth us, in the right use of it, much assurance that Christ is ours.

7. There is a mystical conveyance or communication of all Christ's blessed merits to our souls through faith held forth hereby, and in a glorious manner received, in the right participation of it.

8. It may animate and encourage us to suffer martyrdom, when called to it, for his sake.

CHRIST OUR PASSOVER.

"For Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us," 1 Cor. v. 7.

THE Passover, or Paschal Lamb, being a most eminent type of the Messiah, of which see our sacred Philology, in the chapter of sacred Rites, where you have the reason of its typical and metaphorical representation, we shall here run an apt parallel betwixt that illustrious type, and the most holy Antitype.

TYPE.

I. The paschal Lamb must be without blemish, entire, whole, sound; not blind, nor broken, nor sick nor bruised.

II. He was to be a year old.

yields sufficient proof; as also the perfection of Christ in like sort: and that in fulness of time he should come and suffer; a year being a perfect revolution of the sun's course. Guild.

III. It was to be taken out of the flock.

IV. It was to be separated from the flock.

V. It was to be slain, and that in the evening.

VI. The blood was to be sprinkled on the lintel, and door-posts, that the angel seeing the same, might pass by, Exod. xii. 7.

VII. The Lamb was to be roasted with fire, ver. 8.

It was a sign either of the Spirit of God, which is compared to fire, through which Christ offered himself; or of the fire of God's wrath, which he suffered when he was made a curse for us, Heb. ix. 14.

VIII. It was to be roasted with head and legs, and the appurtenances thereof; that is, it must be roasted all whole, not cut in pieces.

PARALLEL.

I. Shadowing forth the perfection and innocency of Christ, in whose lips was found no guile; "As a Lamb, without blemish and without spot."

II. Signifying the experience Christ should have of our miseries, whereof even a day's continuance of Christ in like sort: and that in fulness of time he should come and suffer; a year being a perfect revolution of the sun's course. Guild.

III. Christ was taken from amongst mankind: "Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same." &c. Heb. ii. 14.

IV. Christ was separate from sinners.

V. So Christ died, saith Mr. Ainsworth, in that season, viz., in the evening of the day: also in the evening of time, in the latter age of the world.

VI. Signifying, that Christ's blood must be applied by us; and where Christ is received, and the soul sprinkled by faith, sanctification outwardly will appear in the practice of the life, 1 Cor. i. 30.

VII. Signifying, saith Mr. Guild,* the agony of Christ in the garden, and the wrath of his Father, which he did endure both in soul and body.

VIII. This signifies our full communion with Christ, whole and undivided, 1 Cor. xiii., Gal. ii. 20.

TYPE.

IX. No bone of the Lamb was to be broken.

X. The Lamb was to be eaten.

XI. It was not to be eaten raw, ver. 9.

XII. It was to be eaten all, and with unleavened bread.

XIII. It was to be eaten with bitter herbs.

XIV. It was to be eaten in every family, and each family to this purpose had a Lamb.

the faithful; yea, each particular soul,

XV. The house was to be prepared.

XVI. If the house was too little, the neighbour's house was to be assumed; yea, the strangers were to partake, if they were circumcised.

XVII. They were to eat it with their loins girded.

XVIII. They were to have their shoes on.

XIX. They were to eat in haste. The original word signifies to haste away, as with fear and amazement.

XX. Lastly, in that the blood of the Lamb was first sprinkled on them.

TYPE.

I. The Passover signified Christ was to come.

II. The Passover only fed the body.

III. The Lamb being slain and eaten, perished, and nothing of it remains.

IV. That was a type or shadow.

PARALLEL.

IX. Os nullum illius agni frangi voluit Deus, &c. It signifies, that not a bone of Christ should be broken, as it was prophesied of him.

X. Christ is spiritually to be received, and fed upon. "My flesh is meat indeed," &c., John vi. 55.

XI. Noting, that we should be well prepared, when we come to the sacrament. Guild.

XII. Signifying, that in Christ nothing is unprofitable, or to be rejected; and that we ought to eat with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth.

XIII. Which typified forth the bitter sorrows and sufferings of Christ; and that we should eat our Passover with a sense of, and bitter sorrow for our sins, wherein we were captivated.

XIV. Showing the unity that ought to be among God's people, they being all fellow commoners in, and partakers of the privileges and blessings of Christ. Every Church and family of hath a whole Christ.

XV. To signify how we should prepare our hearts, 1 Cor. xi. 28.

XVI. To signify, first, the superabundant virtue of Christ's death, for the house may be too little for the Lamb, but not the Lamb for the house; as also the sweet communion of the saints in love, the joyful vocation also of the neighbour-Gentiles, and their admission into the fellowship of the faith, being inwardly circumcised, &c.

XVII. This signifies the girding the loins of our minds with justice, strength, and verity.

XVIII. This was to figure out the preparation of the Gospel of peace, wherewith our feet should be always shod.

XIX. They that come to Christ, must be ready to walk in the way of salvation, with the staff of true faith in their hands; as strangers and pilgrims, to make a daily progress towards the land of everlasting happiness.

XX. It shows, that first Christ was made a sacrifice to God, and then a sacrament to us. Guild.

DISPARITY.

I. Our Passover shows he is come, and hath been crucified for us.

II. Christ spiritually feeds the soul.

III. But Christ, though he was slain, and became thereby spiritual food for our souls, yet he is no whit impaired thereby; but liveth and abideth for ever in perfect bliss and happiness, and remaineth as perpetual nourishment to his chosen.

IV. Christ is the Antitype and substance of it.

INFERENCES.

God gave special charge to the Israelites, concerning their eating the passover; He was greatly provoked by the neglect of it. "But that man that is clean, and is not on a journey, and forbeareth to keep the passover, even that man shall be cut off from his people," &c., Numb. ix. 13. What then will become of them who refuse to come to Christ, and eat of this spiritual passover? Also it may stir up such sincere and godly souls to look about them, and cause them to tremble, who live in the great neglect of coming to the holy Supper of our Lord. Surely there is as good ground and reason for you to obey the Lord Jesus in this ordinance, as there was for Israel to obey Moses in keeping the passover: nay, I may show much greater.

1. From the consideration of what the one was a sign of, and what the other shows forth, and is a sign of.

2. From the consideration of the excellency of Christ, whose law this is, above Moses, who received that law, and delivered it to Israel.

3. From the threats that are denounced against those who refuse to hear Christ in whatsoever he shall say to them. "If the word spoken by angels was steadfast," &c. "If they escaped not, that refused him that spake on earth; how shall we escape, if we turn away from him that speaketh from heaven?"

And for further motives consider,

1. The strict and positive injunction of Christ, "Do this in remembrance of me." He that said, "Do not steal, do not commit adultery," &c., "Repent, believe, pray always, be holy," &c., said, "Do this," &c.

2. It is a perpetual ordinance, till Christ come the second time. Paul received it from Christ, after his coming in Spirit according to his promise, &c. And the primitive saints continued in it after that time likewise; therefore the coming he spake of, must intend his second coming at the last day.

3. Consider the great need there is to remember Christ's death, and of those profitable instructions and blessings comprehended in this ordinance.

4. Is not the neglect of a known duty a great sin?

5. Is not this in effect to set light by Christ, and to cast contempt upon his commands, and in effect to say there is no need of them? What signifies, say some, the eating a little bread, and drinking a little wine? Wilt thou take upon thee to teach Christ, and exalt thy own wisdom above his, who is the most wise God?

6. Consider how faithful and ready the saints in former ages were, to walk in the commandments of God; and is it not left upon record to their everlasting commendation? "Moses did all things according to the pattern showed him in the mount," &c. "Zachariah and Elizabeth walked in all the commandments of the Lord blameless."

7. Dost thou know what spiritual blessings thou lovest by thy neglect hereof; is not loss of communion with Christ a great loss?

8. Is not universal obedience a demonstration of grace? "Then shall I not be ashamed, when I have respect to all thy commandments," Psal. cxix. 6. "If ye love me, keep my commandments," John xiv. 15.

9. Will not the thoughts of a wilful neglect of known and indispensable duties, be bad death-bed companions?

10. This preacheth the Gospel to the very sight of your eyes; is it not necessary to make use of all means God hath ordained for your establishment in the truth of the Gospel?

11. Will not omission of known duties exclude men and women the kingdom of heaven? read Matt. xxv. Is it not for sins of omission, that Christ will condemn and sentence many souls to eternal burnings in the great day?

METAPHORS, ALLEGORIES, SIMILES,

TYPES, ETC.

RELATING TO THE

HOLY ANGELS OF GOD,

AND THE

SOUL AND SPIRIT OF MAN.

Wherein the Nature, Order, Office, and Ministration of Angels is opened.

THE creatures of God are divided into invisible and visible: the invisible are spirits ασώματοι, asomatoi, without bodies; and by them we understand angels, because being in their nature incorporeal, they cannot be seen by human eyes. The visible are whatsoever things have existence in the visible world, whether simple or mixed bodies. In what notions metaphors are taken from good and evil angels, see our sacred Philology, book i. p. 99.

1. Angels then in their natures are spirits created of God.

2. Called ministers or Angels, to show their office.

Take Mr. Ainsworth's description of Angels, Gen. xvi. 17.

"Angels, so named of the Greek αγγελος, angelos, in Hebrew מלאך, Maleac, by interpretation a messenger or legate, one sent and employed in any work, whether of God, or man. And those sent of God were sometimes men, as Haggai is called the Lord's angel, or messenger, Hag. i. 13, and John Baptist, Matt. iii. 1, and generally the Lord's priests under the law, Mal. ii. 7; and Christ's ministers under the Gospel, Rev. ii. 1. 'Unto the Angel of the Church,' &c., that is, the minister or pastor of the Church. But in special, Angels are those heavenly spirits, and fiery flames, that are wise, 'Excel in truth,' Psal. ciii. 20. 'Which are all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister unto them who shall be heirs of salvation,' Heb. i. 7, 14. The Hebrew doctors' opinion of Angels is, that they are essential forms, created without any material substance or body. And whereas the prophet says, he saw an Angel like fire, and with wings, &c. It is also spoken of prophetic visions, and by way of dark parables. Also that the Angels are lower and higher than another; it is not in the highness of place, as when one man sits higher or above another; but as we speak of two wise men, which excel one another in wisdom, that that man is higher than this. Likewise that there are ten names that angels are called by, and accordingly ten degrees of them; and the tenth, called men, are the Angels which spake with the prophets, and appeared to them in visions, for which they are called men, as Maimon, sheweth in Misneh Jesudei Hatovah, chap. ii. That there are ten degrees of angels, the holy scriptures show not; but degrees there are, as the apostle mentioneth, Rom. viii. 38, Col. i. 16, 'Angels, principalities, powers, thrones, dominions, &c. 'Howbeit, we are warned not to intrude into those things which we have not seen,' Col. ii. 18. Sometimes the word Angel is given to Christ himself, who is the Angel of the covenant, and the Angel of God's face or presence, Isa. lxiii. 1. 'In whom God's name is,' Exod. xxiii. 21. Thus Ainsworth. And in another place he saith, 'That one of the two Angels that appeared to Abraham was Jesus Christ, whom Abraham called the Judge of all the earth, Gen. xviii. 2, 25, who is called Jehovah."

It is the opinion of some of the learned, that every particular saint hath an Angel to take care of him; which they gather from that passage, "Take heed ye despise not one of these little ones; for I say unto you, that in heaven their angels always behold the face of my Father," &c., Matt. xviii. 10. And from that in Acts xii. 15, "Then said they, it is his Angel." But others rather conclude, that the saints have many Angels to watch over them, and continually to minister to them. That the godly are under the guardianship of the holy Angels, is not doubted or questioned by any worthy writer.

THE HOLY ANGELS COMPARED TO WATCHERS.

"I saw in the visions of my head, and behold a Watcher." Dan. iv. 13.

"This matter is by the decree of the Watchers, and the demand by the word of the Holy Ones," Verse 17.

METAPHOR.

I. A Watcher, or Watchman, imports such as sleep not, or but little; their business is to watch, which they cannot do unless they keep themselves awake.

II. Watchers import such as have a charge committed to them, of great importance, which they are continually to look after. The Apostle speaking of the care of ministers, saith, "They watch for your souls," &c., Heb. xiii. 17.

magnificence. "I saw the Lord sitting on his throne, and all the host of heaven standing by him, on his right hand and on his left hand," 1 Kings xxii. 19.

2. They wait for his word, and do receive commandment from him.

3. They oft-times declare God's mind and will to men. Thus they were employed to give the law on mount Sinai, and to reveal God's mind to Abraham, to Hagar, to Lot, to Elijah, to the Virgin Mary, to the shepherds, to the apostles, to Philip, to Paul, to John, &c., Acts vii. 33, Gen. xvi. 7, and ix. 12, 2 Kings i. 3, Luke i. 26, Acts x. 3, i. 10, viii. 26, and xxvii. 23, Rev. i. 1.

4. To govern the kingdoms of the world; for it is not to be doubted, but God makes use of them upon this account. Hence they are called princes, yea, glorious princes, and are much above the kings and potentates of the earth, Dan. x. 13, Eccl. v. 8.

5. They are God's warriors, to execute his decrees whether of mercy, as 2 Kings vi. 17, or of judgment, 2 Sam. xxiv. 17, 3 Kings xix. 35, Rev. xvi. 7.

6. They are continually employed in praising God, crying, "Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of Hosts," Isa. vi. 3, Rev. iv. 8, and vii. 11, 12.

Secondly; In reference to the Church and people of God, they have a great charge committed to them, and much business and work to do. "He hath given his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways," Psal. xci. 11.

1. They are as nurses, to bear up and keep the godly from hurt: "They shall bear thee up in their hands, lest they dash thy foot against a stone," Psal. xci. 12.

2. They are as stewards, to provide for the godly in their need. How graciously was "Elijah fed by angels, with a cake baked on coals, and a cruse of water, when he was faint, and ready to die!" 1 Kings xix. 4—6.

3. They are employed as physicians, as appears by that passage, John v. 4.

4. As comforters in trouble. How sweetly was poor Hagar comforted by an Angel, when she said, "I will not see the death of the lad!" Gen xxi. 16. The like was the prophet Isaiah, Isa. vi. 6, 7. Nay, our blessed Saviour refused not to receive comfort from the angels who ministered to him, when he was in his bloody agony in the garden, Luke xxii. 43.

PARALLEL.

I. Angels are not subject to sleep, as men are: they always are awake, beholding the evil and the good, hence said to be "Full of eyes;" Ezek. i. 18.

II. Angels have a great charge committed to them, they are employed about great and weighty affairs; and that, first, in reference unto God; secondly, in reference unto saints; thirdly, in reference unto wicked men.

First. In reference unto God.

1. They are his courtiers, attending upon him continually for his honour, and to set forth his

5. They are employed as soldiers to guard them ; hence called God's host, Psal. xxxiv. 7, 2 Kings vi. 17.

6. They are encouragers of the saints in their duties : and the Angel said unto Elijah " Go down with him, be not afraid," &c., 2 Kings i. 15.

7. They are employed to rescue, and put the godly out of danger ; as appears in the case of Lot. So concerning Daniel, when he was in the lion's den, the Angels shut the mouths of the lions, so that they did Daniel no harm. The angel of the Lord opened the prison door, and brought Peter forth, and delivered him ' out of the hands of his enemies, Gen. xix. 16, Dan. vi. 22, Acts v. 19.

8. As prophets and instructors, to teach the saints. " And I heard a man's voice between the banks of Ulai, which called, and said, Gabriel, make this man understand this vision, &c. And he said, I will make thee know what shall be in the last day," &c. Dan. viii. 16, and ix. 22. They open and reveal hidden mysteries to the saints.

9. They rejoice with the godly at the conversion of sinners ; " Likewise I say unto you, there is joy in the presence of the angels of God in heaven, over one sinner that repenteth," Luke xv. 10,

10. They have a charge to convey the souls of the godly, when they die, through the territories of the prince of darkness, viz., the air, and carry them safe to heaven. " And it came to pass that the beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom," Luke xvi. 22.

11. To gather all the elect together at the last day.

12. To separate the evil from the good, the chaff from the wheat. " So shall it be at the end of the world, the angels shall come, and sever the wicked from the just," Matt. xiii. 49.

Thirdly : they have a charge committed to them, in reference to wicked men,

1. To blind and infatuate them, that they cannot see how to effect that mischief they would otherwise do.

2. To stop them in their career, that they cannot pursue their wicked purposes and designs ; as appears in Balaam's case, Numb. xxii. 26.

3. To destroy and cut off the ungodly, when they combine against the Church. One Angel smote in the camp of the Assyrians a multitude of men, 2 Kings xix. 35.

METAPHOR.

III. Watchers give warning of approaching dangers.

IV. Watchers are very useful, and oftentimes made a great blessing to towns and cities ; many imminent dangers by their means have been prevented.

Quest. But some may say, why doth God in the preservation of his people make use of the ministration of Angels ?

Answ. Not for any necessity, he is all-sufficient of himself to do all things for them : but to declare his abundant love to, and care for his children, in making more excellent creatures than themselves to be their keepers.

Object. But God's people often fall into danger, and many inconveniences ; how then are they attended and kept by Angels ?

Answ. They are delivered by them from many evils and dangers that they know not of : for as we have many devils about us, continually to do us mischief ; so we have a multitude of blessed angels continually about us, to keep and protect us, Psal. xci. 11.

2. If at any time God's children fall into danger, it is because they are out of their way, or rather God's way, and then the good Angels have no charge over them.

3. If they suffer in the custody of the angels, it is that they may be exercised, tried, and made better thereby : for the angels keep them from evil, or keep them in evil, and at last deliver them out of evil ; so that they are made gainers by all, according to that promise, Rom. viii. 28.

PARALLEL.

III. So the angels gave warning to Abraham and Lot, of the approaching judgment that fell upon Sodom and Gomorrah, and the cities about them, Gen. xix.

IV. Angels are a great blessing to the church and city of God, and every particular member thereof. How secure was the prophet, whilst he had those fiery chariots and horsemen round about him !

METAPHOR.

V. Watchers or watchmen go up and down to see what the state and condition of things is; they take strict observation of persons and things.

PARALLEL.

V. Angels go about, or rather fly up and down in the earth, to see what the state and condition of God's people more especially is. Hence they are said to have wings, which denote their swiftness in their work. "We have walked to and fro through the earth, and behold, all the earth sitteth still, and is at rest," Zech. i. 11.

INFERENCES.

I. What infinite grace and favour doth God manifest to his poor people, in giving his angels such a strict charge over them, and to cause such glorious creatures to watch and keep them day and night?

II. What honour also hath God conferred on his children hereby? every believer hath greater attendance, yea, a more glorious retinue, than the mightiest prince or monarch in the world.

THE HOLY ANGELS COMPARED TO THE MORNING-STARS.

"When the Morning-Star sang together," &c., Job xxxviii. 7.

STARS are taken two ways: first, Properly, secondly, Metaphorically.

Some understand by Stars in this place, the Stars which God hath set in the firmament of heaven, or Stars in a proper sense; others, as Mr. Caryl on Job xxxviii. page 81, observes, the holy Angels, which, saith he, he may be called Stars, or Morning-Stars, by a Metaphor, &c.

METAPHOR.

I. MORNING-STARS are full of beauty, bright, and glorious.

to resemble or seem like Angels. Though they have not a visible bodily beauty, yet they have a better beauty than any body.

II. Morning-Stars give light; they are not only beautiful, but shining. The chief Morning-Star, called Lucifer, signifies a light-bringer.

yet it shows that Angels are full of light, and therefore called Angels of light.

III. Stars are guides to mariners, by which they know how to steer a right course.

saved him from imminent danger. Abraham told his servant, God would send his Angel to guide, or prosper his way, Gen. xxiv. 40.

PARALLEL.

I. ANGELS are very beautiful creatures, their glory is wonderful. Hence Stephen's face was said to be as it had been the face of an Angel, Acts vi. 15; and very beautiful persons are said to resemble or seem like Angels. Though they have not a visible bodily beauty, yet they

II. Angels are not only very beautiful creatures, but also full of light. We read of an Angel in the Revelations, that the whole earth was lighted with his glory. This shows that Angels are very glorious and shining. Though I understand that is not spoken of a proper Angel;

III. Angels are and have been as guides to the saints, and spiritual mariners. They guided or gave direction unto Lot, to escape the flames of Sodom; and led Peter out of prison, and thereby saved him from imminent danger. Abraham told his servant, God would send his Angel to guide, or prosper his way, Gen. xxiv. 40.

THE HOLY ANGELS CALLED THE SONS OF GOD.

"There was a day when the Sons of God came and presented themselves before God," Job i. 6.

"And all the Sons of God shouted for joy," Job xxxviii. 7.

The Chaldee paraphrase is express, that the Sons of God here are the Angels: "The armies of Angels shouted for joy." And the Septuagint (as Caryl observes) are as clear for it, saying, "When all my Angels sung for joy." To this do most expositors agree.

Object. But some object that passage of the apostle, "To which of the Angels said he at any time, Thou art my Son?"

Ans. 1. Angels are not the Sons of God, as the Apostle there expresseth, i. e., as Christ is the Son of God, viz., by eternal generation. For so, "To which of the Angels said he at any time, thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee?" Jesus Christ is the Son of God from eternity.

2. Angels are not the Sons of God by regeneration, nor by adoption, as believers are. The holy Angels need not regeneration, they never fell from their first estate. Christ is not to them a Redeemer for their restoration, but only a Head for their confirmation.

But why Angels are called Sons of God, will appear in the following parallel.

METAPHOR.

I. A Son is the offspring of the father.

II. A Son is greatly beloved by the father.

III. Sons attend, honour, and wait upon their father; they are about his table, and at his command.

IV. Some are greatly dignified; they are near to their father, and have great power and authority in the family.

V. Sons serve their father cheerfully, willingly, and readily; they obey not as slaves or servants.

VI. Sons are like their father; they have some resemblance of him in nature and qualifications.

as can be conceived in this respect; God is the creating Spirit, they finite spirits: yet the Angels bear, as the learned observe, some resemblance to God in their essence, as well as in their qualification, and may in this respect be called the Sons of God likewise.

VII. And lastly, Sons imitate their Father. "Do good to them that hate you," saith Christ, "that you may be the children of your Father which is in heaven:" That is, imitate God, as some children do their fathers; carry it towards evil men, as God doth; and this will be an evidence that you are the Sons of God, and he will honour you with the title of his Sons.

PARALLEL.

I. Angels are the offspring of God; Adam was called the Son of God by creation; so may the Angels, because created by God.

II. Angels are greatly beloved of the Almighty.

III. Angels wait upon God, they stand about his throne, and are always ready to obey his command, and seek his glory.

IV. Angels are greatly dignified; they are very near to God, always beholding his face, and are mighty in power. Mr. Caryl saith, they are called Sons of God because of power, being called principalities, and powers, &c., Matt. xviii. 10.

V. Angels serve God with abundance of cheerfulness and willingness; they go about their work with a filial or Son-like cheerfulness and delight.

VI. Angels have some essential likeness to God. God is a Spirit, and incorporeal; the Angels are spirits in their nature, and incorporeal. Though the difference between God and them is as great as the difference between Spirit and matter, yet they are created by God, and are like him in some things. God is the creating Spirit, and they are created spirits: yet the Angels bear, as the learned observe, some resemblance to God in their essence, as well as in their qualification, and may in this respect be called the Sons of God likewise.

VII. Angels imitate God in mercy, in love and compassion, as also in their good works; their ways being all holy, just, and good, pure and righteous; and showing much kindness and tenderness to the children of men. They doubtless are patient towards the froward and undeserving mortals; they are of most excellent natures and dispositions. No creatures do imitate God so plainly and fully as they do; and from hence they may be called the Sons of God.

INFERENCES.

THIS may teach us to how carry ourselves towards God, our Father. We should labour to be like the Angels. Our Saviour hath taught us to pray, "That the will of God may be done on earth, as it is done in heaven," Matt. vi. 10. We who are God's Sons on earth, should imitate the Sons of God in heaven. We should serve God as cheerfully, and with the like alacrity of heart as the holy Angels; and labour not only to imitate the Angels, and be like them, but also to imitate God himself; for he hath set himself before us, for our direct and immediate example, Matt. v. 48.

And hereby God will not be ashamed to be called our God; he will not grudge us the honour and title of Sons, which, as it appears by this, is a most glorious dignity and privilege, even such an one as is conferred upon the holy Angels of heaven, &c.

THE HOLY ANGELS COMPARED TO AN HOST, OR ARMY.

"Jacob went on his way, and the Angels of God met him," Gen. xxxii. 1. "And when he saw them, he said, this is God's Host: And he called the name of that place Mahanaim," that is, two Hosts or camps, verse 2.

"And suddenly there was with the Angel a multitude of the heavenly Host, praising God," &c. Luke ii. 13.

ANGELS, so name of the Greek, αγγελος, Angelos, in Hebrew Maleac, messenger or legate, one sent or employed in any work, are in these scriptures called God's Host or Army; not that he needeth them to protect himself, or suppress his enemies, being infinitely stronger than all the armies he himself hath, and then what is the strength and force of all the armies of his enemies?

Therefore when God is said to have armies, it is either to signify, first, that he hath all things at his command, and is full of power: or, secondly, that although he can do all things by himself, yet he will use the agency of his creature to effect his purpose.

METAPHOR.

I. An Host or Army have a prince or general, who is the head of them.

II. An Host or Army consists of many companies, amongst which there are divers ranks and orders, and yet all in subjection to their prince, and chief leader.

hundred sixty-six, was the number of a legion; then the number of twelve legions was seventy nine thousand nine hundred ninety-two, a great Army: but how many more no man can say. Christ pitched upon a great certain number, to show, saith Mr. Caryl, he could have what number he pleased, if he did not call for them. "We are come," saith the apostle, "to an innumerable company of Angels." The Lord's camp is very great. "The chariots of the Lord are twenty thousand, even many thousands of Angels," Psal. lxxviii. 17. We read of many degrees or orders of Angels, which some account to be nine.

1. Cherubims, that is, Angels of knowledge, as St. Jerom interprets the word; but others from Cherub, a figure or image. Others from Chi, a note of similitude, and a Chaldean word which signifies Puerum et Juvenem, a youth. And so, as a learned writer observes, they were usually represented in the shape of a man, to show them to be intellectual creatures; of a young man, to express their vigour and strength; with wings, to declare their agility and swiftness. These we read were placed at the east end of the garden of Eden, with a flaming sword, Gen. iii. 24: and their figures were appointed to be placed over the mercy-seat, in the tabernacle and temple, Exod. xxv. 20.

2. Seraphims, the Angels of zeal. Their name is from an Hebrew word שרפים which signifies to burn, or burning, according to that of the Psalms, "He maketh his ministers a flame of fire," Ezek. x. civ. 4.

3. Thrones, which are royal seats of kings and monarchs, in their magnificence and glory.

4. Dominions, or lordships.

5. Principalities, denoting special and peculiar jurisdiction, Col. i. 16.

6. Powers, such as have right to execute authority by God's appointment, and not by his permission only.

7. Mighties.

8. Archangels, 1 Thess. iv. 16.

9. Angels, &c.

PARALLEL.

I. The Lord's Host, or Army of Angels, have a Prince or general, who is their Head and Leader, viz., the Lord Jesus Christ, who is called the Head of principalities and powers.

II. Angels, the Lord's Host consist of many companies or legions: "Thinkest thou, that I cannot pray to my Father, and he shall send me more than twelve legions of Angels?" Christ spake in the Roman phrase, who reckoned their armies by legions, as we by regiments. Six thousand six Others account but seven orders of Angels, and some but three. The holy scriptures doth not fully open and unfold the mystery of Angels, to us in this respect, therefore it is good for us, as I said before, not to be wise above what is written; though no doubt but there is a most excellent order amongst them. And probably there are different ranks and degrees of them, and yet all are in subiection to our Lord Jesus Christ, who is their Prince, and supreme Head, whom they all reverence, worship, and adore.

METAPHOR.

III. An Host or Army is raised to make war, and fight under the banner of their prince and sovereign, and many times do dreadful execution, and make great desolation in the earth.

mighty! Was it not this Host that came against Sodom and Gomorrah, and the cities about them, "We will destroy this place," Gen. xix. 13, 2 Kings xix. 35. One of these soldiers destroyed no less than an hundred fourscore and five thousand men in the camp of the Assyrians. What cause have the enemies of the Church to tremble, when they consider what a mighty and powerful Army is raised, and always in readiness at God's command to fall upon them! What is the power of the proudest monarch here below, when compared to the strength of the Lord's Host, or Christ's heavenly army!

IV. An Host or great Army sometimes breaks in upon a people that are secure, utterly destroying and spoiling them on a sudden.

V. An Host or mighty Army hath many slaughtering weapons; if one doth not execution, another will.

VI. An Host, or victorious Army, sometimes meet with great opposition, and are fiercely engaged by stout and sturdy enemies, that will not quickly yield, though at last they be forced to fly, being vanquished.

METAPHOR.

I. An earthly Host or Army, though ever so victorious at other times, may yet meet with their match, nay, be sometimes worsted.

II Soldiers of an earthly Host are mortal men, and may be put to the sword, or lose their lives by the hands of their enemies.

PARALLEL.

III. The holy Angels, God's mighty Host, are employed to fight his battles, and at his command to fall upon his enemies, when all terms of peace and reconciliation are rejected, and sinners, are grown incorrigible, &c. What fearful execution and desolation have they made in the world, when they have had commission from the Al-

IV. The Angels of God come upon the wicked enemies of Jesus Christ, and his Church, sometimes on a sudden; in one night was that great Host of the Assyrians destroyed. "When he cometh up unto the people, he will invade them with his troops," Hab. iii. 16.

V. So the Angels of God have many slaughtering weapons, or ways to destroy, sometimes by famine, sometimes by plague, sometimes by the sword, and sometimes make use of all these three together, against a people that God resolves utterly to destroy, Ezek. ix. 2.

VI. The holy Angels of God are sometimes opposed by evil Angels, who are fierce, sturdy, and cruel enemies to them. "And there was war in heaven: Michael, and his Angels, fought against the dragon, and the dragon fought, and his Angels, and prevailed not, &c. Rev. xii. 7.

DISPARITY.

I. The Lord's Host was never worsted. Though the evil Angels are mighty in power, and have been oftentimes too hard for the saints; yet they are not able to stand before the holy Angels of God.

II. The Angels of God are immortal spirits, and cannot sustain the least hurt or wound, much less be slain, in any wars they are engaged in against their enemies.

INFERENCES.

I What comfort may this administer to the godly! may I not say, with the prophet, "Fear not; for they that be with us, are more than they that be with them," 2 Kings vi. 16.

II. And as it affords comfort to the saints, it may serve to terrify sinners, and such especially as are persecutors of the Church of God. How sad is their condition, considering whom they make war against! Can they stand before the terrible God? God is their enemy, Christ is their enemy, and the Angels of heaven are against them, and their enemies likewise.

III. Bless God, you that are in covenant with him, for the sake of these helpers.

IV. This shows us also what great glory is conferred upon the Lord Jesus Christ, our blessed Mediator; he is the Head and chief Leader of all the glorious Angels; they are all at his command, and ready to engage in his wars; if he but speak the word, they come with slaughtering weapons in their hands, to execute his wrath and displeasure upon the world, Ezek. ix. 2.

THE HOLY ANGELS COMPARED TO THE FACES OF A MAN, OF A LION, OF AN OX, AND OF AN EAGLE.

"And every one had four Faces," &c. Ezek. i. 6, 10; that is, every one of the living creatures or Angels which the prophet saw in the vision.

Four particular Angels, as some conceive, which were chief over the rest of the whole host of Angels. Others, upon better reason rather understand it relates to the four parts of the world, east, west, north, and south; i. e. the work of Angels laid out in all those parts. See Mr. Greenhill on Ezek. p. 85.

Observ. 1. God employeth glorious intelligent creatures in his service, in the ways and workings of his power and providence in his world.

Observ. 2. That Angels are in all quarters of the earth, taking notice of men's works and ways; they perceive what is done in every place, by the just, and by the unjust. The consideration of which should make us carry ourselves wisely and holily at all times, and in all places.

"And every one had four faces."

- | | | |
|------------------------|--|--------------------------|
| 1. The face of a man. | | 3. The face of an ox. |
| 2. The face of a lion. | | 4. The face of an eagle. |

In some pictures, saith reverend Mr. Greenhill, you may see several faces so drawn that which way soever you look, a several face is presented: so here, before was the face of a Man, behind the face of a lion, on the right side the face of an ox, on the left side the face of an eagle. There is not a face, but is compared to the face of some principle creature. Man is the chief of all the rest, a lion is the king of wild beasts, the is the chief of the tame ones, and the eagle is the chief of the birds. To these distinctly.

I. THE FACE OF A MAN.

METAPHOR.

1. THE Face of a Man notes understanding and the excellency of reason, by which all human actions are managed.

standing creatures in heaven and earth. The woman of Tekoah said to David, he was wise according to the wisdom of an Angel of God, to know all things that are upon the earth, 2 Sam. xiv. 20; that is, he was very wise, as Angels are, to search out understanding, and discover things. Therefore Jerom thinks they are called cherubims, from their much knowledge; Cherubims, as it were, rabbies, and teachers of others. And this office some Angels have done. "Gabriel, make this man understand the vision." "I am come to make thee understand what shall befall thy people in the latter day," Dan. viii. 16. Angels, saith one, are good philosophers, they know the principles, causes, effects, life, motion, and death of natural things: they are great statisticians, and know the affairs of kingdoms. Dan. x. 13., saith Gabriel, I remained with the kings of Persia," &c. They are said to be full of eyes before and behind, because

PARALLEL.

I. ANGELS have got great knowledge and understanding. By their likeness unto man, is laid before us the rationality, knowledge, and understanding of angels. They are not ignorant creatures, but ipsæ intelligentiæ, the most under-they see what is past, and what is to come. Besides, they have much revealed to them by God, by Christ, nay, and understand many things by the Church, as concerning the mysteries of the Gospel; so Eph. iii. 10, 1 Pet. i. 12, "Which things the Angels desire," saith Peter, "to look into;" παραινέσαι, the word notes, bowing down to pry headfully into a thing. Cherubims were made looking down towards the mercy seat; so here, Angels look into the things of Christ, as it was there figured forth, "In whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge," Col. ii. 3. They have much experimental knowledge, arising from things done daily in the world, and in the Church; Angels love to be at the congregation, to meet the saints; they understand partly by their essence, and partly by species communicated to their understandings, as to ours, &c.

METAPHOR.

II. The face of a man hath much awe and majesty in it; nothing, as is observed by some Naturalists, carries more terror in it to sensitive creatures, than the Face of a Man.

III. The Face of a Man notes human affections, as Mr. Greenhill observes.

IV. The Face of a Man denotes beauty. How amiable and lovely are some Faces of mortal creatures to look upon! It is the seat, as I may say, of human beauty.

PARALLEL.

II. Angels are very majestic creatures; many have been greatly terrified and astonished at the sight of them. How was Manoah's wife, Sampson's mother, amazed at the sight of the Angel that appeared to her. "Then the woman told her husband, saying, a man of God came unto me, and his countenance was like the countenance of an Angel of God, very terrible," Judg. xiii. 6.

III. Angels are of a loving countenance, and most careful of Men; they have most dear affections to those they are sent to minister unto.

IV. Angels are very beautiful and lovely to behold; though they have, saith Mr. Caryl, no visible bodily beauty, yet their beauty far exceeds the beauty of mortals.—See Morning Stars.

II. THE FACE OF A LION.

A Lion is a creature of great strength, the strongest amongst beasts, as was said before; "He turneth not away for any," Prov. xxx. 40. "What is stronger than a Lion?" said the interpreters of Sampson's riddle, Judg. xiv. 18.

Angels are mighty in strength, Rev. xviii. 21. An Angel can hinder the blowing of the wind, stop the mouths of Lions, break iron chains, open prison doors, and make bars and doors of brass to fly. Hence they are called "mighty Angels," 1 Thess. i. 7. Who can stand before the Angels of God!

III. THE FACE OF AN OX.

I. An Ox accustomed to the yoke is very tractable, not stubborn, kicking and flying, like as untamed heifers are, "Ephraim is an Heifer that is taught, and loves to tread out the corn." An heifer taught delighting in her work, doth it willingly.

II. An Ox doth faithful service. Horses often deceive persons in their service, and throw their riders; but Oxen, either in plowing or carrying burdens, fail not, nor deceive their owners.

III. An Ox is a very patient and laborious creature. They labour hard, and carry heavy burdens; and yet though ever such hard service be put upon them, they quietly and with much patience bear it, and

I. Angels do the work of God willingly, with much delight; they hearken to the voice of his Word, they set about their work with much cheerfulness, they are very obsequious to God's commands. If he say, go, smite Herod for his pride, Balaam for his covetousness, David for his vain glory, Sennacherib for his blasphemy, and Sodom for its uncleanness, presently they go.

II. Angels are faithful in their ministrations, they fail not in the least particular. The Angel would not let John worship him. The Angel would not suffer Lot to linger in Sodom. They never betrayed their trust, as some of the saints have done, Rev. xxii. 8, 9.

III. Angels are patient in their ministration, though they meet with much opposition. "The prince of Persia," saith Gabriel, "withstood me one and twenty days," &c., Dan. x. 13. In the midst of all opposition, whether from men or devils, and great services, they are not at all impatient; though never seem to complain.

METAPHOR.

IV. Oxen are very useful creatures; much increase was brought in by them. No creature, saith Greenhill, is more useful to the support of a family, than the Ox; for of old all the Ploughing was done by oxen. See 1 Kings xix. 19. Job had oxen ploughing in the field, he had five hundred yoke of oxen, no mention being made of horses, Job i. 3. There was a severe law made against those that stole an Ox, Exod. xxii. 1. David makes it one part of the happiness of a commonwealth, that "the Oxen are strong to labour."

second time, without sin, unto salvation: "He shall come in the glory of his Father, with all his holy Angels." They shall attend him on the throne of judgment, and as officers execute his righteous sentence, viz., seize all condemned sinners, and cast them into the lake of fire and brimstone, &c. Angels are useful to the saints. We little think what great good we receive by the ministration of angels. See Watchers.

PARALLEL.

their work never end, Rev. v. 11, yet they never complain.

IV. Angels are very useful creatures; they are useful to God, they continually go on his errands, execute his judgments at the command of his mouth. They were useful to Christ in the days of his flesh; they proclaimed the joyful tidings of his nativity, Luke ii. 9—11; had the charge of him in his humiliation, whilst his conflict remained with the evil Angels; they ministered to him in his temptations, and when he was in his bloody agony; they declared and made known his resurrection. "He is not here, he is risen," Matt. xxviii. 6. They witnessed to his ascension, and to his second coming; "Ye men of Galilee, whystand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus which is taken from you into heaven, shall so come, as ye have seen him go into heaven," Acts i. 10, 11.

They shall come with him, when he comes the

INFERENCES.

This should instruct us, we should be like Angels in many respects.

1. When God commands, or calls upon us to do any service or duty, how ready ought we to be to do it! even say, with Samuel, "Here am I, speak, Lord; what thou commandest I will do it."

2. It should teach us to be faithful to the Lord, as the holy Angels are.

3. To be patient under burdens, reproaches, and all the oppositions we meet with.

4. To be serviceable to God, and to one another, in places and stations wherein God hath set us, &c. Angels in all they do, seek the glory of God, and the profit and the great good of the saints; let us in this imitate them.

IV. THE FACE OF AN EAGLE.

I. An Eagle hath a mighty quick sight; her eyes behold afar off; from the top of rocks, out of clouds, they are said to behold fishes swimming in the sea. So strong is the sight of an Eagle that she can a long time behold the sun with open and steadfast eyes.

II. Eagles are swift in their flight. Naturalists tell us, no bird flies more swiftly than the Eagle, 2 Sam. i. 23.

I. Angels are quick sighted; they, as you hear, have eyes before and behind, as if they were all eye; which notes the excellency of their sight, and knowledge of things. They soar aloft, stand before God; they are said to behold the face of God: "Their Angels always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven," Matt. xviii. 10.

II. Angels are swift creatures; their agility, speed, and swiftness is extraordinary, moving, saith one, like lightning, from one end of heaven to the other: compared therefore to "a flame of fire," Heb. i. 7; and said from hence also to have wings with which they fly," Isa. vi. 6. Their quickness or agility in motion proceeds from their spiritual nature, which is not subject to weariness; they cannot be hindered by any corporeal substance; they can pass over and through all impediments. And besides this their agility is much helped forward by their promptitude and readiness, propensity and zeal, to despatch their errand and ministry upon which they are employed. It is not here, saith Ayston, timor, but, amor addidit alas. Their swiftness is very necessary, saith Clark: 1. Because of the vast distance between heaven and earth, betwixt which they often pass and repass. 2. Because many of the saints, whose necessity requires present relief, live far asunder. 3. Because the devils are swift to do mischief, therefore they are swift to defend, succour, and do us good.

METAPHOR.

III. Eagles are fresh and lively always; age and sickness works not upon them, as upon other birds. The Eagle in her age, saith a great writer, is useful. Pliny saith, they never die with age, nor sickness, but by hunger; her upper bill groweth so much over the under, that she cannot open her mouth to take in sustenance, and so dies. Her age is said to be renewed by often changing of her feathers.

PARALLEL.

III. Angels never grow old, they are always strong and lively, they know no sickness, their service doth not wear them out. The Cherubims before the mercy-seat, which represented the Angels, were without beards, to shew their vigour, vivacity, and youthfulness. Men soon decay, their strength and activity many times on a sudden is gone. Sin hath brought this upon us; if man had not sinned, he had never decayed, but retained an immortal vivacity: Angels sinned not, and so retained their first liveliness.

INFERENCES.

FIRST, from hence we may infer, that Angels are fit for public and great service. They have four Faces, a man's, a lion's, an ox's, and an Eagle's; which show they have all that is requisite to great undertakings. They have wisdom to consult, to contrive, and manage the affairs of the world prudently: they have the strength of a lion, to execute; they have the willingness and faithfulness of the ox, to rejoice the heart of the commander, and patience to undergo the difficulties of their work, and usefulness of the public; they are quick-sighted, to discern and prevent the designs of enemies, and speedily to despatch much in a little time, and that with cheerfulness. This is meant by their four Faces; which notes their perfection, and fitness for service in all parts of the world: in regard of which they are said to have one Face before, and another behind, and one on each side. God sets forth their serviceableness by these creatures, both rational and irrational; they have the shapes of men, birds, and beasts.

Secondly, That suitable persons are to be employed in public and great service. God employs Angels in the government of the world, who are wise, trusty, strong, and speedy; and you know what men God calls for in the state. Exod. xviii. 21, viz., "Such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness;" and in the church, 1 Pet. v. 3, "Bishops must not lord it over God's clergy." They are not lords, but servants: they ought not like princes, to dwell in stately palaces, in pride and idleness; but daily to study, and preach God's holy word, and labour in God's harvest, like as an ox is faithful and laborious to his owner; not instead of preaching, and striving to build up God's house, plot and contrive ways to pull it down; and instead of feeding, undo and ruin such as are faithful in the land.

Thirdly, Angels are noble and glorious creatures, and yet disdain not to do service to them that are far beneath themselves. Man at first, when in his glory, was but a little lower than the Angels, Psal. viii. 5, but since he sinned, he is degraded, and fallen as low as hell; he hath a vile body, a defiled conscience, and a polluted soul; yet the Angels, that are styled gods, holy ones, elect, that are of the privy-counsel of heaven, these blessed creatures are not ashamed to serve and wait upon us, though we have the scent of the earth and hell about us, and do often grieve and offend them with our miscarriages; yet they despise us not, but cheerfully minister unto us. What pride is it then in men, that have parts, places, honour, greatness, grace, &c., not to stoop to those that are their inferiors! They have not more worth in them than an Angel, and Angels condescend to serve us; therefore let us "Not mind high things, but condescend to men of low estate, and not be wise in our own conceit," Rom. xii. 16.

Fourthly, There is one thing more remarkable touching their Faces, viz., the Faces were stretched upward; so Montanus, and others read it, "They looked up to him that sat upon the throne, which was Christ." The Cherubim's Faces, Exod. xxv. 20, 21, were towards the mercy-seat.

Fifthly, Observe, all creatures depend upon the Lord Jesus Christ. These Angels have the Face of men, lions, oxen Eagles, and look up to him. If there were nothing in it but this, viz., Angels in their own nature look up to him, it might convince us, that all inferior creatures do depend upon him, as well as those noble ones. But when they come in with the faces of other creatures looking up, it is a clear evidence that all depend upon Christ. "By him were all things created, that are in heaven and in earth, visible and invisible, whether thrones, or dominions, principalities, or powers. All things were created by him, and for him, and by him all things consist," Col. i. 16, 17.

Sixthly, We are to learn from hence to be heavenly-minded, with the Holy Angels to look up.

THE HOLY ANGELS COMPARED TO THE WIND, AND TO FLAMING FIRE.

—"Maketh his Angels spirits, and his ministers a Flaming Fire," Psal. civ. 4.

"And of the Angels he saith, who maketh his Angels spirits, and his ministers a Flame of Fire," Heb. i. 7.

SOME of the modern Jews deny there is any mention made of Angels, in Psal. civ. 4, affirming, that the subject the Psalmist treats of, are the Winds, with thunder and lightning, which God employs as his messengers and ministers, to do his will and pleasure. But that the Psalmist means the Angels, is evident from the design and scope of the words.

The consent of the ancient Jews lies against the sentiments of the modern; both the old translations, either made or embraced by them, expressly refer the words unto Angels; so Dr. Owen, on Heb. i., observes, as do the seventy; and so doth the Targum, thus rendering the place: "Who maketh his messengers or angels swift as spirits, and his ministers strong and powerful as a Flaming Fire." The supply of the note of similitude makes it evident that they understand the text of Angels, and not of Winds; and of making Angels as spirits, and not of making Winds to be Angels or messengers, which is inconsistent with their words.

The word שרפים doth usually denote the Angels themselves, and no reason can be given why it should not do so in this place. The apostle puts it out of doubt positively, saying, "And of the Angels he saith," &c. That the apostle speaketh not here of the nature and essence of Angels, but their dignity, honour, and employment, is evident; upon which account, saith our reverend author, he preferreth the Lord Jesus Christ before them.

Observ. "God sendeth his Angels like the Winds, or like a Flame of Fire.

METAPHOR.

I. The Wind is invisible, who can see it?

II. The Wind blows at God's command; he is said to "Hold the Wind in his fist."

III. The Wind is quick, piercing, and powerful in its operation, the cause of many gracious effects, though sometimes sent as a judgment.

DISPARITY.

I. Angels are invisible spirits; we are daily attended upon by them, but see them not.

II. Angels go at God's command, he hath them at his beck, Psal. ciii. 20.

III. Angels are quick, agile, and powerful in their working; and many great and glorious blessings, saints receive from their ministration, though sometimes sent as a scourge to nations, and particular persons, to execute God's displeasure, as on Sodom, &c.

FLAMING-FIRE.

I. A flaming Fire is of a burning quality.

II. A flaming Fire is of a consuming, destroying, and devouring nature.

III. A flaming Fire is a good defence in a howling wilderness,

I. Seraphims signify burning, noting that mighty zeal they are attended with, in doing God's will.

II. So have the Angels of God been to many of God's implacable enemies, as hath been hinted.

III. The Angels of God are a glorious defence to the Church, whilst in the wilderness of this

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

especially if it be round about such as dwell therein.

world, where they are daily surrounded by wicked men, who are compared unto beasts of prey. "The Angels of God encamp round about them that fear him," &c., Psal. xxxiv. 7.

INFERENCES.

I. This may comfort the godly, who dwell among blood-thirsty enemies; they are surrounded with a Flame of Fire, viz., the holy Angels of God.

II. Let ungodly ones tremble; can they stand before a Flaming Fire, and not be consumed? God can soon send his Angels to destroy them.

III. It should also stir up believers to act with much zeal and fervency in the work and service of God. The Angels for zeal and agility are like a Flame of Fire. We should do the will of God on earth, as the Angels of God do it in heaven.

THE HOLY ANGELS COMPARED TO HORSES.

"And Elisha prayed, and said, Lord, I pray thee open his eyes: and the Lord opened the eyes of the young man, and he saw; and behold, the mountains were full of Horses and chariots of fire, round about Elisha," 2 Kings vi. 17.

"I saw by night, and behold a man riding upon a red Horse, and he stood among the myrtle-trees that were in the bottom, and behind him were three red Horses, speckled, and white," Zech. i. 8.

By these Horses all expositors understand the holy Angels of God are intended. They are compared to Horses and chariots of fire, also to Horses of divers colours. These things seem very dark and mysterious.

I. We shall briefly, however, hint a few things why they may be compared to Horses.

II. Why to Horses and chariots of fire.

III. Why to red, speckled, and white Horses.

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

I. A Horse is a strong and very courageous and fearless creature; which God himself elegantly setteth forth. "Hast thou given the Horse his strength? Hast thou clothed his neck with thunder? Canst thou make him afraid? The glory of his nostrils is terrible. He rejoiceth in his strength. He goeth on to meet the armed man. He mocketh at fear, and is not affrighted; neither turneth he back from the sword," &c. Job xxxix. 19—24.

II. The Horse is a very useful creature, useful to carry burdens, and draw the chariots of princes; useful to ride on, useful for war, &c.

I. Angels are mighty in strength. One of them, saith an eminent writer, is stronger than all the world. They are called mighty Angels, or God's mighty ones, Angels of his strength. They are courageous, and void of fear; their necks may be said to be clothed with thunder! they turn their backs for none. They fear not the glittering spear, nor the shield. Who is able to engage or encounter with one of the glorious Seraphims, or Cherubims? Are any of the sons of the mighty a match for him? What was Alexander, or Julius Cæsar, or all the mighty champions that ever were, to the Angels of heaven?

II. Angels are exceedingly useful. See Oxen. They bear up the saints; they help, support, and carry them along in their journey to their everlasting home; they carry their souls into Abraham's bosom: "The beggar died, and was carried by the Angels," &c. The chariots and Horses of fire, that parted the two worthies, those princes of the prophets, and carried one of them to heaven were the blessed Angels of God, 2 Kings ii. 11, 12.

III. They are compared to Horses and chariots of fire, to show how fierce, agile, and swift they are in their motion, and how destructive and amazing to their enemies.

III. They are set out by red, speckled, and white Horses, to note the different work and office they are set about, whilst they are employed in the workings of providence, in governing the world.

1. Red, signifies the sufferings of the church, together with the blood and slaughter, or dreadful judgments, that Jesus Christ hath to execute on the world by the ministration of Angels, or a severe dispensation.

2. Speckled, shows a mixed state or dispensation of God's judgments mixed with mercy.

3. White, notes peace and prosperity to the saints, and the whole world, which will be produced by the Providence of God, after the bloody and mixed state of the Church is gone.

THE SOUL OF MAN COMPARED TO A SHIP.

"Which hope we have as the Anchor of the Soul," &c., Heb. vi. 19.

HERE observe two doctrines; one implied, the other expressed:

Doct. 1. The Soul of a believer, in the judgment of some divines, is and may fitly be compared to a Ship.

Doct. 2. Hope, that noble and precious grace of the Spirit, is and may fitly be compared an Anchor.

METAPHOR.

I. A Ship is a rare and curious piece of workmanship; it shows forth the excellent wit and invention of man.

II. A Ship is a very costly thing; a little will not build, rig, and fit out a Ship to Sea, especially if it be designed for a long and profitable voyage, as to the East Indies, or the like.

III. Some Ships are built for noble and eminent service, and are very profitable to the owners.

IV. He that builds and owns a Ship, doth usually commit the care and charge of her to another, who is to sail in her.

V. A gallant Ship that is bound for India, or for some noble and eminent service, is richly freighted, hath divers rare commodities in her, &c.

VI. A Ship ought to have a good bottom, or the danger is very great. Whatever she seems to be above deck, though never so stately and lovely to look upon; yet if her bottom be nought and defective, she will never make the voyage.

VII. A Ship cannot sail without wind or tide.

VIII. A Ship ought to have a wise and skilful pilot.

PARALLEL.

I. The Soul of a believer is a very rare and curious piece of God's workmanship. The body and face of a man doth magnify the wisdom and glory of the Creator; but what is the body without the Soul? it is but the cabinet without the jewel.

II. The Soul of a believer is a very costly and chargeable thing: God hath parted with much treasure in building, or rather rebuilding and fitting of it out, to sail through the ocean of this world, to the haven of eternal happiness; and parted with his Son, with his Spirit, his grace, his Gospel, &c., 1 Pet. i. 18, 19.

III. The charge that God hath been at in building and rebuilding the Soul of a believer, is for renowned and eminent service, viz., the glory of God, and everlasting happiness.

IV. So doth God Almighty commit the charge and care of our Souls to us. We are employed but as stewards, or deputy-owners, and must be accountable to God, if our Souls are lost. Deut. iv. 9, Prov. iv. 23.

V. So the Soul of a believer, that it may make a blessed and glorious voyage, is most richly stored and freighted with the precious gifts and graces of God's Holy Spirit, &c.

VI. So ought the Soul of a Christian to have a good foundation. If not built upon Christ, if not sincere and firm at heart, what profession he may make, though never so glorious, will prove fruitless and vain; the soul is in danger, and will for ever unavoidably be lost.

VII. The Soul of a believer cannot sail heavenwards in any service, duty, or suffering, without the sweet movings and gales of God's Spirit.

VIII. So ought the Soul of a believer; for if it hath not Christ to guide and steer its course for it, it is impossible to escape the danger of the sea of trouble and temptation.

METAPHOR.

DISPARITY.

IX. A Ship needeth often to be repaired, being very subject to spring a leak.

X. A Ship is tossed upon the rough and tempestuous waves, and has its ups and downs; and seldom hath rest or quiet, till she has made the voyage.

XI. A Ship is in danger of being lost, and that many ways, viz., by rocks, by sands, by the raging waves, and by springing of a leak, &c.

XII. A Ship hath a compass by which she is steered from place to place, without which no man can or dare go to sea.

XIII. A Ship is exposed to great danger of being robbed, by pirates, of all her treasure.

Soul puts out false colours : 2 Cor. xi. design is blood and slaughter, and treacherously to ruin and spoil the Soul. The flesh is another secret sea-thief, and the world : yea, and sin is as arch a pirate as any.

XIV. A Ship often meets with sudden storms; and a good mariner doth not only look for them, but also provides and prepares for them.

XV. It is a rare thing to see a Ship sail along before a fresh and prosperous gale.

XVI. A Ship is sometimes becalmed.

XVII. It is a wonder to see a Ship to live in a tempestuous and boisterous sea.

XVIII. Some Ships suffer shipwreck, are lost, and sink down to the bottom.

XIX. A Ship must be well looked to, and kept very clean within and without, or she will not sail with any speed.

XX. A Ship hath its anchor, and if in the midst of a storm it be rightly cast, and takes good hold, the Ship is safe.

IX. So doth the Soul of a Christian need often to be repaired by prayer and repentance, or else it will fall under sad and fearful decays. The Soul is likewise compared to a leaking vessel, Heb. ii. 1.

X. Thus it is with the Soul; it is often tossed upon boisterous and tempestuous seas of temptations, sometimes transported up into heaven, and then by and by down again to the depths, and all the billows of God's wrath seem to run over it, Psal. cvii. 23, 28.

XI. The Soul also is in great danger. Never was Ship in more eminent hazard than the Soul of a Christian, and that many ways, viz., by the rocks and mountains of great opposition, the sands of despair, and raging waves of persecution, besides, the leaks occasioned by indwelling sin, Zech. iv. 7.

XII. So likewise the Soul must have a compass, unto which we are with care and diligence to look, and to be well-skilled in all the points thereof, viz., the Word and Spirit of God, 2 Pet. ii. 19.

XIII. So is the Soul of a believer by that cursed pirate Satan, who sometimes transforms himself into an angel of light, and to trepan the 15 : pretends himself a friend, when his whole design is to ruin and spoil the Soul. The flesh is another secret sea-thief, and the world : yea, and sin is as arch a pirate as any.

XIV So must the Soul expect to meet with a dreadful tempest or hurricane. The winds will rise, and a storm will come upon the Ship where Christ is. David was aware of these dangers, and saw how to prevent and escape sinking, Psal. lv. 8.

XV. It is a rare and lovely thing to see a Soul carried swiftly along in the work and service of God, being under the powerful influences of a fresh and prosperous gale, or wind of the Spirit.

XVI. So, alas! it is too often with the Soul of a poor Christian.

XVII. It is a wonder of mercy to see how the Soul of a saint should live, be preserved, and abide with its head above water, in such a disquiet and tempestuous world as this is.

XVIII. So doth the Soul of many a professor, that sets out with much seeming hopes of heaven, suffer spiritual shipwreck, and sink down to hell, 1 Tim. i. 19.

XIX. So must the Soul be washed, and kept exceeding clean, within as well as without, or it will go but slowly or heavily towards the haven of future happiness; the mire and the clay, or scum and filth of this world, is so apt to obstruct its way, as it passes heaven-ward.

XX. The Soul hath its anchor, hope. "Which hope we have as the anchor of the Soul, both sure and steadfast," Heb. vi. 19. This Anchor been rightly cast upwards, within the vail, in the midst of the greatest danger, the soul is safe.

METAPHOR.

I. A Ship is a lifeless thing built of timber, &c., by Man.

II. A Ship is a thing visible to corporeal eyes.

III. A Ship may utterly be destroyed, nay, and cannot continue long.

IV. A Man that has a Ship, may lose it, yet may not be undone; he may have his loss repaired, and may get another Ship better than the former.

V. A Ship, though it have ever so good a pilot, may miscarry, and be cast away; such winds and storms may arise, or by means of unknown rocks, sands, and shoals it may hit upon.

DISPARITY.

I. The Soul of Man is a spirit created by the Almighty: "He hath formed the spirit of Man within him," Zech. xii. 1.

II. The Soul of Man is an invisible substance, i. e. it cannot be seen with fleshly eyes.

III. The Soul of Man cannot lose its being; that will live when the body is dead, either in joy or misery; it can never be destroyed, so as to die, and lose its being, or suffer annihilation, Matt. x. 28.

IV. That Man that loses his Soul is undone for ever. No Man hath more than one Soul, and he can have no more: that being cast away, he is eternally ruined; there is no reparation for him, no making up his loss.

V. The Soul of a believer that hath Christ for its pilot cannot miscarry; the sea and the winds obey him; "he makes the storm a calm, so that the proud waves are still," he will carry it through all the dangers it meets with, and bring it to its desired haven, Psal. cvii. 28, 29, 30.

INFERENCES.

I. Is the Soul compared to a Ship, that passeth through the troublesome ocean, or tempestuous seas? then this shows us, that the life of a Christian is attended with many difficulties, and imminent dangers, and that we must expect to meet with sudden storms in our passage to our eternal port. Every believer must resolve to sail through the strait's mouth, and expect to meet with those cursed Algerines, those mortal enemies of Christians, I mean the spirits of darkness, if ever he would arrive at the holy land.

II. Let it be the care and endeavour of every Man and woman, to set out in this voyage for eternity, whilst the wind of the Spirit blows. "My Spirit," saith God, "shall not always strive with Man."

III. Caution. And let each Man from hence take heed of his Soul, this spiritual Ship, lest it be lost. He is but entrusted with it, and must give an account to the great Owner. Besides the Soul is of very great worth, far beyond all the Ships that sail on the ocean; nay, what value may be compared to the Soul of Man, the excellency of which we shall briefly hint here, to caution all to take heed.

1. It is capable of divine meditation and contemplation, by which means we come to know there is a God. "For the invisible things of him, from the creation of the world, are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead," &c., Rom. i. 20. "I am fearfully and wonderfully made, marvellous are thy works; and that my soul knoweth right well," Psal. cxxxix. 14. By prying into the nature and glory of the work, the Soul findeth out the being, nature, and glory of the Workman.

2. It is capable of divine inspiration. "But there is a spirit in Man, and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth him understanding," Job xxxii. 8. Also of comfort and delight, and that when multitudes of thoughts are or would be disturbing the mind.

3. It is capable of divine impression, to receive the image of God, as it is rebuilt in Christ Jesus, Psal. xciv. 19.

4. It is capable of divine union and communion with God.

5. Nothing save God himself can satisfy it. The Heathen by this found out the excellency of the Soul.

6. The Soul must needs be excellent, if we consider the excellency of the body, which is but the house or tabernacle of the Soul. If the cabinet be of so great a value, and so curiously wrought; then of what transcendent value must the Jewel be!

7. The price paid for it was no less than the precious blood of Christ, the redemption of the Soul is therefore precious; its value and excellency from hence is beyond comparison, Psal. xlix. 8, 9.

8. The robes it weareth are a demonstration of its great worth and excellency. O what cost and charge is God at, (to speak with a holy reverence,) in clothing and adorning of it; he puts on robes of righteousness, and garments of salvation, and adorns it with ornaments of grace, and divine virtue.

9. From the charge given us to look to it, and keep it: "Only take heed to, and keep thy Soul diligently," Deut. iv. 9.

10. From Satan's hunting after it, to destroy it.

11. That it is exceeding excellent, appears, in that the martyrs parted with all, rather than they would wrong, defile, and lose it for ever.

12. It is more worth than all the world; "What shall it profit a Man to gain the whole world, and lose his own Soul?" Matt. xvi. 26.

13. It is immortal; it cannot die, or be annihilated. "Fear not them that kill the body, but cannot kill the Soul," Matt. x. 28.

THE SOUL OF MAN COMPARED TO A CANDLE.

"The spirit of Man is the Candle of the Lord," Prov. xx. 27.

METAPHOR.

I. A Candle is made to give light unto men in the night.

II. A Candle must be lighted, or receive light from some other light, or it will light no man.

III. A Candle is but a small light, in comparison of the light of the sun; it giveth light but a little way, and discovers things but darkly.

1. The Spirit of Man will discover unto him, by the help of the visible creation, that there is a God that made the world; but it cannot discover that there is a Redeemer, who died to save the world, which the Gospel doth, Rom. i. 20.

2. The Spirit of Man will discover Man's duty in morals, to do as he would be done unto; but it cannot teach him in all things his duty towards God, viz., his divine laws and institutions, and how he ought to be worshipped.

3. The Spirit of Man will convince him of some sins, but it will not convince him of sin, because he believeth not in Jesus Christ; for this the Spirit of truth, and glorious Gospel only, convince men and women of.

4. The Spirit of Man discovers to him that he must die; but it cannot discover to him, without the light of the written word, a resurrection.

IV. A Candle is oftentimes put out.

IV. So is the light or Candle of the wicked. God in a way of judgment, when men have abused their light and knowledge they have had of him, giveth them up to vile affections, as he did the Gentiles, so that they sin without control; conscience is seared, and asleep as it were, and reproveth them no more. "The Candle of the wicked shall be put out," Prov. xxiv. 20.

INFERENCES.

I. This reproves those that say, the light which is in every Man that cometh into the world, is God, Christ, and the Holy Spirit; whereas it is evident it is Man's Spirit, and called but the Candle of the Lord, and in itself no more than the light of Man's natural conscience.

II. It reproves them also for saying, it is sufficient to make known or discover unto men all things that are necessary to salvation; and that they should have known by the light within, all things which the holy scriptures declare of Christ, and the mysteries of the Gospel, if the scriptures had never been written. Which is easily detected: (1.) By considering of that great darkness, that is in those Heathen nations and people that have not the written word of God, concerning Christ and salvation; for though they have the light of this Candle, viz., the light of their own natural consciences, yet know nothing of Christ, who was born of the blessed Virgin, nor of his death and resurrection. (2.) By considering the absolute necessity there is of Gospel-revelation, and ministration, to make known to men those glorious mysteries, according as it is held forth in divers places of scripture; for if man's chief and only teacher were within him, what need was there for Christ to ordain and send forth his apostles and ministers, to preach the Gospel to the world? and why is faith said to come by hearing the word preached? (3.) They are disproved by this, viz., they cannot make known any of those other things which Christ did, that were not written.

III. From hence we may perceive what the substance is, which the light of Man's Spirit will do; it searches all the inward parts of the belly, i. e. makes known the very thoughts and intentions of the heart unto him, and reproves him, for not living up to the light God hath afforded him.

IV. What fools are they, these things considered, who plead for a Candle-light, and choose rather to be lighted and directed by it, when the sun is risen, and shineth clearly, blessed be God, in our horizon.

CONSCIENCE A WITNESS.

"I speak the truth in Christ, I lie not, my Conscience bearing me Witness in the Holy Ghost," &c. Rom. ix. 1.

"If our Hearts condemn us, God is greater and knoweth all things," 1 John iii. 20.

"Their Conscience in the mean while accusing or excusing, in the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ, according to my Gospel," Rom. ii. 15, 16.

Conscience is in these scriptures called a Witness. We shall,

1. Show what Conscience is.

2. Run the parallel.

First, Conscience is a natural power, with which God hath endued the soul of man by creation; for his comfort, if he walk uprightly; or for his torment, if he walk in evil ways. We do not imagine, that conscience came not into the world until Adam's fall; for this were to suppose Adam in paradise to be a man without Conscience. Conscience indeed, as an accuser and condemner, came not in until then; for as long as Adam obeyed the commandments of God, there was no cause that Conscience should accuse him; but as soon as he had sinned, Conscience flew in his face.

Secondly, Conscience we (1.) say is a natural power, which the soul of man hath," &c. Now, saith Mr. Lockier, whether this power be in the understanding only, or partly in the understanding, partly in the will, I find controverted amongst the learned; some speak of it as a distinct faculty. This power we speak of, I conceive, saith he, to be a reflect act of the practical understanding only transcendentally. (2.) By the power of the Holy Ghost. St. John confirms that it is a reflect act of the practical understanding only, where speaking of this power in the soul, he saith, "And hereby we know that we know him, if we keep his commandments," 1 John ii. 3, that is, as if you should say, We do view our ways by the Word of God, which is an act only of the understanding; and finding them to be in some measure level with the holy rule, we have this comfortable reflection back upon ourselves, that our faith is not a fancy, but a faith that works by love, and also sincere and saving. Paul confirms the second, that it is a reflect act of the understanding transcendentally seconded by the power of the Holy Ghost: "My Conscience bearing me Witness in the Holy Ghost:" that is, my conscience transcendentally seconded and assisted by the Holy Ghost, doth strongly testify to my soul, that I am full of bowels towards my kinsman after the flesh, and could do anything, or suffer anything for their good. The order according to which the Holy Ghost strikes in with Conscience is this;

The understanding makes a double proposition, one grounded in the word of God, the other in the heart of man; as thus: "He that keepeth the commandments of God, truly loves God ; but I do keep the commandments of God. This is grounded in the heart of man, and then draws a conclusion from both, therefore I do love God truly. This conclusion, whilst holy, and drawn from divine premises, to wit, the Word of God, and true grace in the heart, the Spirit of God strikes in with the soul in making of it, and assists the weak soul, so that he concludes with strong confidence, he is sincere, or loves God in truth ; and not only secretly assists, but seconds him, and saith the same thing to man that his own Spirit doth : "The Spirit beareth witness with our spirits, that we are the sons of God," Rom. viii. 16. If the premises be corrupt which the understanding makes, (for the heart makes propositions suitable to the light that is in the intellectual part) then the devil, that lying spirit, strives in and seconds the soul in that corrupt conclusion, which he collects from corrupt principles concerning himself, thereby to ruin and undo the soul in ignorance and unbelief.

Thirdly ; This faculty, or natural power, called Conscience, only appertaineth to men, and not to any irrational creatures. Brutes want reason, and therefore are not capable subjects of Conscience ; yet against reason and conscience men oftentimes do worse than a beast.

Fourthly ; conscience is a natural power in man, which compares his ways and thoughts by some rule ; and according as his ways agree or disagree with that rule, so answerably doth it bear witness with or against him.

If the understanding be enlightened with truth, to wit, the Word of God, then Conscience compares the ways of a man by a perfect rule. But if the understanding be enlightened with natural or moral principles only, then Conscience compares a man's ways according to those principles only, and so by an imperfect rule.

So far Mr. Lockier, and others, as to what Conscience is.

METAPHOR.

I. A Witness gives in testimony according to his light, or that knowledge he hath of things ; and if he hath a perfect knowledge of this or that he speaks and testifies, his testimony is good, and ought to be received.

of a guilty person. And on the other hand, it may, for want of a clear light and understanding, condemn such as it should clear. And hence many that are very wicked and vile, both in practice and principle, are very confident that their state and condition is good, and their poor deluded souls are peremptory many times, and wiser in their own conceit, than seven men that can give a reason. In them is fulfilled that of the apostle, "Their minds and Consciences are corrupt." And on the other hand, for want of a little light, some good men by the testimony of their Consciences are ready to condemn themselves, and give up all their hope, notwithstanding their being justified and accepted by Jesus Christ.

II. A Witness therefore must be thoroughly examined, to find out how or by what means he comes to know this or that he gives testimony of.

and by the clear light of which it ought at all times to give in its testimony, either for or against a man. Saul thought he ought to have done many things against the name of Jesus of Nazareth ; his heart did not witness against him, when he consented to Stephen's death, because his Conscience wanted light, it had not perfect knowledge of things : and hence he saith, that "What he did, he did it ignorantly, in unbelief," 1 Tim. i. 13. But should another man, who knew Jesus of Nazareth was the Son of God, and those persecuted people were the people of God, have done so, Conscience would have been Witness against him, and have flown in his face, yea, condemned him for it, without repentance, to the lowest pit of hell.

III. A good Witness, one that hath perfect knowledge of all things

PARALLEL.

I. So Conscience gives in testimony according to that light and knowledge that is in the understanding, for it only speaks and makes propositions according to its light ; if it be misguided by Satan, or corrupt nature, or false principles, its testimony is not good, nor to be regarded, but deceives and abuses the soul, as a false Witness doth, who appears to speak in the behalf of a guilty person. And on the other hand, it may, for want of a clear light and understanding, condemn such as it should clear. And hence many that are very wicked and vile, both in practice and principle, are very confident that their state and condition is good, and their poor deluded souls are peremptory many times, and wiser in their own conceit, than seven men that can give a reason. In them is fulfilled that of the apostle, "Their minds and Consciences are corrupt." And on the other hand, for want of a little light, some good men by the testimony of their Consciences are ready to condemn themselves, and give up all their hope, notwithstanding their being justified and accepted by Jesus Christ.

II. So must a man strictly examine his own Conscience, how it comes to have knowledge of things, of which it either accuseth, or excuseth ; for this ought always to be received as an undoubted truth that the Word of God is the very rule and guide by which Conscience should be steered,

III. So a good Conscience, I mean a Conscience rightly enlightened by the Word of God, if

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

laid to a man's charge, if he can make it out that he is wronged, how is such a Witness to be valued !

Witness to be valued by a Christian !
mony of our Conscience," 2 Cor. i. 12.

IV. A good and faithful Witness will speak the whole truth, and clear the matter, so far as he knoweth, or can speak to it, upon all occasions.

V. A good and faithful Witness will not be bribed or daunted, but speak in behalf of a man who is falsely accused, and to the utter shame and conviction of the guilty person.

VI. A just and impartial Witness is greatly dreaded by a wicked and guilty person.

how ! some from the horror that ariseth from hence have hanged themselves, and others, cut their own throats, and some have several other ways laid violent hands upon themselves.

VII. A great and faithful Witness, who hath perfect knowledge of things, and will not be bribed, who can and will as it is believed, and found by experience, speak fully to a cause, though it be to the utter shame and ruin of all guilty persons, is many times grievously abused by malicious men, who hate that their abominable deeds should be brought to light, or laid at their doors ; nay, not only so, but some have been stifled, strangled, and traitorously murdered ; as the ever renowned Sir Edmund Bury Godfrey was by bloody Papists, the 12th of October, 1678, whom they knew could witness many things against them to detect their cursed and never-to-be-forgotten hellish plot.

VIII. It is a very great wickedness, to lay violent hands, or treacherously to abuse and stifle the king's faithful Witnesses, especially when called to give in their evidence in matters of great moment, wherein the honour and sovereignty of the king is greatly concerned.

it give in testimony for a man, that his heart is sincere, and his life holy, and that he truly loveth and feareth God, notwithstanding the false charge of the enemy ; how is the testimony of such a hence Paul saith, " This is our rejoicing, the testi-

IV. So a good and well-guided Conscience will speak all the truth, and clear the matter between God and the soul, so far as he hath light ; and will deceive no man or woman, if they do but hearken to him.

V. So Conscience, rightly guided by God's Word, will speak peace to a godly and sincere person, let who will condemn him ; and will speak terror to the wicked and impenitent sinner, let who will speak peace and comfort to him. Conscience will deal plainly, if it may be heard, and be not stifled, or put out of a capacity of bringing in its testimony.

VI. So Conscience, who is an impartial Witness is greatly dreaded by some ungodly souls. O how fain would they fly from those terrible accusations of their own consciences, if they knew such as the wickedness of men, they endeavour to stifle it, and sear its tongue with hot irons ; nay, and put out its eyes ; nay, so far as they can, they endeavour to murder it, that it may not be able to Witness against them any more, but that they may sin without controul. Of these the apostle speaks : " Who being past feeling, have given themselves over unto all manner of lasciviousness, to work all uncleanness with greediness," Eph. iv. 19. " Having their Consciences seared with a hot iron," 1 Tim. iv. 2.

VII. So poor Conscience, who is known and daily found to be a true and faithful Witness, one that will not be bribed or corrupted by frowns or flatteries, who knoweth all the secret lusts, pride, malice, treasons, thefts, adulteries, that lie in the heart, and all manner of wickedness, that vile sinners are guilty of, and layeth it daily to their charge, is hated, and much struck at ; nay, such is the wickedness of men, they endeavour to stifle it, and sear its tongue with hot irons ; nay, and put out its eyes ; nay, so far as they can, they endeavour to murder it, that it may not be able to Witness against them any more, but that they may sin without controul. Of these the apostle speaks : " Who being past feeling, have given themselves over unto all manner of lasciviousness, to work all uncleanness with greediness," Eph. iv. 19. " Having their Consciences seared with a hot iron," 1 Tim. iv. 2.

VIII. So it is a great and horrible wickedness for any soul or sinner to go about to stop the mouth of, or treacherously to abuse poor Conscience, who is the great Witness of the King of heaven and earth, in this lower court, and that in matters wherein his honour, and glorious right and sovereignty, is much concerned ; nay, not only his Witness, but judge to sit upon the bench, to hear and determine all causes, if rightly informed, according to the great law-book of the Gospel, and to pass sentence of life and death, or to acquit and discharge.

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

IX. A Witness is required to speak the truth, when he comes before a court of judicature, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; and he that is a true Witness will do it. And hereby many times most horrid evils are brought to light, and publicly detected; yea, secret things are discovered, that the guilty person thought would never have been known, which makes him ashamed and confounded for ever.

Then men shall be forced to confess their secret adulteries, murders, treacheries, and self-revenge; together with all their bloody and black combinations, conspiracies, and hellish plots, carried on in secret cabals, managed by ungodly Papists, or others, notwithstanding all their oaths of secrecy; Conscience, if it come not to light before, will in that day lay all open before the eyes of men and angels, to the shame and eternal confusion of all ungodly ones.

X. A just and impartial Witness, that clearly and very fully giveth in testimony against a person, in a fair trial, finally stops his own mouth, and the mouths of all others, and leaves the cause clear, for the judge to pass sentence against him.

accusing or else excusing one another, in that day when God shall judge the secrets of all men by Jesus Christ, according to my Gospel," Rom. ii. 15, 16. And hereby all the mouths of unbelievers will be stopped, and they all be found guilty before Christ.

IX. So Conscience in the day of judgment will speak the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. Though now oft-times it be blinded, and at a great loss, for want of light, or by being misguided, it gives in false testimony, and quits the guilty, and condemns the innocent; but in that day it will recover such perfect light and knowledge, that it will decide the cause clearly the right way, and will by this means bring to light all the hidden things of darkness, 1 Cor. iv. 5, even all those cursed abominations of the heart, all secret things, that it and God were only privy to, and will lay open all the horrid evils that have been done in the dark.

X. So the consciences of wicked men, in the great day, will give in such clear and full evidence against them, touching all the evils they shall then be charged with by the just Judge of heaven and earth; that all flesh shall for ever be silenced, and God shall be clear when he judgeth. "Which show the works of the law written in their hearts, their consciences also bearing Witness, and their thoughts in the mean while ac-

INFERENCES.

I. THESE things being considered, it may stir up all persons to take heed how they act at home and abroad, when they go out, and when they come in, when they lie down, or rise up, because Conscience observes all that is said or done, nay, is privy to all thoughts of our hearts, and one day will witness for us, or against us.

II. Let Christians, whatever they do, labour to keep a good Conscience. A good Conscience is better than a good name; it is better than a good trade, it is better than a good estate. And for further motives to this needful duty,

1. Consider, Conscience keeps a register of all thy thoughts, words, and actions; what you forget, and is quite gone out of their memories, is set down in the book of Conscience.

2. Consider, Conscience is a Witness, an impartial witness, an accuser of evil; and though it lie still a great while, it will rouse up at last, and with its cruel charges and accusations harass the soul: as in the case of Joseph's brethren: "And they said one to another, verily we are guilty concerning our brother, in that we saw the anguish of his soul, when he besought us, and we would not hear; therefore is this distress come upon us," Gen. xlii. 21.

3. Conscience is not only a Witness, but a judge, and hath power to condemn the wicked and the guilty soul; it sits upon the throne, as God's attorney-general to award life or death, as the states and conditions of men are. "If thy heart condemn thee, God is greater," &c., John iii. 20, 21.

4. Conscience doth often the work and office of a tormentor; woe to them that fall into its enraged hands here, but much more sad will it be with them whom it shall torment in hell. It is it that is "the gnawing worm that never dies, where the fire shall never be quenched," Mark ix. 44. But,

5. There is no bearing in this world the pain and torment of an accusing Conscience. Tiberius the emperor, was so followed with grief and horror by his own Conscience, that he confessed in the senate-house he suffered death daily; and Charles the ninth of France, that monster of mortals, after the dreadful massacre, could never endure to be awakened in the night without music, such was the dreadful anguish and horror he found in his own Conscience. Francis Spira also may be here recited among the rest, whose Conscience terrified him at that rate, that the account of his fearful case is left to posterity. It was Conscience that put Judas into such an amaze, and forced him to hang himself, after he had betrayed our blessed Saviour. And many other examples, both ancient and modern, we meet with, both of men and women, that have destroyed themselves, as not being able to bear the cruel torments of an accusing Conscience: and others from hence have confessed their guilt, and so delivered themselves into the hands of justice.

6. That man can never have good days, that keeps an evil Conscience.

7. On the other hand, he that hath a good Conscience needs never be sad, nor can he be without good days; for as trouble and horror of Conscience is the greatest trouble, so peace of Conscience is the greatest joy. That man can never want music, saith Mr. Caryl, that speaks in consort, and is harmonious with himself. A good Conscience is the poor man's riches, and the rich man's chiefest jewel, a jewel worth keeping. It is, saith one, the best pillow to sleep on, and the best dish to feed on. "A good Conscience is a continual feast," Prov. xv. 15, so the Geneva translation. A good Conscience with a dinner of herbs, is all varieties; but a bad Conscience makes all feasts and pleasures like the hand-writing on Belshazzar's wall, Dan. v. 5.

8. Labour to get and keep a good Conscience, because an evil one spoils all the good and best actions of thy life: it renders thy prayers sinful.

9. Consider, Conscience is privy to all thou thinkest, knoweth what evil hath been done by thee in private, seeth all the evil thou hast committed, and all the good thou hast omitted the doing of; and one day, if evil, it will lay all open before the eyes of God, angels, and men, and come in as a Witness, to charge and condemn thee for ever, Rom. ii. 15. O therefore get a good Conscience.

10. Take heed how thou carriest thyself towards Conscience, because it hath a regal power in thy soul, a commission either to accuse or excuse: and if it condemn thee as an unbeliever, or as a false hypocrite, by the light and authority of God's Word, God will also, assuredly, condemn thee, unless thou repent, in the great day, 1 John iii. 20.

11. Consider what a glorious mercy it will be, to have such a friend as Conscience Witness for thee, when thou art wrongfully accused and condemned by men. This was that which bore up Job, and holy Paul, in their troubles. "My heart shall not reproach me," &c., Job xxvii. 6. "This is our rejoicing, the testimony of our Conscience," 2 Cor. i. 12.

Quest. Some possibly may enquire here, How a good Conscience may be known, or what characters may be given of it?

Ans. I shall give you some rules to judge of a good Conscience, both negatively and positively.

First, Negatively.

1. A blind, ignorant, and misguided Conscience is not a good Conscience. Some think that God concerns not himself with their actions, take no notice of their hearts, words, or lives. Others think that God is made up wholly of mercy, and tremble not at his justice, and so conclude it is an easy thing to get to heaven. One that I have heard of, said, That if it were as easy to get the riches of this world, as it was to get heaven, he would not care; or to that effect: not remembering that it is as hard to enter into the kingdom of heaven, especially for rich men, as it is for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, Matt. xix. 24, and that the righteous scarcely shall be saved, 1 Pet. iv. 18. Others think, that those men are fools that make such a stir and ado about religion, thinking that is the best religion that is easiest to the flesh, and is most free from outward trouble; whereas the scripture saith, that "Whosoever will live godly in Christ Jesus must suffer persecution," 2 Tim. iii. 12. Some think the laws of men must be their rule in all matters of faith and religion; and whatever magistrates command, must be done, &c.

2. A drowsy and sleepy Conscience is not a good Conscience. A Conscience that is not thoroughly-awakened, will let a man alone in sin; such can sleep upon the brink of the greatest danger, though they be just falling into the gulph of eternity; yea, can sleep under the most awakening ministry; though hell fire be thrown, as it were, in their very faces, yet Conscience giveth them not one jog.

3. A guilty Conscience is not a good Conscience, when Conscience flies into a man's face for this or that sin, some horrid pollution or other, loved, and lived in, Tit. i. 15.

4. A seared Conscience, a Conscience that hath no feeling in it, is not a good Conscience.

5. A despairing Conscience is not a good Conscience. Such as think their sins are greater than God can or will forgive, notwithstanding Christ hath said, "All sins and blasphemies against the Father and the Son shall be forgiven unto men," Matt. xii. 31; and those that believe not there is life for them in Christ, make God a liar.

Secondly, Positively.

1. That man hath a good Conscience, that walks uprightly and faithfully to his light, according to what he knoweth. If he hath only a natural light, and walks up faithfully to that, then he hath only a natural good Conscience; there is moral sincerity spoken of the holy scriptures, as well as godly sincerity. Abimelech in this respect had a good Conscience: "In the sincerity of my heart, and innocency of my hands, have I done this," Gen. xx. 5.

Here I might show how a natural good Conscience may be known from a Conscience evangelically and spiritually good; take two or three hints.

(1.) He whose Conscience is only naturally good, is usually a proud man; "Lord, I thank thee, I am not as other men," &c., Luke xviii. 11. Such seek their own glory, they sacrifice to their own net, and burn incense to their own drag; all centres in self, the principle of their action is self. A saint, when his gifts are highest, his heart is lowest; when his spirit is most raised, his heart is most humble.

(2.) A man that hath only a natural good Conscience, his great endeavour is to still the noise, and stop the mouth of it; but never looks to have the guilt removed, and filth washed away by Christ's blood; he seeth no need of a Saviour: "I was alive once without the law," &c., Rom. vii. 9. He is like a child that hath got a thorn in his flesh, who wipeth away the blood, but taketh no notice or thought how to get out the thorn. If bare performance of duties, whether natural or divine, will still or quiet the Conscience, the Conscience is but naturally good.

2. When Conscience compares a man's ways by the perfect rule of God's word, by which he walks, and finds it agreeable thereto.

3. An evangelical good Conscience findeth a man as careful of his duty towards God, as he is of his duty towards man; and as careful of his duty towards man, as of his duty towards God. "Herein do I exercise myself, to have always a Conscience void of offence toward God, and towards man," Acts xxiv. 16.

4. An evangelical good Conscience always stirs up to obedience and conformity to God's word, from the sight of the excellency of it, and purity that is in it: "Thy word is very pure, therefore thy servant loveth it," Psal. cxix. 140.

5. He hath a good Conscience, whose conviction and trouble for sin is universal, when it is deep, when the Spirit searcheth into the bottom: "Come, saith the woman of Samaria, see a man that hath told me all that ever I did." "And they were pricked in their hearts," John iv. 29, Acts ii. 37.

6. He hath an evangelical good Conscience, who is troubled for sin, not simply because of shame, or because of inward guilt, or fear of punishment, but because God is and hath been offended, his Spirit grieved, and his soul defiled, and made unlike God, his trouble ariseth from the sense of the heinous nature of sin.

7. When Conscience findeth that no conviction, either of sin or duty, is slighted by the soul, but tenderly nourished, Psal. cxix. 80.

8. When a man will suffer any punishment or loss, before he will offer violence to his Conscience, and sin against God.

9. When Conscience cannot find any sin hid, spared, borne with, or connived at in the soul, no sweet morsel under the tongue.

10. When Conscience finds a man the same in private that he is in public; and that he is not of a pharisaical spirit, doth nothing to be seen of men, or for vain glory's sake.

11. When Conscience cannot find any duty or ordinance, which the soul is convinced of to be neglected, though he be exposed to reproach thereby. To obey God in baptism, is called the answer of a good Conscience; Conscience calls for obedience to this, and to all other ordinances of the Gospel, when convinced of them.

12. And lastly; when Conscience beareth testimony to a soul, that it loveth God and Jesus Christ above all things in this world, &c. "He that hateth not father and mother, &c., cannot be my disciple:" that is, if he hath not a lesser love to them; for the lesser love in scripture is called a hatred, which our Saviour openeth in another place, "He that loveth father and mother more than me, is not worthy of me; and he that loveth son or daughter more than me, is not worthy of me," &c. "Yea doubtless, I account all things but loss," &c., Phil. iii. 8, 9, 10.

Quest. How shall a man get and keep a good Conscience?

Ans. 1. He must get his heart sprinkled with the blood of Christ. "Let us draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith, having our heart sprinkled from an evil Conscience," &c., Heb. x. 22. See that you experience that the blood of Christ hath as effectually purged your Consciences from dead works, as the blood of bulls and goats sanctified to the purifying of the flesh, Heb. ix. 14.

2. He must take heed of all such things as offend his Conscience; Conscience is a very tender thing, the smallest thing will make it bleed.

3. He must take heed of evil and corrupt principles; an erring Conscience is not a good Conscience.

4. Labour to sit under a soul-searching ministry.

5. Take heed of vain glory, and all secret evil; Conscience pryeth into thy most inward thoughts; beware of speculative sin.

6. Labour to keep thy tongue. "Whoso keepeth his mouth, and his tongue, keepeth his soul from trouble."

7. Labour to bring thy heart into every duty; beware of hypocrisy.

8. Do not grieve or offend thy Conscience in anything; though the matter may be in itself lawful, yet thou must not do it, if thou hast a doubt in thy spirit about it: "He that doubteth is damned," Rom. xiv. 23, that is, condemned in his own Conscience. But much more take heed of doing that which is by all owned to be utterly unlawful.

9. Labour in all acts to be sincere. Conscience hath power to give in testimony concerning thy integrity; if thy heart be unsound, and not upright, Conscience will soon discover it, and reproach thee for it, and thou wilt not be able to hold out to the end: and sad will it be to have thy own Conscience witness against thee, when thou comest to lie on a sick bed; an evil Conscience will be a bad death-bed companion.

O how doth this reprove those that sin, and regard not the checks and rebukes of their own hearts! Conscience in the great day will be more than ten thousand witnesses against them.

METAPHORS, ALLEGORIES, SIMILES, TYPES, ETC.,

RELATING TO THE

CHURCH OF GOD.

THE CHURCH CALLED THE CITY OF GOD.

- "Glorious things are spoken of thee, O City of God, Selah,"* Psal. lxxxvii. 3.
"There is a river, the streams whereof shall make glad the City of God, the holy place of the tabernacle of the Most High," Psal. xlv. 4.
"We have a strong City," &c., Isa. xxvi. 1.
"Look upon Zion, the City of our solemnity," &c., Isa. xxxiii. 20.
"And they shall call them the holy people, &c. And thou shalt be called a City sought out, not forsaken," Isa. lxii. 12.
"Ye are a City set on a hill, that cannot be hid," Matt. v. 14.

In these places of the holy scriptures, Sion, or the Church of God, is called a City. Sion was a fort or mount in Jerusalem, and the temple was built upon it; hence the church of the Jews was called, as some conceive, by this name Zion, because there they assembled: but after, it was a name or title given to the Church, whether Jews or Gentiles. "Ye are come to mount Sion, to the City of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem," Heb. xii. 22. God's people may be called by the name of Sion, or Jerusalem.

1. Because we were naturally like Jerusalem, the forts of the Jebusites, viz., sinners and enemies to God.
2. Because by grace we are overcome and conquered, like as Jerusalem was, by the true David.
3. Because the Church is fortified by the Almighty for his own use, and chief place and residence in this nether creation.
4. In respect of her renown and glory. As Jerusalem was renowned above all Cities, so God's Church is now above all people and societies in the world.
5. Because it is viewed and gazed upon by all strangers; she may well be compared to a looking-glass, as Zion signifies.
6. In respect of her laws; for as the law and public worship were at Jerusalem; so Christ's laws and public worship are maintained in the Church. Hence God is said to love the gates of Zion, more than all the dwelling-places of Jacob, Psal. lxxxvii. 2.

Observe. The saints, or Church of God, is the city of God, or may fitly be compared to a City.

In opening of this metaphor, we shall show the nature, trade, government, privileges, and glory of the City of God.

METAPHOR.

I. A City is a place built by men, for a people to inhabit, or dwell in.

PARALLEL.

I. The Church is built by Christ, for a habitation for God: "Upon this rock will I build my Church," &c., Matt. xvi. 18. "In whom ye are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit," Eph. ii. 22.

METAPHOR.

II. A City is usually compassed about with walls, that it may thereby become more safe and secure to dwell in, and some cities have two or three walls, to make them more impregnable.

so the Lord is round about them that fear him," &c., Psal. cxxv. 2.

Secondly; The protection of the holy angels: "The angels of the Lord encamp round about them that fear him," &c., Psal. xxxiv. 7.

Thirdly; God in an extraordinary manner, is as "A wall of fire round about her," Zech. ii. 5; every one of his attributes is a gracious defence to the Church.

III. Some Cities are bravely situated, they are built upon a hill.

IV. A City is built of many materials, and in it are many buildings or houses, set in rare uniformity, curiously joined and compacted together.

and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief Corner-stone: in whom all the building fitly framed together, groweth to an holy temple in the Lord: in whom ye also are build-ed together for an habitation of God, through the Spirit," Eph. ii. 19—22. "Jerusalem is builded as a city that is compact together," Psal. cxxii. 3.

V. A City hath its particular laws, institutions, and customs, by which it is governed.

VI. A City hath a supreme governor in it, who rectifies all disorders and confusions, that otherwise would be therein, considering the multitude of its inhabitants.

VII. A City hath, besides the chief governor and principal magistrate, divers inferior officers for administration of justice, and well-governing thereof.

VIII. A City hath some special trade belonging to it, by which its inhabitants are enriched.

IX. Many Cities have merchants in them, who trade into remote parts of the world, and fetch their merchandize from afar.

Church is by Solomon compared to merchant's ships. See Merchant's ships. Saints have, like other merchants, their correspondent Jesus Christ, who makes glorious returns of all they venture, or send to heaven: for every duty rightly performed, he makes returns of mercy; for tears of godly sorrow, he returns them the oil of joy. "Thou wilt," saith holy David, "put my tears into thy bottle." By which means the spiritual citizens grow rich in faith, hope, experience, &c. See the Parable of the Merchant-man.

PARALLEL.

II. The Church of God hath strong walls about it. "We have a strong city; salvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks," Isa. xxvi. 1. The Church hath a threefold wall about it.

First; The wall of God's providence. "Hast not thou made a hedge (or wall) about him?" Job. i. 10, "As the mountains are round about Jerusalem;

&c., Psal. cxxv. 2.

The angels of the Lord encamp round about them that fear him," &c., Psal. xxxiv. 7.

Thirdly; God in an extraordinary manner, is as "A wall of fire round about her," Zech. ii. 5; every one of his attributes is a gracious defence to the Church.

III. The Church of God is famous upon this account: "Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth is mount Zion; on the sides of the north, the city of the great King," Psal. xlviii. 2. "Ye are as a City set upon a hill," Matt. v. 14.

IV. The Church of God is built up of many living stones, consisting of divers particular societies, or spiritual houses. "Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the saints; and of the household of God: and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief Corner-stone: in whom all the building fitly framed together, groweth to an holy temple in the Lord: in whom ye also are build-ed together for an habitation of God, through the Spirit," Eph. ii. 19—22. "Jerusalem is builded as a city that is compact together," Psal. cxxii. 3.

V. The Church of God also hath special laws, institutions, and customs belonging to it, (by which it is in all things governed,) which are contained in the holy scripture, the great charter and statute book of the Church.

VI. The Church of God is not without a good government, and a supreme magistrate, viz., the Lord Jesus Christ, who is the chief Judge and Law-giver, or Head of this spiritual corporation.

VII. So the Church of God hath inferior officers under Jesus Christ, which the citizens by the appointment of Christ are required to substitute and ordain, to govern and keep all things in good order. "And he gave some apostles, and some prophets, and some evangelists, and some pastors and teachers," &c., Ephes. iv. 8—12.

VIII. The Church or City of God hath a spiritual trade belonging to it, which all the citizens do and always ought to follow, by which they are also greatly enriched.

IX. The saints or citizens of Zion are all merchants, who trade daily to heaven; they fetch their blessed merchandize from thence; "Our conversation is in heaven," Phil. iii. 20. Hence the Church is by Solomon compared to merchant's ships. See Merchant's ships. Saints have, like other merchants, their correspondent Jesus Christ, who makes glorious returns of all they venture, or send to heaven: for every duty rightly performed, he makes returns of mercy; for tears of godly sorrow, he returns them the oil of joy. "Thou wilt," saith holy David, "put my tears into thy bottle." By which means the spiritual citizens grow rich in faith, hope, experience, &c. See the Parable of the Merchant-man.

Now touching the trade, traffic, or merchandize of this city, upon which its wealth and prosperity doth wholly depend, take what follows :

First. Their trade is heavenly. "Wherefore, holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the Apostle and High-priest of our profession, Jesus Christ," Heb. iii. 1, 2. And as they are all merchants, and use one trade, so they all deal with one and the same Benefactor, from whom they have quick returns; they fetch their goods from afar. Something touching the excellency of the trade of the city of God, I shall hint in a few particulars.

Secondly. As touching her commodities, or the merchandize which her citizens deal in.

First, Negatively.

1. They are not prohibited goods.
2. They are not counterfeit goods.
3. They are not temporal and corruptible goods.

Secondly. Affirmatively, and more directly, they are,

1. Soul-enriching commodities, things that are of very great worth and value. "The merchandize of wisdom is better than the merchandize of silver, and the gain thereof than fine gold," Prov. iii. 14.

2. They are needful things, such things as we cannot be without. Some things that merchants of a city deal in, and fetch from afar, though they are of great value, yet we may very well submit, and live comfortable without them, as pearl, and precious stones, &c. But there is an absolute necessity of all those things the citizens of this city trade in and for.

3. They are such commodities as will make the nations and persons that buy them happy for ever; and indeed there is no true happiness without them.

Quest. What is the traffic of this city of God?

Answ. The first thing that I shall mention, is the truth; this she offers to sale: "Buy the truth, and sell it not," Prov. xxiii. 23. The Church is called "The pillar and ground of truth," 1 Tim. iii. 15. Truth is only to be found in this city, or in the warehouses of the citizens of Zion, viz., the word of God, and the hearts of believers.

The second thing, is a soul-converting Gospel, and blessed ordinances, "The law goeth forth of Zion, and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem," Micah iv. 2.

The third thing they deal in, are the gifts and soul-enriching graces of the Spirit, hope, love, humility, &c. Things of very great worth.

The fourth is justification; every true sinner makes it his business to get this precious treasure.

The fifth thing is the peace of God, which passeth all our understanding, one of the rarest commodities in the world.

The sixth thing is, union and communion with God. "That which we have seen and heard, declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us; and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ," 1 John i. 3.

The seventh thing is, peace of conscience: "Herein do I exercise myself, to have always a conscience void of offence, towards God, and towards men," Acts xxiv. 16.

The eighth thing is, sanctification, or a holy life; they who trade not in this commodity, are none of the true sons and citizens of Zion.

Ninthly. The pearl of great price, worth more than ten thousand worlds.

Tenthly. The last thing that I shall mention is, eternal life, a crown of glory that fadeth not away, 1 Pet. i. 4.

METAPHOR.

X. A City whose commerce lies principally in a foreign trade or merchandizing, hath usually a navigable river belonging to it, by which means their commodities, or those goods they deal in, are brought home to their very doors; as we see by experience. What

PARALLEL.

X. The City of God, whose trade lies in spiritual merchandize fetched from afar, hath a most glorious river belonging to it, which may indeed be said to run through every street thereof, viz., the Holy Spirit, and Word of God. The Spirit in several places of Scripture is called a river, and by means of these blessed streams are all divine and sacred commodities, which the infinite profit doth the river Thames yield this famous City! and what would its trade be worth, were it not for it?

METAPHOR.

be impoverished and undone. It is the Holy Spirit that enriches and cheers the hearts of all gracious souls. "There is a river, the streams whereof make glad the City of God, the holy place of the tabernacle of the Most High," Psal. xlv. 4. It may not be amiss here to consider,

1. From whence this river comes. See River, under the third Head of Metaphors.
2. The nature of the waters.
3. The divers streams thereof.

First; The river comes, 1. From a rock, Numb. xx. 8, 11. This rock was first smitten, and then the water came out abundantly.

2. It comes from an infinite inexhaustible fountain; it is said to "proceed from the throne of God and the Lamb," Rev. xxii. 1.

Secondly; Touching the nature of this river; though we have spoken of it under the third Head of Metaphors, yet we will touch a little upon it here. It hath besides other properties of spiritual water, these divers qualities,

1. It will heal all the diseases of the inward man; it will soften, and make very tender and pliable, and break in pieces a hard heart.
2. It will cure the soul of spiritual blindness; nay, it will open the eyes of him that was born blind.
3. It will infallibly cure all spiritual consumptions, that spiritual waste or decay of faith, love, zeal, hope, &c., which seizeth sometimes upon many Christians.
4. It will bring down the swelling of pride, and make a man very humble, and little in his own eyes; the more of the Spirit the more humble.
5. It will cure all manner of spiritual deadness or deafness, making a man very lively and diligent to hear good counsel and instruction, as Lydia experienced, Acts xvi. 14.
6. It is good against the tremblings of the heart, and will make a man bold and courageous in the cause of Christ, in evil times. "We cannot but speak the things which we have both seen and heard," Acts iv. 20.
7. It is an excellent remedy to purge out all noxious and evil humours of the soul, from whence many distempers flow, making a man sound at heart, and holy in life.
8. It will effectually restore a lost appetite, and make a man relish well the food of God's Word, causing it to be sweeter to him than honey, or the honey-comb, Psal. exix. 103.
9. It will preserve from the plague of sin, of what sort soever it be, though a Christian be amongst infected persons every day.
10. It will revive a fainting and drooping spirit.
11. It will set and make whole all broken bones, as David and thousands others have found by experience.
12. It will cure the leprosy, and all old running ulcers, and also all fresh wounds of the soul, though ever so deep, stinking, and loathsome.
13. It is good against weakness of the hands, and feebleness of the knees, 1 Thess. v. 14.
14. It is sovereign good against spiritual barrenness, making the godly to bring forth much fruit, 2 Pet. i. 9.
15. It will clear the sight, and make a man see afar off.
16. It infallibly cures the sleepy disease, or the spiritual lethargy of the soul, so that they shall not sleep as others do, 1 Thess. v. 6.
17. It cures all diseases of the tongue and mouth, and an unsavoury breath, that common sign of a foul stomach, James iii. 5, 6.
18. It cures all spiritual lameness; it causeth a lame man to leap as an hart, and never halt any more between two opinions, Isa. xxxv. 6.

PARALLEL.

godly deal in, brought home to their very doors, viz., gifts, graces, pardon, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost, &c., which are very excellent merchandize. And were it not for this river, what would become of this City? we should soon

METAPHORS, ALLEGORIES, SIMILES, TYPES, ETC.,

RELATING TO THE

CHURCH OF GOD.

THE CHURCH CALLED THE CITY OF GOD.

- "Glorious things are spoken of thee, O City of God, Selah,"* Psal. lxxxvii. 3.
"There is a river, the streams whereof shall make glad the City of God, the holy place of the tabernacle of the Most High," Psal. xli. 4.
"We have a strong City," &c., Isa. xxvi. 1.
"Look upon Zion, the City of our solemnity," &c., Isa. xxxiii. 20.
"And they shall call them the holy people, &c. And thou shalt be called a City sought out, not forsaken," Isa. lxii. 12.
"Ye are a City set on a hill, that cannot be hid," Matt. v. 14.

In these places of the holy scriptures, Sion, or the Church of God, is called a City. Sion was a fort or mount in Jerusalem, and the temple was built upon it; hence the church of the Jews was called, as some conceive, by this name Zion, because there they assembled: but after, it was a name or title given to the Church, whether Jews or Gentiles. "Ye are come to mount Sion, to the City of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem," Heb. xii. 22.

God's people may be called by the name of Sion, or Jerusalem.

1. Because we were naturally like Jerusalem, the forts of the Jebusites, viz., sinners and enemies to God.
2. Because by grace we are overcome and conquered, like as Jerusalem was, by the true David.
3. Because the Church is fortified by the Almighty for his own use, and chief place and residence in this nether creation.
4. In respect of her renown and glory. As Jerusalem was renowned above all Cities, so God's Church is now above all people and societies in the world.
5. Because it is viewed and gazed upon by all strangers; she may well be compared to a looking-glass, as Zion signifies.
6. In respect of her laws; for as the law and public worship were at Jerusalem; so Christ's laws and public worship are maintained in the Church. Hence God is said to love the gates of Zion, more than all the dwelling-places of Jacob, Psal. lxxxvii. 2.

Observe. The saints, or Church of God, is the city of God, or may fitly be compared to a City.

In opening of this metaphor, we shall show the nature, trade, government, privileges, and glory of the City of God.

METAPHOR.

I. A City is a place built by men, for a people to inhabit, or dwell in.

PARALLEL.

I. The Church is built by Christ, for a habitation for God: "Upon this rock will I build my Church," &c., Matt. xvi. 18. "In whom ye are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit," Eph. ii. 22.

METAPHOR.

II. A City is usually compassed about with walls, that it may thereby become more safe and secure to dwell in, and some cities have two or three walls, to make them more impregnable.

so the Lord is round about them that fear him," &c., Psal. cxv. 2.

Secondly; The protection of the holy angels: "The angels of the Lord encamp round about them that fear him," &c., Psal. xxxiv. 7.

Thirdly; God in an extraordinary manner, is as "A wall of fire round about her," Zech. ii. 5; every one of his attributes is a gracious defence to the Church.

III. Some Cities are bravely situated, they are built upon a hill.

IV. A City is built of many materials, and in it are many buildings or houses, set in rare uniformity, curiously joined and compacted together.

and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief Corner-stone: in whom all the building fitly framed together, groweth to an holy temple in the Lord: in whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God, through the Spirit," Eph. ii. 19—22. "Jerusalem is builded as a city that is compact together," Psal. cxxii. 3.

V. A City hath its particular laws, institutions, and customs, by which it is governed.

VI. A City hath a supreme governor in it, who rectifies all disorders and confusions, that otherwise would be therein, considering the multitude of its inhabitants.

VII. A City hath, besides the chief governor and principal magistrate, divers inferior officers for administration of justice, and well-governing thereof.

VIII. A City hath some special trade belonging to it, by which its inhabitants are enriched.

IX. Many Cities have merchants in them, who trade into remote parts of the world, and fetch their merchandize from afar.

The Church is by Solomon compared to merchant's ships. See Merchant's ships. Saints have, like other merchants, their correspondent Jesus Christ, who makes glorious returns of all they venture, or send to heaven: for every duty rightly performed, he makes returns of mercy; for tears of godly sorrow, he returns them the oil of joy. "Thou wilt," saith holy David, "put my tears into thy bottle." By which means the spiritual citizens grow rich in faith, hope, experience, &c. See the Parable of the Merchant-man.

PARALLEL.

II. The Church of God hath strong walls about it. "We have a strong city; salvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks," Isa. xxvi. 1. The Church hath a threefold wall about it.

First; The wall of God's providence. "Hast not thou made a hedge (or wall) about him?" Job. i. 10, "As the mountains are round about Jerusalem; &c., Psal. cxv. 2.

Secondly; The protection of the holy angels: "The angels of the Lord encamp round about them that fear him," &c., Psal. xxxiv. 7.

Thirdly; God in an extraordinary manner, is as "A wall of fire round about her," Zech. ii. 5; every one of his attributes is a gracious defence to the Church.

III. The Church of God is famous upon this account: "Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth is mount Zion; on the sides of the north, the city of the great King," Psal. xlviii. 2. "Ye are as a City set upon a hill," Matt. v. 14.

IV. The Church of God is built up of many living stones, consisting of divers particular societies, or spiritual houses. "Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the saints; and of the household of God: and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief Corner-stone: in whom all the building fitly framed together, groweth to an holy temple in the Lord: in whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God, through the Spirit," Eph. ii. 19—22. "Jerusalem is builded as a city that is compact together," Psal. cxxii. 3.

V. The Church of God also hath special laws, institutions, and customs belonging to it, (by which it is in all things governed,) which are contained in the holy scripture, the great charter and statute book of the Church.

VI. The Church of God is not without a good government, and a supreme magistrate, viz., the Lord Jesus Christ, who is the chief Judge and Law-giver, or Head of this spiritual corporation.

VII. So the Church of God hath inferior officers under Jesus Christ, which the citizens by the appointment of Christ are required to substitute and ordain, to govern and keep all things in good order. "And he gave some apostles, and some prophets, and some evangelists, and some pastors and teachers," &c., Ephes. iv. 8—12.

VIII. The Church or City of God hath a spiritual trade belonging to it, which all the citizens do and always ought to follow, by which they are also greatly enriched.

IX. The saints or citizens of Zion are all merchants, who trade daily to heaven; they fetch their blessed merchandize from thence; "Our conversation is in heaven," Phil. iii. 20. Hence the Church is by Solomon compared to merchant's ships. See Merchant's ships. Saints have, like other merchants, their correspondent Jesus Christ, who makes glorious returns of all they venture, or send to heaven: for every duty rightly performed, he makes returns of mercy; for tears of godly sorrow, he returns them the oil of joy. "Thou wilt," saith holy David, "put my tears into thy bottle." By which means the spiritual citizens grow rich in faith, hope, experience, &c. See the Parable of the Merchant-man.

Now touching the trade, traffic, or merchandize of this city, upon which its wealth and prosperity doth wholly depend, take what follows :

First. Their trade is heavenly. "Wherefore, holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling, consider the Apostle and High-priest of our profession, Jesus Christ," Heb. iii. 1, 2. And as they are all merchants, and use one trade, so they all deal with one and the same Benefactor, from whom they have quick returns; they fetch their goods from afar. Something touching the excellency of the trade of the city of God, I shall hint in a few particulars.

Secondly. As touching her commodities, or the merchandize which her citizens deal in.

First, Negatively.

1. They are not prohibited goods.
2. They are not counterfeit goods.
3. They are not temporal and corruptible goods.

Secondly. Affirmatively, and more directly, they are,

1. Soul-enriching commodities, things that are of very great worth and value. "The merchandize of wisdom is better than the merchandize of silver, and the gain thereof than fine gold," Prov. iii. 14.

2. They are needful things, such things as we cannot be without. Some things that merchants of a city deal in, and fetch from afar, though they are of great value, yet we may very well submit, and live comfortable without them, as pearl, and precious stones, &c. But there is an absolute necessity of all those things the citizens of this city trade in and for.

3. They are such commodities as will make the nations and persons that buy them happy for ever; and indeed there is no true happiness without them.

Quest. What is the traffic of this city of God?

Ans. The first thing that I shall mention, is the truth; this she offers to sale: "Buy the truth, and sell it not," Prov. xxiii. 23. The Church is called "The pillar and ground of truth," 1 Tim. iii. 15. Truth is only to be found in this city, or in the warehouses of the citizens of Zion, viz., the word of God, and the hearts of believers.

The second thing, is a soul-converting Gospel, and blessed ordinances, "The law goeth forth of Zion, and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem," Micah iv. 2.

The third thing they deal in, are the gifts and soul-enriching graces of the Spirit, hope, love, humility, &c. Things of very great worth.

The fourth is justification; every true sinner makes it his business to get this precious treasure.

The fifth thing is the peace of God, which passeth all our understanding, one of the rarest commodities in the world.

The sixth thing is, union and communion with God. "That which we have seen and heard, declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us; and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ," 1 John i. 3.

The seventh thing is, peace of conscience: "Herein do I exercise myself, to have always a conscience void of offence, towards God, and towards men," Acts xxiv. 16.

The eighth thing is, sanctification, or a holy life; they who trade not in this commodity, are none of the true sons and citizens of Zion.

Ninthly. The pearl of great price, worth more than ten thousand worlds.

Tenthly. The last thing that I shall mention is, eternal life, a crown of glory that fadeth not away, 1 Pet. i. 4.

METAPHOR.

X. A City whose commerce lies principally in a foreign trade or merchandizing, hath usually a navigable river belonging to it, by which means their commodities, or those goods they deal in, are brought home to their very doors; as we see by experience. What

PARALLEL.

X. The City of God, whose trade lies in spiritual merchandize fetched from afar, hath a most glorious river belonging to it, which may indeed be said to run through every street thereof, viz., the Holy Spirit, and Word of God. The Spirit in several places of Scripture is called a river, and by means of these blessed streams are all divine and sacred commodities, which the infinite profit doth the river Thames yield this famous City! and what would its trade be worth, were it not for it?

METAPHOR.

be impoverished and undone. It is the Holy Spirit that enriches and cheers the hearts of all gracious souls. "There is a river, the streams whereof make glad the City of God, the holy place of the tabernacle of the Most High," Psal. xlv. 4. It may not be amiss here to consider,

1. From whence this river comes. See River, under the third Head of Metaphors.
2. The nature of the waters.
3. The divers streams thereof.

First; The river comes, 1. From a rock, Numb. xx. 8, 11. This rock was first smitten, and then the water came out abundantly.

2. It comes from an infinite inexhaustible fountain; it is said to "proceed from the throne of God and the Lamb," Rev. xxii. 1.

Secondly; Touching the nature of this river; though we have spoken of it under the third Head of Metaphors, yet we will touch a little upon it here. It hath besides other properties of spiritual water, these divers qualities,

1. It will heal all the diseases of the inward man; it will soften, and make very tender and pliable, and break in pieces a hard heart.

2. It will cure the soul of spiritual blindness; nay, it will open the eyes of him that was born blind.

3. It will infallibly cure all spiritual consumptions, that spiritual waste or decay of faith, love, zeal, hope, &c., which seizeth sometimes upon many Christians.

4. It will bring down the swelling of pride, and make a man very humble, and little in his own eyes; the more of the Spirit the more humble.

5. It will cure all manner of spiritual deadness or deafness, making a man very lively and diligent to hear good counsel and instruction, as Lydia experienced, Acts xvi. 14.

6. It is good against the tremblings of the heart, and will make a man bold and courageous in the cause of Christ, in evil times. "We cannot but speak the things which we have both seen and heard," Acts iv. 20.

7. It is an excellent remedy to purge out all noxious and evil humours of the soul, from whence many distempers flow, making a man sound at heart, and holy in life.

8. It will effectually restore a lost appetite, and make a man relish well the food of God's Word, causing it to be sweeter to him than honey, or the honey-comb, Psal. cxix. 103.

9. It will preserve from the plague of sin, of what sort soever it be, though a Christian be amongst infected persons every day.

10. It will revive a fainting and drooping spirit.

11. It will set and make whole all broken bones, as David and thousands others have found by experience.

12. It will cure the leprosy, and all old running ulcers, and also all fresh wounds of the soul, though ever so deep, stinking, and loathsome.

13. It is good against weakness of the hands, and feebleness of the knees, 1 Thess. v. 14.

14. It is sovereign good against spiritual barrenness, making the godly to bring forth much fruit, 2 Pet. i. 9.

15. It will clear the sight, and make a man see afar off.

16. It infallibly cures the sleepy disease, or the spiritual lethargy of the soul, so that they shall not sleep as others do, 1 Thess. v. 6.

17. It cures all diseases of the tongue and mouth, and an unsavoury breath, that common sign of a foul stomach, James iii. 5, 6.

18. It cures all spiritual lameness; it causeth a lame man to leap as an hart, and never halt any more between two opinions, Isa. xxxv. 6.

PARALLEL.

godly deal in, brought home to their very doors, viz., gifts, graces, pardon, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost, &c., which are very excellent merchandize. And were it not for this river, what would become of this City? we should soon

19. It perfectly cures all distempers of the head, occasioned by error, and erroneous principles, that corrupt the understanding.

20. It is water of life, he that drinks of it shall never die, John iv. 14.

Thirdly; this river hath three special streams. 1. The stream of ordinances. 2. The stream of heavenly graces. 3. The stream of divine promises. Sinners come to these waters, O! come before the stream be turned another way. See River and Water of Life.

METAPHOR.

XI. In a glorious City usually is the king's palace, or his chief place of residence, which tends much to its honour and renown.

the Church. "The Lord dwelleth in Zion. Sing praises, for the Lord hath chosen Zion, he hath desired it for his habitation. This is my rest for ever," Psal. ix. 11, Isa. viii. 18, Psal. lxxvi. 1, 2, 3, and cxxxii. 13, 14. "Though he be the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, yet he dwelleth with them that are of an humble and contrite spirit," Isa. lvii. 15. The special and most gracious presence of God is with his people.

XII. A City hath some certain privileges, freedoms, and immunities belonging to it, which strangers have nothing to do with; foreigners may not dwell within the walls of some Cities.

their iniquity," Isa. xxxiii. 24. 1. This is a glorious privilege and freedom, if we consider the abominable and heinous nature of sin, which is opened under the third head of metaphors. 2. Because of that which is couched and comprehended under the blessing of pardon; when God absolves a poor sinner, he not only forgives, but also forgets, their sins and iniquities he remembers no more. 3. Because it is a freedom from the guilt of it. 4. Because it is a freedom from the power and dominion of it, Rom. vi. 14. 5. It is a freedom from the punishment of it, Rom. viii. 1, John v. 24. 6. Because it is a purchased freedom, it was obtained by a great sum, viz., the sum of God's great love and grace, with the sum of Christ's blood. Remission is through Christ's atonement. 7. Because it is a sealed freedom, it is made over to the soul by the king's own seal, the Spirit of God, that great seal of heaven, Eph. i. 13, 14. 8. Because it is a lasting freedom; the sins of believers are forgiven for ever, they shall never be laid to their charge.

The second privilege of this city is, Gospel-fellowship, free access to the Lord's table, and communion with the saints: "They are made to sit down together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus," Eph. ii. 6.

The third privilege is right to the ministry; they may all lay claim to the ministers and ministry of the word: "Whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, all are yours," 1 Cor. iii. 22, 23. They, and all their gifts and gracious endowments, are the saints.

The fourth privilege is, their undoubted right to the City-stock, or the Church's patrimony.

1. The stock of prayers; sincere souls have a right to all the prayers of the Church.

2. To that store and spiritual provision, viz., the bread of life, &c., that is laid up in her. "God will bless the provision of Zion, and satisfy her poor with bread," Psal. cxxxii. 15.

3. The stock of promises. God hath promised to bless, comfort, strengthen, beautify, build up, and save Sion, and consequently every saint and member thereof; for all those, and many more like promises, are directly made to every sincere soul or citizen of Sion.

The fifth privilege is, free access to the throne of grace, Eph. ii. 18.

PARALLEL.

XI. The Church is the habitation of God. "The Lord dwelleth in Zion, in Judah is God known; his name is great in Israel, in Salem also is his tabernacle, and his dwelling place in Zion."

This is for the everlasting honour and renown of

XII. So the Church of God hath many glorious privileges and immunities belonging to it, which unconverted sinners have no right to.

The first privilege, or part of that freedom that belongs to the city of God, is pardon of sin. "The inhabitants shall not say, I am sick; the people that shall dwell therein shall be forgiven

Sixthly, a dwelling-place there. There is a glorious privilege ; they dwell near the King, behold him in the galleries every day ; they dwell in God's courts, nay, in his house : " Blessed are they that dwell in thy house, they will be still praising thee, Selah," Psal. lxxxiv. 4. " They that are planted in the house of the Lord, shall flourish in the courts of our God, they shall bring forth fruit in old age," &c., Psal. xcii. 13.

1. It is a strong and sure dwelling-place : " He shall dwell on high, his place of defence shall be the munition of rocks," Isa. xxxii. 18, and xxxiii. 16.

2. It is a rich and glorious dwelling-place.

3. It is a pleasant dwelling-place.

4. It is an honourable dwelling-place.

5. It is and shall be a peaceable habitation. " Look upon Zion, the City of our sojournities : thine eyes shall see Jerusalem, a quiet habitation, a tabernacle that shall not be taken down ; not one of the stakes thereof shall ever be removed, neither shall any of the cords thereof be broken," Isa. xxxiii. 20.

Seventhly, They have a right and privilege to choose their own officers ; every free Citizen hath his voice at every election. No minister, bishop, or deacon, may be imposed upon them without their own free consent.

Eighthly, They have a right to all the blessings and privileges of the river, the streams whereof make glad all the inhabitants, the nature of whose water you have heard.

Ninthly, They have a right to the City-guard, which also attends them, whithersoever they go, or whatsoever they do, when they are about their proper work, which are the good angels.

Tenthly, The last privilege I shall mention is, sonship. " But to as many as received him, to them gave he power, [or privilege,] to become the sons of God," John i. 12. " Because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father," Gal. iv. 16.

METAPHOR.

XIII. Some cities have a common stock in them, out of which the poor decayed citizens are often supplied and helped in their distress, and thereby delivered from utter beggary.

being utterly undone. " My God shall glory, by Christ Jesus," Phil. iv. 19.

XIV. A City hath also a strict watch appointed to keep the gates, and to see that no accident happen in it, to the hurt and detriment thereof.

being able to destroy all the Church's enemies. These keep the saints day and night ; they encamp about them, and see that no evil come unto them. Besides them, God is said to watch over his people continually, who is called, " the Watchman of Israel, and the Saviour thereof in the day of trouble." " Unless the Lord keep the city, the Watchman waketh but in vain," Psal. cxxvii. 1, 2. Besides, there are the ministers of the Gospel, who are called watchmen. See the sixth Head of Metaphors.

XV. A great and famous City hath towers and battlements belonging to it, not only for ornament, but also for strength, and security from evil.

death." " The name of the Lord is a strong tower," &c. Psal. xlviii. 12, 13, 14. Every one of the blessed attributes of God are as so many towers of safety to his Church. See Strong Tower in the first head of metaphors.

PARALLEL.

XIII. The Church hath a common stock or storehouse belonging to it, called the unsearchable riches of Christ, out of which all poor decayed Christians have their wants supplied, Eph. iii. 8. That grace that is treasured up in Christ, is always ready to be given forth to his poor children ; and by this means they are kept from ruin, and supply all your needs, according to his riches in

XIV. The Church, or City of God, hath also a strong and faithful militia, or spiritual watch, which are the holy angels. These are called watchers, or watchmen, Dan. iv. 23 ; and in other places, the Lord's host, or the armies of heaven, who are mighty in power, one of them enemies. These keep the saints day and night ; they encamp about them, and see that no evil come unto them. Besides them, God is said to watch over his people continually, who is called, " the Watchman of Israel, and the Saviour thereof in the day of trouble." " Unless the Lord keep the city, the Watchman waketh but in vain," Psal. cxxvii. 1, 2. Besides, there are the ministers of the Gospel, who are called watchmen. See the sixth Head of Metaphors.

XV. The City of God is famous in respect of its towers, and places of security. " Walk about Zion, and go round her ; mark well her bulwarks, consider her palaces, that ye may tell it to the generation following : For this God is our God for ever and ever, and he will be our guide until

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

XVI. In a City, notwithstanding the many noble and honourable personages, or worthy patrons, that dwell therein, yet there are some ill and unworthy members that get a being there, which tends much to its blemish and reproach.

who were before of old ordained to this condemnation, ungodly men, turning the grace of God into lasciviousness, and denying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ," Jude 4. These ill and loose professors bring a great reproach upon the Church of God; but there is a day coming, when the Church shall be freed of them. "There shall be no Canaanite in the house, or City of God," Zech. xiv. 21.

XVII. The Citizens of a great and glorious City are much affected with, and highly esteem and love the City where they dwell.

XVI. So the City of God, notwithstanding all the holy and eminent saints and servants of God who dwell therein, yet hath in him some wicked and ungodly ones, who by craft and hypocrisy get a being there, though when known they be turned out, as the incestuous person, 1 Cor. v. "Hymeneus and Alexander" were, 1 Tim. i. 30. "For there are certain men crept in unawares, condemnation, ungodly men, turning the grace of God into lasciviousness, and denying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ," Jude 4. These ill and loose professors bring a great reproach upon the Church of God; but there is a day coming, when the Church shall be freed of them. "There shall be no Canaanite in the house, or City of God," Zech. xiv. 21.

XVII. So the Citizens of Zion have an honourable respect, and high esteem for God's Church, as appears particularly in David: "If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning; if I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth, if I prefer not Jerusalem above my chiefest joy," Psal. cxxxvii. 5, 6. Many reasons may be given, why the godly are so much taken with Zion.

1. Because it is the place of their birth; they were born, or rather born again in her. "And of Zion it shall be said, this and that man was born in her, and the highest himself shall establish her. The Lord shall count, when he writeth up his people, that this and that man was born there, Selah," Psal. lxxxvii. 5, 6.

2. Because it is the City of their Father, and so their blessed inheritance; all the glorious immunities thereof are theirs.

3. It is a City redeemed or purchased by Christ's most precious blood, he gave himself for it. "Ye are bought with a price," 1 Cor. vi. 20.

4. It is built by God, and for God; it is the place that he hath chosen, he esteems highly of it. "He is said to rejoice in Zion, he loves the very gates thereof, more than all the dwelling-places of Jacob," Psal. lxxxvii. 2.

5. It is a splendid and most glorious City; her foundation is laid with precious stones, yea, the choicest sapphires; her streets are paved with that which is more rare than the purest gold.

XVIII. Some citizens who are industrious, grow very rich, and attain to great honour among their neighbours; and those are quickly known, and taken notice of; they may be discovered in divers respects.

XVIII. So some of the citizens of Zion, who are diligent and industrious in the improvement of grace, and the means of godliness, grow very rich in faith and good works, rich in spiritual and divine knowledge, rich in heavenly experience. The diligent hand maketh rich, with the blessing of God. And these rich saints are also soon discovered, and taken notice of, Prov. x. 22.

1. Rich men, wealthy merchants, can trust or stay a great while for their own, when poor men must have all presently paid down. The clearest promises or firmest covenant, will not serve their turn, without some considerable part presently paid.

2. Rich citizens have a great stock lying by them.

1. So those who are spiritually rich, James ii. 5; rich in faith, rich merchants of mount Zion, the City of God, can trust, they can stay patiently in expectation of the good of the promise, as Abraham, who was strong or rich in faith, when others cannot rely upon a bare promise, or take God's single word for the accomplishment of this or that, Rom. iv. 20.

2. So those who are rich citizens of Zion, rich in grace, have a stock of blessed experience, as David had. They have a stock of faith, much faith, when others have but a little; a stock of good works, having done much for God, and for his Church, &c.

METAPHOR.

3. Rich citizens have abundance of precious things, rare merchandizes to delight in, as gold, silver, and many other rich commodities.

4. Rich men do not live upon their labour, as poor men do. Some rich men work, and take as much pains as the poorest man in the City; but their work is pleasant, and more delightful to them, than the labour of one that is very poor.

5. Rich men go finer, or are generally more richly adorned, than the poor; you may know a rich citizen by his costly ornaments, by his rich robes, and chains of gold about his neck.

and chains of gold about their neck,"

6. Rich citizens do usually bring up their children more nobly, and give them more learning, and better education, than the poor generally do or can.

tion of the Lord, taking God for a pattern herein, who maketh the Word and rod a blessing to his children, Gen. xviii. 19, Eph. vi. 4, Psal. xciv. 11, 12.

7. Rich citizens live high, keep a good table, in comparison of what the poor do, or are able.

selves in fatness; their good conscience is to them a continual feast, Cant. ii. 4, Prov. xv. 15.

8. Rich citizens can bear burdens, taxations, and losses, better than the poor.

9. Rich men can do for others; poor men can do but little for their poor friends or neighbours, when the rich can do much.

10. Rich men can best strive with difficulties, and live in years of scarcity, when others who have but just from hand to mouth, are in such times in danger of starving, or being reduced to great extremities.

XIX. Some Cities, though rich, yet are in a comparative sense but small, but little Cities.

City, and but a few men in it," Eccl. ix. 14, Luke xii. 32. This City is the Church of God, &c.

PARALLEL.

3. So rich citizens of Sion have abundance of rare and precious things in their warehouses, viz., their hearts, as love, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost, Gal. v. 22.

4. So rich citizens of Sion, though they work hard for God: "I laboured more abundantly than they all," 1 Cor. xv. 10, yet their work is sweet and pleasant to them, because they work not for life, or for a livelihood; they rest not upon the doing, but live by faith, Gal. ii. 20. But poor saints live more upon doing than believing; they have but little of that, or any other grace.

5. So rich saints are more adorned with garments of humility, "With the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price," 1 Pet. iii. 4. They can deny themselves, are patient under sufferings, endure all things contentedly for Christ's sake; they have much wisdom, as "An ornament of grace upon their head, Prov. i. 9.

6. So rich saints, such as have much grace, who are great dealers, and have got much by trading in spiritual things, bring up their children more virtuously, and give them better education; they give them better counsel, better examples than others; they train them up in the fear and admoni-

7. So those who are spiritually rich, have many precious morsels, yea, blessed variety of choice things; they are often feasted by Christ, and are with him in the house of wine, and delight themselves in a continual feast, Cant. ii. 4, Prov. xv. 15.

8. So those who are spiritually rich, can best bear up under cross providences, persecution, and losses for Christ's sake.

9. So those that are rich, in spiritual experience, in faith, and good works, can do much for weak Christians by prayer, by advice, and good counsel. Moses did mighty things by prayer for Israel, Exod. xvii. 11. "The fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much," James v. 16.

10. So those who are strong, and very rich in faith, and all other graces, are helped to bear up and pass through difficulty, in time of want and scarcity, better than weak or poor Christians will; only God hath for their comfort and encouragement promised to supply their wants, and will if sincere, also relieve them, that they shall not faint or perish in the years of famine, Phil. iv. 19, Psal. lxxxiv. 11.

XIX. The City of God, in comparison of great Babylon, is but a small City, notwithstanding all her glory, grandeur, and greatness, (as you have heard) she is but little: "There was a little Babylon is a great City. In comparison of the wicked, Christ's flock is but a handful of people, as it were, Rev. xvii. 18.

METAPHOR.

XX. A City, though very strong, yet is sometimes besieged, and hath many enemies.

so small a City should hold out so bravely unto this day, especially considering what mighty enemies have and do besiege her.

Object. But here it may be objected, hath it not been overcome? Is it not said, that "The holy City was trodden under foot?" Rev. xi. 2.

Ans. It is only the outward court. God hath had his Church in all ages, though forced for a time to fly into the wilderness, from the face of the dragon, Rev. xii. 6.

Quest. By whom is this City besieged?

Ans. 1. By the devil, called a great king, and the king of the bottomless pit.

2. By anti-christ, the first-born of Satan. He hath for above twelve hundred years laid siege against it, using all manner of engines, craft and cruelty, to batter her down, and finally to destroy her, Rev. xii.

3. She is besieged by the world, by wicked men, men of earthly and carnal principles, who abhor Zion, and say, "let her be defiled, raze her, even the foundation thereof," Psal. cxxxvii. 7.

4. She is besieged by sin, and the flesh, a secret enemy, who fain, in a clandestine way would betray her; this enemy doth her the most mischief.

5. She is besieged by a multitude of false teachers; these likewise have done great hurt and damage to the Church of God, who labour by evil doctrine to poison all her inhabitants, 2 Pet. ii. 1, 2.

6. And besides all this, there have been sad divisions within her also: she has been as a City divided, and yet she stands.

7. There have been sad breaches made in her wall, so that many have been let in that way, who would have been kept out.

8. Many that seemed to be for her, have deserted her, and joined with the enemy, and yet still she holds out.

9. And, which is worst of all, few of those who have been in the City have bravely acquitted themselves, by zeal and holiness, to defend her, and yet she holds out still.

Quest. From whence is it that she is helped to bear up against all these sore and grievous assaults, batteries, and calamities?

Ans. 1. This City, as you have heard, is built upon a rock, it has a sure foundation, which cannot be removed, Matt. xvi. 18.

2. The Lord of Hosts hath fought for her; it is he that hath been on her side, he hath defended Mount Zion, and the hill thereof; he hath taken part with her, and doth at this day, Psal. cxxv. 2, Isa. xxxi. 4, 5.

3. She holds out, because God hath decreed her standing, and that her enemies shall not prevail, Zech. xii. 8, 9.

4. She is defended, because she is the place which the Lord loveth, and hath purchased with the blood of his own dear Son, Psal. lxxiv. 2.

5. Because it is the place where God's honour dwells; "I have loved the habitation of thy house, the place where thy honour dwells," Psal. xxvi. 8.

6. Again, she still remains, because she is, though a little City, yet a strong City: "We have a strong City." She hath strong fortifications, strong walls and bulwarks, Isa. xxvii. 1.

7. It is, because God's own habitation, as you have heard, is in her; God is "A wall of fire round about her, and the glory in the midst of her," Zech. ii. 5, Psal. cxxxv. 21.

8. She is defended by reason of the strong tower she hath in her; so long as her tower stands, how can she be battered down? Zech. ii. 5. And her tower is impregnable. The enemy may sooner pull the sun out of the firmament, than undermine or batter down, deface or demolish the tower of Zion, which is the name of the Lord, Prov. xviii. 10. See strong Tower.

PARALLEL.

XX. The City of God, this little City, is besieged; "The daughter of Zion is left as a cottage in a vineyard, as a lodge in a garden of cucumbers, as a besieged City," Isa. i. 8, and marvellous it is,

9. She is defended, because in her are the laws, statutes, ordinances, and holy institutions of her King, the Lord Jesus, where he is worshipped and adored in spirit and truth, Isa. ii. 3.

INFERENCES.

I. Hence all that dwell in Zion may be provoked to a diligent improvement of their great privileges, to the end they may be enriched with all those spiritual riches, and dignified with that honour that appertaineth to a true denizen thereof.

II. Take comfort and encouragement also, whatever the attempts of the enemies are, yet about all her glory shall be a defence. All those whose feet stand within her gates, may read honour, safety, and salvation as it were written upon her walls, Isa. iv. 5.

III. Let it be your delight to prefer her above her chiefest joy; as she is called the holy City, so be ye also holy, that you may declare yourselves unto what City it is you do belong, Psal. cxxxvii. 6.

IV. How may this call home all those that are gone astray, and invite all that profess good will unto Sion, to let their feet stand within her gates, for the Lord hath desired it for his habitation. Holy David made this his one thing desirable, viz., to dwell in God's house, to be a denizen of this City; and why should not you? Psal. xxvii. 4.

V. Let it be a warning to all Sion's enemies, to take heed how they lift up their hands against her; or reproach God, and them that dwell in heaven; let them lay down their arms, and fight against her no more. "The Lord shall roar also out of Zion, and utter his voice out of Jerusalem, and the heavens and the earth shall shake: but the Lord will be the hope of his people, and the strength of the children of Israel. So shall ye know that I am the Lord your God, dwelling in Zion, my holy mountain," &c. Joel iii. 16, 17.

THE CHURCH OF GOD COMPARED TO THE MOON.

"She is as fair as the Moon," Cant. vi. 10.

THE Moon is called in Hebrew Lebanah, of her whiteness, and bright shining. The state of the Church, all expositors agree, is signified hereby.

The Church may in many respects be compared to the Moon.

SIMILE.

I. Naturalists affirm, the Moon receiveth her light from the sun.

II. The Moon receiving light by the beams of the sun, she shines forth, and giveth light to the world.

III. The Moon hath his light from the Father, to give light to the world. "Ye are the light of the world," Matt. v. 14.

IV. The Moon giveth light to the world only in the night.

V. The Moon, though very fair and bright, yet, as naturalists observe, hath her spots.

VI. The Moon hath her various aspects: sometimes she is in the full, and sometimes in the wane;

PARALLEL.

I. The Church hath all her light from Christ, the Sun of Righteousness, Mal. iv. 2.

II. So the Church receiving light from Christ, she shines forth in brightness and glory. The sun gives light, but receives none; the Moon both gives light, and receives light: so Christ, as God, hath his light in himself; but as Mediator, he communicates it to the Church, that the Church may give light to the world, Matt. v. 14.

III. So the Church gives her light forth to enlighten sinners, whilst the night of this world lasteth.

IV. So the Church, though pure and holy, yet in herself is not without spots of sin. No saint is without blemishes. "If we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us," 1 John i. 8.

V. So the Church is under various states and changes. She doth not always shine as at full Moon, or send forth a full brightness, but is some-sometimes she shines more glorious, and sometimes less; and yet still the same Moon. She doth not, saith an ancient writer, always show her light in her full orb: she sometimes so decreaseth, that there seemeth to us not to be any Moon; yet she is not then destitute of the sun-beams, though it seem otherwise to our sight.

SIMILE.

obscured, so that the perfidiousness of enemies, and antichrist, can do nothing against it? they cannot indeed destroy the Church, but they can bring it into a narrower compass, and drive it into holes. The Church, saith Augustin, is like the moon, which sometimes shines wholly, being enlightened with the sun-beams, and sometimes is deprived of a great part of her light; so the Church shines sometimes most gloriously, and sometimes is so obscured that she hardly appears at all.

PARALLEL.

times so obscured, that she appears hardly visible; she was forced into the wilderness, from the face of the dragon, and Romish beast, Rev. xii. 6; yet it is certain, the Church is always in being. Posse putes nobis persuadere, eum esse ecclesiæ statum, ut obscurari nequeat, ut nil Persidia, nil Hostes, nil Antichristus valeat? Delere hi quidem ecclesiam nunquam possunt, sed in angustias compingere, et compellere in latebras possunt, saith Whitaker. Thinkest thou that thou canst persuade us, that the state of the Church is such that it cannot be

INFERENCES.

I. Hence we may learn to look, and earnestly expect to receive all our light as well as life from Christ, the light of the world, and earnestly pray with David, that he would lift up the light of his countenance upon us, Psal. iv. 6. That forasmuch as we have no light but what is communicated from him unto us, he would dart continually his glorious beams into our hearts, that we may indeed be as shining lights in this dark world, Matt. v. 16.

II. This may also humble the most glittering saints, to consider that they cannot shine so bright in this world, but that their spots may be discernible to themselves and others, which may excite them to apply themselves daily to the Sun of Righteousness for cleansing, Mal. iv. 2.

III. To keep clear, and shine as much as possible, that the poor, benighted, dark world may obtain benefit by them, and confess it to the glory of God. "Let your light so shine," &c. Matt. v. 16.

IV. Take comfort from hence, notwithstanding your various changes, ebbings, and flowings in this world, for that the enemy may as soon change the ordinances of the Moon, as make an utter end of God's Church, as you have heard.

V. What a dreadful doom will such be sure to have, that love darkness so, as that they do not only condemn, oppose, and endeavour to pull the Moon, viz., the Church, out of her orb; but so wicked are they, they slight and condemn the sun, from whence she receives all her shining brightness. Let such read, Job v. 14, "They meet with darkness in the day-time, and grope in the noon-day, as in the night:" "To whom is reserved the blackness of darkness for ever," except grace prevent by giving them repentance, 2 Pet. ii. 17.

THE CHURCH THE TEMPLE OF GOD.

"Know ye not that ye are the Temple of God," 1 Cor. iii. 16.

"For ye are the Temple of the living God, as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them," &c. 2 Cor. vi. 16.

The Church is the anti-type of Solomon's Temple, and we shall therefore run the parallel with respect to that.

TYPE.

I. The Temple was built with costly stones, well hewed, squared, and polished, before they were laid into the building.

PARALLEL.

I. So the Church of God is built with spiritual stones, who are well hewed and polished by the Word and Spirit, before added to, or laid into the heavenly building, 1 Pet. ii. 3—6, Acts ii. 40, 41.

TYPE.

II. In the Building of the Temple there was no noise heard of hammer or axe; and the house, when it was in building, was built with stones made ready before they were brought thither, 1 Kings vi. 7, so that there was neither hammer, nor axe, nor any tool of iron heard in the house, whilst it was in building.

III. Others besides Solomon were concerned in the building of the Temple, as Hiram King of Tyrus, and the Zidonians, who hewed the timber for it.

IV. The Temple was a most rare and glorious structure; it was over-laid with fine gold upon carved cedar, 1 Kings vi. 21.

V. In the temple were many windows, to let in light abundantly, 1 Kings vi. 4.

VI. In the Temple were several degrees of galleries or lofts, each one above another, and larger each than other.

VII. The walls of the Temple were covered round about with Cherubims, palm-trees, and flowers.

VIII. Solomon consecrated the Temple unto the Lord.

IX. There was music used in the Temple.

X. In the Temple was the ark of the testimony, and in the midst of the house it is said he set it.

XI. The glory of the Lord filled the Temple; God promised to dwell therein, and hear the prayers that should be there made. "I have hallowed this house, saith God, that thou hast built, to put my name there for ever; and mine eyes and my heart shall be there perpetually," 2 Chron. vii. 15.

TYPE.

I. The Temple was built with dead and senseless stones.

II. The stones were polished and hewn by the hands of men.

III. The temple that was built by Solomon, was utterly destroyed by the Babylonians.

PARALLEL.

II. So in the building of the Church, there should be no need of the hammer, or the axe, to square and hew by repentance, the stones of this building, being every way prepared, and made fit before. Conversion is the polishing work, and those that receive unconverted persons, violate the holy rule of God's word, for that maketh work for the hammer and axe in the Temple. Hence Solomon saith, "Prepare thy work without and make ready thy things in the field, and after build thy house," Prov. xxiv. 27.

III. To show, that in the building of the Church of God, the Gentiles as well as the Jews, are concerned; they all concur together, to build up an holy Temple in the Lord, Eph. ii. 21.

IV. To show the beauty and glory of the Church, which is adorned with the gifts and graces of the Spirit. The Church is inwardly pure, very rich and beautiful. Hence the king's daughter is said to be all glorious within, Psal. xlv. 13.

V. So in the Church, the light of the Gospel, and the blessed Spirit, shines gloriously; these let light in great abundance.

VI. So in the Church, God hath placed degrees of officers, some greater and higher in glory than others; as apostles, pastors, teachers, &c., Eph. iv. 11.

VII. To note, saith Mr. Guild, the protection of the Church by the ministry of angels, though they be not seen, and its peaceable, victorious, and flourishing state under the same.

VIII. So did Christ his Church unto the Father. John xvii.

IX. Which signifies that joy of the heart, and heavenly melody, that is in the Church, amongst the faithful and sincere converts thereof, Eph. v. 19.

X. So in the Church is God's word and covenant of grace, borne by Christ, and by his true ministers, by preaching and publishing the same.

XI. So the glorious presence of God is in his Church, he dwelleth in Sion, and from thence the perfection of beauty shines forth; and the promises, of blessed grace, peace, pardon, and acceptance, are made to them who dwell therein. His eye is always upon the righteous, his ears open to their cry, and his tender compassion is ever toward them, 1 Pet. iii. 12.

DISPARITY.

I. The Church is built with living, sensible, and lively stones, 1 Pet. ii. 5.

II. These stones are hewn and polished by the hand of the Spirit.

III. The Church of God can never be destroyed; the gates of hell shall never prevail against it, so as utterly to overthrow it, Matt. xvi. 18, though it is not denied, but the outward courts have been trodden down by the Popish Gentiles, Rev. xi. 2.

A P A R A L L E L,

Between the second temple, built in the days of Nehemiah, and the Church of God built in the latter days.

METAPHOR.

I. The Temple that was built in the days of Nehemiah, was first destroyed by the literal Babylonians.

II. The Temple was built in a troublesome time; they wrought with one hand, and held a sword in the other.

III. The Temple was rebuilt by such as had been for many years in the Babylonian captivity, Neh. iv. 13.

IV. The builders of this second Temple were looked upon as poor, weak, and contemptible persons, in comparison of Solomon, and those that built with him, Neh. iv. 2.

V. The builders of this Temple were greatly mocked and jeered. There were Sanballat, Gesham, Tobiah, and others, who in a reproachful manner said, "What will these feeble Jews do? Will they make an end in a day? If a fox go up, he shall even break down their stone wall," Neh. iv. 2, 3, 4.

VI. The builders of this Temple had much rubbish to remove, before they could go on with their work, Neh. iv. 2.

rubbish, and others ready to mistake, and Babylon.

VII. The builders of this Temple were hindered, and for a time the work ceased.

VIII. Many people were very backward about rebuilding the Temple, in the days of Haggai and Nehemiah, crying, the time was not come that the house of the Lord should be built, Hag. i. 2.

IX. Though many cruel enemies endeavoured to hinder the rebuilding of the Temple, yet the work went on, and was finished in some time, to the joy of the faithful.

X. That work was carried on, "not by night, nor by power, but by the Spirit of the Lord," Zech. iv. 6.

PARALLEL.

I. Signifying the Church of God should be greatly defaced and spoiled, and the outward courts trodden down by the mystical Babylonians, and afterwards rebuilt, or rather, repaired again, Rev. xi. 2, 3.

II. Signifying, that the Church of God should be rebuilt in a troublesome time, and that great opposition should be made against them.

III. Signifying, that the rebuilding of God's Church should be of such as had been a long time in spiritual captivity, under the mystical Babylonians, or mother of harlots.

IV. Signifying, that those whom God would raise up to repair the waste places of Sion, in the latter days, should be poor, weak, inconsiderable persons, very unlikely to perfect so great a work as reformation is. What was Luther, and others whom God employed, to the holy apostles, who were the first builders?

V. So the rebuilders in these latter days have been greatly reproached and contemned by the enemies of Christ; those that are truly religious, called feeble, weak, and foolish ones, &c., nay heretics, schismatics, and many other reproachful names have been, and still are daily given to them, and their work much slighted and despised also.

VI. So the builders of God's Church in these latter days, have had much Popish rubbish to remove, much filth of human inventions, and traditions of that Church being in their way; some stones being almost quite lost amongst this and instead of a stone of Sion, they take a stone of VII. So the builders of God's house, or reformers in religion, have often been hindered or obstructed in these latter days.

VIII. So have many souls been very backward about the work of reformation, or repairing the house of God: they have dwelt in their ceiled houses, and let the house of God, as is were, lie waste.

IX. So the enemies now, as in former times, strive to hinder the repairing of God's house; yet the work of reformation shall in due time be perfected, to the joy of all sincere Christians.

X. So the work in these days goes on, not so much by the power of men, or human help, as by the power of God, and his Spirit.

TEMPLE.

DISPARITY.

XI. God promised that the glory of the second house should exceed the glory of the first, Hag. i. 9. which some conceive was, made good by Christ's coming, whose personal presence in the temple greatly added to its glory.

upon them; for evil doers shall be cut off:" "Yet a little while, and the wicked shall not be, but the meek shall possess the earth," &c. "And all that lift up a hand against Zion, shall be torn in pieces." God will plead the controversy of his Church, and undo all that afflict her. "The stone cut out of the mountain without hands, shall smite the image upon his feet, that were of iron and clay, and break them to pieces; then the iron, and the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold, shall be broken together, and become as the chaff of the summer threshing-floor," 1 Sam. ii. 10, Psal. xxxvii. 10, 11, Zech. xii. 2, Dan. ii. 34.

2. God will utterly destroy all idolatry, and all false worship, and by this means will restore his own appointments, in the purity of them. Rev. xiv. 8, and xviii. 1, 2, 3—21, Isa. lx. 1, 2, xxv. 6, 7, and lviii. 12.

3. God, to make her glorious, will unite all her children together in love: "They shall serve the Lord with one consent; and no more divisions shall be amongst them," Isa. xi. 13, Ezek. xxxvii. 16—19, Zeph. iii. 8, 9, Zech. xiv. 9, "There shall be one Lord, and his name one.

4. God will enlarge her borders. "The children of the barren shall say again in my ears, the place is too strait for me, give me room that I may dwell," Isa. xlix. 20. The fulness of the Gentiles shall be brought in, they shall come like doves to the windows, Isa. lx. 3, 4, 5.

5. The Jews shall be called, and both Jews and Gentiles shall make but one sheep-fold: "And there shall be one sheep-fold, and one shepherd," Ezek. xxxvii. 22, John x. 16, Isa. xix. 19, to the end.

6. The glory of the Church will be great in respect of knowledge. "All the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea," Numb. xiv. 21, Isa. xi. 9, Hab. ii. 14.

7. Her glory shall be great in respect of the abundance of peace which shall be in the world in that day: God will make wars to cease to the ends of the earth; such a day never was in the world yet, Psal. xlvii. 8, 9, and lxxii. 7, Isa. ii. 4, Mic. iv. 3, 4.

8. "The mountain of the Lord's house shall be exalted above the mountains, and lifted up above the hills, and all nations shall flow unto it," Mic. iv. 1, Isa. ii. 12. The saints in that day shall possess the gates of their enemies, Jer. xxx. 20.

9. The glory of the Church will be great in respect of holiness. God will bring his people into the fire, and make his Church very pure, Isa. i. 25, 26, 27, Mal. iii. 2, Psal. cx. 2, 3, Zech. xiii. 8, 9. "There shall be no Canaanite in the house of the Lord, no unclean person shall dwell therein."

10. Her glory shall be great by Christ's coming to her. "Thine eyes shall see the King in his beauty," Isa. xxxiii. 17. "He shall be King over all the earth. I have set my King upon my holy hill of Sion." God will dwell with men in a more glorious manner than he ever yet dwelt with them.

11. In that her glory shall abide, and the kingdom shall not be left to another people, Dan. ii. 44, and vii. 27.

INFERENCES.

I. Let us pray for the day of Sion's glory, and never give God rest, until he hath made Jerusalem a praise in the whole earth: "Thy kingdom come," &c.

II. Let not the godly be discouraged, whatever troubles they are now attended with; clouds of darkness shall soon fly away: "At eventide there shall be light," Zech. xiv. 7.

THE CHURCH COMPARED TO AN OLIVE-TREE.

"His branches shall spread, and his beauty shall be as the Olive-Tree," Hosea xiv. 6.

THE Church of God is compared in this place to an Olive-Tree.

SIMILE.

I. Part of the beauty of the Olive-Tree consists in its greenness, it is always green; few trees that bear fruit are like the Olive in this respect.

II. The Olive-Tree is renowned for fruitfulness, it abounds mightily with fruit. Pliny saith, if care be not taken, its fruit so loads it, that it even breaks it down.

III. The Olive-Tree beareth not only much fruit, but also profitable fruit. Olives are rare things. What tree brings forth better fruit than the Olive-Tree? Its fruit is mollifying, feeding, strengthening, healing; its oil makes your lamps to burn.

IV. The branches of an Olive-Tree were formerly used to signify peace.

the Olive, viz., grace, shall soon see the dove, viz., the Spirit, bringing the Olive-branch: but as Noah's dove did not bring the Olive-branch, till the waters were abated; so the flood of iniquity must be abated, the waters of wickedness sink and be dried up, before a man can receive a sure sign or token of peace and reconciliation with God.

INFERENCES.

Hence let the saints, who are planted in the house of the Lord, labour to be like the Olive-Tree, not only to bring forth much fruit as to quantity, but good and right fruit, in respect to its quality.

THE CHURCH COMPARED TO AN INN.

—“And brought him to an Inn,” Luke x. 34.

By the Inn most expositors, that I have met with, understand that Christ means the Church, which may be fitly compared to an Inn.

METAPHOR.

I. An Inn is a place to entertain travellers, whilst they pass from one country or city to another.

PARALLEL.

I. So the Church of God, and every sincere soul, is green and flourishing. Greenness notes life and sap to be in the branches; the branches of the divine Olive, viz., the saints, are never without spiritual moisture, or the sap of grace in their hearts and lives: “His leaves shall not fail,” Psal. i. 3. Hence David said, “He was like a green Olive-Tree in the house of the Lord,” Psal. lxxiii. 8.

II. The Church is fruitful now, but shall be much more fruitful unto God hereafter; her beauty shall be as the Olive-Tree in this respect. She shall abound in children, and abound in grace, and true holiness.

III. So the Church brings forth good fruit, not only a great quantity, but fruit that excels in its nature or quality, viz., faith, love, meekness, patience, charity, &c., even all the fruits of the Spirit, Gal. v. 22; or as they are in another place called the fruit of righteousness, Jam. iii. 17; grace is of a mollifying, feeding, strengthening, and healing nature; grace makes the lamp of profession to burn clear, whereby others see, or have much light. See Oil.

IV. A saint is for peace. They are peacemakers; they desire nothing more than peace with God, and peace with men: “I am for peace,” saith David, Psal. cxx. 7. He that hath the fruit of the Olive, viz., grace, shall soon see the dove, viz., the Spirit, bringing the Olive-branch: but as Noah's dove did not bring the Olive-branch, till the waters were abated; so the flood of iniquity must be abated, the waters of wickedness sink and be dried up, before a man can receive a sure sign or token of peace and reconciliation with God.

PARALLEL.

I. So the Church is a place to entertain Christians, whilst they pass through the wilderness of this world, to the land of promise; or through the valley of tears, to the mount of joy.

METAPHOR.

II. In an Inn is a host, who is to take care of strangers or travellers that come thither, and to help them to whatsoever they need.

III. An Inn is a place of refreshment for travellers, where they meet with convenient food, and sweet repose in their journey. A man may have in some Inns what food he pleaseth, either milk or strong meat, choice of diet.

IV. An Inn sometimes lodgeth, unknown to the host, evil persons, thieves and deceivers.

V. An Inn is a very desirable place to men in their journey.

VI. An Inn is not a place to abide long in; the traveller takes up his abode in it but a night or two, and he is gone.

to heaven, we shall abide with the Church triumphant for ever, Psal. xxx. 5, Heb. xiii. 14.

METAPHOR.

I. In an Inn there is little to be had without money; if a man have not money or credit, he is no guest for them.

II. A man that comes to lodge in an Inn, though he have ever so good entertainment, yet he is not contented to stay there, he makes ready in the morning to go forward in his journey.

Lord, and that will I seek after, that I may live," Psal. xxvii. 4.

III. An Inn may be so full of guests that a weary traveller, especially if he come late, can have no entertainment, but is forced to seek it elsewhere: "There was no room for them in the Inn," Luke ii. 7.

Matt. xxii. 3—14. As there can be no want of any accommodation, of spiritual food, so there is no want of room. All that have been called by the Word and Spirit, and compelled by grace to come in, in all ages, have had blessed entertainment; and as God hath enlarged and increased converts, so he hath enlarged and increased the Church, by three thousand at a time, Acts ii. 41.

IV. Commonly those that lodge in an Inn are strangers and foreigners, and staying but a night, or a very short time have no acquaintance with any that dwell therein.

PARALLEL.

II. In the Church are pastors, or faithful ministers, who wait to receive all poor sinners, who come to take up their lodging there, and make them very welcome.

III. So the Church is a place of soul-refreshment to all spiritual travellers and pilgrims. There is both the sincere milk of the word, and strong meat, all things ready the soul needs, 1 Pet. ii. 1, 2. Some are for one sort of diet, some for another. In the Church also is sweet repose, there Christ giveth rest to the weary.

IV. So the Church, notwithstanding all the care that is taken by her officers, doth sometimes receive or take in false professors, such as are unsound at heart, hypocrites, and deceitful workers.

V. So is the Church of God; hence David longed after the courts of God's house, Psal. lxxxiv. 2.

VI. So the Church militant is no long abiding place; Christians stay in it but for a short time; it is a place of refreshment, as it were, for a night. Here we have no continuing city, we are strangers, as all our fathers were; when we come

DISPARITY.

I. The Church is a place for the poor, for such as have no money, they are welcome thither. The doors of this Inn are always open to all sincere souls, whether they be poor or rich.

II. But he that comes to take up his lodging in the Church, or spiritual Inn, if he be sincere, desireth not to go out from thence any more; he desireth to dwell therein as long as he liveth: though our abiding in this world is but compared to a night. "One thing have I desired of the Lord, that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life."

III. The Church was never yet so full, but that there was room for all those that were weary and heavy laden. All that ever truly travelled towards Sion, have found entertainment there; nay, though the servants of the Lord have been sent into the streets and lanes, to fetch in the poor, and the maimed, and the halt, and the blind, and they do accordingly, yet there is room,

IV. But the saints that are in the spiritual Inn, the Church, "Are no more strangers and foreigners," Eph. ii. 19, but therein make their abode; for though it be said, it is but for a night, or a day, &c., yet it is as long as they live; and they get very great acquaintance with those that dwell therein.

INFERENCES.

I. Bless God, that he hath provided such a place of refreshment for poor weary travellers.

II. You that look upon yourselves to be strangers and pilgrims in this world, may learn from hence where to take up your lodging.

III. Also it may inform God's people, and faithful ministers, what care they ought to take in receiving men and women into the Church: inn-keepers will examine all suspicious persons.

THE CHURCH COMPARED TO A VINE.

"Thou hast brought a Vine out of Egypt; thou hast cast out the heathen, and planted it," &c. "Behold, and visit this Vine," &c. Psal. lxxx. 8, 14.

"For our Vines have tender grapes," &c. Cant. ii. 15.

"And flourish as the Vine," Hos. xiv. 7.

The Church is compared to a Vine.

METAPHOR.

I. A Vine is no beautiful plant, yet very fruitful; it abounds with inward sap.

II. A Vine spreads forth its branches, and accordingly grows much in a short time.

cedars. "She stretched out her branches to the sea, and her boughs unto the river," Psal. lxxx. 8—11. Israel, God's ancient Vine, grew wonderfully; and so did the Gospel-Vine, how did it in a little time spread forth its spiritual branches, eastwards, and westward over many nations, and kingdoms! She extended her boughs into Parthia, Media, Mesopotamia, Egypt, Judea, Cappadocia, Pontus, Asia, Pamphilia, Lydia, Spain, Italy, England, &c.

III. The Vine must have much pains taken with it; it needs pruning often, or else it will decay.

IV. The Vine is in itself but a weak plant, and therefore needs under-propping.

V. Though the Vine have many branches, yet all have a sufficiency of sap and nourishment from the root, to make them fruitful.

VI. The Vine, if it be barren or unfruitful, is the most unprofitable of any tree, and fit for nothing but the fire. "Son of man, what cometh of the Vine-tree, above all other trees, and of the Vine-branches, which is amongst the trees of the forest? Shall wood be taken thereof, to hang any vessel thereon? Behold, it is cast into the fire to be burnt."

PARALLEL.

I. So the Church, although she do not seem so beautiful to carnal eyes, yet she is very fruitful to God. "The trees of the Lord," that is, the saints of God, "are full of sap," full of divine virtue, or good fruits, Psal. civ. 16.

II. So the Lord's spiritual Vine hath in former times exceedingly spread her branches forth; the mountains are said to be covered with the shadow of it, and the boughs thereof were like the godly cedars. "She stretched out her branches to the sea, and her boughs unto the river," Psal. lxxx. 8—11. Israel, God's ancient Vine, grew wonderfully; and so did the Gospel-Vine, how did it in a little time spread forth its spiritual branches, eastwards, and westward over many nations, and kingdoms! She extended her boughs into Parthia, Media, Mesopotamia, Egypt, Judea, Cappadocia, Pontus, Asia, Pamphilia, Lydia, Spain, Italy, England, &c.

III. So God takes much pains with his Church; it is "pruned and purged, that it may bring forth the more fruit," John xv. 2.

IV. So the Church is in herself but weak, and needs to be borne up by Christ. God is the strength of his people; they are wholly supported by him.

V. So the Church, though she have many members, yet all receive a sufficiency of grace and divine virtue of the root, viz., the Lord Jesus, to make them fruitful.

VI. So are the members of the visible Church, if unfruitful, good for nought, but to be cut down, and cast into the fire, as our Saviour himself sheweth, John xv. 4. "Therefore thus saith the Lord, as the Vine-tree that is amongst the trees of the forest, which I have given to the fire to be consumed; so will I give the inhabitants of Jerusalem: I will set my face against them; they shall go out of one fire, and another fire shall consume them: And ye shall know that I am the Lord," &c. Ezek. xv. 6.

THE CHURCH COMPARED TO A DOVE,

"O my Dove, that art in the cliffs of the rock," &c., Cant. ii. 14.

"O deliver not the soul of thy turtle-Dove unto the multitude," &c., Psal. lxxiv. 19.

THAT is, thy Church and people, who worship none but thee, as the turtle-Dove, that never entertains conjunction with another, and who in their affliction, like a Dove, express their grief in sighs and solitary groans to thee; and which is unarmed, weak, simple, and meek, like the turtle-Dove, which is esteemed the least among the species of Doves, as Aristotle says. The Chaldee renders it, "the soul of such as learn thy law," the word in a turtle-Dove being of some affinity with in law. Christ calls his Church a Dove, by which metaphor, saith Glassius, its simplicity, chastity, &c., is denoted.

Doct. That the spouse of Christ, or a gracious soul, is or may fitly be compared unto a Dove.

METAPHOR.

I. A Dove is a meek and harmless creature: "Be ye innocent as Doves."

II. The Dove makes her nest in the rocks, Cant. iv. 14; her safety, and place of abode is in the cliffs of the rock.

III. The Dove is a creature that feeds not upon carrion, as eagles, ravens, and other fowls do, but only upon pure grain.

false worship, and every evil way, and holy Word, Psal. cxix. 104, 128.

IV. The Dove is a creature much molested by all birds of prey.

V. The Dove hath no other defence, when molested, but by flight.

VI. The Dove thinks not herself secure, till she be got into the rock.

VII. The Dove is a creature very chaste and true to its mate.

that first-born of Satan, and all others who pretend to headship, and ecclesiastical jurisdiction over their consciences.

VIII. The Dove hath a lovely eye, and it is always fixed upon her mate.

desty, having always their eyes upon Jesus Christ; not daring to lift up their eyes to other lovers, but by holy intention wait upon him alone in all their devotion, Isa. viii. 17, Psal. xv. 15.

PARALLEL.

I. THE saints of God are injurious to none, they seek the hurt of no man, they are and ought to be harmless, "The children of God, in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation," Phil. ii. 15.

II. The saints make their abode in the Rock Christ; they build only in him, and upon him, Exod. xxxiii. 22, and indeed in the cliffs of this Rock they rest, viz., in the wounds, piercings, dyings, and crucifixings of the Lord Jesus Christ.

III. Gracious souls, or sincere Christians, do not feed upon the sensual pleasures, and carnal delights of this world, as the ungodly do; nor will they feed upon, or receive in the detestable carrion of men's traditions; they hate idolatry, only feed and live upon the pure grain of God's

IV. The saints of God are persecuted and molested by all the sons of Belial; they are chased like a Dove or partridge upon the mountains, 1 Sam. xxvi. 20.

V. The godly have no other way, when molested by Satan, and wicked men, but to fly to God: "At what time I am afraid, I will trust in thee," Psal. lvi. 3.

VI. The sincere Christian looks not upon himself as secure, until he be got into Christ. "The name of the Lord is a strong tower, the righteous run into it, and are safe," Prov. xviii. 10. They, like Noah's Dove, fly to the ark.

VII. The sincere Christian, and spouse of Christ, is very chaste to the Lord Jesus, will own no other head or husband, they defy the Pope, who pretend to headship, and ecclesiastical jurisdiction over their consciences.

VIII. The saints of God have a single and lovely eye in Christ's sight: they strive to be like the Dove, resisting pride, lust, and wantonness, and to be adorned with meekness and modesty, having always their eyes upon Jesus Christ; not daring to lift up their eyes to other lovers, but by holy intention wait upon him alone in all their devotion, Isa. viii. 17, Psal. xv. 15.

METAPHOR.

IX. The Dove loves to accompany with Doves; they will gather together by great numbers, if they can.

X. The Dove mourns when she hath lost sight of her mate.

mourn as a Dove," saith Hezekiah, "mine eyes fail with looking up. I shall not see the Lord in the land of the living," Isa. xxxviii. 11, 14, "They shall be on the mountains, like Doves in the vallies, every one mourning for his own iniquity," Ezek. vii. 16.

XI. The Dove is a very fruitful creature, having young almost every month in the year.

XII. Doves love to be by the rivers of water.

4. They love to drink of the promises

XIII. Doves have feathers of divers colours, Psal. lxxviii. 13; and it is observed, when the sun shines, their beauty appears most, as if their wings were covered with silver, and their feathers with yellow gold.

XIV. The Dove was appointed by the Lord under the law for a sacrifice, and no other bird or fowl of heaven but the Dove. And hence you read in the Gospel, that there were those that sold Doves in the temple, which was, as it was thought, to accommodate such as came to offer sacrifice, Matt. xxi. 12.

XV. The Dove is said to be silly, and without heart, wants courage, &c., Hos. vii. 11.

PARALLEL.

IX. God's children love communion and fellowship one with another, that they may mutually be comforted and edified in faith: "They fly like a cloud, and as Doves to their windows," that is, to the house or Church of God, Isa. lx. 8.

X. A gracious soul mourns when it hath lost the sight of Jesus Christ: "Thou hidest thy face and I was troubled," saith David; "I did XI. The Church is also very fruitful to Christ, (1.) In respect of bringing forth children: "This and that man, it shall be said, was born in her," Psal. lxxxvii. 5. (2.) In respect of bringing forth the fruits of the Spirit, and good works.

XII. Christians, or gracious souls, love to be by the sweet streams of living water; by that river that makes glad the city of God, Psal. xlii. and consolations of the Spirit.

XIII. The saints are gloriously adorned with the righteousness of Christ, and with the gifts and graces of the Spirit, and when the Sun of Righteousness shines, and sends forth his resplendent beams and rays upon them, then their graces appear and shine most glorious, Psal. xlv.

XIV. The godly are required to offer up themselves, both body and soul, as an acceptable sacrifice unto God, Rom. xii. 1; and many of them have been commanded, and readily have yielded themselves up to God, in a way of suffering, for Christ's sake; and none but those who are God's own sincere children, are accepted in offering up themselves, either in a way of doing or suffering, Prov. xv. 8.

XV. The saints of God are of themselves in many things silly and foolish, wanting that heart, courage, and magnanimity of spirit, to stand up for God, his truth, interest, and people, as they ought to do.

INFERENCES.

I. Is Christ's Church, and so consequently every gracious person, compared to a Dove, being meek, humble, harmless, chaste, and single-hearted to the Lord Jesus Christ? &c. Then we may assure ourselves, that she that delights in prey, rapine, and blood, as doth the Romish Church, is none of the Dove or Church of Jesus Christ.

II. Are the eyes of a Dove by the rivers of water? Do they delight in springs, fountains, and pure rivers? And in this are they an emblem of the godly, who hate all filthy, loathsome, and detestable traditions of men, and delight only in the pure, unmixed, and crystal streams of God's holy institutions? Then all those, who, like ravens, and other foul and unclean birds of prey, delight in ditches, and in long standing, stinking pools of this false church, where they defile themselves in searching for the detestable carrion of idolatry, are none of Christ's Dove-like people.

III. And let those that are the people of God labour to be like the Dove, who is neat, and will not defile itself; let them see they keep their hearts chaste to Christ, and avoid all pollution of sin in their conversation, 2 Cor. vii. 1.

IV. This also may inform the godly that it is no marvel if they be persecuted and molested by the wicked.

V. And in the midst of all their afflictions, persecutions, and temptation, this may comfort them; God hath prepared for his poor Doves a strong place of defence and shelter, viz., the Rock Christ, whither let us in all times of danger fly by faith and prayer.

THE CHURCH COMPARED TO A NATURAL BODY.

"All baptized into one Body," 1 Cor. xii. 13.

"Both unto God in one Body," Eph. ii. 16.

"For the edifying of the Body of Christ," Eph. iv. 12.

"He is the head of the Body, the Church," &c. "For his body's sake, which is the Church," Col. i. 18, 24.

THE Body, σῶμα, Soma, is frequently put for the Church or people of God, the explication of which trope is concisely opened in the following parallel.

METAPHOR.

I. Every natural Body hath a Head.

him to be the Head over all things to the Church, which is his Body, the fulness of him that filleth all in all," Eph. i. 22. "And he is before all things, and by him all things consist. And he is the Head of the Body, the Church," Col. i. 17, 18.

II. The natural body hath many members, and though many members, yet all make but one and the same body, 1 Cor. xii. 14, 20.

III. In the natural Body are members different in strength, usefulness, and honour, as arms, legs, eyes, feet, hands, fingers, &c. But the weakest, and those that seems least honourable, are very useful, and the body cannot be without them.

eye be of greater use than some other useful as the eyes to the Body, cannot say to the hand, or such to whom God hath given the riches of this world to distribute unto others, "We have no need of thee; nor can the head say to the feet, I have no need of you. Nay, and those members of the Body, which seem to be more feeble, are necessary," 1 Cor. xii. 20—23.

IV. In the natural Body, if one member suffer, all suffer with it.

ber be honoured, all the members of the

V. All the members of the Body natural, take care of, and seek the good of the whole Body, and of each member in particular.

VI. All the members of the natural Body have their nourishment from the head.

Christians, who pretended to much piety and religion, but did not receive their doctrine and principles from Christ, nor were they united unto him by evangelical faith. "Not holding the Head, from which all the body by joints and bands having nourishment ministered, and knit together, increaseth with the increase of God," Col. ii. 18, 19.

PARALLEL.

I. So the Church of God hath a Head, viz., the Lord Jesus Christ: "He," God the Father,

"Hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be the Head over all things to the Church, which is his Body, the fulness of him that filleth all in all," Eph. i. 22. "And he is before all things, and by him all things consist. And he is the Head of the Body, the Church," Col. i. 17, 18.

II. The church of Christ consists of divers saints, called the members of his Body: "Now ye are the Body of Christ, and members in particular," 1 Cor. xii. 27, and though many, yet all make but one and the same mystical Body.

III. So in the Church, the mystical Body of Christ, are different members, both with respect to honour and usefulness; as apostles, prophets.

teachers; or, as the apostle John hath it, fathers, young men, and children. "All are not apostles, all are not prophets, all are not teachers," &c. Eph.

iv. 11, 1 John ii. 13, 14. But yet the weakest and most feeble saints or members are useful to the Church. As in the Body natural, though the members, yet the eyes, or ministers, who are as useful as the eyes to the Body, cannot say to the hand, or such to whom God hath given the riches of this world to distribute unto others, "We have no need of thee; nor can the head say to the feet, I have no need of you. Nay, and those members of the Body, which seem to be more feeble, are necessary," 1 Cor. xii. 20—23.

IV. So in Christ's mystical Body, when one saint suffereth, all do sympathize and suffer with him. "If one suffer, all suffer; and if one member be honoured, all the members of the Body rejoice with him," 1 Cor. xii. 26.

V. So in the Church of God, every particular saint doth, and ought always to seek the welfare of the whole mystical Body of Christ: "That there should be no schism in the Body, but that the members should have the same care one of another," 1 Cor. xii. 25.

VI. So all the members of the mystical Body receive nourishment from Christ, who is the only

Head thereof; and from hence the apostle con-demneth, those false professors, and counterfeit

Christians, who pretended to much piety and religion, but did not receive their doctrine and principles from Christ, nor were they united unto him by evangelical faith. "Not holding the Head, from which all the body by joints and bands having nourishment ministered, and knit together, increaseth with the increase of God," Col. ii. 18, 19.

METAPHOR.

VII. In the natural Body, betwixt the members and the Body there is a marvellous nearness, or blessed union.

VIII. The Body naturally increases in strength, bigness, and beauty; according to the age of the Body, is the perfection and excellency of it.

rise upon thee, and his glory shall be seen upon thee; and the Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising. Lift up thine eyes round about, and see; all they gather themselves together, they come unto thee; thy sons shall come from afar, and thy daughters shall be nursed at thy side," &c., Isa. i. 2—9, to the end of the chapter, compared with chap. lxvi. 8—10, where you may read of the multitude that shall be added to her, and of the abundance of her glory. And as she shall grow in bigness, so likewise she shall increase in spiritual knowledge, faith, and godliness. "For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea," Hab. ii. 14. All the officers, and glorious gifts appertaining to them, that are given to the Church, are "for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the Body of Christ, till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ," Eph. iv. 11, 12, 13.

INFERENCES.

I. This clearly shows what infinite benefit the godly receive from Jesus Christ, and what dependency they have upon him. What can the Body do without the head?

II. How happy are all true believers! How near and dear are they to the Lord Jesus; What greater union is there, than that between the members and the head! No man ever hated his own flesh, but nourisheth and cherisheth it, as the Lord the Church," Eph. v. 29.

III. What will become of those evil and wicked men, that seek to destroy the Church and saints of God! Do they not herein strive to break Christ's bones, and tear his flesh in pieces? What will they do in the day of vengeance, when he comes forth to plead the controversy of Zion, Isa. lxiii. 4.

IV. This reproves that Church, that pretends itself to be Christ's Body, and yet slights and grievously neglects his members, nay, his most useful members. The Church should be as careful and tender of her ministers, as the natural body is of its eyes. Shall the eye suffer, or be in danger of being put out or spoiled, and the hand refuse to relieve and defend it, when it is in its power?

THE CHURCH COMPARED TO A VINEYARD.

"And the Vineyard which thy right hand hath planted," Psal. lxxx. 15.

"Now will I sing to my well-beloved, a song of my beloved, touching his Vineyard, &c. For the Vineyard of the Lord of Hosts is the house of Israel, and the men of Judah his pleasant plant," Isa. v. 1, 7.

A Vineyard, the place where Vines are planted, metaphorically signifieth the Church. The Church is compared to a Vineyard.

METAPHOR.

I. The land that is made into a Vineyard, is a piece of ground taken out of a wilderness, or other common ground, designed to that special use.

II. A Vineyard is fenced or Wall-eyed in, to secure it from wild beasts,

PARALLEL.

VII. So there is a wonderful nearness, and blessed union between Jesus Christ, and every member his mystical Body: "For we are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones," Eph. v. 30.

VIII. So the Church increases in spiritual strength, bigness, and glory. The church is but small and weak now, in comparison of what she shall be, when she is come to her full growth, and perfect state. There will be a great addition to the church in the latter day. "The Lord shall

PARALLEL.

I. So the Church is taken out of the wilderness of this world, being separated from all people, to be a peculiar people to God, 1 Pet. ii. 9. By nature saints were as barren and fruitless as sinners, Eph. ii. 1, 2.

II. So the Lord's Vineyard hath a wall or fence about it: saith the Lord, "I will be a wall and others, who may offend or hurt it.

METAPHOR.

1. Every one of his attributes, as we have elsewhere showed you, is a fence or security to her; his power is a fence, his wisdom is a fence, his mercy is a fence, his special providence is a fence. 2. The holy angels are as a wall or fence to the Church, and to every particular saint; they were as a wall of safety to the prophet, 2 Kings vi. 15, 16. 3. There is about the Church the fence or wall of ordinances, Church-government, and discipline. The reason why God makes a wall about his people, is opened under the metaphor, God a Husband-man; Psal. xxxiv. 7; also the nature and strength of it, to which we refer you.

Quest. Perhaps some may enquire, how much ground doth this hedge or wall take in?

Answ. 1. It taketh in all the bodies of God's people; no disease, sickness, or affliction whatsoever can come upon those that truly fear and serve the Almighty, but what he lets in. This appears in the case of Job: and by what David saith, "My life is in thy hand," &c.

2. This wall comprehends more especially the souls of saints; no temptation, persecution, or trial, can come upon them, but what God lets in. His special eye, care, protection, and divine providence is so over them, that not a hair of their heads shall fall to the ground without his notice; that is, he hath interested himself in all the concerns of his children, yea, even in the smallest matters, 1 Cor. x. 13, Matthew x. 30, Luke xxi. 18.

3. This wall takes in their houses, and all they have: "Hast thou not made a hedge about him, and about his house, and about all that he hath, on every side," Job i. 10. The devil could not touch any of Job's sheep, oxen, or asses, until God opened the door for him; much less his sons, daughters, body and life. "Suffer us," said the unclean spirits to Christ, "to go into the herd of swine." They could not destroy those swine, before permitted or suffered by the Almighty.

III. A Vineyard is planted; the choice things that grow there come not up of themselves.

IV. A Vineyard is digged up, and well-manured, before it be planted; which is not done without much pains.

V. A Vineyard hath many vines planted in it, and not only so, but also fig-trees, pomegranates, and other excellent fruit-trees, Luke xiii. 6, Cant. vi. 11, and vii. 12.

tree planted in his Vineyard, and he came and sought fruit thereon, and found none," Luke xiii. 6.

VI. A Vineyard needs much pruning and watering; the stones also must be gathered out of it: hence there are Vine-dressers appointed to look after it.

2 Cor. vi. 1, to take the care and charge of it. Hence Paul saith, "I have planted, and Apollos watered," 1 Cor. iii. 6.

VII. Vineyards are wont to be hurt by foxes, by the wild of fire unto her round about," Isa. v. 2, Zech. ii. 5. What use soever a fence is to a house, garden, or vineyard, the same is God to his people.

PARALLEL.

III. So the Church is planted by the Lord, and every goodly plant that grows therein. Hence God the Father is called an Husbandman. "The men of Israel are called his pleasant plants," John xv. 1, Isa. v. 7.

IV. The Church of God and every gracious soul, may be said to be digged, or the fallow ground of their hearts by powerful conviction broken up, and thereby prepared to receive the good seed, or to have a principle of grace planted in their hearts, Hos. x. 12.

V. So in the universal Church are many particular congregations or communities of Christians, who are as so many choice Vines in God's sight; it also abounds with plants, some fruitful, and some barren, as is signified by our Saviour. "He spake also this parable: A certain man had a fig-tree planted in his Vineyard, and he came and sought fruit thereon, and found none," Luke

VI. So the Church of God must have much pains taken with it, or it will soon decay; there is need of pruning, and cutting off superfluous branches, and gathering out other things that offend: hence God hath appointed his faithful ministers, who are "workers together with him,"

VII. So the Church of God is often vexed, and greatly hurt by foxes, namely by false teachboar, and other evil beasts; it hath many enemies.

yet preach hurtful and poisonous doctrine, yea, bring in damnable heresies, which greatly tend to the spoiling of God's vineyard, 2 Pet. ii. 2, 3. And then the Church is greatly annoyed also by the wild boar, as David shows, "The boar of the wood doth waste it, and the wild beasts of the field devour it, Psal. lxxx. 13, by which are meant the cruel enemies the Church met with in those days: like as in these latter times, she hath the Pope, who may fitly be compared to a wild boar; and the bloody Papists to ravenous beasts, beasts of prey, such as continually delight in blood and rapine, and to tear the Lambs out of Christ's fold, or destroy the precious bunches of the tender grapes.

VIII. A Vineyard is continually watched over, lest any thing should annoy or hurt it.

VIII. So God is said to watch over his people. "In that day sing unto her: a Vineyard of red wine; I the Lord do keep it every moment, lest any hurt it, I will keep it night and day," Isa. xxvii. 2, 3.

IX. Many that are idle are called into a Vineyard to work.

IX. So God calls men into his spiritual Vineyard, to labour therein, with the promise of reward. "The kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is an householder, which went out early in the morning to hire labourers into his Vineyard: and when he had agreed with the labourers for a penny a day, he sent them into the Vineyard. And he went out, and saw others standing in the market-place," &c. Matt. xx. 1—8.

X. He that is employed to plant and dress a Vineyard, or is a faithful labourer therein, is allowed to eat of the fruit thereof, besides his reward at night.

X. So those whom God employs as planters and Vine-dressers in his spiritual Vineyard, ought to eat of the fruit thereof, viz., have a sufficient maintenance allowed them. "Who planteth a Vineyard, and eateth not of the fruit thereof? or who feedeth a flock, and eateth not of the milk of the flock? even so the Lord hath ordained, that they who preach the Gospel, should live of the Gospel," 1 Cor. ix. 7.

XI. It is expected by the owner of a Vineyard, that after much cost and pains is bestowed upon it, it should bring forth much fruit.

XI. So after God had bestowed much pains and cost on a people, as he did on Israel, "What could have been done more to my Vineyard that I have done in it?" he expects fruit: "And he looked that it should bring forth grapes, and it brought wild grapes," Isa. v. 4.

XII. A Vineyard, having had great labour and cost bestowed upon it, and not yielding fruit answerable to the charge, greatly grieves and troubles the owner, causing him to lay it desolate, and care no more for it.

XII. So when a people have had much cost and pains bestowed upon them by the Lord, and yet they remain barren and unfruitful, walking like men, and bringing forth sour grapes, grapes of Sodom, rather than good fruit, he is greatly offended and grieved thereat, and many times dealeth by that people, Church, or nation, as he threatened to deal by Israel of old. "I will take away the hedge thereof, and it shall be eaten up; and break down the wall thereof, and it shall be trodden down: and I will lay it waste, it shall not be pruned nor digged, but there shall come up briars and thorns; I will cause the rain to rain upon it no more," &c. Isa. v. 3—7. "Therefore I say unto you, the kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof," Matt. xxi. 43. Which of all judgments is the most severe? God deliver his Church in England from so sore a stroke.

INFERENCES.

I. THIS may teach the Church and people of God to take heed they answer the pains and cost God hath been at with them. It is not a little, but much fruit that God expects from us; and not only grapes, but good grapes, sweet grapes, viz., fruits of righteousness, James iii. 18, Rom. v. 17.

II. And let all the plants in this spiritual Vineyard see to it, that they be plants of God's own planting; for if they be not, they shall be plucked up, Matt. xv. 13.

III. And let those that his own right-hand hath planted, see also that they be well rooted. 1. A Tree not well rooted bears but little fruit. 2. A Tree not well rooted is subject to be shaken and blown down. 3. A tree not well rooted is in danger of being plucked up.

1. Labour to be rooted in all the essentials of true religion.
2. And in all the principles of instituted worship.
3. And in all the graces of the Holy Spirit, in faith, love, &c., Ephes. iii. 17.

IV. It may also be of use to encourage and comfort the Church of God, whilst it remains fruitful to him. How safe and secure is that vineyard, that God hath so gloriously walled in on every side! In vain are all the strivings and strength of bloody Rome: if God open not the door for them, they can never prevail against us.

V. It also may be for reproof to loose and slothful professors; O what danger do their sins expose God's Church to!

THE CHURCH COMPARED TO A VIRGIN.

"I have espoused you to one Husband, that I may present you as a chaste Virgin to Christ,"
2 Cor. xi. 2.

A chaste Virgin. This simile alludes to the legal type of the High-priest, who might marry none but a Virgin, Lev. xxi. 15.

Note. The Church, or a gracious soul, is by the apostle compared to an espoused Virgin: "I have espoused you," i. e. I have been an instrument or spokesman in the hand of my blessed Lord and Master herein.

SIMILE.

I. A Virgin is a person that is not defiled, one that hath been kept pure from fornication and uncleanness.

they which were not defiled with women," that is, with the mother of harlots, mystical Babylon, nor with any of her daughters; for they are Virgins, that is, true and chaste to Christ. Rev. xiv. 4.

II. A chaste Virgin, that is espoused to an husband, is greatly beloved by him.

III. A Virgin espoused to an husband, longeth for the wedding-day.

IV. A Virgin espoused, greatly prizes every kind token of love from her friend, and delights to hear from him.

V. A Virgin espoused is a man's wife.

PARALLEL.

I. The Church of God and every sincere Christian, is kept pure from idolatry, viz., the inordinate love of the world, and all antichristian worship. Hence the forty-four thousand upon mount Sion are said to be Virgins; "Those are they which were not defiled with women," that is, with the mother of harlots, mystical Babylon, nor with any of her daughters; for they are Virgins, that is, true and chaste to Christ. Rev. xiv. 4.

II. So the Church, and each sincere Christian, is dearly beloved by the Lord, who is said to rejoice over his people, "as a young man rejoiceth over his bride," Isa. lxii. 4, 5.

III. So the Church longeth for the return of the Bridegroom, when Christ will take her to himself. "The marriage of the Lamb is come," &c., Cant. viii. 14, Rev. xix. 7, 8.

IV. So all sincere souls wonderfully prize every precious token of Christ's special favour to them. "Let him kiss me with the kisses of his mouth, for his love is better than wine," Cant. i. 2.

V. So is the Church the wife of Christ.

THE CHURCH COMPARED TO A WIFE.

"Thy Maker is thy Husband," Isa. liv. 5.

"I will show thee the Bride, the Lamb's wife," Rev. xxi. 9.

By the metaphor, espousals, which is the most pleasant metaphor of all, the spiritual union between Christ and the Church is expressed, Hos. ii. 19, 20. From the names of husband and Wife, metaphors also are taken, Isa. liv. 5, where God calls him-

METAPHOR.

VII. In the natural Body, betwixt the members and the Body there is a marvellous nearness, or blessed union.

VIII. The Body naturally increases in strength, bigness, and beauty; according to the age of the Body, is the perfection and excellency of it.

rise upon thee, and his glory shall be seen upon thee; and the Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising. Lift up thine eyes round about, and see; all they gather themselves together, they come unto thee; thy sons shall come from afar, and thy daughters shall be nursed at thy side," &c., Isa. lx. 2—9, to the end of the chapter, compared with chap. lvi. 8—10, where you may read of the multitude that shall be added to her, and of the abundance of her glory. And as she shall grow in bigness, so likewise she shall increase in spiritual knowledge, faith, and godliness. "For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea," Hab. ii. 14. All the officers, and glorious gifts appertaining to them, that are given to the Church, are "for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the Body of Christ, till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ," Eph. iv. 11, 12, 13.

INFERENCES.

I. This clearly shows what infinite benefit the godly receive from Jesus Christ, and what dependency they have upon him. What can the Body do without the head?

II. How happy are all true believers! How near and dear are they to the Lord Jesus; What greater union is there, than that between the members and the head! No man ever hated his own flesh, but nourisheth and cherisheth it, as the Lord the Church," Eph. v. 29.

III. What will become of those evil and wicked men, that seek to destroy the Church and saints of God! Do they not herein strive to break Christ's bones, and tear his flesh in pieces? What will they do in the day of vengeance, when he comes forth to plead the controversy of Zion, Isa. lxiii. 4.

IV. This reproves that Church, that pretends itself to be Christ's Body, and yet slights and grievously neglects his members, nay, his most useful members. The Church should be as careful and tender of her ministers, as the natural body is of its eyes. Shall the eye suffer, or be in danger of being put out or spoiled, and the hand refuse to relieve and defend it, when it is in its power?

THE CHURCH COMPARED TO A VINEYARD.

"And the Vineyard which thy right hand hath planted," Psal. lxxx. 15.

"Now will I sing to my well-beloved, a song of my beloved, touching his Vineyard, &c. For the Vineyard of the Lord of Hosts is the house of Israel, and the men of Judah his pleasant plant," Isa. v. 1, 7.

A Vineyard, the place where Vines are planted, metaphorically signifieth the Church. The Church is compared to a Vineyard.

METAPHOR.

I. The land that is made into a Vineyard, is a piece of ground taken out of a wilderness, or other common ground, designed to that special use.

II. A Vineyard is fenced or Wall-ed in, to secure it from wild beasts,

PARALLEL.

VII. So there is a wonderful nearness, and blessed union between Jesus Christ, and every member his mystical Body: "For we are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones," Eph. v. 30.

VIII. So the Church increases in spiritual strength, bigness, and glory. The church is but small and weak now, in comparison of what she shall be, when she is come to her full growth, and perfect state. There will be a great addition to the church in the latter day. "The Lord shall

I. So the Church is taken out of the wilderness of this world, being separated from all people, to be a peculiar people to God, 1 Pet. ii. 9. By nature saints were as barren and fruitless as sinners, Eph. ii. 1, 2.

II. So the Lord's Vineyard hath a wall or fence about it: saith the Lord, "I will be a wall and others, who may offend or hurt it.

METAPHOR.

1. Every one of his attributes, as we have elsewhere showed you, is a fence or security to her; his power is a fence, his wisdom is a fence, his mercy is a fence, his special providence is a fence. 2. The holy angels are as a wall or fence to the Church, and to every particular saint; they were as a wall of safety to the prophet, 2 Kings vi. 15, 16. 3. There is about the Church the fence or wall of ordinances, Church-government, and discipline. The reason why God makes a wall about his people, is opened under the metaphor, God a Husband-man; Psal. xxxiv. 7; also the nature and strength of it, to which we refer you.

Quest. Perhaps some may enquire, how much ground doth this hedge or wall take in?

Ans. 1. It taketh in all the bodies of God's people; no disease, sickness, or affliction whatsoever can come upon those that truly fear and serve the Almighty, but what he lets in. This appears in the case of Job: and by what David saith, "My life is in thy hand," &c.

2. This wall comprehends more especially the souls of saints; no temptation, persecution, or trial, can come upon them, but what God lets in. His special eye, care, protection, and divine providence is so over them, that not a hair of their heads shall fall to the ground without his notice; that is, he hath interested himself in all the concernments of his children, yea, even in the smallest matters, 1 Cor. x. 13, Matthew x. 30, Luke xxi. 18.

3. This wall takes in their houses, and all they have: "Hast thou not made a hedge about him, and about his house, and about all that he hath, on every side," Job i. 10. The devil could not touch any of Job's sheep, oxen, or asses, until God opened the door for him; much less his sons, daughters, body and life. "Suffer us," said the unclean spirits to Christ, "to go into the herd of swine." They could not destroy those swine, before permitted or suffered by the Almighty.

III. A Vineyard is planted; the choice things that grow there come not up of themselves.

IV. A Vineyard is digged up, and well-manured, before it be planted; which is not done without much pains.

V. A Vineyard hath many vines planted in it, and not only so, but also fig-trees, pomegranates, and other excellent fruit-trees, Luke xiii. 6, Cant. vi. 11, and vii. 12.

tree planted in his Vineyard, and he came and sought fruit thereon, and found none," Luke xiii. 6.

VI. A Vineyard needs much pruning and watering; the stones also must be gathered out of it: hence there are Vine-dressers appointed to look after it.

2 Cor. vi. 1, to take the care and charge of it. Hence Paul saith, "I have planted, and Apollos watered," 1 Cor. iii. 6.

VII. Vineyards are wont to be hurt by foxes, by the wild of fire unto her round about," Isa. v. 2, Zech. ii. 5. What use soever a fence is to a house, garden, or vineyard, the same is God to his people.

PARALLEL.

III. So the Church is planted by the Lord, and every goodly plant that grows therein. Hence God the Father is called an Husbandman. "The men of Israel are called his pleasant plants," John xv. 1, Isa. v. 7.

IV. The Church of God and every gracious soul, may be said to be digged, or the fallow ground of their hearts by powerful conviction broken up, and thereby prepared to receive the good seed, or to have a principle of grace planted in their hearts, Hos. x. 12.

V. So in the universal Church are many particular congregations or communities of Christians, who are as so many choice Vines in God's sight; it also abounds with plants, some fruitful, and some barren, as is signified by our Saviour. "He spake also this parable: A certain man had a fig-tree planted in his Vineyard, and he came and sought fruit thereon, and found none," Luke

VI. So the Church of God must have much pains taken with it, or it will soon decay; there is need of pruning, and cutting off superfluous branches, and gathering out other things that offend: hence God hath appointed his faithful ministers, who are "workers together with him,"

VII. So the Church of God is often vexed, and greatly hurt by foxes, namely by false teachboar, and other evil beasts; it hath many enemies.

ers, who for their subtilty and cruelty are called foxes. By "little foxes," Cant. ii. 15, some understand such as seem devout, and very humble, and yet preach hurtful and poisonous doctrine, yea, bring in damnable heresies, which greatly tend to the spoiling of God's vineyard, 2 Pet. ii. 2, 3. And then the Church is greatly annoyed also by the wild boar, as David shows, "The boar of the wood doth waste it, and the wild beasts of the field devour it, Psal. lxxx. 13, by which are meant the cruel enemies the Church met with in those days: like as in these latter times, she hath the Pope, who may fitly be compared to a wild boar; and the bloody Papists to ravenous beasts, beasts of prey, such as continually delight in blood and rapine, and to tear the Lambs out of Christ's fold, or destroy the precious bunches of the tender grapes.

VIII. A Vineyard is continually watched over, lest any thing should annoy or hurt it.

VIII. So God is said to watch over his people. "In that day sing unto her: a Vineyard of red wine; I the Lord do keep it every moment, lest any hurt it, I will keep it night and day," Isa. xxvii. 2, 3.

IX. Many that are idle are called into a Vineyard to work.

IX. So God calls men into his spiritual Vineyard, to labour therein, with the promise of reward. "The kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is an householder, which went out early in the morning to hire labourers into his Vineyard: and when he had agreed with the labourers for a penny a day, he sent them into the Vineyard. And he went out, and saw others standing in the market-place," &c. Matt. xx. 1—8.

X. He that is employed to plant and dress a Vineyard, or is a faithful labourer therein, is allowed to eat of the fruit thereof, besides his reward at night.

X. So those whom God employs as planters and Vine-dressers in his spiritual Vineyard, ought to eat of the fruit thereof, viz., have a sufficient maintenance allowed them. "Who planteth a Vineyard, and eateth not of the fruit thereof? or who feedeth a flock, and eateth not of the milk of the flock? even so the Lord hath ordained, that they who preach the Gospel, should live of the Gospel," 1 Cor. ix. 7.

XI. It is expected by the owner of a Vineyard, that after much cost and pains is bestowed upon it, it should bring forth much fruit.

XI. So after God had bestowed much pains and cost on a people, as he did on Israel, "What could have been done more to my Vineyard that I have done in it?" he expects fruit: "And he looked that it should bring forth grapes, and it brought wild grapes," Isa. v. 4.

XII. A Vineyard, having had great labour and cost bestowed upon it, and not yielding fruit answerable to the charge, greatly grieves and troubles the owner, causing him to lay it desolate, and care no more for it.

XII. So when a people have had much cost and pains bestowed upon them by the Lord, and yet they remain barren and unfruitful, walking like men, and bringing forth sour grapes, grapes of Sodom, rather than good fruit, he is greatly offended and grieved thereat, and many times dealeth by that people, Church, or nation, as he threatened to deal by Israel of old. "I will take away the hedge thereof, and it shall be eaten up; and break down the wall thereof, and it shall be trodden down: and I will lay it waste, it shall not be pruned nor digged, but there shall come up briars and thorns; I will cause the rain to rain upon it no more," &c. Isa. v. 3—7. "Therefore I say unto you, the kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof," Matt. xxi. 43. Which of all judgments is the most severe? God deliver his Church in England from so sore a stroke.

INFERENCES.

I. THIS may teach the Church and people of God to take heed they answer the pains and cost God hath been at with them. It is not a little, but much fruit that God expects from us; and not only grapes, but good grapes, sweet grapes, viz., fruits of righteousness, James iii. 18, Rom. v. 17.

II. And let all the plants in this spiritual Vineyard see to it, that they be plants of God's own planting; for if they be not, they shall be plucked up, Matt. xv. 13.

III. And let those that his own right-hand hath planted, see also that they be well rooted. 1. A Tree not well rooted bears but little fruit. 2. A Tree not well rooted is subject to be shaken and blown down. 3. A tree not well rooted is in danger of being plucked up.

1. Labour to be rooted in all the essentials of true religion.
2. And in all the principles of instituted worship.
3. And in all the graces of the Holy Spirit, in faith, love, &c., Ephes. iii. 17.

IV. It may also be of use to encourage and comfort the Church of God, whilst it remains fruitful to him. How safe and secure is that vineyard, that God hath so gloriously walled in on every side! In vain are all the strivings and strength of bloody Rome: if God open not the door for them, they can never prevail against us.

V. It also may be for reproof to loose and slothful professors; O what danger do their sins expose God's Church to!

THE CHURCH COMPARED TO A VIRGIN.

"I have espoused you to one Husband, that I may present you as a chaste Virgin to Christ,"
2 Cor. xi. 2.

A chaste Virgin. This simile alludes to the legal type of the High-priest, who might marry none but a Virgin, Lev. xxi. 15.

Note. The Church, or a gracious soul, is by the apostle compared to an espoused Virgin: "I have espoused you," i. e. I have been an instrument or spokesman in the hand of my blessed Lord and Master herein.

SIMILE.

I. A Virgin is a person that is not defiled, one that hath been kept pure from fornication and uncleanness.

they which were not defiled with women," that is, with the mother of harlots, mystical Babylon, nor with any of her daughters; for they are Virgins, that is, true and chaste to Christ. Rev. xiv. 4.

II. A chaste Virgin, that is espoused to an husband, is greatly beloved by him.

III. A Virgin espoused to an husband, longeth for the wedding-day.

IV. A Virgin espoused, greatly prizes every kind token of love from her friend, and delights to hear from him.

V. A Virgin espoused is a man's wife.

PARALLEL.

I. The Church of God and every sincere Christian, is kept pure from idolatry, viz., the inordinate love of the world, and all antichristian worship. Hence the forty-four thousand upon mount Sion are said to be Virgins; "Those are they which were not defiled with women," that is, with the mother of harlots, mystical Babylon, nor with any of her daughters; for they are Virgins, that is, true and chaste to Christ. Rev. xiv. 4.

II. So the Church, and each sincere Christian, is dearly beloved by the Lord, who is said to rejoice over his people, "as a young man rejoiceth over his bride," Isa. lxii. 4, 5.

III. So the Church longeth for the return of the Bridegroom, when Christ will take her to himself. "The marriage of the Lamb is come," &c., Cant. viii. 14, Rev. xix. 7, 8.

IV. So all sincere souls wonderfully prize every precious token of Christ's special favour to them. "Let him kiss me with the kisses of his mouth, for his love is better than wine," Cant. i. 2.

V. So is the Church the wife of Christ.

THE CHURCH COMPARED TO A WIFE.

"Thy Maker is thy Husband," Isa. liv. 5.

"I will show thee the Bride, the Lamb's wife," Rev. xxi. 9.

By the metaphor, espousals, which is the most pleasant metaphor of all, the spiritual union between Christ and the Church is expressed, Hos. ii. 19, 20. From the names of husband and Wife, metaphors also are taken, Isa. liv. 5, where God calls himself נָשָׂא, the husband of the Church, and hence Zion is said to be נְשׂוּלָה, Beulah, that is married, Isa. lxii. 4, 5.

Note, The Church of Christ is the Wife of Christ.

METAPHOR.

I. A Wife is one who hath made a solemn contract with, and is married to an husband.

II. A woman that entereth into a marriage-relation with an husband, gives herself wholly to him. The husband gives himself to her, and she by way of return gives herself unto him; they consent to take each other.

will be thine, saith every sincere convert, I will be for thee, and not for another. Hence it is said, "They gave themselves to the Lord," 2 Cor. viii. 5. Blessed Jesus, saith the soul, such as I am and have, I give to thee; I am poor sorry piece, infinitely unworthy to wash the feet of the servants of my Lord, O how undeserving then of thy acceptance! My best is too bad, my all is too little for thee: but since it is thy pleasure to accept of such a gift, I do with my whole soul give myself, my strength, my time, my talents, and all I have, am, or can do, for the glory of thy holy name.

III. A faithful Wife, in marrying herself to one husband, renounceth all other men, and keeps herself chaste and faithful to him.

that ye should be married to another, even to him who is risen from the dead, that we should bring forth fruit unto God," Rom. vii. 4.

IV. The Wife obeyeth and reverenceth her husband; as Sarah, who called her husband lord.

V. A faithful Wife strives to please her husband, "But she that is married, careth how she may please her husband," 1 Cor. vii. 34.

VI. A Wife by marrying an husband is interested in his estate, and hath a legal right to what is his.

VII. A Wife, by marrying an husband, is brought into a near union and communion with him: "They are no more twain, but one flesh," Matt. xix. 6 great mystery, but I speak concerning Christ and the Church," Ephes. v. 31. Hence the apostle saith, "He that is joined to the Lord is one Spirit," 1 Cor. vi. 17. This is a most blessed union, a full union, a lasting union; (1.) a full union. The whole person of Christ is joined to the whole person of a believer, and the whole person of a believer is joined to the whole person of Christ. Not only Christ's human nature is joined to a believer, but his divine nature also; and so not only the body of a believer is joined to Christ, but his soul is joined also. This may administer much consolation to dying saints: the body as well as the soul, is the Lord's, and therefore shall not be lost, he will raise it up at the last day. From hence Christ sympathizeth with his people, he feels and is sensible of all their sorrows, he looks upon their sufferings as his sufferings. "I was an hungered, and ye gave me no meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink; naked, and ye clothed me not: sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not," Matt. xxv. 35, 36. "In all their afflictions he was afflicted, Isa. lxiii. 9.

PARALLEL.

I. So the Church, and every true Christian, hath made a solemn contract or covenant with, and is married to the Lord Jesus, Rom. vii. 1—4.

II. So a gracious soul in this spiritual marriage gives itself to Christ, and Christ gives himself to the soul. I will be thine, saith Christ, to love thee, thine to save thee, thine to crown thee, and make thee happy; I, with all my riches, and rich treasures of grace and glory, will be fully thine, and for ever thine. And on the other hand, the soul by way of return gives itself unto Christ: I will be for thee, and not for another. Hence it is said, "They gave themselves to the Lord," 2 Cor. viii. 5. Blessed Jesus, saith the soul, such as I am and have, I give to thee; I am poor sorry piece, infinitely unworthy to wash the feet of the servants of my Lord, O how undeserving then of thy acceptance! My best is too bad, my all is too little for thee: but since it is thy pleasure to accept of such a gift, I do with my whole soul give myself, my strength, my time, my talents, and all I have, am, or can do, for the glory of thy holy name.

III. So all true Christians renounce sin, self, and the law in point of justification, and all lovers whatsoever, and keep themselves chaste and faithful to Christ. "Wherefore brethren, ye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ, even to him who is risen from the dead, that we should bring forth fruit unto God," Rom. vii. 4.

IV. So the church obeys and reverences the Lord Jesus Christ, and owns him to be her Lord.

V. So the Church, and each true Christian, strives to please the Lord Jesus, "That ye may walk worthy of the Lord in all well-pleasing, being fruitful in every good work," Col. i. 10.

VI. So the soul by marrying of Christ, is interested into all Christ's riches; he hath a sure, a new covenant-right to whatsoever Christ hath; the riches both of grace and glory are become his hereby.

VII. So the Church, and each true Christian, be entering into a marriage relation with the Lord Jesus, is brought into a very near union and conjunction with him. "For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall join unto his wife, and they two shall be one flesh. This is a

VIII. A Wife, by marriage-relation, is taken up with much sweet peace, joy, and complacency, in that estate. Her husband is better to her than ten sons, as Elkanah said to Hannah. It is a relation made up of love and delight.

And there is none on earth that I desire besides thee." "Thou hast ravished my heart, (saith Christ,) my sister, my spouse. How fair and pleasant art thou, O love, for delight ! Turn away thine eyes, for they have overcome me." "He shall rest in his love." And on the other hand, what saith the Spouse, the Wife of Christ ? "I sat down under his shadow with great delight, and his fruit was sweet unto my taste." "He is altogether lovely." "Stay me with flagons, comfort me with apples ; for I am sick of love." Psal. xlv. 2, Cant. v. 10, Psal. lxxiii. 25, Zeph. iii. 17, Cant. v. 16. The saints, saith one, are called Christ's Spouse, because of the unparalleled love that is between them ; and, saith another, Christ calls himself our bridegroom, that he might insinuate the greatness of his love, which decays not with time ; and he calls us his spouse, not his Wife, noting, that our love to him should be always new, always lively and vigorous.

IX. A tender and dear wife is greatly troubled when her husband seems to be offended and angry with her, and strives to pacify him again, and is never at rest or peace, until she find his love towards her as formerly, and all things right between them.

not wroth very sore, O Lord, neither remember our iniquity for ever ; behold, we beseech thee, we are thy people," Isa. lxiii. 15, and lxiv. 9.

X. The Wife, by her marriage with her husband, is delivered from arrests for debts ; no sooner is she married, but her husband is liable to that danger, it falls upon him, he must see to satisfy and pay what she owed.

XI. The wife that is married to a prince, or mighty potentate, is thereby greatly exalted, or raised to honour, becomes a queen the same day the marriage is consummated, and hath the attendance of his servants.

XII. The Wife that is married to a rich and godly husband, is thereby freed from much care and trouble ; for he provideth for her, and manageth all her concerns. It be true, although every husband be bound by the law of that relation to provide for his Wife, and free her from care as much as he can ; yet some are poor, and unable to do it, and hence the Wife is involved in as much care and trouble as he.

VIII. The Church and every true believer, by being espoused and married to Christ, the Lord Jesus, hath a near, a dear, a strong, and most intimate affection towards him. A saint is filled with most sweet peace, joy, and delight, and takes most precious complacency in Christ ; he is more than father, mother, sons, or daughters. "He is fairer than the sons of men." "The chiefest of ten thousand." "Whom have I in heaven but thee ?

IX. So a gracious soul, if Christ be offended, and withdraw from him, is greatly cast down and grieved. "Thou hidest thy face, and I was troubled ; I opened to my beloved, but my beloved had withdrawn himself, and was gone. My soul failed when he spake ; I sought him, but I could not find him ; I called him, but he gave me no answer," Cant. v. 6. "Where is the soundings of thy bowels, and thy mercy towards me ? Are they restrained ?" "Bemercy towards me ? Are they restrained ?" "Bemercy towards me ? Are they restrained ?"

X. So in like manner, no sooner is a soul espoused or married to Christ, but all his debts to law and justice fall upon Christ, and he pays all ; he stands between wrath and us, justice and us ; he keeps off all danger or arrests, and fear of imprisonment ; he hath riches enough. All is cleared the day the soul closes in with him, though whole mountains of guilt were upon us before.

XI. So the Church being married to Christ, the Lord Jesus, the Prince of heaven and earth, is raised to the greatest honour imaginable ; she is made hereby a princess, and hence called a queen. "On thy right hand did stand the queen, in gold of Ophir," Psal. xlv. 9. The saints also have the attendance of Christ's servants, the holy angels. "They are sent forth to minister to them that are heirs of eternal life," Heb. i. 14.

XII. Christ frees his people from all inordinate and unnecessary care. "Cast all your care upon him, for he careth for you," 1 Pet. v. 7. He manageth all our concerns in heaven, always appearing before God for us. "We have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous," 1 John ii. 1, and he manageth all our affairs on earth, in a way of grace, and divine Providence ; works all our works in us, and for us, Isa. xxvii. 12. He gives and loves, saves and feeds us, and will never leave us, till he hath brought us to heaven. "He became poor, (but we were no losers thereby,) for by his poverty we are made rich," 2 Cor. viii. 9.

XIII. A Wife brings forth children, and is many times very fruitful to her husband; and when she hath brought them forth, takes care of them, feeds and nurseth them.

upon her knees, as one whom his mother

XIV. A Wife hath the privilege to know her husband's mind; for many things which are kept secret from others, are made known to the Wife.

METAPHOR.

A Wife may soon lose her husband; death, we see, many times takes him away, and she is thereby made a widow, and her children fatherless.

XIII. So the Church is fruitful to Christ, bringing forth many sons and daughters to him, whom she takes care of, feeds, and nurseth, as the mother does her children. "For thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will extend peace to her like a river, and the glory of the Gentiles like a flowing stream. Then shall ye suck, yeshall be borne upon her sides, and dandled comforteth," &c. See Mother. Isa. lxvi. 12; 13.

XIV. "So the secrets of the Lord are with them that fear him, and he will show them his covenant," Psal. xxv. 14. "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, nor hath it entered into the heart of men to conceive, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. But God hath revealed them to us by his Spirit," 1 Cor. ii. 9, 10.

DISPARITY.

But the Church cannot lose her Husband. Christ "dieth no more," Rom. vi. 9. He is immortal, Rev. i. 18, and therefore she can never be a widow, nor her children fatherless. "I will not leave you comfortless," the word is orphans, John xiv. 18. He is an everlasting Husband.

INFERENCES.

I. Stand and wonder! Doth Christ espouse and take to wife such a poor and contemptible creature as mankind! What disproportion is there between a king and a beggar, between an ant and an angel? A far greater disproportion there is between Jesus Christ and sinners. He is high and great; but we are base and vile. He is blessed and glorious; we are wretched and miserable. He is a mighty King, King of kings; and we poor slaves and vassals, yea, the worst of vassals and slaves to sin and Satan.

II. From hence you may perceive the unspeakable nearness there is between Christ and his people; can there be a sweeter and more glorious union than this! If we consider the properties of it, it is a spiritual, a real, an operative, an enriching, an intimate, an indissoluble union, to be bone of his bone, and flesh of his flesh. What can any soul desire more? What greater happiness, what more glorious, saith one of the ancients, than this union?

III. What doctrine can yield greater comfort to believers, who are thus happily espoused and married to Jesus Christ! We say, such and such are well disposed of, happily married; O soul, how well art thou disposed of! What! married to Christ, to the Son of God, to the King of heaven and earth!

IV. This may show the saints their duty, and put them in mind of their covenant. Soul, thou hast vowed, and canst not go back.

V. And may be of use, especially to all that stand related as husband and wife in the Church, for husbands to make Christ their pattern in their carriage and deportment towards their Wives; and likewise Wives to make the church their example in their behaviour towards their husbands, as the apostle giveth direction, Eph. v. 21, 33.

VI. Lastly; What terror doth this speak to the enemies of the church! If the church be the wife of Christ, what will they do that so much abuse her, and continually seek her life? Let them know, he will appear in wrath and vengeance to save and deliver her, and will tear them in pieces in a short time.

THE CHURCH COMPARED TO A BUSH ON FIRE.

“And the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a Bush ; and he looked, and behold, the Bush burned, and was not consumed,” Exod. iii. 2.

ACCORDING to Ainsworth, and divers other expositors, by the Bush is meant the Church of God in great affliction, the severe trials of God's people being often set forth in the holy scriptures by Fire, by a flame of Fire, and sometimes by a smoking furnace ; as in Abraham's vision, Gen. xv. 17, “ And behold a smoking furnace, and a burning lamp, that passed between the pieces.” By the smoking furnace was signified to Abraham, Israel's great affliction in Egypt ; and by the lamp, the law of God that afterwards was given ; or, as some understand it, the lamp of deliverance, or that salvation God would work, for them, &c., for that the salvation of God is like to a lamp that burneth, Isa. lii. 1.

Quest. Why is the Church of God compared to a Bush, to a burning Bush ? The scripture usually sets out the Church by things whose natures or qualities are excellent, things that are of great worth, &c. And why should she be compared to a Bush, to a bramble-Bush ? for so Ainsworth and others read it.

Answ. Some of the reasons of it, according to our weak judgments, are hinted in the following parallels.

METAPHOR.

I. A Bush is a thing of small worth and value, few esteem or regard a bramble-Bush ; stately trees are viewed and prized, and some of them valued highly, but so is not a Bush.

II. A Bramble-Bush, as it is a thing of no worth or value, so it is a thing that hath no beauty in it, in comparison of other trees ; it is nowise taking to the eye. Some things that are of no great worth, seem very glorious and beautiful ; but there is none of this in a bramble.

men in a like state ; no carnal eye that

III. A Bush is not only a thing of little worth in the esteem of men, but it is in itself really of small value. What is a bramble worth ? What is it good for, but to be cut down, and cast into the fire ?

power of God's grace, yet there remaineth something still of the old man and evil nature in them. And God, in other places of scripture, where he compareth them to a Vine, to Lilies, to a Garden, to golden Candlesticks, &c., speaks of them with respect to what they are by his special grace in Christ Jesus. But here, in comparing them to a Bush, he hath respect, as we conceive, to what they are in themselves, and by nature, to set forth their own unworthiness, that so he might thereby raise Moses' wonder, to see the mighty condescension of the blessed God, in having regard to such a poor undeserving people, to dwell in them, and in keeping and preserving

PARALLEL.

I. So likewise the Church of God was then and is now, a thing of small value, of little or no esteem in the eyes of wicked men ; it was no more regarded by proud Pharaoh, and many of the Egyptians, than a sorry bramble-Bush. Hence the apostle speaketh of the Church, as being very contemptible in the sight of men. “ We are made as the filth of the world, and are the offscouring of all things unto this day,” 1 Cor. iv. 13.

II. So the true Church of God is not clothed with outward beauty, nor arrayed in purple and scarlet, decked with gold, precious stones, and pearls, like the mother of harlots, Rev. xvii. 4, but seemeth low, base, and contemptible to a carnal eye, her beauty been all hidden : “ The king's daughter is glorious within,” Psal. xlv. 13. And it is from hence the world values her no more. As Christ made himself of no reputation, Phil. ii. 7, so the Church for a while remaineth among seeth her, doth at all desire her.

III. So the people of God, considered abstractively, as they are in themselves, what are they ? What worth or excellency is in them ? All the beauty and glory of the Church is from Christ. They are naturally vile sinners, and are called thorns, briars, and pricking brambles, Mic. vii. 4 ; and though converted and changed, by the them in the midst of such fierce and cruel enemies, when a small spark might easily consume and destroy them in an instant, but that he stretcheth forth his glorious arms of grace and divine power for their succour and relief.

METAPHOR.

IV. There is one thing more touching a Bush, which for illustration sake I shall here mention, not that the Spirit of God had respect to it in this vision, viz., a Bush is a common receptacle for birds; it is the place where they lodge, make their nests in, and are secured from many dangers that do attend them.

righteous," Isa. xxiv. 16. And indeed in our judgment the godly are compared to birds principally upon this consideration, i. e., in respect to their singing, which is laid down in several places of scripture as an undoubted duty; I wish that Christians, who are not in the practice thereof, would consider of it. But to proceed, how safe is the bird, when she getteth into the Bush? so are the saints, when they are got into the Church; God being a wall of Fire around about her, and her defence and glory on every side, Zech. ii. 5.

V. It is a strange and marvellous thing, to see a bramble-Bush on Fire, and not consumed; this made Moses to turn aside: "I will turn aside to see this great sight."

versaries, and yet she is not consumed! How many plots and hellish contrivances were there on foot against poor Israel in Egypt? First; they made a law, that the midwives should kill all their men-children, when they did their office. Secondly; when that would not take, because the midwives feared God, and saved the men-children alive: "They feared God it is said, and did not as the king of Egypt commanded," &c., Exod. i. 17. Then they thought of another way, another plot was set on foot, a new fire, as it were, was kindled, which was, to cast all the men-children into the river, "And Pharaoh charged all his people, saying, every son that is born ye shall cast into the river, and every daughter ye shall save alive," Exod. i. 22. Hence poor Moses was cast into the flags, who afterwards was an instrument in the hand of God, by working many signs and wonders, and appeared to help and deliver Israel, one that Pharaoh little thought of. Thirdly; but this not taking so effectually neither, they were most cruelly oppressed by hard servitude, and forced to make their full tale of bricks, and yet straw is denied them; which made the lives of God's people bitter unto them. Fourthly, and lastly: When they desired liberty to go and worship God, this was denied them, by no means would Pharaoh consent to it, but made his hands heavier and heavier upon them. Thus were they in the Fire and furnace of affliction, and yet graciously preserved, notwithstanding their enemies were so many, so cruel, and so mighty above them. And this was that great sight that God in a figure showed to Moses; and this great sight is to be seen at this day, in this and other nations. O what hellish plots and contrivances have been set on foot for many years last past, especially for the space of two or three years! How many Fires have been kindled to consume the poor Church of God in England, and other adjacent nations! What plots and sham-plots have the Popish enemies set on foot, since the time that Dr. Oates first discovered the grand and hellish intrigue. And yet how wonderfully hath God wrought to save us to this day, notwithstanding we are an unworthy people, and as little deserving this divine favour, in ourselves, as ever any were, who ever lived in any age of the world! The strange and perfidious actings of the enemy to destroy us, and the strange and wonderful workings of divine Providence to preserve us, have been so admirable, that succeeding ages, who shall read the history of these times, will doubtless, scarcely believe them, but rather conclude they are mere romances.

VI. Here I might note also, for illustration sake, that a bramble-

PARALLEL.

IV. The Church of God is the chief place for the saints of God to dwell or make their abode in, who in the song of songs are called birds: "The time of the singing of birds is come," &c., Cant. ii. 12. Which, saith Reverend Mr. Ainsworth, signifies the saints, who feeling the comforts of God's Word and Spirit, do sing the praises of God, with psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs. "They shall lift up their voice, they shall sing for the majesty of the Lord: and from the uttermost parts of the earth we have heard songs, even glory to the

V. So it is a strange sight, a prodigy, a mercy to a wonder, enough to astonish all true thinking Christians, to see the Church of God, the unworthy, frail, polluted, weak, and declining Church, as set on Fire, yea, all on a flame, as it were, many fires being kindled on her by wicked adversaries, and yet she is not consumed! How many plots and hellish contrivances were there on foot against poor Israel in Egypt? First; they made a law, that the midwives should kill all their men-children, when they did their office. Secondly; when that would not take, because the midwives feared God, and saved the men-children alive: "They feared God it is said, and did not as the king of Egypt commanded," &c., Exod. i. 17. Then they thought of another way, another plot was set on foot, a new fire, as it were, was kindled, which was, to cast all the men-children into the river, "And Pharaoh charged all his people, saying, every son that is born ye shall cast into the river, and every daughter ye shall save alive," Exod. i. 22. Hence poor Moses was cast into the flags, who afterwards was an instrument in the hand of God, by working many signs and wonders, and appeared to help and deliver Israel, one that Pharaoh little thought of. Thirdly; but this not taking so effectually neither, they were most cruelly oppressed by hard servitude, and forced to make their full tale of bricks, and yet straw is denied them; which made the lives of God's people bitter unto them. Fourthly, and lastly: When they desired liberty to go and worship God, this was denied them, by no means would Pharaoh consent to it, but made his hands heavier and heavier upon them. Thus were they in the Fire and furnace of affliction, and yet graciously preserved, notwithstanding their enemies were so many, so cruel, and so mighty above them. And this was that great sight that God in a figure showed to Moses; and this great sight is to be seen at this day, in this and other nations. O what hellish plots and contrivances have been set on foot for many years last past, especially for the space of two or three years! How many Fires have been kindled to consume the poor Church of God in England, and other adjacent nations! What plots and sham-plots have the Popish enemies set on foot, since the time that Dr. Oates first discovered the grand and hellish intrigue. And yet how wonderfully hath God wrought to save us to this day, notwithstanding we are an unworthy people, and as little deserving this divine favour, in ourselves, as ever any were, who ever lived in any age of the world! The strange and perfidious actings of the enemy to destroy us, and the strange and wonderful workings of divine Providence to preserve us, have been so admirable, that succeeding ages, who shall read the history of these times, will doubtless, scarcely believe them, but rather conclude they are mere romances.

VI. So such as roughly and unadvisedly touch and handle the Lord's people, do but prick and

METAPHOR.

Bush is attended with thorns, and often offends and wounds such as roughly and unadvisedly meddle with it.

God knoweth how to make Jerusalem a burthensome stone for all people: "All that burthen themselves with it shall be cut in pieces, though all the earth shall be gathered together against it," Zech. xii. 3. Hence Christ gave persecuting Saul warning of the danger: "It is hard for thee to kick against the pricks," Acts ix. 5. Those that kick against God's Church, do but kick against the pricks; they do but hurt, wound, and undo themselves thereby.

As for disparities, they are many, and so obvious to all, that I shall pass them by; for though the Church of God is here represented by a bramble-Bush, yet she is in Christ's sight as a lily among thorns; and her worth and glory through the Lord Jesus is so great, that she very far surpasseth all the people and families of the earth. Nothing of all created things doth Christ think good enough to set forth and illustrate the beauty and excellence of his Church and people by, however unworthy she is in her own sight, or in the eyes of the sinful world.

INFERENCES.

I. Admire the grace and love of God, the Almighty Jehovah, that inhabiteth eternity, that he should out of his abundant favour, good will, and his great condescension, dwell in a poor bramble-Bush! who is able to conceive this rich and undeserved favour.

II. It also informeth us, how it comes to pass that the poor saints and Church of God are preserved to this day: it is because God is among them, God dwelleth in the Bush: the Lord dwelleth in Sion, to comfort, revive, uphold, save, and deliver her in the day of trouble.

III. It may serve to humble us, and lay us low in our own eyes. What are the best of God's people, by nature, and in themselves, but as a Bush, briar, or thorny hedge? it is God who hath made us to differ from others.

IV. It may deter the wicked, and for ever be a warning to them, to forbear persecuting God's people; for that it will prove at last to their utter ruin; they kick but against the pricks.

V. Remember the good will of him, and seek his blessing, that dwelt in the Bush.

THE CHURCH COMPARED TO A MOTHER.

"O that thou wert as my brother, that sucked the breasts of my Mother!" Cant. viii. 1.

"Jerusalem, which is above, is free, which is the Mother of us all," Gal. iv. 26.

By Mother in these scriptures is meant the Church of God, or as some expound it, the universal Church. As God is a believer's Father, so the Church is his Mother.

METAPHOR.

I. A Mother is the wife of an husband; it imports a marriage-state. Every godly woman that is a Mother, can show who is, or was, her husband.

II. A Mother is one that beareth and bringeth forth children.

Hence the saints are called sons and daughters, and children of Zion.

III. A Mother travails, and is in great pain, in bringing forth children.

PARALLEL.

I. The Church is the spouse and wife of Christ. "For thy maker is thy husband, the Lord of hosts is his name," Isa. liv. 5. "Wherefore, my brethren, ye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ, that ye should be married to another, even to him that is raised from the dead, that we should bring forth fruit unto God," Rom. vii. 4.

II. So the Church beareth and bringeth forth children to Christ: "Of Zion it shall be said, this and that man was born in her," Psal. lxxxvii. 5.

III. So the Church is said to travail, and be in pain, in bringing forth of children to Christ: "As soon as Zion travailed, she brought forth her children, "Isa. lxvi. 8. The Church may be said to travail two manner of ways: (1.) By preaching, prayer, and by other godly means and endeavours, to bring forth poor sinners out of a state of nature into a state of grace. Paul was said to travail in pain, till Christ was formed in those to whom he preached." (2.) She travaileth by preaching, prayer, tears, and sufferings, and other lawful ways to bring forth her children out of a state of bondage, and external slavery and captivity, into a state of perfect peace, joy, and prosperity, free from all outward violence and thralldom, according to the promise of God; "Therefore will I give them up, until the time which she that travaileth hath brought forth:—Then the remnant of his brethren shall return unto the children of Israel," Mic. v. 3.—"She being with child, cried, travailing in birth, and pained to be delivered," Rev. xii. 2.—"For I have heard a voice as of a woman in travail and anguish, as of her that bringeth forth her first child. The voice of the daughter of Zion, that bewaileth herself, that spreadeth forth her hands, saying, woe is me now, for my soul is weary because of murderers," Jer. iv. 31. "Be in pain, labour to bring forth, O daughter of Zion, like a woman in travail. For now shalt thou go forth out of the city, and thou shalt dwell in the field; and thou shalt go even to Babylon, there shalt thou be delivered, the Lord shall redeem thee from the hand of thine enemies," Mic. iv. 10.

IV. A Mother, when she hath brought forth her children, layeth them to her breasts, to feed and nourish them, and letteth them lie in her very bosom, taking abundance of care and compassion of them.

V. A godly Mother giveth good counsel and instruction to her children, Prov. xxxi. 1. It was a great mercy to Timothy, that he had such a good woman as Eunice to be his Mother, who took care to give him good education, and brought him up religiously; it is said, "He knew the holy Scriptures from a child."

the Christian religion, and a great hindrance both of the Jews and heathens from owning of it. They are all holy rites, pious and undeniable laws, and just rules of discipline, consonant to the holy Word of God, that she teacheth all her children.

VI. A Mother ought to be obeyed and revered in all things by her children; her just commands must be submitted to. It is a great evil to rebel against a Mother.

VII. A wise and godly Mother greatly loves, and is tender of all her children. She taketh care to carry it evenly towards every one of them; not to indulge any one out of a fond and great passion, and slight another, because not so beautiful and amiable to look upon.

VIII. A tender Mother hath much compassion and bowels towards her weak, sick, and helpless children, her heart aches many times for such.

IV. So the Church of God, when she hath in a spiritual manner brought forth children, she giveth them her two precious breasts, which are the sound and sacred doctrine of the Old and New Testament; those she draweth forth, to give her "new born babes the sincere milk of the word, that they may grow thereby," 1 Pet. ii. 2.

V. So the Church of God giveth good counsel and instruction to all her children. Saints are not only fed by the Church, but well taught also. Solomon exhorts the sons of wisdom to "hear the instructions of their father, and not to forsake the law of their Mother, Prov. i. 8. The true Church teacheth nothing for doctrine, but what she hath received from the mouth of Christ. She doth not, like the Mother of harlots, teach for doctrine cursed fopperies, idle, ridiculous, and superstitious ceremonies, which are a reproach to

VI. So the Church of God ought to be obeyed and revered in all things. It is an abominable evil to slight or disobey the Church, our spiritual Mother. Her instructions and admonitions must be received with all due care and readiness; and those who stubbornly and obstinately refuse to submit, are guilty of great sin.

VII. So the Church of God taketh care to carry it tenderly, and with much wisdom, to all her children. She acts not partially towards them, to countenance one more than another; the weak and poorest saint is as dear to our spiritual Mother, as the strongest and richest of them.

VIII. So God's Church is filled with bowels of pity and compassion towards her weak and dis-tempered members. How is she troubled for such as are under temptations, or fallen into any spiritual distemper of the soul! The Church's bowels should exceed the bowels of a natural Mother to her sick children upon this account.

METAPHOR.

IX. A gracious and godly Mother loveth those children best, that are most dutiful, and who dearly love, and are most like their father.

in good works, and acts of piety and highly, Matt. v. 45.

X. A Mother is allowed by the father to chastise or correct those children, that grow heady and proud, or any ways misbehave themselves to the dishonour of the father, and reproach of the family.

proceeds further, and taketh the rod of Church-discipline, and withdraws herself from them, and alloweth them not to come to the table with the rest of her children. Nay, if they fall into any scandalous evil, to the reproach of Christ, his truth, and the household of faith, she chastiseth them with the rod of excommunication, and putteth them quite out of the family. "Deliver such an one unto Satan, for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus, 1 Cor. v. 5.

XI. A mother is sometimes allowed in the absence of the father, to be chief governess in the family, and to choose, according to the direction of the father, a steward over her house, and other inferior officers, and as they behave themselves, she ought to encourage them, and continue them, or otherwise turn them out of their offices.

in their places, she hath power to correct, and turn them out; always provided, she act according to rule: "Against an elder receive not an accusation, under two or three witnesses," 1 Tim. v. 19.

XII. A Mother, though her Children prove never so vile and ungodly, hath no power to kill them; if she do, though they are her own children, she is deemed by the law a murderer, and as such must die.

fore the Mother of harlots, for putting to death such as she calls heretics, is deemed, by the law of God and nations, a murderer, and, as such, must and shall in God's due time die. "Her plagues shall come upon her in one day, death, mourning, and famine, and she shall be utterly burnt with fire; for strong is the Lord God that judgeth her," Rev. xviii. 8.

XIII. It is a great and high honour to a Mother, that her children and family are well governed, having their food in due order, and that her children and servants are all at her beck, and dearly love one another, and when none of them are missing at dinner, or duty-time.

Church, to see saints live together in love and unity, always making conscience of those laws, that respect the well ordering, and religious government of the family or household of God, Psal. cxxxiii. 1, 2.

PARALLEL.

IX. So the Church of God loveth those children or saints best, that are most diligent, dutiful, and obedient to Christ, and to all the good and wholesome laws of the family; who love, and are most like God, in mercy, heavenly-mindedness, charity to the poor; these she esteems and prizes

X. So the Church is allowed, nay, required by Christ, to correct by gentle reproof, those children or members that do transgress the law of God; and if they grow heady, proud, and stubborn, she reproves them sharply; but if that will not reclaim them, but that they still proceed in a rebellious mind, and misbehave themselves, she appointed to govern all the affairs of his house, and according to those holy laws and directions left by him, ought to choose a steward, viz., a bishop, minister, or pastor, to take the charge of the great affairs of the family, and other inferior officers, as deacons, &c., to take care of the poor; and as the pastor or deacons behave themselves, she ought to encourage him or them, and continue them in their places; but if they fall into sin, or neglect their work, and are unfaithful in

XI. So the Church of Christ in his absence is appointed to govern all the affairs of his house, and according to those holy laws and directions left by him, ought to choose a steward, viz., a bishop, minister, or pastor, to take the charge of the great affairs of the family, and other inferior officers, as deacons, &c., to take care of the poor; and as the pastor or deacons behave themselves, she ought to encourage him or them, and continue them in their places; but if they fall into sin, or neglect their work, and are unfaithful in sin, or neglect their work, and are unfaithful in

XII. So the Church of God, though some of her members prove very vile, and will not be under her government; or turn heretics, sucking in damnable errors; yet the most she can do, is to pass the censure of excommunication against them. "An heretic, after the first and second admonition, reject," &c., Tit. iii. 9, 10. And therefore the Mother of harlots, for putting to death such as she calls heretics, is deemed, by the law of God and nations, a murderer, and, as such, must and shall in God's due time die. "Her plagues shall come upon her in one day, death, mourning, and famine, and she shall be utterly burnt with fire; for strong is the Lord God that judgeth her," Rev. xviii. 8.

XIII. So it is the honour of the Church of Christ when all her children humbly and faithfully submit themselves to good order and discipline, when all of them carefully attend their respective duties, and do not absent themselves, when she call-eth them together at times of public worship, or upon any other occasion, as to rectify disorders, or choose officers, &c. O how lovely and amiable is it, and how doth it tend to the glory of the

METAPHOR.

XIV. Some Mothers have daughters who have children.

There are many disparities, wherein the Church excelleth other Mothers, which I leave to the ingenious reader to find out.

PARALLEL.

XIV. So the universal Church hath many daughters, many particular Churches, which are very fruitful to Christ.

INFERENCES.

I. This should teach believers to reverence and obey the Church of God, as dutiful children do their godly Mother, in all things.

II. And take care they do not grieve her.

III. To have relenting bowels towards her in all her troubles. Shall our Mother be in distress, and ready to be devoured by hungry lions? and shall not her children be in bitterness of soul for her? When Sion is afflicted we should be afflicted; when her eyes are wet, shall ours be dry? when she is sad, should not we be sad too?

IV. How doth this greatly reprove them, who instead of comforting of her in her widowhood state, add to her sorrow?

THE CHURCH COMPARED TO A GARDEN.

"A Garden enclosed is my sister, my spouse," &c. "Awake, O north wind; and come thou south wind, and blow upon my Garden," &c., Cant. iv. 12, 16.

"I am come into my Garden, my sister, my spouse," Cant. v. 1.

The Church of Christ is or may fitly be compared to a Garden.

METAPHOR.

I. A Garden is a piece taken out of common or waste ground, appropriated to more special use than the rest.

II. The ground of a Garden before it be planted, is as barren, and as unprofitable, as the rest out of which it was taken.

others," Eph. ii. 3. "Who hath made

III. In a Garden no choice or rare thing cometh up naturally of itself, until it be sown or planted therein.

IV. A Garden, before it be sown or planted, must be digged, purged, and well prepared.

when he was resolved to bring judgment upon it, "It shall not be pruned, nor digged," Isa. v. 6. Hence God calleth upon

V. A choice Garden is walled or well fenced about, for its security, from danger and spoil.

of fire round about Jerusalem." See

VI. A choice Garden hath in it many plants, herbs, and flowers, of great worth and value, both for pleasure and profit.

Spirit, are found in God's Garden.

PARALLEL.

I. The Church of God, and every believer, or member thereof, is taken out of the common mass of mankind, to be a chosen and select people to Christ.

II. The people of God, and soul of every believer, naturally were as barren, blind, sinful, enemies to God, and every way as vile and rebellious as any other sinners in the world. "And were by nature the children of wrath, as well as thee to differ from another?" &c.

III. So no spiritual good thing can grow or spring up in our hearts, until the seed of grace be sown in us, or a divine principle of life be implanted.

IV. So must our hearts, like fallow ground, be digged up with powerful convictions of the Word and Spirit, that so grace may the better take root in us. Hence it is said of God's vineyard, "It shall not be pruned, nor digged,"

V. So the Church of God, or every Christian, is hedged or walled in. "Hast thou not made a hedge about him, and about all he hath, on every side?" &c., Job i. 10. God is said to be a "Wall vineyard." Zech. ii. 5.

VI. So in the Church are many choice, pleasant, and profitable plants, of God's own right-hand-planting: "It is sown with holy right seed, ye men of Israel are his pleasant plants," Jer. ii. 21. All choice and saving graces, and gifts of the

METAPHOR.

VII. A Garden must have much cost bestowed upon it, and much pains taken with it, or it will soon decay.

VIII. A Garden hath some weeds in it, which must as they appear, be plucked up, or they will spoil and hinder the growth of the precious flowers and herbs that grow therein.

defiled, which if not pulled up, will hinder their growth in grace.

IX. A choice and fruitful Garden is valued highly by the owner thereof; he esteems it above an hundred times so much fruitless land. One acre made into a curious Garden, is prized above many acres of common barren ground.

give men for thee, and people for thy life," Isa. xliii. 3, 4. Wicked men are like barren mountains; they are the King's waste, such whom he sets but little by.

X. A rare and fruitful Garden will afford fruit to plant others; many Gardens upon this account have, as it were, sprung out of one.

mus, Thyatira, Sardis, Philadelphia, and Laodicea, besides many others, which we read of, &c., Rev. i. 11.

XI. A Garden must be often watered, or else it will soon fade, and the fruit thereof wither away, and the choice flowers will hang down their heads.

of the word and ordinances.

XII. A Garden must have the door carefully kept and looked after, lest thieves and other spoilers should get in and ruin it.

fountain sealed to all unbelievers. But yet let them be ever so careful, some deceivers or hypocrites will, as in former times, creep in; it was so when the chief Gardener himself was upon the earth, there was a Judas among the twelve apostles.

XIII. The chief owner of a Garden loves to take his walks in it, to see how the plants and precious fruits do flourish.

us get up early to the vineyards, let us see whether the vines flourish, whether the tender grapes appear, and the pomegranates bud forth; there will I give thee my loves," Cant. vii. 12.

XIV. In a Garden, as it is found by experience, worms do much hurt, especially when they get to the root of plants or flowers.

PARALLEL.

VII. So must the Church of God have much pains bestowed upon it, it must be kept diligently; Prov. iv. 23. As God spares for no cost and pains, so should his servants be industrious, or else the Church will soon decay.

VIII. The Church is not without some corrupt members in it, which injure it, like as thorns and nettles do a Garden, which as they are discovered, are plucked up, and cast out. And also in the hearts of the best Christians, weeds are apt to spring up, from that root of bitterness that naturally is within them, whereby many are troubled and

IX. The Church of God, though it be as it were but a little spot, a small remnant, in comparison of the world, is highly prized by Jesus Christ; he esteems of his own people above all the people of the earth. Hence he calleth them his inheritance, his jewels, his peculiar ones, 1 Pet. ii. 9. "I gave Egypt for thy ransom, Æthiopia and Seba for thee. Since thou wast precious in my sight, thou hast been honourable, and I have loved thee: therefore will I

X. So from the Church of God that was first planted in Judea, many blessed Churches proceeded in a little time. By means of the fruitfulness of that one spiritual Garden, seven Gardens more were planted in Asia, viz., Ephesus, Smyrna, Perga-

XI. God's Garden must be often watered by the divine rain, or dew of heaven, viz., the Word and Spirit of God: "My doctrine shall drop as the rain," Deut. xxxii. 1, 2. And without these waterings from above, the fruit of the Church will soon fail; all our growth and greenness is continued by the means

XII. So the door of the Church must be carefully kept by such as have the charge of it, viz., the ministers or pastors thereof, or the danger is great; it behoveth them to take care who they let in. Christ's Garden should be as a Garden inclosed, and

XIII. So the Lord Jesus, who is the Owner and only Proprietor of his Church, loves to take his walks in it: "I am come into my Garden, my sister, my spouse," Cant. v. 1. He is said to "walk in the midst of the seven golden candlesticks." "Let

XIV. So in the Church, sin, which may be compared to a worm, or hurtful vermin, doth exceeding much detriment. A Christian seemeth very green, amiable, and fair to the eye, like

METAPHOR.

They may seem very green and flourishing, when there are some devouring worms gnawing at the roots, by which means in a little time they die, are pulled up, and cast away.

XV. In a Garden, whatsoever choice flower the owner of it seeth is fully ripe, if he hath a mind to it, he crops it off, and takes it to himself.

natural capacity, he may be cut down whilst he is green, or cropped in the bud or blossom; yet in his spiritual capacity he never dies before he is ripe: God ripens his speedily, when he intends to take them out of the world speedily.

XVI. A Garden flourisheth best, that hath the sweet, warm, and resplendent rays of the sun shining upon it. How sweet do the flowers and precious herbs smell, when the rain distils, the south wind blows, and the sun sweetly breaks forth upon it?

XVII. A Garden is attended with several seasons, winter as well as summer. And though in the winter many flowers seem decayed, and their glory gone; yet a winter's sharp frosts, and cold north winds, are as necessary as the summer, for the killing of the weeds and worms, which otherwise would abound.

PARALLEL.

some plants full of leaves; but there is some cursed worm, some secret lust, that mars his root, and in time he withers, and dies, and is plucked up, and cast away. This may be a caution to all to take heed.

XV. So in the Church, those flowers or precious saints Jesus Christ seeth are fully ripe for heaven, he crops off by death, and taketh them to himself. A godly man dies when he is ready and ripe for death. When a holy man dies, saith Mr. Caryl, it is harvest-time with him. Though in a Church, whilst he is green, or cropped in the bud or blossom; yet in his spiritual capacity he never dies before he is ripe: God ripens his speedily, when he intends to take them out of the world speedily.

XVI. So the Church never thrives, nor flourisheth, but when the Sun of Righteousness shineth in a gracious manner upon it; when the rain or spiritual dew descends, the south wind of the Spirit bloweth, and the Sun of Righteousness sweetly shineth, what a fragrant scent doth the Church of God, and gracious ones then send forth! hence Christ calleth for the "South wind to blow upon his Garden, that the spices thereof may flow forth," Cant. iv. 16.

XVII. The Church hath its winter as well as its spring and summer-season; nay, and the nipping frosts, and north winds of temptations and afflictions, are as profitable to the saints, as the summer of comfort, peace, and prosperity; for God seeth need of the one, as well as the other, to destroy those weeds of corruption, or indwelling sin, that is in our hearts. "If need be, ye are in heaviness, through manifold temptations," 1 Pet. i. 6.

DISPARITY.

There are divers disparities: Christ's Garden excelleth all other Gardens. They are the plantations of men; this is planted by Christ: their fruit is temporal and fading; this is spiritual and lasting: they that plant other Gardens, cannot make them grow; but Christ can. And many others might be minded, which I here omit.

INFERENCES.

I. THIS shows what a vast difference there is between the Church, and the World. What is a howling and barren wilderness, to a choice and lovely Garden?

II. Bless God that this precious Garden is not spoiled, and its hedge of divine providence not removed, nor plucked up.

III. Let us pray, though it be surrounded about at this day with cruel enemies, that it may never be moved, taken, and trodden down, by Romish wolves, or other ravenous beasts of prey.

IV. Let the adversaries tremble, whose evil intent is fully discovered, how they proceed in their designs against God's Church, Christ's spiritual Garden, since it is so prized by him, and his own proper inheritance, he alone being the proprietor thereof. How often doth he say, "My Garden, my vineyard?" It appears it is his.

1. In that he bought the ground with the price of his precious blood, to make a Garden of it.

2. He hath at his own charge planted and sown it.

3. He keeps it, and waters it, and watcheth over it night and day, Isa. xxvii. 2, 3.

4. It is he only who gathereth the fruit of it. Woe therefore to them that adventure to crop, and pull up, and destroy any of its choice flowers! They that touch God's people, Christ's lilies, touch the apple of his eye.

V. Let the saints of Christ also learn from hence to be fruitful, Christ hath been at great cost and pains in order thereunto. And that you may be so.

1. See that you be plants of his own planting, otherwise you will be plucked up.

2. See that you be well-rooted: such bring forth most fruit.

3. Take heed of the worm at the root.

4. Take heed whom ye choose for Garden-dressers, and look to your hedge or wall of Church discipline. You must know your bounds, the Garden of Christ must not be opened into other men's fields. Keep your communion entire; remember, you are bounded by Christ's laws and institutions; take heed you do not, with Ephraim, mix yourselves with other people.

THE CHURCH COMPARED TO A LILY.

"As the Lily among the thorns, so is my love among the daughters," Cant. ii. 2.

CHRIST calleth his Church his love, and compareth her to a Lily among thorns. By daughters are meant, as some conceive, other Churches, who pretend they are the spouse of Christ. Daughters, saith the learned Wendelin, are either nations, strangers to the Church of Christ, which nevertheless are joined to us by the common ligaments of humanity, and descend from the same Creator, and therefore called daughters; or else such as profess their names among the citizens of Zion, the Church of Christ. But as the Church is compared to a Lily; so, with the greatest elegance, the daughters are compared to thorns.

SIMILE.

I. A Lily is a very sweet flower, so fragrant, that naturalists tell us, a man's senses will be easily turned with the strength thereof.

Cant. iv. 7, 10, 14. The Church and faithful children of God, are unto Christ a sweet savour. And it is said, "Noah built an altar to the Lord, and took of every clean fowl, and offered burnt-offerings on the altar; and the Lord smelled a sweet savour." Gen. viii. 20, 21.

II. A Lily is an exceeding white flower; nothing more pure, nothing wither, saith the same author, than a Lily.

said to be "clothed in fine linen, clean and white." Christ, her blessed bridegroom, gave himself for her, "that he might sanctify and cleanse her, with the washing of water, by the word; that he might present her to himself a glorious Church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that she should be holy, and without blemish," Eph. v. 25, 26, 27.

III. The Lily is a very fruitful flower; one root, saith Pliny*, often yielding fifty pods. The dew of heaven, the heat of the sun, and fatness of the soil, make it fruitful.

part of the world, in the space of a few years, hath it not taken root? in the former after ages, the Roman winters of the Alpine snow had for some ages depressed this

PARALLEL.

I. So there is nothing sweeter to Christ, than the Church, the spouse: "Thou art all fair, my love, there is no spot in thee. The smell of thy ointment is better than all spices, spikenard, and saffron, calamus, and cinnamon, with all trees of frankincence, myrrh and aloes, with the chief spices,"

II. So nothing is more fair and white, or purer in Christ's sight than the Church. "My undefiled is but one, she is the only one of her mother, she is the choice one of her that bare her. Thou art all fair, my love, and there is no spot in thee." Hence

III. The Church is fruitful; nothing more fruitful, saith Wendelin; the which being planted in the field of one Jerusalem, in the days of old, watered by the apostolic men, with the dew of the Word, and miracles; the Sun of Righteousness shining upon it, and infusing of his divine heat into it, Mal. iv. 2. In what flower, and reduced its leaves to admirable paucity, insomuch that they were scarcely visible to the world, and had circumscribed its roots into a narrow space, how great and swift were the increasings of it, the heavens, which before seemed shut, again bedewing of it! Then that word, saith he, we saw fulfilled, which was promised in times past to Israel: "I will be as the dew unto Israel, and he shall grow as the Lily, and cast forth his roots as Lebanon. His branches shall spread, and his beauty shall be as the olive-tree, and his smell as Lebanon," Hos. xiv. 5, 6. Germany, England, France, Italy, Spain, Poland, Hungary, Denmark, Sweden, hath, and what country of Europe hath not, within a few years, seen the roots and branches thereof spread, and smelt its odour! The Popish waves, flames and axes, could neither suffocate, burn, not cut up the flower, leaves, nor root of this Lily. The shadow of the Highest hath restrained the flames; his Spirit bound up or constrained the waves; his right-hand with-held the axes, that grinning and grinding dragon, that the beast and false prophet could do nothing, &c.

* Plin. lib. xxi. cap. 5.

SIMILE.

IV. The Lily is a very tall flower; few flowers, as Pliny observes, are higher than the Lily.

Matt. xvi. 18, not to be overthrown by any of the enemies battering rams, nor to be reached by any power of the dragon. This is, that "chosen generation, royal priesthood, holy nation, peculiar people," 1 Pet. ii. 9, who are said to dwell on high: and though they now seem to creep low upon the ground, and wander as it were in darkness; yet dwelling in God, they rest secure, &c., and shall in due time be exalted above the hills, and the highest mountains of the earth, Mic. iv. 1, 2.

V. The Lily is a flower most gloriously adorned, and lovely to look upon; so that our Saviour saith, "Solomon in all his glory was not adorned like one of these." It is furnished with beauteous accomplishments; its form is excellent, with six leaves curiously set, and within are seven grains, and all within of the colour of gold, hanging down their head; much of the glory of the Lily is inward.

2 Pet. i. 5—8. Yet notwithstanding all this glory, with which Christ's spouse is adorned and beautified, she is not proud; but, as taught by the seven grains of the Lily, or graces of the Spirit, doth humbly hang down her head. Her chiefest beauty is internal: "The king's daughter is all glorious within," Psal. xlv. 14.

VI. The Lily is a plant that, as naturalists tell us, doth shoot up suddenly, nay, and that it doth grow very much in the night.

three thousand converted by St. Peter at one sermon, Acts. ii. 41.

VII. The Lily is among thorns; thorns are things of little worth, low and base things, in comparison of Lilies.

VIII. The Lily growing among thorns, is hurt thereby. That being a tender flower, the thorns coming up with it, which are of a rough and pricking nature, the Lily receives much injury, not only in its growth, but also they tend to spoil its beauty.

PARALLEL.

IV. So the Church and people of God are the tallest or highest people in the world," they dwell on high," Isa. xxxiii. 16. Christ's spouse is secure in that most high and heaven-threatening rock, by any of the enemies battering rams, nor to be reached by any power of the dragon. This is, that "chosen generation, royal priesthood, holy nation, peculiar people," 1 Pet. ii. 9, who are said to dwell on high: and though they now seem to creep low upon the ground, and wander as it were in darkness; yet dwelling in God, they rest secure, &c., and shall in due time be exalted above the hills, and the highest mountains of the earth, Mic. iv. 1, 2.

V. The Church and spouse of Christ is very glorious; her clothes are said to be wrought gold. "She shall be brought to the king in raiment of needle-work," Psal. xlv. 14. Hence said to be as fair as the moon, as clear as the sun. The Church, with every sincere soul, is gloriously adorned, furnished with beauteous accomplishments: (1.) with the imputed righteousness of Christ, a transparent and sparkling ornament. (2.) The gifts of the Holy Spirit, which may answer to the leaves of the Lily. (3.) The graces of the Spirit which may answer to the grains within the Lily, which, as St. Peter layeth them down, are seven, with which Christ's spouse is adorned and beautified, she is not proud; but, as taught by the seven grains of the Lily, or graces of the Spirit, doth humbly hang down her head. Her chiefest beauty is internal: "The king's daughter is all glorious within," Psal. xlv. 14.

VI. So God's Church, when his blessing is upon it, thrives marvellously in a short time. To make this appear, consider in the primitive time, when the dew of grace fell upon the Christian world, what abundance of Lilies sprung up suddenly;

VII. The Church of God grows in the field of this world, amongst base and vile sinners, who are compared to thorns and briars, Isa. xxvii. 4.

VIII. The Church, like the Lily, growing amongst the ungodly and persecuting world, are greatly wronged thereby. The inhabitants of Canaan, that Israel drove not out were said to be "pricks in their eyes, and thorns in their sides," by which they were sorely perplexed and vexed, Numb. xxx. iii. 55. There is a time coming, when the Lily, the Church of God, shall be injured by these cursed thorns no more: "There shall be no more a pricking briar to the house of Israel, nor any grieving thorn," Ezek. xxviii. 24. Moreover, the Church should be as Lilies among thorns for beauty and purity; they ought to out-do and excel the ungodly, as far as the Lily doth the thorn: as beautiful as a Lily among thorns, saith Mr. Ainsworth, as innocent as Doves among ravenous birds.

SIMILE.

I. A Lily is a natural plant, and flower of the field.

II. There is no care taken of the Lily that groweth among thorns: any are suffered to pluck them up.

"He keepeth it night and day, lest any should hurt it," Isa. xxvii. 3. "Not one hair of your heads shall perish," Matt. x. 30.

III. A Lily is a flower that soon fades and withers away, and is at last cast into the oven, Matt. vi. 30.

DISPARITY.

I. The Church is a heavenly or supernatural flower, a plant of God's right hand planting.

II. God taketh great care of his people, he has made a fence about them, nay, he himself is as a wall of fire on every side, and doth keep his Church, and water it every moment, Zech. ii. 5.

III. The Church's beauty and glory is increasing: "The path of the just is as the shining light, which shineth more and more unto the perfect day," Prov. iv. 18. Her glory shall never fade, but she shall be made an eternal excellency.

INFERENCES.

I. THIS may teach all true Christians to admire and exalt the free grace of God, in making so great a difference between them, and the wicked amongst whom they live.

II. It shows also what care he taketh of them, in preserving them whilst they grow among thorns, who do not only prick them by persecution, but would utterly root them up.

III. They are hereby called upon, not to rest satisfied with the name of Christians only, but to be earnest with the Lord, that whilst the wicked do daily manifest themselves to be as thorns, they may be as Lilies, holy and heavenly-born souls, growing up more and more in grace and holiness.

THE CHURCH COMPARED TO A MERCHANT-SHIP.

"She is like unto Merchant-Ships," Prov. xxxi. 14.

"O thou afflicted, and tossed with tempests, and not comforted," Isa. liv. 11.

THE Church of God in these scriptures, as expositors observe, is compared to a Ship, to a Merchant-Ship.

SIMILE.

I. A Merchant-Ship tradeth from one place to another; she fetcheth her merchandize from afar.

II. A Merchant-Ship hath a skilful pilot, to steer and guide her the right way, that so she may not split upon rocks or sands, or any other way miscarry in her voyage.

III. A Merchant-Ship is tossed oftentimes upon a troublesome and tempestuous sea, and yet keeps up, and is preserved in a wonderful manner, upon boisterous waves.

PARALLEL.

I. The Church of God trades to heaven, she fetcheth her spiritual merchandize from thence: "Our conversation is in heaven," Phil. iii. 20.

II. The Church of God hath a most expert and skilful pilot, viz., Jesus Christ, to steer her course through the seas of this world, that so she may not be split upon, the rocks of human inventions, nor the sands of false doctrine, error, and heresy.

III. So the Church of God is often tossed with tempests, or subject to, and vexed with the incursions of an envious and persecuting world, the ungodly being compared to the troubled sea, Isa. lvii. 20.

IV. A Ship is steered by the compass from one place to another.

tion: "Thy Word is a light unto my

V. A Merchant-Ship takes in several passengers, of divers kinds and nations, who sail in her to their desired haven.

VI. Some Merchant-Ships have nets belonging to them, which are cast into the sea, to take up fishes, and bring them into the ship.

VII. A Ship sails sweetly along, when she hath a prosperous gale; for unless the wind blow, she cannot sail.

XIII. What common dangers a Merchant-Ship is exposed to, all the passengers who sail in her are liable to also, viz., to the same tempests, the same pirates, &c. Let Jonah and the mariners be in the same Ship together, and though the storm arose for Jonah's sake, yet all the whole Ship's company were in danger. So it was in Paul's case, with those other prisoners, mariners, and soldiers that were in the Ship with him. Let there be in the same Ship, a prince going to receive a crown, and a malefactor going to receive punishment, according to the nature of his offence; whilst they are in the Ship together, they are subject to the same storms and tossings, to be sea sick together, to the same pirates, and alike ransacked and spoiled by them.

IX. When a Ship is in a Storm, all the mariners have their hands and hearts full, they are at their wit's end; every one takes hold of a rope, and endeavours to the utmost to save and secure the Ship, if possible, from sinking.

X. Merchant-Ships greatly enrich those places, cities, and kingdoms to whom they belong, bringing to them rare and excellent merchandizes, which are offered to sale, or to be exchanged to traders.

XI. A Ship's great safety consists in her being well built, having a good bottom, a skilful pilot, and sure anchors, &c.

IV. So the Church of God is guided in her passage to heaven, by the compass of God's Word, in respect of doctrine, discipline, and conversational paths," Psal. cxix. 105.

V. So the Church takes in many Christians and professors, and those of several sorts and degrees, who all declare they are bound with the spiritual Ship, to the land of promise.

VI. So the Church of God hath the Gospel-net, which by the hands of the mariners, and skilful fishers of men, is cast into the sea, or multitude of people, by which means many men are converted, and taken into this spiritual Ship, Matt. xiii. 47, Mark i. 17.

VII. So the Church, under the powerful and sweet influences of the Spirit, which is compared so the wind, John iii. 6, 7, is carried gloriously along towards her desired haven; but if this spiritual wind blow not, she is becalmed.

VIII. So what common dangers befall God's Church, all the members thereof are more or less exposed and liable to the same. Let enemies come, let persecution arise against it, there are no sort of men or members, whether sincere or not, whilst they remain in the Church, or hold fast their profession, let them promise themselves what safety they will, who can be secure, or exempted from violence. Though as in a Ship, some speed oft-times better than the rest; as Baruch and Jeremiah, who had their lives given to them for a prey, when thousands were cut off, yet went into exile, Jer. xlv. 5. "Whosoever," saith the Apostle, "will live godly in Christ Jesus, shall suffer persecution, through much tribulation we must enter into the kingdom of God," 2 Tim. iii. 12. Hypocrites, in a day of common danger and persecution, are in the like circumstances with those who truly fear God; Satan, that arch-pirate, and his emissaries, will favour them no more than others, until they renounce their religion, &c.

IX. So in an hour of trouble and persecution, every Christian should do his best to secure and save the Church of God from sinking, or from being cast away, or lost. Every one should have their hearts up to God, and their hands to work wisely, for her and their own safety, Isa. lxiv. 17.

X. So the Church of God, by daily trading to heaven, greatly enricheth poor sinners. What she receiveth from Christ, her Merchants or ministers offer to sale, to the nation or nations where she lives: truth, peace, pardon, the pearl of great price, and other excellent merchandize, she furnisheth the world with, Prov. xxiii. 23.

XI. So the Church's safety consisteth in her being truly constituted, according to the apostolical prescriptions, or that pattern left in the Gospel by Christ, and the primitive saints; Heb. vi. 1, 2.

and having Christ for her governor, or chief Pilot, who, as Jerom observes, sits at the stern, and guides her course as he sees good: and lastly by having hope, that precious grace of the Spirit, for the Anchor: "Which hope we have as the Anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast," &c., Heb. vi. 19. The nature of which is opened under the fifth head of metaphors, concerning the graces of the Spirit, to which we refer you.

INFERENCES.

I. This may inform us, that trouble and persecution must be expected. No ship sets out to sea, but meets with storms and tempests at one time or another: and therefore the mariners look for them, and provide accordingly, to secure the ship, and save themselves; and so should spiritual sea-faring men do.

II. It may also be matter of comfort to the godly. What assurance is here of safety! Christ, who guides the ship, can at his pleasure still the seas, and make the greatest storm in a moment to be calm. "He stilleth," as the Psalmist saith, "the noise of the seas, the noise of their waves, and the tumults of the people," Psal. lxxv. 7. Therefore though Satan, that cruel pirate, and other malicious enemies of the Church, seek daily to sink this spiritual ship; and though he be a spirit, and therefore of great power against us, yet he is nothing to God, who is the creating Spirit. That which is said of Behemoth, is no less true of him: "He that made him, can make his sword approach unto him," Job xl. 19. Let therefore the power and rage of our enemies be ever so great, and their opposition at this day ever so fierce against us, yet we have an assurance from our blessed Saviour, that the gates of hell shall never prevail against the Church; she shall never be broken to pieces, nor suffer shipwreck. "O thou tossed with tempests, and not comforted!"

THE CHURCH COMPARED TO A GOLDEN CANDLESTICK.

"The golden Candlesticks are the seven Churches," Rev. i. 20.

Mr. Brightman, and others, understand this metaphor of golden Candlesticks, is taken from the Candlesticks that were in the tabernacle erected by Moses; and the resemblance between these holds good in two or three particulars, which take as follow.

METAPHOR.

I. In general, the use of a Candlestick is to hold out the light to others. "No man," saith our Saviour, "lighteth a candle, and putteth it under a bushel, but into a Candlestick; and it giveth light to all that are in the house."

It concerned to know them, might see and read them: as amongst us, proclamations are nailed to posts in market towns.†

The Church holds out her light three ways.

1. By her doctrine; she having divers approved ministers belonging to her, that she calleth forth to preach and publish the word of truth. Hence the law is said to "go forth of Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem."

2. By her holy discipline.

3. By her godly example and conversation: "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven," Matt. v. 16. "Walk as the children of the light," Eph. v. 8. The church ought to meet publicly, to make a public profession.

II. Candlesticks of gold are of great worth, and seldom found but in the houses of princes.

PARALLEL.

I. So the Church holdeth out the light of God's word to all that dwell therein, in which respect the apostle calleth the Church the pillar of truth, 1 Tim. iii. 15, because she holds out the truth to be seen, saith Weemse;* the expression being taken from the custom of many nations, who are used to write their laws in tables, and so to hang them upon pillars of stone, that the people whom they are to instruct, might see and read them: as amongst us, proclamations are nailed to posts in market towns.†

The Church holds out her light three ways.

1. By her doctrine; she having divers approved ministers belonging to her, that she calleth forth to preach and publish the word of truth. Hence the law is said to "go forth of Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem."

2. By her holy discipline.

3. By her godly example and conversation: "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven," Matt. v. 16. "Walk as the children of the light," Eph. v. 8. The church ought to meet publicly, to make a public profession.

II. Candlesticks of gold are of great worth, and seldom found but in the houses of princes.

II. So the Church is very precious in God's sight: "Ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me, above all people," Exod. xix. 5, 6, Mal. iii. 17. Hence they are called his jewels. This Candlestick only belongs to the prince of heaven and earth; they are Christ's Churches.

* Exercit. Divin. Exerc. 9.

† Dr. White Way to the true Church, p. 80. Curs. Theol. Part. 2. Col. 324.

METAPHOR.

III. Those Golden Candlesticks had some part of them for use, and some part for ornament; there were knobs and flowers curiously set upon them.

IV. The throwing down, or removing of the Candlestick, throweth down and removeth the light or Candle also.

moving those seven famous golden Candlesticks, or Churches, that once were there.

PARALLEL.

III. The Church of God is not only of use to hold out the light of God's word; but it is also richly adorned with several choice and heavenly graces, that make it, and every member thereof, who truly fears God, amiable in Christ's sight, 1 Pet. iii. 3, 4.

IV. So when a Church is removed out of its place, the light of God's Word is many times removed from a nation or people likewise; which severe judgment hath befallen the people of Asia long ago, by God's taking away or removing those seven famous golden Candlesticks, or Churches, that once were there.

INFERENCES.

Let the saints and people of God take heed how they walk before him: it behoves them to strive to recover themselves from whence they are fallen, lest he remove their Candlestick out of its place.

THE CHURCH COMPARED TO A FLOCK OF SHEEP.

"Tell me, O thou whom my soul loveth, where thou feedest, and where thou makest thy Flock to rest at noon," &c., Cant. i. 7.

"Fear not, little Flock; it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom," Luke xii. 32.

The Church, or saints of God, are compared unto a Flock of Sheep.

METAPHOR.

I. Sheep are clean beasts, tame and gentle; not wild, as tigers, lions, foxes, or wolves: nor unclean, as dogs, swine, &c.

II. Sheep are simple, a harmless sort of creatures, not crafty, ravenous, and devouring, as those sort of beasts above mentioned.

blood and rapine, shedding the blood of sire to live peaceably in the land.

III. Sheep are meek and patient under sufferings: hence our Saviour is said to be "led as a Lamb to the slaughter, and as a Sheep is dumb before the shearer, so opened he not his mouth," Isa. liii. 7. See Lamb.

IV. Sheep, as they are patient, so they are profitable, both in their lives, and by their death. There is scarcely any creature that brings its owner greater incomes than sheep; they are good both for food and clothing.

out of the city. What a blessing was Joseph to his master, whilst he abode in his house, and Jacob to Laban? They yield the world much profit, by the doctrine

PARALLEL.

I. So the saints of God are a people tamed, as it were, by God's Spirit, from their natural wildness and perverseness, made gentle, willing to come into Christ's fold, cleansed from impurity of the heart and life.

II. So the saints of God are holy; they are taught to be simple concerning evil: "Be ye, saith Christ, as innocent as doves," Matt. x. 16. They seek the hurt of no man; not like Romish wolves, who delight in nothing more than in those who do not wrong or injure them, but de-

III. So the saints and people of God are meek and patient under God's hand, both when they suffer for their sins, or for the trial of their graces; as appeared in Job, David, Stephen, &c. "I held my peace, I opened not my mouth, because Lord, thou didst it, Psal. xxxix. 9.

IV. The Saints are very profitable many ways; the benefit the world receives by them, or for their sakes, is very great; they are called "the light of the world, and the salt of the earth;" now the profit the world receives in both these respects, is not little. Had there been ten of those Sheep in Sodom, God had not destroyed it; besides, the angel told Lot, he could do nothing till he was they preach, by the fervent prayers they daily put up to Almighty God, and their holy and good examples: "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven," Matt. v. 16.

METAPHOR.

V. Sheep are obedient, and ready to follow their shepherd whithersoever he goeth. It is the custom in some countries, for the shepherd to go before the Sheep, &c. To which our Saviour alludes, John x. 27.

he followed Christ, 1 Cor. xi. 1.

VI. Sheep are liable to many diseases, many of them are weak and feeble; which a good shepherd taketh pity of, and endeavours to heal and strengthen them.

neither have ye healed that which was sick," &c. And therefore saith, he would himself take the work into his hands; "I will bind up that which was broken, and will strengthen that which was sick," &c.

VII. A Flock of Sheep must not be over-driven, lest they tire. Jacob, who was a skilful shepherd, knew this and therefore told Esau his brother, that if the Flock were over-driven, they would die," Gen. xxxiii. 13.

to bear it," 1 Cor. x. 13. He will not lay upon us more than is right.

VIII. Sheep are subject to go astray, and to be lost in a wilderness; and upon that account need the shepherd's care, to seek them, and fetch them home to the fold.

under-shepherds: "My sheep, saith the Lord, wandered through all the mountains, and none did search or seek after them," Ezek. xxxiv. 6. "I have gone astray like a lost Sheep, seek thy servant," &c. Psal. cxix. 176.

IX. Sheep must be led forth into green pastures, to be fed: and a good shepherd will take heed he put them not into fields or meadows that are not proper for them; for some grounds will soon rot and spoil them.

of error and heresy; for nothing rots and spoils Christians more than that. The spouse from hence enquireth of Christ, "Where he feedeth his Flock?" Cant. i. 7; that is, where his blessed Gospel was truly and constantly preached, and his holy ordinances duly administered, lest she should turn aside by the Flocks of his companions, that is, such as call themselves so. Christ directs her to "go forth by the footsteps of the Flock, and feed their kids beside the shepherds' tents:" that is, to follow the doctrine and footsteps of the primitive church, for that alone is our rule in all God's holy worship. "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want: he maketh me to lie down in green pastures, he leadeth me beside the still waters," Psal. xxiii. 1, 2.

X. Sheep have a shadowy place to rest in, when the sun shines hot at noon, which is a great refreshment to them where they chew

PARALLEL.

V. So believers, and the Church of Christ, are obedient to him: "My Sheep, saith he, hear my voice, and they follow me; and the voice of a stranger they will not follow," John x. 4, 5. "Thou shalt guide me by thy counsel," Psal. lxxiii. 24. Christ's precepts are the saint's directory, and his practice their pattern for imitation. Hence Paul exhorteth the Corinthians to follow him, as

VI. So the saints of God are subject to manifold weaknesses, temptations, and afflictions, which moved the Almighty to great compassion, and sorely to rebuke the shepherds of Israel, for their cruelty and great remissness towards his Flock: "The diseased have ye not strengthened, VII. So the saints or Flock of Christ must not be over-driven, they must be led gently along; and God taketh care to lay no more upon them than they can bear. "No temptation hath taken you, but such as is common to man: but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above what you are able; and will the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able

VIII. So the saints are subject to go astray from God, and to wander from his precepts, viz. decline in their zeal, faith, and affection to him, and his ways, and to get wandering thoughts after the world; and sometimes they wander, through the neglect and carelessness of the under-shepherds.

IX. So Christ's Flock must be fed in good pastures, viz., with sound and wholesome truth, good doctrine, food that is fit and proper for them; they must not have the chaff of men's traditions, nor the corrupt glosses of cloudy doctors, that lived in the dark times of the Church. It behoves Christ's ministers to take heed they suffer not the Sheep under their charge to suck in the poison

X. So the saints and church of God have a blessed resting-place in the time of the greatest heat, temptation, affliction, and persecution, or whatsoever may cause disquiet, and grieve their cud; and being saved from the vehemency of the scorching sun, they with the greater alacrity return to their pasture.

METAPHOR.

smite them," &c., Isa. xlix. 10. "Under the shadow of thy wings will I make my refuge, until these calamities be over-past," Psal. lvii. 1. Hence Christ is said to be as the "Shadow of a great rock in a weary land," Isa. xxxiii. 2.

XI. Sheep have many enemies, as lions, wolves, bears, dogs, foxes, and the like; and all their safety stands only in the care of their shepherd: otherwise these cruel beasts, besides men, who kill many in a night, would soon tear them to pieces.

XII. A Flock of Sheep love to feed and lie down together; it is a difficult thing to scatter and divide them. If they be frightened by an enemy, or pursued by dogs, foxes, or wolves, and should be separated, they would soon get together again.

vour to scatter them by persecution, they will soon get together again; as is signified, "And being let go, they went to their own company," Acts iv. 23.

XIII. A Flock of Sheep are subject to take soil and filth, and therefore have need of washing.

ed by their Shepherd: "If I wash thee not, thou hast no part in me," John xiii. 8. The believing Corinthians are said to be washed, they were before very unclean and filthy: "Such were some of you, but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified, in the name of our Lord Jesus; and by the Spirit of our God," "Who hath loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood," 1 Cor. vi. 11, Rev. i. 5.

XIV. Sheep will live where other beasts cannot; they will live upon very hard and barren commons, where the grass is exceeding short, and yet seem very well contented.

live upon the providence of God, who careth for them, and are very contented and satisfied with such pasture as God is pleased to put them into. "Although the fig-tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be on the vine; the labour of the olive shall fail, and the fields shall yield no meat; the flocks shall be cut off from the fold, and there shall be no herd in the stall: yet will I rejoice in the Lord, and joy in the God of my salvation." Hab. iii. 17, 18.

XV. There are oftentimes in a flock of Sheep some goats.

XVI. Sheep are very fruitful; they multiply in a little time exceedingly, though many be killed by butchers.

plied the more; from whence that maxim grew, The blood of the martyrs is the seed of the Church.

PARALLEL.

them, Cant. i. 7, in the midst of which, saith Mr. Ainsworth, Christ giveth sweet repose unto his Sheep; they have peace in him, though tribulation in the world, John xvi. 33. "They shall not hunger, nor thirst, neither shall the heat nor sun

XI. So God's poor Flock have many strong and cruel adversaries, who would soon tear them in pieces, and utterly destroy them, were it not for the precious love and care of Jesus Christ. "We are killed all the day long, and accounted as Sheep for the slaughter," Rom. viii. 36; hence called the "Flock of slaughter," Zech. xi. 4.

XII. So the saints of God do greatly love to assemble together: "They that feared the Lord, spake often one to another," &c., Mal. iii. 16. "They that fear thee," saith David, "will be glad when they see me, because I have hoped in thy word," Psal. cxix. 74. It is a hard thing to divide Christ's choice Sheep, their hearts are knit one to another, as Jonathan's was to David's. And if wicked men, like dogs and wolves, do endeavour to scatter them, they will soon get together again; as is signified,

XIII. So the godly and faithful in Christ Jesus are very subject, as they are in themselves, to contract much guilt and pollution, sin being of a defiling nature; and therefore it is they are washed

XIV. So the sincere and truly gracious soul can live by faith in a time of want and scarcity, when the hopes of other men die, and pine away. And though the world frown upon them, and they cannot see which way by an eye of sense they should subsist, yet they make a good shift to

XV. So in the Church of Christ are some evil and corrupt members, or such who are none of Christ's Sheep, hypocrites, such as are unsound at heart, who are also called goats, Matt. xxv. 33.

XVI. So the Church of God is fruitful; from a few they have often increased to a great multitude, Acts ii. 40, 41. Nay, though there have been many of them slaughtered by the persecuting butchers of Babylon, yet they have rather multi-

METAPHOR.

XVII. In a Flock of sheep are likely some fat and strong, and some lean ones; and the strong are sometimes observed to run upon, and abuse the weak, being grown very wanton; these sometimes leap over the fold, and the shepherd hath much trouble with them.

and will not live in subjection to his Church, nor abide in the fold, Ezek. xxxiv. 16.

XVIII. Sheep are sometimes separated from the goats, for some special occasion known to the shepherd.

shall set the sheep on his right hand, and the goats on his left," Matt. xxv. 32, 33.

METAPHOR.

Sheep may be lost, and torn in pieces, and utterly destroyed by lions, bears, &c.

follow me, and I give them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any pluck them out of my hand: my Father that gave them me is greater than all, and none is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand," John x. 27, 28

Touching other properties and things relating to Christ's Sheep, see the metaphor, Christ the Good Shepherd.

DISPARITY.

But none of Christ's sheep can be lost or perish; though the enemy may kill or destroy their bodies, yet he cannot destroy their souls, Matt. x. 28. "My Sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they

THE CHURCH COMPARED TO A HOUSE.

"But if I tarry long, that thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself in the House of God, which is the Church of the living God," &c. 1 Tim. iii. 15.

"But Christ over his own House, whose house are we," &c., Heb. iii. 6.

THE Church of Christ is compared to a House; the great God, whose throne is above, hath also a dwelling-place here below.

METAPHOR.

I. A House is a habitation, a place built for some man or men to dwell in.*

thing which was committed to thee, keep by the Holy Ghost which dwelleth in us," 2 Tim. i. 14. "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you," 1 Cor. iii. 16.

II. A House is built by a wise builder, upon a sure and firm foundation; some are built upon rocks.

III. A House is builded with, or doth consist of divers materials, as timber, stone, brick, &c., which are well hewed and squared before.

PARALLEL.

I. The Church is the habitation of the Holy Ghost: "I will dwell in them, and walk in them," &c., 2 Cor. vi. "For he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you," John xiv. 17. "That good will I build my Church," Matt. xvi. 18.

II. The Church is built upon a sure foundation, viz., Jesus Christ, "Another foundation can no man lay," &c., 1 Cor. iii. 11. "Upon this Rock will I build my Church," Matt. xvi. 18.

III. So the Church doth consist of several members, who are called or compared to stones: "Ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood," 1 Pet. ii. 5. And these stones are also well hewed and squared, by the word and Spirit of God.

* See Parvae's Parallels, p. 400.

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

IV. A House hath some main and principal parts appertaining or belonging to it, as pillars, beams, rafters, &c.

trees are tall and durable. Cedar was used in building Solomon's temple, a type or figure of the Church; which denotes the strength, usefulness, beauty, and excellency of the saints, or some among them, who are called pillars, Gal. ii. 9, "And when James, Cephas, and John, who seemed to be pillars," &c. And Christ saith, "Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God," Rev. iii. 12.

V. In a House, pillars, beams, and rafters are of great, though of different use; all are to support, strengthen, perfect, and complete the building: the least material is needful, and cannot be wanting.

V. So in the House of God, the prophets, apostles, pastors, deacons, &c., are of great use, though of different offices; and all for the support of every part of the spiritual building; and the least member cannot be spared, Ephes. iv. 7, 12. Some are strong and some are weak; some have five talents, and some but two; yet one ought not to despise the other, Matt. xxv. As in a material House, beams, and rafters, though divers in strength and use, yet all have a firm connexion amongst themselves, to make up one complete structure: even so in Christ's Church, though they be divers members, severally gifted and placed, as we see in the body natural, yet, as the apostle there shows, verse 25, "There should be no schism in the body," 1 Cor. xii. 24; but such a conjunction of one another, as they have of themselves; a holy sympathy in supporting, suffering, and rejoicing.

VI. The House of a prince, when built, is furnished, and most richly adorned, that it may become a meet habitation, according to the degree, glory, and grandeur of him who is to dwell therein.

VI. So the Church and temple of God, being built for the glorious Prince of heaven and earth, is most richly and curiously adorned with the precious gifts and graces of the Holy Ghost: for as the materials of this House are silver, gold, and precious stones; so its ornaments or furniture doth infinitely excel, it being the king's palace.

"The king's daughter is all glorious within," Psal. xlv. 13.

VII. A house is a place of security; it defends from many dangers, which those are exposed unto, that are harbourless, and forced to lie without doors; besides, some houses have walls about them.

VII. So the Church is a place of security, God having made such a blessed wall about her: "And the Lord will create upon every dwelling-place in Mount Zion, and upon her assemblies, a cloud and smoke by day, and the shining of a flaming fire by night; for upon all her glory shall be a defence. I will, saith God, encamp about mine House, because of the army, because of him that passeth by," of fire round about her," Zech. ii. 5.

&c. He hath promised to be "A wall

VIII. A House is a place of repose, a resting-place; it is hence greatly desired, by every one that belongs to the family that dwells therein.

VIII. The Church of God is a sweet place of spiritual repose. Zion is called a peaceable habitation, and sure dwelling, and a quiet resting-place, Isa. xxxii. 20.

IX. A House hath a way that leads to it, and a door that openeth into it, that so those who are strangers, may be readily directed how to find it.

IX. So the Church, or house of God, hath a way that readily leads to it. In a strict sense, Christ is both the way and the door. If any enquire more directly, how they may find the way into the Church, if they take the counsel of the Holy Ghost, they cannot miss. "Thus saith the Lord, stand in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein," &c., Jer. vi. 16. This good old way is the way of repentance, faith, and baptism; the saints of the primitive time walked all in this way, and knew no other door into the Church: "And they that gladly received the word, were baptized; and the same day there were added to them about three thousand souls, Acts ii. 41, 22.

X. A House is a place of devotion; there a man reads, prays,

X. So the Church of God is the principal place of public devotion: there prayers are made, the meditates, and instructs his family.

METAPHOR.

XI. A House is a subject to go to decay, and therefore needs often to be repaired. "By the slothfulness of the hands the house droppeth through."

METAPHOR.

I. An earthly House in which men dwell, is the work of mens' hands.

II. A House is built with such materials as are without life.

III. Some Houses are left desolate without inhabitants, and so go to decay, and at length fall.

dwell, for I have desired it," Psal. cxxxii. 13, 14. And as for sanctified ones, they are not only dwellers in it, but the very materials of it: so that it can never be without them. It being also founded upon a rock, cannot fall. "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Matt. xvi. 18.

IV. Other Houses are liable to be destroyed, either by fire, or razed by an enemy, so that one stone may not be left upon another.

as the dust or stones; no, nor so much as any sign left in any part, or among any people in the world, whether there had been such a building or no. But blessed for ever be Jehovah, that it may yet be said, "Walk about Zion, and go round about her, tell the towers thereof, mark well her bulwarks, consider her palaces; that ye may tell it to the generation following: for this God is our God for ever and ever, he will be our guide even unto death," Psalm xlviii. 12—14.

INFERENCES.

I. This calleth aloud upon all the members of God's House, to strive more and more not only to be a meet habitation for God, but to beautify and adorn this house by their holy and heavenly conversations. Holiness becometh thy House, O Lord, for ever.

II. Let all take heed how they defile or deface this House, either by plucking out a stone or a pin, or touching a hair of the head of any that are of this building.

III. Let all God's people examine what their zeal is for God's House, or whether they do truly prize the very dust and stones thereof.

THE CHURCH COMPARED TO A FAMILY OR HOUSEHOLD.

"You have I known above all the Families of the earth," Amos iii. 2.

"The House of God, which is the Church of the living God," 1 Tim. iii. 15.

"As we have opportunity, let us do good unto all men, but especially to the Household of faith," Gal. vi. 10.

"Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the Household of God," Eph. ii. 19.

A HOUSE in the holy Scripture is sometimes put for the Family or Household, and sometimes for the structure or building itself. In both these respects the Holy Ghost runs the parallel, in respect of the Church.

PARALLEL.

word is preached, and the sacraments are duly administered.

XI. So the church of God will soon decay, if it be not often repaired by a wise and careful discipline.

DISPARITY.

I. But the church, or House of God, is called God's building; the choice preparing of the matter, and the framing and jointing every part, as to the manner, is of God.

II. But this spiritual House consists of believers who, though they were once without life, yet now are quickened, who are therefore called "living stones, built up a spiritual house," 1 Pet. ii. 3.

III. But it is impossible that ever the House of God should be without inhabitants: "For the Lord hath chosen Zion, he hath desired it for his habitation. This is my rest for ever, here will

IV. But the House of God hath stood ever since it was erected, notwithstanding the many plots and designs of Satan, and his instruments, by one means or other, if possible, to have destroyed it, so as that there might not have appeared so much

METAPHOR.

I. "In a great house are not vessels of gold, and of silver only, but of wood, and of earth; some to honour, and some to dishonour." 2 Tim. ii. 20.

them out. When the Family of Christ amongst them.

II. In a great family there are persons of different ages; of different strength, of different relations to the master of the Family, and of different employments.

taught and ruled, 1 John ii. 12, 14, Heb. v. 11—14.

III. The master, chief head, or governor of a Family, provides and takes care of all that belong to him; hence the Apostle saith, "He that provides not for his Family, is worse than an infidel, and hath denied the faith," 1 Tim. v. 8.

clothe the grass of the field, which is to-day, and to-morrow is cast into the oven; shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith? Matt. vi. 25—30. "The young lions do lack, and suffer hunger; but they that fear the Lord, shall want no good thing," Psal. lxxxiv. 11. "He will give grace and glory, and no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly." "My God shall supply all your wants," &c., Phil. iv. 19. "Casting all your care upon him, for he careth for you," &c.

IV. A Family is also under the government of him who is the chief head and ruler thereof.

V. The master of a Family defends his Family, to the uttermost of his power against all enemies.

VI. Every person in a family, is privy to all such things as are publicly done in the house, many of which ought to be concealed, and not divulged to others. It is a reproach to a person of an honourable Family to make known anything that is done in the house, which ought by all means to be kept secret.

VII. It is a great honour to a Family, when it is well governed. It was this very thing that the queen of Sheba was so much taken with, when she came to see Solomon. It is said, "When she saw his wisdom, and the house which he had built, and the meat of his table, and the sitting of his servants, and the order of his ministers, and their apparel, and his drinking vessels, and his burnt-offerings, that he

PARALLEL.

I. So in the Church of God, there is a mixture of good and bad, sheep and goats, sincere Christians and hypocrites; like as in a field there is a mixture of wheat and tares; and in a floor of grain, there is chaff as well as corn. Though when any appear unsound, drossy, and ungodly, she turneth consisted but of twelve men, there was a Judas

II. So in the Church of God there are little children, young men, and fathers; there are weak and stronger Christians, some that stand in need of milk, some that are fit for strong meat; some that need to be led, and carried in arms; some that are teachers and rulers, and others that are

III. So God, the great and good Master of this heavenly Family, doth and will provide for all and every soul that belongs to him. "Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on. Why take ye thought for raiment; Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin. Therefore if God so

IV. So is the Church under the government of Christ; and every member is subject to that authority, order, and rule, which he hath left therein.

V. So doth the blessed God defend and preserve his Church, whose power is infinite. "So will the Lord of hosts defend Jerusalem; defending, also he will deliver."

VI. So each member of the Church is privy to all such things as are done publicly therein; and many things done therein do so particularly relate to the Family, that it is an evil thing, and justly to be reprov'd, for any member to divulge or make such private matters known to others. The Church of God in this respect, as well as in some others, should be "As a spring shut up, as a fountain sealed," &c., Cant. iv. 12.

VII. So it is a great honour to the Church of God, when it well and wisely governed. In this respect Solomon was a type of Christ, and his Family a type of the Family of the faithful, or Church of God. The Lord Jesus ought to be acknowledged as the Head, and chief Governor; and next to him, the bishop or pastor thereof must be obeyed, and submitted to in all things, in the Lord. "Obey them that have the rule over you, and submit yourselves; for they watch for your souls," Heb. xiii. 17. There is nothing that doth more beautify the Church of God, than good order offered in the house of the Lord, she was astonished," &c. 1 Kings x. 1, 3, 4, 5. In a Family, the governor ought to know his place, and all the rest to be in subjection; or else great confusion and disorder will break forth. Hence a Bishop ought to be one that rules well his own house, having his children in subjection, with all gravity. What is more lovely in a Family, than to see every one behaving himself well, living in sweet concord, peace, and love together.

METAPHOR.

is amongst us; nor doth any thing more encourage our Popish adversaries. Jovianus the Emperor, was much troubled at the divisions that were amongst Christians in his time, and showed his dislike at their contentions, in these words: "I tell you truly, I cannot bear with contention, but such as are for concord and unity I willingly honour and embrace: and certain I am, that such as strive for truth and peace, Christ will embrace, discord amongst brethren being one of those things he chiefly hates," Prov. vi. 16.

VIII. There is, and ought to be, some special order and discipline kept up in a Family, that every one may know his place, work, and business.

The first thing that I shall mind is, the choice of officers, viz., elders and deacons: They should be chosen according to the rules and directions God hath left in his word, viz., Men fitly qualified: "A bishop must not be soon angry, not given to wine, no striker, not self-willed, not a brawler, nor covetous, not a novice. He must be blameless, one that rules well his own house, apt to teach, a lover of good men, sober, just, temperate, able by sound doctrine to convince gainsayers," 1 Tim. iii. 3—8, Tit. i. 5, 6, 7. There are directions also given about their wives.

2. Every member hath his peculiar vote in choosing of their officers; after election, they are to be ordained, by prayer, and laying on of hands, Acts vi. 6, and xiii. 3.

3. The pastor or bishop is to feed the flock, to be faithful and laborious in preaching the word of life, exhorting, reproofing, comforting, according as he finds occasion, 1 Tim. iv. 12, 16.

4. It becometh him, together with the Church, to be careful whom they receive into the Family, viz., none but such as are converted, true penitent and believing persons, as near as they can.

5. They ought to know the state of the flock, and to watch over every member thereof, Prov. xxvii. 23, Heb. xiii. 17.

6. The members of the Church ought to study their duty.

(1.) To their pastor, to provide for him a sufficient maintenance, that he may not be encumbered with worldly affairs, and thereby made unfit for his great work and business he is called to, 1 Cor. ix. 9—14. See Planters, Labourers, &c.

(2.) To pray for him, and show him all due respect, as the steward and ambassador of Christ, Eph. vi. 19.

(3.) As to their duties one to another, as fellow-members of God's Church, it is needful for them to know how they should carry and behave themselves towards their offending brethren. And as touching this, it is necessary to consider, 1. The rule touching private offences. 2. Touching public and scandalous offences and offenders.

1. Touching private offences, Christ hath left us directions, in Matt. xviii. 15, 16, "If thy brother offend thee, tell him his fault between thee and him alone; but if he will not hear thee, take one or two more, &c. But if he still neglect to hear them, tell it to the Church: But if he will not hear the Church, then he is fit for Church-dealing, or excommunica-

PARALLEL.

what is any society of men, without rule, and good government? Strict discipline must be kept up in Christ's Family. Every member ought to know his place, and to strive to behave himself well. To this very end Paul wrote to Timothy, "That thou mayest," saith he, "know how thou oughtest to behave thyself in the house of God," &c. 1 Tim. iii. 15. All the saints should live in perfect peace, unity, and sweet concord together as children of the same Father, and heirs of the same crown and kingdom. Hence the apostle exhorteth the saints, to "endeavour to keep the unity of the Spirit, in the bond of peace," Eph. iv. 3. Nothing is at this day more grievous to a sincere soul, than to see the great divisions, and want of love, that tion." Let all take heed they do not make public any evil or offence of their brethren, that is private; for this is an utter fault, and a violation of the law of Christ, and order of his house.

VIII. So in the Church, or spiritual Family, there is a special order and discipline to be learned and kept up, and every one is to know his place, work, and business, some of which we shall briefly hint in this place.

2. Touching public and scandalous sins and offenders, such as expose the name of God to a reproach, as fornication, covetousness, idolatry, drunkenness, rioting, &c. These, without thorough and unfeigned repentance, ought forthwith to be delivered up to Satan, or put out of the Church, into the kingdom of Satan, from whence they came, 1 Cor. v. 5. And truly it cannot be known quickly who hath true repentance, that fall into such great sins, until there be some time of trial. Reformation of life is the chief part of repentance; therefore to clear the name of God from reproach, and the better to bring the offender to the sense of his sin, the ordinance of excommunication ought, in my judgment, immediately upon conviction, to pass against him.

3. In the administration of justice and judgment in the Church, special care ought to be taken, that with all wisdom and impartiality persons may be dealt withal. Let the Church and pastor see to it, that the rich be no more spared than the poor. Levi was not to know his father in judgment.

IX. In a religious Family, devotion is carefully and duly performed, prayer, reading the word, &c. It is a reproach to a Family, especially to the master, or governor and governess, to have this neglected, and a sin very provoking to God: "Pour out thy fury upon the heathen that know thee not, and upon the Families that call not upon thy name," Jer. x. 25.

God is said to "love the gates of Zion," viz., the place of his visible worship, "more than all the dwellings of Jacob," Psal. lxxxvii. 2. Can there be a greater reproach to a Church, or anything more provoking to God, than to have prayer, and other branches of public worship and devotion, wholly neglected among them?

X. All the Family, yea, every particular person thereof, ought to be called together, and they diligently to obey that call, and come together at the time of devotion, or when prayer is solemnly performed therein.

XI. Some Families are exceeding great, consisting of many persons, especially, if it be the Family of a prince, or noble person.

I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom the whole Family in heaven and earth is named," &c. Ephes. iii. 15, 16.

XII. It is exceedingly commendable and honourable, for all that belong unto a Family, to be truly and cordially affectionate one to another, to be ready and willing to do all offices of love and kindness, so far as the law of such a relation doth require of each, in their respective places and callings.

ready and willing to do any office of love. How amiable upon this account is the Church of God!

IX. So the Church of God is the chief place of public devotion; there the word of God is and ought to be read. And hence Paul saith to the Colossians, "when this epistle is read amongst you, cause it to be read also in the Church, (mark.) of the Laodiceans," Col. iv. 16, 17. There the word of God is truly and duly preached, and the sacraments administered. "Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined." "To the intent, that now unto principalities and powers in heavenly places, might be known by the Church the manifold wisdom of God," Psal. l. 2, Eph. iii. 10. Hence

X. So the whole Church, I mean each community of Christians, yea, every particular member thereof, ought to be called together, and they diligently to obey that call, at all times, when prayer or any other part of Church-service, devotion, and worship is to be performed. "Not forsaking the assembling of yourselves together, as the manner of some is," &c., Heb. x. 25. "They were all with one accord in one place." Acts ii. 1.

XI. The whole Family of Christ, the great Prince of heaven and earth, I mean the whole universal Church, both militant and triumphant, is exceeding great, the one part of which is in heaven, and the other on earth: "For this cause

XII. So the Lord Jesus, the Head and Governor of his Church, hath strictly commanded, and doth exceedingly commend the grace of love in and among all his Family. The Church is never more desirable or comely in this world, than when the love of each member doth abound one towards another; when ministers love the people, and the people heartily love them, and when every one, in the station wherein God hath set him, is

I N F E R E N C E S .

This shows, that the Church of God are a choice and peculiar people, such who have given up themselves in the order and fellowship of the Gospel, walking together in love, as a holy, religious, and united Family, according to the order and discipline Christ hath left in his word, having sweet acquaintance and intimacy one with another.

And now to conclude with this head, from the whole we may infer,

1. That God's Church is most dear and precious in his sight, or a people that he hath most choice love and affections to, and takes great care of.
2. That the Church of God under the Gospel-dispensation, is not national, parochial, &c.
3. That the Church of God are a people separated from the world, in respect of the worship, traditions, and sinful customs thereof, &c., non-conformity to the world in these respects is an indispensable duty: "Be not conformed to this world." Rom. xii. 2. "Come out from amongst them, and be ye separated, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing," &c., 2 Cor. vi. 17.
4. That the true Church of God is a number of sincere and godly Christians, who have solemnly covenanted, and given up themselves, to walk in the true order and fellowship of the Gospel, according to the exact rule of God's word, amongst whom the word of God is truly preached, and the sacraments are duly and in a right manner administered.
5. That God's Church hath many enemies, and yet in despite of them all, shall abide, and the gates of hell shall never prevail against her: and though for a time she may be low, and under great sufferings, yet she shall arise to a great degree of glory in the latter day.

METAPHORS, ALLEGORIES, SIMILES, TYPES, ETC.,

THAT RESPECT

M E N.

- I. Of Men in general.
- II. Of the the godly, or good Men
- III. Of sinners, or wicked Men.

MEN COMPARED TO EARTH.

- "Hear, O Earth, Earth, Earth,"* Jer. xxii. 29.
"Let all the Earth fear the Lord," Psal. xxxiii. 8. "Let all the Earth keep silence,"
"But the Earth helped the Woman," Rev. xii. 16.

By Earth in these scriptures, we are to understand Men dwelling upon the Earth.

METAPHOR.

I. The Earth is far from heaven; there is a vast difference between them.

in a state of enmity: "Ye that sometimes were afar off, are now made nigh by the blood of Christ," Eph. ii. 13.

II. The Earth is a heavy, lumpish, and gross body.

III. The Earth hath its great dependency upon the heavens; did not the rain from above water it, and the sun shine upon it, how hard and barren would it soon be.

IV. Earth turns and cleaves to Earth, as its proper centre. Though a piece of it may by force be lifted up, or thrown upward, yet by an innate propensity to descend, it naturally falls down again.

V. What a dark dungeon would the earthly globe be, did not the heavens shine upon it!

VI. Those things that are fed and nourished by the Earth, are Earth, and, we see, go or return to Earth again.

PARALLEL.

I. All men, whilst they remain unconverted, or abide in a state of nature, are said to be far from God; though not in respect of place, yet in respect of condition, Men being by reason of sin

II. So man naturally is earth-like, a heavy and lumpish piece, being taken out of the Earth, and the offspring of red Earth: "As is the Earthy, such as they that are Earthy," 1 Cor. xv. 48.

III. So Man hath all his dependency upon God; neither the spiritual Man, nor the natural Man can subsist, unless the heavens send down blessings upon them. All human, as well as divine growth and fruitfulness, comes from above.

IV. So Man naturally cleaves to, and takes delight in earthly things: "He that is after the flesh, minds the things of the flesh," Rom. viii. 5. He that is not born anew, born of the Spirit, but is wholly an earthly Man, the Earth is his proper centre: though sometimes his heart may, in an artificial way as it were, be lifted upwards, yet down he falls again to his own centre.

V. So what a dark dungeon is Man's heart, and in what Egyptian darkness would all Men and women be involved, were it not for the light of the God of heaven, his word, and blessed Spirit!

VI. So the body of Man, which is fed from the Earth, which was taken out of the Earth, we daily see, goeth to the Earth again: and therefore man may be called "Earth, Earth, Earth;" that was his original, Jer. xxii. 29. Earth he was, and Earth he is, and to Earth he shall return again.

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

VII. The sun every spring by its powerful influences, causeth all earthly plants and flowers to come forth, that seemed dead in winter.

VII. So the Lord Jesus will cause all these earthly bodies of men to rise up from the dead at the last day. All that are in the graves shall hear his voice, &c., John v. 28.

INFERENCE.

This may inform mankind of their original, and may tend to keep them humble. Why should any mortals have such high towering thoughts of themselves, and vaunt in pride, and haughtiness of heart, spotting, trimming, and decking themselves, when, alas ; their bodies are nothing but Earth, lumps of Earth ? They dwell in houses of clay, and it is but a little while ere the Worms will feed upon them, Job iv. 19. Though now they seem like curious vessels, are refined Earth, yet in a short space they will be part of the grossest and loathsome earth that eyes can behold, nothing but filth, and stinking putrefaction.

" O then be not proud of your bodies, nor of your beauty.* They who are now the fairest and goodliest to look upon, may quickly have a broken and loathsome skin. A disease, or one fit of sickness may spoil all thy beauty, deface and blemish thy excellent features ; and if disease doth it not, old age will : time will draw furrows in thy face, and make wrinkles in thy brow. Strength and beauty are no matches for time. All things were made in time, and time will mar all things : so long as generation continueth, corruption must.

" The two externals which man is most subject to be proud of, are beauty and apparel. Clothes are a flag of vanity, and pride sits upon the skirts. But remember, how fine soever your clothing is this day, God can put you on another suit before to-morrow : he can put you on such clothing, as you shall have little cause to be proud of ; he can make you wear worms and clods of dust.

" And if we, saith he, consider it, we have little reason to be proud of clothes, for if we follow the best, of them to their original, they will be found to be but a clothing of worms, and clods of dust."

" What are silks, satins, and velvets, but the issue of worms ? And what is your gold and silver, what your pearls and precious stones ? Are they anything, if you will resolve them into their principal, but clods of Earth ? They are indeed better concocted by the heat of the sun, refined and polished by the art of man ; but if you search their pedigree, they are but clods of dust, &c. And if you be proud of such clothing, God can clothe you with worms, not only of unrefined and unpolished, but of putrified and filthy dust.

MAN COMPARED TO A WORM.

" How much less man, that is a Worm, and the son of man, a Worm !" Job xxv. 6.

A worm is one of the meanest creatures, and the word that is here used, vermis parvus, aut Caseo nascens, signifieth properly and chiefly those worms that breed in flesh, or cheese, or any other kind of food when it is corrupted. The word is used, Exod. xvi. 24, where it is said, the manna that was reserved contrary to the command of God, bred worms ; such a Worm is Man.

God is so excellent and glorious, that nothing can be found out, that can set forth or illustrate his incomparable Being and greatness : To whom shall we liken him ! So there is nothing so low and base, but man in his fallen state is compared to it ; he is compared to earth, dust, the grass of the field, to a lie, to vanity itself, and here to a Worm.

I. A Worm hath its original from the earth.

I. So Man is earth, as we showed before : his original is from thence.

II. A Worm liveth upon the earth, and there it loves to be, and make its abode.

II. So Man in his natural state liveth upon the earth, and the things thereof ; he panteth after the dust of the earth ; his mind, love, and whole desire is after earthly things, Amos ii. 7.

* Caryl on Job vii. 5. p. 596, 597.

METAPHOR.

III. A Worm is a creature of little worth, and hath no beauty in it; what is more contemptible than a Worm!

is gone, he is but a lump of sin and pollution, contemptible as a Worm.

IV. A Worm is a creature that lies obnoxious to great danger; every foot is ready to crush it.

V. A small thing may spoil, kill, and destroy a Worm.

tile from a house may beat out his brains; a spider, and other small creatures, may presently destroy him. What is man's life! How small a thing will stop his breath! And then, secondly, a small thing, as it may seem in his sight, may destroy his soul: a lascivious lust, a wanton look upon a woman, jesting, and idle words, nay, the least sin, without repentance, will damn him for ever, Matt. v. 28. But remember this no sin is small or little in itself, though there be more venom in some sins, than in some others. The least sin is a breach of the holy law of God, and the least breach thereof layeth a soul under the curse of it. Also Christ's blood was shed to save us from lesser sins, as well as from the greater.

VI. A Worm is a creature that is not able to make resistance, that way to deliver itself from its enemy.

verted state; and what resistance can he make against the Almighty? There is a far greater disproportion between God and us, than there is between us and a worm, Psal. vii. 11, Matt. v. 25.

VII. A Worm is a creature that is a prey to the fowls of heaven; they, you know, commonly feed upon them, and catch them up at every turn.

VIII. Worms, when they find the ground to shake by men's treading upon it, many times make haste into their holes, and thereby save themselves.

IX. There are many sorts of Worms.

1 Some great, and some small ones; and yet all are but Worms.

contemptible creatures in God's sight; and no man," &c., Psal. xxii. 6.

2. There are some dunghill-Worms, who love to abide or live in dung, and muck of the earth.

always in the earth. Take them out of this filth, and they are as dead men; and let them alone, and you shall presently see them crawl to their old delights. Nothing but the world is in their mouths; they wallow in their filthy lusts, and earthly-mindedness, as the swine tumble in their mire.

3. There are some Worms very loathsome, such as breed in rotten putrified flesh, which are called carrion-Worms.

PARALLEL.

III. So Man in his fallen state is of no worth, he hath made himself as light and empty as vanity. He was once of great worth in God's esteem, whilst he retained his uprightness; but now naturally there is no excellency in him, his beauty

IV. So Man is open to manifold dangers from sin, Satan, and the world; many ways he is exposed to ruin, and to be undone for ever.

V. So a small thing may destroy and ruin Man. First, a little thing may take away his natural life; a bit of bread hath choked some men; a

VI. So what resistance is a Man able to make in himself, against Satan? Is he not as a worm in the sight of that cruel enemy, if God let him but once out against him? Besides, God is an adversary to him, whilst he remains in an uncon-

VII. So Men are a prey to Satan, and evil spirits, who are called fowls of heaven, Matt. xiii. 4, 19. How often doth the devil seize upon sinners, and carry them captive at his will?

VIII. So some poor sinners, when they find their earthly tabernacles begin to shake, by sickness, or some approaching judgment, make haste, (their consciences being thereby awakened by the Lord) to get into that place of security God hath provided for them, viz., the Rock Christ, who is called an hiding-place, Isa. xxxii. 2.

IX. So there are many sorts of men, [Worms.]

1. So there are some great Men, mighty ones of the earth, as kings, &c., and some small or poor Men; but yet all are but Worms, weak and David called himself a Worm: "I am a Worm,

2. So there are some men, (whom we commonly call muck-Worms) who delight in nothing more than in the dung or filth of the earth or muck of this world; their hearts and hands are always in the earth, and they are as dead men; and let them alone, and you shall presently see them crawl to their old delights. Nothing but the world is in their mouths; they wallow in their filthy lusts, and earthly-mindedness,

3. Such a Worm is a wicked Man, a vermin, a Worm, that breeds in corruption, as it were a loathsome creature in God's sight. See the head of the metaphor.

METAPHOR.

4. There are some Worms that deceive the eyes, seeming to be what they are not. Many have thought they had seen fire in the night, when they have cast their eye upon them in the place where they have lain. These are called Glow-Worms. R. W., tells us a story of a parson, that in the night, being drunk, casting his eye upon one of these Worms, having his pipe of tobacco filled, went boldly towards it, crying out, "Fire, I hope; Fire, I hope." When the light comes, these appear to all to be but Worms.

5. There are some very hurtful Worms, which spoil trees, flowers, and the fruits of the earth: such are the palmer-Worm, the caterpillar, and the canker-Worm: which sort of hurtful vermin God hath often brought upon a people and nation, as a punishment of their sins. See Joel i. 4, Amos iv. 9.

Wilson,) those great swarms of Popish priests, friars, monks, cardinals, even the whole Popish hierarchy, and pontifical clergy. These are fitly likened unto locusts, which are a little vile vermin, springing, as some say, out of smoke," &c. And truly this is made too evident of that sort of Men this day in England, and other nations of Europe. Never were a more destructive generation of vile vermin in the world; none make, or threaten to make greater spoil of Christ's vineyard, and precious fruit-trees, than they. And in that they are let in upon us, we may plainly read God's displeasure against us thereby; and nothing but unfeigned repentance and reformation will doubtless free this poor nation from them, for at this very time we are sadly plagued and pestered with them. See God an Husbandman.

6. There are also some profitable Worms, who are very laborious, and clothe the world with silk; and they are called silk-Worms.

with silk, or gloriously adorn their better part, though hereby, through zeal and faithful industry for God's glory, they waste and consume their own carcasses, spending, and being spent, as the apostle speaks.

X. The house or place of divers Worms is the earth; they lie hid in the ground.

PARALLEL.

4. There are some Men who deceive their neighbours: they take them to be holy and good Men, precious saints of God, and yet are greatly mistaken in them, they being no better than painted sepulchres, mere hypocrites; and notwithstanding their outward show of holiness and sanctity, are but earth-Worms, having the world, viz., external advantage, or vain glory, in their eye, as the great thing they aim at in their profession; and in the day of Christ, they will appear to be what in truth they are.

5. So there are some Men, who, like to these Worms, are of a very hurtful nature, and endeavour to spoil Christ's spiritual trees, flowers, and precious fruit, &c. They are called locusts or caterpillars by the Holy Ghost; they are said to come out of the bottomless pit: "And to them was given power, as the scorpions of the earth have power," &c., Rev. ix. 3. "By these locusts are meant, (as Franciscus Claudius, a Carmelite friar, and others expound the place, as is noted by Mr.

Wilson,) those great swarms of Popish priests, friars, monks, cardinals, even the whole Popish hierarchy, and pontifical clergy. These are fitly likened unto locusts, which are a little vile vermin, springing, as some say, out of smoke," &c. And truly this is made too evident of that sort of Men this day in England, and other nations of Europe. Never were a more destructive generation of vile vermin in the world; none make, or threaten to make greater spoil of Christ's vineyard, and precious fruit-trees, than they. And in that they are let in upon us, we may plainly read God's displeasure against us thereby; and nothing but unfeigned repentance and reformation will doubtless free this poor nation from them, for at this very time we are sadly plagued and pestered with them. See God an Husbandman.

6. This sort of Worms resemble the laborious and faithful ministers of Christ, who spend themselves in preaching, and in divine prayer and meditation, that so they may enrich men's souls with grace and true virtue. These, as instruments in God's hand, may be said to clothe Men and women

X. So Man, who is a Worm, must take up his place for a short time in the earth: "The grave is my house, saith Job, the place appointed for all living," Job xvii. 13. This Worm must go to his fellows, to the Worms.

INFERENCES.

I. By this we may see what a poor thing Man is: the mighty ones of the earth, who boast of great matters, are but Worms. And if Man be but a Worm, why doth he swell above the clouds, as if he would make his nest among the stars, whereas he must shortly fall among the clods, and be eaten of Worms?

II. Take heed of having Men's persons in admiration; it is a vain thing to give flattering titles to others. As it becomes us not to reproach or vilify any Man, though all Men be but as Worms; so it is a God-provoking evil, to flatter Men thereby, creating high thoughts in them of themselves; as some once served Herod, crying out, "It is the voice of a God, and not of a Man:" but the Almighty, to show how much he abhorred such as gave not him the glory, made them know he was but a Worm; and therefore the angel of the Lord smote him, and he was eaten up of Worms, Acts xii. 22.

III. Be not envious at others, though more rich and honourable than thee. The greatest of men are but Worms: and though some sparkle and shine in outward glory and splendour, and seem to excel every way, yet they may be but like glow-Worms; it is but for a night they seem like stars, in the morning they will appear like others.

IV. Let us learn from hence not to overvalue ourselves, nor our lives: what is the life of a Worm!

V. What fools are the wicked of the earth, to muster up their forces against God's people! Whom do they come out against? It is but against a Worm. Could they prevail, what honour could they gain by it? Is it so great a manner to destroy a Worm? for so Jacob in his low estate is called: "Fear not, thou Worm Jacob." But let them know, this Worm hath a mighty God to take its part: "I will help thee," &c., Isa. xli. 14. Why should Worms seek to destroy one another?

VI. Lastly; What cause is there, these things considered, to admire, that the glorious God of heaven and earth should be mindful of a Worm, nay, to set his heart upon him, and give his Son to die for him; and to take such a poor and contemptible thing as Man into union and communion with himself! Job vii. 17.

MAN COMPARED TO A FLOWER.

"He cometh up like a Flower, and is cut down," Job xiv. 2.

"All flesh is grass, and all the goodness thereof as the Flower of the field," Isa. xl. 6.

A MAN in his best estate, and in every estate, is altogether vanity; so he is in his best days, and in all his days, but a Flower, or may be compared to a Flower.

METAPHOR.

I. A Flower hath a root, from whence it grows and springs up.

II. A Flower springs up out of the earth suddenly, and at first is but a tender bud, fresh and flourishing.

III. A Flower hath but a little time of continuance; though some abide longer than others, yet most Flowers last not long.

IV. There are divers sorts of Flowers; some fair to look upon, very lovely to the eye, but of an ill savour.

V. There are some other Flowers that are not beautiful to the sight, whose nature and virtue is most excellent.

VI. Great care is taken of some choice and rare Flowers; they are prized at a high rate by such as own them, and know their worth.

PARALLEL.

I. So all Men have one common root, from whence they spring up, viz., the first Adam.

II. So Man springs up like a Flower, and at first is like a tender bud, fresh and flourishing.

III. So Man that is born of a woman is but of few days, his time is but short upon the earth; though some continue longer than others, yet generally their days on the earth are but few, in a comparative sense, Job xiv. 1.

IV. So there are divers sorts of men and women; some very fair and amiable to the outward sight, but of an ill and stinking savour in their lives and conversations, in the nostrils of God and all good men, having no grace, and are besides of a perverse and crooked nature.

V. So there are some men and women, who though they be not lovely and beautiful to carnal eyes, yet are of most sweet and gracious dispositions, and whose worth and excellency is exceeding great, Psal. xlv.

VI. So the saints, who are choice Flowers in God's esteem, are greatly cared for; he esteems them above what men esteem of their choicest Flowers; they are his jewels, and prized by him as his chiefest treasure; of them he hath said, "The world was not worthy," Heb. xi.

METAPHOR.

VII. Some Flowers greatly magnify the wisdom of their Creator, there being many great rarities to be seen in them.

shines forth in his second creation, in his being new-made or transplanted into Christ Jesus, whereby he is adorned with all those most transcendent and incomparable gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit.

VIII. The rarest Flowers grow in gardens; what is a field Flower to some of these?

IX. A Flower is most beautiful, when it is fully ripe.

X. The owner of Flowers knows the best time to crop them, and who shall be offended at him, when he takes to himself this or that Flower out of his garden? He may do what he pleaseth with his own.

what he doth? though he take such out of the Garden, that we would fain have grow still there, because they are such a sweet ornament to it; but may not God do what he pleases with his own?

XI. Some Flowers are gone on a sudden. Naturalists tell us of a Flower that lasteth but one day; and I have read of others, that fade in the very budding.

XII. Some Flowers have seed in them, which if sown will produce a Flower again the next spring.

it shall not be another, but the same shall arise," &c. "There shall be a xv. 38, Isa. xxvi. 19, Acts xxiv. 15.

PARALLEL.

VII. So the wisdom of God appears in the creation of Man. He is a curious piece of God's workmanship, in his first make, in respect of his body, but more especially touching his soul. But the greatest rarity that appears in this Flower, his being new-made or transplanted into Christ Flowers grow in God's garden, the Church. What are those sinful ones, who grow in the field of the world, to some of these?

IX. So Christ's choice Flowers, his precious saints, are most lovely and amiable, when they are fully ripe for heaven.

X. So God knows the best time to crop off, or take away by death, this and that precious Flower. Sometimes he cuts them down, before others think they are half ripe; but God knows better than we. He never pulls, nor takes any of his saints unto himself, till he seeth they are fit to die. And who shall be offended at him in out of the Garden, that we would fain have grow still there, because they are such a sweet ornament to it; but may not God do what he pleases with his own?

XI. So some die as soon almost as they are born; they are taken away, and fade in the very bud. Also some Christians God crops off, and receives to himself, as soon as they are born again; they come up, and are presently cut down, &c.

XII. So Man, though he wither away, and die, yet his body is laid but like a seed in the earth; at spring, viz., in the resurrection day, he shall rise again. Every seed shall have his own body; body shall arise from the dead: "My dead body resurrection both of the just and unjust," 1 Cor.

INFERENCES.

I. What a fading thing is Man! Let every one from hence learn to make ready to die. Happy are they who are fit and prepared for it; for Man in his beauty and chief flourishing is near unto withering.

II. How fading and transient is all our glory;

III. What fools are mortals to value themselves so high.

IV. How vain a thing is it also to set our hearts inordinately upon our dearest friends. There is mention made of the coming up of this Flower, and of its cutting down, but nothing of its growing. Alas! its standing is so small a time, it is not taken notice of; we are born to die, and we die as soon as we are born.

SAINTS COMPARED TO BABES.

"As new-born Babes, desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby," 2 Pet. ii. 2.

METAPHOR.

I. A Babe is begotten. Abraham begat Isaac. "Hearken to thy father that begat thee."

PARALLEL.

I. A Babe in Christ is begotten by the Word and Spirit of God; "Of his own will begat he us, by the word of truth, not of corruptible seed but

METAPHOR.

II. A Babe hath not only a father, but also a mother.

III. A Babe partakes of the same nature of its parents: "That which is born of the flesh is flesh," John iii. 6.

IV. A Babe is formed by the mighty power of God in the womb.

V. A Babe is born or brought forth into the world.

VI. A Babe hath all the parts and lineaments of a man, if it be a perfect birth.

of every grace, though at first forming

VII. A Babe, when born, is observed to come into the world crying. "Behold he prayeth," Acts ix. 11, which was a clear demonstration that he was born again, or a new creature.

VIII. A Babe new-born desires the milk of its mother's breast.

IX. Babes are harmless, free from malice.

X. A Babe, when first born, if not diseased, is observed to grow much in a little time; its growth is then more visible than afterwards.

XI. A Babe needs much tending, must be carefully looked after, or it may suffer much. It is carried in the arms, dandled upon the knees, and laid in the bosom, and hath many a kiss from the father and mother.

XII. Babes, after they are grown up, are taught to speak plain, not to chatter and cry only, but to talk and speak intelligibly, and also to go.

XIII. Babes are weak in knowledge and understanding: "When I was a child, I thought as a child, I understood as a child," 1 Cor. xiii. 11. From hence they many times are froward, peevish, and soon distaste; small things will offend them.

XIV. A Babe, after it is grown up, doth not expect that its father of incorruptible, by the Word of God, that liveth and abideth for ever," Jam. i. 18, 1 Pet. i. 23.

PARALLEL.

II. A Saint has not only God for his Father, but the Church for his mother. "Jerusalem, that is above, is the mother of us all," Gal. iv. 26.

III. A Babe in Christ partakes of Christ's spiritual nature: "That which is born of the Spirit, is spirit, or spiritual," John iii. 6.

IV. A Saint is formed or created by the mighty power of Christ, and by the Spirit: "We are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus to good works," Eph. ii. 10.

V. A Saint is born of God: "And of Zion it shall be said, this and that man was born in her," Psal. lxxxvii. 5. Ministers are said to travail, to bring forth children to Christ.

VI. A Babe in Christ hath all the essentials of a true Christian; he hath all the parts and lineaments of a new creature. There is a formation, or a gracious work in every faculty, a partaking not done to full growth and perfection.

VII. A Babe in Christ, when first born again, or spiritually brought forth, cries to God, is much in prayer: God hath no children that are born VIII. A babe in Christ desires the sincere milk of the word, viz., the sweet, saving, and comfortable doctrine of the Gospel.

IX. Babes in Christ are or should be harmless, concerning malice, as children.

X. A Babe in Christ, or a true Christian, when first converted, if not spiritually distempered, grows much. We read of some of the saints, who soon after they received the word of truth, grew exceedingly, though afterwards a Saint's growth in grace is not so visible.

XI. Babes in Christ need also much spiritual care and looking after. Christ, as well as his Church and ministers, takes much care of them: "He carrieth these in his arms, and layeth them in his bosom," Isa. xl. 10, 11. They have many a gracious kiss of Christ's mouth, or promise of his word, whereby he seals up his love to them.

XII. A Babe in Christ is taught by Christ also to pray, and speak in prayer more plainly, or to express itself, and make known its wants more intelligibly, and also how to go and walk in the ways of God's commandments: "I taught Ephraim to go, taking him by the hand," Hos. xi. 3.

XIII. A Babe in Christ is usually weak in spiritual understanding, or in the mysteries of the Gospel, and from hence is very subject also to be offended with this thing, and that thing, which strong Christians can bear. Many of the young disciples in the primitive time, were offended at those that did eat meat, &c.

XIV. So Christians, when they are grown to some degree of ripeness in understanding, should or mother should dandle it upon their knees, or seen visibly to show that love to it at first, when it was very young.

METAPHOR.

XV. A sweet Babe, one that is very quiet, and good conditioned, is greatly delighted in, and wonderfully beloved by its parents; when others, though their parents cannot but have parental affection to them, yet have not so great a love, as to him or her that is so pleasant in their eye.

XVI. Children need good and careful education, to be kept under good discipline, and have good instruction; "Train up a child when he is young, in the way wherein he should go, and when he is old, he will not depart from it."

XVII. Some Babes or young Children, if their parents do not give them what they would have, of this or that, presently throw away what they have, and are angry, and think they do not love them.

XVII. Babes for these and other faults do often feel the rod.

PARALLEL.

not expect to be always dandled upon the knee of promises, or lie in the arms or bosom of Christ; I mean, have such visible expressions or manifestations of his love, knowing they are his Children, and in his covenant, in his family, and under his care, eye, and gracious provision and protection.

XV. So a young Christian, that is of an humble, sweet, and contented disposition, not cross and froward under the hand and providence of God, but takes all patiently, is mightily prized and beloved by Jesus Christ. "Is not Ephraim my dear son? Is he not a pleasant child?" &c. How did Christ delight in John, that sweet and precious disciple!

XVI. Young Christians need also good instruction; many things they are to learn, that they may wisely behave themselves in the house and family of God. They must more especially be taught the good discipline of God's Church, that they may know how they ought to go in and out before one another. See dear Children.

XVII. So some young Christians, because God doth not give them such large knowledge and experience of himself, and other good things of the Spirit, they slight all God hath been pleased to bestow upon them, and conclude God doth not love them.

XVIII. So Christians are oftentimes under the rod of God for their faults.

SAINTS COMPARED TO CHILDREN.

"If Children, then heirs," &c. Rom. viii. 17.

"For we are all the Children of God, by faith, in Christ Jesus," Gal. iii. 26.

"Be ye followers of God, as dear Children," Eph. v. 1.

SAINTS are God's dear Children, not only Children, but dear Children. Dear Children hath reference to two things: 1. To the high esteem their parents have of them: 2. To that gracious and sweet disposition such Children are of.

METAPHOR.

I. CHILDREN are begotten of their parents, and brought forth into the world.

II. Children partake of the nature of their parents, even of their flesh and bone.

III. Children are called after the names of their parents.

IV. Children are not in every thing alike, in stature, quality, and condition. Some are gentle, dutiful, and humble, and have a clear-

PARALLEL.

I. THE Saints are begotten of God; "Of his own will begat he them. Every one that loveth him that begat, loveth him also that is begotten of him," 1 John v. 1. They are also brought forth by him into a state of grace.

II. The Saints by their being begotten of God, through faith, in a mystical sort, are partakers of the divine nature: "That which is born of the Spirit, is spirit," 2 Pet. i. 4, John iii. 6.

III. So the Saints are called after God's name, holy, heavenly, godly, &c. Christians, from Christ, spiritual, from the Spirit.

IV. So the Saints of God are not in every thing alike; though all have grace, yet not a like measure of it; so though all see, yet all have not the same degree of sight and knowledge in divine things. From hence it is that there are so many er sight, and more perfect knowledge than others, yet ought to love one another.

METAPHOR.

V. Children do not grow alike. Some thrive better upon hard fare than others do, who feed upon more choice and delicate food every day.

daily fed with the delicate food of the most acute and elegant preacher.

PARALLEL.

differences amongst the godly ; but since they are all God's Children, it becometh them to see that they love one another.

V. So some of the Saints thrive, and grow faster in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, who sit under the ministry of such men, whose preaching is accounted by some but as brown bread, than others, who are

DEAR CHILDREN.

I. A dear Child, one that the father esteems so, is teachable, ready to learn what he is taught ; he will give his mind to it, is very flexible.

II. A dear Child is humble and meek, not proud, stubborn, or self-conceited:

out, "I am a worm, and no man," Psal. xxii. 6. And the holy apostles esteemed themselves as nothing : "Who then is Paul, and who is Apollos?" "Unto me who am the least of all saints," &c. "I am nothing," &c. 1 Cor. iii. 5, Eph. iii. 8.

III. A dear Child greatly loves his father. Many instances may be given of this, both from scripture and history.

IV. A dear Child doth not only love his father, but also his mother. And is grieved when she is in distress.

her cunning ; if I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth ; if I prefer not Jerusalem above my chief joy," Psal. cxxxvii. 5, 6. How greatly was the prophet Jeremiah troubled for poor Zion, when he cried out, "My bowels, my bowels !" Jer. iv. 19. The Church lay in his heart, he laments like a poor Child, for the misery of his mother that bare him.

V. A dear Child is very obedient to his parents, will do whatsoever is right, which either father or mother doth require.

holy precepts : "Then shall I not be ashamed," saith David, "when I have respect to all thy commandments," Psal. cxix. 6. And as they are obedient to God their Father, so likewise to the Church their mother. As it is a horrid evil to rebel against God, so such will be left inexcusable who slight the Church. Whatever she requires that is agreeable to God's word, must be carefully obeyed, and such as err herein, as disorderly persons, ought to be proceeded against. See Mother.

VI. A dear Child in all things strives to please his father, seeking his approbation, whether at home or abroad, present or absent.

VII. A dear Child loves peace, and cannot endure quarrelling and discord in his father's house.

"Blessed are the peace-makers, for they shall be called the children of God," Matt. v. 9. "Behold," saith David, "how good and pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity," Psal. cxxxiii. 1. "Endeavouring to keep the unity of the Spirit, in the bond of peace," Eph. iv. 3.

I. So a dear Child of God is very flexible and yielding to the teachings of God. If God hath any thing for Abraham to do, he cries, "here am I." They are like holy Job, "what I know not, teach thou me."

II. So a dear Child of God is little in his own eyes. How humbly did Abraham express himself to God ! "I who am but dust and ashes," &c. Gen. xviii. 27, and Job, "I abhor myself." David cries

III. So a dear Child of God dearly loves his heavenly Father, he loves him with all his soul, with all his heart, with all his strength, loves him sincerely.

IV. So a dear Child of God doth not only love God, who is his Father, but also dearly loves the Church, who is his mother. Thus did David, that precious Child and servant of God : "If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget

V. So a dear Child of God is in all things obedient to God's commands, as is recorded concerning Zacharias and Elizabeth, and many others. They endeavour to behave themselves as obedient Children in all respects, will not baulk one of God's

VI. So a dear Child of God strives in all things like our Saviour, to please his heavenly Father ; "Wherefore we labour, that whether present or absent, we may be accepted of him," 2 Cor. v. 9. Walking in all well-pleasing," &c., Col. i. 10.

VII. A dear Child of God greatly delights in and loves peace and union amongst his brethren ; and he hates discord and quarrelling in the Church.

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

VIII. A dear Child is very tender of his father's honour, and is much troubled to hear any speak against him, or any way reproach him.

IX. A dear Child is greatly grieved, when his father is offended with him, and will endeavour to obtain his favour again.

thee, thee only have I sinned, and done

X. A dear Child will not be at undue times out of his father's house, but take up his place there, especially when he knows his father and mother call for him, and require his presence.

XI. A dear Child desireth rather to dwell in his father's house than in any other place whatsoever.

that I may dwell in the house of the Lord

XII. A dear Child will strive to imitate his father, and walk in his steps, in all things that are just and right. Thus Solomon was exhorted to follow the good example of his father David.

VIII. So a dear Child of God is sorely troubled, to hear the sacred name of God reproached and blasphemed, and his holy laws despised, "Rivers of water run down mine eyes, because men keep not thy law," Psal. cxix. 136. How much were Moses and Joshua concerned for the honour of God's holy name! Josh. vii. 9.

IX. So a dear Child of God is grieved, when he hath displeased his heavenly Father: "Thou hidest thy face, and I was troubled," Psal. civ. 29. How did David mourn for his sin, and strive to obtain the love and favour of God again: "Against this evil in thy sight," &c., Psal. li. 4.

X. So a precious Saint of God will not be absent from the Church, or heavenly family, at any time when his presence is expected there, if it be possible, especially when God calls his people to prayer and humiliation, or when sacred ordinances are administered, or any work is to be done, which eminently tends to the glory of God, and the Church's good.

XI. So a dear Child of God had "rather be a door-keeper in the house of God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness." "One thing have I desired of the Lord, and that will I seek after, all the days of my life," &c., Psal. xxvii. 4.

XII. So a dear Saint takes care to follow God; "Be ye followers of God as dear Children," Eph. v. 1. "Be ye holy, for I am holy." That is the precept, and a sincere soul labours so to be; it is his great desire to be like God and Christ as near as he can. "Be ye followers of me, as I am of Christ Jesus."

1. A saint strives to follow God and Christ in love: we are taught of God to love one another;

2. In humility. What a pattern hath God in Christ laid before us herein! "Learn of me, saith our Saviour, for I am meek and lowly in heart," &c., Matt. xi. 28. "Let the same mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus, Phil. ii. 5, 6.

3. In being merciful and kind to all. "Be ye merciful, as your Father that is in heaven is merciful, Matt. v. 45, 48.

4. In hating and abominating that which is evil. God loathes sin, and so doth every sincere Christian.

5. In forgiveness; they strive to be like God in this. He is ready to pardon, forgive, and forget injuries done to him, and so ought his children. "And be ye kind one to another, and tender-hearted, forgiving one another, as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you," Eph. iv. 32. God forgiveth freely, universally, and for ever; so must they.

INFERENCES.

I. Labour to follow God, as dear Children. 1. Sincerely, not in hypocrisy, not for leaves. 2. Speedily; do not defer it: I made haste, saith David, &c. 3. In whatsoever he commands you. 4. Diligently. 5. Follow him through all difficulties and hardships, as Caleb did, &c., and as Ruth followed Naomi. 6. Follow him humbly. 7. Follow him joyfully. 8. Follow him, when others leave him. 9. Follow him constantly, even to the end. 10. And lastly, follow none but him; forsake all those that would lead you astray. Christ's sheep will not follow strangers; they will follow God, and not Baal.

II. From hence every one may perceive, whether they are God's Children, yea or no.

III. This shows also what great dignity God hath conferred upon believers. "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God," 1 John iii. 1, 2. If David thought it no small thing to be son-in-law to an earthly king, what an honour hath God conferred on us!

IV. Saints may from hence read their privileges. "If Children, then heirs, heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ," Rom. viii. 17.

SAINTS COMPARED TO HEIRS.

"If children, then Heirs," &c., Rom. viii. 17.

"He that overcometh shall be Heir of all things," Rev. xxi. 7.

Note. The Saints of God are Heirs, Heirs of God, Heirs of all things, &c.

HEIRS.

I. The first-born had a princely power and dominion over their brethren, who bowed down before them, they were next their fathers in honour.

II. The first-born were priests in their father's family, till the Levites came in.

III. The first-born had the inheritance; the rest had but a piece of money. And to this day we see, that men used to make their inheritance over to the first-born; and besides the inheritance, they had a double portion of goods.

IV. An Heir sometimes stays a great while, before he come to the full possession of the inheritance; and until then he is under tutors and governors, and differeth but little from a servant.

V. The first-born had a peculiar sort of apparel, whereby they were distinguished from others; such was Esau's goodly raiment which Rachel put upon Jacob.

VI. The first-born had the blessing annexed to them, and unless they were supplanted, as Esau was by Jacob, they were blest of their father, especially when their fathers were at the point of death.

HEIRS.

I. Among men, all a man's children are not Heirs, nor can they fully possess the same estate entirely to themselves, as if but one had it.

viz., the holy angels; the same crown,

II. Heirs among men have but a small inheritance. What is all

PARALLEL.

I. The Saints are made kings to God, are called kings and princes: "A king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment," Isa. xxxii. 1. They shall have dominion over the mighty of the earth, in their day. They are next to Christ in honour, and shall sit upon the throne with him, Rev. iii. 21.

II. The Saints are priests as well as kings to God: "He hath made us kings and priests," &c., Rev. i. 6. They are called an holy priesthood, to offer up a holy and acceptable sacrifice unto God, 1 Pet. ii. 5.

III. The Saints have the eternal inheritance made over to them; the world hath but a small allowance, for all they have amounts to no more than vanity. God giveth himself, and all he hath, to believers; they have a double portion, an hundred-fold in this life, and in the world to come life everlasting.

IV. The Saints patiently wait a while, being under age, before they come to the full possession of the inheritance purchased for them by Christ; and until they come to full age, they are under tutors and governors, who deal hardly with them, and they seem not to differ from servants.

V. The Saints are clothed with a goodly raiment, viz., the righteousness of Christ: holiness is the Saint's livery, whereby they are distinguished from the rest of the world.

VI. The Saints are the blessed of the Lord; none can take either birth-right or blessing away from them; they are blessed, and shall be blessed. The Lord Jesus blessed them at his departure, and that blessing shall never depart from them.

DISPARITY.

I. But all the Saints are Heirs together, they are all joint-heirs, and yet every one hath all to himself: they have all one and the same Father, one and the same Christ, one and the same Spirit, the same apparel, the same grace; all one faith, hope, &c., all the same promises, same attendance, kingdom, and eternal inheritance.

II. But the Saints are Heirs of all things, Heirs of heaven and earth too, Heirs of God. And this world? Luther called all the Turkish empire, but a crust God casts to a dog.

METAPHOR.

III. An Heir among men is often deprived, by force or craft of his title, and turned out of all.

DISPARITY.

what is there more? what can a man ask, or desire to have? would he have more than all?

III. But the Saints cannot by force or fraud be deprived of their title to eternal life. That it may be sure and firm to them, it is made over to them by the oath of God. See Light.

SAINTS COMPARED TO EAGLES.

"But they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength, they shall mount up with wings as Eagles," Isa. xl. 31.

"Who satisfieth thy mouth with good things, so that thy youth is renewed like the Eagles," Psal. ciii. 5.

Note. In some things the Saints are likened to Eagles.

SIMILE.

I. An Eagle is the chief amongst the fowls of the air, as a lion is the king or chief among all the beasts of the earth.

"The righteous are said to be more excellent than their neighbour," Prov. xii. 26. The world is not worthy of them. Hence Jabez, that holy and gracious man, is said to be "more honourable than his brethren," 1 Chron. iv. 9. A godly man is of a more noble extraction than the men of the earth. Saints have an honourable pedigree and descent, they are born of God, are, as it were, of the blood-royal of heaven, and nearly related to the Prince of the kings of the earth. They daily converse, have communion and fellowship with the Father, and the Son, the glorious Sovereign of all the world. They are delicately and most splendidly fed every day. Others live and feed upon the empty things of this world, nay, on the dust of the earth, on ashes, husks, and gravel, as the Holy Ghost declares, "They feed upon the wind, and snuff in the east wind," Hos. xii. 1. Whilst believers feed on hidden manna. "He eats that which is good, and his soul delights itself in fatness." He is often had into the king's wine-cellar, he is richly clothed, hath more noble and honourable titles than any men on earth. He hath a most glorious retinue, viz., the heavenly angels to attend him every day. Never was king, if ungodly, so attended, as the poorest Saint in the world is. Saints are the chief of all the children of men, as Eagles are chief of all the fowls of the air.

II. Eagles are quick-sighted, they behold afar off. They have not only a quick and clear sight, but a very strong sight, able to look fully upon the sun shining in his strength. Hence the proverb is, a man that hath a clear and strong sight, is Eagle-eyed.

III. Eagles are very swift creatures; they have long wings, by which means they fly with great swiftness. Therefore Solomon calling upon us not to set our hearts upon riches, saith, "They make themselves wings, and fly away as an Eagle," Prov. xxiii. 5. The scriptures often express the more

PARALLEL.

I. So the Saints are the chief of men, the excellent, as David calls them: "Thou art my Lord: my goodness extendeth not to thee, but to the Saints that are in the earth, and to the excellent, in whom is all my delight," Psal. xvi. 2, 3.

"The righteous are said to be more excellent than their neighbour," Prov. xii. 26. They live and feed upon the empty things of this world, nay, on the dust of the earth, on ashes, husks, and gravel, as the Holy Ghost declares, "They feed upon the wind, and snuff in the east wind," Hos. xii. 1. Whilst believers feed on hidden manna. "He eats that which is good, and his soul delights itself in fatness." He is often had into the king's wine-cellar, he is richly clothed, hath more noble and honourable titles than any men on earth. He hath a most glorious retinue, viz., the heavenly angels to attend him every day. Never was king, if ungodly, so attended, as the poorest Saint in the world is. Saints are the chief of all the children of men, as Eagles are chief of all the fowls of the air.

II. The Saints are very clear and quick-sighted, they can see afar off, even from earth to heaven. They through Christ can "behold the glory of God with open face," 2 Cor. iii. 18. They can see, and do pry into the secret and hidden mysteries of the Gospel, and covenant of grace: "The secrets of the Lord are with them that fear him, and he will show them his covenant," Psal. xxv. 14. They see the evil that is in the least sin, and can discern what the end of the wicked will be.

III. The Saints are very swift and speedy in their motions, when under the powerful operation of the Spirit, or upon the wings of faith and love: "I made haste," &c., Psal. cxix. 60, saith David. They are said to run, nay, fly like Eagles, or as doves to the windows; they are many times carried swiftly along in the way of their duties, as upon Eagle's wings. The ministers of the Gospel are set forth by an angel fly-than ordinary swiftness of men, by the swiftness of an Eagle. David lamenting the death of Saul and Jonathan, gives them this character, "They were stronger than lions, and swifter than Eagles," 2 Sam. i. 23.

SIMILE.

IV. The Eagles mount up on high. The word in the Hebrew* signifies to get high; and therefore, as it is noted by Mr. Caryl, it is used in the noun, to set forth the highness of God, Job xi. 8, Psal. cxlii. 6, Isa. v. 16, and lii. 13. Scripture, as well as naturalists tell us, that the Eagle's motion and mounting up is wonderful, she flies quite out of sight. One of the ancients says, the Eagle soars above the † air, as if she would visit the starry heavens. The common epithets of an Eagle are, high-flying, swift, &c.

V. Eagles are unwearied in their flight; they faint not, though they fly high, and are long before they rest.

Though it be long before they come to heaven, their everlasting resting-place, they are held up, and therefore they hold out in all their service and sufferings. Faith and love are two such strong and excellent graces, that they, like Eagle's wings, keep them from tiring and fainting in their minds, though their work be hard, and their flight towards heaven long: "I had fainted unless I had believed, &c., Psal. xxvii. 13.

VI. "An Eagle, saith one, hath a high spirit; she flies high, and aims at high things; she will not catch flies, she scorns to stoop to such low game."

VII. Eagles make their nest on high: "She dwelleth and abideth on the rocks, upon the crag of the rock, and strong place," Job xxxix. 28.

VIII. Eagles renew their strength by changing their feathers; though old; they seem young and lively again, and are very long-lived.

mouth with good things, so that their strength is renewed like the Eagle's, Psal. ciii. 5. As the Lord brings his people low by bodily sickness and weakness, and then renews their natural strength; so when there are decays and declinings upon their souls, he renews their spiritual strength. And as the Eagle reneweth her strength by the growth and succession of new feathers, of the same kind, in the place of the old; so a believer reneweth his youth and strength, by casting off gradually the old man which is corrupt, and by putting on more of the new man, who is quite of another kind, 'created after God in righteousness and true holiness,' Eph. iv. 24.

IX. Naturalists do observe, that Eagles are fed and best nourished ing in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting Gospel to preach unto them that dwell upon the earth, Rev. xiv. 6. When God's people are assaulted and persecuted, they fly to God for shelter; so David, "I flee unto thee to hide me," Psal. cxliii. 9.

PARALLEL.

IV. The Saints of God mount up on high: "Our conversation, saith Paul, is in heaven," Phil. iii. 20. Men of the world are like moles and worms, always digging and tumbling in the earth and muck of this world; but believers, those who are truly risen with Christ, seek those things that are above, Col. iii. 1, 2, 3, they soar aloft; nothing will satisfy them but communion with God. They mount up by prayer, as also by fresh acts of faith; they mount up by divine meditation. They are said to dwell on high; earth, and earthly things will not satisfy them; they are of a more heroic and sublime spirit.

V. So the Saints should never grow weary, Gal. vi., nay, and the promise is, "They shall mount up as with Eagle's wings; they shall run, and not be weary; they shall walk, and not faint," Isa. xl. 31.

VI. So a Saint hath a noble, high, and excellent spirit. Low things are not for high and heavenly-born souls; they catch not at the flies, toys, and trifles of the profits, honour, and pleasures of the world, as others do, VII. So the Saints dwell on high: "Their place of defence shall be the munitions of rocks," Isa. xxxiii. 16. They make their nests in the Rock of ages; they dwell in God: He is their strong dwelling-place.

VIII. The Saints renew their strength. "When any oldness," as Mr. Caryl words it, "is coming upon the new creature, they renew their strength, by looking to Jesus Christ, who is their righteousness and strength: 'He satisfieth their mouth with good things, so that their strength is renewed like the Eagle's,' Psal. ciii. 5. As the Lord brings his people low by bodily sickness and weakness, and then renews their natural strength; so when there are decays and declinings upon their souls, he renews their spiritual strength. And as the Eagle reneweth her strength by the growth and succession of new feathers, of the same kind, in the place of the old; so a believer reneweth his youth and strength, by casting off gradually the old man which is corrupt, and by putting on more of the new man, who is quite of another kind, 'created after God in righteousness and true holiness,' Eph. iv. 24.

IX. So, saith Mr. Caryl, do believers; the feeding of the new creature is upon blood; every

* נבון Sublimis, elatus fuit, eminuit, per Metaphoram, supervivit.

† Doubtless he means the lower Region.

SIMILE.

by blood ; they suck and take in that, both young and old.

PARALLEL.

godly man spiritually drinks the blood of Christ, (my blood, saith he, is drink indeed,) as offered to him both in the promises and ordinances of the Gospel. A Saint could not live a moment, nor have any subsistence in grace, if he had not, as the Eagle, blood to drink. As a godly man is nourished by a believing contemplation upon the sufferings of Christ, and the effusion of his blood.

X. Young Eagles are borne, and carried upon the wings of the old Eagle, and thereby are preserved from the dangers of enemies.

X. So the Saints are borne, supported, and carried by the power and arms of the Almighty, who is pleased to compare himself to an Eagle: "As an Eagle stirreth up her nest, fluttereth over her young, spreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them, and beareth them upon her wings ; so the Lord alone did lead him, and there was no strange God with him," "Ye have seen what I did unto the Egyptians, and how I bore you upon Eagle's wings, and brought you to myself," Deut. xxxii. 11, 12, Exod. xix. 4. See Christ compared to an Eagle.

DISPARITY.

Eagles have many evil qualities : they are birds of prey, &c., yea, and a very vermin sort of creature ; and upon that account wicked men are compared to Eagles, which is opened under that head of metaphors concerning ungodly men and persecutors, to which we refer you.

SAINTS COMPARED TO SHEEP.

"My Sheep hear my voice, &c.," John x. 27.

The Saints may be compared to Sheep in many respects : Sheep are harmless creatures, meek, sociable, contented with hard commons, very tractable, patient, fruitful, and very profitable, are made a prey to evil beasts, &c., upon all which considerations, and many others, the Saints are likened to Sheep, which is fully opened under the metaphor Flock, to which we refer you.

SAINTS COMPARED TO SOLDIERS.

"Thou therefore endure hardness, as a good Soldier of Jesus Christ," 2 Tim. ii. 3.

A SOLDIER is taken in scripture either properly, σπάρτανης, or metaphorically. Properly, it is understood of a person that is employed in military affairs, one that bears arms, and is under military command, Matt. viii. 9.

Metaphorically, it is to be understood of a Christian, that is engaged to fight the good fight of faith, under the command of Jesus Christ, against the enemies of the soul. This title is not appropriated only to ministers, it is not a discriminating title, only to distinguish them from other Saints, as the title of Ambassador, Pastor, Watchman, &c., but a title that belongs to every christian, and professor of Christ. So that Timothy is not called a Soldier, merely because he was an evangelist, but as he was a disciple, &c.

Saints are compared to Soldiers ; every true christian is a spiritual Soldier of Jesus Christ.

METAPHOR.

I. A Soldier is listed under some captain or commander ; he gives up his name to him, and enters himself into his service.

PARALLEL.

I. So every true christian listeth himself under the command of Jesus Christ, who is the Captain of our salvation : he gives up his name to him, to serve him in all uprightness, as becometh a faithful Soldier to do, making a solemn covenant with Christ, and his people, to be on their side ; and this is visibly done in baptism.

METAPHOR.

II. A Soldier leaves all other worldly affairs and incumbrances, to follow that particular employ. "No man that warreth, entangleth himself with the affairs of this life, that he may please him that hath chosen him to be a Soldier," 2 Tim. ii. 4. They ought not, like Reuben, to abide among the sheep-folds, to hear the bleating of the sheep, Judg. v. 16.

III. A Soldier, after he is listed, and entered into his company, is armed, and put into a fit posture for that work and service he is called to.

tion of the Gospel of peace, the shield of faith, the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God, Eph. vi. 10—16. And because most of those parts or pieces of a Christian's armour are spoken to and opened under that head of metaphors respecting the graces of the Spirit, we shall speak no more of it here.

IV. A Soldier is known by his habit, armour, and weapons from other men; they put off their own clothes, and put on the king's, especially if poor and ragged when they are listed.

V. Soldiers many times are clothed at the king's charge; and it is greatly for the honour of a captain to have all his men bravely clothed and glittering in their armour.

VI. It is a reproach to Soldiers to be merely mercenary, to fight for money, and to mind their own private advantage more than the credit and glory of their sovereign, and honour, of their captain.

without it? Is it necessary to salvation? These men only make religion as a bridge to carry them to heaven; mere mercenary souls! Alas! A true Christian obeys and serves Christ sincerely, that he may glorify and honour his holy name, knowing he deserves more at his hands, than he is ever able to perform, not doubting his labour shall ever be in vain in the Lord; the very work is wages to him. Paul was resolved, "Christ should be magnified in his body, whether it were by life or by death," Phil. i. 20.

VII. A Soldier hath his warfare appointed him, and his enemies discovered to him, and orders to fight.

II. So a true Christian forsakes all, and follows Christ; he becomes dead to this world; he is crucified to it, and that many times to him. His heart is not set upon things below, but upon things above; he looks upon religion and godliness, as his great work and business, Col. iii. 1, 26. "They that are after the flesh, do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit, the things of the Spirit," Rom. viii. 5.

III. So a true Christian also is no sooner converted, listed and entered into Christ's company, viz., his Church, but he is armed likewise. He puts on the whole armour of God, hath his loins girt about with truth, and hath the breast-plate of righteousness, his feet shod with the preparation of righteousness, his feet shod with the preparation

IV. So a true Christian is known by the clothes he hath on, from the wicked and ungodly of the world. He is clothed with the garment of holiness and humility, and hath on all the precious graces of the Spirit, as armour of proof, fast girt to him by the girdle of sincerity; and this shows him to be one of Christ's Soldiers.

V. So Christ clothes all his Soldiers, and they are all attired alike, clothed in white. Their robes cost dear, viz., the price of his own most precious blood; and it greatly tends to his honour to have them kept clean, and without spot or stain, all glittering in their spiritual armour, viz., adorned with the blessed graces of the Spirit.

VI. So it is a reproach to a Christian, to aim at self in all he doth in religion. Many men care not to do any thing for the honour of God, further than it makes, as they conceive, directly for their own interest and advantage. Tell some men of this or that ordinance and command of Christ, they presently object, may I not be saved

VII. So a Christian hath his warfare appointed him, his grand enemies are made known to him, and he hath received commission also to enter the combat with them, whosoever they are, whether foreign or domestic, whether external or internal, secret or open.

First; his foreign or external enemies are these:

1. The devil, called the king of the bottomless pit, prince of the power of the air, the great dragon, the captain general of the black regiment, and of the hellish militia, that makes war against the Lamb, and his followers. Every the devil, called the king of the bottomless pit, prince of the power of the air, the great dragon, the captain general of the black regiment, and of the hellish militia, that makes war against the Lamb, and his followers. Every Christian is commanded to enter the list, and to fight against these principalities and powers, Eph. vi. 11, 12.

2. The world; this is another, grand, potent, and subtle adversary; many have been overcome and subdued by it.

(1.) The things of the world, viz., the pleasures, honours, and profits of the world. These, as one well observes, have their hooks and snares hid under their pleasant baits, they usually prevail by craft; their flatteries and allurements are very dangerous. By this part of the world Satan set upon our blessed Saviour, Matt. iv. 8.

(2.) The men of the world, who are the subjects of the prince of darkness, and his Soldiers, the militia of hell, and the auxiliaries of Satan, the seed of the old serpent, who are filled with enmity against the woman's seed. "He that is born after the flesh, persecuteth him that is born after the Spirit," &c., Gal. iv. 29. "Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do." These continually oppose the truth, and hate godliness, and those who profess it.

(3.) The worships of the world. Saints have been often exposed to great dangers, for opposing the ways, inventions, and superstitions of men, the worship of the beast, and cursed fornications of the great whore: but whilst they are able to stand, or have life in them, they must oppose and resist all false ways and worshippers, such as strive to make void the doctrine of Christ, and the commands of God by their traditions.

(4.) There are also the lusts of the world, the lusts of the eye, and the pride of life, which Saints are engaged to fight against, and oppose, 1 John ii. 16.

Secondly; They have their domestic enemies:

1. Sin, which is a wretched and treacherous inmate, and cursed adversary.

2. The flesh. These two made the holy apostle to cry out, "O wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me," &c., Rom. vii. 24. Hence we are exhorted, "As strangers and pilgrims, to abstain from filthy lusts, that war against the soul," 1 Pet. ii. 11.

METAPHOR.

VIII. A Soldier expects, and therefore ought to prepare to meet with his enemies; he knows he is chosen, listed, and placed under the command of his captain, on purpose to fight.

So a Christian must always be prepared and resolved to engage and fight them, "Whom resist steadfastly in the faith."

IX. A Soldier goeth not on a warfare at his own charge; his prince bears the expense of the war, and furnisheth him with whatsoever is necessary for that achievement.

X. A Soldier ought to be expert, and well-skilled in martial discipline, to know all the postures of war, particularly the word of command, and to obey presently: he must not dispute the matter, nor make the least pause. Those Soldiers that were under the centurion, were very tractable upon this account as himself confessed: "I say to one, go, and he goeth; and to another, come, and he cometh," Matt. viii. 9.

Lord Jesus Christ. Shall Soldiers be so careful and ready to obey their earthly leaders, who are but men? And shall not we be as ready and forward to obey the Lord Jesus Christ, our heavenly Leader, who is the most wise and blessed God?

PARALLEL.

VIII. So a Saint expects, and therefore ought to make ready to meet with spiritual opposition from the enemies of the soul, as soon as ever he is listed, and entered into Christ's service. As it fell out with the Captain himself, who no sooner was baptized, but presently "he was led into the wilderness, to be tempted of the devil," Matt. iv.

IX. A believer goeth not out in the spiritual warfare at his own charge. Christ furnisheth him with clothes, armour, weapons, and with all things needful and necessary, all is managed by his gracious and blessed Spirit.

X. So a saint ought to be well-skilled in all things necessary for a Christian Soldier; it requires much wisdom and experience; he must understand the word of command, and be ready to obey his Captain, as soon as ever the word is given. David had learned this part well: "I made haste, and delayed not to keep thy commandments," Psal. cxix. 60. And Paul saith, "He immediately obeyed the heavenly vision," Acts xxvi. 19. It is a very unbecoming thing in Christians, to stand, or make a pause about their obedience to Christ, in those things they are to be convinced to be their indisputable duty; it argues they have but little regard to the honour of their Captain, the

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

XI. Soldiers must know their places, how to keep both rank and file. Military discipline hath appointed every officer in the army his proper place, and every private Soldier to abide in the same rank and file, or place where he is set by his commander; and none may alter their station, or change their postures upon their own private account; they must not break their order upon their peril; for that is a dishonour to the captain, and standers-by will laugh and reproach him; besides, if it be in a time of battle, he exposeth himself and others to great danger. If an army or body of men be once broken, and in confusion, they are soon rooted by their enemies.

be imagined, that the Church of Christ should be a more disorderly piece, than the inanimate and irrational creatures; "God is the God of order, and not of confusion in all the churches of the Saints," 1 Cor. iv. 33. Therefore if any Christians, that are of this or that particular company or church, do break the holy order, and regard not to keep in their stations, or neglect their proper work; what a reproach is it to them, and to religion itself! Besides the danger they are exposed to; if saints neglect prayer, or hearing the word, or the Lord's Supper, or are divided amongst themselves, it is very great: unless they rally the sooner, and unite again, and keep their ranks, they are in danger of being utterly routed and undone by Satan. Many hence have been enticed by the subtlety of the devil, to desert their general, and fly from their colours.

XII. Soldiers must follow their leader; this is one word of command.

subject to his holy laws and authority? or follow him for a time, and then grow weary? "If any man will be my disciple, let him take up his cross daily, and follow me," Matt. xvi. 24. We read of a great and famous army, consisting of "One hundred and forty-four thousand," a certain number put for an uncertain, "that follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth," Rev. xiv. 1, 2, 3, 4. We must follow Christ in every ordinance, follow his doctrine, and follow his example, in every one of his gracious qualifications, viz., in his patience, (how contented was he in the midst of his greatest poverty!) in his lowliness of mind, and deepest humility; in his tenderness, bowels of compassion towards those that deserved nothing; how kind, loving, and merciful was he! Follow him in his reproaches, afflictions, and indignities; follow him in all difficulties and dangers; with Peter, follow him to prison, and to death itself, when he calls us thither. "Be ye followers of me, as I am of Christ Jesus." "My sheep hear my voice, and they follow me," John x. 27.

XIII. It behoveth a Soldier to be well-skilled in all the stratagems of war, for that conduceth much to his just and needful accomplishments; policy having many times out-done power, and human strength.

cause of their craft and subtlety. Their adversary the devil is compared to a serpent upon this very account; and in other places we read of his devices and wiles

XI. So must a Saint know his place and particular station, where he is set by his Captain, the Lord Jesus. If he be set as a file leader, or made an officer to lead a party, it is needful for him to see to his proper work and business; he may not quit his command when he pleaseth. The Commander in chief may prefer or degrade his Soldiers, as seemeth good to him; but he may not, he cannot dispose of himself. Pastors must keep their places, deacons keep their places, members of each Church keep their places, and not when they please withdraw themselves, and get into another company, but must abide under particular command, where Christ hath set them. Shall any one think, that God, who hath placed such order in other creatures in heaven and earth, is not strict touching that holy order set and appointed in his Church? If the sun, moon, and stars keep in their own sphere, and move in their own orbs; if the sea hath its bounds and limits set, beyond which it must not go; can it

XII. So must every Christian follow Jesus Christ, he ought to have his eye upon him; how often hath he commanded us to follow him! Shall any list themselves under his command, and refuse to be

XIII. So a Christian ought to be well-skilled and expert in all divine wisdom and policy, in the management of the spiritual war against the enemies of the soul. Christ's counsel is, be ye as wise as serpents, but as innocent as doves. And indeed nothing is more necessary for spiritual Soldiers than wisdom and policy, in the carrying on of the war against their internal adversaries, be-

Eph. vi. "That ye may stand against the wiles of the devil." μεθοδεας του διαβολου, properly the methods of Satan; μεθοδεια μεθοδου, which signifies that art and order one observes in handling a point; we say such an one is methodical. Now because it shows ingenuity, and acuteness of wit, so to compose a discourse; therefore it is transferred to express the subtlety of Satan, in laying of his plots against a Christian." Indeed the expert Soldier hath his order, as well as the scholar; there is method in forming an army, as well as in framing an argument. The devil is a subtle enemy, and Saints are most endangered by his craft and policy; he hath always got the greatest advantage upon Christ's Soldiers by this means. It was the way he took when he set upon man at first, and if he overcame him when he was in his perfect state, no marvel if he prevail upon him in his depraved and maimed state. And therefore wisdom is needful, and more especially to discover his stratagems: "We are not ignorant," saith the apostle, "of his devices," 2 Cor. ii. 11. Some of which I shall note here for the spiritual Soldier's profit and observation, with respect to his drawing men and women to sin.

First, He shows his subtlety, in choosing the most proper and advantageous season for tempting. An hundred Soldiers at one time may turn a battle, and save an army, when thousands will not do it at another. Satan knows when to make his approaches, and the time when he is most likely to prevail. The time he takes to tempt in, is:

1. When newly converted. No sooner is the child of grace, the new creature born, but this dragon pours a flood of temptations after it.

2. When a saint is beset with some great affliction; this is a blind lane, or solitary place, fit for this thief to call for his purse.

3. When a Christian is about some notable enterprise for God's glory, then Satan will lie like a serpent in the way: "An adder in the path, that biteth his horse's heel; so that his rider shall fall backward," Gen. xlix. 17. Thus he stood at Joshua's right-hand, to resist him, Zech. iii. 1, 2, 3. The right-hand is the working hand, and his standing there, implies his desire to hinder him, and his enterprise. Indeed the devil was never a friend to temple-work, and therefore that work is so long a doing. What a handsome excuse doth he help the Jews unto? "The time is not come," Hag. i. 2. When our Saviour was baptized, and was just entering upon his ministry, then Satan set upon him, Matt. iv. 1, 2.

4. When he hath the presence of some object to enforce his temptation. Thus he took Eve, when she was near the tree, and had it in her eye.

5. After great manifestation of God's love, then the tempter comes. Such is the weakness of grace sometimes in a believer, that he can neither well bear smiles nor frowns from God. When Paul was exalted with the abundance of revelations, then was the time that Satan set upon him with strong temptations, 2 Cor. xii. 1, 2, 3, &c.

6. At the hour of death; Satan knows, that if he cannot prevail then, he never can. It is the last onset, and therefore he resolves to try his skill. If he cannot break his head, so as to keep him out of heaven; yet he will, if possible, bruise his heel, and send him limping thither: I mean, fill a Saint full of fears and doubts about his eternal state.

Secondly, He hath many other stratagems to deceive by temptations.

1. He hangs out false colours, and comes to a Saint in the disguise of a friend; he transforms himself into an angel of light; master, pity thyself.

2. He strives to get intelligence of a Saint's affairs. This, saith my author, is one great wheel in this great politicians's clock, to have spies in all places, by whom they are acquainted with the counsels of their enemies. He labours to find out what sin it is that most easily besets a person, or that he is most prone to, Heb. xii. 1.

3. In his gradual approaches to the Soul. When he first comes to tempt, he is modest, and asks but little, knowing he may get that at many times, which he should be denied, if he should ask it all at once. A few men are let into a city, when an army, coming in a body, would be shut out. Remember, he draws to sin by little and little: first it may be the thought of this or that evil is darted into the mind, and after awhile lodged quietly there, and then a little after further advances are made in sin, &c.

4. Satan, like a cunning warrior, hath his reserves; like a wise captain he hath some fresh troops at hand, if need be; so that if one temptation will not prevail he hath a second, nay, a third and fourth, nay multitudes. What fresh and new attempts did he use, when he set upon our Saviour.

5. Another stratagem of his is this: he will in a political way retreat, as sometimes you shall have an enemy fly as overcome, when it is on a design of overcoming. We read not only of Satan's being cast out, but of the unclean spirit's going out voluntary; yet be sure it was with a purpose to return more strong than before.

6. He will strive to make use of fit instruments to carry on his temptations to the ruin of the soul. I might proceed, but by this all may see, that it is needful for the Christian Soldier to be well instructed in the stratagems of war.

METAPHOR.

XIV. A Soldier ought to know the distinct beats of the drum, and sound of the trumpet; an alarm, a call, a march, a battle, &c.

trumpeter to be well skilled how to blow his trumpet, for if it give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself for the battle? so it doth a minister, rightly and distinctly to preach the word of God, that a Christian, like a Soldier, may have an alarm sounded in his ears, when danger is near, or any enemy coming upon him; as also a call to duty, to prayer, to fasting, mourning, and sackcloth, when the day requires it, &c. A good Soldier of Christ will observe the distinct sound of the spiritual trumpet; sometimes it sounds out reproof, sometimes counsel, sometimes comfort; all is carefully observed by a sincere and wise Christian, Isa. xxii.

XV. A Soldier ought to be a man of courage, bold and resolute, not soon daunted nor dismayed by the threats, malice, or strength of an enemy. He ought, as God bid Joshua, to be strong, and very courageous.

1. There are three or four things, which tend to embolden, and increase courage in a spiritual Soldier, in the midst of the greatest danger, when nothing but death and misery seems to stare him in the face.

1. The goodness of his cause. Nothing administereth more life and zeal to a Saint, than the consideration of that holy cause, which in the strength of Christ he stands up for, and is set to defend.

2. The consideration of the power and strength of that God who hath engaged to stand by him, help and aid him in all his conflicts with the worst of his enemies, "Fear not, worm Jacob, and ye men of Israel; I will help thee, saith the Lord. Fear not, for I am with thee; be not dismayed, for I am thy God, I will strengthen thee," &c. Isa. xli. 10, 14. "Ye are of God, little children, and have overcome them, because greater is he that is in us, than he that is in the world," 1 John iv. 4.

3. A good call. Every Christian, in all his enterprizes, must see to his call; let him see that whatsoever he doth in religion, both in matter and manner, be what God hath enjoined him. He that undertakes any work or cause, that is not warranted by God's word, hath cause to tremble. And also let him see he be the man that God approves of, and hath employed in and about that work and duty, whatsoever it be; and when he sees that his call is undeniably good, this will add courage to him.

4. A good conscience. This made Paul so bold in the presence of his incensed adversaries: "Men and brethren, I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day," Acts xxiii. 1. A Soldier who hath much guilt upon him, cannot, if his conscience be at all awakened, engage an enemy with that courage as another man may, in the place of the field, when he knows not but the next moment he may be sent into another world. It is innocency and uprightness that puts life and magnanimity into a Christian. "Having a good conscience, that whereas they speak evil of you as evil-doers, they may be ashamed, who falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ," 1 Pet. iii. 16.

5. Lastly, The assurance he hath of victory. A Saint knoweth he shall have the day, and come off a conqueror: before he enters upon the conflict, his Captain hath told him, he shall overcome at last, and have the crown of life, Rev. ii. 10.

PARALLEL.

XIV. So a Saint must understand the distinct and different sounds of the Word of God daily ministered by his servants; for a preacher is a spiritual trumpeter: "Lift up thy voice like a trumpet," Isa. lviii. 1. And as it is greatly behoves a spirit, not timorous, faint-hearted, or soon dismayed, but a man of an undaunted heart, not fearing the worst that men can do unto him: "Though I walk, saith David, through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil," Psal. xliii. 4. "The wicked flee when none pursue, but the righteous are bold as a lion, Prov. xxviii.

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

XVI. A Soldier must expect to endure hardness, and therefore prepares himself for it. It is a life attended with many hardships and difficulties; they often lie in the field, and fare hard, when others know the want of nothing.

XVI. So the Saints of God must expect to endure hardness. A Christian's life is attended with many difficulties and afflictions, which they must endure as good Soldiers of Jesus Christ. He is no good Soldier, that cannot endure hardness. But here it may not be amiss to enquire, What is that hardness that the Saints do and must endure?

First, They must endure all that hardness, that either their sins, or the profession of the Gospel, may expose them unto.

1. Saints are exposed to hardships by means of their sins; their own iniquities bring great sorrow and trouble upon them. It made David many times cry out, and water his couch with tears.

2. Sin is not sweet to a Saint in the committing of it. He is overcome sometimes to do that which he hates, and his own conscience afterwards sorely lashes and wounds him for it. Sin brings not only hardships upon the soul, but many times sore distress upon the body and family, and a blast upon a man's outward estate.

Secondly, A Saint meets with the hardship of self-denial; he bears the pain of having a right hand lust cut off, and a right eye lust pulled out; he parts with the best, the nearest, and choicest of his outward enjoyments. "Unless a man deny himself of father, mother, brethren, sisters, children, house, and land, &c., for my sake, he is not worthy of me." This hardness, some cannot endure; the young man could not bear it: "When he heard this doctrine, he went away very sorrowful," &c., Matt. xix. 22.

Thirdly, They endure the hardness of mortification, or of crucifying the flesh, with the affections and lusts. Circumcision was painful to the body, and let me tell you, the circumcision of the Spirit is more hard and difficult to a Saint to undergo; "Which is made without hands; cutting off the foreskin of the heart, or putting away the body of sin by the circumcision of Christ." "Mortify your members which are upon the earth." The killing of sin, is as the killing or destroying the members of the body.

Fourthly, Saints endure hardness from men.

1. By hard words. All the cruel reproaches, slanders, revilings, tauntings, scoffings, backbitings, &c., that the sons of Belial can invent, they are forced to endure. "They bend their tongues like their bow for lies, and their tongue is as an arrow shot out," Jer. ix. 8. The tongues of some men are like cruel weapons; "As with a sword in my bones, my enemies reproach me," &c., Psal. xlii. 10. The sword in the flesh is painful, but the sword in the bone is much worse. Mockings are ranked amongst the great sufferings of the godly: "Others had trials of cruel mockings," Heb. xi. 36. The archers this way shot hard at Joseph; and what a poisonous arrow did the Jews let fly upon Christ! "Behold a drunkard, a wine-bibber, a friend of publicans and sinners." "He casteth out devils by Beelzebub, the prince of devils." "As for this fellow, we know not from whence he is." Paul was accused for being "A pestilent fellow, a mover of sedition, and a ring-leader of the sect of the Nazarenes," &c. These things are hard to bear.

2. There is the hardness of men's hands, as well as of their tongues. Wicked men, saith a learned divine, have iron hands, which many times fall heavy upon the Soldiers of Christ. How heavy was the stroke of Cain upon his righteous brother! And what heavy hands did Pharaoh lay upon the Israelites in Egypt! What hardships did the primitive Saints endure, under the heathen emperors, in the ten persecutions! And what sore sufferings, and cruel torments, hath the woman's seed borne and endured under the Papal power! What burnings, roastings, and flayings alive! All along, from the beginning to this day, the Saints have endured great hardness from wicked men. See Heb. xi. 35, to the end. "They were tortured with scourges, bonds, and imprisonments; they were stoned, they were sawn asunder, tempted, slain with the sword; they wandered about in sheep-skins, and goat-skins, in deserts, and mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth, being destitute, afflicted, tormented."

Fifthly, Saints endure hardness from Satan. He comes out with open mouth against them, like a roaring lion, seeking to destroy them. Christ's Soldiers encounter with devils, they wrestle with principalities and powers; Satan daily lets fly his fiery darts against them, Eph. vi.

Sixthly, They meet with some hardness and trouble by the withdrawals of God himself. Some afflictions come more immediately from the hand of God. Job complains of the arrows of the Almighty; David cries out, as if the Lord had broken his bones. Yet God in all the afflictions and trials he brings upon his people, designs their profit: "When he hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold," Job xxiii. 10. It is that we may be partakers of his holiness. Yet nevertheless the strokes and chastisements of the Almighty are hard to be borne.

Seventhly, Christ's Soldiers meet with hardness, whilst they attend upon their proper work, in their particular places and stations unto which they are called. Some have harder service than others; as the forlorn hope, and the van, saith one, may meet with harder service than the main body of the army: the frontiers, and file-leaders, may meet with more difficult service than the rear; and the watchmen that lie perdue, and stand sentinel, with harder duty than those that abide on the guard. But though some endure more hardness than others, yet all must take what befalls them in the place and station where they are set. The ministers of the Gospel, likely, are the men mostly exposed, and yet sometimes others suffer as hard things as they; yet every one must see to discharge his duty in his respective place. The sentinel must not quit his watch, because, it is cold, or danger approaches; the file-leader must not face about, and fall back in the rear, because of the hardness of the service; the leaders must not bid the private Soldiers fall on, and themselves run away; the colours are most aimed at, yet the standard-bearer and ensign must stand by them, and display them in the face of the enemy. So whatever comes, ministers must preach, and people must hear, and the public worship of God must be maintained, the banner of the Word must be displayed, saints must keep their ground and station, where they are set by Jesus Christ. "Necessity is laid upon me; and woe is me, if I preach not the Gospel," 1 Cor. ix.

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

XVII. A good Soldier exposeth himself to endure hardness voluntarily, patiently, courageously, constantly, and sincerely.

XVII. So the faithful and good Soldier of Jesus Christ is not haled, dragged or forced to his duty, and to undergo difficulties for the Gospel-sake; but freely and with a ready mind engages in the work.

"I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem, for the name of the Lord Jesus," Acts xxi. 13. Christ cares not for pressed Soldiers, his are all volunteers: when the Gospel-trumpet sounds, come away, come up hither, immediately they are upon their feet.

2. They endure patiently, taking their Captain for their example: "When reviled, they revile not again." "In patience possess ye your souls."

3. They endure the hardness of their service courageously: "They took joyfully the spoiling of their goods," Heb. x. 34. "The wicked flee when none pursue, but the righteous are as bold as a lion," Prov. xxviii. 1. Shall such a man as I fly? was the saying of a brave Soldier of this Captain's. When Modestus, the emperor's lieutenant, threatened Basil with confiscation of goods, banishment, and death, how courageously did he bear it! "If you have anything else, threaten it; for these things are nothing." This was somewhat like that of Paul; notwithstanding bonds, imprisonments, and death were threatened against him, yet saith he, "None of these things move me, neither account I my life dear unto me," &c., Acts xx. 24. "We glory in tribulation," Rom. v. 3.

4. Saints endure hardness constantly; the whole life of a Christian is a time of warfare: till this life be done, his warfare is not done. "The righteous shall hold on their way, and he that hath clean hands, shall grow stronger and stronger," Job xvii. 9. A Saint must never cease being a Soldier; godliness must be his trade as long as he lives. As Satan will never have done tempting, so he must never cease from resisting his temptations.

5. And then all this is done sincerely; he hath holy aims and ends in what he doeth.

XVIII. A good Soldier spares none of the enemy, when he hath such a command given him: and Saul, for not complying with the requirement of God in this respect, lost his kingdom, viz., in sparing Agag the king, and the fat of the XVIII. So a Saint, or good Soldier of Jesus Christ, spares not one lust: every sin like the cursed Amalekites, must be put to the sword. He is no sound Christian, that suffers any sin to abide quietly in his heart or life unmortified. If there be any one darling lust spared, it is a palpable sign of hypocrisy. Some men are ready to ex-cattle, when the word of command was "Go, smite Amalek, and utterly destroy all that they have, and spare them not; but slay both men and women, infant and suckling, oxen and sheep, camels and asses," &c., 1 Sam. xv. 3.

METAPHOR.

ye shall die; but if ye mortify the deeds

XIX. A good Soldier will keep with his colours. It is punishable by martial law, for a Soldier to lie behind his colours; and death without mercy to depart quite from them.

to those that quite depart from the truth, and embrace heresy or idolatry. And here let me caution all Christians to take heed, lest they be deceived by their enemies. Satan, like a cunning pirate, sometimes transforms himself into an angel of light, he puts out false colours, comes with a seeming banner or ensign of truth; he can make use of scripture, when it will make for his purpose to deceive.

XX. A good Soldier will not turn his back upon the enemy, to the dishonour of his captain: though his life be in danger, he will not fly, nor cowardly betray his trust.

Christians should take unto them, we read of no back-piece; for if they turn their back, they are gone and undone for ever: "If any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him, Heb. x. 38.

XXI. A Soldier is greatly animated and encouraged in all his encounters and sharp conflicts with the enemy, by considering the reward and honour he shall receive, if he manfully hold out, and gets the victory.

diers: I appoint to you a kingdom. "Be you faithful unto death, and I will give you a crown of life," Rev. ii. 10. "I have," saith Paul, "fought the good fight, and finished my course, and kept the faith: and henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which God the righteous Judge will give me at that day, and not to me only, but to all them that love his appearing, 2 Tim. iv. 7, 8.

XXII. Some Soldiers of an army are now and then singled out as champions, to engage an enemy alone. Though every champion be a Soldier, yet every Soldier is not a champion. A captain will not chose any soldier to this work, but such only as he knows are men of courage and experience, &c.

METAPHOR.

I. No earthly Soldiers know what the event or issue of their wars will be; they cannot tell whether they shall overcuse their evil lusts, as Saul did: they will cover their covetous designs under the pretence of doing good, and distributing to the necessities of the poor; but alas, this will not do, Obedience is better than sacrifice. A saint must kill all, put all his sins to the sword, or die to them. One sin spared, as Agag was, will exclude thee the kingdom of heaven: "If ye live after the flesh, of the body, ye shall live," Rom. viii. 13.

PARALLEL.

XIX. So a good Soldier of Christ will keep and abide with the banner of truth. The Gospel, saith Ainsworth, is the Saints' ensign: "And he will lift up an ensign to the people," &c., Isa. v. 26. Christ will lash such as lie behind. Peter was made to weep bitterly for straying from his colours. And it will be death without mercy

XX. So a good Soldier of Jesus Christ will not turn his back to fly from the enemy, or utterly depart from the truth, whatsoever befall him; such is his love to the Lord Jesus, and zeal for his glory. And besides, he knows, if he do, the great danger he exposeth his own soul to thereby: for among all the armour that

XXI. So a Saint is carried on with much zeal and courage, by the consideration of the eternal reward he shall receive in the end. This made Moses despise the glory of Egypt, and refuse to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter. He saw him who was invisible, and had an eye to the recompence of reward, Heb. xi. 26; Christ himself this way animates his followers, and faithful Sol-

XXII. So Christ sometimes calls forth one of his spiritual army, to engage the enemy alone, and as a champion of the truth, to sacrifice his life in the behalf of it. What greater honour can be conferred upon a Christian than this? Such a champion was St. Stephen, Antipas, &c., who were brave men, saints of undaunted courage and resolution; "who loved not their lives unto death, Acts vii., Rev. ii. 13.

DISPARITY.

I. But a true Christian knows, and is assured that he shall overcome, and obtain the victory. He fights not at an uncertainty, the issue of the war being made known unto him by come, and get the victory, or not; though they be ever so valiant and courageous in their service, and faithful and true to their captain and leader.

METAPHOR.

II. Earthly Soldiers many times lose their limbs and precious lives in fight; and it is not in the power of the wisest captain in the world, to repair or make up that loss again.

III. Soldiers are armed with carnal weapons, and fight with men like themselves, and yet many times are overcome, and lose the victory.

against flesh and blood, but against principalities and powers," &c., Eph. vi. 12, 2 Cor. x. 4.

DISPARITY.

Christ in his Word. And although a Christian may sometimes doubt of the truth of his own sincerity; yet being sincere, he doth not doubt of obtaining the conquest.

II. But Christ's Soldiers never engage their enemies to the loss of limbs or life itself in his cause, but he can restore it with great advantage. "He that loveth his life, shall lose it; but he that hateth his life in this world, shall keep it unto life eternal," John xii. 25.

III. But Saints fight with spiritual weapons, and not only with men like themselves, but with the devil, and his infernal crew; and yet through Christ their Captain they get the victory. "For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God," &c. "For we wrestle not

INFERENCES.

These things being so, let all true Christians take heart, and be valiant, and fear not the face of enemies.

1. Consider the worth and dignity of your Captain. Christians have the best Captain and Leader in the world.

(1.) He is of a most honourable extraction, of a most high and noble descent, the heir of all things, the Father's first-born, the express image of his person: he is King of kings, and Lord of lords; and he is, saith one, Generalissimo of all his majesty's forces in heaven and earth.

(2.) Consider his strength and valour: he hath an omnipotent arm, and is of a most valiant, undaunted, courageous, and heroic Spirit. What was Samson, Gideon, David, Alexander, Julius Cæsar, Scanderbeg, or any other mighty warrior, to the Lord Jesus? This is he who cuts in pieces the gates of brass, and breaks asunder the bars of iron; that hath the keys of death and hell; that slew Rahab, and wounded the dragon; who is terrible to the kings of the earth, and will come upon princes as upon mortar. This is he that is the terror of devils, the dread of mortals, who will make other captains tremble, and cry out to the rocks and mountains to hide them in the day of his wrath, Isa. li. 9.

(3.) Consider his wisdom. His skill and policy far exceed the craft and subtlety of all the machiavellian politicians in the world. He knows how to assault and harm his enemies, and to carry on, and bring off, to preserve and defend his people, and faithful Soldiers. Let men and devils be ever so skilful and politic, Christ knows how to outwit them, and over-reach them all. He knows where all their mines are digged, where all their forces, and ambuscades do lie: he knows their plot, and how laid this day against his interest, Gospel, and covenant people, in this and other nations. He knows how to confound them, and catch them in their own craftiness, and to bring them to shame. He is wonderful in counsel, and mighty in working. He hath an omniscient eye, as well as an omnipotent hand. He makes his countermines, and blows them up, or burieth them in the pit they have digged. He outshoots the devil and the wicked in their own bow. He will bring down the beast, and whore, and all their abettors, and make them ashamed of their hope. Mark the issue of this present dispensation. See Captain, and God a man of War.

2. Consider the excellency of your cause, which is just and righteous.

3. The goodness of your call, against which nothing can be objected.

4. For your further encouragement, consider the strength of your fortifications: they are all impregnable, and impenetrable, of most invincible strength. Your outworks, your walls, your bulwarks, your forts, and towers, all your defence is admirable. "The name of the Lord is a strong tower." "Salvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks," Prov. xviii. 10, Isa. xxvi. 1. O how formidable and terrible are the attributes and threatenings of God to his enemies!

5. Consider. Though your number be the fewest, yet your side is the strongest; God is for us, and on our side: "With them is the arm of flesh, but with us the Lord our God, to fight for us." How many, said Antigoner, will you reckon me for? Poor mortal! How many then may we reckon God, Christ, the Holy Ghost for? The whole Trinity is engaged for us.

6. Consider. Though your service be hard, and conflict sharp, yet it will be short. It is but a little while, and your enemy shall trouble you no more. "Our light afflictions which are but for a moment," &c., 2 Cor. iv. 17.

7. Consider. The devils, and all other enemies, though ever so potent, cruel, and malicious, yet they are all conquered and spoiled: "Having spoiled principalities and powers, he made a show of them openly, triumphing over them in it," Col. ii. 15. The Romans were wont in a triumphant manner to carry those they had conquered about with them, and to brandish their swords, and display their colours, and carry their arms in open view, as trophies and emblems of victory: so the Lord Jesus, having conquered Satan, and the powers of hell, rode as it were in triumph through their kingdom, the air, and made a show of them openly, as a glorious victor. 2. Again, the world is subdued; "Be of good cheer," saith Christ, "I have overcome the world," John xvi. 33. And we through him are hereby made more than conquerors. Come tribulation, distress, persecution, &c., with all their blackness, darkness, threats, and terror; what will they do? "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ?" or hinder us of eternal life. 3. Death is subdued, Christ hath got the victory over that. What joy and comfort is this to believers, to hear that all their enemies are conquered; your Captain-general hath broken them all to pieces, Rom. viii. 35.

8. The enemy cannot hurt you; the worst you can meet with will work for your good, Rom. viii. 28.

9. Consider. Though you meet with hard things, Christ can and will make them easy to you. All your wounds he can heal, and all your broken bones he can set. The more you suffer for Christ, the greater your reward will be.

10. Consider what great and glorious pay you shall have in the end. Is not a kingdom, a crown of glory that fadeth not away, worth fighting and striving for?

11. Look to Christ, remember what he hath done and suffered for you; and consider what many saints have endured for his sake before you, that were most precious in God's sight. Is it not better to suffer here, than to suffer in hell? What is the pain and sorrow of the godly in this life, to the everlasting pains and torments of the damned in the world to come? Get much faith, and provide yourselves with all your armour, and the right use of it, the nature of which is opened under the fifth head. Get your hearts loose from the world: "No man that warreth, entangleth himself with the affairs of this life," 2 Tim. ii.

4. Labour for much love to God. It was a notable saying of Mr. Bland the martyr, when he was at the stake: "This death," saith he, "is more dear to me than thousands of gold and silver; such love, O Lord, hast thou laid up in my breast, that I hunger for thee." Take heed you consult not with carnal reason; rely wholly upon Christ, and never consult thy present strength with thy future sufferings. Take heed you do not overvalue your lives. Alas! you cannot live long; what if you die a little sooner than you might do according to the course of nature? Also consider, is it not better if God call you to it, to glorify him by dying, than to die otherwise? Remember, you are not your own; let God therefore make what improvement of you he pleases.

Lastly; pray continually, pray always, for this is the way to overcome. Prayer hath done wonderfully. And this is one great thing that is enjoined on the Christian Soldier.

"Praying always with all prayer and supplication, in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance, and supplication for all saints, and for me," &c., Eph. vi. 18.

Here are two things to be noted:—

I. A duty enjoined, prayer.

II. Blessed directions about it, viz.,

1. The time—always.

2. The kinds—all prayer and supplication.

3. How, viz. (1.) In the Spirit. (2.) With diligence. (3.) Constantly.

4. For whom; (1.) For all Saints. (2.) More particularly for the preachers of the Gospel.

Note. Soldiers of Christ ought to pray, to be much in prayer, to pray always, to pray in the Spirit, to pray for themselves, and to pray for others also.

First; though we are to pray always: yet there are some special times for this duty. Prayer is twofold, 1. Ordinary. 2. Extraordinary. We must in some seasons more especially be at this duty, to pray hard, to pray mightily, &c.

Quest. What is meant by praying always?

Answ. 1. It is as much as to say, "Pray in every thing," according to that word, Phil. iv. 6, "In every thing, by prayer and supplication, let your requests be made known to the Lord." Some pray in nothing they do. "In all thy ways acknowledge him."

2. In all conditions, in a full state, in a naked state, in poverty, in plenty, in sickness, in health, in prosperity, and in adversity.

3. For every thing we need, for spirituals, for temporals, so far as God seeth them good for us.

4. Daily, frequently, morning, and evening. David said to Mephibosheth, "Thou shalt eat bread at my table continually," 2 Sam. ix. 7. He cannot mean, thou shalt do nothing but eat, he would not have him to be such a cormorant, but commonly, every day, &c.

5. To have a heart always for this duty, to be always fit and ready for this sacred ordinance.

Quest. What are those special times and seasons for paayer? or when is extraordinary prayer to be made?

Answ. 1. When a Saint hath any great work to do for God, or eminent business and service for his Church. See Nehem. i. 5, Acts iv. 2, 9. When Abraham's servant had special work to do for his master, he was much in prayer.

2. When a Saint is in the dark concerning any one truth of God, and cannot get satisfaction, then it is a time for extraordinary prayer. When Daniel was at a loss about the time of deliverance out of captivity, how much did he give himself to prayer, Dan. ix. 1, 2, 3, &c.

3. When a gracious soul is under any sore and grievous affliction. David in his distress and affliction cried mightily to God. "Is any afflicted? let him pray;" that is, let him be more abundantly in that duty, James v. 13.

4. When sin abounds, or in a day of great rebuke and blasphemy: when hell seems to be let loose, or the flood-gates of wickedness opened wide in a nation, then it is a time for the godly to be much in prayer, Jer. xiv. 19, Isa. xxxvii. 23.

5. In times of great distress upon the Church; when the danger is imminent, as at this day; this is a time for extraordinary prayer. See Isa. xxii. When many nations came up against Judah, then Jehoshaphat cried mightily to heaven, 2 Chron. xx. 12. When Haman plotted to destroy all the Jews, and cut off Israel at once, and the writings were sealed and sent forth, then Esther and the godly ones prayed mightily. Thus did Jacob, when his brother was coming to meet him, fearing he would cut off the mother with the child; how did he then wrestle with God! Gen. xxxii.

6. In times of temptation. When Christ was assaulted, and his hour was come, he prayed hard, he spent a whole night in prayer, Matt. xxvi. 44. And what saith he to his disciples? "Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation," verse 41. When Paul had that thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet him, he besought the Lord thrice, that it might depart from him, 2 Cor. xii. 8. That three times, as some conclude, might be threescore times.

7. Lastly; in a time of great expectation, when great things are near, and much looked for. When Daniel expected great things, understanding by books, deliverance to the Church was at hand, he set himself to seek God, Dan. ix. 2, 3.

Secondly; Consider, prayer is a great ordinance. And that doth appear,

I. In respect of God; it gives him the glory of three great attributes.

(1.) Of his omniscieny: We hereby acknowledge, that he knows our wants and necessities. "All my desires are before thee, and my groanings are not hid from thee," Psal. xxxviii. 9.

(2.) His omnipotency. We acknowledge, in our crying to God, and relying upon him in this duty, that he is able to help us, and supply all our wants.

(3.) It gives him the glory of his goodness: "O thou that hearest prayer." A Saint knows, and confesseth hereby, if he pray aright, that God is willing and ready to help and save him.

2. Prayer is a great ordinance, if we consider the power and prevalency of it. Luther ascribed to prayer a kind of omnipotency. It hath prevailed over fire, water, and earth; It hath stopped the sun in its course. It hath prevailed over evil angels, it hath cast the devil out, and broken his kingdom. It hath had power over the good angels, as appears in the case of Elisha; it fetched them from heaven to be his guard and protection, 2 Kings vi. 16, 17. Nay, it hath prevailed with Christ himself, the Angel of the covenant, as appears in Jacob's case. "As a Prince, thou hast wrestled with God, and hast prevailed." It hath healed the sick, raised the dead, stopped the lion's mouth, and hath subdued and put to flight the armies of aliens; hath opened the prison doors, and broken in pieces chains, gates, and bars of iron and brass, Heb. xi. There is none of the battering rams, or artillery of hell can stand against it. It is like an engine, as one observes, that makes the persecutors tremble; and woe to them that are the buts and marks that it is levelled at, when it is fired with the fire of the Spirit, and discharged in the strength of faith. It is said, Mary Queen of Scots dreaded more the prayers of Mr. Knox, than an army of twenty thousand men; she had more cause, than an army of ten hundred thousand. It is said of the witnesses, that "They have power to shut heaven, that it rain not in the days of their prophecy; and have power over waters, to turn them into blood, and to smite the earth with plagues, as often as they will," Rev. xi. 6. How do they do this, but by prayer?

3. That prayer is a great ordinance, will appear, if we consider the promises made to it, Psal. l. 15, Matt. xxi. 22, Job xv. 7.

4. That it is a great ordinance, will appear, if we consider how it co-works with all other ordinances and duties, to make them effectual, whether moral or evangelical. Every thing is sanctified by the word of God and prayer.

5. That prayer is a great ordinance, doth appear by the influences it hath over all our graces. (1.) It is the means for getting grace; hereby a Soldier of Christ obtains his armour. (2.) And for the increase of grace, in order to the acting of it. (3.) For the evidencing of grace. It is that which brings the soul into God's presence, and fills it with divine joy and peace in believing.

6. It is the divine breath of the soul; can a man live longer than he breathes? A Saint dies, when he quite ceaseth praying.

Quest. What hinders or obstructs the answer of the saint's prayer?

Answ. (1.) When we pray not according to God's will; God's will must be the rule of our prayers. "And this is the confidence that we have in him, that if we ask any thing according to his will, he heareth us," 1 John v. 14.

2. When the end or aim of a man is not right: "Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it on your lusts," Jam. iv. 3.

3. When we pray not in faith; unbelief hinders the answer of prayer. "But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering," Jam. i. 6, &c.

4. When endeavours after the things we want, are not joined with our prayers. As we have a mouth to beg, we must have a hand to work, Psal. xxvii. 4.

5. When any one sin resteth in the bosom unrepented of. "If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me," &c., Psal. lxvi. 18.

6. When we are not fervent. Prayer must be with affection unto God.

7. When we pray not in spirit. Our spirits must pray; and not only so, but if the Spirit of God do not act and assist our spirits, our prayers will not prevail.

8. When we are not constant in the duty. We must be importunate and constant, pray always, and not faint, if we would have our prayers heard, Luke xviii. 1.

9. When we come not to God in the name of Christ, the door is shut. We must ask in Christ's name, and come to God by him, if we would be heard and accepted by him.

THE CELESTIAL RACE, OR, THE SAINTS COMPARED TO RUNNERS.

"Know ye not, that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize; so run that ye may obtain," 1 Cor. ix. 24.

"Let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us; and let us run with patience the Race that is set before us," Heb. xii. 1.

CHRISTIANITY, or the life of a Christian, is in these scriptures compared to a race. "So run that ye may obtain." A Christian is compared to a man that runs a Race.

What sort of Race the apostle principally alludes to, is not, as we conceive, so material; besides, many worthy men do not agree about it, some being subject to think the apostle alludes to the Olympic games. We shall therefore run the parallel, with respect to such things concerning a Race, which all generally agree in.

To run, is variously taken in scripture. 1. To break through, Psal. xviii. 29. 2. To strive with the greatest speed and celerity, or to make haste, Prov. i. 16, 2 Kings iv. 22. 3. Eagerly in affection to be carried after, 1 Pet. iv. 4. 4. To pass without let, Psal. cxlvii. 15. 5. To labour with earnestness. 6. To go forward, Gal. v. 1.

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

I. A man that runs in a Race, takes great care to begin well. It behoves him to be exact in his setting out. 1. In respect of time. 2. In respect of place; he observes the place from whence he must begin to run. A little time lost at the beginning of a Race is dangerous.

vi. 2. Some men begin too late, they mind not the call of God. "To-day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts." "Because I have called, and ye have refused, &c. I also will laugh at your calamity. Then they shall call upon me, but I will not answer," Prov. i. 24, 28. 1. They ought to observe the place from which they must depart. He that would go to Zion, must leave Babylon; as he would go to Zoar, so he must depart out of Sodom. He must leave the way of sin, yea, all the evil courses, customs, traditions, and inventions of men: "Ye did run well," &c.

II. A man that runs in a Race, ought to know the way well which he is to run; if the path be not plain before him, he is not like to win the prize.

Christ is the Way, as a priest, who offered himself up as a sacrifice to God for us, to atone and make peace between the Father and us. 2. Christ is the way as a King, who hath appointed us laws and ordinances, which we must obey and follow, to manifest our subjection unto him, "I will run the way of thy commandments," Psal. cxix. 32. 3. As a Prophet, who hath laid down all rules and heavenly directions necessary for us in matters of faith and practice, whom we must hear in all things. 4. Christ is the Way, in that holy example he hath left, that we should follow his steps. A saint observes the very footsteps of Christ, and of the primitive church; he sees the good old way plain before him, as it is recorded in the holy scripture, and thereby knoweth which way to steer his course, Acts ii. 23, 1 Pet. ii. 21.

III. A man that runs in a Race, must see to put himself in a fit equipage. He puts off his upper

I. So a Christian ought to take great care how he begins or sets out in the Race towards eternal life.

1. In respect of time, it behoveth him to set out early enough; he must not defer the great concernment of his soul; delays are dangerous. "Seek the Lord whilst he may be found, call upon him whilst he is near," Isa. lv. 6. "I love them that love me, and they that seek me early, shall find me," Prov. viii. 17. "Behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation!" 2 Cor.

vi. 2. Some men begin too late, they mind not the call of God. "To-day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts." "Because I have called, and ye have refused, &c. I also will laugh at your calamity. Then they shall call upon me, but I will not answer," Prov. i. 24, 28. 1. They ought to observe the place from which they must depart. He that would go to Zion, must leave Babylon; as he would go to Zoar, so he must depart out of Sodom. He must leave the way of sin, yea, all the evil courses, customs, traditions, and inventions of men: "Ye did run well," &c.

II. So a Christian ought to know the way to salvation, to be well instructed in the path of eternal life. Christ is the Way: "No man, (saith he,) cometh unto the Father, but by me," John xiv. 6. "There is no other name under heaven given, whereby we must be saved," Acts iv. 12. 1.

2. Christ is the way as a King, who hath appointed us laws and ordinances, which we must obey and follow, to manifest our subjection unto him, "I will run the way of thy commandments," Psal. cxix. 32. 3. As a Prophet, who hath laid down all rules and heavenly directions necessary for us in matters of faith and practice, whom we must hear in all things. 4. Christ is the Way, in that holy example he hath left, that we should follow his steps. A saint observes the very footsteps of Christ, and of the primitive church; he sees the good old way plain before him, as it is recorded in the holy scripture, and thereby knoweth which way to steer his course, Acts ii. 23, 1 Pet. ii. 21.

III. So a man that would set out in the spiritual Race, or in a speedy course towards salvation, must cast off the rags of his own righteousness, clothes, and gets meet and necessary garments for the purpose : because the clothes that a man usually wears, would much encumber him in his running.

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

IV. A man that would run in a race, so as to obtain the prize, must lay aside all weights whatsoever ; for all know, that if a man have a weight or burden on him, it will greatly hinder or obstruct him in his running : nay, if he do not cast it off it will soon cause him to be weary, and faint in the way.

prophet shows, is like a man that is laden with thick clay, Hab. ii. 6. It is impossible for a man to run this Race with the world upon his back. What was it that weighed down the young man in the Gospel, that came running to Christ, who seemed to be in a full speed towards eternal life ? Was it not the inordinate love to the world ? 2. Sin : sin is a weight : " That sin that doth so easily beset us." Some understand, the sin of unbelief is meant hereby ; others, a man's constitutional sin, or the sin of his nature, that which he is most easily overtaken with, whether it be pride, passion, &c. Sin, yea, every sin must be cast off, take it how you will, though I rather adhere to the latter, if a man would so run as to obtain ; for nothing like guilt tends to make a Christian grow weary and faint in his mind.

V. A man that would run so as to obtain the prize, must not be overcharged with inordinate eating and drinking ; for experience shows how that unfits a man for running a Race, or for any other enterprize whatever. And a man that striveth for mastery is temperate in all things.

ton riotousness, excessive delight in, or desires after the pleasures of this world, &c. Or on the other hand, being overwhelmed, and sorely afflicted or perplexed with inordinate cares about earthly matters ? All these things must be avoided by those, who would run the spiritual Race so as to obtain the prize.

VI. A man that would run in a Race, so as to obtain the prize, must see he doth not lessen his pace ; he must run swiftly, and run constantly ; if he loiter, or grow careless, and idle, no wonder if he lose the prize.

one of you do show the same diligence, to the full assurance of hope to the end," Heb. vi. 11. Some men seem very zealous in a fit, they are all on a flame, as it were, none more forward and lively in God's ways, and in his holy worship, than they ; but on a sudden oftentimes, as hath been observed, they flag, and grow weary. It may be, as the proverb is, a zealous apprentice, a lukewarm journeyman, and a quite cold master.

VII. A man that would run so as to obtain the prize, ought to be strong and healthy. A distempered person, or one that falls sick in the way, is not likely to obtain the prize ; a consumptive man, or one that hath and put on the righteousness of Jesus Christ by faith ; for that garment, with the garment of holiness and humility, is only necessary, and must be put on by all that run the Race set before them, so as to obtain the prize, Rom. xiii. 14.

IV. So a Christian that would run in this heavenly Race, must cast off every spiritual weight. This the apostle directly counsels the Saints to do : " Let us lay aside every weight, and the sin that doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the Race set before us," Heb. xii. 1. Now these weights are, 1. The inordinate affections. Our hearts must not be set upon things below, not inordinately upon father or mother, son or daughter, house or land ; for he whose heart runs out in a covetous manner after the world, as the

V. So a Christian must take heed he be not overcharged in a spiritual sense ; there is a spiritual sense : there is spiritual gluttony and drunkenness spoken of in scripture. Hence saith our Saviour, " Take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, drunkenness, and the cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares," Luke xxii. 34. What is meant by surfeiting, drunkenness, &c., but all kind of loose living, 1 Thess. v. 7. Wan-

VI. So a Christian must run with speed, he must be very diligent, swift-footed, which is signified by running ; and also he must be even in his course. He must not be like the Galatians, Gal. v. 7, only run well for a time, but continue always to the end the same pace, i. e., keep in a constant course of godly zeal and holiness, according to that of the apostle, " We desire that every

VII. So a Christian, that runs the heavenly Race, ought to labour after spiritual strength : " Be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might," Eph. vi. 10. " Thou, therefore, my son, be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus," 2 Tim. ii. 1. Distempers are as apt to seize upon feeble knees, or a distempered heart, is not likely to hold out.

METAPHOR.

want of breath, difficulty in breathing, or any other decay of the inward man, or disease of the soul. If any of these seize upon a Christian, in his course to eternal life, without speedy cure, they will cause him to faint, and fall short of the blessed prize.

VIII. A man that runs in a Race, if he fall lame in the way, is not likely to obtain the prize.

way, but rather let it be healed." Heb. xii. 13. Some by lameness understand want of sincerity, when there is a work upon one faculty of the soul, and not upon another; i. e., when the conscience is awakened, and the understanding somewhat enlightened, and yet the will and affection is for sin and the world. This man is lame, he is no sound man, he goes limping: he will not run long, as he runs not well. Others by lameness understand more directly, a wavering mind about some main truths of the Gospel, or about the public and visible owning and professing of Christ and the Gospel, in respect of those truths that are most opposed by men, in the day and generation in which we live. Some are like those in the prophet Elijah's time, they halt between two opinions, stand wavering between God and Baal, and know not which to cleave to, whether to the Protestant, or Popish religion, 1 Kings xviii. 21. Now these are lame professors; they are corrupt, or not sincere; they will not, unless healed, hold out to the end of the Race, but be turned out of the way.

IX. A man that meets with bad way in running a Race, is thereby many times hard put to it, and in danger of losing the prize. As when he is forced to run up-hill a great while together, or meets with a rough and untrodden path, or, is fain to run through a deep mire, or a very dirty lane; this tries his strength, courage, and resolution.

grown weary, or being offended, have fallen away, Matt. xiii. 21.

X. Men that run in a Race, have many spectators, who stedfastly look upon them, to see how they run, and who will win; some hoping one will gain the prize, and others hoping the same man will lose it.

will hold out to the end, and obtain the help and encourage them in their course. On the other side, there are all the devils, or wicked angels, who have their eyes upon them for evil, who do not only hope and long to see them grow weary and faint in their minds, but also strive, as much as in them lies, to hinder and resist them in their Race, so that they may lose the prize, Zech. iii. 1, 2.

XI. Some men run a great while, and afterwards grow weary, and slack their pace, nay, quite give over running, and so lose the prize.

and so turn with the dog to his vomit again, and lose eternal life.

PARALLEL.

the soul as upon the body, viz., the tympany of pride, the fever of passion, the trembling of the heart through slavish fear, the stone of a hard heart, the spiritual consumption, or decay of grace;

VIII. So that Christian that falleth lame, in a spiritual sense, in the Race to glory, is in danger of miscarrying. "Make straight paths for your feet, lest that which is lame be turned out of the

IX. So when a Christian meets with hard things, or passeth through great difficulties in his way to heaven, he is much put to it, viz., when he is forced to mount the hill of opposition, and pass over the stile of carnal reason, and through the perilous lane of persecution, and valley of the shadow of death; "Being accounted all the day long as a sheep for the slaughter," Psal. xlv. 22, He then is tried to purpose. Many that have set out heavenwards in a day of peace and prosperity, have in a time of tribulation, and persecution

X. So the saints of God have many and eminent spectators, who stedfastly look upon them, with great expectation, to see how they behave themselves, whilst they run the celestial Race, viz., God the Father, the Lord Jesus Christ, and the Holy Spirit, the one Almighty and eternal God. Yea, and all the holy angels, on the same side, behold them with great earnestness, hoping they

the crown of everlasting glory, and to that purpose

XI. So some professors seem to run well, to be zealous for God and religion a great while, it may be for many years together; but when trouble arises, or temptation seizes upon them, they grow weary, and indifferent about these matters, and with Demas, cleave to this present evil world,

METAPHOR.

XII. Some men that have run in a Race, have run for a great prize, yea, for a crown, as some have observed, and when they have won it, have been praised exceedingly, it being esteemed a mighty honour; it hath not only enriched them, but been to their great renown and glory.

of righteousness, which God the righteous Judge will give me at that day, and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing," 2 Tim. iv. 7, 8. This prize will not only enrich the soul that obtains it, but raise his renown and glory to eternity. He shall be honoured of all, nay, he is the man whom the king delights to honour: "They shall sit down with Christ on his throne," &c., Rev. iii. 21.

XIII. The man that runs, who resolves to win the prize, breaks through all difficulties, will not regard any vain allurements, but presses on with his utmost strength, celerity and speed imaginable; the thoughts of the rich prize animating his mind, and prompting him on so to do.

in praying, being greatly animated and encouraged thus to do, by seeing him who is invisible, to the natural eye, and by having a sight of the excellent reward, or that glorious crown and kingdom he knows he shall receive, when he comes to the end of the Race, Heb. xi.

METAPHOR.

I. Some men in running a Race do their best; they do whatever in them lieth to obtain the prize, but nevertheless lose it.

II. Many run in a Race, but one only can obtain the prize.

PARALLEL.

XII. So the Saints of God, who run this heavenly Race, run for a great prize, viz., a crown of glory. "And every man that striveth for the mastery, is temperate in all things: Now they do it to obtain a corruptible crown, but we an incorruptible," 1 Cor. ix. 25. "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life," Rev. ii. 10. "I have," saith Paul, "fought the good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown

XIII. So a true Christian, who resolves for heaven, he makes haste, he breaks through all difficulties, and regards not the golden balls Satan throws in his path, viz., none of the vain allurements of this world, but with his uttermost strength, celerity, and eagerness of affection, presseth forward. "I press towards the mark," &c., Phil. iii. 14. "He strives to enter in at the strait gate," Matt. vii. 13. He strives against Satan, against the world, against sin, strives in hearing,

DISPARITY.

I. But now a Christian, whoever he be, that doth his best, does what he can in all uprightness of heart, to believe, to close in with Christ, to love, serve, and obey him, shall never miss of eternal life, John x. 2, Rom. viii. 1. Never was any man damned, saith a worthy minister, that did what he could to be saved.

II. But though thousands run in this spiritual Race, yet they may all obtain the prize.

INFERENCES.

I. We may infer from hence, that the work and business of a Christian is hard and difficult; heaven is not obtained without running, wrestling, striving, warring, &c.

II. That many professors, who set out heaven-ward, and run well a little while, are not like notwithstanding to obtain eternal life; it is only he that endureth to the end, that shall be saved, Matt. xxiv. 13.

III. It may also inform us what the reason is, that so many persons faint or grow weary in this spiritual Race. (1.) Their weights which they have upon them may occasion it. Or, (2.) The way being bad, or up-hill. (3.) Their not being temperate in all things. (4.) Their being diseased or lame. (5.) Satan beguiling them with his golden balls. (6.) They being not thoroughly affected with the worth of that glorious prize they run for. (7.) By means of their trusting in their own strength, &c. (8.) Their growing lazy, loving present ease, &c. (9.) And lastly, which is the sum of all, their not being truly converted, never effectually wrought upon by the Spirit of grace.

IV. It may serve to stir us all up to the greatest diligence imaginable, to the end. Whatsoever we meet in the way, heaven will make amends for all.

SAINTS COMPARED TO SALT.

"Ye are the Salt of the earth; but if the salt have lost its savour, wherewith shall it be salted? It is henceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out, and trodden under foot of men," Matt. v. 13.

BELIEVERS, as well as ministers, are called by our Saviour the Salt of the earth; for Christ preached this sermon not only to his apostles, but to all the disciples; it is not appropriated to ministers alone, but to all believers.

Why the godly are and may be compared to Salt, is briefly opened in the following parallel.

METAPHOR.

I. Salt is very profitable, it keeps and preserves meat from putrifying, which would soon stink, corrupt, and perish, was it not for it. "Salt, as one saith, is the blossom of nature, it is mingled with all mixed bodies, and preserves them from corruption."

so abominable in God's sight, that he would not endure it any longer. And besides, God many times spares a people, family, and nation, for the sake of the righteous who dwell among them. The godly are the interest of people and nations, as it is elsewhere shown. Had there been but a little more of this spiritual Salt in Sodom, viz., but ten righteous ones, it might have continued to this day. "And he said, O let not the Lord be angry, and I will speak yet but this once, peradventure there shall be ten found there," &c. "And he said, I will not destroy it for ten's sake," Gen. xviii. 32. Nay, though there was scarce ever a godly soul in it, but righteous Lot; yet what said the angel? "Haste thee, escape thither, for I cannot do any thing till thou be come thither," Gen. xix. 22. As Zoar was saved for Lot's sake, so Sodom could not be set on fire, till he was out of it. And was not Joseph the interest of Potiphar's house? Was not his master blessed for his sake? And was not Laban, and what he had, blessed for Jacob's sake? And was not the whole house of Israel and Judah preserved and saved from utter ruin, for the sake of a holy remnant that was among them? "Except the Lord of Hosts had left us a very small remnant, we should have been as Sodom, and been like unto Gomorrah," Isa. i. 9.

II. Salt draws putrifying humours out of meat; it is of a purging and cleansing quality.

III. Salt seasons meat, and makes it savoury.

wise and witty speeches, pleasant discourse, a good grace in speaking, and Salt, by the same word. This agrees with that of the apostle: "Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with Salt, that ye may know how to answer every man," Col. iv. 6.

IV. Salt is of a hot and fiery nature; being cast into the fire, it sparkles, and burns furiously.

V. Salt stirs up thirst.

things. We should not so much look for examples from others, as give examples ourselves.

VI. Salt makes meat fit for

PARALLEL.

I. So the godly are most profitable in all the earth. (1.) They keep the world from being totally corrupted by evil and pestilent errors and heresy. (2.) From being spoiled by profaneness and hellish debauchery. They, by their holy lives, doctrine, and gracious deportment, put a check to the overspreading wickedness of those places where they live. The world would soon grow much worse than it is, were it not for the saints and people of God; it would stink, and be

II. So gracious Christians, by their doctrine and holy example, and in particular, preachers, draw out rottenness and filth from the hearts and tongues of men.

III. The godly Christian by his wisdom seasons the minds of good men. Hence sapientia is derived a sapore, from savour. The Latins express

IV. So Christ's disciples are by the Spirit made hot, fervent, and zealous for God, and his truth; yet this heat should be mingled with discretion, lest they fly out, as those did who called for fire from heaven, Luke ix. 54.

V. So the good example of Christians stirs up others to thirst after Christ, and heavenly

VI. So by the Salt of a holy conversation, or a

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

Food, and meet to be received by such as want it.

professor may be said to season his own doctrine. And on the other hand, how unsavoury doth that good doctrine seem to be, and what little relish is there in it, that is preached by an unholy and unsanctified person? Rom. ii. 21—24.

VII. Salt may lose its savour, and become good for nothing, but to be trodden under feet of men. It is not fit for the land, nor yet for the dunghill, but men cast it out. Naturalists tell us, that Salt having lost its savour, being laid upon land, it causeth barrenness.

again by repentance," &c. Heb. vi. 4, 5, 6. Unsavoury professors, and wicked apostates, tend to make the Church barren; they hinder the increase thereof.

good life, in them that preach and profess the Gospel, the word becomes fit to be received.

This makes it relish, and this way a preacher or

VII. So professors, if they lose their savour, if they become vain, vicious, and carnal in their conversations, what are they good for? A Christian to turn an apostate; he that seemed once savoury and serious in his words and behaviour, to become filthy, unclean, proud, ambitious, covetous, &c., is one of the worst of men; such are fit for nothing but to be cast into hell. Of these the apostle speaks, "It is impossible to renew them

INFERENCES.

I. How unsavoury is the world! Sinners by nature are loathsome and stinking in God's sight: "Their throats are like open sepulchres," Rom. iii. 13.

II. It shows Saints their duty, which is to season others. They should season the place, town, family where they live: (1.) By good doctrine. (2.) By a good conversation. (3.) By good counsel. Jacob told his sons, Simeon and Levi, by their slaying the Sichemites, "They made him to stink among the inhabitants of the land," Gen. xxxiv. 30. The speech, as well as the practice of Christians, should be a seasoning and savoury pattern, that it may administer grace to the hearers, and observers thereof.

III. O let it stir up every Christian, as well preachers as others, to be savoury! How can we season others, if the Salt have lost its savour? Take heed of scandalous sins. (1.) By these the name of the Lord is blasphemed, Ezek. xxxvi. 20, Rom. ii. 24. (2.) Religion brought to contempt and reproach. (3.) The hearts of all sincere ones greatly grieved. (4.) The conversion of sinners hindered. (5.) Men's damnation furthered. Hence saith Christ, "Woe be to the world because of offences."

But on the other hand, (1.) A holy and savoury life makes a man lift up his head with much boldness, though reproached: "Whose ox have I taken, or whose ass? Or of whose hands have I received a bribe." 1 Sam. xii. 3. (2.) It tends to stop the mouths of the wicked, 1 Pet. iii. 16. (3.) It is many times not only a means of conviction, but conversion of others; nay, and of such as will not be won by the word, 1 Pet. iii. 1.

IV. If Saints are the Salt of the earth, and interest of nations, it shows the folly of those wicked men, that strive to root them up, and turn them out of the world.

V. Lastly; It may caution all that profess the Gospel, against apostacy. "Remember Lot's wife," Luke xvii. 23. She for not being savoury, or for looking back, was turned into a pillar of Salt, nay, and into a standing pillar, &c., Gen. xix. 26. May not one reason of it be this, viz., to show, that that very example of God's severity upon her, might serve, or be sufficient to season all Christians, to the end of the world against apostacy, or looking back?

SAINTS COMPARED TO MERCHANTS.

"Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a Merchant-man, seeking goodly pearls, who when he had found one pearl of great price," &c., Matt. xiii. 45, 46.

SIMILE.

PARALLEL.

I. A Merchant is a great dealer in the things of the world.

I. A true Christian is a great dealer in the things of heaven; his affections are set upon those things that are above, where Christ sitteth at the right hand of God, Col. iii. 1.

SIMILE.

II. The best and greatest Merchants trade and deal in the richest and choicest things on earth, viz., jewels, pearls, &c.

III. Merchants in their first trading are not so skilful in their merchandize, as they are afterwards, when by commercing with other Merchants, they have found out the true worth of their Merchandize, and the manner of their dealings.

IV. Merchants are most careful of their concerns, when they have met with some loss; then they begin to fear they shall be undone, if such losses increase upon them.

V. Merchants that deal in precious stones, are very careful lest they should be deceived with counterfeit stones, which are very like the true ones.

VI. Merchants trade to foreign parts or countries; their chief concerns come from thence, whereby they grow rich.

VII. Merchants have correspondents in those countries to which they trade, who receive their merchandize which they send, and make returns of more gainful things.

godly sorrow, and return the oil of joy.

VIII. Merchants are strongly engaged by the profitableness of their trade, to follow it very close. O how diligent are Merchants, when they find riches come in apace upon them.

of a godly life; what time cannot do,

IX. Merchants are diligent in attending the exchange, where they have an account of their foreign affairs, and also an opportunity to trade further, either in selling or buying; and they that are negligent in this matter, do give just cause of suspicion, that they will soon fail, and cease to be Merchants.

X. Merchants are very careful in keeping their accounts; they are often in their counting-houses. They who are wise, will be sure their books are well kept,

PARALLEL.

II. The true Christian desireth, and seeketh after the riches of grace, and riches of glory, called pearls, which are of the greatest value and worth, in which he may be most happy. He seeketh for pearls, but he fixeth most upon the pearl of great price, Jesus Christ, Matt. xiii. 46.

III. So the true Christian, when he is first concerned in the matters of Christianity, is not so skilful as afterward, when he hath by Christian converse found out the worth of spiritual things, and the deceitfulness of Satan, the world, and his own heart together with the faithfulness of God.

IV. Christians are most careful in their spiritual and eternal concerns, when they have met with some spiritual losses, and are attended with a holy fear, lest eternal ruin should follow.

V. The true Christian is very careful lest he should be deceived in his spiritual ties, viz., have a false faith, a false repentance, and false obedience, and counterfeit grace, which may be very like the true.

VI. True Christians have their chief concerns from heaven, whereby they grow spiritually rich. Heaven is called "a far country," Luke xix. 12.

VII. The true Christian hath his correspondent in heaven, who manageth all his concerns, viz., Jesus Christ the righteous; he is their Advocate and Intercessor, he appears in heaven for them, Heb. ix. 24. He receives their duties, and makes returns of mercy; he will receive their tears of "Thou puttest my tears into thy bottle," &c.

VIII. So should it be with true Christians; the gainfulness of godliness should engage them to follow the heavenly trade more closely, because it "hath the promise of the life that now is, and that which is to come," 1 Tim. iv. 8, for time and eternity is little enough to make up the revenues, eternity shall.

IX. True Christians do make conscience, and exercise a godly care in attending the meetings of the Saints, in their solemn worshipping of God, whereby they get understanding and knowledge of their affairs in heaven, as managed by Jesus Christ. And there they have the opportunity to put off spiritual duties, and receive heavenly blessings, Heb. x. 25. And such as do neglect this practice, may justly be suspected that in a little time they will cease to be Christians.

X. True Christians are, and ought to be very careful in keeping up their closet and secret communion with God, by private prayer, and self-examination, that so they may give their account up to God with joy, and not with grief; and that their accounts are in good order, that so they may see a good end of their affairs, and enjoy comfort in the management thereof.

SIMILE.

PARALLEL.

and may also enjoy divine consolation in the faithful performance of the duties of Christianity.

SAINTS COMPARED TO PILGRIMS.

"They confessed, that they were strangers and Pilgrims on the earth," Heb. xi. 13.

"I beseech you, as strangers and Pilgrims, to abstain from fleshly lusts, that war against the Spirit," 1 Pet. ii. 11.

Note. The Saints of God are in these Scriptures compared to strangers and Pilgrims.

SIMILE.

I. A Pilgrim is one that travelleth from one place to another, and is far from home.

Pilgrims on the earth. Jacob said, "the days of my life, because of the uncertainty of his abode here, and in respect of his removing from place to place, Gen. xlvii. 9.

II. A Pilgrim that sets out in a long journey, takes care to free himself of all manner of weights, and unnecessary burdens, and whatsoever else may tend to weary, or unfit him for his journey.

gone a great way, seemed to be a very zealous Pilgrim; but he had such a cruel burden upon his shoulders, that he tired before he came to the end of his journey. Covetousness, or an unsatisfied desire after the things of this world, is compared to a burden, or load of thick clay: "Who enlargeth his desires as hell, and cannot be satisfied," &c. "Woe to him that increaseth that which is not his; how long? And to him that ladeth himself with thick clay," Hab. ii. 5, 6. Would not a man that hath a long journey to go, be laughed at, should he carry with him a heavy burden of dirt and rubbish? Such fools are many professors. See Runner.

III. A Pilgrim in his travels goes up-hill and down-hill; sometimes he meets with good way, and sometimes with bad way: sometimes he passeth over stiles, and through dirty lanes; and then again through green fields and pleasant pastures, and delightful paths, till he come to his desired place.

I consulted not with flesh and blood." 7. So upon the top of the rock of country.

IV. A Pilgrim, that hath a long and difficult way to travel, is very thoughtful how to find the right way, being a Stranger in that country through which he must pass. And besides, being told there are many cross ways and turnings, and hard difficult pas-

PARALLEL.

I. The Saints of God are spiritual travellers, they are far from their Father's house, heaven is their everlasting home, and thither they are going. All the holy patriarchs and prophets confessed they were "the days of the years of my Pilgrimage," rather than the days of this world, will prove of dreadful consequence to him. The young man in the Gospel had

II. So the spiritual Pilgrim, when he first sets out in the ways of God, lays aside every weight, and the sin that doth so easily beset him, Heb. xii. 1. It greatly behoves him so to do; for one sin carried in the bosom, or the inordinate love to anything or person of this world, will prove of dreadful consequence to him. The young man in the Gospel had

III. So the Pilgrim that would travel to the New Jerusalem, meets with various ways and passages. 1. He must go out of the horrible pit of profaneness; that is work enough for the first day's journey. 2. Through the brook of sincere repentance, or true contrition, for every one that leaves open profaneness, is not truly penitent. 3. Down the valley of self-denial, a very difficult passage. 4. Over the mountains of opposition; for the devil and all will straightway make head against him. 5. Over the stile of carnal reason: "Immediately

6. Into the pleasant ways of the New Covenant.

IV. So the spiritual Pilgrim spares no costs, omits no study, to get the best information imaginable, of the ready way to the land of promise. He ceaseth not to enquire of such as pretend themselves to be guides, and such as know the way; but finding them to be short-sighted, and ignorant of the way themselves, he seeks further. And as he goes along, one cries, this is sages to find, he takes care therefore to get a good and skilful guide, lest he should lose his way.

SIMILE.

authority of the nation doth enjoin in matters of faith and religion. Others call upon him to be led wholly by the light of his conscience, and that will bring him unto the land of promise, the place he longs for. And at last he meets with another, that seems yet to differ from them all, and greatly to slight and condemn one grand fundamental God's word holds forth, under plausible pretences. He cries up holiness, and just living, which all confess is required; but in the mean time strives to persuade him to cast off the satisfaction of Jesus Christ, and trust to his own righteousness, or to refined morality, rendering faith in Christ crucified little more than a fancy; and that the main design of Christ in coming into the world was, only to be a pattern of holiness and humility. But he perceiving the danger great upon this account, and that none of these pretenders could give any convincing evidence why they should be believed, and their counsel followed, above others, he rejected all their directions, and resolved to be led by none of them, further than their doctrine agreed with a certain directory, which through the grace of God he hath obtained, namely the written Word of God; and that tells him plainly, "the way is Christ," John xiv. 6. viz., Christ, as a Priest, dying for him, to appease the wrath of God, and make atonement for his sin, fulfilling the law, and bringing in everlasting righteousness. Christ, as a King, to subdue his sin, and to rule and reign over him, according to those blessed and wholesome laws, ordinances, and institutions, given forth by him and left in his word, Dan. ix. 24. Christ, as a Prophet, to teach and instruct him. Christ, as a holy pattern and example, to imitate and follow, so far as by the help of grace he is able. [See Surety, sin a Debt, the Word compared to Light, the Spirit to a Teacher and Guide.] He hath learned of Christ to be holy, and is helped therein by the Holy Ghost to excel his neighbour, and denies all his ungodliness, and worldly lusts; and yet casts himself only on Christ, relying upon his merits, labouring to be like him in all things, as the apostle observes: "He that hath this hope in him, purifieth himself even as he is pure," 1 John iii. 3. He lets his sins go, nay, loathes that which is evil; he lives a mortified life unto the world, and yet trusteth not to any thing that he hath done, or can do, for eternal life, knowing there is no salvation but by Christ alone, Acts iv. 12. He is as godly as any Socinian in the world, and yet magnifies the riches of God's grace, and Christ's merits, so as not to expect justification any other way.

V. A Pilgrim often meets with trouble, and great difficulties in his way, by winds, storms, and tempests, hard weather, cold, frost, and snow, deep and bad ways, and many dangers, which he narrowly escapes.

VI. A Pilgrim is a stranger in the country through which he passeth; and being not known, he is much gazed on, and sometimes abused by the rude rabble; all which he takes with patience, and makes no resistance.

grievously have they been abused by the wicked rabble of the earth, as Jesus Christ himself testifieth: "If ye were of the world, the world would love its own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you. All these things will they do unto you, because they know not him that sent me." John xv. 19, 21.

PARALLEL.

the way, another, that, Matt. xxiv. 23. Some bid him believe as the Church believes, and he shall never go astray. Others bid him conform to the laws of men, and do whatever the supreme

V. So the spiritual Pilgrim is also exposed to many difficulties in his journey heavenwards. Terrible storms sometimes arise, winds of persecution and temptation blow so hard, that he is scarce able to stand upon his legs. "My feet were almost gone, my steps had well nigh slipped," &c. Psal. lxxiii. 2. He is often beset with crosses and afflictions, that he is as a man in the mire, and can hardly get out.

VI. So the godly are strangers in this world:—"And confessed, that they were strangers and Pilgrims on the earth," Heb. xi. 13. David breaks forth, "Hold not thy peace at my tears, for I am a stranger with thee, and a sojourner, as all my fathers were," Psal. xxxix. 12. Hence they are made oftentimes a gazing-stock to men, by reproaches and afflictions, Heb. x. 33. And how

SIMILE.

VII. A Pilgrim is a man that stayeth not long in a place where he comes; he is but a sojourner for a night, and is gone; his heart is upon his journey.

VIII. A Pilgrim is not always in the same good disposition of body and mind, fit and necessary for his journey, but sometimes may be distempered, or grow dull and heavy, and out of heart, upon the account of the great difficulties that attend him, which when he is delivered and eased of, it much rejoiceth his heart.

after this manner: shall wicked men pursue after the vanities of this world with such pains and unweariedness! and shall I be ready to faint, that have assurance of a crown of glory at the end of my journey? O how disproportionable are their labours to their gains! blush, O my soul, at thy own neglects! and be astonished either at their diligence, or at thy own sloth! do they labour in the fire for very vanity? and wilt thou show such a sottish, dead, and unbelieving frame of heart, as not to pursue with more zeal and diligence after that glorious country, and endless felicity before thee? Is not heaven worth striving for, and travelling to?

IX. A Pilgrim is glad when he meets with good company in the way, especially other Pilgrims, such as are travelling to the same place to which he is going himself. What is more desirable to a traveller, than a faithful friend and companion? "This makes, saith one, evil things little, and good things great; by this sweet society our griefs are divided, and all our joys are doubled. What calamity is not intolerable, without a friend, a companion? and, what society is not ungrateful, if we have none to share with us in it? We suffer not so much, when we have some to condole and suffer with us; and we rejoice the more, when our felicity gives a pleasure not only to ourselves, but to others also. If solitude, and want of company, be so horrid, so dreadful a thing, it is not to be understood of the want of men, but of the want of friends, (meet company) for it is a good solitude, not to dwell with those that do not love us; and a man would choose such a hermitage, where he might not be troubled with them who bear no benevolent affection to

PARALLEL.

VII. So the Saints of God have here "no continuing city, but seek one to come," Heb. xiii. 14. This is not their rest; their abode is here but as in a strange land, and therefore they go forth on their spiritual progress towards that city, that hath foundations, "whose builder and maker is God," Heb. xi. 9, 10.

VIII. So a Saint is often attended with spiritual distempers; his heart is out of frame, and in a very unfit disposition for any duty; the troubles and incumbrances of this life dull and deaden his fervent desires after God, and make him go on heavily, nay, ready to tire him, and cause him to faint in his mind: yet by the help of the Spirit, and serious meditations of the excellency of the country to which he is travelling, he is soon quickened again, and gets fresh strength and resolution. He expostulateth the case with himself

IX. So a Saint, or spiritual Pilgrim, is glad when he meets with good and gracious companions in his journey to the land of promise. "They that fear thee, will be glad when they see me, because I have hoped in thy word." "I am a companion of all them that fear thee, and of them that keep thy precepts," Psal. cxix. 63, 74. What sweet fellowship have God's children one with another! how much doth their heavenly converse and communion refresh and cheer each other's hearts, under all their sufferings and hardships, which they meet with in their spiritual pilgrimage? "We took sweet counsel together, and walked unto the house of God in company," Psal. lv. 14. If earthly society be so desirable, how pleasant is the society of saints, or communion with those we shall dwell with for ever! Christian pilgrims have great advantage in their journey, by travelling together. If the one be poor, and the other rich, the one relieves his fellow; or if the one be weak, and the other strong, the one can take the other by the hand, and afford some help to him, when they meet with bad way, or go up-hill. "Two," saith Solomon, "are better than one; for if they fall, the one will help up his fellow," Eccl. iv. 9, 10. Most travellers have found by experience, how comfortable it is to have good company in a long journey. They very much strengthen and encourage each other, and by this means the way seems not so long and tedious, as otherwise it would. They will, if one be sad or cast down, enquire what the matter is, and often ask how each other do; and thus it is with believers. Paul's great

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

him. But for my part, I cannot think that man to be happy, which hath no friend to participate in his pleasures. A man may more easily bear the hardest calamity with his friend, than the greatest felicity alone, &c.

X. A Pilgrim sometimes meets with enemies, such as strive to persuade him to go back, telling him the danger would be great, and the difficulty such, that the advantage he expects at the end of his journey to receive, would not make a recompence for his pains and labour.

care was, to know the state of the Saints to whom he wrote, and with whom he conversed.

bear the hardest calamity with his friend, than the X. So a spiritual Pilgrim meets with divers enemies in his journey towards heaven, who strive to discourage him, and turn him back, like as the evil spies served the children of Israel, Numb. xiii. 32. Time would fail me to tell you all their names, nevertheless I shall discover some of these enemies to you, that so you who are bound for the holy land, may avoid the pernicious counsel they frequently give, and be strengthened against the discouragements they lay in the way of true piety.

1. The first is fear. This is a very dangerous enemy; he saith, there is a lion in the way, a lion in the streets, and many other evil beasts, who will devour him, and tear him in pieces, if he proceed on his intended journey. "There we saw the sons of Anak, the sons of the giants," &c.

2. The second is Unbelief: "I shall now one day perish by the hands of Saul," 1 Sam. xxvii. 1. This adversary suggesteth to the soul, that it is doubtful whether there is any such glorious land, or heavenly country that he talks of, or no: or if there be, yet, saith he, it is not possible for you to find it; and that certainly you will fall short of it, and faint, before you come to the end of your journey; your sins, saith he, are so great, that God will not forgive them.

3. The third is Sloth, a lazy companion, that would have him sleep and slumber away his precious time, and not trouble his head with religion, but please his sensual appetite, telling him, that heaven may be had with good wishes, and formal prayer, by crying, Lord, have mercy upon us, and, Christ, have mercy upon us, &c. And if he have but time, a little before he breathe out his last, on a death bed, but to cry unto God after this manner, it will be sufficient. Though God's word saith, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die," Ezek. xviii. 20. And, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God," John iii. 3. And, "Without holiness no man shall see the Lord," Heb. xii. 14. It is only a holy life, that is attended with a happy death.

4. The fourth is one worldly-wise, a person much in request in these days, whose counsel many are ready to follow. What! saith he, art thou such a fool, to expose thyself to such a great sorrow and suffering for heaven, when thou mayest have it without half the ado. Pity thy wife and children, save thyself out of a prison, and hazard not thy estate: for my part, I came into the world raw, and I will not go out roasted; I will be of that religion that is in fashion, and set up by the supreme law of the nation. Are you wiser than every body? you meddle with things too high for you, &c. Christ saith, "Whosoever comes after me, and doth not deny himself, and take up his cross, cannot be my disciple," Matt. xvi. 24, 25, and that his Saints in the world shall have tribulation. But this man, would fain make the cross of Christ to cease. Come popery, and what will, by this argument he must and will conform to it; he will be of that religion that is uppermost. And thus he renders the apostles and primitive Christians, and all the holy martyrs, fools and fanatics; nay, worse rebels, because they did not conform to the religion of their superiors.

5. The fifth enemy is one Moralist, a very honest man, but that ignorance and blindness of mind has got such rule in him. He saith, it is sufficient, and no more is required of us, but to do as we would be done unto, and pay every man his own; and that if a man can but get out of the deep ditch of sensuality, and fleshly debauchery, and lead a spotless life towards man, he need not doubt of heaven, nor trouble himself about faith in Christ, and regeneration. Though our Saviour expressly saith, "Except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in nowise enter into the kingdom of God," Matt. v. 20. And Paul saith, that he accounted his own righteousness, and all other external privileges and attainments, that he once thought gain to him, "but dung, for the excellency of the knowledge of

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

Jesus Christ; and that he desired nothing more, than to know Christ and him crucified,' Phil. iii. 8, 9, 10, 1 Cor. ii. 1, 2. If a man could be saved by his own righteousness, Christ came into the world, and died in vain, and the law, which was a perfect rule of righteousness, had then been sufficient to bring men to heaven: besides, how do we come to be delivered from the curse, "Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things that are written in the book of the law, to do them?" Gal. iii. 10.

6. The sixth adversary is Presumption, a bold confident fellow, that cries, cast yourself upon the mercy of God in Christ, the Lord Jesus died for sinners; trouble your head no more, you shall be saved. Though I am a sinner, and am now and then drunk, and let fly an oath sometimes before I am aware, yet I doubt not but it will go well with me; my heart is good, and Christ died for such as I am. This man sins because grace hath abounded, and forgets that Christ came to save men from their sins, and not in their sins; and that that faith that justifies, is attended with good fruits, and purifieth the heart and life of him that obtains it, Acts xv. 9, 1 John iii. 3.

7. The seventh enemy is Vain-glory. If Satan cannot ensnare the soul by any of the other ways, he strives to puff it up with pride and self-conceit. Now vain-glory is a deadly enemy, therefore take heed of him. It becomes Christians to be lowly minded: "Learn of me, saith Christ, for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest to your souls," Matt. xi. 28, 29.

XI. A Pilgrim is glad when he comes at last to his desired place, and forgets all his former trouble and afflictions, which attended him in his way.

XI. So a saint, when he comes to heaven, or hath obtained the end of his hope, viz., the salvation of his soul, greatly rejoiceth, and forgets all the sorrow and trouble he met with in this world, 1 Pet. i. 9. "They shall return, and come to Zion with songs, everlasting joy shall be upon their heads. They shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away," Isa. xxxv. 10, and li. 11.

INFERENCES.

I. This may serve to inform God's people, what their state and condition is, and will be whilst they remain in this world. "This is not your rest," &c., Mic. ii. 10, "Here we have no continuing City, but we seek one to come," Heb. xiii. 14.

II. Therefore it sharply reprehends those Christians, that settle themselves as inhabitants and dwellers here below, like other people. Alas! sirs, ye forget that ye are strangers and pilgrims, and but sojourners as it were for a night. Why do ye seek great things for yourselves, and seem to be so much taken with the pleasures and profits of this life? "Ye are not of this world," John xv. 19. Let such as regard no higher things, take their fill here, and delight themselves in their portion, for it is all the good they are ever likely to have; but let them remember those dismal sayings of our blessed Saviour: "Woe unto you that are rich, for ye have received your consolation; woe unto you that are full, for ye shall hunger; woe unto you that laugh now, for ye shall mourn and weep! woe unto you that all men speak well of," &c., Luke vi. 24, 25, 26.

SAINTS COMPARED TO PALM-TREES.

"The righteous shall flourish like a Palm Tree," &c., Psal. xcii. 12.

"This thy stature is like a Palm Tree," &c., Cant. vii. 7.

"I said, I will go up to the Palm Tree," &c., Ver. viii.

THE Palm Tree and Date tree is one and the same tree, called in Hebrew Thamer, in Greek Phenix.

Why the Saints and people of God are compared to the Palm-tree, will appear in the following parallel.

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

I. The Palm-tree is an excellent tree, amiable to look

I. The righteous, who are compared to a Palm-tree, are a choice and excellent peo-upon; it is very tall, and all its branches shoot upwards; there are none grow out of the side, as in other trees.

METAPHOR.

II. The Palm-tree grows in the purest soil, it will not grow in filthy places, it loves to spread forth its roots by a river: it loves not dungy soil, as others trees do.

the polluted and idolatrous world, that but the garden of God, 1 John v. 19.

III. The Palm is an even and very straight Tree and grows upright. Hence it is said of idols, that they are upright like the Palm Tree.

IV. The Palm-tree, when young, is a very weak plant; it is so feeble, that it can hardly stand of itself. And therefore Pliny says, they usually plant three or four of them together, and by that means they strengthen one another, and stand the faster.

V. The Palm-trees, naturalists tell us, by growing together, do join, clasp, and grow one to the other, and by that means grow very strong, and flourish exceedingly.

VI. The Palm-tree is one of those trees that are always green, green in winter, as well as in summer; it does not cast its leaves, nor fade, as the expression in Psal. i. 3.

the house of the Lord," Psal. liii. 8. Such pastures as afford precious and pleasant food, as also plenty. Sincere Christians continually abide green and flourishing; they are like trees planted by the river side, that bring forth fruit in their season; their leaf shall not wither. They hold up their profession, not only in the summer of prosperity, but in the very winter of adversity, and maintain their virtue and beauty in the hardest time. "They shall," saith David, "still bring fruit in old age, they shall be fat and flourishing," Psal. xcii. 14.

VII. The Palm-tree doth not only keep up its greenness, and the beauty of its leaves, but it is a tree that is full of fruit, and that good fruit, pleasant fruit, sweet fruit, fruit that is an excellent cordial, which you know dates are. Surely, saith Pliny, new dates, as they come from the tree, are so ple; their affections, like branches, ascend, they are set upon things above; they grow heavenward, Col. iii. 1, 2. They do not shoot out their branches, as I may say, this way, and that way, to the world; they grow high in grace, and in communion with God.

PARALLEL.

II. The righteous flourish best in a pure soil, in a land where the Gospel is preached in its purity. They are planted in a choice garden, Christ's blessed vineyard, in the courts of the Lord's house, as it follows in the Psalm, Psal. xcii. 13, 14. They are transplanted out of, and love not, lies in wickedness, which smells like a dunghill,

III. The Saints of God are a people sincere, of an upright heart, and of an upright conversation; for though naturally they be rough, knotty, and crooked, like others; yet grace works out, or cuts off that crookedness, uncomeliness, or unevenness that naturally was in them.

IV. The Saints of God, when first converted, are usually weak and feeble, and hardly able to stand of themselves, without the help and support of their brethren; but when planted together in God's vineyard, they thrive greatly, confirming and strengthening one another, which shows the excellency of Christian communion and fellowship. "Strengthen ye the weak hands, and confirm the feeble knees."—"Support the weak," Isa. xxxv. 3.

V. The Saints and people of God, by being planted together in Gospel-fellowship and communion, do, or ought so to join, clasp, and cleave in love and affection one to another, as to become as it were all but one tree; and hereby they are made very strong, and flourish exceedingly.

VI. The godly are compared to trees that are always green. Greenness is caused from the abundance of sap that flows from the root. Christ is called a green tree, Luke xxiii. 31. Greenness, as applied to the godly, notes their abounding in inward grace and holiness from the root Christ. "I am," saith David, "as a green olive tree in Saints are said to be fed in green pastures, that is, such pastures as afford precious and pleasant food, as also plenty. Sincere Christians continually abide green and flourishing; they are like trees planted by the river side, that bring forth fruit in their season; their leaf shall not wither. They hold up their profession, not only in the summer of prosperity, but in the very winter of adversity, and maintain their virtue and beauty in the hardest time. "They shall," saith David, "still bring fruit in old age, they shall be fat and flourishing," Psal. xcii. 14.

VII. The righteous are a people that have not only the greenness of profession, and the greenness of grace, and inward virtue in their hearts, but also the fruit of a good life. Their conversation is full of good fruit; the fruit of righteousness is pleasant fruit, choice and precious fruit; no fruit is like the fruit of the Spirit, "Which is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith," Gal. v. 22. Saints exceeding pleasant and delicious, that a man can hardly forbear, and make an end in time.

METAPHOR.

VIII. The Palm-tree will thrive under heavy pressures or weights that are hung upon it. The Palm-tree, saith Mr. Caryl, doth grow up, when it is most pressed down. When there are the heaviest weights hung upon it, then it grows highest; when it is, as it were, kept down, the burdens that are upon it cannot make it bow, nor grow crooked. This Tree, saith Ainsworth, though pressed, yet it endureth and prospereth. It is a Tree of an excellent nature.

It refines and purifies them, it purges and makes them white, they grow in faith, in patience. "Tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience, and experience hope," Rom. v. 4, 5. Here is a growing and flourishing like the Palm-tree, under heavy pressures and afflictions. They get more knowledge also of their own hearts, and more acquaintance and communion with God: the Spirit of grace and glory resteth upon such. And thus the righteous flourish like the Palm-tree, under weights and heavy pressures of afflictions.

IX. The branches of the Palm-trees were used as signs of victory and rejoicing, when the people would express their great joy. When they beheld Christ riding triumphantly to Jerusalem, they cut down Palm-branches, &c., John xii. 13. Also the hundred and forty-four thousand, who were redeemed from the earth, that were clothed in white, are said to have Palms in their hands, Rev. vii. 9.

PARALLEL.

are very fruitful Trees; they may fitly in this respect be compared to the Palm-tree.

VIII. Thus the righteous flourish like the Palm-Tree, they increase in grace and holiness, though under great burdens and pressures, Psal. xcii. 12. The devil strives to press them down, sin endeavours to press them down, wicked men endeavour to press them down, and yet they thrive and grow exceedingly: "The righteous shall hold on his way, and he that hath clean hands shall grow stronger and stronger." It is said of the people of Israel, when Pharaoh put heavy weights upon them, when he set task-masters to afflict them with their burdens, the more he afflicted them, the more they multiplied, Exod. i. 11, 12. Persecution never does godly Christians any harm; they grow the more, not only in number but in goodness.

IX. Saints are as Palm-branches in Christ's hand, as a sign of that glorious victory he hath obtained over sin, Satan, the world, death, hell, and wrath, and all other enemies whatsoever. Also, as one observes, their being compared to the Palm-tree, may signify that victorious and triumphant state, and eternal joy, which they shall obtain, after the heavy pressures, sorrows and afflictions, that attend them in this world, are ended.

INFERENCES.

I. This shows forth the excellency of true grace: such is its rare nature, that it causeth the soul that receives it to grow like a Palm-tree.

II. God hereby outwits the mighty. There is no counsel against the Lord. The ungodly hang their weights upon Christ's Palm-trees, and what is their intent and purpose in so doing, you may read in the scriptures: "Come on, saith Pharaoh, let us deal wisely with them," how was that? to lay weights, and burdens upon them. To what end? "lest they should multiply." They resolved to keep them down, and strove to hinder their growth, they designed to spoil their multiplying, and their growth in number, as also in grace and virtue; but they were like the palm-tree, the more they were oppressed the more they grew and multiplied. That way men think to hinder the truth, to obstruct the Gospel from flourishing; that way God takes to make it spread and flourish the more. Those things that happened to the apostles, to hinder their ministry, God made for the furtherance of the Gospel.

III. This should raise up our hearts to magnify the power, wisdom, and goodness of God, who over-rules things thus in the world: who turns that for good, which wicked men design for the great hurt of his poor people. "This also cometh from the Lord of Hosts, who is wonderful in counsel, and excellent in working." He makes the righteous to flourish like the Palm-tree, to grow upwards, by those ways and means which one would think would bring them quite down, and utterly spoil their growing. "Like as when we see the corn laid at, and threshed with a flail, one would think there were great hurt intended to the corn, but it is only to separate it from the straw and chaff, that it may appear in its own beauty and usefulness: so the Lord hath his flail, to separate the chaff from the wheat. Those acts of providence, which seem to be for their hurt and undoing, when they are threshed as it were by the world, are only to make them appear what they are. But thus it fareth not with the wicked, who flourish not like the Palm-tree, but as the grass they pass away." Caryl.

IV. This may animate the righteous, and greatly encourage them against persecution. Why should they fear that which God turns to their great advantage? O let us labour to improve burdens, afflictions, and heavy pressures, to the end God designs them, and never more fear the worst that men can do unto us. "The righteous shall flourish like the Palm-tree."

V. Let us labour for union, and strengthen one another, combine as one man in the way of holiness and Christian affection, that so thereby we may, like the tender plants of the Palm-tree, get strength, and stand when the wind blows hardest, and the storms of the ungodly rise upon us.

VI. This may be also matter of trial to us; we hereby may try ourselves, and try our graces. How is it with you, sirs, under sufferings? Do you grow and flourish the more? If you wither and decay in grace, in a day of trial, or when you are under pressures and afflictions, and cannot bear hard things for Christ's sake, it clearly shows you are none of God's Palm-trees.

SAINTS COMPARED TO WHEAT.

"Let both grow together till harvest," &c., Matt. xiii. 30.

"But gather the Wheat into my barn," Ver. 30.

THE Saints of God are in this parable compared to Wheat, or good seed, but the wicked to tares, and the end of the world to the harvest. Why believers are compared to Wheat will appear by what follows.

METAPHOR.

I. WHEAT is a precious sort of grain, the best of grain.

II. Wheat is a very profitable sort of grain, it tends to the enriching the husbandman; he accounts it his treasure.

III. Wheat will abide and live in the sharpest winter, which some other seed will not.

IV. Wheat is a small seed, and when it is first sown, it lies hid; in winter it seems as if it were quite dead; but when the spring comes, it sweetly revives again, and flourisheth exceedingly.

come, they shall revive and cover the earth, as Wheat doth the land where it is sown, Cant. ii. 11. "Light is sown for the righteous, and joy for the upright in heart," Psal. xcvi. 11. The growth of saints in times of temptation doth not always so visibly appear. They are like corn sown, that lies under the clods; but when they have taken sweet root, they soon appear to revive, and sprout forth like Wheat, by means of the dew of grace, and sweet rays of the Sun of Righteousness. "They shall revive as the corn, and grow as the vine, and the scent thereof shall be as the wine of Lebanon," Hos. xiv. 7.

V. An ear of Wheat that is full of corn always hangs down its head, when that which is light and empty stands upright.

PARALLEL.

I. The Saints of God are a choice people, the best of men. "The righteous are more excellent than their neighbours," Prov. xii. 26.

II. The Saints are a people profitable to the world many ways. (See Salt.) Nay, and God accounts them his peculiar treasure, Matt. iii. 17.

III. So sincere souls will endure the sharpest trials. They will live in the winter time of the Church, when others fall off, wither, die away, and come to nothing.

IV. The godly are, in comparison of the world, a small people, called a little flock, Luke xii. 32. And they lie hid as it were, scarcely seeming to be a people, whilst the winter of persecution and trouble, under the four monarchs of the world, predominate: but when the winter is past, and the spring time of the Church shall

V. So the Saints of God, or all sincere souls, that have much grace, are humble ones, they hang down their heads as it were, are clothed with humility, when hypocrites, or empty professors, are puffed up. Abraham calls himself but "Dust and ashes;" David, "A worm and no man;" Job "Abhors himself," as a nothing creature, Job xlii. 6. Paul saith, "he was the least of all Saints," Eph. iii. 8. When the empty hypocrite cries out, "Lord, I thank thee, I am not as other men," Luke xviii. 11.

METAPHOR.

VI. Wheat needs weeding. Weeds many times come up with it, and hinder its growth.

VII. Wheat hath, it is observed, sometimes tares amongst it, which the husbandman sees good to let alone till the harvest, lest in plucking them out some of the Wheat be pulled up with them.

therefore were the people of God such as the wicked persecutor calls them, viz., tares, heretics, the off-scouring of the world; yet it is directly contrary to the mind of God, that they should be rooted up, and turned out of the earth. "Let both grow together," (saith the husbandman,) "till harvest."

VIII. Wheat hath a considerable time to ripen, it must have the former and latter rain; but when it is ripe, it is severed from the tares, and gathered into the barn.

end of the world, then the Saints shall be severed from the wicked, the good come from the bad, the holy from the vile, like as Wheat is severed from the tares. And those that appear pure grain, shall be gathered into God's garner, (i. e.) his blessed kingdom; and the wicked, like tares, shall be bound in bundles, and cast into hell, to be burned in unquenchable fire, Matt. xiii. 41, 42.

IX. Wheat, when it is sown, dies, and rises again; it rises Wheat, and the same Wheat, though it rises more glorious than it seemed to be when sown.

Apostle saith, "That which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be, because it is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual; it is sown in corruption, but is raised in incorruption; it is sown in dishonour, and raised in glory; it is sown in weakness, it is raised in power," 1 Cor. xv. 37, 42, 43, 44.

X. Wheat is threshed by the husbandman, to sever the corn from the straw and chaff.

PARALLEL.

VI. So the Saints and people of God need weeding. Weeds of corruption often spring up, and trouble them, which did not God, the good Husbandman, root out and destroy, would quite spoil his choicest Wheat, Heb. xii. 15.

VII. The field is the world, where the Saints of God, who are compared to Wheat, grow, (i. e.) live, and much tares grow up or live among them in every nation, city, and town, Matt. xiii. 38. And it is the pleasure of God, that they should be let alone, or suffered to grow together in the world, that common field, though not in the church. And

VIII. So the people of God are not so soon as they spring up in grace, ripe for God's garner, but they need some time before they be fit for cutting down by death. The former and latter rain of the Spirit must fall upon them; they ripen gradually. And when the harvest comes, to wit, the be severed from the wicked, the good come from the bad, the holy from the vile, like as Wheat is severed from the tares. And those that appear pure grain, shall be gathered into God's garner, (i. e.) his blessed kingdom; and the wicked, like tares, shall be bound in bundles, and cast into hell, to be burned in unquenchable fire, Matt. xiii. 41, 42.

IX. So the Saints of God die; like good seed are sown in the earth, and shall rise again, the same body shall rise again; as every seed hath his own body, so shall every Saint in the day of the resurrection have his own body, though his body shall rise more glorious than it was before. The X. So God, to sever the chaff of corrupt and drossy professors, from the pure grain, viz., sincere Saints, leaves the wicked as it were to thresh his people; God's people are often under the flail of persecution.

INFERENCES.

I. This may serve to reprove the bloody persecutors of God's people, who would fain pluck up the Saints as tares; but let them take heed. If God would not have many tares plucked up, lest some of the Wheat be plucked up with them, what will become of them, who instead of plucking the wicked tares, that perhaps deserves the greatest severity, as being guilty of innocent blood, connive at such, and let them alone, having much favour for them, and set themselves wholly against God's faithful and innocent people? What unwearied endeavours have been used, to destroy and root out the godly!

II. It may be a caution to all to take heed how they persecute men for conscience sake; for who can infallibly know such as fear not God, nor belong to him, from such as are his people, and do in truth fear him? They had better let many tares, many heretics alone, than through ignorance destroy one godly and sincere person.

III. It may also be for trial. Are you Wheat or tares? Do you bring glory to God, and profit to your neighbours? Do you faithfully, like holy Job, adhere to the Lord, and cleave to him, although he should please to lay you under slaying dispensations? Do you endure patiently under the cross, abide the trial of cold winterly blasts of persecution? Wheat, you hear, will endure sharp frosts. The honest-hearted professor brings forth fruit with patience, Matt. xiii.

IV. Lastly: It affords comfort to the godly; for though they appear as dead and withered, or are under many seeming decays, yet they shall revive again, like corn. And although they, like seed or grain, be laid in the earth, and turn to corruption; yet they shall have a blessed resurrection at the last day, and be raised in power and glory, and in incorruption. Death doth the body of a godly man no injury. "Except a seed of corn fall to the ground, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit," John xii. 24.

SAINTS COMPARED TO LIGHT.

"Ye are the Light of the world; a city that is set on a hill cannot be hid," Matt. v. 14.

IN this metaphor the Lord Jesus commends unto us an holy duty, viz., to shine before others in a holy life and doctrine. Saints should be like John Baptist, burning and shining Lights.

1. Light is taken properly.
2. Metaphorically.

Properly, for that noble quality that enlightens the world. Lux, claritas et splendour in corpore luminoso, vel extra a corpore luminoso exiens, quæ et Lumen dicitur. "God said, Let there be Light, and there was Light," &c.

2. Metaphorically, it is put for several things. See Book III. p. 526, 527. "Ye are the Light of the world," &c., John i. 9. Principally Christ himself is the Light of the world, the great Light that gives Light to the other luminaries. The Saints receive light from Christ, as the moon receives her light from the sun, and thereby gives Light to the world in the night. The Saints are but small Lights, hence called stars, who give but little Light in comparison with the sun; or they are rather as candles, which God hath lighteth and set up.

METAPHOR.

I. Light discovers and makes manifest the nature of things to men; it hath a directive quality in it, men thereby know which way to go; it directs travellers in their way.

live, how to behave themselves towards

II. Light shines forth, and is visible to all; every one that hath eyes may see the Light. A candle should not be lighted, and put under a bushel, but on a candlestick, that it may give light to all that are in the house.

III. It is a great mercy and blessing to see the Light; Light is sweet, &c., Light drives back, or expels darkness.

PARALLEL.

I. So the Saints of God, by their holy Life and doctrine, reveal and make manifest, not only the works of darkness, but also the excellency of Christ, grace, and divine things to men: nay, the holy angels are said to know many things by the Church, Eph. iii. 10. The Saints, by their holy lives and doctrines, teach and direct others how to God, and towards men.

II. So the Saints should let their good works appear to all. "Let your Light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven," Matt. v. 16. Though the Saints should do nothing through vain glory, i. e. to be seen of men; yet their good works, and holy walkings should be so done, that others should see them.

III. So it is a great blessing to enjoy the company of God's people, to dwell among such whose conversations shine; for such godly ones drive back or scatter wickedness. As Solomon saith, "A wise and godly king scattereth the wicked, and bringeth the wheel over them," Prov. xx. 26. So every wise and godly Christian does what in him lies the like: what darkness did Martin Luther, that star of the first magnitude, drive away! That blessed Light which he afforded the world hath shone so gloriously, that the devil, the pope, and all their adherents, notwithstanding all their skill have not been able to put it out to this day.

METAPHOR.

IV. When the Light of the candle is put out, which is to give Light to the whole house, how do men stumble, and grope in darkness?

judgment to the wicked, to have those who should be as lights in the world, darkened, or give occasion of stumbling.

PARALLEL.

IV. So when the Saints shine not in grace and holiness, or fall into sin, and wickedly comply with the evils of the times in which they live, how do the ungodly world stumble and fall; the which made our Saviour to say, "Woe to the world because of offences," &c. Matt xviii. 7. It is a great

INFERENCES.

I. This shows, what a great blessing the world receives by means of the godly: they are set up as Lights in a dark night, to direct men in the right way, that they may not stumble and fall upon the dark mountains.

II. Let this teach believers their duties; let them remember to have their conversations honest among the Gentiles. Let your Light shine forth to others, not that you may be praised, but that the praise may be given to God, &c. In all your holy walking, propose this as your ultimate end, not that you may be magnified, and lifted up, but that God by you, and through your good works, may be magnified, and his glorious name advanced on high.

III. It may be an use of caution to them to take heed of sin. If they comply with Satan, and yield to temptations and thereby let their Light go out, no wonder if the world stumble. Sometimes professors, instead of being Lights, prove dark stumbling-blocks. As to instance in two or three things:

1. When professors fail in their morals, i. e., are not just in their dealings between man and man, they give just cause of offence.

2. When they are like the world, and none can discern any great difference between them and others, in respect of their conversation, how can they then be said to be the Light of the world?

3. When they are overcome with scandalous sins, viz., are proud, covetous, backbiters, tattlers, drunkards, &c.

4. When they want love and bowels of compassion to their brethren, they cease to be the Lights of the world. They are no more a blessing to the world, who thus degenerate from what they should be, but rather the contrary.

Therefore if you want motives to stir you up to take heed how you walk and live among men, that you may not give occasion of offence or stumbling to them, but contrarywise, be as Lights to them, take these following.

(1.) Your good works, and holy conversation, will greatly tend to glorify God; but the contrary will greatly dishonour him.

(2.) Your good works, and godly life, will greatly tend to the profit of the world, but the contrary will prove to their great hurt.

(3.) Your holy life will make your profession shine, and also further the promulgation of the Gospel: but the contrary will bring a stink or ill savour upon your profession, and hinder the promulgation of the Gospel.

(4.) An evil life hinders poor souls from enquiring after the truth, and stumbles them in the way of their obedience to it.

(5.) It stumbles weak Christians that are in the ways of God.

(6.) It weakens the hands, and grieves the hearts of strong and sincere ones.

(7.) A holy life will free thee from blood-guiltiness; I mean, thou wilt not have the blood of other mens' souls to answer for: but the contrary may make thee culpable.

SAINTS COMPARED TO CEDARS.

"He shall grow like a Cedar in Lebanon," Psal. xcii. 12.

"The trees of the Lord are full of sap; the Cedars of Lebanon, which he hath planted;" Psalm civ. 16.

"And cast forth his root as Lebanon," Hos. xiv. 5.

God's people, their growth and rooting, are in these scriptures compared to the Cedar-tree, the Cedar in Lebanon, in Greek Libanos, which was a mountain in the north part of the land of Canaan, possessed of old time by the Hivites, Judg. iii. 3, afterwards by the Israelites; on it grew many stately Cedars, &c.

In what respect the Saints may be compared to the Cedars, will appear by the following parallels.

SIMILE.

I. The Cedar is a very noble and stately tree, it grows very high; hence they are called tall Cedars, 2 Kings xix. 23; also its branches are called branches of the high Cedar, Ezek. xvii. 22. It mounts high towards heaven. Pliny,* tells of one Cedar that grew in Cyprus, which was one hundred and thirty feet high, and three fathoms thick.

righteous are more excellent than their

II. The Cedar is a tree that takes deep root; its roots spread this way, and that way, and go far into the ground. Naturalists say, that as trees grow high, so proportionably they take root downward, because otherwise they would be top-heavy, and overturn; a blast of wind taking advantage of their tallness, being weak at the root, would soon blow them down; therefore proportionable to their spreading above, there must be a rooting in the ground.

III. The Cedar is a very strong tree. Naturalists also tell us, that it is not subject to putrefaction, as many other trees are.

become strong in the inward man, both to do for God, and to suffer for his sake: they go from strength to strength in Zion. David was too strong for Goliath, and overcame him, he coming against him in the name of the Lord. Also they are not so easily corrupted by the pollution of the sins of the times, and evil example of the wicked, as others are; they having a glorious principle of life in them; that preserves them from soul putrefaction. "He that is born of God, cannot commit sin," 1 John iii. 9.

IV. The Cedar is a very profitable tree, it is excellent to build

PARALLEL.

I. The godly are a renowned people. Though they seem in the eyes of the world but mere shrubs, yet they are, as it was said of Saul, higher by the head and shoulders than all others who dwell upon the earth. They grow high in grace, and spiritual experiences. They are said to dwell on high, they dwell in God, in communion with him, Isa. xxxiii. 16. They soar aloft and mount towards heaven, Isa. xl. 31. "Their affections are set upon things above," Col. iii. 1, 2. They may in this sense be said to grow like the Cedar; they overtop the wicked in renown and dignity. "The neighbours," Prov. xii. 26.

II. The godly are said to take root downward; they are well rooted; they cast forth their roots as the cedars in Lebanon. Saints are well rooted in Christ, rooted in the covenant, which is firm, "Ordered in all things and sure," 2 Sam. xxiii. 5, well rooted in grace, in faith, love, and humility. And indeed those Saints that grow high in knowledge, who in gifts and parts overtop their brethren, had need to grow downwards in humility, proportionable to their growth upwards, or else a strong blast of temptation may soon puff them up with pride and self-conceitiveness, and so thereby quite blow them down. In Adam we had no sure rooting, but in Christ, by partaking of his fulness, our standing is firm.

III. The Saints are strong in the Lord, Eph. vi. 10, 11. It is sin that causeth men to be spiritually weak, unstable as water, as Jacob spake of his son Reuben; but the godly are delivered from the guilt and dominion of it, and thereby, both to do for God, and to suffer for his sake: they go from strength to strength in Zion. David was too strong for Goliath, and overcame him, he coming against him in the name of the Lord. Also they are not so easily corrupted by the pollution of the sins of the times, and evil example of the wicked, as others are; they having a glorious principle of life in them; that preserves them from soul putrefaction. "He that is born of God, cannot commit sin," 1 John iii. 9.

IV. The Saints are fit trees to build God's spiritual house. The beams of the church are said

SIMILE.

PARALLEL.

an house withal; Solomon therefore made use of it in building the temple, which we have showed was a type of the Gospel church, 1 Kings vi.

V. The Cedar is a tree full of sap, it also bears a sort of fruit: "And it shall bring forth boughs, and bear fruit, and become a goodly Cedar, and under it shall dwell all fowls of every wing," Ezek. xvii. 23. The shadow of this tree, it appears, is very refreshing.

How happy is that people or nation, that sit under the shadow or protection of a righteous government, when righteousness and judgment shall be administered by the Saints! all will seek for shelter under them. Which is promised, and shall certainly be accomplished in the latter day.

to be of Cedar, which notes the excellency and duration of her principle members, Cant. i. 17.

15, 16.

V. The Trees of the Lord are said to be full of sap, the Cedars of Lebanon which he hath planted, Christ is the precious root, who supplies them with abundance of grace and inward virtue: "Of his fulness all we receive, and grace for grace," John i. 14, 16. And by this means also they are made very fruitful, abounding in holiness, and good works. And as they are fruitful to God, so likewise they are profitable to men.

INFERENCES.

I. THIS may put us upon the search. If the Saints be like goodly Cedars, excellent above others, well rooted, strong, durable, and useful to God and men, we may hereby try ourselves. Do we excel? Do we grow up high heaven-ward? Do we grow in humility? are our hearts lowest, when our estates are highest? When we are most honoured in the eyes of men, are we most humble in the sight of God?

II. It may also afford comfort to the godly: what decays soever they seem now to be under, yet they shall return again, grow, and send forth their roots, as the Cedars in Lebanon, Hos. xiv. 6.

III. Remember, that that Tree, which takes the deepest root, spreads its branches furthest out, and brines forth most fruit.

IV. Let it also be remembered, that the more the Saints grow like the Cedar, and put forth their roots as Lebanon, the more they manifest and clearly show their being rooted in Christ whose countenance is as Lebanon, excellent as the Cedars, Cant. v.

V. How wonderfully are they mistaken, that think to tear up by the roots, or throw down God's tall and strong Cedars! for notwithstanding the many terrible blasts, and violent winds, that have most fiercely blown upon them; yet they have stood, do and will stand. "The Highest himself shall establish her."

SAINTS COMPARED TO MYRTLE-TREES.

"I will plant in the wilderness the cedar, the shittah, and the Myrtle-tree," &c., Isa. xli. 19.

"Instead of the thorn, shall come up the fir-tree; and instead of the brier shall come up the Myrtle-tree," &c., Isa. lv. 13.

"I saw by night, and behold, a man riding upon a red horse, and he stood among the Myrtle-trees that were in the bottom," Zech. i. 8, 11.

THE wise God, who best knows the nature and properties of all things that his hands have made, compares the ungodly oftentimes in holy scripture to trees, and other things that are of a hurtful and evil quality, or are of such a nature that he sees will suitably set them forth: they are compared to Briers, Thorns, Nettles, &c. And also the godly are set forth by, and compared to several sorts of trees, as to the Palm-tree, the Cedar, the Willow, &c., and in these places, as many understand, to the Myrtle-tree; the nature of which, together with an useful parallel, take as followeth.

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

I. THE Myrtle-tree is a rare and most excellent Tree, a Tree of very great account;

I. THE Saints are a choice people; God esteems highly of them. As the Myrtle-tree excels the thorn and the brier, so do the godly excel hardly any one tree was more accounted of amongst the Romans, as Pliny observes; the Jews highly esteemed of it.

METAPHOR.

II. There are divers sorts of Myrtle-trees; some white, and some black; some tame, and others wild, as historians* have noted.

III. The best sorts of Myrtle-trees were used to be planted in gardens, and were a great ornament to them, their branches being very green, and amiable to look upon.

IV. The Myrtle-tree yields most choice and excellent fruit; nay, more may be said of it, then of any other tree, for it yields two sorts of fruit, both oil and wine. "Nature, saith Pliny, sheweth her wonderful power touching this Tree, especially in the juice, considering, that of all fruits it alone doth yield two sorts, both oil and wine.

V. The Myrtle-trees are said to stand in the bottom, Zech. i. 8, 11.

pared to lofty mountains. Also the Myrtle-trees in the bottom may signify the low and persecuted state of God's people; and in that the angels are said to be amongst them, it holds forth the precious presence of God with his Saints, whilst they are in a low, dark, and persecuted condition. "Yea, though I walk," said David, "through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me," &c., Psal. xxiii. 4.

VI. The Myrtle-tree never sheds its leaves.

VII. The Myrtle-tree is said to yield a sweet and fragrant scent.

fest the savour of his knowledge by us in every place: for we are of God a sweet savour of Christ in them that are saved, and in them that perish," 2 Cor. ii. 14, 15.

PARALLEL.

the wicked. "Since thou hast been precious in my sight, thou hast been honourable," &c. Isa. xli. 19, lv. 13, and xliii. 4.

II. So there are divers sorts of Christians; some more shining in grace and holiness than others; some, by reason of an evil and crooked nature, grace hardly appears in them, &c. We read of fathers, young men, and children.

III. The godly, those spiritual trees, which God plants in his Church, which is his garden; and the most holy and mortified ones of them, such whose conversation and profession is amiable, whose branches and spiritual leaves wither not, are a great ornament to God's garden.

IV. The Saints of God are a people that yield two sorts of fruit, to the honour of God, and the profit of their neighbour, answering to the two tables. In this they excel all other people. There are some that are morally righteous, they make conscience of their duties to men, but do not bring forth the fruits of the Spirit, in answering a good conscience towards God. "Herein do I exercise myself," &c., Acts xxiv. 16.

V. The Saints of God are a people of a lowly and humble spirit, and hence they are compared to the low valleys; whereas the wicked are compared to lofty mountains. Also the Myrtle-trees in the bottom may signify the low and persecuted state of God's people; and in that the angels are said to be amongst them, it holds forth the precious presence of God with his Saints, whilst they are in a low, dark, and persecuted condition. "Yea, though I walk," said David, "through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me," &c., Psal. xxiii. 4.

VI. The righteous are said to be like a Tree whose leaves wither not; they hold fast the profession of their faith, Psal. i. 3.

VII. The Saints yield a sweet savour to God and man. "Now thanks be to God, which always causeth us to triumph in Christ, and maketh mani-

SAINTS COMPARED TO WILLOW-TREES.

"And they shall spring up as among the grass, as Willows by the water-courses," Isa. xlv. 4.

"They shall spring up," &c., that is, the offspring of Jacob, the true seed or covenant people of God, "as among the grass, as Willows by the water-courses:" as Willows grow and spring up by the water-courses, so the Saints of God are said to flourish or spring up.

SIMILE.

I. WILLOWS are so called, because they mostly grow near to brooks, and always pros-

PARALLEL.

I. THE trees of righteousness, viz., the Saints, grow best near the river of God, i. e. where the springs of living water flow forth. It

* Plin. Lib. xv. p. 451.

SIMILE.

per best near rivers and water-courses, contrary to some other trees, as the cypress and chesnut trees, which love not watery places.

II. Remove a Willow that grows by the water-side, and plant it upon a heath, and you will soon see it decay and wither.

III. The Willow by the water-courses is green, and flourishes in a time of drought, when many other trees and plants fade and wither away.

her roots by the river, and shall not see when drought cometh, but her leaf shall be green; and shall not be careful in the year of drought, neither cease from yielding fruit," Jer. xvii. 7, 8, compared with Psal. i. 3.

PARALLEL.

is the influence of the Holy Spirit, which is compared to a river, that causes believers to spring up and grow so sweetly, John vii. 37, 38.

II. So if a Christian be removed from Christ, or hindered of the sweet influences of the Spirit, and divine ordinances of the Gospel, which the faithful enjoy in God's Church, he will soon decay and wither in grace and holiness, like a Willow upon a dry heath, Jer. xvii. 6.

III. So the Saints and people of God are in this respect like willows or trees planted by the water-side: for so the prophet plainly affirms: "Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord, whose hope the Lord is: for he shall be as a tree planted by the waters, and that spreadeth forth

INFERENCES.

I. Hence we may learn, that the Holy Spirit in his blessed springs of graces, promises, and ordinances, is every way as needful to the growth of God's people, as springs of water are to the willow-tree.

II. Let us bless the Almighty, who hath planted us by the side of the river of God, and let us pray, that he would never transplant us, nor remove us into a barren and heathy wilderness.

SAINTS COMPARED TO VESSELS.

"But we have this treasure in earthen vessels," &c., 2 Cor. iv. 7.

"But in a great house are not only vessels of gold and silver, but of earth and wood," &c., 2 Tim. ii. 20.

Some understand by this great house, the world; others, the Church.

METAPHOR.

I. A Vessel is made by a skilful artisan or workman; he forms and fashions it as he sees good.

second creation. "This people have I formed for myself," &c., Isa. xliii. 21. "We are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus to good works," Eph. ii. 10.

II. There is a great difference between some Vessels. "There are some vessels of gold, silver, &c., and also some of earth, wood, &c."

iv. 2. But the wicked are likened to

III. Vessels are made for some proper and peculiar use.

IV. Vessels are subject to contract filth and pollution, and therefore need often to be washed, &c.

PARALLEL.

I. God hath formed or made all the children of men; they are all the work of his hands, formed and fashioned by him alone: and as he hath made and formed us in the first creation; so also he hath made or fashioned his saints in the

II. So there is a great difference between some men. The saints are golden Vessels, though of little esteem in the eyes of the world: "The precious sons of Zion, comparable to fine gold, how are they esteemed as earthen pitchers?" &c., Lam.

Vessels of earth and wood.

III. God made all men, whosoever they are, for special use and service, viz., to honour, worship, and bring glory to his sacred Majesty.

IV. So Christ's spiritual Vessels, viz., his Saints, as well as others, are subject to contract the inward filth of sin, such uncleanness as nothing but Christ's blood through faith can wash away.

METAPHOR.

V. Vessels of divers sorts, some very rich, and usually in a great house, in the house of a prince, or the like; some of honour, and some of dishonour.

VI. Some Vessels are made use of to hold precious treasure. We read of golden pipes, that empty the golden oil out of themselves.

VII. Sometimes precious treasure is put into earthen vessels; but whether it be Gold, Silver, or precious stones, that are put therein, yet they are never the worse because of the Vessel into which they are put, nor will wise men refuse or slight such treasure for the Vessel's sake.

earthen Vessels, that the excellency of the power might be of God, and not of us," 2 Cor. iv. 7. See the Gospel compared to Treasure, in the third book.

VIII. An earthen Vessel sometimes proves defective, and lets out choice liquor that is put therein; nay, and sometimes the liquor tastes of the Vessel, or loses much of its precious relish, by reason an evil person puts some unsavoury matter into the Vessel; and by reason of this mixture, the pure savour is somewhat gone.

his subtle temptations, causes the preacher to mix the wine with water, or the pure doctrine of Christ, with man's wisdom, by which means he vaunts and prides it oftentimes in himself.

IX. When a Vessel proves very defective, the owner perceiving he is like to come to loss, empties the choice liquor from Vessel to vessel.

upon his lees, and hath not been removed from Vessel to Vessel; which is meant of afflictions, Jer. xlviii. 11. God, by bringing a people into adversity, in the sense of this text, may be said to move, pour out, or empty them from Vessel to Vessel. A long time of ease and prosperity proves hurtful to God's children; like as the wine receives detriment by settling on its lees. A day of general persecution proves various in its effects: some are thereby emptied of choice gifts and endowments that were in them, and others receive thereby a double measure; God takes away the one talent for want of improvement, and gives it to him that had five, Matt. xxv. 28.

X. Earthen Vessels are soon broken; they are very brittle things; alas! but with one knock they are gone.

Queen Mary destroy, and consume to ashes! But this must always be considered, viz., God hath a gracious design in suffering the enemy thus to break in pieces his choice Vessels; and one reason thereof is, that the precious treasure of the Gospel may be the more diffusive, and spread itself, that its precious odour might perfume the

PARALLEL.

V. So in the house of God there are divers Vessels; some of gold and silver, as it were, viz., choice and precious Saints, who are Vessels of honour; and some who are like vessels of earth, and wood, viz., hypocritical and unprofitable ones, who without repentance are like to be Vessels of dishonour, 2 Tit. ii. 20.

VI. Some of the Saints of God are made use of for ministers, to bear the precious treasure of the Gospel, also to empty it out of themselves, for the use and profit of others, Zech. iv. 12.

VII. Ministers of the Gospel, though inwardly very rich and precious, yet they are but men as others are, poor earthen vessels, and some of them very mean and contemptible, in the eye of the world: "You see your calling, brethren," &c., 1 Cor. i. 26. But the treasure of wisdom is not the worse, though it be in such earthen vessels; nor will wise men refuse good doctrine, and wholesome counsel, because communicated by such servants of Christ. "But we have this treasure in the power might be of God, and not of us," 2 Cor. iv. 7.

VIII. So some men, like leaking Vessels, let out the precious grace of God; they lose their zeal, faith, love, courage, &c., Heb. ii. 1, Rev. ii. 4. And also many times the word of God, as it comes from the preacher, savours of the earthen Vessel; for the best of men have flesh in them, as well as Spirit. Were there nothing but this precious treasure of grace and divine wisdom in them, it would not be so; but Satan, like an accursed enemy, stirs up the remainders of the old man in the soul, and through himself, causes the preacher to mix the wine with water, or the pure doctrine of Christ, with man's wisdom, by which means he vaunts and prides it oftentimes in himself.

IX. So God many times finding his Vessels defective, and that they contract filth, or prove leaky, empties his choice liquor from Vessel to Vessel, according to that of the prophet, "Moab hath been at ease from his youth, and hath settled upon his lees, and hath not been removed from Vessel to Vessel; which is meant of afflictions, Jer. xlviii. 11. God, by bringing a people into adversity, in the sense of this text, may be said to move, pour out, or empty them from Vessel to Vessel. A long time of ease and prosperity proves hurtful to God's children; like as the wine receives detriment by settling on its lees. A day of general persecution proves various in its effects: some are thereby emptied of choice gifts and endowments that were in them, and others receive thereby a double measure; God takes away the one talent for want of improvement, and gives it to him that had five, Matt. xxv. 28.

X. So the Saints of God, and ministers of the Gospel, are poor frail and brittle creatures; when God permits the enemy but a little to let fly against them, how they are dashed to pieces by their hands! how many precious Vessels did more souls. The blood of the Saints hath been always accounted the seed of the Church.

XI. Earthly Vessels are of little value; they are not much accounted of.

So as they have but low and mean thoughts of themselves. "We have this treasure in earthen Vessels, that the excellency of the power might be of God, and not of us," 2 Cor. iv. 7, Rom. ix. 23.

SIMILE.

I. Other Vessels are made by men.

spiritual Vessels, viz., they are chosen ministers prepared for his blessed use: "He is a chosen Vessel to bear my name amongst the Gentiles, &c. Acts ix. 15. The Saints are called Vessels of mercy, prepared unto glory.

II. Other Vessels, when broken into small pieces, are generally quite spoiled, and can never be set together again.

DISPARITY.

I. But the Saints and ministers of the Gospel are Vessels of the Lord's making: he did not only form them considered as men, but also as ministers prepared for his blessed use: "He is a chosen Vessel to bear my name amongst the Gentiles, &c. Acts ix. 15. The Saints are called Vessels of mercy, prepared unto glory.

II. But the Vessels of the Lord, though they be broken in pieces by death, are not thereby spoiled, and utterly lost, but shall be set together again, and be made far more glorious than they were before.

INFERENCES.

I. It may teach the Saints of God to have low thoughts of themselves. What is an earthen Vessel? it is true, the treasure may be excellent that is in the Vessel; but that doth not appertain to the Vessel. Let God have the glory of all: "What hast thou which thou hast not received?" 1 Cor. iv. 6, 7.

II. Take heed, you that are Saints, that you do not, like earthen Vessels, smite one against another, lest by one another you be dashed to pieces. Remember what frail and brittle creatures you are, even poor earthen Vessels.

III. It may teach the Saints also to look to themselves, lest they gather filth; let every one keep their Vessels clean. Wash yourselves daily in the tears of true repentance, and by faith in that fountain that is set open for sin, and for uncleanness.

IV. It may teach the Saints of God to be careful of their poor ministers, remembering always that they are also but poor frail Vessels.

V. Let the wicked dread the thoughts of the great day, such I mean as have, or strive to break in pieces Christ's chosen Vessels; what will they do in that day, when he makes inquisition for blood?

SAINTS COMPARED TO LIONS.

"The wicked fly when no man pursueth, but the righteous are as bold as a Lion," Prov. xxviii. 1.

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be as a Lion," &c. Micah v. 8.

The godly are compared to Lions.

SIMILE.

I. A Lion is a very magnanimous and courageous creature; he will not fly from his enemies; he turneth not away for fear of any.

valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil," Psal. xxvii. 3. Hence they are said to be as bold as a Lion. "Shall such a man as I fly?" Neh. vi. 11.

Quest. But some may say, wherein doth the courage of the godly appear? wherein are they as bold as a Lion?

PARALLEL.

I. So the Saints of God are full of spiritual courage; they are not dismayed at the threats of men, "I will not fear what man can do unto me:"

"Though an host should encamp against me, my heart shall not fear;" "though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil," Psal. xxvii. 3. Hence they are said to be as bold as a Lion. "Shall such a man as I fly?" Neh. vi. 11.

Answ. In their being valiant and courageous for the truth. And this they show forth many ways.

1. By their speaking for it when others speak against it. God's truth, his way, and people are commonly derided, and spoken against; and he that is a sincere and valiant Christian, will, at all times, when he sees there is need for it, vindicate it, and speak in the behalf thereof.

2. In their endeavouring to clear it from reproach and infamy. The way or truth of God is frequently reproached. (1.) It is called error and heresy: "After that way you call heresy, so worship I the God of my Fathers," &c., Acts xxiv. 14. (2.) It is called sedition. Hence Paul was accused for being a mover of sedition, Acts xxiv. 5. (3.) It is commonly called a new doctrine: "We would know what this new doctrine whereof thou speakest is," Acts xvii. 19.

3. They show their courage in contending earnestly for the truth; they will dispute and argue out the matter in behalf of truth, and not give up the justness and goodness of their cause, as long as they are able to stand by it, or by force of argument to maintain it. Paul upon this account saith, "he fought with beasts at Ephesus," i. e., men like beasts, who acted like beasts in opposing the truth, 1 Cor. xv. 32.

4. In their visible professing and public owning of the truth. They are not afraid nor ashamed to confess Christ and his ways before men. Some for fear of the Jews did not publicly own Jesus Christ in the days of his flesh; but such who are sincere will go forth, bearing his reproach, Heb. xiii. 13. Though men forbid them, nay threaten them, &c., yet they will preach Jesus Christ, and profess his name, and maintain his ordinances, and blessed institutions. The apostles cried out, "We cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard," &c. Acts iv. 20, and v. 29.

5. They show their courage in suffering for the truth, when called so to do. (1.) They will suffer reproach for the truth. (2.) They will suffer blows for the truth. (3.) Imprisonment for the truth. (4.) Loss of their goods. (5.) Banishment. (6.) Yea, death itself, when called to it, rather than deny Christ, and the truth.

6. They will stand by the truth, when others turn their backs upon it. Thus did Paul.

7. They will maintain every truth, but more especially that truth which is most opposed in the day in which they live. It may be no demonstration of courage, to stand up for, or maintain a truth in one age, which was a great proof of valour in another, when it was chiefly opposed. Would it be any sign of spiritual courage now, to affirm God is God, and Baal is not? yet that was in Elijah's days, 1 Kings xviii. Or would it be any demonstration of courage now, to affirm Jesus of Nazareth to be the true Saviour? yet it was in the apostle's time, because it was the great truth then opposed. Christian courage is now shewed, by owning and maintaining those truths of Christ now opposed, and which in standing by, do expose the professors thereof.

Now that which doth animate and embolden the Saints in the day of trial, in standing up for Christ, and his ways, is:

(1.) The satisfaction they have touching the truth of that which they profess. It is God's truth.

(2.) The consideration of the excellency of God's truth: "The word of God is pure," &c., Psal. cxix. 140.

(3.) The consideration of the goodness and justness of their call to suffer in behalf of truth; for that is one thing which must always be considered.

(4.) The goodness of their consciences, or the evidences of their own sincerity, a hypocrite may suffer some things, but at last his courage will fail him. I have heard of a captain, that principally would make choice of two sorts of men for his soldiers, viz., either sincere and godly Christians, or downright atheists, because neither of them, he concluded, would be afraid to die: the true Christian would not be afraid of death, because he knew he should go to Christ; and the atheist would not be afraid of death, because he thought, or rather hoped, he should die as a beast, and there would be an end of him.

(5.) The consideration of his having so good a second. A courageous and undaunted second oftentimes puts fresh courage into a person that is singled out to fight a duel. Now a Christian has the Almighty and terrible God to take his part, &c.

"Fear not, worm Jacob, I will help thee," &c., Isa. xli. 14. "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee. So that we may boldly say, the Lord is my helper, I will not fear what man can do unto me," Heb. xiii. 5, 6.

(6.) The certainty of getting the victory, or overcoming at last. As it is said of Gad, it may be said of a Christian, "though a troop may overcome him, yet he shall overcome at last." Hence Saints are said to be "more than conquerors," Rom. viii. 37. For no conqueror is certain, whilst he is in the conflict, that he shall at last obtain the conquest.

(7.) The consideration of that exceeding great reward, which they shall receive when they have overcome, wonderfully adds courage and boldness unto them. "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life," Rev. ii. 10.

METAPHOR.

II. Lions are great conquerors. Many other beasts, though they be much bigger than they, yet they be not able to stand before them.

III. A Lion is a creature that other beasts are afraid of.

more afraid of the prayer of John Knox, than of an army of twenty thousand men. Herod was afraid of John Baptist. It hath been observed, that some wicked persons have been afraid to swear, or carry it unseemly, in the presence of a godly man.

IV. A Lion is a very strong creature.

V. A Lion treadeth down, and maketh a prey of his enemies.

forth against Babylon. "God will raise up the sons of Zion against the sons of Greece, and make them as the sword of a mighty man." "The remnant of Jacob shall be amongst the Gentiles, in the midst of many people, as a Lion amongst the beasts of the forest, amongst a flock of sheep, who if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver," Cant. vi. 10, Zech. ix. 13, Mic. v. 8.

PARALLEL.

II. Saints are great conquerors; through Christ they conquer sin, Satan, the world, death, and hell; they are said to be "more than conquerors," Rom. viii. 37.

III. So the Saints are men that the wicked oft-times fear; they dread the effects of their prayers. It is said, that Mary Queen of Scots was afraid to swear, or carry it unseemly, in the presence of a godly man.

IV. The saints are so strong in the Lord, and the power of his might, that none, either in earth are hell, are a match for them.

V. So the godly shall in the latter days make a prey of all their adversaries, be as terrible as an army with banners, when God brings them

DISPARITY.

In many things the righteous are not like to a lion. A Lion hath many evil, devouring, and hurtful qualities, and is upon that account wicked men and the devils are compared to Lions.

INFERENCES.

I. In vain are the Saints by men and devils assaulted; he that prevails against them, must also prevail against, and overcome the mighty God; and who is a match for him!

II. This reproves, and may tend to the shame the timorous Christian. What! afraid to own Christ, to stand up for, and stand by the truth, when thou hast God to stand up for thee, and stand by thee! &c.

III. Let Saints show themselves bold and courageous in the cause and interest of God, and their souls. A fearful timorous spirit becomes not a Christian. Have you a good cause? Have you a good call? Have you a good conscience? Have you a good captain? What then do you fear? In the strength of the Lord, be as bold as a Lion; and in order thereunto, get the truth into your affections, see that you have received the truth in the love of it: and be sure you approve yourselves to be sincere; for it is sincerity that emboldens a Christian, and makes him valiant.

SAINTS COMPARED TO GOLD.

"When he hath tried me, I shall come forth as Gold," Job xxiii. 10.

"I will make a man more precious than fine Gold," Isa. xiii. 12.

SIMILE.

I. Gold is a precious metal, it is esteemed as one of the rarest things on earth; hence things of great value are in the holy scriptures set forth by Gold.

his portion: "The Lord's portion is his people, Jacob is the lot of his inheritance," Lam. iv. 2, Deut. xxxii. 9.

II. Gold, though it be a pure sort of metal, yet there is some dross in it; though, as naturalists observe, there is not any metal, that is more free from dross and rust than Gold is.

III. Gold is refined in the fire, and thereby is made more pure than it was before.

Gold, I will make a man more precious than fine Gold," Job xxiii. 10. "I will bring the third part through the fire, and will refine them as silver is refined, and will try them as Gold is tried. They shall call upon my name, and I will hear them: I will say, it is my people, and they shall say, the Lord is my God," Zech. xiii. 9.

IV. Gold is very pliant, you may bow and work it as you please; and the fire makes it more pliable and yielding, &c.

they presently yield to the will of God,

V. Gold will endure the fire; though it be often put into the furnace, yet it loseth nothing but the drossy part. The fire doeth it much good; it cannot destroy the precious nature of it. Gold retains its excellency in despite of the envious rage of fiery flames.

VI. Gold is often formed into vessels, rarely wrought, for the pleasure, honour, and use of princes and great men.

VII. Gold is carefully kept; men set highly by it, and often hide it, lest thieves should steal it away.

VIII. Men suffer great pains for Gold, run great losses and hazards to obtain it, and make it sure

PARALLEL.

I. THE Saints are a choice and precious people, the excellent ones in all the earth, Psal. xvi. 3. "Since thou hast been precious in my sight, thou hast been honourable, and I have loved thee," Isa. xliii. 3. They are called "precious sons of Zion, comparable to fine Gold," God esteems them as

II. The Saints of God, though holy, very precious and gracious ones, yet are they not without sin; there is some dross of corruption in the very best. "There is not a just man upon the earth, that doeth good, and sinneth not," Eccl. vii. 20. "If we say, we have no sin, we deceive ourselves," 1 John i. 8.

III. So the Saints are put into the fire, I mean, in the furnace of affliction, to purge and refine them from all the dross of their corruption. "When he hath tried me I shall come forth as

IV. So the Saints are a soft and pliable nature; God having infused his precious grace into their hearts, they are of a yielding temper, they have hearts of flesh; and God, by putting them into the fire, makes them more pliant and flexible, when others will not, cannot be brought to it.

V. So the Saints of God, or all sincere ones, endure the fiery trial; they are not burned up, nor consumed in the furnace of affliction, though heated seven-fold: though it burn their bodies into ashes, and reduce their flesh, as one observes, into the finest atoms; yet the Saint, the Gold, is not hurt, nor doth he receive the least damage thereby. Sincere Christians are compared to Gold; and hypocrites to wood, hay, and stubble, which the fire will burn up.

VI. God frames some of his Saints for most excellent use; he makes of them vessels of honour, to hold the glorious treasures of the Gospel, and to let it out to others. These are filthy compared to fine Gold, although accounted as earthen pitchers, Lam. iv. 2. See Vessel.

VII. So God sets highly by his Saints; he keeps them carefully day and night. They are called his hidden ones; he covers them under his wings from the pride of men.

VIII. So Jesus Christ suffered great pain and loss for his poor Saints; he laid down his life for them. "We were not redeemed with silver and to themselves.

SIMILE.

PARALLEL.

Gold, from our vain conversation, but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish," 1 Pet. i. 18, 19.

SIMILE.

I. Gold is earthly, and of a perishing nature; it weareth away by little and little; the more it is put to use, the more it wasteth.

II. Gold hath its glory from art; were it not moulded, shaped, and furnished by the wit of man, it would not be so glorious, nor of that esteem as now it is.

III. Gold is Gold naturally, as it is dug out of the earth, though not so pure as it is made afterwards by the art and industry of man.

DISPARITY.

I. The Saints, though their bodies be earthly, and die, yet they shall never perish; and their better part is spiritual, and shall never see corruption. The more service they do, the more glorious they shall be. Saints are not the worse for wearing.

II. But the Saints have all their glory from grace; it is not the work of men's hands, but the work of God's hands, that makes them to shine; they are curiously wrought and fashioned by the Spirit, from whence they become glorious.

III. But the Saints were mere lumps of filth, earth, and not Gold naturally. It is grace that makes them excellent as Gold; it is grace that makes them differ from others.

INFERENCES.

I. This shows forth the great worth of God's peculiar ones: they are esteemed by him far more excellent, than Gold is by men.

II. It speaks forth much comfort to the godly: God so prizeth them, that he keeps them as carefully as we do the choicest and rarest Gold.

III. It shows the excellency of grace: grace is of a transforming nature; it is like the philosopher's stone, it turns every man and woman, be they ever so vile and base metal, into Gold; i. e. it makes them holy, precious, and gracious ones in God's sight.

SAINTS COMPARED TO DOVES.

"Be ye harmless as Doves," Matt. x. 16.

DOVES are, 1. Meek. 2. Harmless. 3. Chaste. 4. They make their nests in a rock. 5. They feed upon pure grain, not on carrion, as fowls of prey do. 6. Have a lovely eye, and always fixed upon their mates. 7. They love to keep company together. 8. Mourn when they have lost sight of their mates. 9. They are often molested by fowls of prey. 10. They are very fruitful. 11. They love to be by sweet springs and rivers of water. 12. They were appointed under the law for sacrifices. 13. They have no defence but by flight. Upon these considerations saints may be compared to Doves; which is largely opened under the eighth head of metaphors, concerning the Church, to which we refer you.

SAINTS COMPARED TO LAMBS IN A LARGE PLACE.

"Now the Lord will feed them as a Lamb in a large Place," Hos. iv. 16.

EXPOSITORS differ about the meaning of these words, "Mercer and Vatablus," as Mr. Burrough observes, "would carry it thus, Laute ut Agnus, mox mactatur; as a Lamb when it hath large food, it is soon slain; so God threateneth Ephraim, that he will soon make an end of them; only he will let them prosper for awhile, and feed them largely, but it shall be for the slaughter, &c. But others rather understand, that God would bring Ephraim under such affliction, as should humble them, and make them as a Lamb: 'Feed them as a Lamb,' parce ac tenuiter; not feed as an heifer, that noted their prosperity; but feed as a Lamb, that noteth their adversity:

for the food of a Lamb differeth from the food of an heifer. That which will feed a Lamb, will starve an heifer, or an ox. They have, saith God, been proud and wanton in the enjoyment of peace and plenty; but now they shall have short commons; I will bring them down, and lay them low at my feet; they shall be as a Lamb that picks up the grass in the wilderness, 'as a Lamb in a large Place;' that is, saith Mr. Burroughs, they shall be dispersed among the countries. They would not be satisfied in Canaan, which was a narrow place; and with the sheepfold of mine that was therein; and now they shall have more room, they shall go into a large Place, but it shall be into captivity.

But now fully to take in the direct sense of the text, "I will feed them as a Lamb in a large Place;" that is, as a Lamb that shall be alone, one Lamb. He speaks of a Lamb singly, because that they should be scattered one from another. They had society, and might have abode in the sweet enjoyment of it, had they not sinned their mercies away; but since they did not make good use of their peace and communion together, God threateneth to scatter them, one in one place, and another in another place; and they should be as a Lamb alone in the wilderness, succourless, helpless, shiftless, bleating up and down." Which affords us a profitable parallel.

SIMILE.

I. A Lamb in a large place, that feeds in a wilderness alone, is very solitary, and, as it hath been observed, wanders about bleating, seeming greatly troubled for want of company.

once enjoyed. Thus it was with the poor Jews.

II. A Lamb alone in a large Place, wandering up and down in a wilderness, among wolves, lions, &c., is in great danger of being devoured every moment; when such as remain in the fold with the flock, are generally safe and very secure.

III. A Lamb in a large Place or wilderness hath none to help it; who watches or takes care of such a Lamb? it hath no shepherd to look after it, none that regards it.

IV. A Lamb in a large Place is forced to seek its own food, and provide for itself, when such as remain in the fold, or in the flock, the Shepherd takes care of them, and daily feeds them; they have no want, when the poor Lamb in the wilderness is in hard weather near starving.

PARALLEL.

I. So when God scatters his people by persecution, because they have not prized nor improved that peace and plenty which he hath afforded them in their own fold, nor regarded the sweetness of Christian society and communion together, they shall wander about, bleating as it were, being greatly troubled for want of that fellowship, they

II. So a poor Christian, that strays abroad, or gets out of God's fold, and is as a Lamb in a large Place, is in great danger of being spoiled and devoured every moment; when such Christians as abide in the Church, and keep close to the fellowship and communion thereof, are safe. Also Christians that are scattered, and forced by persecution from the society of the Saints, are obnoxious to many deaths and dangers.

III. So those Christians that stray abroad, or are forced to wander in a bewildered estate, have no fellowship with God's people, nor are they under the special care or charge of any of his particular ministers; none regard them: which is a sore and lamentable state.

IV. So much Christians as stray abroad, and walk alone, not belonging to any particular Church, have little food but what they can find themselves, they have not those sweet and blessed refreshments at the Lord's table, and in the daily communion with God's people, as such have who are orderly members. This made the spouse cry out, "Tell me, O thou whom my soul loveth, where thou feedest, and where thou makest thy flocks to rest at noon," &c., Cant. i. 7.

INFERENCES.

I. From whence we may infer, what a sore evil it is to be scattered from the flock of God. Some slight Christian society, and think the yoke of Christ is too hard and uneasy for their necks; they account it bondage, and not liberty; they do not like Christ's fold. And how just is it with God to blind the eyes of such, and leave them to wander in the wilderness, and let them feed as a Lamb in a large field, being exposed to the danger of many enemies?

II. Some men love their liberty, and they may have liberty enough; but such may be their liberty, that it may prove, as one well observes, their misery. To keep in the compass of God's commands, is the best liberty of all; as David professeth, "Then shall I have liberty, when I keep all thy commandments." Other liberty will most certainly bring us into straits, and ruin us, if we do not take heed, and return unto God. Many want elbow-room, and would fain get out of God's limits: though such may at present have peace, yet mark well their end. It is a fearful judgment to be left to wander.

III. Prize Christian society then, and account it your mercy, that you are not as a Lamb in a large Place; and improve the mercy you now enjoy, lest God bring that heavy judgment upon you, to break and scatter you, as many have been in days past, and made to seek their bread in a howling wilderness.

THE HEART OF A SAINT COMPARED TO A HEART OF FLESH.

"And I will give them a Heart of Flesh," &c., Ezek. xxxvi. 26.

I. A heart of Flesh is a tender thing; every small prick will make it bleed: so every sin, nay, the smallest sin will offend, and make a tender-hearted Christian cry out, much more a great sin.

II. A Heart of Flesh is a soft Heart; the philosopher's description of a soft thing is, that it easily gives way to a touch: so a true Christian, a tender-hearted Christian will yield to God's word, to his reproofs, to his commands, &c. Lay your finger upon a stone, and that yields not; but lay your finger upon flesh, and that will yield; so will a Saint. Josiah's Heart melted, when the law of God was read to him; his Heart gave way and yielded to God's word, and trembled at the judgments denounced; he had a Heart of Flesh, a tender and soft Heart, 2 Kings xxii. 19.

III. A Heart of Flesh cannot bear a great weight, a heavy burden will crush and mar it exceedingly. Lay ever so great a weight upon a stone, and that will bear it; you cannot crush that, nor make the least impression in it, what weight soever you lay upon it: but a heart of flesh, or that which is of a soft substance, is of another nature; a weight will bruise, crush, and mar it immediately. So a tender Hearted Christian cannot bear the weight of sin; he feels the burden so heavy, that he is sorely crushed down and oppressed under the guilt thereof, and grievously bruised. Thus it was with David, "I am sore broken, I am bowed down greatly," &c., Psal. xxxviii. 6.

IV. A Heart of Flesh, I mean a living Heart, for it is such an one of which the text speaks, is a sensible Heart: so a tender-Hearted Christian, or a man or woman that hath a Heart of Flesh, is very sensible. Such are sensible of their vileness, and loathe themselves before the Lord, cannot bear the thoughts of God's displeasure; it goes to their very Heart, to think that the holy and infinite God should be displeased and offended with them: they are sensible of their own sorrows, and of the sorrows and miseries of others. A tender-Hearted person will grieve for the afflictions of his brethren and sisters; if his mother, or any dear relation be distressed, and in great misery, O how sensible is he of it, and how sorely troubled and disquieted in his spirit! And thus it is with a tender-Hearted Saint; O how is he grieved for the distressed Saints, and for distressed Sion! &c.

V. A Heart of Flesh, i. e. a tender Heart, will take any impression you please, so a tender-Hearted Christian will take any impression from God: he is like wax melted, that will take the impression of the seal. They are ready to take the stamp of the Word, the image of God, which is righteousness and true holiness. The Spirit and Word of God can mould these Hearts into any form or fashion God pleaseth, &c.

SAINTS COMPARED TO STEWARDS.

"Give an account of thy Stewardship," &c., Luke xvi. 2.
 "As good Stewards," &c., 1 Pet. iv. 10.

Note. Every Saint is the Steward of God.

P A R A L L E L S .

I. A Steward is a person that hath goods or monies committed to his charge : so every Christian hath many goods, called talents, committed to him, both spiritual and temporals, Matt. xxv. 14, 15.

II. A Steward cannot say, the riches which are committed to him are his own ; no, he is but the Steward of them, in trust, they being the proper right of another man, or his lord's goods : so a Christian cannot say, anything he hath is his own ; all he is and hath is the Lord's.

III. A Steward ought to dispose of every thing committed to his charge, according to the special command of his master, who possibly orders him to pay so much to such an one, and so much to such an one, and so much to such poor that dwell in the parish, &c. So every Christian ought to dispose of all his Lord's goods, according to his express command laid down in the word, or he is no faithful steward. So much he is required to dispose of to the ministers of the Gospel, that may tend to make their lives comfortable, and free them from the perplexing cares of this life, which greatly hinder them in their ministry. The true minister's maintenance is jure divino, of divine right : "So hath the Lord ordained, that they that preach the Gospel, should live of the Gospel," 1 Cor. ix. 14. Also they are required to give to the poor, that they may not want, &c. Their charity ought to be according to their ability, and the poor's necessity ; and not only to give, but to give cheerfully, with a willing heart, &c.

IV. Stewards are required to improve their lord's money, &c. So Christians ought to improve all those spiritual gifts and graces, time, strength, wisdom, and knowledge. Whatsoever God hath given to them, he expects they should improve it to his glory, and to the profit of their neighbours.

V. It is a great and horrible evil in a Steward, to mind his own business and concerns more than the concerns of his lord and master : so it is an utter fault, and that which may justly call in question the truth of his sincerity and Christianity, for a Christian to mind the world, and his own private interest, more than the interests and concerns of Jesus Christ. Some care not what becomes of Christ's labourers, or of the poor Saints, nor of the interest of the Gospel, so that they have all things to their heart's content. They eat the fat, and drink the sweet, and lay up great store of treasure for their own children, &c. They have, perhaps, their hundreds and thousands by them ; and in the mean while many faithful ministers hard put to it to get bread. Is it not an abominable evil in a Steward, to live like a lord himself upon his master's goods, and let his master's children want bread : and also to keep back the right of his faithful and painful labourers, for whose sake he entrusted him with so much substance ?

VI. A Steward must expect to be called to an account : Give an account of thy Stewardship," &c., Luke xvi. 2. So must every Christian expect to be called to an account by Jesus Christ concerning his Stewardship ; and what will they have to say, who have embezzled much of their Lord's goods, and converted the rest to their own private use. Let all take heed, and so demean themselves, that they may have their accounts to give up with joy.

SAINTS COMPARED TO STONES.

"Ye also as lively Stones, are built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood," &c. 1 Pet. ii. 5.

THE Saints of God are compared to Stones, to the stones of a building, &c.

PARALLELS.

I. SOME Stones that men build with, are very rough and rocky as they are taken out of the quarry, and therefore need much hewing and squaring, before they are fit for the building: so naturally the hearts of sinners are rocky, and like rough Stones; and to this the Lord alludes, "I have hewed them by the prophets," Hos. vi. 5; ministers are God's tools, by which he does his work upon men's hearts.

II. Stones are fit materials to build a house withal: so God sees believers are the only fit materials to build his spiritual house.

III. Stones in a building are well knit and united together: so should the Saints in love, &c.

IV. Stones are durable; so are the Saints.

DISPARITY.

I. No builder builds his house with precious Stones: but believers are called precious Stones. This notes the richness and excellency of the spiritual buildings: "Now if any build upon this foundation, gold, silver, precious stones," &c. 1 Cor. iii. 12.

II. No earthly Stones have life in them; they are not living but dead Stones; but the Saints are living Stones, being quickened and made alive by Jesus Christ, that so there may be a fit resemblance or similitude between the Stones and the foundation, Eph. ii. 1. See foundation, p. 445, and Christ the corner-stone, p. 450, 451.

THE SAINTS GOD'S JEWELS.

"They shall be mine in that day when I make up my Jewels," Mal. iii. 17.

THE Saints are in this place called Jewels, they are God's choice Jewels: there is nothing so excellent in the eyes of men, but God's people are as amiable in his sight; and why he calls them Jewels, is opened in the following parallel.

METAPHOR.

I. JEWELS are rare and excellent things, made by the hands of curious workmen; they are made of precious Stones, set in gold and silver.

II. Some Jewels are long in making; they are not made near so soon as some others are. They carry on their work gradually, every day's work adds to their beauty and richness; yet having begun, they resolve to go forward, and never cease till they have finished them, and made them up, quite fit for the cabinet.

III. Jewels are a most rare and excellent ornament, nothing richer; and are therefore worn only by rich and noble persons, in which they take great delight.

which agrees with that in Isa. lxii. 3, "Thou shalt also be a crown of glory in the hand

PARALLEL.

I. THE Saints are to God most choice and excellent ones: "The king's daughter is all glorious within," Psal. xlv. 13. These Jewels are made up of a complication of all the precious graces of the Holy Spirit.

II. So some of the Saints are not so soon made up and fitted for heaven, as others are; God carries on the work of grace gradually. All persons, as soon as ever they are converted, are not made fit for heaven, but they must go from one degree of grace to another. Yet God hath promised to perfect the work he hath begun; he will never cease, until he hath made up the Jewels he hath begun to make. "He that hath begun a good work in you, will perform it to the day of Christ," Phil. i. 6.

III. So believers are the glory of Christ: "Whether any do enquire of Titus, he is my partner and fellow-helper concerning you; or our brethren be enquired of, they are the messengers of the churches, and the glory of Christ," 2 Cor. viii. 23, "Thou shalt also be a crown of glory in the hand of the Lord, and a royal diadem in the hand of thy God;" and hence called "Hephzibah, the Lord delighteth in thee." No prince esteems more of his crown, Jewels, and royal diadem, than God doth of his people. The high-priest under the law was to have the names of the children of Israel engraven on the breast-plate. See Exod. xxviii. 29. "And thou shalt make the breast-plate of judgment, the work of cunning workmen, &c. And thou shalt emboss in it embossments of stones four rows: the first, a row of sardius, a topaz, and a smaragd; the second row a chalcedony, a sapphire, and sardonyx; and the third row, an hyacinth, a chrysophraso, and an amethyst; and the fourth row, a chrysolite, a beryl, and a jasper. And they shall be set in gold in their embossments, and the stones shall be with the names of the sons of Israel," &c. Exod. xxviii. 15—21. Also in the ephod there was two beryl-stones, and on them was engraven the names of the children of Israel. Now the high-priest was a type of Christ, and his having the names of the children of Israel engraven with precious stones upon the ephod which was upon his shoulders, and upon the breast-plate, signifies not only Christ's bearing his Saints upon his shoulders, and as it were, upon his heart, but also what an ornament Christ looks upon his Saints to be unto him; for those precious stones were a wonderful ornament to the priest, both on his shoulders and breast. Take Mr. Ainsworth's annotations on the 11th verse. The engraver, stone-cutter, or Jeweller, thus engraving in precious stone, and that like a signet, the names of the children of Israel, signified the firm and perpetual love, memorial, esteem, and sustentation of the Church. And to this the spouse alludes, Cant. viii. 6, "Set me as a signet upon thy heart, as a signet on thy arm, &c."

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

IV. A man takes great care of, and exceedingly values his rich and choice Jewels; he will not lose one of them, if he can possible keep them.

(1.) By the price he paid for them; he gave up that precious and invaluable Jewel of his heart, viz., the Lord Jesus, to be broken in pieces, that so he might thereby make unto himself many thousand choice and precious Jewels. (2.) By the great pains he hath used in forming and fashioning them for himself: "We are his workmanship," &c. (3.) By his making of such a firm and sure covenant with Christ in their behalf, that none of them might be lost. (4.) By the charge he gives to the wicked not to hurt them. "He suffered no man to do them wrong: yea, he reprov'd kings for their sakes, saying, touch not mine Anointed, and do my prophets no harm," 1 Chron. xvi. 21, 22. (5.) By his declaring, that "they that touch them, touch the apple of his eye." He pities them as a father pities his children. (6.) By his bestowing so many precious graces and good gifts upon them, to make them shine, and gloriously set forth their lustre. (7.) By executing wrath and displeasure upon their enemies. (8.) By his defending, saving, and preserving them in the midst of so many great and imminent dangers. (9.) In hiding them in a secret and secure place, out of the reach of adversaries. (10.) Lastly, by providing such a glorious place for them after death, that they may be with him for ever.

V. Jewels are subject to many casualties whilst they are making, and are often marred, or receive much detriment, which without much labour and cost are not repaired and made good again.

VI. When a man hath quite made up his Jewels, he puts them into a rich cabinet.

VII. A person that hath many rich and choice Jewels, shows them,

IV. So God takes great care of his Saints, esteems them as his chiefest treasure, and will not lose one of them. "All that the Father hath given me, have I kept, and none of them are lost," &c. That God highly prizes, esteems, and takes great care of his people, doth appear many ways

V. So God's Jewels are subject to sustain great detriment, and are often much marred, whilst he is about making of them up, by sin and Satan, and through their own carelessness, which is not soon nor easily repaired. Though God graciously by his Word and Spirit renews his work again upon their souls, as in the case of David, Peter, and divers others.

VI. So when God hath quite made up his spiritual Jewels, he puts them into heaven; that is the rich and glorious cabinet which he hath provided for all his choice and goodly Jewels.

VII. So God in the day to come, when he hath made up all the Jewels he intends to make, will as he sees occasion, to his friends, and also to others, declaring his right to them, and setting forth the worth and excellency of them.

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

reveal, show, or make known his Saints to angels and men. Hence the day of Christ's coming is called "The day of the manifestation of the sons of God." "They shall be mine," saith God. He will say in that day, these are mine, these that you ungodly ones abused, hated, and persecuted, and thought not worthy to live, but accounted the off-scouring of all things, behold now what rare and lovely ones they are! These are the delight and joy of my heart, whom I value as my choicest treasure, and I will spare them, whilst you shall bear the fierceness of my wrath and indignation for ever. "Then shall ye return, and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not," Mal. iii. 18.

DISPARITY.

I. Other Jewels may be lost: but God will lose none of his Jewels.

II. He that makes other jewels may not be the proper owner of them, nor wear them for an ornament himself: but God who makes all his spiritual Jewels, is the proper owner of them: "This people have I formed for myself." They are also made for his own glory.

III. Other Jewels may be quite spoiled, broken to pieces, and become good for nothing; the best and richest Jewels shall at last pass away, and perish for ever: but God's Jewels shall never utterly be spoiled; for though they may receive some damage by Satan's temptations, and the pollution of sin; yet God will perfect that which is wanting concerning them, and make them at last so glorious, that they shall be out of danger, and shall abide and shine in beauty and glory to eternity.

INFERENCES.

I. From hence we may infer, what horrid iniquity the enemies of God and his church are guilty of, and what a dreadful account they have to give for endeavouring, and with the greatest rage and malice, and unwearied attempts, contriving all ways imaginable to spoil, break in pieces, and utterly destroy all God's choice and precious Jewels, which he is as tender of as the apple of his eye; what will they do in the day of vengeance?

II. It speaks forth much comfort to the godly. O how are they esteemed, prized, and valued by the Almighty! They are his Jewels, his special and peculiar treasure.

III. This may inform all men, what the reason is God is so much concerned for the good and well-being of his own people, and so often appears to vindicate their innocency, and defend them from the rage and cruelty of wicked men.

IV. Let us enquire, whether we are God's Jewels, or not. (1.) Are we regenerated ones? Have we the pearl of faith, love, humility? &c. (2.) Are we holy, sincere, and faithful in all things to God? (3.) Do we excel others? Is there a real, or only a seeming worth and excellency in us? What do we more than others? (4.) Do we grow in grace? Doth the work of God go on upon our hearts? Are we more fit for heaven to-day, than we were yesterday? A Jewel in the hand of a jeweller is every day nearer finishing. "The righteous shall hold on his way, and he that hath clean hands shall grow stronger and stronger."

SAINTS COMPARED TO KINGS.

"And hast made us unto God Kings and priests," &c., Rev. v. 10.

THE Saints are in this place and some others called Kings, which is one of the highest titles among men.

PARALLELS.

I. Kings are usually highly descended, or are sons of nobles: so the Saints are all highly descended, they are born from above, born of God, and so may be said to be the offspring of heaven: "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God! Behold, now are we sons of God," &c., 1 John iii. 1, 2.

II. Kings have great attendants belonging to them: so the Saints have most great and glorious attendants belonging to them, viz., the holy angels. No Kings or monarchs on earth are honoured like the Saints and children of God, in respect of the excellency of their retinue. See Angels under the sixth head.

III. Kings have their crowns, and do reign, or else expect to reign: so the Saints have a crown laid up for them: "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which God the righteous Judge shall give unto me at that day; and not to me only, but to all them also that love his appearance," 2 Tim. iv. 18. "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life," Rev. ii. 10. And as they shall have a crown, so they shall reign upon the earth as kings, Rev. v. 10.

IV. Kings are the principal men on earth, far exceeding in honour and excellency all common people; so the Saints are the chief and principal ones, or the most excellent in all the earth; it may be said of them, as of Jabesh, "they are more honourable than their brethren," 1 Chron. iv. 9, 10. What base and ignoble persons are the wicked, to those noble souls! The ungodly, be they never so high and great in power and sovereignty, are compared to things very base, vile, and contemptible, as will hereafter be shown. "The righteous is more excellent than his neighbour," Prov. xii. 26.

V. Kings sometimes meet with great trouble and sorrow after they are anointed, before they come to the quiet enjoyment of their crowns; they have been severely persecuted, and chased from one place to another, as king David particularly was: so the Saints of God, though they are anointed with the oil of gladness, and have an assurance given them of the crown of glory, meet with very great trouble in this world, being persecuted, tormented, afflicted, and sometimes having no certain dwelling-place, as is said of some of the ancient worthies, Heb. xi.

VI. Some Kings have possessed and reigned over many kingdoms, their dominions have been very great. The Saints are the heirs of a kingdom, nay, all the kingdoms under the whole heavens shall be given to them. "The kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ," &c., Rev. xi. 15. "And the kingdoms, and dominions, and the greatness of the kingdom, under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the Saints of the Most High," &c., Dan. vii. 27.

VII. Kings have great and noble minds, they busy not themselves about mean matters: so the Saints have great and noble spirits; they converse about things above; being risen with Christ, their affections are not set upon things below, but seek those things that are above, where Christ is at the right hand of God, Col. iii. 1, 2. "Our conversation is in heaven," &c., Phil. iii. 20.

VIII. Kings have many great and glorious privileges and prerogatives appertaining to them; how are they honoured and congratulated by the people! so have the Saints. They shall sit down with Christ on his throne; they shall judge the world; they shall be honoured by all; the wicked shall bend their knees before them in the day to come, &c.

There are many great disparities, which we leave to the reader's observation.

INFERENCES.

I. Let not the Saints be discouraged, nor faint under their afflictions. What though David was hunted like a partridge on the mountains? he was the Lord's anointed for all that, and his exaltation followed: so it is but a little while, if you faint not, before God will exalt you.

II. O what manner of love and grace is this! What! hath God made us his sons, heirs, joint-heirs with Christ! Hath he made us kings! and shall we reign! &c. What shall we render to the Lord? &c.

III. This may quicken and stir up all the Saints to live as becomes their honourable calling and dignity. Hath God made us Kings, and shall we live like beggars? Far be it from noble-spirited Saints so to do.

SAINTS COMPARED TO PRIESTS.

*"But ye are a chosen generation, a holy Priesthood," &c., 1 Pet. ii. 9.
 "And hath made us unto our God kings and Priests," &c., Rev. v. 10.*

God's people are called Priests, and an holy Priesthood, as appears by these scriptures. That of kings shows forth the dignity of the Saints, and this of priests respects their office and work.

PARALLELS.

I. THE Priests under the law were set apart, or consecrated to God, to attend him in his service: so every true Christian, God hath set apart for himself; he is separated from the world, and worldly worships, and sinful customs, to the holy service of God. "The Lord hath set apart him that is godly for himself," Psal. iv. 3.

II. The Priests under the law were admitted to approach near unto God; they had more perfect knowledge of him, and holy intimacy with him, than others: so the Saints are a people near to God: "Ye who sometimes were afar off, are made nigh by the blood of Christ." Eph. ii. 13. They have more perfect and clear knowledge of God than others, and more precious fellowship and communion with him.

III. The Priests offered sacrifices to God: so the saints offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God through Jesus Christ. 1. They offer up their bodies and their spirits, "A broken and a contrite heart." 2. They offer up their prayers upon that golden altar, which is as sweet incense in the nostrils of God. 3. They offer their substance as God calls for it, which is a sacrifice well-pleasing in his sight. 4. They offer up praises: "Whoso offereth praise, glorifieth me; and to him that ordereth his conversation aright, will I show the salvation of God," Psal. i. 23.

INFERENCES.

I. SAINTS are Priests, not typical Priests, but a royal Priesthood, better than the Priests under the law: they are spiritual Priests, they offer up spiritual sacrifices, &c.

II. Their persons, as well as their sacrifices, are accepted of God, through Jesus Christ: if the person be not sanctified, the offering is not accepted: "For their sakes sanctify I myself, that they also might be sanctified through the truth," John xvii. 19.

III. Let all take heed they offer not the lame and the blind, when they have a kid in the flock. "My son, give me thy heart," Prov. xxiii. 26.

WICKED MEN COMPARED TO CAPTIVES.

"Proclaim liberty to the Captives," Isa. lxi. 1.

"For I perceive that thou art in the gall of bitterness, and in the bond of iniquity," Acts viii. 23.

"Even so we, when we were children, were in bondage under the elements of the world," Gal. iv. 3.

"For this Agar is Mount Sinai in Arabia, and answereth unto Jerusalem which is, and is now in bondage with her children," Gal. iv. 25.

"And that they may recover themselves out of the snare of the devil, who are taken captive by him at his will," 2 Tim. ii. 26.

"And deliver them, who through fear of death were all their life-time subject to bondage," Heb. ii. 15.

"While they promise them liberty, they themselves are the servants of corruption; for of whom a man is overcome, of the same is he brought into bondage," 2 Pet. ii. 19.

CORPORAL bondage, or captivity, is as much as to say, slavery and thralldom under some tyrant, or cruel enemy, that oppreseth: and from these scriptures it is evident, that Wicked Men, or such as are in the state of nature, unconverted, are in a state of bondage, they are spiritual slaves or Captives. And in opening the bondage-state the ungodly are in, I shall show,

(1.) To whom they are, or may be said to be in bondage.

(2.) How they were brought into this bondage-state.

(3.) The nature of this spiritual bondage.

1. They are in bondage to sin: "He that committeth sin, is the servant of sin," John viii. 34. Sin rules and reigns in wicked Men; they are overcome by their base and filthy lust, and "Of whom a man is overcome, of the same is he brought into bondage," 2 Pet. ii. 19.

2. They are in bondage to Satan, "Taken Captive by him at his will;" 2 Tim. ii. 26, "He rules in the hearts of the children of disobedience," Eph. ii. 2.

3. They are in bondage to the law; for being not able to perform the obligation or requirements thereof, they are brought under the power and bondage of that killing letter, Gal. iv. 25.

4. They are in bondage to death; death tyrannizeth over them, and through fear of it they are said to be continually in bondage, Heb. ii. 15.

5. They are in bondage to the wrath of God, they are under the power of God's dreadful wrath, John iii. 36.

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

I. SOME that are in a state of bondage were once freemen.

was a free man, he was not in bondage

II. Some are in a state of bondage, by being the offspring of such parents as are slaves; for if the parents are born slaves, their children that are born in Captivity, are Captives likewise.

III. Some are brought into bondage by the power and force of an enemy, they being surprised, and by reason of weakness not able to withstand them, are taken Captive; as many of this and other nations have been by the Turks.

IV. Some by allurements are enticed by an adversary, and that way overcome, and brought into bondage. Pirates oft-times put out false colours, and pretend themselves to be friends, that so they may the better trapan and take poor unwearied persons.

V. Some persons, when they are taken Captive by an enemy, are stripped naked; their own robes being taken away, they have instead of them nothing but filthy rags, to hide their nakedness withal.

filthy rags, Isa. lxiv. 6. Some conceive by filthy rags, the Spirit of God alludes to those rags that surgeons take off of corrupt and filthy sores, which we know are very loathsome, this shows that the state of sinners is very deplorable.

VI. Some persons who are taken Captive, are put into prison, nay, into a dungeon, and remain under the power of a cruel keeper.

I. ADAM,* and so all mankind, considered as being in his loins, while he stood in that state of innocency, before he eat of the forbidden fruit, to any of these enemies.

II. So all Wicked Men are in bondage, as they are the offspring of old Adam, Psal. li. 5. All mankind being born in sin; Satan, death, and wrath hath power over them, until delivered by Jesus Christ. And hence they are said to be "By nature children of wrath," Eph. ii. 3.

III. Wicked Men are also actually taken Captive, and brought into bondage by sin and Satan; as being surprised by the power of these enemies, they are overcome, and so brought into Captivity; Satan being stronger than they, he prevails against them. "And that they may recover themselves out of the snare of the devil, who are taken Captive by him at his will," 2 Tim. ii. 26.

IV. So Wicked Men are by the allurements and enticements of sin and Satan overcome, and brought into bondage, Prov. vii. 21. These spiritual enemies by policy deceive and trepan the souls of men. Satan, like a cursed pirate, puts out false colours, pretends himself a friend; he presents the pleasures and profits of the world to them, and thereby overcomes them, and carries them away Captive, 2 Cor. xi. 14.

V. Adam, when Satan overcame him by his treachery and subtle wiles, was striped naked:† he lost all his precious robes, viz., his spotless and perfect righteousness, and ever since his natural offspring, while they remain unconverted, have nothing but their own righteousness to cover them, which is by the Holy Ghost compared to by filthy rags, the Spirit of God alludes to those rags that surgeons take off of corrupt and filthy sores, which we know are very loathsome, this shows that the state of sinners is very deplorable.

VI. Sinners, whilst they remain in a state of nature, Captives of sin and Satan, are in a prison, in a deep prison or dungeon of darkness, called the "Power of darkness," Col. i. 13. This prison is strong, there is no man can break through

* How mankind were brought into bondage.

† The sad and miserable condition of Satan's Captives.

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

and make an escape. It is called a pit, yea, "an horrible pit," or pit of noise, Psal. xl. 2. Some understand, David means the depth of afflictions; others, the horrible state of unregeneracy, or deep alienation from the life of God, wherein is heard nothing but the fearful and hideous noise of an accusing conscience, and wrath of an angry God. It is a pit wherein is no water, viz., no soul comfort nor refreshment, &c., being under the power and tyranny of Satan, Zech. ix. 11.

VII. Some persons, when they are taken captive, and put into prison, and also bound with iron chains, or fetters of brass, their eyes also have been put out. Thus the king of Babylon served Zedekiah king of Judah, when Jerusalem was taken: "And they slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes, and put out the eyes of Zedekiah, and bound him with fetters of brass, and carried him to Babylon," 2 Kings xxv. 7.

any drudgery the devil hath for them to do, the eyes of their understanding being darkened, or put out. "Ye that were sometimes in darkness," &c., Eph. v. 8.

VIII. Some persons that have been in captivity have been almost starved to death, having had little more than bread and water afforded them, nay, have been forced to eat such things as were not fit for food.

Pray observe what the Holy Ghost compares the food of ungodly sinners to: First, They are said to feed on the wind; Secondly, To feed on ashes; Thirdly, On gravel; and Fourthly, On husks. The prodigal would fain have filled his belly with the husks which the swine did eat. Should a poor Captive have nothing allowed him to eat, but husks, gravel, or ashes, all would conclude his condition to be very miserable: so miserable are all ungodly sinners, Isa. xlv. 20, Hos. xii. 1, Prov. xx. 17. Alas! all the pleasures, riches, and honours of this world, or whatsoever it is that they feed upon, or let their hearts run out after, are in comparison of Christ the Bread of life, and those other good things which believers daily feed and feast upon, but as feeding on husks and gravel. If men naturally have no food to eat, they will pine away, and soon die: so were it not for those earthly comforts, that the ungodly have to feed upon, and support their spirits with, though you see what the nature of them is, they would soon pine away. Do but dispossess them of any of these earthly enjoyments, and their hearts, like the heart of Nabal, would presently die in them; for they never tasted how good the Lord is, how sweet promises are, what it is to have the love and favour of God; never tasted of the feast of a good conscience, nor of the comforts of the Holy Ghost," Psal. xxxiv. 8.

IX. Some Persons that have been taken Captive, have been grievously wounded; they have not only been stripped, put into prison, and almost starved to death, but also have lain there in a sad, bloody, and mangled condition, and their wounds let alone to fester, stink, and be very loathsome.

sickness spoken of here, were those sins and abominable evils that people were guilty of; which appears from what is said by the Lord in the first part of the verse

VII. Wicked men are not only Captives, and put into a bottomless prison, but they are also bound. "I perceive thou art in the gall of bitterness, and in the bond of iniquity," Acts viii. 23. Hence the prophet speaking of Christ, saith, "He hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the Captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound," Isa. lxi. 1. Every ungodly man, whilst he remains in Satan's kingdom, is bound with strong bonds: First, the bond of a hard heart; Secondly, the bond of ignorance; Thirdly, the bond of unbelief: which they are no way able to break asunder, or get out of, Jer. v. 3, Acts xxvi. 18. And by this means they are fit for VIII. Wicked men, who are the Captives of sin and Satan, are kept at hard commons; they never yet had the least taste of that which is really good, but "they spend their money for that which is not bread, and their labour for that which satisfieth not." And therefore saith God, "Hearken diligently unto me, and eat that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness," Isa. lv. 1, 2.

IX. The Wicked are not only Captives of the devil, stripped of all their first righteousness, in prison, in iron chains, almost starved to death spiritually; but also they are wounded "from the sole of the foot to the head, there is no soundness in it, but wounds, and bruises, and putrifying sores," Isa. i. 6. Some conclude, that the prophet speaks of the body politic, or national church of the Jews, which was under great affliction, and so was that way sorely wounded. But doubtless the wounds and

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

“Why should ye be stricken any more? ye will revolt more and more.” And as a proof of it, he saith, “The whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint.” Sin was the sickness, and the wounds; and those afflictions that God had brought upon them, was the cure. But why, saith God, should I afflict or chastise you any more, or use means for your help and healing, when under the use or exercise of that sovereign means I have used, you grow worse and worse? It is said of the man that went from Jerusalem to Jericho, and fell among thieves, that he was not only stripped of his raiment, but wounded also, Luke x. 30. “My wounds stink, and are corrupt,” saith David, Psal. xxxviii. 5; and in another place he cries out, “Lord, have mercy upon me, and heal my soul, for I have sinned against thee,” Psal. xli. 4. From whence it appears, that a godly man may be wounded by his sin, and that sorely too. Every sin makes a wound in the soul; what a fearful case are unconverted souls then in? O that sinners would but consider this. See Sin a Wound, and Sickness.

X. Some persons that have been taken Captive, and brought into prison and bondage, besides other sad circumstances they have been under, they have been brought under the sentence of death, nay, and for their horrid rebellions, treasons, &c., under a fearful and painful death, as to be torn in pieces, or burned alive.

it to die the common death of all Men. Death puts an end to all the external miseries of mortals; but the death of sin's Captives is quite another thing. They are condemned to be burned, to be burned alive too; but this is not all, to lie burning in the fire of God's eternal wrath for ever, where they shall be always dying, but cannot die: “Where the worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched.”

X. The ungodly, who remain Captives to Satan, being under the power of their lusts, or abiding in the state of unregeneracy, are not only under all the sad circumstances you have heard; but to render them every way miserable, as in truth their present state is, they are under the sentence of death. Perhaps some would conclude, that death to such persons I have given the character of, is better than life: and, with Job, they had better choose it. Alas; it would be so indeed, were

METAPHOR.

DISPARITY.

I. Captives, that are so only to Men, are but externally enslaved.

I. But Wicked Men, that are slaves to sin and Satan, are captivated in their souls, notwithstanding as to the body they may be at liberty, as to outward thralldom.

II. Some persons may be free and at liberty in their souls, at the same time when they may be Captives as to their bodies, and so their captivity may seem less grievous to them.

II. But it cannot be so said of a wicked Man, for whatever misery befalls his body, it is abundantly aggravated by and from the Captivity and slavery of his soul; nay, in the enjoyment of his greatest outward liberty, he is in dreadful thralldom by sin and Satan.

III. Captives that are so only to Men, may and have been redeemed with money.

III. But spiritual Captives, such as are in bondage to sin and Satan, cannot be redeemed with money. It is not silver or gold, that can purchase the redemption of one of Satan's slaves; for the redemption of the soul is so precious, that nothing can make a compensation for it, but the precious blood of Christ, 1 Pet. i. 19.

IV. If no other means can procure the liberty of Captives, that are so only as to their bodies, yet death sets them free, and those to whom they are in bondage have no more to do with them.

IV. But Wicked Men, living and dying in bondage to Satan and their own lusts, cannot be free by death, but are thereby put into an irrecoverable state of eternal misery, from which there can be no redemption, being delivered up to Satan.

V. Some that are Captives only in their bodies, are so sensible of their misery and thralldom, that they seek and desire to improve all means imaginable for their deliverance.

V. But some Wicked Men are not only insensible of their bondage to the devil, and their own lusts, but are lifeless as to any ways or means of deliverance. Though means be used daily to convince them of the dreadful danger of their bondage-state, and of the way and means of their redemption; yet through the blindness and hardness of their hearts, they rest at quiet in the devil's prison, where they are shut up as Captives. And that which declares their greatest thralldom and misery is, they refuse all the tenders of grace in order to their redemption, nay, set light by Jesus Christ, who came to proclaim liberty, &c.

METAPHOR.

DISPARITY.

VI. Captives to men only, may be redeemed, and set at liberty, and yet so captivated by them again, as that they may die in slavery.

VI. But wicked men, though the saddest Captives imaginable, in respect of misery and thralldom, yet if set free by Jesus Christ, they shall be no more the slaves of Satan: "For those whom the Son makes free, are free indeed," John viii. 36; free from the dominion and power of sin and Satan here, and free from the wages of sin, which is eternal death, hereafter.

INFERENCES.

Quest. Some may say, If this be the state of unconverted men and women, they are miserable objects indeed. But is there no relief nor help for these poor Captives? Must they perish inevitably, and be damned for ever.

Ans. God forbid! There is good news for these slaves and Captives of sin and the devil, a Gospel to be preached to them; God is full of bowels; were there no deliverance to relieve, it would be sad beyond what any are able to conceive. But to prove that there is salvation and relief for the vilest sinners, consider these three things following!

1. The Lord Jesus hath purchased deliverance for them, he hath laid down a satisfactory price or ransom for those Captives, who through faith in him shall obtain deliverance.

2. Christ is ordained and anointed to preach glad tidings to them. "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the Gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the Captives, and recovering sight to the blind, and to set at liberty them that were bound," Luke iv. 18, Isa. lxi. 1.

3. Many who have been in the like state of Captivity and bondage have been set at liberty; thousands that have been slaves of sin and Satan, through the infinite mercy of God are now in a perfect state of freedom. "Such were some of you," saith the apostle, "but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God," 1 Cor. vi. 11.

Sirs, what blessed news is this for poor sinners! Suppose a man who is a slave or Captive, and suffereth justly for his sin, was stripped naked, and put into a dungeon, bound with cruel and heavy chains, wounded in the most fearful manner from head to feet, and only fed with ashes and gravel stones, and in this condition were condemned to abide for many years, and then to be put to the greatest torture that mortals can devise, where he should suffer a long time together, always dying, and yet cannot die; and that on a sudden one should come to him with the joyful news of a full and perfect deliverance; would not this be the welcome news that ever he heard? Sinners, may not the tidings you hear, cause your hearts to leap in you for joy! Though you have undone yourselves by your wicked works, yet God hath devised a way to deliver and save you for ever.

Quest. How, by what means, and by whom, may some poor ignorant soul say, "Is deliverance brought about?"

Ans. Deliverance out of this bondage-state is by Jesus Christ, only by him; "Neither is there salvation by any other," Acts iv. 12. "If the Son therefore make you free, ye shall be free indeed," John viii. 36. But further to answer the question, I say, the liberty is,

(1.) By a great ransom.

(2.) By a conquest.

1. There was no other way found out to bring sinners out of this their miserable condition, but a great sum must be laid down: "Ye are bought with a price," 1 Cor. vi. 20. But know this, "We are not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold," &c., 1 Pet. i. 18. All the gold and silver in the world, and all the riches thereof, were there ten thousand worlds more, could not redeem one soul out of this state of bondage and slavery to sin and Satan. "The redemption of the soul is precious, and ceaseth for ever," Psal. xlix. 8. Nay, if a man should offer up his son or daughter, "The fruit of his body, for the sin of his soul," Mic. vi. 7, it would be utterly rejected. Nothing could redeem us but the price of blood, and that too the "Precious blood of Jesus Christ, as a Lamb without spot," 1 Pet. i. 19. See Surety.

2. Deliverance out of this bondage is by conquest. Unless the Saviour of mankind conquer those cruel enemies of the soul, not one sinner can be set at liberty: for it is not the bare ransom or price of Christ's most precious blood, I mean the laying down of his life, that could work a perfect freedom for us; for though that made a full compensation to the justice of God, yet sinners being under the power of sin, Satan, and death, these enemies take no notice at all of that price; for our Saviour did not capitulate with them, neither will they give up their prisoner till they are overcome, and, as I may say, are forced to do it: for as Christ saith, "When a strong man armed keepeth his palace, his goods are in peace; but when a stronger than he shall come, and overcome him, he taketh from him all his armour," &c., Luke xi. 21, 22. Satan is this strong man armed, and Jesus Christ the Person that is stronger than he; and it is our mercy God sent us such a strong and mighty Saviour, one able to subdue sin, conquer Satan, overcome death, that so he might deliver us, who were taken captive by them at their will. "To this end was the Son of God manifest, that he might destroy the works of the devil," 1 John iii. 8. He through death, and rising again from the dead, "Hath destroyed death, and him that had the power of death, that is, the devil; and delivered them who through fear of death were all their life-time subject to bondage," Heb. ii. 14, 15. He bids us also, "Be of good cheer, for he hath overcome the world," John xvi. 33.

This conquest by the Lord Jesus is two-fold:

1. For us without us: "When he ascended on high, he led captivity captive." He took him captive, that had taken mankind captive. "Having spoiled principalities and powers, he made a show of them openly, (the work is already done) triumphing over them in it," Eph. iv. 8, Col. ii. 15.

2. This conquest is wrought by Christ also in the soul; for palpable it is, that every unconverted person is under the power of these cruel enemies, as hath been already shown, and have they a sufficient power of their own to encounter with them? Is sinful, weak, and depraved man, a match for Satan? Is he able to subdue and overcome him? Or can he by any inherent power of his own destroy the power of sin, and change his own heart? "Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots?" Jer. xiii. 23. Is man able to raise himself from the power of the grave? Any of these things are too hard for sinners to do; and therefore it follows, Christ must conquer these enemies in us, he must break our bonds, and burst our chains in pieces, &c. Pray remember, Christ is a perfect and complete Saviour, he alone doth the work, he doth it for us, and also in us; "His own arm brought salvation," Isa. lxiii. 5. He hath no partner nor competitor.

Secondly, As this may serve to humble mankind, so also it may lift up their hearts who are redeemed, in praises to the Almighty, Job vii. 17; O what is man that God should be mindful of him! What! regard such a deplorable rebel, slave, and captive of sin and the devil! and the rather, considering the nature of that glorious freedom procured by Jesus Christ, which is, 1. A freedom from the guilt of sin. 2. A freedom from the filth of sin. 3. A freedom from the power of sin, "Sin shall not have dominion over you," Rom. vi. 14. 4. A freedom from the eternal punishment of sin; a freedom from sin, from Satan, from the law, from death, and from wrath; and by this means, made the sons and daughters of God, making them nigh to him, enjoying union and communion both with the Father and the Son, having peace, and good assurance of eternal life.

Thirdly, It may cause the redeemed ones of God to pity sinners, pity their unconverted relations; what a deplorable condition are they in! How exceedingly are persons concerned for their relations who are in slavery, though it extend but to the body? And what ways and means do they with all diligence make use of, to procure their liberty and freedom! And by how much the bondage of sin and Satan exceeds all the slavery that man can possibly be exposed unto; by so much the more ought that means to be improved, that may effectually accomplish their redemption.

WICKED MEN SLUGGARDS.

"How long wilt thou sleep, O Sluggard? When wilt thou arise out of thy sleep?" Prov. vi. 9.

"How long wilt thou sleep? Sleep is taken variously in the holy scripture.

1. For the binding or closing up the senses, to give the body rest: "The same night Peter was sleeping between two soldiers," Acts xii. 6. This is a natural sleep.

2. It is taken metaphorically.

(1.) For death. Hence it is said, "David, after he had served his generation according to the will of God, he fell asleep. "For now shall I sleep in the dust, and thou shalt seek me in the morning," &c., Job vii. 21. This is a mortal sleep.

(2.) For a dead or senseless state in sin, i. e., sin ruling and over-ruling in Men's hearts before conversion, "Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead and Christ shall give thee life," Eph. v. 14. This is a spiritual sleep.

(3.) For a drowsy and slothful frame of heart, which often attends the godly: "I sleep, but my heart waketh," Cant. v. 2.

Thou Sluggard, or slothful person. There is a three-fold Sluggard.

1. One that is idle, loving ease and bodily rest, neglecting his worldly concerns. "I went by the field of the slothful," &c., Prov. xxiv. 30.

2. One that is spiritually idle, wholly careless and negligent of his soul, and the great concerns thereof: "The Sluggard saith, there is a lion in the way."

3. One that hath been formerly awakened in a spiritual sense, and is fallen into a cold, drowsy, and negligent state again.

I shall run the parallel with respect had principally to that description Solomon gives of a Sluggard.

SIMILE.

I. A Sluggard is a person that makes excuses: "The slothful Man saith, there is a lion without, I shall be slain in the street," Prov. xxii. 13.

lions without, persecuting and devouring beasts of prey, that I fear will fly upon me in the street; and hence he resolves to keep himself in a whole skin.

II. A Sluggard, Solomon saith, is like a door that turneth upon its hinges: "As a door turneth upon its hinges; so doth the slothful man upon his bed," Prov. xxvi. 14.

sin, and is not taken off his old hinges; he is still in the state of fallen Man, not taken off of the old root, and transplanted into Christ.

III. The Sluggard is a Man of desires, but not of endeavours. The Sluggard desireth, and hath nothing; but the soul of the diligent shall be made fat, Prov. xiii. 4, compared with chap. xxi. 25. The desire of the Sluggard killeth him, because his hands refuse to work.

xxiii. 10. Desires without endeavours will deceive the soul, nay, eternally ruin and damn the soul. What avails a Man that is hungry, to wish for bread, when he never labours for it? The promise runs to the diligent and industrious person; "he shall be fed, but the Sluggard shall suffer hunger, and pine away," Prov. x. 4.

IV. The Sluggard neglects his vineyard, and lets his field run all

PARALLEL.

I. So the Sinner, or spiritual Sluggard, hath many excuses; if I should arise, saith he, and follow Christ, I shall suffer in my name, be reproached, suffer in my estate; nay, it may come to pass, saith he, that such as are religious indeed may be put to death. There are many Romish

II. So a Sinner, or a spiritual Sluggard, seems to move this way, and that way. He reads God's word, and hears sermons, and perhaps prays too, but still is where he was; he is not renewed in his inward Man, no change hath passed upon him, he is one that loveth his lusts, this and the other

III. So the wicked Man, or spiritual Sluggard, is full of desires; he, with Balaam, desires to die the death of the righteous, he desires to be saved, and hath many faint desires to be forgiven; he cries out sometimes, when conscience flies in his face, and rebukes him, God forgive me, the Lord help me, &c., but never strives with all his might against his sin, and the temptations of the devil. Hence his desires are said to slay him, Numb.

IV. So the sinner, or spiritual Sluggard, neglects his soul, and the souls of his family; over with nettles and weeds. "I went by the field of the slothful, by the vineyard of the man void of understanding, and lo, it was all grown over with thorns, and nettles had covered the face thereof, and the stone wall thereof was broken down," Prov. xxiv. 30, 31.

SIMILE.

V. The way of the Sluggard seems to be barred or hedged up, that he cannot go on, he cannot find the path. "The way of the slothful Man is a hedge of thorns: but the way of the righteous is plain," Prov. xv. 19.

fear of displeasing a father, or uncle, or some other relation, lest they should be left out of their will, or dispossessed of an estate; or a landlord, or some great Man or neighbour, by whom they may possibly have their livelihood, may be as a hedge or bar to obstruct them in their following of Christ, and by this means is the spiritual Sluggard discouraged.

VI. The Sluggard doth not enjoy the good that is in his hand: "The slothful Man roasteth not that which he took in hunting," Prov. xii. 27; that is, when he hath got food, he doth not prepare it, nor make it meet to be received, nor feed upon it.

God, they do not subject to it. They know what the threatening is, but fear it not, and know what the precept is, but obey it not; and know what the promise is, and yet believe and apply it not. And thus they roast not that which they have taken in hunting; they feed not upon the word; they are "forgetful hearers, and not doers of the word, and thereby deceive their own souls," Jam. i. 22.

VII. The Sluggard is one that loves not to encounter with difficulties; he cannot abide to think of enduring a little hardship. "The Sluggard will not plough by reason of the cold," Prov. xx. 4.

calls for him, or perhaps it is cold, or he is indisposed, &c. And perhaps he cannot pray at night, because it doth not agree with the flesh; the body is weary, and would fain go to bed. And he cannot go to church to hear the word of God, because the wind blows, or it rains; or he hath wearied himself the day before, and so cannot rise early enough; or it is a great way, and the ways are bad, &c., yet he knows in his conscience, that if there were but a good bargain to be bought, or some worldly advantage to be had though it were not above the value of half five pound, all these obstructions would be nothing. But perhaps some sluggards may get over these things; and yet if there lie other difficulties in the way, they cannot hold the plough of the Gospel; if there is a blast of persecution feared, he knows not how to encounter with that. And thus the Sluggard discourages himself.

VIII. The Sluggard, though he is so slothful, as to hide his hand in his bosom, and is grieved to bring it again to his mouth, yet he is wise in his own eyes. "The Sluggard is wiser in his own conceit, than seven Men can render though he provides for the body, and takes care what he and his shall have to eat, and what to put on; yet his soul, and the souls of such as are about him, are neglected; nothing but weeds and corruption grow there; sin and filthy lust predominate, pride, passion, covetousness, and every evil work, Jam. iii. 16.

PARALLEL.

V. So the sinner's way, is as it were, hedged up: for like as a hedge obstructs or hinders a Man sometimes in his way, that he cannot pass along; so the wicked by one temptation, obstruction, or another, are hindered from going on in the ways of God. Perhaps the snares that attend their trade, are as a hedge to them; or the

VI. So the spiritual Sluggard doth not enjoy the heavenly good things that seem to be in his hand: "Wherefore is there a price in the hand of a fool to get wisdom, seeing he hath no heart to it?" Prov. xvii. 16. Some men hunt, as it were, after knowledge; go from one place to another, will hear this worthy minister, and that worthy minister, and at last when they have found the venison, I mean, come to understand the will of

VII. The spiritual Sluggard loves his ease. If religion cannot be owned, professed, and stuck to, unless a Man offer some force, as it were, unto himself, and expose the flesh to some hardships, he presently grows weary of it. He cannot in the morning go to prayer, because his worldly business calls for him, or perhaps it is cold, or he is indisposed, &c. And perhaps he cannot pray at night, because it doth not agree with the flesh; the body is weary, and would fain go to bed. And he cannot go to church to hear the word of God, because the wind blows, or it rains; or he hath wearied himself the day before, and so cannot rise early enough; or it is a great way, and the ways are bad, &c., yet he knows in his conscience, that if there were but a good bargain to be bought, or some worldly advantage to be had though it were not above the value of half five pound, all these obstructions would be nothing. But perhaps some sluggards may get over these things; and yet if there lie other difficulties in the way, they cannot hold the plough of the Gospel; if there is a blast of persecution feared, he knows not how to encounter with that. And thus the Sluggard discourages himself.

VIII. So the spiritual Sluggard, though he is monstrous idle, prays as if he prayed not, and reads as if it were a burden to him, and hears the word with no delight, his heart is asleep, and perhaps his eyes too; yet he is very wise in his own conceit. Notwithstanding he is such a poor, carnal, worldly wretch, he hath high thoughts a reason," Prov. xxvi. 16.

METAPHOR.

tub shall stand upon its own bottom ; why do you trouble yourself with me ? Thus "every man is right in his own eyes, but the Lord pondereth the heart," Prov. xxi. 2.

IX. The Sluggard is a man that seems to desire but a little time and then he will awake : "Yet a little sleep, yet a little slumber, yet a little folding of the hands to sleep," &c. As much as if he should say, Let me alone yet a little, I will sleep but a little longer ; let me have a little more sleep, &c., age and death will come ; in his heart therefore he is resolved to continue in his evil and ungodly courses a little longer : "Yet a little sleep, yet a little slumber, yet a little folding of the hands to sleep." Pray observe, how sweet sleep seems to be to a sluggard ; so the ways of sin and vanity seem sweet to an unconverted man : and as hard labour is grievous to such a person ; so is godliness, I mean strict and real godliness, godliness in the power of it, to an unsanctified heart.

X. Lastly ; A Sluggard cannot abide to be disturbed : O let me lie, let me sleep ; what ado you make ! is the voice of a slothful man.

strive to rouse a sinner, are the unwelcomest people in the world to him. Repent ! repent ! what ado is here, saith the graceless soul, can you not let me alone ? pray do not trouble me. You know who sent away Paul, being unwilling to hear any more at that time.

PARALLEL.

of himself, and cries out, when reproved, I know as much as you ; mind your own matters ; every

IX. So the spiritual Sluggard seems also to desire but a little time to gratify his flesh, and please his sensual appetite, to walk in the ways of vanity, and sin against God. I will, saith an ungodly person, repent, or it is my purpose to reform my ways ; but let me alone a little longer, it is time enough yet. It is a great while to day, saith the Sluggard, when one comes to awake him early in the morning : so saith the sinner, it is a great while before Christ will come, or before old

X. A sinner, or spiritual Sluggard, cannot endure to be disturbed : the thoughts of death are to him like the hand-writing on the wall, Dan. v. : he loves not that conscience should call upon him to awake him, nor ministers, nor any friends he hath ; nay, such as would, or do

INFERENCES.

I. This shows what a sad and dangerous condition sinners are in ; they are not only asleep, but in a dead sleep, and know not how near eternal ruin they are.

II. We shall endeavour therefore to awaken the sinner out of his deep sleep.

1. Sinner, God calls aloud upon thee : "Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead. How long wilt thou sleep, O Sluggard ?"

2. God hath called not only loud, but long, upon you. Consider what danger you expose your souls unto ; you put an opportunity into the Devil's hands to destroy you. How easy is it for a weak enemy to destroy a mighty champion, when he is asleep ? Jael, a woman, soon destroyed Sisera when he was asleep.

3. May I not say, sinner, the Philistines are upon thee, and thy soul is in danger of being made a prey for ever.

4. Many ways hath God used to awaken thee : he hath employed his ministers, he hath set conscience on work, he hath brought forth many dreadful judgments, and all to awaken thee ; and shall all means fail and be insufficient ?

5. Thou losest many choice blessings by lying thus asleep in thy sin.

6. There is grace offered you, pardon offered you, peace offered you ; and will not this stir you up ? Nay, more than all, Christ is offered you, heaven offered you, a kingdom and crown of endless glory is offered you : soul, rouse up, and look about, consider the opportunity that is now in your hands ; will not life and light, pardon and peace, God and Christ, heaven and happiness, do you much good ?

7. It is harvest-time. "Go to the ant, thou Sluggard, consider her ways, and be wise. She provideth her meat in the summer, and gathereth her food in the harvest," Prov. vi. 6—8, and shall such a small and contemptible animal be wiser than you ?

8. The harvest will soon be gone, the day of grace be over, and then it will be too late. "The harvest is past, the summer ended, and we are not saved," Jer. viii. 20.

9. If you will not sow now because it is cold, you are like to beg in harvest, and have nothing, viz., at the end of the world : and then you will say, "Lord, Lord, open unto us ; and he will say, verily, verily, I know you not, depart from me ye workers of iniquity,"

10. Let me tell thee, thou art just ready to drop into hell, thou sleepest in a dangerous place; awake, sinner, or thou art damned! If thy house were all on fire, and thy neighbours should not cry out to thee to save thyself, thou wouldst conclude they were without all bowels of humanity: Sinner, this is thy condition, thy soul is on a flame; see what sin, that evil spark, hath done; I can do no less than cry out, fire, fire; wilt thou sleep, and be burnt for ever? The Lord awaken thee.

III. Let saints bless God they are awakened out of their sleepy state.

IV. Let not Satan, this world, nor any other enemy lull you asleep again. Let us not sleep, as do others. Christians are subject to fall into a spiritual drowsiness; see Matt. xxv. 1—7. O cry therefore with David, "Lord, open thou mine eyes, lest I sleep the sleep of death."

Quest. Some may say, from whence doth it arise, that the saints are so subject to be overtaken with spiritual drowsiness?

Ans. 1. From the weakness and dulness of the flesh: "The Spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak."

2. By being slothful, negligent, and out of employment, when we grow indifferent and careless, and neglect our work, neglect prayer, reading and hearing God's word, no marvel if we soon fall asleep: "Slothfulness casteth into a deep sleep," Prov. xix. 15.

3. By being amongst sleepy folks: this is apt to make a wakeful person in a little time drowsy, and subject to nod too; a sleepy family, a sleepy church, a sleepy ministry, usually have bad effects upon this account upon a spiritual Christian, therefore prize a soul-awakening ministry.

4. By means of long watching," Whilst the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept."

5. A black, dark, and gloomy day is subject to cause one to grow drowsy, as most men can experience.

6. By an apprehension it is a long while to day, time enough, saith the Sluggard, to arise. Men think of living long, and that it will be a great while before the Lord comes, &c.

WICKED MEN FOOLS.

"The Fool hath said in his heart, there is no God," Psal. xiv. 1.

"Yea, also, when he that is a Fool walketh by the way, his wisdom faileth him, and he saith to every one that he is a Fool," Eccles. x. 3.

"For wrath killeth the foolish man, and envy slayeth the silly one," Job v. 2.

"They were children of Fools, yea, children of base men, they were viler than the earth," Job xxx. 8.

"Thou Fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee," Luke xii. 20.

SIN is folly, great folly, and sinners are Fools; how often in the Proverbs are ungodly men, though accounted very worldly-wise, called Fools, simple ones, men of no understanding?

SIMILE.

I. A Fool is one that knows not what is good, what is best for him; he is a man of no understanding.

plenty of corn and wine. They esteem gold and silver, and other outward good things, before pardon, peace of conscience, and the favour of God, and are therefore Fools.

II. A Fool or idiot will hurt, wrong, or abuse himself. Perhaps you have heard of the gentleman's Fool, who happened to be in company with a carpenter, and the carpenter making himself merry

PARALLEL.

I. So wicked men know not what is good and right in itself; they know not what is good for themselves, they are men of no understanding; they cry, "Who will show us any good?" Psal. iv. 6. That is, saith Mr. Caryl, any good cheer,

II. Wicked men hurt themselves: nothing wrongs or wounds a man more than sin, hence called a dart, sting, &c. Yet so void are all ungodly men of understanding, that they consent to sin, yield to sin, run, as it were, this spear into their own bowels, wound themselves to the very with him, hid his hat: but it so fell out, as the matter is related, the carpenter some time after chanced to fall asleep with his head upon a block, which the Fool observing, he took an ax, and chopped off his head, and hid it amongst the chips, and then went laughing away; but being asked, wherefore he laughed? O, saith he, I have cut off the carpenter's head, and have hid it amongst the chips; and I wonder how he will do to find it when he awakes. But for this he was committed to prison, and when he was brought to his trial, the judge was informed that he was a natural Fool; but that he might be convinced it was true, he ordered a knife to be given to him, and accordingly it was; then said the judge to the poor idiot, cut yourself with that knife; and he, poor soul! did so immediately: by which the judge knew he was indeed a Fool, and so acquitted him.

SIMILE.

III. Is not that man a Fool, who will harbour a thief in his house? and though he be told of it, and that he is in danger of losing all his goods, and having his throat cut by him, he being a bloody murderer, yet laughs at it, and loves his enemy, and hugs him in his bosom, and resolves to eat and drink with him, and lodge him in his chiefest room: and yet is informed this thief never spared any man that showed him favour.

IV. Is not that man a Fool, that striveth with one that is infinitely stronger than himself? or thinks a thorn hedge can stand before a consuming fire? or supposes a potsherd can prevail against the potter?

his Maker: let the potsherd strive with the pot-sherds of the earth," Isa. xlv. 9. Do you not see this day, how man, sorry man, sets himself against God! they are resolved to see what they can do, they will not yet lay down the eudgels; they set their wisdom against God's wisdom, and try if they can counter-work him in the ways of his providences. Now, what a folly is this! God is as a consuming fire, and man is as stubble fully dry. See what Jehovah himself saith upon this account: "Who would set the briers and thorns against him in battle? I would go through them, I would burn them together," Isa. xxvii. 4. Now is not he that takes up arms against such an enemy, that commands heaven and earth, a Fool? he whom all the forces of earth and hell are not able to withstand; who at a word of his mouth makes frogs in-heart, and yet say, are not we in sport? can there be any greater folly, or a more palpable sign of a Fool, than for a man to whip, lash, scourge, and do thus unto himself? when Satan tempts men to sin, he doth, as it were, put a knife into their hands, and then bids them cut and slash themselves with it; and yet no sooner doth Satan thus tempt and entice them, but they presently consent to him, until they have wounded themselves from the crown of their heads, to the soles of their feet. What man but a Fool would run into the hornet's nests? or after this lamentable manner wound himself? sinners are such Fools, that they play with the asp, and delight to be at the mouth of the cockatrice' den. Sin in the holy scriptures is compared to both these cruel serpents; and hence the poison of asps is said to be under their tongues, Psal. cxi. 3, Rom. iii. 13. Who but Fools or mad men, will sport and play with such venomous serpents, or drink down deadly poison, when told again and again what it is, and what the effects of it will be, and yet they will do it. "Look not upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth its colour in the cup, when it moveth itself aright," Prov. xxiii. 31, 32. That is, whatever allurements there are to sin, take heed of it: "At last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder."

PARALLEL.

III. Wicked Men harbour sin, and deceitful lusts in their souls, which is the bloodiest thief and murderer that ever was; that spares none, nor ever did, who entertained it, or took delight therein. It hath slain and utterly undone thousands, and tens of thousands, yea, many millions: yet they hug this cursed traitor, and let him lodge in their hearts, and lie in their bosoms, and show him all the favour and kindness imaginable; and do they not from hence appear to be the greatest Fools in nature?

IV. Wicked men strive with the great God and do they not in this show themselves to be Fools? have they an arm like God? can they thunder with a voice like him? yet they continually resist him, and fight against him, Job xl. 9. They that go on in their evil ways, make war with the Almighty, and dread-Sovereign of heaven and earth. "Woe unto him that striveth with vade Pharaoh, and stars to fight against Sisera; who makes the hills and mountains quake and tremble before him, &c. "He is wise in heart, and mighty in strength; who ever hardened their heart against him, and prospered?" Job ix. 4.

SIMILE.

V. Is not he a Fool that hath not wisdom enough to direct himself? but then what will you say of him that will not follow the counsel and direction of the wise? though he is told, the way that he is in will bring him into a lion's den; or if he step one step further, he will fall into a furnace of fire: yet resolveth to go on, notwithstanding he confesseth he hath no ground to question the truth of that, which is in faithfulness told him.

tively, "Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish:" Luke xiii. 5. "And that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God; neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, &c., nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners," 1 Cor. vi. 9, 10. And now though they know they are guilty of some of these, or the like sins, yet they resolve to live in them, and therefore are Fools.

VI. Is not he a Fool, that is not able to judge of the nature of things, or of times, or occasions, and from hence is angry with every thing that suits not with his nature, or foolish humour? he will be angry with the sun, if it shine hotter than he would have it, and with the winds, if they blow harder than he would have them; he likes not the winter, nor would have it ever rain.

the way to it; he would not be naked, and yet will put on no clothes, &c., and therefore a Fool. To vex and be angry at the troubles that fall upon us, or at the hand of God which sends them, is a high point of folly.

VII. A Fool will take brass counters for gold, and be pleased with bugles more than with diamonds. When an heir, saith Mr. Caryl,* is impeaded for an idiot, the judge commands an apple, or a counter, with a piece of gold to be set before him, to try which he will take the apple, or the counter, and leave the gold, he is then cast for a Fool, and unable to manage his estate; for he knows not the value of things, or how to make a true election.

Creator; they labour more for the present good of their bodies, than for the eternal good of their souls, which are ten thousand times of greater worth: and do not these things demonstrate fully that they are Fools?

PARALLEL.

V. Wicked Men have not wisdom enough to direct themselves; but that which adds to their folly is this, they will not take the counsel of the wise God, nor the direction of his faithful ministers. Though they are told day by day, that if they proceed and go on in the ways they are in, viz., swear, lie, whore, be drunk, &c., they must perish, and be damned for ever; and that they know not, but the next time they commit any of those sins, they may fall into the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone: yet they will go on, and continue in their sins, contemning all advice and counsel, though they have not the least ground to question the truth of what is declared to them, since the word of God saith possibly, likewise perish:" Luke xiii. 5. "And that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God; neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, &c., nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners," 1 Cor. vi. 9, 10. And now though they know they are guilty of some of these, or the like sins, yet they resolve to live in them, and therefore are Fools.

VI. Wicked Men are such Fools that they know not the nature of things, times, nor occasions. He is offended with those ways of God that cross his sinful appetite; he would fain have God yield to him, and order things that suit his filthy lusts. If the word forbid all sin, and would, if it might kindle upon his heart and conscience, burn up and destroy all his lusts; presently he cries out, it is too hot, and therefore strives to put it out. In a word, he would be saved in a way of sin, i. e., have his wounds healed, and yet the sting let alone in the flesh; he would be well, but take no physic; would go to heaven, but never walk in and yet will put on no clothes, &c., and therefore a Fool. To vex and be angry at the troubles that fall upon us, or at the hand of God which sends them, is a high point of folly.

VII. Wicked Men are thus foolish, and more; for when bugles and diamonds, counters and gold are set before them, they leave the diamonds and the gold, and please themselves with those toys and baubles; when, which is infinitely more sottish, heaven and hell, life and death, are set before them, they choose hell rather than heaven, and death rather than life; they take the mean, transitory, trifling things of this world, before the favour of God, the pardon of sin, a part in Jesus Christ, and an inheritance amongst the Saints in light; they prefer a moment's time of sinful ease and pleasure, before an eternity of joy and glory in heaven, they prefer the creature above the

* Caryl on Job, c. 5. p. 182.

SIMILE.

VIII. Is not he a Fool, that feeds on husks, gravel, and ashes, and yet thinks he feeds on the best food? He lives among swine, and feeds as they feed, and yet is contented?

like Nabal's, will die within them, or like a man that pines away for want of food: for alas! they have nothing else to support their spirits. And whilst they feed upon these things, they conclude they feed upon the best food, and enjoy the chiefest good; yet they never have a real taste of the love of God in Christ, nor do they know how good the Lord is, nor will they make trial, though they are invited to come and buy, and eat that which is good, and let their souls delight themselves in fatness. The prodigal would fain have filled his belly with husks that the swine eat, wicked men being intended by the swine in that place, but no man gave to him, Luke xv. 16.

IX. Is not he a fool, that thinks it is time enough to sow when he should reap? When he should gather in his harvest, he begins to sow his seed; or when he sows tares, thinks to reap wheat. That work, that would take up the whole time of his life, he thinks may be done on a death-bed, or in an hour or two at the end of his days: or who, having a long race to run, that requires all his strength, resolves to defer it until old, decrepid age?

X. A Fool delighteth to do mischief; or as Solomon saith, "It is as sport to a Fool to do mischief," Prov. x. 23. We daily see how mischievous idiots are; it is dangerous to let some of them at large, or to be in company with them, though others are more harmless.

How restless have the ungodly been in every age of the Church, to contrive mischief against their peaceable neighbours, especially the wicked Papists! What plots and sham-plots have they devised, to destroy the quiet and peace of this land, nay, to destroy the upright and godly people that dwell therein! They care not what mischief they do, so that they may undo and spoil those who hate their idolatrous Church. One while they study ways how to blow up the king and parliament; another while, burn our houses, and lay our famous city in ashes. And, as if this mischief were not enough, they have carried on a secret and devilish design to take away our religion and lives, and whatsoever is dear to us; and then to blind the unwary and credulous sort of people, invent sham-plots to cast all upon the innocent Protestants. But let them remember, in this they are but Fools; they have the mark and brand of Fools upon them, and their mischief shall fall upon their own heads. "He that seeketh mischief, it shall come upon him," Prov. xi. 27.

XI. Is not he a Fool, that labours for the wind, and thinks to feed on the wind, and pursues a shadow, and sets his heart upon that which is not?

labour for the wind, so likewise they are

PARALLEL.

VIII. Wicked Men are said in the holy scriptures to feed on husks, gravel, and ashes, by which is meant the pleasures, profits, and honours of this world; for what is it that they feed upon, or take delight in, but these things? Isa. xlv. 20. Take away their outward enjoyments, or the comforts of the world, and their hearts,

IX. Wicked Men think it is time enough to repent, when they have spent all their days in sin, and in serving the devil. When they should reap the harvest of a godly life, they think it is time enough to begin to sow to the Spirit, and convert to God. They sow to the flesh, and yet think to reap life everlasting; when nothing is more evident than this, viz., "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he reap;" therefore saith the apostle. "He that soweth to the flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit, shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting," Gal. vi. 7, 8. Shall foolish Men think to serve the devil all the best of their days, and yet hope that at last God will accept of their repentance?

X. Wicked Men are full of mischief. Hence saith David, "Gather not my soul with sinners, nor my life with bloody men; in whose hands is mischief," &c., Psal. xxvi. 9. "Draw me not away with the Wicked, and with the workers of iniquity, which speak peace to their neighbour, but mischief is in their hearts. Yea, he deviseth mischief upon his bed; he setteth himself in a way that is not good," Psal. xxviii. 3. Nothing more evident than this.

XI. Wicked Men are said to labour for the wind: riches are compared to the wind; and he that pursues after them, pursues after the wind: and what a Fool is he that doth thus! "What profit hath he saith Solomon, that hath laboured for the wind?" Eccles. v. 16. And as Men are said to labour to feed upon the wind: "Ephraim feedeth on wind, and followeth after the east wind," Hos. xii. 1, which, saith Mr. Burroughs, is a proverbial speech, to note the following after vain and unprofitable things; that is, to feed on the wind, when men please themselves in their own conceits, and in their own counsels and plots, &c., 1. When they promise to themselves great matters by ways of their own, and leave God's ways and institutions, they may be said to feed on the wind; and the prophet rebuketh the ten tribes for this. 2. They feed on the wind, saith he, and so their hearts are puffed up in pride and carnal confidence. You know, according to the food a man or woman feedeth upon, so will their bodies be; so those that feed upon the wind, must needs have proud hearts, or be puffed up with pride and self-conceitedness. 3. Evil men, that live upon comforts that are carnal, and seek for the honour and applause of Men, they "Feed upon the wind," they seek to satisfy themselves with vanity, they strive to take hold of a shadow, and follow after the wind, things that cannot fill the soul, nor satisfy its desires; things that are uncertain, lost by one storm at sea, consumed by one spark of fire, or gone by a false oath, or wasted by the badness of trade, or by the extravagancy of an evil and foolish son, and therefore are Fools.

SIMILE.

PARALLEL.

XII. Is not he a Fool, that esteems the greatest evil above the greatest good?

Now is not sin the greatest evil, and God the greatest good? There is nothing bitterer than the one, nor nothing better than the other; and yet they choose sin, and refuse the good that is in the eternal God, and account Christ not worth the pleasure of one wicked lust, and therefore Fools.

XIII. Is not he a Fool, who to avoid a spark, leaps into the fire; or to save his hat loses his head?

than go to prison for Christ, they will go to hell for denying of him.

XII. Wicked Men set their hearts upon their base and cursed lusts, love their sins more than God and Christ. We read of some who are "Lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God," 2 Tim. iii. 4.

XIII. Wicked Men, to avoid a little trouble and affliction in this world, expose themselves to eternal torment, before they will deny themselves of their lusts, they will burn in hell for them; rather

INFERENCES.

- I. Lament over Wicked Men; Fools are to be pitied.
- II. Be patient, and thou wilt see what will become of these Fools.
- III. It shows what abundance of folly and Fools there are in the world.
- IV. It shows us how strangely ungodly Men, worldly wise Men are deceived in themselves.

V. It shows what true wisdom is: "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom, and to depart from evil is understanding;" Job xxviii. 28, and in another place it is said, "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom, and a good understanding have all they that do to his commandments," Psal. cxi. 10.

VI. Let it caution thee to take heed lest thou art a Fool: the characters of such an one, as given by wise Solomon, take as followeth, (1.) He will be meddling. (2.) One that is, as you have heard, mischievous, Prov. x. 23. (3.) One that many afflictions and stripes will not work upon nor humble. (4.) One whose sin cleaves to him, Prov. xxvii. 22. (5.) One that is full of words, Eccles. x. 14. (6.) One that will utter all his mind, Prov. xxix. 11; speaks that which he should conceal. (7.) One that prosperity destroys, Prov. i. 32. (8.) One that is slothful, Eccles. iv. 5. (9.) One that trusteth in his own heart, Prov. xxviii. 26. (10.) One that holdeth it folly to depart from evil, Prov. xiii. 19.

WICKED MEN COMPARED TO PAINTED SEPULCHRES.

"Woe unto you Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, for ye are like unto whited Sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful without, but within full of dead men's bones, and all uncleanness," Matt. xxiii. 27.

THEY are principally hypocrites which our Saviour resembles to whited Sepulchres; and how fitly they may be compared thereunto, is showed in the following parallel.

SIMILE.

I. A painted Sepulchre appears as the text saith, beautiful without.

II. Sepulchres, though they appear beautiful without, yet they are very loathsome within.

horrid and abominable lust, which makes them as loathsome in the sight of God, as a stinking Sepulchre is to us. "A wicked man," (saith Solomon) "is loathsome," Prov. xiii. 5.

III. Those that make and beautify a Sepulchre, do it that its inward filth and pollution may not easily appear, or offend those that behold it; much pains, cost, and curiosity is bestowed upon the outside of it, whereas men matter not how filthy they are within.

IV. Though a Sepulchre appears never so beautiful without, yet men know it is loathsome within.

PARALLEL.

I. So vile hypocrites appear glorious and beautiful to men, as if they were real saints; they seem very devout in appearance and outward show, to those that only behold their outside, it is God only that sees the heart.

II. So hypocrites, though they may appear holy and religious men, or to the outward eye, yet are within vile and ungodly, full of pride, vain-glory, envy, malice, covetousness, and every

III. So the vile hypocrites, in all their outward shows, zeal, religion, and seeming piety, do it to hide their cursed ends, abominable lusts, and wickedness; for did they appear outwardly to all men what they are inwardly, they would be loathsome to all that fear God. They bestow much pains and cost, and show their skill and cunning, to carry it religiously and warily to men, whereas they take little or no care how filthy they are inwardly.

IV. So though hypocrites appear never so much like saints to the eyes of men; yet God knows and sees they are polluted and vile wretches inwardly.

INFERENCES.

I. This shows what the abominable nature of sin is; it is here compared to a dead, putrified, and stinking carcase; what is more loathsome?

II. It shows also the filthy, unclean, and abominable state of painted hypocrites, &c.,

WICKED MEN COMPARED TO SWINE.

"Neither cast your pearls before Swine," Matt. vii. 6.

"The dog is turned to his vomit again, and the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire," 2 Pet. ii. 22.

SOME sort of Wicked Men are more especially in these scriptures compared to hogs or Swine; we shall in the following parallels show who they are, and how fitly they may be resembled to them.

METAPHOR.

I. Swine love to be in the Mud, they will wallow in filth and miry places, which Sheep, and divers other creatures strive as much as they can to avoid. This Beast, saith Gesner, is a most impure and unclean beast, and its nature is to delight to wallow in most filthy and noisome places.

II. The Hog or Swine is a dull, stupid, and senseless creature, not like the Hart, and divers animals that might be named.

III. Swine are craving and very

PARALLEL.

I. So wicked men love their brutish lusts, and daily wallow in the mud and mire of filth, and the abominable pollutions of sin and uncleanness, until they become defiled all over, from the head to the foot. Such men and women, who live in uncleanness, drunkenness, and other beastly sins, may fitly be compared to Swine; for it is as pleasant to them to riot in the day-time, and tumble as it were in the mud of wickedness, as it is to a Swine to wallow in the mire.

II. So are wicked men; they are, like this dull and sottish brute, slow of heart, and hard to believe; they are men of no spiritual understanding.

III. Some wicked men are just like Swine in greedy creatures. They are so greedy, saith Dr. Frantizus, that they have no measure in eating; and hence grow so fat, that sometimes they are hardly able to go; nay, they will eat until they burst themselves.

METAPHOR.

epicures, that they are naturally like the Swine, who are not only gluttonous, but will drink until they are quite drunk; and hence we commonly call a sottish drunkard, a drunken Swine.

IV. Swine, as they are greedy and unsatisfied creatures, so they are commonly fed for the slaughter.

V. Swine are a mischievous sort of creatures. They will not only root up gardens and vineyards, and pleasant meadows, where they can get in, but will destroy chickens, and other harmless creatures also, and eat them up, and tear clothes, and other things in pieces, if they be not looked after, and kept up in their styes; nay, some of them will bite and devour men, if they look not to themselves.

VI. Swine are of no use or service, saith Dr. Frantizus, to any one while they live; but when they are killed, they yield the owner some profit.

when the hog is dead, then cometh profit by him. So by the death of the wicked, some profit may come to some of his poor relations; nay, many times by the death of some wicked rulers, much good comes to the Church of God in general.

VII. The hog is continually grunting all the while he is at his trough, eating in fear, as it were, lest any should take it away from him.

VIII. The hog, though he should be washed, yet in a little time he will turn again to his wallowing in the mire, and become as filthy as ever he was.

he will at last turn again to his former course, and be as vile and wicked as ever he was; nay, oftentimes much worse, as our Saviour intimates by the unclean spirit's going out of a man, &c., Matt. xii. 43. And in him is that word made good, "The sow that was washed, is turned to her wallowing in the mire again."

IX. A Swine cries out exceedingly, or makes a great noise, when he is taken hold of, and had away to be killed.

PARALLEL.

this respect: they are so greedy and covetous, that they are never satisfied. When they have got their hundreds, nay, it may be their thousands by the year, yet still they pursue the world, as if they had their bread to get, and were not worth a groat, and thus growing fat, Jeshurun like, they forget God. "But Jeshurun waxed fat, and kicked," Deut. xxxii. 15. Some there be also, who are such the Swine, who are not only gluttonous, but will drink until they are quite drunk; and hence we commonly call a sottish drunkard, a drunken Swine.

IV. So the wicked, who flourish in this life, and feed in their filthy styes of sensual lusts, are let alone in their sins, being fatted for the day of slaughter, Jer. xii. 3.

V. So some Wicked Men are very mischievous; if they can but get loose, or break into God's garden, they will root it up, and spoil those precious flowers and plants which he hath set therein. How often have they eaten up God's children, tearing them in pieces, like wanton and mischievous Swine, caring not what hurt they do. "Have all the workers of iniquity no knowledge, who eat up my people as they eat bread, and call not upon the Lord?" Psal. xiv. 4. No Swine like the Romish Swine upon this account, who, like devouring locusts, strive to eat up every green thing, Rev. ix. It is not to be imagined what hurt these wild-boars have done to God's vineyard; but blessed be God, who puts a hook in their noses.

VI. So it is with some covetous men, who never do any good with what they have whilst they live. A wicked usurer, saith Bonaventure, is like a hog; for whilst he liveth, he is good and profitable for nothing; for he will ever be rooting up the earth, running through, and tearing of hedges, &c.; but profit by him. So by the death of the wicked, some relations; nay, many times by the death of some wicked rulers, much good comes to the Church of God in general.

VII. So a covetous man doth not enjoy what he hath without fear; he is afraid of every one, lest they should rob him, or lest by one means or another his worldly pelf should be wasted, or taken away.

VIII. So if an unregenerate man should, by the light of nature, or other helps that God is pleased to afford, escape many great pollutions, and reform in many things, and seem to be a true convert, and to be cleanly washed from his filthiness; yet for want of a thorough work of grace upon his heart, he will at last turn again to his former course, and be as vile and wicked as ever he was; nay, oftentimes much worse, as our Saviour intimates by the unclean spirit's going out of a man, &c., Matt. xii. 43. And in him is that word made good, "The sow that was washed, is turned to her wallowing in the mire again."

IX. So wicked men, when God takes hold of them by sickness, and they come to have apprehensions of death upon them, they cry out, unless their consciences are asleep, or seared, being afraid of death and hell.

METAPHOR.

X. The wild-boar is of a more stubborn and mischievous nature, and commonly doth more hurt, being very strong, than any other Swine. Naturalists tell us, that the wild-boar is almost as strong and cruel as a lion; and that he will often whet and sharpen his teeth, and run upon the huntsman.

XI. The Swine under the tree in a greedy manner eat up the acorns, but never look up to the tree or oak from whence they fall.

XII. Swine will refuse pearls for peas; if ye cast pearls before them, they will tread them under their feet.

them, and they will tread it under their feet; they will cast that at their heels, which they should apply to their hearts, and revile you, if they do not tear and rend you into the bargain, Matt. vii. 6.

METAPHOR.

I. Swine were created such, they were Swine from the beginning.

II. Swine retain their own nature, and it is impossible for them to cease being Swine.

PARALLEL.

X. So antichrist, who may be fitly compared to a wild-boar, I mean his unholiness, that first-born of Satan, is and hath been more mischievous than any other of the herd; he having got a great degree of power, which he hath from time to time exercised against God's people, to the wasting and spoiling of his spiritual vine and vineyard: "The boar out of the wood doth waste it, and the wild beast out of the field doth devour it," Psal. lxxx. 13.

XI. So wicked and graceless men, though they enjoy all this world's good, never look up in a due manner to God, who is the tree of life, and is the Author and giver of it.

XII. So wicked men will refuse grace for gold; give them but this world, and let who will take the pearl of great price, the love and favour of God. Give them counsel to leave their sins, or cast the pearl of good instruction before

DISPARITY.

I. Man was created holy and upright at first, this Swinish and brutish nature came in by the fall.

II. But wicked men may be changed, and become gracious; it is possible for them to become sheep and lambs of Jesus Christ, so as to hate that which they once loved. Grace, when infused into the soul, makes a real and wonderful change.

INFERENCES.

I. This shows the brutish and base nature of sinful man; what is more contemptible in our eyes than a Swine?

II. It shows what a vast difference there is between a true converted soul, and a brutish sinner; God esteems of the one as of his choicest treasure, but ungodly men are mere Swine and brutish creatures in his sight.

WICKED MEN DEBTORS.

"Agree with thine adversary quickly, whilst thou art in the way with him; lest at any time the adversary deliver thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and thou be cast into prison. Verily, I say unto thee, thou shalt by no means come out thence, till thou hast paid the uttermost farthing," Matt. v. 25, 26.

"And when he had begun to reckon, one was brought unto him, which owed him ten thousand talents," Matt. xviii. 24.

In both these places sin is called a Debt, and the sinner a Debtor: the reason of which is showed under the head of metaphors concerning sin, where sin is compared to a Debt; unto which we refer you.

METAPHOR.

I. A Debtor is one that oweth money, duty, &c., to his neighbour; also one that is a trespasser, an offender, or guilty per-

PARALLEL.

I. Man oweth all that he is, hath, or can do, unto God; he having received his very being, and all other good things that he enjoys, from God, as so many talents lent him, which son. A man may be a Debtor by office, Gal. v. 3; by duty, Rom. viii. 12; by the law of charity, Rom. xv. 27; by trespassing or offending, whether God or man, Matt. vi. 12.

METAPHOR.

II. An evil Debtor is unwilling to be called to an account; nothing is worse to him, than to hear the news, "Give an account of thy stewardship." Hence it is said, "One was brought that owed ten thousand talents;" Matt. xviii. 24, as if it were by force; he was haled before his master to reckon with him.

spoken against your godly neighbours, and of all the wrongs and injuries you have done them; give an account of all those talents that were lent you; what improvement have you made of your knowledge and parts, your seasons and Sabbaths, and of those many years you have had in the world? This, I say, is grievous to Wicked Men to think upon. "They shall be brought forth in the day of wrath," Job xxi. 30, they will not come willingly, but shall therefore be as it were haled before the Judge of heaven and earth.

III. Ill Debtors are attended with shame. Ambrose speaketh of some, who for the shame and distress thereof, have made away with themselves, fearing more opprobrium vitæ, than mortis periculum, the reproach of life, than the punishment of death.

IV. Some great and ill Debtors have many shifts and delays to put off their creditors; it is a common custom amongst men far in Debt, to contrive ways to excuse themselves, and make vain apologies, and all to shift and put off farther trouble.

trifling delays and excuses, and repent not of their evil deeds, nor go to God through the mediation of Jesus Christ for pardon and forgiveness.

V. Some Debtors hate their creditors; leve æs alienum debitore facit grave inimicum, saith Burges, a little money borrowed makes a Man Debtor, but a great deal an enemy; so the more they owe, the more they hate. Nay, Aristotle saith, Debtors wish their creditors to have no being, wish they were dead, so that they might thereby be freed from their Debts.

VI. Some Debtors are so far in Debt, that they owe much more than they are worth, or are able to pay, or make a compensation for.

is against Man is compared to an hundred pence, but that which is against God to ten thousand talents. "And when he had begun to reckon, one was brought unto him which he must be accountable to God for in the great day, &c., Matt. xxv. 19. Man is a trespasser, an offender, or a guilty person, having broken the law, the penalty of which is eternal death; so that as a traitor, or flagitious person, by his heinous crimes he is become a Debtor to everlasting punishment.

PARALLEL.

II. So wicked Men do not love to think upon the day of judgment, care not to hear of those large bills and hand-writings that are against them. How grievous will that voice from heaven be to ungodly men, "Give an account of your stewardship," Luke xvi. 2. "Arise ye dead, and come to judgment!" Give an account of all the oaths you have sworn, the lies you have told, the times you have been drunk, the days of grace you have neglected; give an account of all the hard and reproachful words you have

III. Sinners are such vile Debtors, that they are attended with great shame, and therefore Adam-like, hide their sins, do not love, nay, they are ashamed any should know how black and notorious in wickedness they are: they have got many ways to cover their iniquity.

IV. So sinners have many ways to excuse themselves: have you not heard some speaking to this purpose. I was drawn in before I was aware; I had not done such or such a thing, had it not been for such or such an one; but all are guilty of human infirmities, I shall do better; when God gives me more grace, I intend to reform: and thus they put off God and conscience by

V. Wicked men hate God, they are often set out in scripture as haters of him, because they fear him as an angry Judge, who will severely demand satisfaction to the last farthing; they care not whether there were any God or no, to call them to an account for all their wickedness which they daily commit against him; hence the apostle saith, "The carnal mind is enmity against God," Rom. viii. 7; nay, and the Lord positively saith of the wicked, that "their soul abhorred him," Zech. xi. 8.

VI. Sinners are so far in Debt to God, that they are not able to make him satisfaction, they owe ten thousand talents, and have not one farthing to pay: the aggravation of sin lieth in this, viz., that it is against God; therefore that offence that owed him ten thousand talents. And because he had nothing to pay, his lord commanded him to be sold, and his wife, and children, and all that he had, and the debt to be paid. The servant therefore fell down, and worshipped him, saying, lord refrain thine anger towards me and I will pay thee all. Then the Lord of that servant had compassion, and loosed him, and forgave him the debt. But the same servant went out, and found one of his fellow-servants which owed him an hundred pence, and he laid his hands upon him, and took him by the throat, saying, pay me that thou owest," &c., Matt. xviii. 24—28.

METAPHOR.

VII. An ill Debtor, that is very far in debt, does not love to see nor meet his creditor, he will go some bye-way, or go much about, rather than come near him, or meet with him.

As in the case of Felix, who, when he found that God had met with him by Paul's preaching, "Who reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come," it is said, "he trembled," Acts xxiv. 25. But mark his answer to the apostle; was he pleased with that doctrine? Alas no, he could not bear it; therefore cries out, "Go thy way for this time, when I have a convenient season, I will call for thee."

VIII. A Debtor that is far in debt, is oftentimes afraid of an arrest, and much perplexed and troubled in his mind; the thoughts of a prison being grievous to him.

METAPHOR.

I. A Debtor among Men, upon the non-payment of his debts, is exposed but to external punishment, suppose it should be the highest punishment that we read of in scripture or history; we read under the law they were bound to sell their children, yea, themselves to become slaves or bondmen; it was a sore punishment to have children sold for parent's debts, Exod. xxi. 7, 2 Kings iv. 1. I have read that Valentinian the emperor, would have such put to death that were not able to pay their debts; but especially that law mentioned by Mr. Burges,* was the severest of all, that provided that he who was in debt and could not pay it, the creditors might take him, and cause him to be cut into as many pieces as they pleased.

II. A Debtor among Men may escape an arrest, or fly from the hand of justice; or if he be taken, death will free him from all miseries, nay, if he dies in prison, his debt is paid.

PARALLEL.

VII. So sinners who are notoriously guilty before God, love not to meet with him, nor hear of him. If God comes near them by the reproofs of his word, or by the checks of conscience, or by the rebukes of the rod, how are they or by the rebukes of the rod, how are they startled? As in the case of Felix, who, when he found that God had met with him by Paul's preaching, "Who reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come," it is said, "he trembled," Acts xxiv. 25. But mark his answer to the apostle; was he pleased with that doctrine? Alas no, he could not bear it; therefore cries out, "Go thy way for this time, when I have a convenient season, I will call for thee."

VIII. So guilty sinners are afraid of the serjeant, death; if they perceive death is approaching, how troubled are they for fear of the prison of utter darkness? provided their consciences be awake. See Sin a Debt.

DISPARITY.

I. But the ungodly and guilty sinner is exposed to eternal punishment; such who obtain no forgiveness or pardon of sin, through the atonement of the cross, of satisfaction made by Jesus Christ, shall be cast into the lake of fire and brimstone; it is not wife nor children, father or brother can make a compensation, or keep them from the place of punishment; "They shall be tormented day and night; they shall drink of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture, into the cup of his indignation, and they shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb. And the smoke of their torment ascended up for ever and ever; they have no rest day nor night," &c., Rev. xiv. 10, 11. "They shall be cast into a furnace of fire, there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth," Matt. xiii. 50.

II. But it is impossible for sinners to escape the wrath of God, who live and die in their sins, death will come, there is no escaping the hands of this grim serjeant; and when they are thrown into hell, that strong and fearful prison, they shall by no means come out thence till they have paid the uttermost farthing.

* Burges on Justification, p. 130.

INFERENCES.

I. How may this humble sinful mortals? What little cause have any of the children of men to boast of their riches? Alas! they are, whether they know it or not, exceedingly in debt, they are worth nothing; and whether they believe it or not, death will convince them of it.

II. It may stir up the hearts of the godly to pity sinners, when you see poor prisoners that are in prison for debt, crying out of the grates, bread, bread for the Lord's sake! how ready are you to pity them; but how more doleful is that cry of the rich glutton in hell for a drop of water to cool his tongue, and none is given to him?

III. It speaks much comfort to believers, who have through that redemption that is in Christ, obtained the forgiveness of all their debts: Oh! what a blessing, these things being considered, is pardon of sin! Let thy soul, with David, "Bless the Lord, and all that is within thee, praise his holy name, who forgiveth all thine iniquities, who healeth all thy diseases, who hath freed thee from thy sins and the punishment of them," Psal. ciii. 1, 2, 3.

WICKED MEN THE ROD OF GOD.

"O Assyrian, the Rod of mine anger," Isa. x. 15.

The ungodly, and bloody persecutors of the Lord's people, are called his hand, his rod, and his sword. "Deliver my soul from the wicked, which is thy sword; from men of the world, which are thy hand, O Lord," Psal. xvii. 13, 14.

PARALLELS.

I. A Man smites such as have offended him with his hand, and with a Rod or sword. So God makes use of the wicked, as an instrument to chastise his children, when they transgress his law, and grievously sin against him.

II. As a hand or Rod lays on harder or softer blows, according to the pleasure and purpose of him that strikes. So God lets the wicked out upon his own people, to oppress and afflict them as he sees good, either in a milder or more severe manner.

III. When a father hath chastised his children sufficiently, and thoroughly humbled them; he sometimes casteth the Rod into the fire. So when God hath by the wicked, who are his Rod, thoroughly humbled his people, and taken away their sin, he will throw the wicked, their bloody persecutors, into the fire of his wrath. "For yet a very little while, and the indignation shall cease, and mine anger in their destruction," Isa. x. 25.

WICKED MEN COMPARED TO TARES.

"The Tares are the children of the wicked one," Matt. xiii. 38.

Tares Ζιζανία, quasi, πρεζανιον, saith Varineus, quia amet triticum, illud ut umbra corpus sequitur, imitatus, et simul arescit, ac si esset de tritici genere: i. e., because it loveth the wheat, and imitates it, as the shadow imitateth the body, and groweth up with it, as if it were of the same kind with the wheat. It should not, says one,* be translated Tares, but evil seed. It is that which we call the deaf ears, that grow up with the good corn, and cannot be discerned till the harvest, and then it proves naught; for Tares and fitches are soon discerned and plucked up, "The enemy sowed Tares," Matt. xiii. 25, i. e., corrupted.

Ungodly Men compared to Tares. Tares, saith a noted writer, is a sort of grain that groweth in the eastern country; therefore those that are called Tares amongst us, I suppose, are not the Tares our Saviour alludes to.

* Leigh's Crit. Sacr.

METAPHOR.

I. Tares are a low and base sort of grain, of little worth or esteem in comparison of wheat, and some other grain.

II. If Tares are sown amongst wheat, it is done by the hand of an enemy, out of spite and malice, to the injury and loss of the owner of the field.

Tares spring, out of spite and malice to God himself, whose is the field, and also out of spite and malice to mankind.

III. Tares growing among wheat, do hurt and prejudice the wheat, hindering its growth and flourishing.

tents of Kedar!" Psal. cxx. 5. It is a hard matter to keep our garments clean, and no way to defile them, living in the midst of a wicked and ungodly generation. Who can touch pitch, and not be defiled therewith? The Israelites dwelling amongst the wicked natives of the land of Canaan, it is said, "learned their works, and served their gods," Psal. cvi. 35, 36.

IV. Tares, as Wilson observes, are so like wheat whilst they are in the blade, as hardly the one can be discerned from the other.

V. The man who had Tares sown among the wheat in his field whilst men slept, would not suffer his servants to pluck them up, lest some of the wheat should be plucked up with them, but let them grow together until harvest, and then commands the reapers to separate the one from the other, and the wheat to gather into his barn, but the Tares to cast into the fire; from whence it appears, that those Tares were good for nothing but fuel for the fire, &c.

end of the world, and the reapers are the angels. As therefore the Tares are gathered, and burnt in the fire; so shall it be in the end of the world: The Son of man shall send forth his angels, to gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them that do iniquity: and shall cast them into the furnace of fire; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth," Matt. xiii. 38—41.

PARALLEL.

I. So the children of the wicked one are a base and contemptible sort of people, in comparison of the children of God.

II. So the spiritual or metaphorical Tares, viz. the children of Belial, that grow in the field of this world, were first sowed by the devil; he is that enemy who did it, i. e., he infused by his spirit, through the corruptness of mortals, that evil seed into their hearts, from whence these go to God himself, whose is the field, and also out of

III. So the ungodly, or children of the wicked one, dwelling with or among the saints, hurt and greatly prejudice them, hindering their growth in grace and godliness. Saith David, "Woe is me, that I sojourn in Mesech, that I dwell in the

IV. So hypocrites seem so like true and sincere Christians, that for a while the one can hardly be known from the other.

V. So the Almighty, though there be many hypocrites, heretics, and reprobates in the world, would not have magistrates or others to pluck them up, for their errors or heresy only, that is, destroy them, or take them away by corporal punishment and death, lest they pull up and destroy some of his precious saints with them, instead of those children of the evil one; but would have them live or grow together in the field of the world until the harvest, that is, the end of the world. "The field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom; but the Tares, the children of the wicked one. The enemy that sowed them is the devil, the harvest is the

INFERENCES.

I. This may put every Christian upon the search and examination of their hearts, lest instead of good wheat, they should at last prove evil Tares.

II. It also reproves those magistrates, who in a blind zeal persecute men for religion, and conscience sake, pretending they do it to destroy the Tares, viz., heretics, &c., whereas they know not but that those they persecute may be good and faithful Christians. Besides it is a work that belongs not to them; God would have both, the one sort may be very vile and imprudent heretics, schismatics, &c., to live together to the end of the world.

WICKED MEN COMPARED TO CHAFF.

"The ungodly are not so, but are like the Chaff which the wind driveth away," Psal. i. 4.
 "But he will burn up the Chaff with unquenchable fire," Matt. iii. 12.

Wicked Men are compared to Chaff.

SIMILE.

I. CHAFF, before it is separated from the wheat, cleaves close to it; and the wheat must be trod or threshed, before the one can be separated from the other.

II. Chaff is of little worth or value to the wheat: "What is the Chaff to the wheat?" Jer. xxiii. 28. It is a low, mean, and contemptible thing; one bushel of Wheat is worth many bushels of Chaff.

III. Chaff is light and airy; it is no ponderous thing, and therefore the wind carries it away with a blast.

persecution comes, it drives them away from the seeming zeal and religion they pretend to; and at last, the wind of God's wrath will drive them into the lowest hell, there to be burned with unquenchable fire.

PARALLEL.

I. So some wicked men, I mean hypocrites, seem to cleave close to the saints, and to be in perfect union or oneness with them: and the godly must be trod upon, or threshed with the flail of persecution, before they, as sacred wheat, can be separated from the Chaff, viz., counterfeit Christians.

II. So wicked Men and hypocrites are of little worth and value in the sight of God; he esteems one true Christian worth thousands and ten thousands of hypocrites: "I give Egypt for thy ransom, Ethiopia and Seba for thee. Since thou wert precious in my sight, thou hast been honourable," &c., Isa. xliii. 3.

III. So the Wicked, whatever show they make of religion and piety, they are light as Chaff: they are not weighty, nor ponderous; their lightness and levity is discovered by their words and behaviour; and when the blast and tempest of

INFERENCES.

THIS shows what a great difference there is between the godly and the ungodly: also what the woeful condition of hypocrites is, and what will be their end.

WICKED MEN COMPARED TO THORNS.

"They shall be pricks in your eyes, and Thorns in your sides," &c., Numb. xxxiii. 55.
 "But they shall be as snares and traps unto you, and scourges in your sides, and Thorns in your eyes," Josh. xxiii. 13.
 "As a lily among Thorns, Cant. ii. 2.
 "For whilst they are folden together as Thorns," &c., Nah. i. 10.

THORNS, as Glassius and others observe, in these places of holy scripture, signify wicked mischievous men, Numb. xxxiii. 55.

SIMILE.

I. Thorns came in with the curse, "Cursed is the ground for thy sake, Thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth unto thee," &c., Gen. iii. 17. Had not Adam sinned, we should not have been troubled with Thorns.

II. A Thorn is no tender tree, but contrariwise sturdy, hard, knotty, and full of knobs, and

PARALLEL.

I. So Wicked Men came in with the fall, and as the fruit of the curse. Had not Adam sinned, the world had never been troubled with these briers and thorns; but ever since the curse, for Adam's sin, the world has been full of these Thorns.

II. "So the Wicked, these sons of Belial, Belegmol, without yoke, that is, such as will not come under the yoke of obedience; or Bel pricks, dangerous to meddle, or have to do with.

SIMILE.

and stinging words and works, 2 Sam. xxiii. 6. What can he expect that meddles with a Thorn or brier, but to be scratched, pricked, and wounded in his so doing? So that Man that has to do with some Wicked Men, shall be scratched or pricked in his good name and estate, one way or other.

III. Thorns are trees of little worth, low and base things, hurtful to fields, gardens, and vineyards, &c.

as they are unprofitable, and little worth in themselves; so they are offensive and prejudicial to God's garden; they hinder the growth of the saints as much as in them lies, wounding the lily that groweth amongst them. See Lily among Thorns.

IV. Thorns nevertheless do serve sometimes to make a hedge to keep out wild beasts from breaking into a field or vineyard.

for, and sided in with the Church and people of God, and so proved as a wall of defence or hedge to them. Besides, God makes use of them sometimes as a hedge to stop his people in their evil courses, by suffering these sons of Belial to afflict them: "I will hedge up her way with Thorns," Hos. ii. 6.

V. Thorns and briars, when they are grown to any height, are oft-times by the owner cut down, and cast into the fire.

VI. Thorns and briars are not able to stand before a devouring and consuming fire.

stubble fully dry," Nah. i. 10. "Who would, saith God, set the briers and Thorns against me in battle? I would go through them, I would burn them together," Isa. xxvii. 4.

PARALLEL.

Gnalah, not ascending, because their males prospered not." Those Thorns, Wicked Men, are hard hearted, knotty conditioned, full of pricking and stinging words and works, 2 Sam. xxiii. 6. What can he expect that meddles with a Thorn or brier, but to be scratched, pricked, and wounded in his so doing? So that Man that has to do with some Wicked Men, shall be scratched or pricked in his good name and estate, one way or other.

III. So Wicked Men, are of little worth and value in God's sight; they are of a base spirit and principle, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, preferring earth above heaven: "The heart of the wicked is little worth," Prov. x. 20. And as they are unprofitable, and little worth in themselves; so they are offensive and prejudicial to God's garden; they hinder the growth of the saints as much as in them lies, wounding the lily that groweth amongst them. See Lily among Thorns.

IV. So some of these wicked ones God now and then makes use of to be a hedge to his people, to keep out a more bloody and cruel adversary: "The earth helped the woman," Rev. xii. 16. that is, Wicked Men, Men of the earth, stood up for, and sided in with the Church and people of God, and so proved as a wall of defence or hedge to them. Besides, God makes use of them sometimes as a hedge to stop his people in their evil courses, by suffering these sons of Belial to afflict them: "I will hedge up her way with Thorns," Hos. ii. 6.

V. So the Wicked and ungodly, when they are grown to a great height of wickedness, provoking God against themselves, are cut down and cast into hell, "That which beareth briars and thorns is near unto cursing, whose end is to be burnt," Heb. vi. 8.

VI. So the Wicked are not able to stand before the dreadful and angry God, "For while they be folded together as Thorns, and whilst they are drunken as drunkards, they shall be destroyed as stubble fully dry," Nah. i. 10. "Who would, saith God, set the briers and Thorns against me in battle? I would go through them, I would burn them together," Isa. xxvii. 4.

INFERENCES.

I. Is it not a strange and marvellous thing, that God's people are no more scratched and pricked with these troublesome Thorns, considering what a multitude of them are amongst us?

II. It may caution all true Christians, how they meddle with these pricking Thorns.

III. It shows the folly of the Wicked, who strive with the Almighty, and set themselves in battle against him who is a consuming fire, and they but Thorns and briars, or like stubble fully dry.

WICKED MEN COMPARED TO MOUNTAINS.

"Thou shalt thresh the Mountains, and beat them small, &c., Isa. xli. 15.

"Upon all high Mountains, that are lifted up," &c., Isa. ii. 14.

"Who art thou, O great Mountain?" &c., Zech. iv. 7.

PARALLELS.

I. MOUNTAINS are high and lifted up, and seem to have the pre-eminence: so the wicked princes and potentates of the earth are high in power, and seem to be lifted up in pride and arrogancy, and to have pre-eminence over the righteous.

II. Mountains are hard to be removed out of their places: so the wicked, having taken such root in sin, &c., it is very hard and difficult to remove them and make them become plain. This was, it is true, one great design of the ministry of John Baptist; "Every valley shall be filled, and every Mountain and hill shall be brought low," &c., Luke iii. 5. But this work is not done upon the spirits of Wicked Men, but by the mighty power of God.

III. Mountains and hills are commonly barren and unprofitable ground: so the Wicked, who are lifted up in pride and arrogancy, &c., are spiritually a barren, useless, and unprofitable sort of Men.

IV. Mountains were accounted places of defence, whither Men used to fly in time of danger, though in many times they failed them: so Men oft-times fly to the lofty enemies of God, oppressing, tyrannical powers of the earth, to secure themselves from approaching dangers; but in vain, alas, is salvation looked for from these Mountains and hills in the day of God's anger.

INFERENCES.

In this saints have cause to rejoice; God hath promised to throw down all the hills and Mountains of the earth; that are lifted up: "Who art thou, O great Mountain! Before Zerubbabel thou shalt become a plain," Zech. iv. 7.

WICKED MEN COMPARED TO THE TROUBLED SEA.

"But the Wicked are like the troubled Sea, &c., Isa. lvii. 20.

"The Sea is come up upon Babylon, with the multitude of the waves thereof," Chaldee, the king, with his numerous hosts, in plenty like the Sea, is come up against Babylon," &c., Jer. li. 42.

Note.—The Wicked are compared to the Troubled Sea, and to many waters, &c.

PARALLELS.

I. The Sea is a great convention, as one words it, or a multitude of waters; "The gathering together of the waters called He Seas," Gen. i. 10; so the Wicked are a multitude of people.

II. The Sea sometimes swells, roars, and rises very high, threatening the earth as if it would swallow it up immediately: so the mighty concourse of the wicked and tyrannical powers of the earth, many times swell in pride and arrogancy, and make a fearful noise, as if they would in a moment swallow up the Lord's people.

III. The Sea hath its bounds set by the Almighty: "He shall shut up the Sea with doors, &c., and hath said, Hitherto shalt thou come, and no further; and here shall thy proud waves be stayed," Job xxxviii. 8, 11. So the Lord sets bounds to the wrath and rage of the ungodly; no creatures can go further than God permits them. As he that made the Sea, can master it; so he can soon put a stop and curb to the proudest oppressor and persecutor in the world. Let Men be as angry as they will, let them be as stormy as the boisterous Seas; yet the Lord hath said, "Hitherto shall ye come, and no further." "He stilleth the noise of the Seas, the noise of the waves, and the tumults of the people," Psal. lxxv. 7. Nay, the devil himself is like a Sea shut up, he cannot do what he would, he hath bounds set him, &c.

IV. The Sea at God's command is still; "The wind and Seas obey him:" so with one word speaking, as it were, he can quiet the Wicked, and make them silent in darkness; he can make this Sea and frightful storm a calm, and cause the proud waves to be still, Psal. cvii. 29.

V. The Sea produces or brings forth many strange monsters: so the multitudes of the Wicked, this metaphorical Sea, hath brought forth many a vile and strange monster. See Dan. vii. 3, "And four great beasts came up from the Sea, diverse one from the other; and the first was like a lion, and had eagle's wings," &c. These four beasts signified the four monarchies of the earth: what a monster the fourth hath been, all the world hath had full experience of, that had great iron teeth, &c. What devils incarnate were many of the Roman emperors, particularly Nero, who ripped up the belly of his own mother! &c. And what a monster hath the little horn been, I mean the Papal power! What a mighty mass of innocent blood hath the beast and whore devoured! &c.

VI. The sea is very restless, it ebbs and flows, and seems to be continually troubled: so the ungodly are always restless in their spirits, like wicked Haman, they never cease plotting against the just. Though they have great power, riches, and honour, yet because God's Mordecais will not bow down their souls for them to go over, all seems as nothing to them; they have riches, much gold and silver, but not satisfied; they enjoy all the delights and pleasures the world can afford them, but yet are like the troubled Sea: Many times also their consciences sorely disquiet them. What rest soever they may have, yet certainly they are continually void of the true peace of God, and in this sense "There is no peace to the Wicked," &c., Isa. lvii. 21.

VII. The Sea continually casteth forth mire and dirt: so the ungodly never cease casting forth their abominable wickedness.

INFERENCES.

I. Let not the saints fear the ungodly: what though they swell and roar: God hath set bounds to them: "The wrath of man shall praise thee, and the remainder of wrath shalt thou restrain," Psal. lxxvi. 10. No more wrath of man shall be let out, no higher shall these Seas swell, than shall tend to the glory of God; the over-plus, that wrath that would indeed prove hurtful to the godly, and to the dishonour of the Almighty, the Lord will restrain.

II. Pray hard, that God would keep the doors and bars of these troublesome Seas fast, and prevent the danger. "I will yet for this be enquired of by the house of Israel to do it for them," Ezek. xxxvi. 37.

1. Pray, that God will keep the Sea of man's wrath within its limited bounds.

2. Pray, that God would not suffer Satan to break forth too furiously upon us. If God did not set bounds to him, no man could live quiet one hour.

3. Pray, that God would set bounds to the Sea of profaneness.

4. And also that he would set bounds, and drive back the Sea of error and false doctrine, &c.

III. This shows the woeful condition of ungodly men: they have no peace, true peace, whilst they live, and be sure shall have none at death. Peace is the portion only of the Lord's people: "Great peace have all they that love thy law," &c., Psal. cxix. 165. "My peace I give unto you," John xiv. 27.

WICKED MEN DEAD IN SIN.

"The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear shall live," John v. 25.

"And you hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and Sins," &c. Eph. ii. 1.

Unconverted men are Dead, spiritually Dead, they are as Dead men. Life is opposed to Death, which is either the privation of natural life, because of the separation of the soul from the body; or the privation of spiritual and heavenly life, because of the separation of the soul from God through Sin. And this is really true, in both respects, in a proper sense: yet we shall open the state of men Dead in Sin, by comparing this death with natural death, between which in some things there is a good parallel, and to which, in the judgment of divers worthy men, the Spirit of God doth allude, &c.

PARALLELS.

I. A Dead man, one that is really Dead, is under a total privation of life; there is no life in him: so man by sin is totally under the privation of the spiritual life of God. Now the life of God consisteth in a principle of grace, which is called a seed! "The seed," speaking of a man quickened, "remains in him," 1 John iii. 9. This seed, or divine principle, is unto the soul, as the soul is to the body: but there is no soul, or seed of grace, no principle of spiritual life in an unregenerate man; and therefore really and truly Dead in a spiritual sense, as the body is Dead when the soul is separated from it. If there be any true and real spiritual life in an unconverted man, how can he be said to be Dead? for where there is not a total privation of natural life, a man cannot be said to be Dead naturally.

II. Dead, "the Dead shall hear," &c. This imports, man was once alive, spiritually alive, considering the subject of whom our Saviour speaks. Man before his fall, or the entrance of sin, was alive; death was threatened upon Adam's eating of the forbidden fruit: "In the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." The deprivation of the spiritual life of the soul, as well as the life of the body, was in the sanction of that law, "Thou shalt die the death." What life soever Adam had before he fell he lost it by his transgression; and in that very day he eat, he suffered a deprivation of the light of God's countenance and spiritual life of God in his soul. He lost that supernatural power of acting towards God spiritually, or Image of God that was in him; so that it was impossible for him to live any more to God, until quickened by a new principle of spiritual life. And hence unregenerate men are said to be Dead, &c.

III. A man that is Dead cannot move, act, or speak; all natural motions utterly cease; that is the effect of death: So unconverted men have lost all spiritual vital acts, that is, all acts and duties of holy obedience, acceptable unto God. There is in them a total defect and want of power for any such acts whatsoever, or else they are not Dead, cannot be said to be Dead; for when the soul departs, it leaves the body incapable of any kind of activity. All the natural power the body had, by means of the soul's union with it, is gone, upon the separation of the one from the other: so death falling upon the soul, or suffering a privation of the image of God, or spiritual life it had, all its internal power to act or live to God is gone, "The carnal mind" being expressly said to be "enmity against God," Rom. viii. 7. "An evil tree cannot bring forth good fruit." In short, there is in all wicked men, a disability or impotency unto all spiritual things, to be performed in a spiritual manner; and that it is impossible for them to act and do in a way acceptable to God, till quickened by the Holy Ghost.

IV. A Dead man is an unlovely object to look on: for it is life that puts a beauty and glory upon the body: so an unregenerate man is an unlovely object. It is grace only, or that supernatural principle of spiritual life, that confers beauty upon the inward man, or renders the soul amiable in God's sight.

V. A Dead man is void of all sense, he sees not, feels not, hears not: if you cast fire in his face, it is all one to him; or if you run a sword into his heart, he will not complain; lay mountains of lead upon him, he feels them not, &c., so those who are Dead in Sin, are senseless souls. Though the anger of God is kindled against them, and his wrath burns never so hot, they regard it not: nay, though you throw as it were hell fire into their very faces, yet they fear it not; though there are upon them mountains of Sin, and horrid guilt, yet they feel them not.

VI. A Dead Man cannot be raised to life again, without the mighty power of God: so the Dead in Sin cannot be raised to life, without the mighty power of God's Spirit. Christ, who raised dead Lazarus out of the grave, must quicken such who are dead in Sins and trespasses. The Ephesians are said to "believe according to the working of God's mighty power, which he wrought in Christ, when he raised him from the dead," Eph i. 19, 20.

VII. A Dead man is loathsome, and fit for nothing but to be put under ground, or buried out of sight: so the wicked are loathsome in God's sight, and unless the sooner quickened, they will be good for nothing but to be cast into hell; some Wicked Men are fit to be buried, or thrown into that grave.

Object. It is by some objected, that there is a wide difference between death natural and spiritual: in death natural, the soul itself is utterly removed and taken away from the body, but in death spiritual it continues: A man is still, notwithstanding this spiritual death, endowed with an understanding, will, and affections, by which these men are enabled to perform their duties to God.

Ans. 1. In life spiritual, the soul is unto the principle of it, as the body is unto the soul in life natural: for in life natural, the soul is the quickening principle, and the body is the principle quickened; when the soul departs, it leaves the body with all its own natural properties, but utterly deprived of them which it had by virtue of its union with the soul: so in life spiritual, the soul is not, in and by its essential properties, the quickening principle of it, but it is the principle that is quickened: and when the quickening principle of spiritual life departs, it leaves the soul with all its natural properties entire as to their essence, though mortally corrupted, which is equivalent with death natural: but of all the power and abilities, which it had by virtue of its union with a quickening principle of spiritual life, it is deprived. And to deny there is such a quickening principle of life spiritual, super-added unto us by the grace of God, distinct and separate from the natural faculties of the soul, is upon the matter to renounce the whole Gospel; it is all one as to deny, that Adam was created in the image of God, which he lost; or that sinners are spiritually dead in sins and trespasses, and that we are renewed into the image of God by Jesus Christ.

2. Whatsoever the soul acts in spiritual things by its understanding, will, affections, &c. as deprived of, or not quickened by this principle of spiritual life, it doth it naturally, not spiritually, &c.

DISPARITY.

A Man naturally Dead is altogether incapable to make any opposition against the supernatural power of God, put forth in order to quicken him, or raise him to life, he can no way, directly or indirectly oppose it. But a Man who is dead, spiritually Dead in Sin, when God in a gracious way comes to use means to quicken him, or raise him to a state of life, he makes opposition, nay, and doth greatly resist and strive against the good motions of the Spirit, and working of God, in order to his vivification. So that the power of God is more manifestly seen in the quickening of one spiritually Dead, than in quickening one dead naturally.

INFERENCES.

I. From hence we may perceive the evil and destructive nature of Sin. It is spiritually the death and ruin of the soul, and will, without the infinite mercy of God, destroy it for ever.

II. It shows also particularly, what the nature of Adam's Sin was, and what it did incur upon his posterity, viz., not only natural death, but spiritual death likewise.

III. It sets forth the riches of God's grace in the second Adam, that quickening Spirit, in raising poor Dead souls to life again.

IV. Here is much comfort for all sincere Christians, who are raised from death to life by Christ, in that there is so great a difference between the state of Adam in innocency, and our standing in Christ, viz., the principle of life in Adam was wholly and entirely in himself. It was the effect of God's good will and power, it is true, but it was left to grow on no other root but what was in Man himself; it was wholly implanted in his nature, and therein did its spring lie. But in the life whereunto we are renewed by Christ Jesus, the fountain and principle of it is not in ourselves, but in him, as a common root or head. "He is our life." "Because I live, ye shall live also." He is the spring and fountain of it. He by covenant also undertook to maintain life in us; he doth renew and increase this life in us, so that it is impossible that we should spiritually die for ever.

V. A Man also from hence may easily perceive, whether he be made alive, or quickened by the Spirit or no. (1.) A Man that hath life in him, breathes. So he that is spiritually alive, breathes forth his soul in fervent desires to God. Prayer, as some have observed, being the breath of the new creature. Hence God, when he would convince Ananias that Saul was regenerated, said, "Behold, he prayeth." (2.) There is in him heat, spiritual heat and zeal God-ward. (3.) He hath his spiritual senses; he can see, feel, hear, &c. (4.) It is a full evidence a Man is alive, when he rises up, and walks. So a spiritual Man rises up, and walks in newness of life. (5.) A Man quickened hath his beauty restored again. So a Man spiritually quickened, hath the image of God restored; he is holy, heavenly, &c.

WICKED MEN BLIND.

"Can the Blind lead the Blind?" &c., Luke vi. 39.

"Thou Blind Pharisee," &c., Matt. xxiii. 26.

"Miserable, poor, and Blind," &c., Rev. iii. 17.

An unconverted Man, or Man in his natural state, is Blind.

PARALLELS.

I. Some Men are born Blind. All mankind spiritually may be said to be born Blind; for as they are under a privation of life, it follows they are Blind, that is, their understanding is darkened.

II. Some Men are Blind casually, either by age, or some accident. Adam before his fall, could see, originally Man's eye-sight was good, but sin hath put his eyes out.

III. Blind Men have not the comfortable benefit of the sun: so Wicked Men receive not the heavenly and sweet benefit of the Sun of Righteousness.

Though the sun shines never so bright, a Blind Man is never the better for it, unless his eyes were opened. So though the Gospel be preached never so powerfully, yet wicked Men see not, nor can they, till the eyes of their understanding are enlightened.

IV. Blind Men stumble, and know not many times at what they stumble; they also are in great danger, without a sure guide. So Wicked Men know not what they stumble at; they stumble at God himself, and at Christ, when they stumble at his truth, and his people. They know not whither they go, nor the dreadful danger they are in; they think they are in the right way to heaven, and yet are in the broad way to hell; they are led oft-times by those who are as blind as themselves: "And if the Blind lead the Blind, they will both fall into the ditch."

V. Some Men's natural Blindness hath been by the just judgment of God upon them for their sin. So God in a way of judgment Blinds the eyes of some Men, after common illuminations. He is said to Blind their eyes, and harden their hearts, that is, he denies them his grace, and withdraws those common influences of it from them, suffering Satan to take full power of them, leaving them to their own hearts' lusts, and so consequently to final impenitency, Isa. xlv. 18, Rom. xi. 8.

DISPARITY.

I. Men who are naturally Blind, would gladly see; they lament nothing more than the loss of their eye-sight. But Wicked Men are willingly Blind, they love darkness rather than light, and refuse the means God is pleased to afford them, in order to the opening their eyes.

II. Men who are naturally Blind, do gladly accept of a faithful and sure guide. But Wicked Men, who are spiritually Blind, refuse that guide God directs them to, viz., his holy Word; they are neither thankful to God, nor good Men, for any help afforded them; nay, they vilify such as would take them by the hand to save them out of the pit of eternal misery. There is no blindness like spiritual Blindness. Call upon wicked Men, and entreat them never so often and earnestly, pray do not go that way, take heed, Man, O take heed! there is a pit before you; alas! you are going into the lion's den, nay, worse, into everlasting fire, to death and hell. Yet these Blind wretches will go on, live or die, sink or swim, all is one. No advice or warning will be received.

WICKED MEN COMPARED TO MAD MEN.

"Yea also the heart of the sons of men is full of evil, and Madness is in their hearts whilst they live," &c., Eccles. ix. 3.

"When he came to himself, he said, how many hired servants of my father have bread enough, and to spare," &c., Luke xv. 17.

WICKED Men are set forth in the scripture as Men out of their wits, Men distracted, Mad Men. And truly the choice they make, their actions, and behaviour show, as if they were indeed beside themselves; they are really void of right reason, or Men that have lost their spiritual understanding.

PARALLELS.

I. A Mad Man is one that is deprived of his natural reason, a beast as it were, in the shape of a Man. So all the ungodly of the earth have lost their spiritual reason, they are Men of no understanding, and more fitly may be said to be beasts in the form or shape of Men, than such as have lost their human reason.

II. Some Mad Men are desperate, and very mischievous, care not what hurt they do. O how desperate are Wicked Men! How will they swear, curse, and blaspheme the holy name of God, and dare God to damn them; and for mischief, they delight in nothing more, spoiling and utterly destroying their innocent neighbours.

III. Mad Men are usually bound, lest they should proceed too far in their mischievous ways: so God chains up, or puts wicked Men into bonds, limits their power, lest they should go too far in their cruel and mischievous designs against his people.

IV. Mad Men are usually committed to prison: so Wicked Men are under the cursed bondage and slavery of Satan, who takes them captive at his will.

V. A Mad Man will even spit in the face of his dearest friend, who with much affection seeks his good: so Wicked Men do as it were spit in the very faces of God's faithful ministers, who in bowels of tender love and compassion seek their good; and is this any marvel, when they in a base manner spit in the face of Christ himself?

VI. Mad Men refuse clothes, and will go naked: so Wicked Men refuse spiritually to be clothed with the robe of Christ's righteousness; they will go naked in God's sight, or have nothing to cover them but the rags of their own righteousness.

There are many other properties in Mad people, which may aptly be applied to ungodly men; but because divers of them agree likewise with the characters of fools or idiots, we shall refer you to that concerning fools, &c.

INFERENCES.

No marvel if God's people meet with so much trouble in this world, and are exposed to so many dangers by the Wicked: alas! they are mad: let us take the less notice of what they do to us; they are out of their right minds, distracted, &c. What a Mad world is this! How few are there that come to themselves! Most Men and woman are Mad.

WICKED MEN COMPARED TO DOGS.

"Give not that which is holy to Dogs," Matt. vii. 6.

"It is not meet to take the childrens' bread, and give it to Dogs," Matt. xv. 26.

"Beware of Dogs," Phil. iii. 2.

"Without are Dogs," Rev. xxii. 15.

A Dog is called in Hebrew, Ketab and Lamas, according to Munster; in Chaldee Kalba; in Arabic, Kelbe; in Persian and Saracen, Kep or Kolph; the Grecians, Kuon; the Latins, Canis, &c.

In these, and divers other places of holy scripture, Wicked Men are compared to Dogs.

METAPHOR.

I. There are divers sorts of Dogs, who differ very much in their nature and disposition, some being gentle, and others more curst and snarling; yet all are but Dogs.

II. Dogs, are base, ignoble, sordid, and impudent creatures, very vile and beastly.

greediness. See what account the holy Apostle gives of some of the Gentiles; "Who changed the truth of God into a lie, and worshipped and served the creature more than the Creator, &c. For which cause God left them to themselves, so that their women did change the natural use into that which is against nature: and likewise the Men, leaving the natural use of the women, burned in their lusts one towards another, Men with Men working that which is unseemly, and receiving in themselves that recompence of their error which was meet," Rom. i. 25—27.

III. Dogs are not only filthy and unclean creatures, but also foolish;

PARALLEL.

I. So there are divers sorts of Wicked Men, and they differ exceedingly in their nature and qualities; some are naturally of a mild and gentle disposition, others very fierce, passionate, and peevish; yet all ungodly, and metaphorically no better than Dogs.

II. So Wicked Men generally are vile, ignoble, and impudent persons, though some more shameless than others, God having given them up to vile affections, to commit all uncleanness with

III. So wicked Men are not only vile and filthy, but also foolish, as is fully opened under another for some of them will, as Naturalists observe, bark at the moon : and also when a stone, or other thing is cast at them, they will follow the stone, and neglect the hand that throws it.

METAPHOR.

study. And also when they are under affliction, they take notice of secondary causes, but never regard the hand of God in them, according to the saying of the poet,

*Arripit ut lapidem catulus, morsuq; fatigat,
Nec percussori mutua damna facit.
Sic plerique sinunt vexos elabier hostes,
Et quos nulla gravant noxia, dente pecunt.*

IV. Some Dogs have a fierce, angry, and churlish look, enough to frighten timorous persons ; and not only so, but grin, bark, and snarl at such as come near them, who design to do them no hurt.

and to fall down before the golden image he had set up : and not only so, but they grin, and gnash their teeth at them, like envious curs : “ The wicked plotteth against the just, and gnasheth upon him with his teeth,” Psal. xxxvii. 12. And thus did the ungodly Jews carry it to blessed Stephen ; it is said, “ They were cut to the heart, and they gnashed on him with their teeth,” Acts vii. 54. Yet what hurt did any of these servants of God do, or design to do to these sons of Belial ?

V. Dogs will not only grin and snarl, but also bite ; nay, not only bite, but bite mortally, and tear in pieces such as offend them, who are not able to deliver themselves from their rage and cruelty. There are some Dogs that are called blood-hounds, and some others may fitly be so called.

world, that justly deserved that ignominious name of Blood-hounds, devouring and malicious Dogs, sure some of the Romish church may be so called ; for they have showed themselves rather monsters than men, yea, even devils in the shape of men, as an eminent writer well observes.

VI. There are some Dogs who will not bark and grin as others do, and yet in a sly and secret manner will bite and tear such as they come at, which are looked upon as the most dangerous.

VII. Some Dogs on the other hand will bark, and make a great noise, and seldom or never bite or hurt any body.

VIII. Dogs must not have that which is holy : “ Give not that which is holy to Dogs.”

IX. Some Dogs are so fierce, cruel and unruly, that they are head. They, like Dogs, bark and snarl at the light of God's Word, from whence so great benefit arises to poor mortals. Like ravenous curs, they bark at the heavenly doctrine, and its faithful ministers, whom they reproach with impudent scandals, and whose utter extirpation they

PARALLEL.

IV. So some wicked Men have a very angry and furious countenance ; they look frowningly upon the Lord's people, like as did Nebuchadnezzar upon Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, who, it is said, was full of fury, and the form of his countenance was changed against them, when he saw they refused to worship his god, when he saw they refused to worship his god, when he saw they refused to worship his god, when he saw they refused to worship his god,

V. So some wicked Men do not only gnash their teeth, threaten, and grin at their godly neighbours, but also will, and oftentimes do fall upon them with all the revengeful rage and malice imaginable, to the wounding, cutting, or tearing of them in pieces. How many thousands of precious saints and children of God have the wicked Papists, and others in many ages of the church, destroyed, like hungry and enraged monsters ? If ever there were any Men in the

VI. So some Wicked Men will not threaten, nor grin at the godly, like others ; and yet in a sly and secret manner contrive their ruin ; and with all their might would destroy them, and yet make no noise of it ; wound them, but not let them know who doeth it.

VII. So some wicked Men, contrary to the nature and disposition of others, will give out angry and threatening words, as if they would do this and that, when they never intend to do what they say, nor will they cruelly injure anybody.

VIII. So wicked Men ought not to partake of holy things ; holy things belong to holy persons, they ought not to eat the children's bread, to be admitted to the sacrament, &c.

IX. So some wicked Men are so cruel and merciless, that God chains them up, i. e., he restrains forced to be tied or chained up, for otherwise they would do very great mischief: and moreover, to prevent further danger feared, their teeth are sometimes broken out.

METAPHOR.

smitten all mine enemies upon the cheek-bone; thou hast broken the teeth of the ungodly," Psal. iii. 7.

X. Some Dogs are made use of by the huntsman, to observe and mark his prey, that he may seize upon it the more readily; and those are called setting-dogs.

XI. Some Dogs will not only fall upon mankind, but also snarl, bite, and tare in pieces divers other beasts, though as savage and devouring as themselves.

Babylon hath not only spoiled God's people, and offered violence to heaven, but hath been a plague and curse to the earth, yea, destroyed the earth, Rev. xi. 18. How have the Egyptians destroyed the Egyptians! viz., one ungodly people destroyed another, as vile and cruel as themselves.

XII. Dogs are a greedy, craving and unsatisfied sort of creatures; they never know when they have enough.

dred; nay, a thousand will not satisfy some of them: and therefore they are justly called by the holy prophet, "Greedy dogs, that can never have enough, shepherds that cannot understand; they look to their own way, every one for his gain from his quarter," Isa. lvi. 11.

XII. Dogs are not only a greedy and an unsatisfied sort of creatures, but oft-times vomiting up what they have eaten, they return to it, and lick it up again. Prov. xxvi. 11.

they vomit up, by seeming repentance, what they have greedily and sinfully taken, they will return to it, and lick it up again; of such the apostle speaks, "He is returned to his own vomit," &c., 2 Pet. ii. 22.

XIV. Some Dogs run mad, and are so much the more dangerous and hurtful, of whom all people labour to beware.

of Dogs," Phil. iii. 2. See Wicked Men compared to Mad Men.

XV. Dogs live an idle and lazy sort of life: and hence the proverb is concerning a lazy person, he hath a Dog's life, viz., hunger and ease.

dureth to eternal life, will not take pains for that which is bread, but are contented with bones, as it were, the crumbs of earthly comforts, John vi. 27, Isa. lv. 1, 2. So that

PARALLEL.

them from offering that wrong and violence to his people, which is in their hearts to do. And finally to prevent their doing of further mischief God doth as it were break their teeth, that is, destroy their power, or put them out of a capacity of doing hurt. Hence David saith, "Arise, O Lord, and save me, O my God; for thou hast

X. So some Wicked Men, the devil, that cunning hunter, makes use of, to observe and mark the godly and upright in the land; they are employed to inform against them, and to discover their holy assemblies, in times of persecution, that others may the better seize upon them.

XI. So some Wicked Men will not only wrong, and seek the ruin of the faithful and sincere people of God; but when any of their own tribe, I mean, ungodly and brutish ones, do offend them, stand in their way, or cross them in their designs, they will fall upon them, to their utter ruin also.

XII. So many Wicked Men, and particularly false teachers, are such a craving, covetous, and unsatisfied generation, some of them, they cannot be contented with a benefice of a hundred per annum, no nor with two, three, or five hun-

XIII. So some Wicked Men are not only greedy and unsatisfied, but having glutted themselves, and filled their sensual appetites, they are constrained sometimes to vomit it up; as is said of such, "He hath eaten down riches, and he shall vomit them up again," Job xx. 25. Nay, so like unto Dogs are many of them, that if at any time what they have greedily and sinfully taken, they

XIV. So Wicked Men, being left to themselves, do abound so in their wickedness, that they run as it were mad in sin, care not what mischief they do to themselves or others; of whom all sober and well minded people ought to beware: "Beware

XV. So Wicked Men generally lead an idle and lazy life, as is opened under the metaphor Sluggard. They care not to encounter with difficulties for the good of their souls, how industrious soever they are about the things of the world. They labour not for the meat that en-

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

they have but ease and quite here, they content themselves with the children's leavings. And though their consciences many times, like a hungry stomach, puts them to pain; yet they are not convinced of the necessity of a Christ, but go on in their own careless and wicked courses, never eating of that which is truly good.

XVI. Dogs are commonly shut out of doors, and not suffered to be amongst the children.

XVI. So Wicked Men are shut out of the Church, and shall not be suffered to abide in the New Jerusalem, among the saints: "Without are Dogs," &c., Rev. xxii. 15.

METAPHOR.

DISPARITY.

I. SOME Dogs are said to be more faithful than servants, watching in the night, and oft-times giving notice, by their barking, of thieves or strangers, that may approach the house, when the family are asleep.

I. BUT some Wicked Men are so unfaithful, that instead of giving the least notice of any approaching danger, to their godly neighbours, that live quietly and securely, by them, they will rather conceal it: and so far are they from preventing danger, that they will encourage, and join with any, let them be never so wickedly inclined or designed to do mischief; as it is said of them, "When thou sawest a thief, thou consentedst with him, and hast been partaker with adulterers," Psal. i. 18.

II. Some Dogs are very loving, and show great regard to their masters, and seem to delight in their company, and will not do any injury to any of the family.

II. But some Wicked Men regard neither superiors nor inferiors; nay, so far are they from natural love to such as are their masters, if godly, that many of them despise not only father and mother, brother and sister, but their own wives and children, if there is but the least appearance any that are not as ungodly and Wicked as them-of God in them; nay, they love not themselves, but to do them all the injury they can.

III. Some Dogs will not only not fly upon sheep or lambs to hurt them, &c., but will sometimes fetch in that which strayeth from the rest, and assist the shepherd to bring them to the fold, and keep them within the bounds of their own pasture.

III. But some Wicked Men do design the greatest hurt imaginable to the sheep and lambs of Christ, nay, much worse than Dogs; for instead of guiding them into Christ's sheepfold, or keeping them within the bounds of his pastures, they drive them out, and not suffer them, if possible, to feed in the green meadows of Gospel-truth, but would utterly destroy them, were it not for the care of Jesus Christ, who is the great Shepherd and Bishop of their souls, John x. 14, 1 Pet. ii. 25.

INFERENCES.

I. It shows to what a dreadful degree Men are degenerated, from what they were in their first make.

II. It shows how hateful and loathsome sin is to God, that the Spirit in the Word should compare Wicked Men, persecuting Men, such as worry and destroy his people, unto Dogs.

III. It shows the greatness of God's power and love to his people, to preserve them in the midst of such beasts of prey, as lions, wolves, Dogs, &c.

IV. It speaks great comfort to those that are truly godly; for though the Wicked do often gnash their teeth at them, yet God hath broken their teeth, they cannot bite as they would.

WICKED MEN COMPARED TO BULLS.

"Many Bulls compassed me about, strong Bulls of Bashan," Psal. xxii. 12.

THE Hebrews call the Bull Tor, or Taur; which the Caldee call Abir, for a strong ox; the Grecians, Taurus; the Latins, Taurus; the Italians Tauro; the French, Taureais; the Germans, ein Steir, ein Unuchersteir das Uncher, ein Mummelsteir, ein Hagen, and ein Bollen; the Illyrians, vul, and Juneez. By all which several applications it is evident, that the name Taurus in Latin is not derived from Tanouros, the stretching out of the tail, nor from Gauros, signifying proud, but from the Hebrew Tor, which signifieth great, &c.

The epithets of this beast are many, viz. wild, sharp, plower, warrier, horn-bearer, blockish, great, glistering, fierce, violent, &c.

Violent, cruel, and proud persecutors, that abuse and infest the poor and needy, are compared to Bulls, Bulls of Bashan; that is, saith Glassius, the enemies of Christ, who were strong and fierce, i. e., strong and outrageous persons, such as were the high priests, scribes, &c., that set themselves against Christ; so Ainsworth. Bashan was a fertile country, famous for excellent pasture, the beasts that fed there being very fat, strong, and great. Hence the Bulls, rams, or heifers of Bashan, are metaphorically put for fat ones, Deut. xxxii. 14; which is transferred to men, Psal. xxii. 12, "Strong Bulls have beset me," &c., that is, enemies strong, fierce, and cruel. The oaks of Bashan are used in the like sense, Isa. ii. 13, Zech. xi. 2.

METAPHOR.

I. A Bull is a ring-leader of the herd; for which cause, saith Gesner, Homer compared Agamemnon, the great emperor of the Grecian army, to a Bull, &c. Top-sel, p. 77.

II. The Bull is a very strong creature; his strength is very great in all parts, but more especially in his herd and neck.

and towards the holy land," Dan. viii., but more especially of the fourth Beast, or Roman power, who hath, with human and diabolical power, with a high hand, and stiff neck, strove against the Saints of God for many years.

III. A Bull with his horns doth often run at men, women, and children, so that the sight of them, when they come towards some persons, makes them cry out; for many have been gored, and torn to pieces by Bulls: they are indeed a cruel sort of creatures, especially when enraged, and therefore all strive to get out of their way.

in a cruel manner, tearing them in pieces: and by reason of which many timorous persons being afraid of them, to avoid the danger, are ready to run away, viz. leave their native country, when they hear that furious Bulls, or cruel tyrants, are like to be let in upon them. Psal. xxii. 12, Dan. xi. 40.

IV. Bulls are suffered to feed in rich pasture, till they are very fat; they are like some lawless sort of people, being not always restrained to one meadow or ground, as cows are; they will break into every body's field, and feed in pastures none of their own.

V. Bulls will fight furiously with other beasts, and with one another.

covetous designs; as we see this day, how one Popish and heathenish Bull attacks and wars with another.

PARALLEL.

I. So proud and cruel persecutors are often ring-leaders of all the herd of their bloody crew, like as it were the high priests, scribes, and Pharisees, to the multitude of the wicked Jews, who conspired against our blessed Saviour, Matt. xxvi. 47.

II. So wicked tyrants are often great in power, and have the advantage every way to strengthen themselves; as it is said of the little horn under the Grecian monarchy, who "Waxed exceeding great, towards the south, and towards the east, and towards the fourth Beast, or Roman power, who hath, with human and diabolical power, with a high hand, and stiff neck, strove against the Saints of God for many years.

III. So wicked Tyrants, persecutors, and bloody enemies of God's Church, do often furiously run at all that stand in their way, not only men and women, but poor children, &c. Horn denotes power, as elsewhere hath been showed, and to push with the Horn, metaphorically signifies an exerting or putting forth of strength or power, Deut. xxxiii. 17. The Bulls of Bashan frequently exercise that authority and power, which for a time is suffered to be in their hands, against the Saints; yea, push and gore them with their horns

IV. So wicked Men are suffered to feed as it were in fat pastures, until they grow fat, and kick against the Lord. They will not know their own territories, nor be content with what God hath lent them, but make incursions into their neighbor's countries; and, as if they were lawless, make all their own which they can lay their hands upon, and care not what spoil they make.

V. So wicked Men are very quarrelsome; they will not only fall upon the Saints, but also make war one with another, out of pride and ambition, and to accomplish their own vain-glorious and

METAPHOR.

VI. Bulls sometimes, to prevent their doing of hurt, are shackled and penned up, who by that means, grow rather the more fierce and mad, and would do the greater mischief could they get loose.

PARALLEL.

VI. So Wicked Men sometimes are by the Almighty restrained many ways from running at, and spoiling of the Lord's people, Ezek. xxxiv. 4; he puts shackles as it were upon their legs, and hooks into their jaws, which doth greatly enrage them; fain would they be revenged, and vent their cruel malice upon the saints, but cannot, their ways are so blocked up.

INFERENCES.

I. This farther shows the base and cruel nature of the ungodly.

II. It serves to inform us, what a mercy it is they are restrained.

III. It may teach us also to cry to God to shackle and pen them up, and break their horns, viz: destroy or take away their power.

WICKED MEN COMPARED TO LIONS.

"The roaring of the Lion, and the voice of the fierce Lion, and the teeth of the young Lions are broken," Job iv. 10.

"I was delivered out of the mouth of the Lion," 2 Tim. iv. 17.

"My soul is among Lions," Psal. lvii. 5.

THE Lion in Hebrew, as writers observe, hath several names, as Ari, and Ariel; they call the male Lion Labi, and the female Lebia. Behold, my people shall arise like Labi, and be lifted up like Ari. There the Chaldee translation rendereth Labi, Leta; the Arabian, Jebu; the Persian Scher; and Munster saith, that Labi, is an old Lion. In Job xxxviii., Labaim signifieth Lions; in Psal. lvii., Lebaat signifieth Lionness; in Nah. ii., Laisch is by the Hebrews translated Lion; and the same Word, Isa. xxx., is by the Chaldees translated Lion's whelp. The word λεων is derived απο Τουλαι, which signifies to see.

The common epithets of a Lion are these, viz., wrathful, maned, fierce, deadly, stout, great, preying, ravening, stubborn, snatching, cruel, bloody, terrible, swelling, stony-hearted, frowning, violent, &c.

Expositors seem to be of a mind, that Paul, in saying, 2 Tim. iv. 17, "He was delivered out of the Lion's mouth," means Nero, who with open jaws was ready to devour and destroy him. However, it is evident, Wicked Men, or cruel tyrants, are often in holy scripture called Lions, in respect of some of the properties of a Lion; for one metaphor, as Glassius well observes, is brought to signify several things, with respect to their different qualities and attributes. Thus, saith he, 1. Christ is called a Lion, Rev. v. 5, because noble, heroic, and unconquerable. 2. The devil is called a Lion, because roaring and devouring. 3. Wicked Men and tyrants are called Lions, because they are fierce, outrageous, and cruel to the weaker men, as Lions are to weaker creatures, &c.

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

I. The lion is a proud and stately creature.

I. So some Wicked Men and tyrants are very proud and stately.

II. Lions are courageous and undaunted in their acts of cruelty; they will do what they list, let who will look on.

II. So some Wicked Men and tyrants seem to act in ways of oppression and cruelty undauntedly, with great courage and boldness. Courageousness, saith Mr. Caryl, in any noble or good way or cause, in which sense, Prov. xxviii. 1, "The righteous are as bold as a lion," is the courage of saints; but to be valiant and courageous in doing mischief, in wronging and oppressing the weak and innocent, is the courage of a beast. That courage which is out of the way of truth and justice, is a Lion-like courage.

III. Lions are very strong, the strongest of all creatures; what is stronger than a Lion?

III. Some tyrants have been very strong; tyranny must have strength to back it. Hence they who mean to oppress, fortify themselves with titles and privileges, with honours and relations: Solomon considering the oppressions that were under the sun, observes tears on the one side, and strength on the other; "On the side of the oppressor there was power," Eccles. iv. 1.

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

IV. A Lion is a crafty and very subtle creature; and hence said to lurk in secret places, and lieth in wait secretly in his den.

IV. So tyrants, as hath been showed, are very subtle, they have a great stock of policy as well as power. Though, as Mr. Caryl notes, we usually oppose the Lion's skin, and the fox's sin, yet many times they meet both in one; some are double skinned as well as double clothed. Hence we have that phrase, when David compares a wicked Man to a Lion, "He lieth in wait secretly as a Lion in his den; like as a Lion that is greedy of his prey, and as it were a young Lion lurking in secret places:" Psal. x. 9, and xvii. 12. They will, as naturalists observe, hide themselves in the dens, lest passengers should be affrighted at them.

V. Lions, especially, are cruel, blood-sucking, and devouring. Polybius affirmeth, that he saw them besiege, and compass about several cities of Africa; they will devour both man and beast, setting upon troops of horse-men, destroying flocks and herds of cattle, carrying some alive to their young ones, killing five or six at a time, &c.

V. So Wicked Men are great tyrants, and have always been very cruel and blood-thirsty. What bloody wretches were Nero, Caligula, &c. And what tyrants and devouring monsters have the Popes and bloody Papists been! For besides the many thousands of innocent Christians they have inhumanly butchered, history shows,* they destroyed in America, no less than fifteen millions of poor heathens, sparing no sex, young nor old, cutting men, women, and children in pieces, flaying their skins off, and roasting them alive, and burning them to ashes, making children to kill their own dear parents, &c.

VI. Lions will roar terribly. When the Lion roareth, all the beasts of the forest tremble. The naturalists observe,† that though many creatures are swifter of foot than the Lion, yet when he roars they all fall down, and he overtakes them with his astonishing voice; when a Lion is angry he beateth his tail against the ground.

VI. So tyrannical Men with their roaring words, their loud and terrible threatenings, often affright and daunt poor timorous Christians; what said the tyrannical king of Babylon? "Whosoever falleth not down and worshippeth the golden image, shall be cast into the midst of a burning fiery furnace," Dan. iii. 11. "And now, Lord, behold their threatenings," &c., Acts iv. 29. "Be not afraid of their terror," &c., 1 Pet. iii. 14.

VII. Lions are of a fierce, sour, and stern countenance; and in the sight of men,‡ it is said, he is seldom found without rage.

VII. It is said of the fourth beasts, his looks were more stout than his fellows. Wicked persecutors, and tyrants, look oftentimes upon the godly with an angry countenance, Dan. vii.

frowns are as blows, hence we call it brow-beating. The love of God, saith Mr. Caryl, is expressed by the pleasantness of his face, and the light of his countenance; so also is the love of man. And we may see what the intent of a person is, by his looks; many are in this respect Lion-like: they have, as Aristotle saith of the natural Lion, clouds and storms hanging about their eye-brows; it was a threatening against the Jews, in case of disobedience, that God would send against them, "A nation of a fierce countenance, which should not regard the person of the old, nor show favour to the young," Deut. xxviii. 50.

VIII. Lions are hungry and greedy creatures.

VIII. So are Wicked Men and tyrants, "They have set their eyes bowing down to the earth: like as a Lion that is greedy of his prey," Psal. xvii. 11, 12.

DISPARITY.

There are many excellent qualities in a Lion, which no way agree to Wicked Men and tyrants, which we shall leave to the reader to find out; upon which account God and Christ are compared in the scripture to a Lion: see page 263, and 337.

* See Clark's Examples, Vol. II.

† Gesner.

‡ Gesner. Topsel. p. 370.

INFERENCES.

Though these Lions are very strong and powerful, yet God is stronger than they, and he is against them : " And he in a special manner desires, "saith Caryl,"* to be dealing with these, for they in the pride of their spirits think themselves a match for God ; though indeed their strength is but weakness, and their wisdom, notwithstanding their fox-like craft, but foolishness, yet in their own conceit they are stronger and wiser than God himself. Hence, like Pharaoh, they send defiance to heaven, and say, 'Who is the Lord?' Exod. v. 2. When God sees the hearts of Men swollen to this height of insolent madness, he delights to show himself, and grapple with them that their pride may come down.

"What are all these Lions to the Lion of the tribe of Judah, if the Lord do but roar, if the Lion of the tribe of Judah do but come forth against these Lions, they will run to hide themselves, 'and call to the rocks and mountains to cover them,' &c., Rev. vi. 15, 16. God is said in the holy scripture, to destroy these Lions by degrees, he proceeds gradually against them.

"First, He stops the roaring of the Lions, they shall not be able to make such a dreadful noise as heretofore ; their roaring may be stopped when their voice is not, though they can speak, yet they shall not yell.

"Secondly, In the second place, he breaks the voice of the Lions, they shall not only not roar, but they shall not so much as speak, either against the lambs, or against the sheep, or for themselves, 'The voice of the fierce Lion shall be taken away.' God is able to silence Lions and stop their mouths, not only from devouring and roaring, but from speaking.

"Thirdly, When their voice is taken away, and their roaring, yet their teeth will remain : and they will be biting and tearing still, though they have done roaring and yelling ; therefore at the third stroke God breaks out their teeth, 'The teeth of the young Lions are broken.' So the Psalmist prays, Psal. lviii. 6, 'Break their teeth in their mouths, break out the great teeth of the young Lions, O Lord : ' that is, take away the instruments by which they oppress, the means by which they tear and rend, as Lions with their cruel teeth.

"Fourthly, Christ deals further with these Lions, he not only breaks their teeth by which they used to hurt others, but he takes away their prey and their meat ; they shall not have wherewith to live themselves, they were wont to suck the blood of the slain, and to eat the flesh of the poor ; but now the Lord will pluck away their prey, they themselves shall be starved or pinched with hunger.

"Lastly, Not only shall their meat be taken away, but they themselves shall be scattered and dispersed ; this is the last step of their calamity. Their dens shall be broken up, and their lurking places shall be opened, they shall run from place to place, from nation to nation : this is the judgment of the Lord upon Lions, and the portion of the cruel enemies of our God.

"Who hath not seen the truth of all this in our days? We have had Lions, roaring Lions, rending, tearing Lions amongst us : it was usual among the Heathens in their persecutions to cry out, 'Away with the Christians to the Lions ;' This we have often seen, in the figure, poor Christians sent to the Lions ; put under the power of men, as cruel, as bloody, as Lions. Many an one might say, as David, Psal. lvii. 4, 'My soul is among Lions.' When the watchmen, in the prophet Isaiah, was asked 'Watchman, what of the night?' he answered, a Lion, my Lord, Isa. xxi. 8. Our sorrowful watchmen standing upon their towers, considering these sad times, being asked, What of the day? have answered, We see a Lion, a company of Lions tearing and rending in many parts of the nation : not bodies and states only, but souls and consciences. God hath wonderfully delivered his darling from the Lions, his Daniels from the Lion's den. He hath already delivered so far, that the Lions dare not roar, as they were wont, the teeth of many of the young Lions are broken, many of the old Lions are ready to perish for want of prey, and not a few of their whelps are scattered abroad. God hath raised up Sampsons to tear these Lions, which roared upon us, he hath stirred up Davids to smite these Lions, and rescue the prey out of their teeth ; and though many Lions are amongst us, yet they dare not roar, much less tear, as they have done; though the beasts be alive, yet for the most part, the Lions are dead; they are beasts still, as base, vile, and bloody in their natures as ever, but their powerful Lion-like strength is abated. That glorious prophecy is in some sense, and in some part fulfilled at this day, 'The wolf dwells with the lamb, the leopard lies down with the kid, and the calf and the young Lion, and the fatling together, and a little child may lead them; they cannot, they dare not, hurt nor destroy in all our mountain,' Isa. xi. 6, 8. I am sure, we may set our seal to this truth of Eliphaz, we have seen Lions, and fierce Lions, old Lions, and young Lions, even the stout Lion's whelps, some scattered abroad, some destroyed, some consumed by the mighty power of God.

* Caryl. on Job, Ch. iv. p. 66, 67, 68.

"Further, It is here said in the text, 'That the old Lion shall perish for want of prey.' It is a strange expression; Lions have the greatest power to get provision to satisfy their hunger, yea, their appetites and humour; yet these shall want; these Lions who have all their life-time preyed upon the states of other Men, even these shall want; note hence the justice of God, 'Such as have made others want, shall at last come to want themselves, they shall perish for want of prey;' they shall have nothing to eat, 'When thou ceasest to spoil, thou shalt be spoiled,' saith the prophet; 'And when thou shalt make an end to deal treacherously, they shall deal treacherously with thee.' We must not understand it, as if Wicked Men do ever give over sinning; sin, and their desire of sinning, is in a kind infinite: they never say, Now we have done, and will sin no more; but the meaning is, when thou canst sin no more, nor deal treacherously no more; when thou hast done thy utmost, and spent thy strength in spoiling others, or taken all their spoil, so that thou hast done spoiling, because there is no more to spoil; then others shall spoil thee. And thou Lion, who hast preyed upon others a long time, shalt not have a bit thyself, but shall perish for want of prey.

"It is the promise of God unto his own people, Psal. xxxiv. 10, 'That the Lions shall lack and suffer hunger, but they that fear the Lord, shall not want any good thing.' He expresses it by Lions, to note, that certainly they that fear him, shall not want; for if any creatures in the world can preserve themselves from hunger, Lions can; if they do but roar, the very beasts will fall down as a prey before them; but yet, saith God, these, even these shall rather perish for hunger, than any one that feareth me shall want. God provides for his lambs, for innocent persons, for those that fear him, though they have no strength to provide for themselves; but the Wicked who have greatest power, and have been most active to provide for themselves, shall pine with want, they who caused so many to be bitten with hunger, shall at last be hunger-bitten, and for want of meat gnaw their tongues.

"Lastly, Where it is said, that the Lions' whelps are scattered abroad, observe, God will not only destroy the persons of Wicked Men, but their families and posterities, they and their whelps shall all be scattered. 'He will not leave them so much as a man or a remembrance,' Psal. xxxvi. 6. 'I sought his place, saith the prophet, and he could not be found,' there was no print of him, no man could remember that there was such a man in the world, unless to curse his memory.

"I shall only give one caution concerning this, and so conclude the point: that which is here affirmed in the general by Eliphaz, concerning the destruction of Wicked Men, Lions, and fierce Lions, is not to be taken as a truth in the universal experience of it; we are not to understand it thus, as if all persons, all Lion-like persons, at all times, perish, are destroyed, and scattered abroad; but Eliphaz speaks of what is usually done; or he speaks of what God can easily do at any time, and of what God may justly do at all times. Lions, fierce Lions, tyrants, oppressors, he both may, and can scatter when he pleaseth, yet we find, that God hath permitted some Lions to live long, and die quietly; they spend all their days in roaring and rending, in tearing and devouring, and yet themselves are not devoured: God suspends his justice, but it is for weighty reasons. For in word,

"First, If God should destroy all Lion-like men, the joints of the world would be unclosed, and the bands of human society broken asunder. God forbid the children of Israel to destroy all the Canaanites, lest the beasts of the field should multiply, &c.

"Secondly, If God should hunt all these Lions out of the world, his own people would live by sense, rather than by faith, and seem to be terrified by the visible acts of wrath, rather than allured by the promises of mercy, or tenders of free grace.

"Thirdly, he defers them, until they have sucked blood enough, rent enough, done evil enough, even filled up the measure of their sin, and fulfilled the righteous purpose of God, by their unrighteousness. As these Lions fill their own bellies, so they fulfil God's counsels; therefore he lets them alone, that they may do his work, though they little think of it, and less intend it.

"Lastly, Eliphaz speaks of what God did frequently in those times of the world wherein he lived; for then God dealt more by outward judgments, than in these Gospel-times. As his mercies are now more spiritual, so usually are his judgments."

WICKED MEN COMPARED TO FOXES.

"Go tell that Fox," Luke xiii. 32.

THE Lord Jesus calls Herod a Fox, by reason of his treacherous plots and craft, whereby he privately contrived to entrap him. See Erasmus, in his paraphrase upon the place: "Go and tell that Fox," who confides in human craft and believes that he can do any thing against the majesty and counsel of God, &c.

A Fox is called in Hebrew Schual, and in Chaldee, Thual; and therefore, Psal. lxi., where the Hebrew Schuatim, there the Chaldee translateth it, Thealaia: the Arabian call him Thaleb, and Avicen calleth a Fox sometimes Chabel, and also Chal-chail; the Greek Septuagint, Alopehon, and vulgarly Aloplex, and Alopon; the Latin, Vulpes; the French, Reynard, &c.

The epithets expressing the nature of the Fox, among writers, are these, viz., crafty, wary, deceitful, stinking, strong-smelling, quick-smelling, tailed, warlike, or contentious, rough; the Grecians, fiery-coloured, subtle for slaughter.

A wicked and subtle persecutor is, and may be fitly compared to a Fox, which we shall briefly open in the following parallel.

METAPHOR.

I. A Fox is a crafty and subtle creature, which appears in these respects following: (1.) In that he claps his tail between his legs, when he is pursued. (2.) When he perceiveth he cannot escape he urines on his tail; and whisks it on the dogs, which hath an exceeding strong scent, insomuch that the dogs not enduring the scent, are forced for a while to desist. (3.) He will often, when he is in danger, and no avoiding of it, bite the dogs on their hinder legs, for that is the tenderest part about them. (4.) Because the beast called the urchin is too strong for him, he taketh him by craft; for when he casteth himself down upon the ground he leapeth upon his belly, and destroyeth him. (5.) The Fox, naturalists observe, hath a subtle way to take fish: wandering by the shore, he dipeth his tail in the water, and the little fish immediately entangle themselves in it, and so are taken. (6.) By craft, as Gesner observes, he gets the badger's den for his own use; and by laying in the mouth of the wolf's den, an herb called

PARALLEL.

I. So some Wicked persecutors are very crafty and subtil, as appeared in Pharaoh king of Egypt, and Herod. What policy did the first use, to spoil and utterly destroy the Israelites! "Come on, saith he, let us deal wisely with them," &c. Many tyrants, and cursed persecutors, have pretended much kindness to the saints, when they have in their hearts utterly designed to destroy them. What said Herod to the wise men? "Go, search diligently for the young Child; and when ye have found him, bring me word again, that I may come and worship him also," Matt. ii. 7, 8, which was nothing else but a crafty pretence, for his purpose was to kill him. What policy did Julian the apostate use to destroy the poor Christians! Also what devices have the Romanists invested, to spoil and utterly ruin the Protestants from time to time! contriving hellish plots, and then casting them upon such whose souls hate such detestable actions! It hath been the common practice of these crafty persecutors, to put the wolfe's skins upon these harmless sheep and lambs of Christ, and then set the dogs upon them, to hurt and worry them, &c. How they have charged them with treason, sedition, and rebellion, from time to time, on purpose to render them odious to the common, and more unwary people.

the wolf's den, an herb called sea-onion, which is contrary to the nature of wolves, he affrights away that creature, so that he will not come near it. (7.) He is often troubled with wasps in the summer-time, but useth this wile to destroy them. He hideth himself, but layeth his tail out; the wasps fly to his tail, and when there are abundance in it, he runneth to the wall, or to some tree, and striketh his tail against the tree, and rubbeth it against the ground, and so he destroyeth all of them. (8.) If he wanteth food, and knows not where to get it, he lieth upon the ground, upon his back, with his legs stretched abroad, and so feigneth himself dead; the birds seeing him lie in this manner, light on him, thinking he is dead; and when they are upon him, he taketh them, and destroyeth them.

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

I. The Fox is not only crafty but cruel and blood-thirsty, a great destroyer of innocent creatures; he will seize upon hares, conies, hens, geese, lambs, &c., and make a great spoil of them.

the holy Child Jesus among the rest! And what cruel, bloody, as well as crafty, Foxes have the Papists been! how many thousands, nay, millions of souls, have they destroyed, both of Heathens in America, and Christian Protestants in most kingdoms of Europe! See Foxe's Acts and Monuments. Sir Sam. Horeland's History, and Mr. Clark's Examples, &c.

III. The Fox never goes straight forward, but tortuosis incedit anfractibus, or by crooked windings, and by-paths of error and human traditions, not leading to God by Christ, but by saints and angels; nor to his merits only for satisfaction, but to the sacrifice of the mass, pardons of their own, and to purgatory, &c., using all deceitfulness and error to compass their own cursed ends.

IV. The time, especially when the Fox invades and seizeth his prey, is in the night, when all are asleep, both shepherd and sheep.

V. Foxes are a stinking sort of creatures, and in the day-time hide themselves in their holes, and seldom look out. luster, and horrid pollution; and whilst in a kingdom or nation, they hide themselves; but when it begins to be even-tide with a people, then they, as at this day, begin to look out of their holes.

VI. Foxes are said to do much mischief to vineyards, as Franzius and others observe.

VII. The Fox, notwithstanding all his craft, is often caught and made a spoil of, being much hated by all, for the mischief and hurt he doth. they hanged for their treason and cursed contrivances, as former and latter times shew.

II. So wicked papists, and other enemies of God's people, are not only subtle, but very cruel and blood-thirsty. Herod was called a Fox, partly without doubt upon this account. What barbarous slaughter did he make in the town of Bethlehem, of poor, harmless, and innocent babes, that so he might craftily cut off

And what cruel, bloody, as well as crafty, Foxes have the Papists been! how many thousands, nay, millions of souls, have they destroyed, both of Heathens in America, and Christian Protestants in most kingdoms of Europe! See Foxe's Acts and Monuments. Sir Sam. Horeland's History, and Mr. Clark's Examples, &c.

III. So the Romish Foxes never walk in the straight path of the Gospel, nor follow the even and straight rules thereof, but in crooked windings, and by-paths of error and human traditions, not leading to God by Christ, but by saints and angels; nor to his merits only for satisfaction, but to the sacrifice of the mass, pardons of their own, and to purgatory, &c., using all deceitfulness and error to compass their own cursed ends.

IV. So in like manner do these Foxes break in upon a people, when they are secure; like the envious man, that sowed tares among the good seed, they watch the fittest opportunities to spoil God's heritage.

V. So these Romish Foxes are a filthy and stinking sort of vermin in their lives and conversations, guilty of all manner of abominable things, the light of the Gospel clearly and freely shines in a kingdom or nation, they hide themselves; but when it begins to be even-tide with a people, then they, as at this day, begin to look out of their holes.

VI. So wicked persecutors and seducers do great hurt and mischief to Christ's vineyard. "Take us the Foxes, the little Foxes that spoil the vines," &c., Cant. ii. 15.

VII. So the Romish Foxes and subtle enemies of the Lord's heritage, notwithstanding all their craft and hellish policy, are often taken in the snare, and their plots discovered, and they hanged for their treason and cursed contrivances, as former and latter times shew.

INFERENCES.

I. This may teach us to take heed of two sorts of Men. First, of a flattering and fawning persecutor. Secondly, of a cunning and subtle seducer; for Foxes haunt not a vineyard, or flock of sheep, more than these do the Church. (1.) By corrupting the purity of her doctrine. (2.) Obscuring the simplicity of worship. (3.) Overturning the beauty of order, and bringing in confusion, spoiling her band of union, by extinguishing the vigour and life of Christianity. (4.) By destroying her children, and spoiling their goods, and as much as in them lies ruining their souls.

II. Therefore let us pray that these Foxes may be taken, like as the Foxes, that one way or other their craft and subtlety may be discovered, and they prevented, and hindered from doing more hurt to God's Church.

WICKED MEN COMPARED TO GOATS.

"When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then he shall sit upon the throne of his glory. And before him shall be gathered all nations, and he shall separate them one from the other, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the Goats. And he shall set the sheep on his right-hand, but the Goats on the left," &c., Matt. xxv. 31—33.

THE male or great he-Goat, is called in Hebrew atud, and the lesser sier and zier; the Chaldee translate it, Gen. xiii. teias-jaii, and Numb. xv. ize; the Arabians, teus and maez; the Persians asteban, and busan; the Grecians tragos, or devouring or ravening.

Tragus ab edendo quod grana fracta pane.

The common epithets given to the Goat, by the learned, are these, viz., left-sided, greedy, unarmed, swift,, long-legged, rough, ragged, unclean, strong-smelling, letcherous, bristler, wanderer, vile, wanton, &c.

Wicked men, but more especially hypocrites in the Church, are compared to them.

SIMILE.

I. The Goat commonly feedeth among sheep, and lieth down with them, and seems much to love their company.

II. Yet there is a vast difference between the natural properties of the sheep and Goats; for whereas sheep are meek and harmless, Goats are of a contrary disposition, they are ravenous and very mischievous, they will eat the barks of trees, and spoil tender plants, great destroyers of gardens and vineyards.

III. The Goats are a stinking and unclean sort of creatures; there is no creature, saith Gesner,* that smelleth so strongly as doth a male Goat, by reason of the immoderate lust which this creature is exceedingly prone and addicted to above others.

IV. A Goat is said to be a very greedy and devouring sort of creature; for as Dr. Franzius† reports that that field or pasture that will feed a thousand sheep, will not be enough for a hundred goats.

PARALLEL.

I. So some hypocrites seem to love the company of God's people, they cunningly contrive ways how to get into Churches, and appear to be of the same flock, taking much seeming delight in the company of the truly religious.

II. So there is a great difference between a Wicked Man, notwithstanding his highest pretence to religion, and a saint; the one is humble, meek, and harmless, seeking the good and well-being of all, when the other is proud, stubborn, and mischievous; many of them while they seem to have a great zeal for religion, secretly care not what hurt they do to God's vineyard, contriving means how they may undo and ruin the godly in the land.

III. So Wicked Men are unclean, filthy, and loathsome in the sight of God, by reason of their abominable and most beastly lusts and uncleannesses, being given horribly to fornication, adultery, incest, &c., Rom. i. 26, 27. From whence cometh the proverb of those men, that have a strong scent about them, that they stink like a Goat.

IV. So some Wicked Men are of a very covetous and greedy disposition, not being contented with a small portion of worldly good things; for though they have some hundreds, nay thousands by the year, yet are still craving after more, not being satisfied with what they have of their own, but also strive to possess themselves of that which is their neighbour's; desiring, like wicked Ahab, Naboth's vineyard. So that that

* See Topsel out of Gesner.

† Page 198.

SIMILE.

PARALLEL.

portion or estate, which will satisfy and comfortably maintain a thousand families of good Christians, is too little for one of them : such is their covetous and greedy appetite.

V. Goats feed and lie down with sheep, yet sometimes the shepherd separates them one from the other.

V. So though some Wicked and hypocritical persons accompany with the Lord's people, and seem to feed and lie down with them, yet at last the Lord Jesus will separate the one from the other, as a shepherd separates the sheep from the goats.

SIMILE.

DISPARITY.

I. Goats are useful ; some poor people are much supplied by them both for meat and milk.

I. But some Wicked Men are not only of no use either to poor or rich ; nay, many of them are not only worse than Goats, but worse than infidels ; so far from relieving others, as that they provide not for those of their own household.

II. Goats have been made use of in the time of the law, for sacrifice, and were also used, as clearly typifying Jesus Christ. See Ainsworth on Levit. xvi. 5, 8, 15.

II. But Wicked men are an abomination to the Lord, their very persons, as well as their sacrifices, are detestable ; no use at all made in any part of God's worship, but are excluded therefrom, till by hearing the word, they repent and turn to God, and so become the sheep of Christ.

INFERENCES.

As this may call aloud to Wicked men, to consider the sad and loathsome estate they are in, so in a special manner it doth reprove all such, that like Goats, feed and lie down with Christ's flock, and yet are still but Goats ; and as they so abide, they will be found at the left-hand of Christ in the day of his appearing to judgment, when they shall be separated, so as never to have the company of the sheep of Christ more ; and " Then shall he say unto them on the left-hand, depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels," Matt. xxv. 41.

WICKED MEN COMPARED TO THIEVES.

Jer. vii. 11. Matt. xxi. 13. Isa. i. 23. Rev. ix. 21.

A thief κλεπτης, fur, Matt. vi. 16, 20, and xxiv. 43, John x. 8, 10, and xii. 6, he that stealeth cunningly, φωρ, so a Thief was named of old, or as if it were κλεπτης, of carrying or taking away, λυσος, Latro, Matt. xxi. 13, xxvi. 55, and xxvii. 38, 44, a robber.

In what respect Wicked Men may be fitly compared to Thieves, take as followeth.

PARALLELS.

I. Some are Thieves from their childhood, they begin betimes to steal and rob : so the ungodly begin betimes to be wicked, they are said to go astray from the womb, telling lies, and are by nature prone to all manner of sin and wickedness ; hereby depriving God of that honour, fear, and reverence, that belongs to him.

II. Thieves love not the day, lest they should be discovered, but are active in the night : so wicked Men hate the light, " They love darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil," John iii. 19.

III. Thieves run many hazards and dangers, venture their lives to accomplish their designs : so Wicked Men run great hazards and dangers, venture not only the life of their bodies, but of their souls also, to fulfil their designs and wicked purposes.

IV. Thieves are a great terror to honest men, they put many in fear : so some Wicked and ungodly Men are a great trouble, grief, and terror to those who are godly ; how was the soul of righteous Lot vexed with the filthy conversation of the Sodomites, 2 Pet. ii. 7.

V. Thieves greatly abuse, rob and wrong others, not only such as are of their own rank and quality ; but sometimes set upon, and rob persons in authority ; the judge may, and prince himself, has been sometimes robbed and abused by Thieves: did not T. Blood but a few years since, steal the king's crown? so Wicked Men greatly abuse their neighbours, they do often take away the good name of such who truly fear God, and sometimes attempt their chastity, &c. This is not all, they do not only thus endeavour to rob men, such who are poor mortals like themselves; but they rob God; and that many ways. (1.) They rob him of his glory. And (2.) Of their own strength and flower of their age, which belong to him. (3.) They rob him of their hearts and affections, and place it upon the world and their own base lusts. (4.) They rob him of their precious time, and squander it away in a foolish and idle manner, upon their lusts; nay, hath not that man of blood, I mean the Pope, robbed Jesus Christ of his crown and royal diadem! doth he not assume that power and headship to himself, that only belongs to the Prince of the kings of the earth.

VI. Thieves oft-times kill as well as steal, and kill in stealing, so that they make themselves guilty of murder as well as of theft; so wicked and ungodly men, by their ungodly and sinful lives, make themselves guilty of the breach of the whole law of God, by adding sin to sin, and multiplying their wickedness, and so transgress not only in one, but in every point, and thereby wilfully murder their own souls, and many times kill and destroy their innocent neighbours too.

VII. Thieves are sometimes taken in the fact, or by pursuit are apprehended, and laid hands on, that they may answer the law in that case made and provided: so Wicked Men are sometimes taken in their wickedness by the hand of God; or if they escape an immediate stroke in the very act of sin, yet they are pursued by God's just judgment that followeth them, and will overtake them at last.

VIII. Thieves, when taken, would fain make an escape; nay if they are not held by strong hands, they will get loose and run away: so Wicked Men when God's hand is upon them how fain would they make an escape? When Adam fell in with the tempter to rob God of his honour, it is said, he hid himself among the trees of the garden: guilt made him fly; and what pitiful shifts do all old Adam's children make, to excuse their sins? or if they cannot make excuse, then they seek out ways to escape if possible: some say, their sins are not so great as others; others say they were drawn in and enticed; others, that God is merciful, and they doubt not but he will pardon them: others fly to the goodness of their hearts; some to seeming repentance, saying, God forgive me, &c.; but whatever way they take, till they are truly converted, they are holden by the cords of their own sins, and they shall not escape, nor can get out of God's hand, but must answer for all their wickedness at their utmost peril.

IX. Some Thieves are so impudent, that they will adventure to rob in the day-time, let who will look on, being too strong for the standers-by: so some Wicked Men are so impudent, that they will adventure to rob their innocent neighbours of their goods in a public manner in the day-time; as many of the Papists have served the poor Protestants in former times, in divers nations, and pretended they had law for what they did.

X. Some are great Thieves, and therefore called the captains of the Thieves, under whose conduct and direction the lesser Thieves do rob and steal: so some Wicked Men are so notorious in wickedness, that they lead the van as it were, and are not only examples to others of inventing new coined oaths, and sinful fashions, and customs; but do command or lay some kind of force upon such, who are under their power, to be as wicked as themselves, else they turn them off as not fit to do them service: as it is written; "If a ruler hearken to lies, all his servants are wicked," that is, he will so discountenance and discourage truth and honest dealing, that none but liars and wicked persons can live with him, Prov. xxix. 12.

XI. Some Thieves are so merciless, they steal and carry away all that people have: so some persecutors have been so void of pity and humanity, that they have taken away all which some godly people had, even their very beds from under them.

XII. There are some sacrilegious Thieves, such as rob churches, and steal away those things that are set apart for divine worship: so some Wicked Men are robbers of the Church of God, by taking away his holy institutions, and setting their inventions in the room thereof; such are the Romish crew, &c. Christ tells us, that such who come not in by the door, but climb up some other way, are Thieves and robbers: nay, if it were possible, the great Thief the Pope, and his accomplices, would have robbed us of the Bible, and the true religion, nay of the true Church itself; however they, with all that adhere to them, have robbed many hundreds, nay, thousands, of her true and faithful members, both of their goods, lives, and liberties, for the which they must give an account at the great day.

XIII. Thieves are so opposite to honest men, that they by all means avoid their company and society, if possible, when they know them. So Wicked men, known and discovered to be so, are not at all fit company for the godly, nay, the godly are commanded to avoid them, and to have no fellowship with them, so far as possible they may; however if in civil things there be some kind of necessity to buy and sell with them, yet their sin in that, or any other way, is to be hated and departed from; nay, if a man hath been a professor of godliness, and turn to be a wicked man, with such an one the godly are to have no intimacy, that he may be ashamed, 1 Cor. v.

XIV. Thieves know by-ways, and are acquainted with such places where they may accomplish their designs, not only as to secrecy, but security. So Wicked Men acquaint themselves with bye-ways, and therefore called the way of the wicked. "Let the wicked forsake his way," &c., Isa. lv. 7. "Blessed is the man that walketh not in the way of the ungodly," &c., Psal. i. 1. Joseph's mistress made use of her skill in the way of the Wicked when she attempted to rob him of his chastity. For there was, (1.) privacy, none saw. (2.) Secrecy, none knew, and (3.) Opportunity, which he might now, without fear of shame, make use of; and there is not a Wicked fornicator in the world, but would have owned it as his way, and have chosen it too as a fit opportunity; but blessed Joseph walked not in this way, he knew that nothing could be so private, nor be kept so secret but the all-seeing eye of God can see it, and will bring it to light.

XV. Thieves are sometimes taken and committed to prison, there to be kept safe till the general assize, or time of trial, and then are brought forth, tried, and condemned, many times to die, and soon after executed. So Wicked Men are taken by death, and committed to the grave, and there they are held fast till the day of resurrection, and last judgment or great assize, where they shall be tried, and give an account of all their wickedness done in the body, against whom Jesus Christ will proceed in a way of justice; and being arraigned, and indicted for all their wickedness, thefts, and robberies, shall be found guilty by good evidence, by the law of God, conscience, and nature; and being so found guilty, shall receive the just sentence of hell-fire, prepared for the devil and his angels, with a "Go ye cursed," Matt. xxv. 46.

DISPARITY.

I. Thieves can but rob and steal such things as are common to men. But Wicked Men rob God, and cheat themselves of their own immortal souls, as hath been showed.

II. Thieves endeavour to hide themselves, and are not willing to be known. But Wicked Men commit their wickedness publicly, and matter not who seeth them; they declare their sin as Sodom, and hide it not, they are not ashamed to commit their wickedness in the very face of the sun.

III. Thieves oft-times spare the poor, and let them pass, but seize upon such as are rich. But Wicked Men regard neither poor nor rich, if they be godly; nay the poor of this world, though rich in faith, are mostly in their eye, to be made a spoil, robbed and ruined by them.

IV. Some Thieves after they have received the just sentence of death, from which they cannot escape, yet do repent of their wickedness and receive pardon of God, though they die by the law of man. But Wicked Men, living and dying in sin, after the last judgment, and sentence of eternal death, cannot repent, neither have they any time so to do, but must be damned without remedy.

INFERENCES.

I. Hence we may see, how easily men may mistake themselves, by condemning others when they are in as bad or a worse state themselves; who is it but will readily cry out against a Thief, and use their utmost endeavour to apprehend him? but how few are there, of the same kind, viz, Thieves, as hath been shown, will lay hands upon, or condemn themselves? who are, as you have heard, worse than Thieves.

II. How doth it warn the godly to look to themselves: "for if the good man of the house had known at what time the Thief would have come, he would have watched."

WICKED MEN NAKED.

"And covered thy Nakedness, &c., Thou hast not remembered the days of thy youth, when thou wert naked and bare," &c. Ezek. xvi. 8, 22.

"Poor, and blind, and Naked," &c. Rev. iii. 17.

There is a two-fold Nakedness, viz, an external, and an internal Nakedness: the Nakedness of the soul, as well as of the body.

PARALLELS.

I. Nakedness since the fall doth not only import not having of clothes, but the want of clothes. As Adam before he fell, had no clothes, so he needed none; his Nakedness was an ornament to him; but no sooner had he sinned, but he saw the want of a garment. So all ungodly men are not only without spiritual clothes, but they exceedingly need them; as they have no righteousness to cover them, so it is their misery. It is a lamentable thing to be Naked, and it is a far more grievous thing to be spiritually Naked, to have no real and divine cover for the soul.

II. The shame, deformity, and all natural filthiness of a Naked person doth appear; it is visible, and he is thereby exposed to reproach. So the shame, deformity, and vileness of Wicked Men, who are not spiritually Naked, having not the righteousness of Christ to cover them, doth appear; and this exposeth them to shame and reproach. "Sin is the shame of any people," Prov. xiv. 34. To see a man Naked, that hath a rotten and polluted carcase, full of sores and stinking ulcers, is a loathsome sight. But such is the state of the souls of the ungodly men, they are Naked, and their inward filthiness lies fully open to the eyes of the great God, nay, and much of it appears to the sight of men; spiritually there is no soundness in them, from the crown of their head to the soles of their feet, nothing but wounds, bruises, and putrifying sores," Isa. i. 6.

III. A Naked person is exposed to the extremity both of cold and heat. Clothes keep the body warm in winter, and defend from the parching heat in summer; and he that is without them, from hence is in a miserable condition; every blast pinches him, the sun scorches him, &c. So wicked men lie open to the dreadful wrath of God, which is set forth in scripture by things extreme in their nature, both in respect of heat and cold. O how unable will these naked souls be to abide the day of God's wrath, or to stand before him who is a consuming fire! The righteousness of Christ will be as a cover and screen between the saints, and the devouring flames of God's anger. But wicked men have no defence, no screen nor cover; they are Naked, exposed not only to the shame of every eye, but to the direful effects of God's dreadful wrath and vengeance, &c., whilst they live, and when they die, and for ever.

IV. A Naked man is exposed to great danger by his enemies; every small blow may wound him, who hath nothing on to defend him from it: every small prick will make him bleed. But much greater danger is he in by great strokes, and thrusts of swords and spears, and by arrows and darts that enemies may let fly against him; his condition is not only full of shame, but also full of danger. So wicked Men, who are spiritually Naked, are exposed to great danger from the enemies of the soul. (1.) Sin, nay, every sin wounds him; the least sin makes a wound in his soul, what wounds then do great sins make! (2.) Conscience wounds him and lashes him sorely. (3.) Satan lets fly his fiery darts and arrows against him, and wounds him to the very heart, and like an hungry lion, tears his soul, as it were, to pieces. (4.) Death and wrath wound him, he having nothing to defend him from any of these, &c.

V. A Naked person is not fit for any employment; he is not fit to fight, nor fit to labour. So such who are spiritually naked, are not fit for any spiritual service: they can neither work for God, nor suffer for God, nor resist sin and Satan; they are not fit for any society of spiritual men, but are unspeakably miserable every way.

DISPARITY.

Naked men desire clothes, they will beg hard for something to cover their Nakedness ; but the Wicked are unsensible of their Nakedness, and therefore seek not to be clothed ; nay, like mad Men, refuse raiment. We read, Luke viii. 27, of a man possessed with a legion of devils, and the text saith, he wore no clothes ; his madness is evidenced by that, he would suffer no clothes to be put upon him. It is a sign Men are spiritually possessed with a legion of devils, that refuse to put on the garment of faith and holiness to cover their Nakedness. These garments are held forth every day to be sold, without money and without price, in the ministry of the Word ; but so mad are ungodly men, they had rather go Naked, than lay hold on them, and put them on. And is it not just, that such Men should be buried in hell, in their own rags, that will not embrace Christ and holiness, that they may be clothed with eternal salvation ; Isa. lv. 1, 2, Rev. iii. 18.

WICKED MEN COMPARED TO VIPERS.

“ O generation of Vipers,” &c., Matt. iii. 7.

JOHN Baptist calls the Scribes and Pharisees, and other wicked Men of the Jews, Vipers : not only Vipers, but a seed and generation of Vipers. Some think he alludes to the devil, that old serpent, whose offspring they were : “ Ye are of your father the devil,” &c., John viii. 44. But others rather think, he compares them to the serpent called the Viper, upon consideration of divers properties, wherein there is a fit resemblance between it and them, &c.

PARALLELS.

I. THE Viper is a most poisonous creature : when the barbarians saw the Viper stick on Paul’s hand, they looked upon him as a dead man ; their biting is accounted mortal, Acts xxviii. 6. So the Wicked are a very destructive and murderous generation of Men, their bitter words and cruel slanders, are like deadly venom : “ The poison of asps is under their tongues.” David complains of the ungodly upon this account, “ Whose tongue,” saith he, “ is as a sharp word.” Sin is compared to poison : “ Their poison is like the poison of a serpent,” &c. “ The tongue,” saith James, “ is full of deadly poison,” James iii. 18. And if this be the nature of their words, what are their works ! If poison be in their words, what poison is in their blows, and cursed bitings ! “ Their teeth are spears and arrows,” Psal. lvii. 4.

II. The Viper devours scorpions, and thereby the poison becomes stronger : so the Pharisees and Sadducees, taking in the poisonous opinions of their corrupt Rabbins, by adding their own, increased the poison of their vile errors. Blackwood.

III. The Viper hath a beautiful skin, though inwardly very venomous : so those Pharisees, like other painted hypocrites, made a fair show in the flesh, appeared devout, and glorious to men, but were inwardly full of poison of lust, and abominable error.

IV. Young Vipers, as Aristotle,* Pliny,† Rhodogin,‡ and others affirm, eat their way into the world through their mother’s belly, though some seem to doubt of the truth of this generally received opinion : so the Scribes and Pharisees cried out, we are Abraham’s children, &c., and from thence concluded, they were meet subjects for baptism, and should be saved : they, like Vipers, as one observes, would needs find a way to heaven through the bowels of their ancestors, or by the faith of their parents : but what said the Baptist ? “ O generation of vipers, &c., think not to say within yourselves, we have Abraham to our father,” &c., Matt. iii. 7, 9. Or as another worthy writer observes upon the place ; as the Viper eats, saith he, through the bowels of his dam, that they may come to life ; so you Scribes and Pharisees kill your mother the Synagogue, your fathers the prophets, and faithful teachers, that you may live in your pride and covetousness.

V. Gesner, and divers others, § affirm, that the female Viper is the worst, and her

* Aristot. Hist of Anim. lib. 8. ch. 29.

† Rhod. lib. 3, cap. 37.

‡ Plin. lib. 10, p. 62.

§ Jerom.

biting more deadly than the snake's ; after the biting of the male there are but two holes, but after the biting of the female there are four. See the verses of Nicander :

But of the viper's brood, the female is the worst,
Which, as it were, with greater wrath doth burn ;
And therefore when she bites, makes bodies more accurst, Inflicting hurtful wovnds, to vehemency turned ;
Rolling her bulk and tail more oft about.
Whereby a speedier death doth life let out.

This may aptly be applied to many cursed women, who, if all the viperous generations of cursed monsters, have in divers ages of the world, appeared in their venomous rage and malice against the innocent, worse than men. I might give you a catalogue of them, if needful. As some women who are gracious, seem to excel men in zeal and love, and other divine virtues so some women, when very Wicked and left to themselves, exceed most men in horrid abomination, &c.

WICKED MEN POOR.

"Poor, and blind, and naked," Rev. iii. 17.

A Christless soul is poor : it is true, a godly man, one that hath much grace, is poor in his own eyes : "I know thy poverty, but thou art rich ;" but a wicked man is really a poor man, as will appear by the following parallel.

PARALLELS.

I. HE is a poor man, that hath nothing that is really or truly good, that hath no clothes to cover him, but is naked as ever he was born ; that hath never a bit of bread nor any thing that is good to eat, but lives upon husks, chaff, and ashes, &c. Now Wicked Men are so Poor and miserable, that they have nothing that is truly good : they are naked, as we have showed, their souls are naked ; they have nothing to eat but husks and ashes ; for such are those empty and perishing things, of the world compared to in the scripture, on which they feed : "He feedeth on ashes," &c., Isa. xlv. 20. The prodigal "would fain have filled his belly with the husks which the swine did eat," Luke xv. 16. "Ephraim," saith God, "feedeth on the wind," &c., Hos. xii. 1, therefore Wicked Men are Poor and miserable.

II. He is a Poor Man, that as he hath nothing, so he can do nothing, whereby to help or relieve himself in his necessity : Wicked Men, as they have nothing, so they can do nothing, to relieve their own souls : they have no clothes, and none can they, by any ways of their own, obtain, or help themselves unto ; they have no food, nor can they procure any : "They labour for that which is not bread, and spend their strength for that which satisfies not," Isa. lv. 1, 2, therefore Poor and miserable,

III. He is a Poor Man, that as he hath nothing, and can do nothing, so he hath no body, neither friend nor brother, that can do any thing for him : but thus in a spiritual sense it is with Wicked Men, and therefore Poor and miserable.

IV. He is a Poor Man, who as he hath nothing, can do nothing, nor hath any body to do for him, and yet is many thousand pounds in debt : such is the state of Wicked Men, they have nothing, can do nothing, have no friend or brother to do any thing for them, yet do owe ten thousand talents to God's justice, which is a great, a very great sum, and therefore Poor and miserable, Matt. xviii. 24.

V. He is a Poor Man, that as he hath nothing, can do nothing, hath none to do any thing for him, and is many thousand pounds in debt ; and besides, is a sorry soul, he has no worth in him, being a vile, base, sordid, and ill-natured wretch, worthy of no regard or pity, one that no body will cast an eye of compassion upon : but such is the condition of every ungodly person, they have no worth nor excellency at all in them, they are not worth regard nor pity, there is nothing in them that can move God to respect them, nor his angels to regard them, therefore very Poor and miserable, Ezek. xvi.

VI. He is a Poor Man that is in the condition we have mentioned, and that which aggravates his poverty is this, he is not like ever to be in a condition to help himself, nor to find a friend or brother to help him: a Man may be to-day miserable, helpless, and friendless, but in a little time possibly it may be better with him, and he may supply his own necessities, or get some to relieve him. Now ungodly Men are in the state you have heard, and are never like to be in a better condition, by any means of their own, or by any friend of theirs, and therefore poor and miserable.

VII. He is a Poor Man that is in the condition above-mentioned, and not only so, but is sick, wounded, and in prison, &c. Such spiritually is the state of all Wicked Men, viz., sick, wounded, blind, naked, and in prison, under the power of sin and Satan, and therefore poor and miserable, Isa. i. 5.

VIII. Some men's great and miserable poverty has come upon them, partly by the pride, abominable lust, and extravagancy of their parents, and partly by their own idleness, lust, and prodigality: even so the spiritual want and poverty of Men was in part brought upon them by the sins of our first parents, and partly by their own actual sins. This is the state of unregenerated persons, they all even thus poor and miserable: and happy are they who see this to be their condition; "Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven," Matt. v. 3. Those who see their own wants, poverty, and misery, shall out of the fulness of Jesus Christ be supplied with whatsoever they need: for though Man naturally be so poor, that he hath nothing, can do nothing, and hath no earthly friend or brother that can do any thing for him; and besides, he owes ten thousand talents, and is worth no regard nor pity; yet the eternal God hath found out a way, for the manifestation of his own glorious grace and bounty, to enrich him, and make him happy for ever. "He that was rich became poor, that we through his poverty might be made rich."

DISPARITY.

Poor Men are full of complaints, they commonly bewail their poverty, and would gladly have all their wants supplied, and be made rich, if they knew but which way it might be done: but Wicked Men, though they are poor, so humble and miserable as hath been shown, yet they are contented, being woefully blinded by the devil, &c., so that though they are daily told how they may be made rich, yet they slight all advice and counsel, and stubbornly refuse the riches of grace and glory.

THE HEART OF A WICKED MAN COMPARED TO A ROCK.

"And like a hammer that breaks the Rock in pieces," Jer. xxiii. 29.

"And I will take away the stony Heart," &c., Ezek. xi. 19.

"And some fell upon a Rock," &c., Luke viii. 6.

"They made their Hearts as an adamant-stone," Zech. vii. 12.

NOTE, the Hearts of sinners are like Rocks; or, Wicked Men have stony and rocky Hearts.

PARALLELS.

I. A Rock is a barren and fruitless place; what will grow upon a Rock? so the hearts of Wicked Men are barren and unfruitful to God; they bring forth no spiritual fruit to him.

II. Rain cannot enter nor soak into a Rock, but as it falls, so it glides off, and runs away: so the spiritual rain of heaven, viz., God's Word, though it falls never so powerfully upon ungodly Men, it will not enter inter their Hearts: "My word has no place in you," saith Christ, &c. Good doctrine, and heavenly counsel glides off of these spiritual Rocks, like rain from a Rock, or high mountain.

III. Rocks and stones are naturally rough, and unfit for use, until they are hewed and squared, &c. So the Hearts of Wicked Men are naturally rough, and unfit for any spiritual use, until they are hewed by the axe and hammer of the Word: "I have hewed them by the prophets," Hos. vi. 5.

IV. A little thing will not break a hard stone, or a flinty Rock, &c. So a little matter will not break a stony or Rocky-Hearted sinner; God strikes often, and strikes hard, gives many a blow upon their Hearts, by his Word, and by his Spirit, and sometimes by afflictions, before their hearts will yield, or break in pieces.

V. He that will break a Rock in pieces, or hew stones to make them fit for use, must have a meet and convenient instrument : so God makes use of a right and fit instrument to break in pieces the hard and Rocky Hearts of ungodly Men, viz., his blessed Word, in the hand of the Spirit : "Is not my word like a hammer, that breaks the Rock in pieces?" Jer. xxiii. 29.

VI. A Man many times employs workmen to break a Rock, and hew stones : so God employs his ministers, as workmen in his hand, to break these spiritual Rocks, and hew these rough and ragged stones, to make them fit to lay in his spiritual building. "I have hewed them by the prophets," Hos. vi. 5.

VII. Seed that falls upon a Rock, or stony place, though it doth spring up, it soon withereth away, if the fowls of heaven do not pick it up : so the Word of God, if it be sown upon stony and Rocky-hearted sinners, though it may seem to spring up, yet it soon withers for want of root. "They believe for awhile, but in time of temptation fall away," Luke viii. 13.

I N F E R E N C E S .

I. No marvel minister's work is so hard and laborious, they are God's stone-cutters, or Rock-hewers ; nay, and it fares worse with them than with other workmen, that work in stone-pits, or hew stones, they labour all day, and go home at night, and come again in the morning, and find their work as they left it : but God's workmen hew, and take pains, and leave their people, and come again, and find them worse than before, their Hearts many times growing more hard and obdurate, &c.

II. Let not ministers, notwithstanding all this, be discouraged, for they know not but at last God may set a word home that may do the business, and make the hard-Hearted sinner tremble, and cry out, as they did, Acts ii. 37, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?"

Quest. But some may say, from whence doth it arise, or what is the cause of this spiritual hardness that is in the Hearts of men.

Answ. 1. Naturally the sinner's Heart is hard, and like a Rock ; we all brought a flinty and churlish nature into the world with us ; such is the effect of original sin.

2. There is also an acquired hardness. Pharaoh hardened his own Heart ; and the prophet saith, "They have made their Hearts as an adamant stone," Zech. vii. 12.

3. There is a judiciary hardness of heart, which is inflicted by God as a judge. Men harden their own hearts against God, and God at length resolves they shall be hard indeed ; and therefore he withdraws the common influences of his grace from them, and deprives them of all gracious means of softening. And when all these three meet together in a man, he is irrecoverably hard and sinful. "His neck is an iron sinew, and his brow brass," Isa. xlviii. 4.

4. A Man is hardened in his sin gradually ; and as he grows harder and harder, so nearer and nearer to eternal ruin. (1.) He takes leave to meditate on sin, he rolls it up and down in his thoughts as it were ; a hard Heart lets vain thoughts dwell in it. (2.) He takes some tastes of the pleasure and delight of sin, it seems to him as a sweet morsel under his tongue ; and this is a sign of a further degree of hardness. (3.) The third step is, custom in sinning ; it argues great boldness to venture often. (4.) And then in the next place he defends and maintains his, he has got some plea or argument for it ; he is an advocate for sin. (5.) He is angry with them, and secretly hates them in his Heart, that reprove him for his sin, or advise him against such and such wicked ways. (6.) He grows soon after this conscience-proof, and sermon-proof, nay, and judgment-proof too ; he neither fears rod nor sword ; a stone will yield as soon as he. (7.) He after this sits down in the seat of the scorner, derides and reproaches the law, and mocks at approaching judgments, like the Sodomites. (8.) And at last becomes a persecutor of them that are godly, like cursed Pharaoh, &c.

Quest. What are the signs of a hard Heart ?

Answ. 1. When many blows will not break it, nor make the Heart yield. Notwithstanding God lays on hard and heavy strokes by his Word, by conscience, and by judgments, yet nothing works remorse.

2. When that word or sermon which wrought powerfully upon another person, works not at all upon thee.

3. When the divine rain of the word glides off thy heart, and will not remain or abide with thee, it is a sign thy Heart is hard.

4. When thou art neither troubled for thy own sins, nor troubled for the sins of others.

5. When thine own miseries, the miseries of the saints, and the distresses of Zion, do not melt thee, nor work compassion in thy soul: though God is dishonoured, his right and sovereignty invaded, and ruin seems to be at the door, yet thou art not troubled at any of these things.

WICKED MEN COMPARED TO EAGLES.

"He shall come as an Eagle against the House of the Lord," Hos. viii. 1. Some understand this Eagle signified Nebuchadnezzar; others, the Assyrian, &c.

"Our persecutors are swifter than the Eagles of heaven," &c., Lam. iv. 19.

Tyrants and cruel persecutors are compared to Eagles.

PARALLELS.

I. EAGLES are very swift in their flight, and that especially when they pursue their prey. So cruel persecutors are swift to shed blood: "They haste like eagles to the prey," Isa. v. 26.

II. Eagles are quarrelsome creatures, preying, devouring, envious, proud, lofty, the plague and tormentors of all other birds or fowls of heaven, as naturalists observe. Gesner reports, that in a certain Eagle's nest were found three hundred ducks, one hundred and sixty geese, forty hares, and many fishes, &c. In these respects Wicked Men, or bloody persecutors, may fitly be compared to them: they are very quarrelsome, always seeking occasion against the innocent; envious, proud, and lofty, as appeared in Pharaoh, and others. They are the very plague and torment of all their neighbours. How many hath the Roman Eagle destroyed! How many thousands, nay, hundred thousands of the sheep and lambs of Jesus Christ have been found in her nest! as I may so say. "In her was found the blood of prophets, and of saints, and of all that were slain upon the earth," Rev. xviii. 24.

III. The Eagle is a subtle and crafty creature: she will fill her wings with dust, and get upon a stag's horns, and by beating the dust and sand into his eyes she blinds him, and then soon conquers him. She also carries shell-fishes on high, letting them fall upon a rock to break them, which sets forth her great subtlety, &c. How crafty have many persecutors been to destroy the godly! "Come," saith Pharaoh, "let us deal wisely with them." Their common practice is, to put the saints into wolves' skins, and then set the dogs upon them, to worry them. Christ was accused for being an enemy to Cæsar; and the apostles, "as movers of sedition," Acts xxiv. 5. Thus the cruel Papists dealt with the good lord Cobham, and many other Christians, viz., accused them with treason and rebellion, that so they might with the better colour take away their lives.

IV. An Eagle is an unclean creature, and therefore God would not have it to be offered up in sacrifice; though she be accounted the king of birds, yet God rather chose the dove upon this account, and refused the Eagle; so wicked men are unclean, and their prayers and sacrifices, yea, their best performances, are an abomination in the sight of the Lord, Prov. xv. 8, 9.

V. An Eagle is no comely bird, she hath no sweet voice, nor is she good for food: so Wicked Men are not comely, but contrary-wise, very fulsome and ill-favoured in God's sight, neither is their voice sweet in his ears. Christ takes great delight to see his people, and in hearing their voice. "Let me see thy countenance, let me hear thy voice; for sweet is thy voice, and thy countenance is comely," Cant. ii. 14. But thus he speaks not of the ungodly: their persons and prayers are no ways delightful to the Almighty. "God had respect to Abel, and his offering; but unto Cain, and his offering, he had not respect," Gen. iv. 4, 5.

DISPARITY.

An Eagle hath many and excellent properties, wherein there is a great disparity between her and ungodly men; and upon this account the Lord Jesus is compared to an Eagle, and his saints to Eagles. See Christ an Eagle.

WICKED MEN COMPARED TO THE DEVIL.

"Have not I chosen you twelve? and one of you is a Devil," John vi. 70.

"The Devil shall cast some of you into prison," &c., Rev. ii. 10.

VILE and ungodly men may in many respects be compared unto the Devil himself.

PARALLELS.

I. The Devil at first was formed or created by the Almighty; I do not say, he was created a Devil, sin made him a Devil, but God at first made him; he was created an angel of light: so God created Wicked Men; they are God's creatures: though God at first made no Man Wicked: "The Lord created Man upright, but he hath sought out many inventions," Eccl. vii. 29. It is sin that hath made Man so vile.

II. The Devil then is grievously degenerated from what he once was; so are Wicked Men from what they were in Adam.

III. The Devil is an enemy to God; he was God's first enemy: so are Wicked Men cursed enemies of God, and early enemies too: it is thought Man became God's enemy not many days after Satan fell; he is almost as old an enemy as the Devil is.

IV. The Devil conspired like a vile traitor against his lawful Sovereign: so have all the ungodly ever done, and still daily do: they would not have God reign, nor his laws be obeyed, &c., but would magnify themselves, and their cursed edicts, above the righteous laws and statutes of heaven.

V. The Devil sins freely, naturally, with full purpose, and cannot but sin: so Wicked Men sin freely, it is sweet and pleasant to them, it is like sweet wine, &c. They delight in sin; their hearts, as Solomon says, "Are fully set in them to do wickedly," Eccl. viii. 11. "They drink in iniquity, as the fish drinks water," Job xv. 16. "Can the Ethiopian change his skin? then may they who are accustomed to do evil, learn to do well," Jer. xiii. 3. Hence saith the apostle, "Having their eyes full of adultery, and that cannot cease from sin," 2 Pet. ii. 14.

VI. The Devil hates those that are truly godly, and seeks to beguile and deceive them: so Wicked and ungodly Men hate the saints, and strive to entice and draw away their hearts from God and his ways. Hence, as Satan is called a deceiver, and a serpent; so are some of his children.

VII. The Devil's great design is to encourage vice and all profaneness, and by one means or another to suppress real godliness: so this is the great design and endeavour of some Wicked Men.

VIII. The Devil is so vile, that God seeth it necessary to lay a restraint upon him, and put him into chains, or else the world would not have a moment's time of peace and quiet: so ungodly Men are so much like the Devil in this, that God also sees the like need to restrain them: for as the Devil is boundless in his wrath, rage, and malice against mankind, so are his cursed emissaries against their fellow-creatures: hence God puts a hook into their jaws, and sets bars to these swelling seas.

IX. The Devil trembles at the thoughts of God's wrath, and dreads the day that is coming: so do Wicked Men fear him, not because they love him, but because they are his enemies, and as such, they fear he will one day reckon with them.

X. The Devil tempts to sin; he is not contented to be vile himself, but he would fain have others be vile and ungodly as well as he: so Wicked Men tempt, entice, and draw others to sin; they are not content to be ungodly themselves, but strive to defile and corrupt others also.

XI. The Devil is a murderer, a great murderer, and takes delight in shedding of blood, and making desolation in the earth, hence called a lion, and a dragon: 1 Pet. v. 8. So wicked persecutors are in this the very picture of the Devil, viz., great murderers; their feet run swift to shed blood. How many thousands of innocent souls have the bloody Roman Devils destroyed within these twelve hundred years! They delight in spoiling, and making desolate the inhabitants of the earth, who oppose their pride, or stand in the way of their exaltation; and thence they are called lions and dragons likewise, Psal. xxii. 13, Psal. xlii. 19.

XII. The Devil would fain make those who fear God miserable in this world, he envies their happiness, and if he was but let loose upon them, he would utterly deprive them of their goods, of their children, of their health, &c., and bring them into a forlorn and miserable condition, as he dealt with holy Job; so some Wicked Men in this are like the Devil, they envy the peace and prosperity of God's people, and if God did not restrain them, were it in their power, they would rob them of all their goods, as some have attempted of late, nay, and destroy their offspring. How many innocent babes did the Papists destroy in the massacre in Ireland, crying out, spare them not, nits will become lice! They grudge them their liberty; and therefore, saith God, "The Devil shall cast some of you into prison," &c., Rev. ii. 10. Is the Devil come to be a pursuivant, or an officer, to give warrants to cast into prison? No, but it is spoken of wicked persecutors, that the Devil sets on work.

XIII. The Devil is an accuser, one that vilifies and reproaches all sincere Christians; he is called the accuser of the brethren: Wicked Men are in this also like the Devil, they love to accuse and vilify the godly in the land; as Tertullus served Paul, "We have found this man a pestilent fellow, a mover of sedition," &c., Acts xxiv. 5. They continually labour to render them odious, that so they may be hated, and exposed to the severity of the law, and merciless rage of the rude rabble.

XIV. The Devil is utterly cast off and forsaken of God, and shall have his portion in the lake; there is no hope left him for an escape; he knows it will for ever be his portion: so some Wicked Men are utterly rejected of God, and given up to a reprobate mind, and there is no hope left for them of escaping the damnation of hell; they shall as surely be damned and tormented for ever and ever, as it is certain the Devils shall. So that in these, and many other things that I shall pass by, it appears, Wicked Men bear a resemblance of the Devil, they are like unto him, they have the image of the Devil upon them; sin turns a Man into a Devil. "Have not I chosen you twelve? and one of you is a Devil," John vi. 70.

DISPARITY.

The Devil is a spirit, a created spirit; Wicked Men are flesh as well as spirit. Now the nature of a spirit in very many things differs from a human body, so that in divers respects, there is a great difference between the Devil and the ungodly.

INFERENCES.

- I. No marvel Wicked Men and the saints agree no better.
- II. O what a fearful thing is it to be left and forsaken of God!
- III. No marvel Wicked Men strive so much to set up and establish the Devil's kingdom, seeing they are acted by like principles, and are alike enemies of God.
- IV. The godly may wonder they are not long ago destroyed, considering the cursed and devilish disposition of Wicked Men, amongst whom they live; it is God only that hath restrained them.

METAPHORS, ALLEGORIES, SIMILES, TYPES, ETC.,

THAT RESPECT

I. THE TRUE MINISTERS OF THE GOSPEL. II. FALSE MINISTERS. III. FALSE CHURCHES.

MINISTERS COMPARED TO ANGELS.

"The seven stars are the Angels of the seven churches," &c., Rev. i. 20.
"Unto the Angel of the church of Ephesus," &c., Rev. ii. 1.

METAPHOR.

MINISTERS are called Angels.

I. Angels are endued with most eminent power and dignity, they excel in strength.

II. Angels are God's messengers, and are often sent to bring good news to men; the angels brought the first tidings of Christ's nativity.

III. Angels are very wise; David was said to be wise, according to the wisdom of an angel of God, 2 Sam. xiv. 17.

IV. Angels desire to pry into the mysteries of grace and mercy, by Jesus Christ, 1 Pet. i. 12.

V. Angels are lively, beautiful, and shining. When Angels appeared to divers persons, of whom we read, their brightness and glory was very great.

VI. Angels are very obedient to God, they do his commands, and wait for his word.

VII. Angels are swift in executing their business; hence said to have wings.

VIII. Angels have made known much of the mind of God to the sons of Men.

IX. Angels admire, reverence, and adore the glorious majesty of

PARALLEL.

I. So hath God endued his ministers with great power and dignity, they are his substitutes on earth, they represent Christ himself: and Paul saith, "He could do all things through Christ that strengthened him," Phil. iv. 13.

II. So the Ministers of the Gospel are Christ's messengers, they are called the messengers of the churches, and the glory of Christ; they bring the glad tidings of peace and salvation, by Christ, 2 Cor. viii. 23.

III. Ministers of Christ are, or ought to be, wise Men, they understand the mysteries of Christ, and open them to others. The secrets of the Lord are with them, the angels themselves understand the manifold wisdom of God by his Saints, and ministers of the Gospel, Eph. iii. 10.

IV. Christ's true Ministers, make it their great business to study Christ, to dig and dive into the hidden mysteries; "I determined to know nothing among you but Christ, and him crucified, 1 Cor. ii. 1, 2.

V. Christ's true ministers are lively, and very beautiful; when the Spirit of the Lord is eminently upon them, they shine gloriously in grace, and holiness: Stephen, who was a glorious preacher, was said to shine like the face of an Angel, Acts vi. 15.

VI. The faithful preachers of the Gospel are very ready to obey God's commands, though they are thereby exposed to great danger, if God bid them go, they go, Rom. i. 15.

VII. The Ministers of the Gospel are swift in their spiritual motion, they are said to fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting Gospel to preach, &c., Rev. xiv. 6.

VIII. Christ's true Ministers daily make known the mind and will of God, it is one great part of their work and business.

IX. The ministers of Christ, and all true Christians admire and adore God, and his glorious

METAPHOR.

God, and therefore veil their faces before him, and give glory to him; yea, as Mr. Venning observes, it is their very business to sing hallelujahs to God; Angels worship is singing and praising of God, they seek not themselves in serving God.

for God, but the honour and glory of his name only.

X. Angels do their service to the Lord with joyfulness; the morning stars, it is said, sang together, and all the sons of God shout-ed for joy.

XI. Angels are without wearisomeness in their work and service, they are as strong and as lively at the end, as they are at the beginning.

XII. Angels serve the saints, and watch over them, and daily administer to them; and though glorious creatures, do not think it below them so to do.

XIII. Angels are often sent to comfort the saints when cast down, as they ministered to Christ in his bloody agony.

PARALLEL.

majesty, and with self abhorrency veil their faces, as it were, ascribing all glory and honour unto God: "Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but to thy name do we give glory," Psal. cxv. 1. The servants of God desire only to rejoice in God, they know no other name to glory in, but in the name of the Lord; and hence they sing his praise, though in prison, Acts xvi. 25. In all which they seek not themselves, in any service they do

X. So Christ's true and faithful ministers and people, take much delight in their service, their minds run exceedingly upon their work, to do for God; to spend, and be spent for God and his people, is the desire and delight of their souls.

XI. So Christ's faithful Ministers and people, by the help of God's Spirit, labour and faint not, "For which cause we faint not," &c. 2 Cor. iv. 16. They shall run and not be weary; Caleb was as strong and as able to do service for God at fourscore, as he was at forty years old, Josh. xiv. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11.

XII. So the true and faithful preachers of God's Word serve the churches, members, and saints of God, and daily watch over them, and minister unto them; and though possibly some of them may far excel in parts and wisdom, yet they think not his service below them.

XIII. So are Gospel preachers sent, and commanded to comfort the feeble-minded, and support the weak; they know how to comfort others with the same comfort whereby they themselves are comforted of God, 2 Cor. i. 4.

INFERENCES.

I. This may inform us, what glory and dignity God hath conferred upon his servants who labour in the Ministry; they have a glorious name, and are greatly honoured by the Lord, and therefore should be received with all due respect, and esteemed very highly for their work's sake.

II. It shows us who are true Ministers of the Gospel.

III. It shows Christ's faithful Ministers, how they should do their work, and behave themselves before the Lord.

MINISTERS COMPARED TO STARS.

"The mystery of the seven Stars, which thou sawest in my right-hand, and the seven golden candlesticks: The seven Stars are the seven angels of the seven churches; and the seven candlesticks are the seven churches." Rev. i. 20.

By Stars in this place, it appears the Ministers of God's word are meant.

METAPHOR.

I. Naturalists say, the sun communicates his light to the Stars.

II. The Stars are placed by the Lord in the heavens.

PARALLEL.

I. So Christ imparts of his Spirit, and saving light and knowledge, to his faithful Ministers.

II. So the Ministers of the Gospel are placed by the Lord in the Church.

METAPHOR.

III. The Stars are a great ornament, and shine gloriously in the heavens.

IV. Stars differ one from another in glory.

V. Stars sometimes are-obscured by clouds, and shine not.

VI. Stars are a guide unto mariners.

VII. A Star led the wise men to Christ.

VIII. Stars give light to men, only in the night.

IX. The Stars send down sweet influences on the earth: "Canst thou bind in sweet influences of pleiades, or, the seven Stars?" Job xxxviii. 31.

PARALLEL.

III. So faithful Ministers are a great ornament to the church, in which they shine forth gloriously in doctrine and conversation.

IV. So there are diversities of gifts of the Spirit in the Ministers of the Gospel; some shine more than others in parts and piety.

V. So ministers sometimes, through temptations, are beclouded, and shine not as at other times.

VI. So Ministers of the Gospel are guides to spiritual mariners.

VII. A true Minister's design in preaching, is to lead men to Christ.

VIII. So Christ's Ministers shine forth, and give light to sinners, and others, whilst the night of this world doth last.

IX. So the faithful Ministers of the Gospel, in a blessed manner influence, by their heavenly doctrine and life, the souls of men to whom they preach, and daily converse with.

INFERENCES.

O What a blessing are faithful teachers to a people or nation where they live! Is it not a lovely thing to see the Gospel Stars? Pray that the heaven may be clear, and that these Stars may not disappear, nor withdraw their shining.

MINISTERS COMPARED TO LABOURERS.

"The Labourer is worthy of his meat," Luke x. 7.

THE Lord Christ compares his faithful servants, that preach his word, to Labourers, to such as externally work and labour with their hands.

METAPHOR.

I. LABOURERS usually are hired, and then sent to work. We read of one that went to hire Labourers, &c., Matt. xx.

II. Some men labour in the field, they are harvest men.

III. Some labour so hard, that they wear out their frail bodies, and bring themselves quickly to the grave.

IV. Labourers are often hindered and obstructed in their work, like as the Jews were in building the temple.

V. Labourers observe the fittest time to do business in; they work hard by day, and whilst they have good weather.

PARALLEL.

I. So Christ spiritually is said to hire Labourers, and send them into his vineyard; he assures them of a glorious reward, when they have done their work.

II. Such Labourers are the preachers of the Gospel: "The harvest is great, and the Labourers are few," &c., Matt. ix. 37. They labour to make ready, and gather in Christ's wheat.

III. So some of Christ's faithful and laborious servants labour so hard in their studies, in watching, praying, and preaching, that they spend themselves, or bring utter weakness upon their frail tabernacles, "I am willing," saith Paul, "to spend and be spent," &c., 2 Cor. xii. 15.

IV. So Christ's spiritual Labourers are often hindered in their work: Satan strives to hinder them, and false teachers strives to hinder them, and wicked persecutors endeavour to hinder them, and many times forbid them to preach any more in the name of Christ.

V. So Christ's Labourers observe the fittest time to do their work; like as Christ saith, "I must do the work of him that sent me whilst it is day; the night comes when no man can work," John ix. 4.

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

VI. A Labourer is worthy of his meat, and ought not to be denied it.

that preach the Gospel, should live of the Gospel," 1 Cor. ix. 9. And, since this duty is much neglected among some Christian Churches, I shall here transcribe a page or two, being part of a sermon preached by Mr. N. C. at the ordination of an elder in the city of London, 1681.

VI. So the Ministers of Christ ought to have all things necessary provided for them, and their families: "Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn. So God hath ordained, that they

"These words call not only for a maintenance of ministers, but for such a plentiful contribution, as may make them partakers with you in all good things. If God bless the congregation with a plentiful portion of this world's goods, it is their duty to make their Minister a party with them in their flourishing condition. And, considering the place and employment he is in, and the service he attends, it would be extremely unworthy to think you have done enough, if his pressing necessities be answered, while you abound in superfluities. If the congregation be poor, their Minister must be content to be poor with them, yea, rejoice to approve himself a Minister of Christ, by hunger and nakedness if the providence of God calls him thereto: but whilst it is in the power of your hand to provide better for him, God expects it from you; and, 'be not deceived, God is not mocked,' neither will he suffer his commands to be slighted and evaded, without rendering a just rebuke to the offender: "For whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

"Now that you may the better understand how far you are concerned in this duty, before I proceed to the further pressing of it, let me put you in remembrance:

"1. That a Minister is bound to attend wholly and only upon his calling in the Ministry, and not to entangle himself in the affairs of this life, that he may please him by whom he is called to this spiritual warfare; and nothing but real necessity may dispense with the contrary. His whole time and strength is little enough to be employed in the work and service he is called to. He must give himself to the ministry of the Word and prayer; and continue in reading, meditation, &c., as a man wholly devoted unto Gospel service; and is therefore, by his call to the ministry, secluded from those ways and means of providing for his own subsistence, as the trades and secular employments of others furnish them with, that his mind, by the cares of worldly business, may not be diverted from that study of God's word, and care of souls, which the duty of his station engageth him to. And if he may not expose himself to the careful thoughts that accompany worldly business, though tending to his profit; certainly it is no way meet, that he should be left to conflict with the thorny cares of a necessitous condition, whilst those he ministers to, have means to prevent it.

"2. It is no less the duty of a Minister, than of other men, to provide for his family, and, what lies in him, to take care of his wife and children, that they may not be exposed to a thousand miseries and temptations, when he is gone, 1 Tim. v. 8. I confess, of all men in the world, a covetous, raking temper worst becomes a Minister: but we greatly mistake, if we think he must divest himself of the due affection of an husband towards his wife, or of a father towards his children; or, that those fruits thereof, which are justly esteemed commendable in others, should be a fault in him.

"3. An elder or bishop is under a special charge to use hospitality, and to set in himself a pattern of charity, and compassionate bounty to poor souls; and if it be his duty to be hospitable and charitable in an eminent degree, than without controversy the people are concerned to endeavour that he may be capable of giving proof of this grace in him, by the exercise of it as there is occasion.

"These things being premised, I shall show you, that you lie under the strongest obligation imaginable to this duty:

- (1.) By the law of nature.
- (2.) By the express command and appointment of Christ.
- (3.) On the account of the great and manifest evil and inconvenience, that follows the neglect thereof.

"First; The law and light of nature obligeth you to it, as to the matter of equity and justice. And from hence our apostle takes his first plea, in 1 Cor ix. 7, &c., "Who goeth a warfare any time at his own charges? Who planteth a vineyard, and eateth not of the fruit thereof? or who feedeth a flock, and eateth not of the milk of the flock?" The ministry is a warfare, undertaken at the command of Christ, for the service of your souls; and it is as reasonable that the Minister should receive a supply of outward things from you, as that a faithful soldier should receive his pay from his captain, at the charge of the commonwealth, for whose good he militates. Shall a man feed a flock, as a pastor does, and be denied to eat of the milk of that flock, which it is his work to keep and feed? Or, is it consistent with common justice, to deprive a man of the fruit of that vineyard, which is planted and manured by his own labour? Such is the case, in respect of maintenance, between a Minister and the people. It is not your charity that I ask for him, but justice and debt that I plead for: he is employed in your service, and of right should live upon your charge; nay, you have called him off from other business, and therefore his maintenance is due from you, as is the wages of your servant; though I fear some give more to the meanest servant in their house, than they are willing to do to their minister. Certainly, if you choose as you ought, your Ministers are not of the lowest of the people, but may be allowed to have a share of parts, common prudence, and ability for business, with other men; and could manage trades, or fall into other employments, and get estates as well as you, if they were not devoted to a better service: and must they needs be devoted to necessities and misery, in the same hour that they enter upon the ministry? My brethren, this ought not to be. Let your Ministers have as good a treatment at least, as the law provided for the ox that treads out the corn, who might not be muzzled. Neither was this written for the sake of oxen; for, doth God take care of oxen? or were there no higher end of this law, than that the brute creature should not be abused? Certainly there was; "And for our sakes no doubt was this written, that he that plougheth should plough in hope; and that he that thresheth in hope, should be partaker of his hope: for if we have sown unto you spiritual things, is it a great thing if we shall reap your carnal things?" 1 Cor. ix. 8—11.

"Secondly, The Lord hath not left us to argue this only from general principles of reason, and common equity; but, to put the matter beyond dispute, hath super-added his express command. Thus he provided for his ministers in the time of the law, which the apostle urgeth in the next place: 1 Cor. ix. 13, "Do ye not know, that they which minister about holy things, live of the things of the temple? and they which wait at the altar, are partakers with the altar?" God did no sooner separate the Levites to the service of the sanctuary, but he by law provided for their subsistence; and though they were but one tribe in twelve, yet the tenth of the increase of the whole land was given to them, besides the first-fruits and offerings, and divers other advantages; so that their lot might equal, yea, exceed that of their brethren. This law indeed is now abrogated, and we pretend to no right of tithing your estates; but the moral equity of it can never cease: neither hath Christ left Gospel Ministers to the wide world, but hath made provision for them also, so far as the interest of his command will go with them that profess his name; for so it follows, ver. 14, 'Even so hath the Lord ordained, that they which preach the Gospel, should live of the Gospel.' The Labourer is still worthy of his hire, and not the less worthy, because he labours in the Gospel. Though indeed, if men did fully come up to their duty, yet still, the charge of Gospel worship will appear very inconsiderable, when compared with that of the law; for, were that my business, I think I could demonstrate, that the fifth part of their estates was yearly to be spent in things relating to the temple service. And if we are sensible of the great privilege and blessing of the Gospel, on higher accounts than merely the ease of those burdens, we shall never think much to defray the moderate charge of a Gospel-ministry, in such a manner as may give reputation to our profession.

"Thirdly, That you may prevent the evil and inconvenience that follows the neglect of this duty, it concerns you cheerfully to practice it: I might have said, evils and inconveniences, as of many, for many there are, and those of easy observations to an unprejudiced eye; but it is the discouragement of study, which at present I chiefly aim at. That study must needs be discouraged, I intend the study of theology, by the people's neglect to make a comfortable provision for their ministers, is too evident to require a proof. Who will apply himself to gather and lay up those stores of solid learning, which are needful to a Minister, when he can expect to purchase nothing to himself but poverty and distress thereby? Or, how shall a Minister be capable to furnish himself with universal knowledge of things relating to his work, that hath no means for providing for his own information, or no time free from cares and worldly business? And the disadvantage of this will at last fall to the share of the people that he ministers unto. He that considers, that the holy scriptures were originally written in Hebrew and Greek, must have a hard forehead, if he deny the usefulness of learning to a Minister; besides, many other things there are that call for it, in reference to the opening of the scriptures, which I cannot now insist upon. And it is not without diligent and continued study, that the deep things of God can be searched out, and so proposed to you, as to enrich your minds with the clear and solid knowledge of them. I confess, a little learning, and less study, may furnish a man with such a discourse, as may please some weak persons, that judge of a sermon by the loudness of the voice, and affectionate sentences, or can fancy themselves to be fed with the ashes of jingling words, and cadency of terms in a discourse. But alas! the seeming warmth of affection that is stirred by such means, is as short-lived, as a land-flood that hath no spring to feed it. He that will do the souls of his people good, and approve himself a pastor after God's own heart, must feed them with knowledge and understanding, and endeavour to maintain a constant zeal and affection in them, by well informing their judgments, and such an opening of the mind of God from the scriptures, as may command their consciences: and this is not to be expected, but from him, that labours in his study, as well as in the pulpit. Mistake me not; I know the success and fruit of all the studies and labours of men that preach the Gospel, is from the grace and power of the Holy Ghost; but the assistance of the Spirit is to be expected by us in the way of our duty. These things might be yet applied more home to my present purpose; but perhaps some will think there is too much said already, though I heartily wish more were not needful, and my time calls me to put a period to this exercise; and therefore I will only add a word for the enforcement of this and the other duties which I have laid before you, by accommodating the same things to you, which were before touched, for the encouragement and quickening of your pastor in his duty.

“First, remember your pastor is the Minister of Christ, one that dispenseth the mysteries of God to you in his name; and therefore, he acting in his place, according to his duty, the Lord Jesus will account that done to himself, that is done to his Minister; ‘He that receiveth you,’ saith he, ‘receiveth me, and he that despiseth you, despiseth me,’ &c., Matt. x. 40, with Luke x. 16. If the name and authority of Christ will beget an awe in you, or his matchless and unspeakable love influence you, there is no want of motives to those duties that have been passed upon you. If you acknowledge a religious respect and reverence due to the Son of God, exercise it in humble obedience to his Word; and if you love him, and value his Gospel, treat not his Ministers in an unworthy manner; and forget not, that he, who gave his life a ransom for you, well deserves a return of the greatest love from you, and to be honoured by you, not only with good words, but ‘with your substance, and the first-fruits of all your increase,’ Prov. iii. 9.

“Secondly, it is the business of your salvation, and the concern of your precious and immortal souls, that a Minister is employed in; and therefore it is much more your own interest than his, that you should make conscience of your duty. With this argument the apostle enforces his exhortation, Heb. xiii. 17, ‘For they watch for your souls, as they that must give an account, that they do it with joy, and not with grief, for that is unprofitable for you.’ The ministry can never be effectual to the saving of your souls, if you be not sincere in obedience under it. And will you be less careful for your souls, and their eternal welfare, than you are for your bodies, and the comforts of a temporal life? Can you be content to lay out your strength and substance to provide for these, and neglect the other? It is sad to consider, how many there are among professors, that live in the world, as if there were no truth in the report of that which is to come, and have the meanest esteem of the most necessary means of salvation, viz., the Word, and ordinances of Christ, and a Gospel ministry; can expend perhaps an hundred pounds per annum, more or less, for the convenience, ornament or delight of a frail carcase, but will not bestow half so much for the poor, or the support of Gospel worship.”

MINISTERS COMPARED TO WATCHMEN.

" I have set Watchmen upon thy wall, O Jerusalem," Isa. lxii. 6.

" I have made thee a Watchman," &c., Ezek. iii. 17.

" They watch for your souls," Heb. xiii. 17.

Ministers are called Watchmen.

METAPHOR.

I. Watchmen have a charge committed to them, and they ought to take heed they do not betray their trust.

1. They are entrusted with the word, the faithful Word and doctrine of God is committed to them; they must see they preach nothing for doctrine, but what is the direct and undeniable truth and mind of God; they must not corrupt the Word, nor intermix it with the traditions of men. "I gave thee charge in the sight of God, who quickeneth all things, and before Christ, who before Pontius Pilate witnessed a good confession, that thou keep this commandment without spot, unrebukeable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ," 1 Tim. vi. 13.

2. They have received the charge of preaching God's word; they must preach, whoever forbid them. "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing, and his kingdom; preach the word, be instant in season and out of season, reprove, exhort, with all long-suffering and doctrine," 2 Tim. iv. 1, 2.

3. They have the charge of God's ordinances, or the holy sacraments of baptism and the Lord's Supper. "Go therefore, teach all nations, i. e., make disciples, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," &c., Matt. xxviii. 19, 20. "For I received from the Lord that which I also delivered unto you." I had it in charge as if he should say, from Christ himself, "that the same night in which he was betrayed, he took bread, and blessed it, and said, take, eat, this is my body which is broken for you; this do in remembrance of me: after the same manner he took the cup," &c., 1 Cor. xi. 23, 24. They must not corrupt the ordinances, nor administer them otherwise than the plain rule, left in the Word of God, directeth.

4. They have the charge of the Church and flock of God: "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and unto the flock over which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the Church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood," &c., Acts xx. 28.

5. They must know the state of the flock, and be examples to the flock. "Feed the flock of God which is amongst you, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind; neither being lords over God's heritage, but being examples to the flock," 1 Pet. v. 2, 3.

6. Lastly; they have the charge of men's souls: "Watch for your souls, as such that must give an account," Heb. xiii. 17.

II. Watchmen are not to sleep, nor give way to slumber! they must be awake when others sleep, to see what dangers are near.

III. Watchmen are to give warning, if they see evil coming: hence they ought to have a good eye-sight; a blind man is not fit to be a Watchman.

hundred eyes; they should be full of eyes, like the living creatures about the throne, to see before them, and behind them, that so they may perceive clearly every thing

PARALLEL.

I. Ministers have a great charge committed to them, which they ought to see to, and so to behave themselves, that they may have their accounts to give up with joy: for,

I. Ministers have a great charge committed to them, which they ought to see to, and so to behave themselves, that they may have their accounts to give up with joy: for,

I. Ministers have a great charge committed to them, which they ought to see to, and so to behave themselves, that they may have their accounts to give up with joy: for,

I. Ministers have a great charge committed to them, which they ought to see to, and so to behave themselves, that they may have their accounts to give up with joy: for,

I. Ministers have a great charge committed to them, which they ought to see to, and so to behave themselves, that they may have their accounts to give up with joy: for,

I. Ministers have a great charge committed to them, which they ought to see to, and so to behave themselves, that they may have their accounts to give up with joy: for,

I. Ministers have a great charge committed to them, which they ought to see to, and so to behave themselves, that they may have their accounts to give up with joy: for,

II. So the Ministers of the Gospel must not be sleepy and slothful; they are to be upon the watchtower, to see what danger approacheth, or is coming upon the Church and people of God.

III. So Ministers, or Christ's spiritual Watchmen, must give warning, when they see danger approaching, and therefore had need be men of knowledge: they are called seers; if they have no eyes, they cannot be called seers. Ministers had need be like Argus, whom poets say had an

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

that is evil or hurtful to the souls of men, or Church of God, and give warning of it; and not like those foolish Watchmen the prophet speaks of, "His Watchmen are blind, sleeping, lying down, loving to slumber," Isa. lvi. 10. "If the Watchman seeth the sword coming, and blow not the trumpet, and the people be not warned; if the sword come and take away any person from among them, he is taken away in his iniquity, but his blood will I require at the Watchman's hand," Ezek. xxxiii. 6, 7.

They are to give warning to sinners, that they repent, and be converted, for wrath is gone out against them from the Lord; if they live in one sin, they must perish: they are to warn them of the danger of unbelief, to warn them of the danger of the hardness of their hearts, to warn them of the danger of pride, covetousness, and all other sins; to give warning of the danger of idolatry, and all false worship and heresy; of the danger of apostasy, the danger of the inordinate love of the world, or of any thing short of Jesus Christ, &c.

IV. Watchmen are made and constituted such by others, and called forth to stand upon the watch.

V. Watchmen are not for themselves, but for the flock, for the whole flock, town, parish, or army, where they are set as Watchmen.

VI. Watchmen are to give an account of the time of the night. Men go to the Watchman to enquire; he says, it is such or such an hour: "Watchman, what of the night?" &c. "The morning cometh, and also the night," Isa. xxi. 11, 12.

manner: "The morning cometh," the morning of that longed-for day of Christ's kingdom; "and the night," that eternal night of Babylon's ruin.

VII. Watchmen are exposed to danger, and much hardship; they are oftentimes set upon, and basely abused in the night, whilst they are upon their duties, by evil, quarrelsome, and mischievous persons, and endure many cold blasts.

VIII. Watchmen many times, through their care and diligence, by discovering approaching evils, prevent much danger and misery from falling upon men. Some by this means have been delivered from being burnt in their beds, when a violent fire hath broken out suddenly in the night; they cry out, fire, fire, to awaken people when they are asleep.

IV. So Ministers are made or constituted Watchmen by the Lord: "Son of man see, I have made thee a Watchman to the house of Israel," Ezek. xxxiii. 7. It is Christ's prerogative to appoint Watchmen, &c.

V. So a Minister is appointed to watch not only himself, but God's flock, the whole flock that is committed to his charge; yea every member of the Church: he is to look after the poorest, as well as the richest; and not seek theirs, but them, 2 Cor. xi. 28, and xii. 14.

VI. So Christ's faithful Ministers are to give an account of the night; they ought to be well-skilled in the times, to show what Israel ought to do. O that our Watchmen had more knowledge upon this account! That they could but tell how long! Paul told the Romans, "The night was far spent, and the day was at hand," Rom. xiii. 10, 11. Our Watchmen begin to speak after the same VII. So the Ministers of the Gospel are often set upon whilst they are upon the watch. See how it befel Peter and John, Acts iv., and Stephen, chap. vii., and the great Minister of the Gentiles, St. Paul himself, chap. xvi., whilst he was preaching Christ: "The magistrates rent off their clothes, and commanded them to be beaten; and when they had laid many stripes upon them, they cast them into prison," &c., verses 21—23.

VIII. So Christ's Ministers, by opening the state and miserable condition of poor sinners to them, and of the necessity of speedy repentance in turning to the Lord, and closing with Jesus Christ, have prevented great danger that was near them, I mean, as instruments in the hand of God. By this means, many poor souls have been delivered from eternal burnings in hell. Ministers cry out, fire, fire, hell is exceeding hot, to rouse secure sinners.

INFERENCES.

I. We may infer from hence, that God takes great care, and shows much pity to the sons of men, in that he hath provided his faithful Ministers to watch over them.

II. It also shows, that all true Ministers are Ministers of God's making: "Son of man, I have made thee a Watchman," &c., Ezek. xxxiii. 7. There are many that God never made Ministers, nor doth he approve of them.

III. It shows what the work and office of a Minister is; also that their work is hard: a Watchman's work is a hard and difficult work. Many endeavour to avoid coming upon the watch, shifting it off to others, and rather choose to pay their money, than serve in their own persons; Watchmen are upon duty, when others are asleep in their beds. "Thou shalt give them warning from me," Ezek. iii. 17. Ministers must not come in their own names, but in Christ's name. As they came with God's word, they came in his name, in his authority, to reprove, admonish, comfort, &c. Ministers must learn as well as teach: "What I received from Christ, I delivered it to you," &c. "Thou shalt hear the word at my mouth." They must not come with man's word, or warn people to be subject to the traditions, inventions, and doctrines of men." "I will stand upon my watch, and set me upon the tower, and will watch to see what he will say unto me," Hab. ii. 1.

MINISTERS COMPARED TO TRUMPETERS.

"Cry aloud, spare not, lift up thy voice like a Trumpet," Isa. lviii. 1.

"Blow ye the Trumpet in Zion," Joel ii. 1.

"If the Trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself for the battle?" 1 Cor. iv. 8.

MINISTERS may fitly be compared to Trumpeters, as divers worthy men have observed, from these and some other texts of scripture: they were the priests of the Lord in the time of the law, that blew the Trumpets, &c.

METAPHOR.

I. A Trumpeter ought to have skill, and be well instructed to blow a Trumpet, before he take upon him that employ.

II. A Trumpeter ought to be one that is strong to blow, for that weak and defective men cannot sound a Trumpet.

III. A Trumpeter is called to that place and office by the captain, or chief commander of the troop. A man is not to force himself upon a troop, and say, I will be your Trumpeter; but must be tried, listed, and orderly entered into that troop.

a gift, and can serve you; but must be tried by the Church, who is the competent judge of his fitness for that work, and so be orderly admitted.

IV. One or two Trumpeters usually belong to every troop of soldiers.

V. A Trumpet is to sound to prepare men to battle.

VI. A Trumpeter ought to know all the distinct notes or sounds he is to sound; sometimes to sound a call, sometimes an alarm, some-

PARALLEL.

I. So a man ought to have much wisdom, and be well instructed in the mysteries of the Gospel, and also with the work, care, and office of a Minister, before he take upon him that great employ. Ministers ought to be experienced men.

II. So Ministers ought to be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might, endued with much of the Spirit, that they may lift up their voices like a Trumpet.

III. So every true Minister must have a call to that place and function, by Jesus Christ; that is, to say, ought to be a person well-gifted and qualified for the work, and that in the judgment of the Church, and there to be chosen and called forth by them: "How shall they preach, except they be sent?" Rom. x. 15. A man, or member of a congregation, must not force himself upon a Church or people, and say, I will be your preacher, I have been tried by the Church, who is the competent judge of his fitness for that work, and so be orderly admitted.

IV. Every particular Church hath one or more Ministers, or Gospel-preachers belonging to it.

V. So the Gospel is to be preached, to prepare and fit souls to fight the spiritual battle, against sin, Satan, the flesh, and the world.

VI. So a Minister is sometimes commanded to sound an alarm: "Blow the Trumpet in Zion, sound an alarm in my holy mountain," Joel ii. 1. They are to pronounce wrath and judgment, to thunder times a march, sometimes a battle, &c. There are many certain and distinct sounds, and every soldier, as we have elsewhere showed, ought to be well acquainted with it, and to know them all. "If the Trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself to the battle?"

METAPHOR.

VII. A Trumpeter by blowing his Trumpet in the day of battle, is of great use to an army; the sounding of the Trumpet greatly encourages and animates the heart of soldiers.

VIII. A Trumpet usually goes before the troop or army, sounding his Trumpet; he is often exposed to danger.

IX. A Trumpeter is to keep sounding all the while an army is engaged; nay, not only to sound his Trumpet, but to sound it loud also.

X. Some Trumpeters have silver Trumpets; nay, God commanded Moses to make two silver Trumpets, to call the assembly; and these were for Eleazar and Ithamar, the two sons of Aaron.

XI. A Trumpeter makes sometimes sweet music with his trumpet. Many love no music like the rare sounding of a Trumpet.

PARALLEL.

as it were from mount Sinai, to rouse up the slothful and secure sinner, or drowsy professor; and sometimes a call to duty, to assemble the people to fast and cry mightily unto the Lord: "Blow the Trumpet in Zion, sanctify a fast, call the solemn assembly, gather the people, sanctify the congregation, assemble the elders, gather the children, and those that suck the breast," &c. Joel. ii. 15, 16.

VII. So a true Minister, by preaching the Gospel, is exceeding useful to God's Church, in the day of trial, &c. How doth an enlivening and an awakening sermon put spirit and courage into the hearts of Christians, and make them fearless, and valiant for the truth.

VIII. So the ministers of the Gospel should be as he-goats before the flock, they are the leaders of the people: Ministers are often greatly exposed.

IX. So a Minister must preach always, in season, and out of season, whilst the saints and Church of God are militant. "Necessity is laid upon me, and woe is me, if I preach not the Gospel," 1 Cor. ix. 16. Yea, and it must be preached publicly.

X. So "the tongue of the righteous is as choice silver," Prov. x. 20. Ainsworth, speaking of two silver Trumpets, that were to be made of beaten work, Numb. x. saith, it signifies the labour of the Ministers, of giving themselves to prayer, and to the ministry of the word; "the words of the Lord are pure words, as silver," &c., Psal. xii. 6.

XI. So a Minister makes sweet music sometimes in preaching of the Gospel in the ears of men. "And lo, thou art unto them as a very lovely song, of one that hath a lovely voice, and can play well on an instrument," Ezek. xxxiii. 32.

INFERENCES.

I. MINISTERS must cry aloud, and spare not, they must lift up their voice like a Trumpet: they must be endued with courage, not fearing the face of men, sparing none, but reprove and warn great and rich men, as well as the poor.

II. They must be men of wisdom, that know how to sound distinctly, "rightly dividing the word of truth," lest by their uncertain sound great detriment befall Christ's spiritual soldiers.

III. Hence let all the saints magnify God, for that they have, and do yet hear the joyful sound, by which they have been called to engage in the spiritual warfare, and thereby animated to a perseverance in the same to the end.

IV. Also hence it may be inferred, that as the saints are spiritual soldiers, so it is their great concern to observe the sounding of these spiritual Trumpeters with the silver Trumpets, that they may be always ready to make good their ground in an evil day: "And having done all, to stand. Stand therefore," &c., Eph. vi. 13, 14.

MINISTERS COMPARED TO SPOKESMEN.

"For I have espoused you to one husband, that I may present you as a chaste virgin, to Christ," 2 Cor. xi. 2.

I have, as if the apostle should say, acted the part of a Spokesman, I have endeavoured to engage your affections to Christ. Every Minister strives to espouse souls to the Lord Jesus! as Abraham's servant was employed to obtain Rebecca for Isaac. It is the main work of a Minister to win souls, and bring them over to Christ.

Note, Ministers may fitly be compared to Spokesmen.

METAPHOR.

I. A Spokesman is a friend to the lover, one that knows his secrets, and is judged faithful, a person that he confides in, and is therefore trusted with his great and most weighty concerns. Abraham had great confidence in his servant, and therefore chose him for that work, viz., to go and take a wife for Isaac.

II. A faithful Spokesman is very intent and diligent in his business. Abraham's servant would not eat nor drink, until he had delivered his message, or told his errand.

III. A Spokesman uses many arguments to engage the affections of the person to whom he is sent; he doth set forth the merits, riches and worthiness of the person who is the principal suitor.

PARALLEL.

I. Ministers are the friends of Christ; "I have called you friends," They know the mind of Christ: "The secrets of the Lord are with them." "All things," saith Christ, "that I have heard of my Father, I have made known unto you. You have not chosen me, but I have chosen you," John xv. 14—16. Christ chooses none to this work, but such as are faithful: "And I thank Christ Jesus our Lord, who hath accounted me faithful, putting me into the ministry," 1 Tim. i. 12.

II. So a faithful Minister is very diligent about his master's work. Peter and John forsook all, and followed Christ. He gives himself wholly up to the work of the Gospel. They esteem, with holy Job, the words of his mouth more than their necessary food, Job xxiii. 12.

III. So ministers may use many weighty arguments to persuade sinners to fall in love with, and espouse themselves to the Lord Jesus, to accept of the offers of his grace and divine favour, being not willing to take any denial, if possible. They pray, woo, and beseech in Christ's name; and some of the arguments they use are these, viz., 1. They set forth the greatness of their Lord and Master. "He is the King of kings and Lord of lords," saith Paul; "The Lord of life and glory," saith Peter. 2. They set forth his great riches: "Unto me, who am less than the least of all saints, is this grace given, that I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ," Eph. iii. 8. See how Abraham's servant pleaded, when he came to court the damsel: "The Lord hath blessed my master greatly, and he is become great; and he hath given him flocks and herds, &c., silver and gold, and man-servants, and maid-servants, and camels, and asses. And Sarah my master's wife bare a son to my master, when she was old, and unto him he hath given all that he hath," Gen. xxiv. 35, 36. O how rich and great, saith a Minister, is God! The cattle of a thousand hills are his: The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof." And Christ, saith he, is appointed heir of all things. "All things that the Father hath, are mine," John xvi. 15, and xiii. 3. He knew, that the Father had given all things into his hands. 3. They set forth not only the greatness and riches of Christ, but also his admirable beauty. "He is fairer than the children of men," Psal. xlv. 2. 4. They set forth the greatness of his love, so far as they can conceive of it, or make it known; for the breadth, length, depth, and height of it is wonderful, as Paul shows, and passeth knowledge, Eph. iii. 18, 19. 5. They set forth his power and sovereignty: he hath all power in heaven and earth; he is the Prince of the kings of the earth; nothing is too hard for him to do; men and devils, wind and seas are at his command. 6. They set forth his great wisdom: "He is the power of God, and the wisdom of God," 1 Cor. i. 24. Saith the apostle, "In him are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge," Col. ii. 3. 7. They set forth his great and glorious end in coming into the world, which was, that we might have life, and to betroth us to himself for ever. 8. They set forth the greatness of his sufferings, his wonderful abasement, the nature of his bloody anguish he suffered upon the tree. What! doth not this Jesus, saith the servant of God, that comes to you through a sea of blood, deserve your affection? &c. 9. They use arguments of another nature, such as are taken from the consideration of the sinner's dead, cursed, and miserable state without him; the blessedness of such as do embrace him, and espouse themselves to him; and divers others, too many here for me to reckon up.

SIMILE.

IV. A faithful Spokesman is not satisfied, to see the person to whom he is in the behalf of his master a suitor, to be only ready to hear, and seem to approve of the motion he makes, unless she at last be brought to a ready and willing compliance, and say with Rebecca; "I will go along with this man;" that is, I am resolved to become Isaac's wife, Gen. xxiv. 58.

from place to place to hear sermons, and write sermons, and commend this and that preacher, if they do not make a real contract, and become espoused to the Lord Jesus. It is nothing less than a thorough work of grace, regeneration, or a true conversion, that will satisfy one of Christ's faithful Spokesmen.

V. It grieves a faithful Spokesman, when he finds his master is slighted, and his dear and noble Lord that sent him rejected, and a base and poor fellow entertained, and delighted in, instead of him who is so worthy.

the devil have the rule and pre-eminence in you? and the love of the world be so sweet, which is enmity to God? And shall Christ who died for you on the cross, he who is so excellent, who is able to make you happy for ever, be slighted and rejected by you? What! will you prefer your base lusts above all that inconceivable good there is in God the Father, in Christ his holy begotten Son, in the Holy Spirit, and in the way of holiness.

VI. A Spokesman, when he sees he cannot prevail, returns, and gives his master or friend that sent him, an account how matters go.

truly with my Master, tell me: if not, tell me; that I may turn to the right-hand, or to the left," Gen. xxiv. 49; that is, that I may give my master an account of my errand; what shall I say to him that sent me? So saith Christ's servant, if you will deal kindly and truly with my Master, tell me; if not, tell me, that I may turn, &c., I must declare to the Lord Jesus, in the great and dreadful day, how you have slighted or not regarded the message I am sent about; how you are resolved to keep to your other lovers, and remain in your sins, being carnal, loose, ungodly; and that Christ was not precious in your eye, nor will you be persuaded to forsake all, and follow him, nor be made sensible of that glory and beauty that is holiness. And what a sad thing will this be, when a Minister must appear against this man, and that man, and say, Lord, I spoke to them again and again, I preached an hundred sermons to them to engage their hearts to thee, but none of them would take place, as thou seest, upon their hearts, &c.

PARALLEL.

IV. So Christ's faithful Ministers are not satisfied to see sinners hearken to the Word, and seem pleased with the doctrine of the Gospel, which they daily preach, unless they leave their sins, and become new creatures, and close in in good earnest with Christ, giving themselves to him. It is said of the saints, "They gave themselves to the Lord." If a man be a suitor to a damsel, and she seem to like him, and be pleased with the motion he makes, and yet never consent to become his wife; will this please him? surely no: neither doth it please Christ, nor his Ministers, to see sinners go

V. So it grieves a faithful Minister, when sinners slight the message and tenders of grace in the Gospel; when Christ is not embraced, nor closed in with: when they only take him into their lips, but keep him out of their hearts. O this wounds their souls! Shall sin, saith the servant of God, that bad and filthy enemy of my Master, be entertained and delighted in? Shall the

VI. So Christ's faithful Ministers in the day of judgment, shall doubtless be brought in as witnesses against stubborn and impenitent sinners, to whom they preached the Gospel. "And now, said Abraham's servant, if you will deal kindly and MINISTERS COMPARED TO CLOUDS.

"My doctrine shall drop as the rain," &c., Deut. xxxii. 2.

"I also will command the Clouds, that they rain no more rain upon it," Isa. v. 6.

CLOUDS have divers metaphorical notations in the holy scriptures:

1. For calamities or great afflictions: "How hath God covered the daughters of Zion with a cloud!" Lam. ii. 1.

2. Because of the number and multitude of Clouds, for in tempestuous weather a great plenty of thick Clouds appear, so an innumerable company of witnesses are compared to Clouds, Heb. xii. 1.

3. They are also used in comparison: "Behold, he shall come as Clouds: that is, his army will I make a vast appearance, the Targum says, as a Cloud which comes up and covers the earth, Ezek. xxxviii. 9.

4. For vanity and inconstancy, or emptiness; hence false teachers are compared to Clouds without rain.

5. And upon divers accounts true Ministers of the Gospel may be compared to Clouds; for as false teachers are like Clouds without rain; so true Ministers are as Clouds full, or filled with rain, &c.

How fitly Christ's Ministers may be compared to Clouds, will appear by what follows.

METAPHOR.

I. Clouds are fit receptacles for the water, they receive their water, as it is drawn up out of the fountain of the great deep: for God hath made the Clouds as useful as so many buckets, to draw up water out of the sea; and the wind is made use of as an hand, to carry these buckets or Clouds whithersoever the great Creator pleaseth, to distil it down upon the earth, that the earth might be replenished, and made fruitful by it.

II. Clouds are prepared by the wise God, as fit mediums to let rain down, and that so it might fall gradually, as the earth is able to take it in, to the benefit of all things that grow thereon, and not to its detriment, as possibly it would, were it not that God made use of the Clouds.

III. Clouds let down their water more freely at one time than at another: now and then it falls down wonderfully.

IV. Clouds let down their water at God's command, and they obey his voice.

V. It is a great judgment upon a people, when God commands or restrains the Clouds from raining upon the earth, or upon this or that particular nation, field, or vineyard.

VI. Clouds are of great profit to those who have weak eye-sight, in that they are as a veil between the bright shining of the sun, and them; for the light must be proportionable to the sight, or else eyes are confounded.

PARALLEL.

I. So Ministers receive all their spiritual rain out of the great Fountain of all fulness: "Of his fulness have we received," &c., and that by the Spirit; that so their doctrine might drop as the rain upon the tender herbs, and as showers upon the grass, Deut. xxxii. 6. It is according to the gifts and operations of the Spirit, be it more or less, that these spiritual Clouds are filled: and as God is pleased to distil and bless the Word, it becomes profitable, and makes this or that man fruitful in grace and holiness. What abundance of fruit have the saints brought forth under the dropping of these Clouds!

II. Ministers are appointed by the Lord as instruments, to communicate of his grace and divine goodness to the children of men. If he should make use of other mediums, it might be to our hurt; should he speak to us himself, we could not, it is possible, be able to bear the hearing of his word. The poor Israelites desired Moses to speak to them, would not that God should speak to them any more, lest they died.

III. So the spiritual Clouds sometimes pour down, or rather out, the divine rain in a plentiful manner; at other times they seem much straightened in their own spirits.

IV. So Ministers preach at God's command; it is he that openeth their mouths; it is as the Spirit gives them utterance.

V. So it is a severe and sore judgment upon a people or congregation, when God suffers his Ministers to preach no more unto them, or makes their ministry of no advantage or profit to them. "I will command the Clouds, that they rain no rain upon it," Isa. v. 6.

VI. So the Ministers of the word of God are of infinite use and advantage to poor mortals: for we have all but weak spiritual sight, and cannot behold the glory of God, nor take in divine mysteries, without these blessed mediums God is pleased to make use of, in his gracious condescension to us: and therefore God speaks to us by men like ourselves, and opens heavenly things by earthly similitudes, &c.

INFERENCES.

- I. Let us pray, that these spiritual Clouds may be full of divine rain.
- II. It shows us the great wisdom and condescension of God to mankind, and what great profit we receive by the preachers of the Gospel.
- III. It shews the great folly of all those that go about to stop these Clouds from raining, when God hath given them a command. Will they attempt to hinder the light from shining, or the Clouds from raining, at their pleasure? Even thus they attempt spiritually, when they strive to hinder Christ's Ministers from preaching the Word, or obstruct the showers of Gospel-grace from falling upon the souls of men.

MINISTERS COMPARED TO FATHERS.

"For though you have ten thousand instructors in Christ, yet have ye not many Fathers: for in Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the Gospel," 1 Cor. iv. 15.

Ministers are Fathers, spiritual Fathers to believers.

METAPHOR.

I. Father is a name of dignity, headship, and authority; hence the rulers of Israel were called Fathers.

II. Some are called Fathers, because they beget children; this is the common appellation and notion of the word.

III. Fathers train up and nourish their children, showing much tenderness and compassion towards them; they are said to pity their children.

IV. Fathers have power to command their children. "I know him, that is, Abraham, that he will command his children," &c.

brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus walketh disorderly," &c., 2 Thess. iv. 6.

V. Fathers ought to be revered and honoured by their children. "Honour thy Father and thy mother," &c., and their just commands to be observed and obeyed.

VI. A Father ought not to be rebuked by his children, it becomes them not so to do, though he may be in a fault, and blame-worthy, but entreated.

orderly proceeding with an elder, if he be under evil, and obstinate, may be rebuked, nay, not only so, but further proceeded against also.

VII. It is the honour of a Father to rule and govern his children, and whole family, with wisdom and discretion.

impartially to carry it with an equal severity and mildness to all, studying the nature and disposition of every member.

PARALLEL.

I. Ministers are men of name, power, and dignity; they are Christ's substitutes; hence called rulers.

II. Ministers, by the preaching of the Gospel, in a spiritual way, beget Christians to Jesus Christ. "I have begotten you through the Gospel," 1 Cor. iv. 15.

III. Faithful Ministers also train up those Christians they have begotten to Christ, in the further knowledge of the truth, being very tender of them. "As you know how we exhorted, and comforted, and charged every one of you, as a Father doth his children," 1 Thess. ii. 11.

IV. So Ministers of Christ have power in his name, to command those Christians, who are under their special care and charge, to do their respective duties. "These things teach and command," 1 Tim. iv. 11. "Now we command you, brethren, that you withdraw from every brother that

V. So faithful and worthy Ministers ought to be highly esteemed and honoured by the Saints. "Let the elders that rule well, be accounted worthy of double honour, especially they who labour in the word and doctrine," 1 Tim. v. 17.

VI. So the Minister of Christ ought not to be rebuked by any particular members of the Church to whom he belongs, though in some things he may be blame-worthy. "Rebuke not an elder, but entreat him as a Father," 1 Tim. v. 1. Though I doubt not, but that the Church, after a due and

VII. So it is a great honour to a Minister, or pastor of a Church, to rule and govern the congregation where he is placed, wisely behaving himself in all things; not to be soon angry, peevish, nor self-conceited, but to study the rule, and

METAPHOR.

VIII. Fathers ought to walk wisely before their children, in all holiness and sobriety, setting themselves as patterns, to all that are in the family, of grace and virtue.

IX. It is a great sorrow and grief to a good and godly Father, to see his children froward, and fall out one with another, violating the bonds of nature.

many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are enemies of the cross of Christ," Phil. iii. 18.

X. It is the property of a godly Father to pray for his children, and also for the whole family committed to his charge.

their charge; nay, for all the children of God, "That Christ might dwell in their hearts by faith, and that they may be rooted and grounded in love," &c., Eph. iii. 17.

PARALLEL.

VIII. So it is the duty of pastors and Ministers of Churches, to lead an holy and godly life, and be as examples of true virtue and piety to all they converse with. "Be thou an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity," 1 Tim. iv. 12.

IX. So it is a heart-breaking sorrow to a godly and faithful Minister, to see the saints and members of the Church walk loosely, and live in strife and vain-glory, wronging and abusing each other, and thereby violate the sacred bonds of brotherly love, tenderness, and forbearance. "For X. So Christ's faithful Ministers do not cease to pray for those whom they have been instrumental to beget, by the Word of truth, unto Christ; nay, not only for them, but for all committed to their hearts by faith, and that they may be rooted and grounded in love," &c., Eph. iii. 17.

INFERENCES.

I. We may infer from hence, that the office of a Minister is an honourable employment.

II. It may in many things teach pastors their duties to their members, and members their respective duties towards their pastors.

III. It also serves to inform us, who are faithful, wise, and discreet Ministers of Christ.

IV. We may further learn, what a great concern it is for a Church to choose wise and sober persons to be their pastors.

MINISTERS COMPARED TO STEWARDS.

"Who is a faithful Steward," &c., Luke xii. 42.

"Let men so account of us as the Ministers of Christ, and Stewards of the mysteries of God. Moreover, it is required in Stewards, that a man be found faithful," 1 Cor. iv. 1, 2.

STEWARDS, stewardship, the original, οικονομία,* rendered in 1 Cor. ix. 17, dispensation, properly signifieth the administration of household business, whereof one taketh such and such care, and doth so dispose thereof, as that he appointeth every one what they are to do.

Note, true Gospel Ministers are Stewards, spiritual Stewards, Stewards of God.

METAPHOR.

I. A Steward is an officer that principally belongs to great men; few, besides rich and noble persons, have Stewards of their houses.

II. A Steward is a person that hath a great trust and charge reposed in him; many rich and excellent things are committed to his care and oversight, sometimes

PARALLEL.

I. So true Gospel-Ministers, or pastors, are officers that belong to Christ's house, who is a great Prince, nay, King of heaven and earth.

II. So faithful Ministers have a mighty trust reposed in them; the Lord Jesus hath committed to their care and charge things of very great worth and value, even all the goods of his house. 1. They are entrusted with the truth, and every

* Leigh's Crit. Sacr.

METAPHOR.

all the goods of the house, and charge of the family.

whole family or household of God. mitted to them. See Watchmen.

III. It becometh a steward to be faithful in all things, seeking the honour of his Lord: they ought to be much in their business, not leaving it to others, that are not experienced in it, nor careful to look after it; nor leave their master's business, to mind and look after their own.

whether Christ be honoured or no, or whether his interest sink or swim, so that things go well with them, and they thrive in the world. There are too many such in this day, so that we may well say with the apostle, "All seek their own, and none the things that are Jesus Christ's."

IV. Stewards give direction to all inferior officers, and others in the family, about their respective work and business.

V. Stewards must expect to be called to an account, and if unfaithful, are frequently put out of their stewardship: "Give an account of thy stewardship, for thou mayest be no longer Steward," Luke xvi. 2.

PARALLEL.

branch and part of it, called the mysteries of God, which is of inestimable value. 2. The whole Church; they have the care and charge of the 3. They have the care and charge of men's souls com-

III. So ought every Minister of Christ to be faithful in all things, wholly studying the profit, honour, and interest of the Lord Jesus. They ought continually to be about his affairs, not leave the management of the Church, and concerns of the ministry, like some self-seeking priests of our days, to others, who are unexperienced, negligent, and worse; to follow their own concerns, and living in ease and pleasure, pursuing after the riches and vanities of the world, mattering not whe-

IV. So Ministers give directions to the deacons, and other members of Christ's Church, how to discharge their duties in their respective places, &c.

V. So all the Ministers of Christ must expect to be called to an account. The time is coming, when Christ will reckon with them; and happy will they be, that have their accounts to give up with joy, to whom the Lord Jesus will say, "Well done, good and faithful servant," &c.

MINISTERS COMPARED TO PLANTERS.

"I have planted, and Apollo watered, &c. Now he that planteth, and he that watereth, are one," 1 Cor. iii. 6, 8.

God is the chief spiritual Planter, Isa. v. 7, lx. 21, and lxi. 3, Matt. xv. 13. None but he can implant a principle of grace in the sinner's heart; it is his proper work to take us out of the old stock and root, and plant us into the new. But forasmuch as these things are asserted by the preaching of the Word, Ministers are called Planters: "I have planted," &c., 1 Cor. iii. 6. They are but under or subordinate Planters and waterers, to τὸν ἀρχαιοντρον, him that gives the increase, viz., Jehovah.

METAPHOR.

I. A skilful Planter is a curious artist, one that knows the nature of trees, plants, and seeds. He is skilled in setting, ingrafting, inoculation, or grafting with the scion.

II. A Planter hath fit tools or instruments to do his work withal, viz., a spade, a knife, &c., without which he can do nothing.

III. A Planter knows, that until the ground he is to plant, be

PARALLEL.

I. So an experienced and able Minister of the Gospel is a very skilful person, one that hath knowledge of great mysteries, both of nature and grace: he knows the state of man in the first Adam, that old stock; and also the nature of planting, or grafting into Jesus Christ, how and which way it is, and must be done.

II. So Ministers of Christ have fit instruments to work with, viz., the Gospel, which is called the ingrafted word, i. e., an instrument or means by which souls are planted, or grafted into Christ, by the help of the Holy Ghost, without which they can do nothing.

III. So Ministers know, unless the hearts of sinners are dug by the powerful convictions of dug up, and well prepared, it is not meet to be sowed or planted.

METAPHOR.

IV. Planters, as naturalists observe, find by experience, that a wild ungrafted tree never bears good fruit, nor can, till it be removed out of its natural soil, into a good soil, and grafted with a better kind. The root that bears this wild fruit is a degenerate root, and that is the cause the fruit is so unpleasant, sour, and naught.

V. A Planter, who hath skill in grafting, knows the stock must be cut off, before the scions be grafted in.

cut off or cleave the stock themselves, by another hand.

VI. A Planter knows, a twig that is to be grafted, or a bud inoculated, must first be cut off with a knife that is keen or sharp, or an instrument, from the tree on which it naturally grew: and when the grafts are cut off, in order to this work, it is a critical season with them, saith worthy Mr. Flavel, if they lie too long before they are ingrafted, or take not with the stock, they die, and are never more recovered; they may stand in the stock a while, but are no part of the tree.

thing; for such dead grafts in a little time fall off from the stock, Christ, and perish. But this I must needs say, it is principally for want of being quite cut off, or because they were never thoroughly cut or wounded at heart; convictions upon their hearts were never deep enough, or not kind convictions, rather legal than evangelical; they were not cut by a fit instrument, &c.

VII. A Planter, when grafts are cut off, and prepared to be ingrafted, makes all convenient speed he can to close them with the new stock; the sooner, saith one, that is done, the better. The graft is intimately united, and closely conjoined with the stock: the conjunction is so close, that they become one tree.

of the stock is really in the graft; so a believer is really, though mystically, in Christ, and the Spirit of Christ is communicated to a believer: "He that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God," 1 John iv. 16. And as the graft is bound to the stock so steadily, that the wind cannot lose it; so the believing soul is fastened to Christ by such bonds, as will secure it from all danger of being loosed from him any more.

PARALLEL.

the Word and Spirit of God, they are not fit to receive the seed of grace, nor to be planted in God's vineyard.

IV. So Ministers also know, that unregenerate men, who grow upon the natural root of old Adam, unless they are removed, and planted into Jesus Christ, cannot bring forth acceptable fruit to God; until removed by the power of the Word and Spirit, and transplanted into Jesus Christ by a lively faith. Mankind naturally are the offspring of a corrupt and degenerate root, viz., the first Adam; for as is the root and tree, such are the branches, and the fruit thereof: "A corrupt tree cannot bring forth good fruit," Matt. vii. 18.

V. So a Minister knows, that until the new stock, viz., Jesus Christ, was cut off, that is to say, crucified, no men, as spiritual scions, can be grafted into him by a lively faith: though there is in this a great disparity, as applied to Ministers, for Planters, before they graft the scion; but Christ was cut off

VI. So a Minister knows, before a soul can be grafted into Christ, he must be cut off of the old stock, viz., old Adam, and taken off of his own righteousness. The first work upon a Christian is cutting work. They were cut or pricked in their hearts, while Peter preached to them, Acts ii. 37. The Word of God is sharper than a two-edged sword, Heb. iv. 12. As no scion is ingrafted without cutting; so no soul is united to Christ, without a true and cutting sense of sin, and of his own misery, John xvi. 8, 9. And when souls are under a work of conversion, it is a critical time with them; many have miscarried then, and never recovered again: they have indeed for a time remained like dead grafts in the stock, by an external, lifeless profession, but never come to any

VII. So a Minister, when he sees poor sinners are fitted, and every way prepared by powerful convictions, ought to make what speed he can to apply the plaister, and direct them to a closure with Christ, that is to say, to believe on the Lord Jesus, Acts xvi. 30, 31. And when this is done, there is an intimate union betwixt Christ and the souls that believe in him: "He that is joined to the Lord, is one spirit." It is the nearest, closest, and strictest union; they are so glued one to the other, so that as the graft is really in the stock and the sap

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

doth the soul's union with Jesus show,
And where and how these heavenly plants do grow.

VIII. A Planter sometimes plants a whole vineyard, with the help and assistance he hath from others.

IX. A Planter's work, like other labours, is very hard; they oftentimes sweat at it, spend and waste themselves; they find some ground very rocky, and difficult to dig up, and to manure.

X. A Planter doth not only plant, but also water his plants, that they may grow and thrive the better.

and waters with his doctrine, that dropped like dew. "Neither is he that planteth, anything, nor he that watereth, but God that giveth the increase," 1 Cor. iii. 7.

XI. He that plants a vineyard with his own labour, ought to be allowed to eat of the fruit thereof; and it would be accounted a strange thing, should he be denied it.

vineyard, and eateth not of the fruit thereof? For who feedeth a flock, and eateth not of the milk of the flock? Say I these things as a man, or saith not the law the same also?" &c. "If we have sowed unto you spiritual things, is it a great thing we should reap your carnal things?" 1 Cor. ix. 7, 8, 11.

XII. Planters greatly rejoice to see their plants thrive and grow, and their labour profited.

XIII. Planters do not only take delight in planting, in the spring, and other fit seasons; but do also take care of the plants at such time when it is winter, lest the frost and cold should spoil their growth.

XIV. Planters have been, and are greatly instrumental for the benefit and advantage of the place and country where they dwell, by the vineyards, orchards, and gardens they have planted.

of those that were at first, and those that followed after, as Planters in God's vineyard! of which the holy scripture, and other histories give a full account. So that word is fulfilled, "Others have laboured, and you are entered into their labours," i. e., we reap the benefit of those that were Planters before us, as others may reap the benefit of the labours of such as are now entered into the same work, that the generation that is to come may praise the Lord.

VIII. So a painful Minister may, nay, and has planted a whole Church by the help and assistance of the Spirit of God, yea, several Churches, as St. Paul, and others we read of, &c.

IX. So is the Minister's work a very hard and laborious work; no digger or Planter works harder, or takes more pains, than some faithful Planters, or preachers of the Gospel; they frequently sweat at their work, as we have elsewhere showed, and by their study and great labour, waste their frail bodies. Some sinners have rocky hearts.

X. So godly Ministers do not only preach, whereby souls are planted by the heavenly doctrine; but also pray for increase, whereby their plants are watered: "I have planted, and Apollos watered." What Paul plants, Apollos comes after

XI. So a faithful Minister, or spiritual Planter, ought to eat of the fruit of that Church or vineyard he hath planted, or doth keep, prune, and manure; that is to say, to be fed and comfortably maintained by them. "Who goeth a warfare at his own charge at any time? Who planteth a

XII. So Ministers rejoice to see saints or spiritual plants grow and thrive in grace, and true holiness: "I have no greater joy, than to see my Father's children walk in the truth," 3 John 4.

XIII. So spiritual Planters, Christ's faithful Ministers, do not only take delight to labour in Christ's vineyard, to plant and graft when the sun or spring-season of providence shines upon them, but endure the sharpest storms of persecution, in the taking care of those tender plants, who by reason of the sharpest winter, may be in greatest danger.

XIV. So Ministers have been, and are great instruments of much good and benefit to the place or country where God hath blest their labours, by planting Churches, who have sent forth such fruit, that many thereby have been made fruitful in grace and holiness. What spiritual profit have these after-ages reaped by the labours

INFERENCES.

I. What grace and glory is this, O saint, that God hath conferred on thee, in taking thee out of that wild, dead, and barren stock, and planting thee into that precious, living, and fruitful One, Christ Jesus! Canst thou enough admire and prize this grace and favour?

II. It shows what wonderful union, and blessed nearness there is between Christ and every sincere Christian!

III. It shows us, that all our good fruit is from Christ Jesus, and by means of that blessed, mysterious, and glorious union with him.

IV. Ministers ought to be men of wisdom, such as are faithful, able, and willing to labour, men that are not idle.

V. It reprove not only such saints, that take up with the name of plants in God's vineyard, and bring not forth fruit: but also Churches, that see not, or will not see, nor learn their duty to their painful and faithful Ministers.

VI. It shows the folly and madness of all those that go about to hinder or spoil the work of those spiritual Planters, God's Ministers: for what would men think of such, that should suffer none to plant, nor any plant or tree to grow, nay, destroy, inasmuch as in them lieth, all the vineyards, orchards, and gardens in the place or country where they dwell? Such like work do all those that persecute God's faithful Ministers and people.

MINISTERS COMPARED TO BUILDERS.

"According to the grace of God which is given me, as a wise master-Builder, I have laid the foundation," &c., 1 Cor. iii. 10.

A BUILDER is a metaphor taken from carpenters and masons, &c., that build houses; the Hebrew word by which building is expressed, is derived from the root, בני, to build or rear an house or city. God in Christ is the chief Master-Builder: "He that built all things, is God," Heb. iii. 4, and he is the great Builder of his temple: "Upon this Rock will I build my Church, &c. And yet Ministers under him are likewise master-Builders, &c.

METAPHOR.

I. A wise master-Builder gives direction to others, how the house, &c., must be built; and to this purpose shows the figure or true form of it, that so other under-Builders may know how to go on with their work.

II. A master-Builder takes special care rightly to lay the foundation, upon which the whole fabric or structure is to be built, &c.

III. A Builder hath sometimes much rubbish to remove, before he can go on with his work; as the poor Jews had, who built the temple, &c.

righteousness, and legal ceremonies; they would need build upon a legal foundation: "They stumbled at the stumbling stone," &c. We have much Popish rubbish to remove, the rubbish of men's inventions, and superstitious ceremonies, &c., besides the rubbish of other heretics and deceivers.

IV. A Builder oftentimes meets with hard work, in hewing and squaring his timber and stones, some being very rugged and knotty, &c.

V. A wise Builder takes care to

PARALLEL.

I. So St. Paul, and other great and wise master-Builders, the apostles, have given plain directions to us, and all inferior Builders, how the house of God must be built, and with what materials; and they have left in the holy Gospel a plain scheme or figure of it, that so all spiritual Builders may know how to proceed in their work.

II. So the apostles have, as instruments in God's hand, laid the foundation of the true religion, the foundation of faith and salvation, the foundation of the true Church, &c. "Another foundation can no man lay, than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ," 1 Cor. iii. 11.

III. So have Ministers much rubbish to remove out of their own and sinner's way, before they can proceed in their blessed work. There is the rubbish of false-doctrine about justification; this was in the apostle's way, as well as it is in ours: the Jews were hardly taken off from their own righteousness, and legal ceremonies; they would need build upon a legal foundation: "They stumbled at the stumbling stone," &c. We have much Popish rubbish to remove, the rubbish of men's inventions, and superstitious ceremonies, &c., besides the rubbish of other heretics and deceivers.

IV. So Ministers find some sinners are very stubborn and obstinate, like knotty timber, scragged and rugged stones, which, without much labour and pains, are not hewed and fitted for the building.

V. So should a Minister of the Gospel see that prepare and make all his materials ready, before he rises the structure, or builds his house.

METAPHOR.

work without, and make it fit for thyself in the field, and then build thy house," Prov. xxiv. 27. They must not lay stones into the building, as they come out of the quarry from whence they are digged, such persons as were never converted, nor capable subjects of it; and then afterwards, when they are put into God's house, go about to hew them by the Word, i. e., endeavour to convert them. Ministers are hewers, and the axe is the Word of God; "I have hewed them by the prophets;" but they must proceed orderly, i. e., not baptize, and then teach; but first teach, or make disciples, and then baptize them, Matt. xxviii. 19, 20.

VI. A Builder can tell how many principal pillars or posts belong unto the house or building, and sees to fit all the materials thereof in their proper place, and will be sure to see that he wants never a principal pillar.

principles of the Christian religion. It is dangerous, you know, if a house be to be built upon six main pillars, if it want one.

VII. A Builder has his rule, by which he doth all his work: he does not work by guess, nor by the sight of his own eye only, but by a certain and unerring rule.

or disagree with the holy scriptures, and Spirit of God, that unerring rule, by which he receives, or rejects, takes, or leaves: he, with Moses, will do all things according to the pattern showed in the mount: "As many as walk according to this rule, peace be on them, and mercy, and upon the whole Israel of God," Gal. vi. 16. The Word of God should be our guide in all things.

VIII. A wise Builder takes care that all the building be fitly framed together, and well fastened to the foundation.

are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief Corner-Stone; in whom all the building being fitly framed together, groweth to an holy temple in the Lord, in whom ye are builded together for an habitation of God, through the Spirit."

IX. A Builder takes great care to give directions about the door, or way into the house he is building, and makes it plain, that all people who have a mind, or ought to enter in, may readily find the way, and not stumble at the threshold.

us at so great a loss in this respect. It is demonstrated in a small treatise, written by Mr. W. K., entitled, A Sober Discourse of Right to Church Communion. It has always been asserted by Christians of all persuasions, till of late, that baptism in water, that holy sacrament Christ ordained and left in his Church, is absolutely necessary to Church-fellowship and communion; though touching the subject and manner of the administration of that ordinance there hath been much controversy: but sure I am, the Word of God is very full and plain in this case.

PARALLEL.

all the spiritual stones and timber be well squared, fitted, and prepared by a thorough work of repentance and faith, before they are placed and laid into the building or Church of God. "Prepare thy work without, and make it fit for thyself in the field, and then build thy house," Prov. xxiv. 27. They must not lay stones into the building, as they come out of the quarry from whence they are digged, such persons as were never converted, nor capable subjects of it; and then afterwards, when they are put into God's house, go about to hew them by the Word, i. e., endeavour to convert them. Ministers are hewers, and the axe is the Word of God; "I have hewed them by the prophets;" but they must proceed orderly, i. e., not baptize, and then teach; but first teach, or make disciples, and then baptize them, Matt. xxviii. 19, 20.

VI. So Ministers can tell how many fundamental principles there are of the Christian religion, I mean, principles necessary to salvation; and also the number of the foundations of Church-constitution and fellowship; and will see that everything they do be done orderly, everything fitted according to the directions of God's Word; and that they want not any one of the foundation-

It is dangerous, you know, if a house be to be built upon six main pillars, if it want one. Read Heb. iv. 1, 2.

VII. So a wise Minister hath his rule, viz., the Word of God; he doth not do what he thinks is right in his own eyes, until he hath tried it by the rule, nor will he follow the humour and fancy of others, who may say, this is right, and that is right: but according as he finds things to agree and Spirit of God, that unerring rule, by which he receives, or rejects, takes, or leaves: he, with Moses, will do all things according to the pattern showed in the mount: "As many as walk according to this rule, peace be on them, and mercy, and upon the whole Israel of God," Gal. vi. 16. The Word of God should be our guide in all things.

VIII. So a wise Minister, or spiritual Builder, endeavours to see that all the saints be united, fitly framed, or joined together in love, and well fastened by faith and love to Jesus Christ. See what the apostle saith, Eph. ii. 20—22, "And are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief Corner-Stone; in whom all the building being fitly framed together, groweth to an holy temple in the Lord, in whom ye are builded together for an habitation of God, through the Spirit."

IX. So a wise and faithful Minister takes special care to give directions about the door into God's house, that all whom Christ would have enter in, may not be at a loss about it, nor stumble as it were at the threshold. It is absolutely necessary, that they are acquainted with, and able to show to others, what are those initiating ordinances into the house or Church of God. And sad it is to see so many worthy Ministers among

1. The Lord Jesus hath positively enjoined repentance, faith, and baptism, to be taught as the first principles of his sacred doctrine, and as fundamentals of Church-communion and fellowship. See Matt. xxviii. 19, 20, Heb. vi. 1, 2.

METAPHOR.

2. This also was the door the holy apostles, those wise master-Builders, directed persons to, and opened for entrance in the primitive time: "Repent, and be baptized, every one of you," &c. "Then they that gladly received the word, were baptized: and the same day there was added unto them about three thousand souls," Acts ii. 40, 41. Compare this with Acts viii. 38, and xvi. 33, Gal. iii. 7. And hence it is said, "By one Spirit are we all baptized into one body," or to be of one body. Moreover, as it is in the above-cited treatise proved, upon the examination of the records of the next age after the apostles, it is evident, the same order was retained and kept up, as appears by Justin Martyr, in his apology to Antoninus Pius, the Roman emperor. "This food, saith he, we call the Eucharist, to which no man is admitted, but only he that believeth in the truth of the doctrine, being washed in the laver of regeneration (so he called baptism,) for the remission of sins, and that so liveth as Christ hath taught." Tertullian and Cyprian positively affirm the same, and divers others of the ancient fathers; as Basil, Nazianzen, Optatus, Athanasius, Epiphanius, Hilarius, Ambrose, Jerome, Sozomen, Athanasius, Augustin, &c., as is largely showed by the divines of Magdeburg, in their history of the Church, printed at Basil, 1624. Also all our modern divines fully agree with the ancients in this great point, viz., that baptism is absolutely an initiating ordinance, and that no unbaptized person ought to be admitted into the Church, nor to the Lord's supper; though it is confessed, that some do not say, that baptism alone is the door into the Church, but baptism, and imposition of hands. "There are two doors to be passed through, as saith a learned writer, before we can come, aditus, et intima Ecclesiæ penetralia, viz., baptism and laying on of hands; whereof the latter properly and immediately gives admittance." Mr. Hanmors cites some ancient Christians speaking thus, Confirmatio, sive manuum impositio, protinus dat jus communicandi in Sacramento corporis ac sanguinis Christi: That is, "confirmation, or imposition of hands, forthwith giveth full authority and right of communion in the body and blood of Christ." And in another place saith the same person, "He that was not confirmed, was not admitted to the Eucharist."

X. A master-Builder goes on with his work, when the foundation is laid; the scaffolds are not taken down, till the building be finished, but rather raised higher and higher, as the fabric goes up; he resolves every day's work shall add some further beauty to it, in order to the final perfecting of it.

X. So a true faithful Minister, when he sees the work of God's house going on, every one labouring diligently every day to be more and more holy, and pressing on towards perfection: "Not laying again the foundation," &c., "let us go on to perfection, and so grow up unto him in all things, who is the Head," Heb. vi. 1, 2. Gospel-Builders are "For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ, till we all come into the unity of the faith, and knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man," &c., Eph. iv. 12, 13.

METAPHOR.

Earthly Builders build with ordinary wood, stones, brick, &c., lifeless and dead materials: also they build houses for men, or mortal creatures only, which may be soon destroyed by an enemy.

DISPARITY.

But the spiritual Builders build the house of God with precious stones, not earthly but heavenly, not dead, but living: "Ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house, and not for man, but an house or habitation for God, through the Spirit;" a house that the gates of hell shall never prevail against.

Divers disparities are also here omitted, and left to be enlarged by the studious reader.

INFERENCES.

I. This may inform all that look upon themselves to be spiritual Builders, to take heed they do not refuse the chief Corner-stone, as the Jewish Builders did: remember the foundation is laid, which is the Lord Jesus Christ.

II. It may caution them to take heed they build with fit materials, not with wood, hay, and stubble, but gold, silver, and precious stones.

III. It may caution them to take heed they build according to the rule. Let them not mistake the rule, the Pope or church of Rome is not the rule; general councils are not the rule; the light within is not the rule; the Word of God is the only rule, by which these Builders of God's house must do all their work.

IV. It may caution them to take heed they do not make any other doors into the Church, than what Jesus Christ hath made. The door that let into the natural church of the Jews, is shut up by him that hath the keys of David; birth-privileges will not give a right to Church-membership under the Gospel. "Think not to say within yourselves we have Abraham to our Father," &c.

V. It may caution them to take heed they do not leave out of the building any principal pillar, lest their building prove defective, and stand not long. It is a fearful thing to alter, add to, or diminish from the Word of God, Rev. ii. 2.

MINISTERS COMPARED TO PILLARS.

"And when James, Cephas, and John, who seemed Pillars," &c., Gal. ii. 9.

Ministers are like Pillars in the House of God.

SIMILE.

I. A Pillar helps to support and bear up the Building.

II. Pillars are great ornament to a building; they serve not only for use, but for beauty. The two brazen Pillars in Solomon's temple were curiously adorned with nets of chequer-work, lily-work, and rows of pomegranates, &c.

III. These Pillars stood in the porch of the temple.

PARALLEL.

I. So Ministers help to support and bear up the Church and house of God.

II. So godly Ministers are a great ornament to the Church, being gloriously adorned, many of them, with the gifts and graces of the blessed Spirit, which some think was figured forth by the Pillars of the temple, in respect of the chequer and lily-work; and by the pomegranates, the fruitfulness of their conversation, &c.

III. So the apostles, those chief Pillars of the Gospel-Church, lived in the beginning of the Church, saith Mr. Lee,* or entrance of the Gospel-ministration.

MINISTERS COMPARED TO SHEPHERDS.

"O ye Shepherds, hear the word of the Lord," Ezek. xxxiv. 9.

MINISTERS, in divers places of the holy scriptures of the New Testament, are compared to Shepherds.

METAPHOR.

I. A Shepherd is chosen and appointed to take care of the flock, being a man skilful in that work.

II. A Shepherd feeds his flock, leading them into good green pastures.

III. A Shepherd endeavours to keep the flock together, lest any should stray from the fold.

IV. A Shepherd watches over his flock in the night, lest any

PARALLEL.

I. So a Minister is chosen and appointed to take care of the flock and Church of God, and of the souls of men committed to his charge.

II. So Ministers feed the flock of Christ: "Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? feed my sheep, feed my lambs," &c., John xxi. 16. Feed them with good doctrine, feed them with a good example.

III. So a faithful Minister strives to keep all the members of the Church, under his care, together, and will not, if he can help it, suffer any of them to go astray.

IV. So Ministers must abide with their flock; they must not be at a distance from them, lest evil

* Mr. Sam. Lee, Folio 228.

METAPHOR.

danger, by dogs, wolves, or foxes should befall them. "And there were in the same country Shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flocks by night," &c., Luke ii. 8.

V. Shepherds are very tender of their flocks, and drive them as they can go, showing much compassion to the weak and feeble, and endeavouring to heal and strengthen the diseased.

strive to heal the diseased. The Shepherds of Israel failing herein, greatly provoked the Owner of the sheep against them: "The diseased, saith he, ye have not strengthened, neither have ye healed that which was sick," &c., "Strengthen ye the weak hands, and confirm the feeble knees," Ez. xxxiv. 4.

VI. Shepherds sometimes keep sheep that are none of their own.

VII. Shepherds ought to feed of the milk of that flock they feed.

VIII. It is a shame to a Shepherd to regard the fleece more than the flock; it may be said of some Shepherds, if they are fed, and have the fleece, let what will befall the sheep, they matter not.

PARALLEL.

should befall them from the enemy, there being many dogs, wolves, and cunning foxes abroad, seeking to destroy and spoil the sheep and lambs of Jesus Christ, I mean, subtle deceivers and persecutors.

V. So Ministers should be very tender of the saints, or spiritual flock, and not impose upon them such things as they are not convinced of to be their duty; they must not drive them out of their pace; and the weak and feeble among them they ought to take compassion upon, and

VI. So Ministers keep Christ's sheep: "Feed my sheep." They are Christ's by choice, by gift, by purchase, by conquest, &c.

VII. So Ministers ought to be fed by the flock or Church they feed: "Who feedeth a flock, and eateth not the milk of the flock," &c., 1 Cor. ix. 7.

VIII. It is a shame and great reproach to a Minister, and a sign he is none of Christ's servants, who chiefly regards his own base and carnal ends; if he has but the fleece, and be well fed, let what will become of the Church, or souls of those under his charge; he seeks not them, but theirs.

INFERENCES.

I. Hence Ministers may be greatly encouraged to a faithful and careful discharge of their trust; for they that serve the Lord Jesus, whose the sheep are, and who will reward them in due time.

II. It may also caution them to be very careful, that they feed Christ's flock with no other food than what is of Christ's providing.

III. It may inform all the flocks and sheep of Christ, over whom the Holy Ghost hath appointed Shepherds or overseers, (1.) To prize their faithful Ministers, observe their doctrine, and eye their holy and heavenly conversation. (2.) To walk as sheep. (3.) To keep close to their fold.

MINISTERS COMPARED TO AMBASSADORS.

"We are Ambassadors for Christ," &c., 2 Cor. v. 20.

"For which I am an Ambassador in bonds," &c., Eph. vi. 20.

THE words, Ambassador, legate, or messenger, are synonymous terms, properly, such as are commissioned or deputed betwixt distant parties, to transact affairs of moment. The term is applied to the ministers of the Gospel; and it sets forth, 1. The dignity, 2. The duty of Ministers.

Note. Faithful Ministers are Christ's Ambassadors, &c.

METAPHOR.

I. Ambassadors are authorized and sent abroad by princes, about the great affairs of their kingdoms.

II. Ambassadors usually are persons of eminency; it is an office

PARALLEL.

I. Ministers are authorized, empowered, and sent by the Lord Jesus, the Prince of the kings of the earth, on the great affairs of his glory, and man's good.

II. Faithful Ministers of Christ, such as are Ministers indeed, are eminent persons, such as are that a prince will not confer upon any of his subjects, but on such as are of great esteem in his court, such as are fitly qualified for that great trust confided in them; in a word, great honour and dignity is conferred upon them.

METAPHOR.

to filthy lucre, a lover of hospitality, a lover of good men, sober, just, holy, temperate, holding forth the faithful word, able by sound doctrine to stop the mouths of gainsayers, &c., not a brawler, not covetous, one that rules well his own house."

III. The dignity of Ambassadors appears in the greatness of their prince from whom they come: they have usually respect according to the rank and quality of their master.

IV. An Ambassador appears according to the dignity of the person whom he represents, and whose place he supplies.

V. The Excellency of the message Ambassadors are sent about, shows further the dignity of the officers. Now there are three sorts of embassies in the world:

1. Embassies of peace.
2. Embassies of Marriage.
3. State embassies, which respect trade and commerce, &c.

1. An Ambassador is welcome, when he comes from a prince about peace; and that especially.

(1.) When he comes from one that is formidable, mighty in power, and whose armies are irresistible; now to a poor, weak, and naked people, how welcome is his approach!

withstand his power? Doth he fear their hostility? Can they shoot their arrows as high as heaven? If they strike at him, he makes their swords turn into their own bowels. O how gladly should these Ambassadors be received! Who would not tremble to think of this God!

(2.) An Ambassador is welcome, when he is sent to a people that have felt already the impression of his power, and are pining under the bleeding miseries of his anger.

(3.) An Ambassador is welcome, when the terms he offers are honourable and easy: not like the peace that Nahash offered to the men of Jabesh-Gilead, viz., that they should have every one his right eye thrust out, and lay it as a reproach to Israel.

PARALLEL.

great favourites to the court of heaven. What higher dignity doth Christ confer upon any of his saints here below! They also are men fitly qualified for this great employment; and what their qualifications are, and must be, you may see in 1 Tim. iii. 1—7, and Tit. i. 7—9, viz., "Blameless as the stewards of God, not self-willed, not soon angry, not given to wine, no striker, not given to filthy lucre, a lover of hospitality, a lover of good men, sober, just, holy, temperate, holding forth the faithful word, able by sound doctrine to stop the mouths of gainsayers, &c., not a brawler, not covetous, one that rules well his own house."

III. Now true faithful Ministers are sent as Ambassadors from the great God, who is King of heaven and earth: "By whom kings reign, and princes decree judgment," Prov. viii. 15. "With him is terrible majesty, he rules and reigns over all, and who can say unto him, What doest thou?"

IV. True and faithful Ministers represent the Person of Jesus Christ. O! and what honour is this! They are employed in his stead, they are his deputies: He is the chief Ambassador, called therefore the "Messenger of the Covenant;" Mal. iii. 1, from him they receive their authority.

V. Ministers come with a threefold embassy:—

1. Of peace.
2. Of Marriage.
3. Of heavenly commerce and trades, &c.

1. Christ's Ministers are welcome when they come with an embassy of peace; and needs they must be so, if we consider the things following:

(1.) These Ambassadors come from that great God that is dreadful in power, that if he speak but in his wrath, the earth trembles, whose armies are also ready; who offers not peace, because he cannot make war, or stands in need of our friendship, but merely from his great love wherewith he hath loved us, &c. What can sinners do to withstand his power? Can they shoot their arrows as high as heaven? If they strike at him, he makes their swords turn into their own bowels. O how gladly should these Ambassadors be received! Who would not tremble to think of this God!

(1.) So a Minister of Christ is welcome to poor sinners, who find the arrows of divine vengeance sticking in their very hearts, and the curse of God cleaveth to every faculty of their souls, who lie bleeding under his heavy anger.

(3.) Now the Ministers of the Gospel offer honourable and easy terms: God might require the perfect keeping of the whole law, he might demand satisfaction for all the wrongs and injuries we have done to his justice; but they offer terms of peace and pardon, upon the acknowledgment of sin, and laying down our arms, and to hold no league or secret friendship with sin and Satan

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

any longer, to take hold of Christ, and plead the atonement of his blood: "Believe on the Lord Jesus, and thou shalt be saved."

(4.) An Ambassador is welcome, when he offers peace from a prince that is real to his word, and gives good security for the performance of what he promises.

2. Ambassadors sometimes offer an alliance, by marriage, between one state and another.

the heir of all things, in marriage upon ; sottish, foolish, and ungrateful, as not readily to receive and embrace this offer?

3. Sometimes, as we minded before, Ambassadors come with an embassy for trade, that there may be an open trade and commerce between such and such princes and states, &c.

with all things they need, as pardon, peace, union, and communion with God, and eternal life, even all the riches of grace and glory: "Ho every one that will,—Come, buy;—and you that have no money, come, buy, and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money, and without price," Isa. lv. 1.

VI. Those that honour an Ambassador, honour the prince that sent him; but those that abase, slight, or despise him, do also despise the prince or state that sent him. We cannot despise this messenger, and yet honour his master, saith Mr. Gurnal.

him? What is he better than us? Shall I mind what he says? A rush for his doctrine, &c. But let such read that word, "He that heareth you, heareth me; and he that despiseth you, despiseth me; and he that despiseth me, despiseth him that sent me," Luke x. 16.

VII. An Ambassador should take heed he cast no indignity upon his office, by any base or unworthy practice; he should behave himself with all wisdom and gravity, and avoid all dirty and unseemly actions; for in so doing, he would bring much honour and renown not only to himself, but to his master also that sent him.

VIII. An Ambassador is to do his uttermost endeavour to negotiate and accomplish such matters he is sent about; he must see to his charge: for if the treaty of peace, or marriage, or embassy for commerce and trade, succeed not, the Ambassador is sure to be called to an account, how he hath discharged his place, &c.

(4.) Now God doth by his faithful Ministers give the greatest assurance imaginable of the performance of whatsoever he offers to poor sinners; he hath past his word, nay, more, it is upon oath, Heb. vi.

2. And this is one great part of a Minister's embassy, he is sent to let sinners know what good will the God of heaven and earth bears to them, and that he is desirous to bestow his own dear Son, what favour and grace is this! Can sinners be so readily to receive and embrace this offer?

3. The Ministers of the Gospel come with embassies for commerce; God is willing in Christ's name, to trade with man again: for no sooner had Adam sinned, but a war was commenced, and all trade forbidden: but now through Christ there is a free trade opened again to heaven; convinced and repenting sinners may be stored

VI. So those who receive and show all due respects to Christ's faithful Ministers, honour Christ, whose deputies they are, and whose Person they represent. "Few are so bold, as to say with that proud king, 'Who is the Lord, that I should obey him?' Exod. v. 2. Yet many dare say, Who is the Minister, that I should obey his message, or repent at his summons, or tremble at the words he speaks?" What is he? Do I not know

VII. So Ministers must be holy men, that they bring not themselves, and the dignity of their function, into contempt. A wise, grave and gracious behaviour exceedingly becomes a Minister. Paul saith, he magnified his office. O then let others take heed they do not vilify and debase it. That which another man may do without much reproach, you cannot do, but it will be to your great blemish and dishonour, nay, and to the dishonour of Christ, and of his truth also.

VIII. So Ministers must see the work of their place and function. "They are," saith Gurnal, "called Ambassadors, in regard of their duty, as well as, dignity; where there is honour, there is onus, places of honour are places of trust. Many like well enough to hear the Ministers' dignity; with Diotrephes, they love pre-eminence, yet would willingly be excused the work that attends it. None have a greater trust reposed in their hands, than Ministers; it is tremendum onus, a weight that made the apostle tremble under it: 'I was among you, (saith Paul,) with much fear and trembling.'" They have the charge of souls committed to them, one of which is more worth than all the world, no less than the price of blood, the precious blood of Jesus Christ. To them is committed the Word of reconciliation. Hence they pray and beseech, and use all means imaginable to bring the souls of men to terms of peace and reconciliation with God, through Christ; they knowing the sad and dreadful effects, if they speed not in their embassy. "Knowing the terror of the Lord, we persuade men." And in another place, "We pray you in Christ's stead, be you reconciled to God," 2 Cor. v. 11, 20. For if the treaty of peace between God and sinners doth not succeed, the Minister is sure to be called to an account, how he discharged his trust in the business, &c.

METAPHOR.

IX. An Ambassador is to keep close to his instructions; he is in nothing to act contrary to, or derogate from his commission.

thing, require nothing, preach nothing, but what is according to the authority of God's Word, which is above the church, senates, general councils, or any authority whatsoever. These Ambassadors must act and do exactly according to their commission, &c.

X. An Ambassador must not only act according to his commission, as to matter, but must deliver his message also with much zeal, and with all due respect had to his master or prince that sent him. He must not prosecute his business coldly; or after he hath had audience, give himself to the pleasures of the court where he is resident, and mind his affairs no more, or not regard how his master's business succeeds. What answer will he be able to return? Surely, if he should do thus he could not say, he had done the work of a faithful Ambassador, &c.

XI. It becometh an Ambassador to be faithful in all things to his master's interest, and not to become a pensioner to a foreign prince: for such an one is utterly unworthy of such an honourable employment.

XII. An Ambassador ought to seek the interest of his fellow-subjects, and show much love, care, and tenderness to them, so far as the interest of his prince will bear; and not to do any thing to the spoiling of their trade, &c.

XIII. When a prince finds his Ambassadors cannot succeed in their business, but that all terms of peace are rejected, he calls them home, and then bloody wars commonly follow.

thus it fared with Israel of old. The Lord God of their fathers sent to them by his

PARALLEL.

IX. So Ministers must see they keep close to the Word of God; they had need to take their errand well before they come into the pulpit, or assembly of God's people. "I have received of the Lord, what I delivered unto you." They must speak no-

X. So Ministers must be fitted with zeal, and act diligently in their places, or prosecute their business vigorously; their hearts must be deeply engaged in their spiritual embassy. They are to preach with all fervency, as having the sense of Christ's honour, and the worth of immortal souls upon their hearts; and not only say, Thus and thus saith the Lord, and be satisfied to see people willing to give them the hearing. Though they may thank them for that civility, yet they must not quit them, unless they see they accept of the terms of peace and reconciliation, offered to them in Christ's name through the Gospel. They must show them the profit that will accrue to them, if they do comply; and the danger, on the other hand, if they do refuse; and that it will be more intolerable for Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of judgment, than for them.

XI. So Ministers must not comply with Christ's enemies, or seek for reward from them, such as would betray his interest, whatever is offered them, "But as we are allowed of God to be put in trust with the Gospel, even so we speak, not as pleasing men, but God which trieth our hearts. For neither at any time used we flattering words, as ye know, nor a cloak of covetousness, God is witness," 1 Thess. ii. 4, 5.

XII. So Ministers ought to seek the good and welfare of all the saints and church of God, and help them by their counsel and prayers at all times; and not to weaken, but strengthen their hands, and protect them from the scorn, reproach, and oppression of the enemy, as much as lieth in them, &c.

XIII. So when God sees, that the messenger, and message he sends by his faithful Minister, is slighted, and that sinners remain obstinate, after long patience, he calls home his Ministers, perhaps takes them away by death, and resolves to treat with that people or state no more, but contrariwise, to let out his wrath upon them. And messengers rising early, and sending them, &c. But they mocked the messengers of God, and despised his Word, and misused his prophets, until the wrath of the Lord arose against his people, till there was no remedy," 2 Chron. xxxvi. 15. 16.

INFERENCES.

I. This shows what great dignity God hath conferred upon his faithful Ministers; and this title should procure an honourable esteem of them in the hearts of all persons to whom they are sent. And this is more necessary to the good success of their message, than is generally thought; though it is evident, what Ministers speak upon this subject is misconstructed, as if they herein rather sought themselves, than to befriend the Gospel, or advance the honour of their master. Men are ready to interpret it as a fruit of their pride, and affectation they have of some outward grandeur, and worldly pomp, which they design to gain by such a magnificent title. The apostle himself was sensible of this, and yet would not desist to magnify his office; and therefore saith he, "Let men so account of us, as ministers of Christ, and stewards of the mysteries of God, and that they should judge nothing before the time," 1 Cor. iv. 1, 5.

Object. But some may say, If God will use Ambassadors to treat with sinners, why doth he not use angels? &c.

Ans. 1. The Apostle answers this: "We have this treasure in our earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us," 2 Cor. iv. 7.

2. Ministers being men, have the advantage many ways above angels for this work. (1.) They are more concerned themselves in the message they bring, than angels are. What greater argument for a man's care than his own interest! (2.) They have a more deep sense arising in their hearts, upon the account of the temptations they are subject to, &c. (3.) The sufferings which ministers meet with for the Gospel's sake, are of great advantage to their brethren; had angels been the Ambassadors, they could not have sealed to the truth of their doctrine with their blood, they cannot die, &c. (4.) Besides the presence of angels might terrify and affrighten us, their glory is so great, &c.

II. This shows, that Ministers have a special commission. "How shall they preach, except they are sent?" Rom. x. 15. They must have a lawful call to this office, as Ambassadors have.

III. Let poor sinners from hence be persuaded to hearken to them, and carefully receive the message Ministers bring from the great God, and accept of terms of peace, and close in with Jesus Christ.

IV. It shows the wonderful love of God, and the great care he hath of mens' souls.

V. It shows what an intolerable affront is offered to the Majesty of heaven by those that abuse or deride the ministers of the Gospel; and much greater, by them that persecute and imprison them for delivering their message. Paul was an Ambassador in bonds, &c.

VI. It shows the weight and importance of the preacher's message; it is not a slight or sleeveless errand they come about. "I set before you this day life and death," Deut. xxx. 15—"Hear, and your souls shall live." "He that believeth not, the wrath of God abideth on him," John iii. 36. "Go into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature. He that believeth, and is baptized, shall be saved; but he that believeth not, shall be damned," Mark xvi. 15, 16.

MINISTERS COMPARED TO RULERS.

"Remember them which have the rule over you, who have spoken unto you the Word of God," &c. Heb. xiii. 7.

MINISTERS of the Gospel are Rulers or governors, &c.

METAPHOR.

I. Rulers are men in high place, endued with power and authority over others; it is a name of dignity.

PARALLEL.

I. So Ministers are the chief of God's people, such as have great power committed to them, as the deputies and ambassadors of Christ.

METAPHOR.

II. Rulers or governors have a law, by which they ought to rule and govern in all things.

III. It is an evil thing, and justly reproveable in rulers, to exceed the limits and bonds of the law by which they are to rule, and govern ; or to carry things according to their own wills and lusts, not regarding the fundamental laws of the land where they live.

IV. Rulers, in some places, are chosen by the people whom they govern ; it is the people's privilege to choose their magistrates.

V. Rulers ought to be wise men, men fearing God. See Jethro's counsel to Moses, "Thou shalt provide out of all the people, able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness," &c., Exod. xvii. 21. "The God of Israel said, the Rock of Israel spake unto me, he that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God," 2 Sam. xxii. 3. What a sore rebuke doth God give covetous rulers by the prophet ! "Her princes in the midst thereof are like wolves ravening the prey, to shed blood, and to destroy, to get dishonest gain," Ezek. xxii. 27.

with that of Micah iii. 11, "The heads thereof, speaking of Zion, judge for reward, and the priests teach for hire, and the prophets divine for money ; yet will they lean upon the Lord, and say, is not the Lord amongst us ?"

VI. Faithful Rulers are a great blessing to a people, and ought to be cheerfully obeyed, revered, and submitted to. It is a great sin to speak evil of dignities, or despise dominions : "Let every soul be subject to the higher powers," &c. Rom. xiii. 1. "Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake, whether it be to the king, βασιλεῖ of βασις, a foundation, and λαός, the people, the foundation of a people, as supreme, or unto governors," &c. 1 Pet. ii. 13, 14.

Christ, who in a sense are said to be the foundation of God's people, whom the apostle characterized, and shows what their end is like to be : "Who were presumptuous, self-willed, and were not afraid to speak evil of dignities." Their hearts rose against the servants of God, for exercising authority in Christ's name, which is given to them. What said Korah ? "All the Lord's people are holy," &c., as if he should have said, is this Moses more than others ? but we see what became of him, Numb. xvi.

PARALLEL.

II. So Ministers are to rule the house and Church of God by the rule of God's word.

III. So it is an abominable evil in Ministers, to rule according to their own wills, violating the law of God. Ministers may exceed their due bounds, and be arbitrary, and tyrannize over the people in things spiritual, as well as civil Rulers or magistrates in things temporal.

IV. So Ministers ought to be chosen by the Church ; it is the privilege of the people to choose their own pastors, and other officers, according to the qualifications laid down by the Spirit of God. 1 Tim. iii. 1, 2, 3, "Wherefore, brethren, look ye out among yourselves," &c. Acts vi. 3.

V. So Ministers ought to be men wise, holy, and of a blameless conversation, such as are given to hospitality, and not greedy of filthy lucre, 1 Tim. iii. 2, 3. It is an odious thing to see a Minister covetous, who is required to open the nature of, and preach against that sin, as well as all others, and ought to live accordingly. How can he preach against that sin he is guilty of himself ? or, if he doth, what good effect can he think it will have upon other men's hearts, when the word reflects back upon himself, as it were, physician heal thyself ? Paul could say in the truth of his heart to the saints, it is not yours, but you, I seek. This was the beastly sin which God loathed in the prophets and Rulers of Israel : "You are greedy dogs, which can never have enough, that cannot understand ; they all look to their own way, every one for his gain from his quarter :," Is. lvi. 11, compared

VI. So Ministers, faithful and able Ministers, are no small blessing, and sign of God's favour to a people ; yea, great benefit we receive by them in many respects, as might be shown : they feed, guide, counsel and pray for us, as well as rule and govern us ; and therefore they ought to be with all readiness obeyed : "Obey them that have the rule over you, and submit yourselves ; for they watch for your souls, as they that must give an account," &c. Heb. xiii. 17. And to speak evil of Ministers, is to despise their high and holy function ; it is a God-provoking evil. There were some in the apostle's times, who were crept into the Church, who like Korah, spake against the dignity and power of the apostles and Ministers of

METAPHOR.

VII. Some Rulers, are chief magistrates, do not, cannot pass any act or law, such is the nature and constitution of the government where they live without the people; no law can be made, but with the assent and consent of the people, in their representatives in parliament, as it is here in the English nation.

VIII. Rulers should rule their people in love, showing all tenderness and bowels to the disobedient like tender-hearted fathers, unless it be towards those that are notorious criminals.

IX. Rulers, that rule well, are worthy of double honour.

X. Rulers are very needful: there is a great necessity in all societies and communities of men, of government, and Rulers. What is a nation, city, or family, without rule, Rulers, or government, but disorder and confusion?

METAPHOR.

I. Rulers, or earthly governors, are commonly noblemen, men of great name, clothed with outward glory and grandeur.

hath chosen the foolish things of the world, to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things that are mighty; and base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things that are not, to bring to nought things that are; that no flesh should glory in his presence," 1 Cor. i. 26—29.

II. Many earthly rulers are lords, and lord it over their brethren.

not assume the title of lords, nor must they lord it over God's people: "Neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock," 1 Pet. v. 3.

PARALLEL.

VII. So Christ's Ministers, or pastors, or Churches, cannot, by virtue of any authority given by the Lord Jesus, pass any act, either for the receiving in, or casting out of members, &c., without their brethren, &c. They must have the assent and consent of the Church. Many reasons might be given for it, which I shall omit. "If he neglect to hear the Church, let him be unto thee as an heathen man, or publican," Matt. xviii. 17.

VIII. So should Ministers labour to act in their places towards the saints in love, and to show all tenderness and meekness, with compassion, to such who through weakness transgress; [see Fathers] and not to be severe to any, unless obstinate and capital offenders; on such justice ought to be executed.

IX. So faithful and laborious Ministers, that rule God's house well, ought to be greatly respected: "Let the elders that rule well, be counted worthy of double honour," 1 Tim. v. 17.

X. The need there is of Rulers in God's Church is very great, God being a God of order, and not of confusion, in all the Churches of the saints. The necessity of them appears, by considering the nature of divers of the metaphors we have opened concerning them. What would become of the flock of sheep, if they had no shepherd, &c.

DISPARITY.

I. Christ's true Ministers are of little or no esteem in the eyes of the men of the world; they are commonly accounted base, low, and contemptible, &c. "Ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called: but God hath chosen the foolish things of the world, to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things that are mighty; and base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things that are not, to bring to nought things that are; that no flesh should glory in his presence," 1 Cor. i. 26—29.

II. But Christ's Ministers are contented to be servants. Even as their Lord and Master came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and was on earth as him that served: so his Ministers must

INFERENCES.

First: And now to conclude with this head, from the whole we may infer these particulars following:—

1. That a true Minister of Christ, is one that is truly converted, a gracious, holy, and sincere person, one that hath the experience of the real work of God upon his own heart.

2. A member of a true constituted Church, i. e., a community of godly Christians, that have given up themselves in a solemn covenant, in the fear of God, to walk in fellowship and communion together, according to the rule of the Gospel; amongst whom the word of God is truly preached, and the ordinances duly and in a right manner administered.

3. That he ought to be chosen by the Church, according to the direction left by the apostle, 1 Tim. iii. 1—6, Titus i. 5—9.

4. That he ought to be a discreet person, endued with considerable gifts and abilities by the Holy Ghost.

5. If called to be a pastor or elder, he ought to be ordained by the laying on of hands of the presbytery, or eldership, 1 Tim. iv. 14.

6. That he ought to be very laborious, and give himself wholly to the work of the ministry, making the word of God in all things his rule.

7. That he ought to have a comfortable maintenance allowed him by the Church, to which he belongs, if they are able to do it. That this is their due by divine right, though not a forced maintenance, otherwise than love to God, his truth, and people, whose duty forceth them to allow their Ministers a competency.

Secondly, we may infer, that the work of a Minister of Christ is not easy, but contrariwise, a very hard and difficult work. "Who is sufficient for these things?" 2 Cor. ii. 16. So hard, that many of Christ's servants of old undertook it with much trembling, which made them cry out, "Send by whom thou wilt send," &c., Exod. iv. 13, Jer. xx. 9. So hard, that a saint with all his natural parts is not sufficient for it; nay, a saint with all his acquired parts is not sufficient for it; nay, I may say, a saint with all his spiritual gifts, graces, and endowments, without fresh supplies of new strength, is not sufficient for it.

Thirdly; it informs us wherein the difficulty of the Minister's work doth lie; and that 1. In respect of themselves who are employed in it. (1.) They are but men; "Son of man, I have made thee a watchman," Ezek. iii. 17; and they commonly none of the wisest and most learned in the esteem of the world neither, 1 Cor. i. 27. (2.) Man at the best is a dark sighted creature. We know but in part, 1 Cor. xiii. 9. (3.) Man at best is attended with weakness, and carries a body of sin and death about with him. (4.) Man at best hath but small skill, and short experience. (5.) Man at best is subject to great discouragements, and liable to temptations.

2. In respect to the work itself, a Minister's employment is very hard and difficult. (1.) It is a mysterious work; what mysteries are greater than those a Minister is to study and dive into? "Without controversy, great is the mystery of Godliness," &c., 1 Tim. iii. 16. (2.) It is difficult, in that it calls for the greatest care and exactness imaginable; Add to his word, &c. (3.) In that it calls for the strength of his whole soul. (4.) In that it is a work that consisteth of divers parts; there are many things in which a Minister ought to be well instructed, as appears by what hath been said. (5.) In that it is a work which calls for much diligence; a slothful or idle person is not fit to be a Minister. It is a work that must be followed continually; "Preach the word, be instant in season, out of season, reprove, exhort, with all long suffering and doctrine."

3. It is a difficult work, in respect of the opposition that is made against them, or from those grand obstructions they meet with; 1. From their own hearts; 2. From sin; 3. From Satan; 4. From the world. (1.) By reproaches and contradictions of the ungodly; (2.) By heretics, and false teachers; (3.) From persecutors, &c.

Fourthly; We may infer from what hath been said in opening these metaphors, that Gospel ministration is of absolute necessity.

1. Because God hath ordained preaching as the ordinary means for the conversion of sinners; "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God," Rom. x. 17.

2. God hath gifted, and graciously endowed some men, on purpose for this work.

3. He hath given plain directions to his people, how and whom to choose and ordain, &c.

4. The necessity further appears, by considering the nature of the similes and metaphors we have opened. Sinners are in arms against God; and these are his ambassadors, by whom he treats, and offers terms of peace to them. Christ designs to espouse sinners to himself, and these are his spokesmen, by whom he effects this glorious enterprize.

Fifthly; It shows also, that the Minister's function is a most noble and honourable employment; and that all due respect, esteem, and obedience ought to be given to them.

Sixthly; We infer, that many who pretend themselves to be Christ's true Ministers, are none of his Ministers, but rather a shame and reproach to that venerable name, work, and office.

Seventhly; Let us learn from hence to bless God, that we have so many able and worthy Ministers of Christ in our land. O let us pray for them, and desire God to send more of these labourers into his harvest. "Pray ye the Lord of the harvest," &c.

Eighthly; it sharply reproveth many churches and professors, for the great neglect of their duties towards their Ministers. What a day do we live in! How is Christ's interest, Ministers, and poor saints, forgotten, slighted, and neglected! O that God would raise up some to "cry aloud, and spare not, but lift up their voice like a trumpet, to show God's people their transgressions, and the house of Jacob their sins!"

FALSE TEACHERS COMPARED TO WOLVES.

"I know that after my departure shall grievous Wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock," &c., Acts xx. 29.

A Wolf is in Hebrew Zeeb, Gen. xlix., in Chaldee, Deeba, and Deba: the Arabians call in him Zebah; the Greeks, Lycos, and Lagos, and Lycania, and Lycos, among some of the Arabian writers, is borrowed from them, as Munster hath noted in his Lexicon of three Languages! The Italians call it Lupo; in French, Loup; in Spain, Lobo; in Germany, Valff; in English, Wolf.

The common epithets of this beast, amongst several authors,* are these, sour, wild, fierce, bold, greedy, wary, swift, bloody, hard, degenerate, gluttonous hungry, flesh-eater, famishing, harmful, cruel, furious, insatiable, treacherous, martial, ravenous, nightly, &c.

There are five sorts of Wolves. The first is called Toxenter, a swift Wolf; the second kind are called Harpages; and these, saith my author, are the greatest raveners, to which, saith Topsall, our Saviour alludes, Matt. vii. 15. The third sort are called Lupus Aureus, a golden Wolf, by reason of his colour; the fourth, Acmonie; the fifth, Ictinus. "I know, that after my departure shall grievous Wolves," &c. Not Wolves only, but grievous Wolves, such as are called by some aparyis, snatchers, or ravening Wolves.

Note. Some False Teachers may fitly be compared to Wolves, to ravening Wolves.

METAPHOR.

I. A Wolf is a cruel and devouring beast; he is not contented to kill to fill his belly, but will spoil and destroy a whole flock, &c. †

II. Wolves are not only cruel, but subtle and very crafty, also watching the fittest time to seize upon their prey. They will silently approach the sheep-fold, to see whether the dogs be asleep, or the shepherd wanting; when he is careless or negligent of his flock, then comes the Wolf to destroy, and suck the blood of the poor sheep. Those beasts that have horns, he cometh upon at their tails, lest by their horns they prove too hard for him. They will, after they have made great slaughter, to hide their villany, wash their bloody mouths, &c.

PARALLEL.

I. So some False Teachers are very cruel and bloody, destroying multitudes of souls; it is not one or two, but the whole Church of God they strive to devour; hence said "not to spare the flock," Acts xx. 29.

II. So some False Teachers are very crafty, and subtle to deceive, and prey upon the souls of men. They privily bring in damnable heresies, in a sly manner they seek to insinuate themselves into the good opinion of men, and with wretched hypocrisy and sophistry counterfeit much purity, humility, and angelical sanctity, boasting of peculiar illuminations, and communion with God, &c. And therefore they are said to "come in sheep's clothing, but inwardly are ravening Wolves," Matt. vii. 15. By good words, and fair speeches, they are said to deceive the hearts of the simple, Rom. xvi. 18. None have pretended to more seeming zeal, and outward holiness, than some vile and notorious heretics; to put off their counterfeit coin, they are content to mix it with some good silver. Were it not for their outward show of piety and holiness, they could never do that hurt to the Church of God, and men's souls. Hence the apostle cautions the saints, "to be no more children tossed about with every wind of doctrine, by the slight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive," Eph. iv. 14.

* Eliauus, Genser, Topsell.

† Topsell, p. 571, 578.

METAPHOR.

III. Wolves, naturalists tell us, keep close in their dens or lurking places in the day-time, and about even-tide secretly come out, seeking their prey. Moreover, it is said, they will learn those tones that the shepherds use; nay, and that some shepherds have themselves being so deceived by them, that they have taken their tone for a man's voice, and as if some man had called them; by which means they have gone forth, and have been devoured by wolves.*

formed into an angel of light, 2 Cor. xi. 14, therefore it is no great thing, if his ministers also be transformed, and appear as the ministers of righteousness, &c.

PARALLEL.

III. So Romish Wolves, and other False Teachers, and vile heretics, whilst the light of God's word shines freely and gloriously forth in a nation, keep close, and do as it were hide themselves: but if once it seems to look like even-tide with a people, as at this very time it doth with poor England, then out come these cruel, ravening Wolves, and adventure publicly to read mass, and contend for their most notorious and execrable heresies, and cursed fopperies. Many deceivers also there are in the world, who labour to get the very words and tones, as I may say, of Christ's true ministers, insomuch that some good men, nay, Teachers themselves, have been beguiled by them; and it is no marvel, for Satan himself is trans-

INFERENCES.

Let us learn from hence to take heed of False Teachers, and enquire into their inward parts; labour to search thoroughly into their doctrine, and not to be deceived with the outward show of holiness in their lives; for they come, remember, "in sheep's clothing, but inwardly are ravening Wolves."

FALSE TEACHERS COMPARED TO FOXES.

"Take us the Foxes, the little Foxes," &c., Cant. ii. 15.

Most expositors understand, by these Foxes, these little Foxes, the Holy Ghost means False Teachers who may be compared to Foxes in these respects following.

PARALLELS.

- I. THE Fox is subtle and crafty, so you have heard, are False Teachers.
- II. The Fox is not only crafty, but cruel to harmless creatures; so are False Teachers to the souls of men.
- III. Foxes invade in the night-time, like wolves, &c. So do deceivers, whilst ministers sleep, or are secure, or neglect their watch.
- IV. Foxes are great spoilers of vineyards: so False Teachers do great hurt to the Church of God.
- V. Foxes never go strait forward, but by crooked windings, &c., so False Teachers never keep to the plain letter, and express meaning of the Word of God, but have their shifts and evasions, and unnatural inferences, whereby they seek to defend their evil doctrine, &c.
- VI. Foxes are often taken by traps that are laid for them, &c. So are False Teachers often found out and discovered by the true ministers of Christ: "But these, as natural brute beasts, were made to be taken and destroyed," 2 Pet. ii. 12.

[See more of Foxes under the head metaphors concerning Wicked Men, and persecutors.]

* Dr. Frantzius.

FALSE TEACHERS COMPARED TO WELLS WITHOUT WATER.

"These are Wells without Water," &c., 2 Pet. ii. 17.

FALSE TEACHERS are in this place compared to Wells without Water.

PARALLELS.

I. A Well is a fit receptacle for Water, and it is expected Water should be therein; but if it be empty, it greatly deceives and disappoints them that come to draw Water out of it: so ministers should be stored with much grace and heavenly doctrine, &c. But those who come to a False Teacher, to receive instruction and comfort for their souls, are grievously deceived.

II. A Well that hath no good Water in it, may notwithstanding have much dirt and filth, and some foul and stinking Water: so False Teachers, though they are empty and barren of good doctrine, yet it may be they have much corrupt, detestable, and abominable, filth of false doctrine, error, and heresy in them, which foolish ones are greedy of, draw out, and take down, to the poisoning and utter ruin of their souls.

FALSE TEACHERS COMPARED TO CLOUDS WITHOUT RAIN.

"These are wells without water, Clouds that are carried with a tempest, to whom the mist of darkness is reserved for ever," 2 Pet. ii. 17.

"Clouds they are without Rain, carried about of winds," &c., Jude 12.

As False Teachers are compared to "Wells without Water," so likewise they are to "Clouds without Rain, carried with a tempest," &c.

PARALLELS.

I. Some Clouds seem as if they had much Water or Rain in them, though empty: so some False Teachers do seem very like the true and faithful servants and ministers of Christ; they in outward show appear devout, and talk like saints, pretending to much humility and godliness, as if they were the very men that God had appointed to dispense his word, and heavenly truth; but alas! they are but mere empty Clouds, being only filled with airy and unprofitable notions. Some Clouds, as Pliny observes, are nothing else but mere empty vapours, and these are often carried very swiftly with the wind: so False Teachers are carried away as empty vapours, with the wind of delusion or false doctrine.

II. Clouds prevent or hinder mortals from beholding the glorious shining of the sun, and tend greatly to darken the heavens, so False Teachers obstruct, in a great measure, the glorious Gospel in its light and splendour, from shining upon the souls of men, and tend to darken the blessed light of divine truths, in a nation where they abound, and are countenanced.

FALSE TEACHERS COMPARED TO DECEIVERS.

"For many Deceivers are entered into the world, who confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh; this is a deceiver, and an antichrist," 2 John 7.

DECEIVER, or one that causeth to err, is by the Greeks called, a despiser; by the Chaldee, a mocker; Matt. xxvii. 63, αλανος, a notable cozoner, impostor. Ainsworth. See Leigh's Crit. Sacr. seduced, and seducing others: such our Saviour and his apostles were reputed, but falsely; others are truly so called, who deal fraudulently and false-heartedly with God, men, and their own hearts.

DECEIVER.

I. A Deceiver, or cunning impostor, hath many ways whereby he secretly, and with much craftiness seeks to trepan and beguile his neighbour: as (1.) He will pretend himself to be a special friend, and so insinuate into a man's affection. (2.) He strives to find out the disposition of the person he intends to cheat. (3.) He will, the better to accomplish his design, change his name, and pretend himself some worthy and noble person, and of some eminent family. (4.) He will watch the fittest opportunity to effect his enterprize. (5.) He will sometimes put a vizard on his face, and often change his habit, that he may deceive the more securely. (6.) And if he is in danger to be taken, he will exclaim against the Deceiver, and cry out, stop thief, &c.

but writ upon their foreheads, most people would be afraid of them; but they contrariwise, call themselves Christ's ministers, witnesses of Jesus, friends of truth, the Lamb's followers, &c. And it is common with them to pretend themselves to be the orthodox men, sons of the church, of the holy church, of the catholic church, masters in Israel, guides of the blind, &c. (4.) They study to find out the fittest season and opportunity to accomplish their design, and hellish purpose, viz., they watch for such a time, when the professors of the Gospel and truths of Jesus begin to decline in their zeal, and to lose much of the power of godliness, and seem to make a mighty stir about the form thereof, and are much divided among themselves; when iniquity doth abound, and the love of many waxeth cold; in a word, when men begin to grow secure, or the true shepherd is off of his watch, then these wolves and Deceivers get abroad, and, like that wicked enemy, sow their tares of error and delusion. (5.) The Jesuits, those crafty Deceivers, have often appeared in a disguise externally, and do usually change their garbs, &c. Sometimes they are holders-forth in a Quaker's meeting; at other times they will counterfeit themselves to be lawyers: sometimes they will take on them the habit of priests, sometimes merchants, sometimes shoe-makers, in short any thing. And all this, that they may the more securely carry on their wicked designs and purposes to pervert poor souls, &c. (6.) And lastly; when these False Teachers and Deceivers begin to fear they shall be discovered, and perceive there is a cry raised against them, and that they are closely pursued, and in danger to be taken, then, to save themselves, they cry out against others. None are more ready to exclaim against False-Teachers and Deceivers than they, endeavouring to cast all the infamy and black aspersions imaginable upon the true and faithful ministers of the Gospel, loading them with all the foulest calumnies they can devise, that they themselves may in the meanwhile pass the better for true men, and be the less suspected. Thus those blind guides in Israel served our Saviour himself: "Some said, he is a good man; others said nay, but he deceiveth the people."—"Say we not well, that thou art a Samaritan, and hast a devil?" John vii. 12, and viii. 48. "Sir, we remember that the Deceiver said, whilst he was yet alive, after three days I will rise again," Matt. xxvii. 63. And thus they exclaimed against the apostles: Paul was called a mover of sedition; and by False Teachers he with others were called Deceivers: "As Deceivers, and yet true," &c.—"After that way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers," Acts xxiv. 14.

II. Some Deceivers have been notorious in the horrid practice

PARALLEL.

I. FALSE TEACHERS, who are cunning to deceive, have many ways to delude poor creatures: as, (1.) They commonly pretend much pity and compassion to the souls of men, and hereby they endeavour to win themselves into their affections; and when once a person harbours a good opinion of them, their work is half done. (2.) They seek to find out what parts they have, and what principles they hold, with whom they converse: for if they perceive they are men and women well rooted and grounded in the orthodox faith, and able to defend the truth, they have little hopes of prevailing; but if they find that they are persons of a weak judgment, and mind more abundantly the conversation of men, than what doctrine they hold, or do more mind and regard the circumstances of religion, than the grand fundamentals thereof; they will pursue such close. (3.) They do always change their names; for if their names were known, they could not beguile so many: were error, false doctrine, blasphemy, heresy, wolves in sheep's clothing, foxes, cunning serpents, Deceivers, &c.,

II. So the Pope, and his hierarchy, those cursed Deceivers in the Romish church, have been no-of beguiling others; they have been such craft-masters at it, that they have deceived multitudes; and not only the common sort of people, but divers great men and princes have been cheated by them.

METAPHOR.

III. Some Deceivers have so far prevailed, that they have utterly ruined whole families, cheating people of their best and chiefest treasure.

souls, which are of more worth than all

IV. Grand impostors, old cheats and Deceivers, it is observed, rarely reform their hellish lives, and become true men, but grow worse and worse, till justice seizes them.

V. The end of cheaters and impostors, we see, oft-times is sad. If he be a notorious offender, and be taken, he dies without mercy.

PARALLEL.

torious in the hellish trade of beguiling the souls of men. How many millions have they deceived! O the multitudes they have led blindfold to hell! The kings of the earth have been beguiled by her, and the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk, and bewitched with the wine of her fornication.

III. So False-Teachers have sometimes so wonderfully prevailed, that they have utterly corrupted ruined, and undone, by their false doctrine, many nations, cities, towns, and families, cheating them of the truth of Christ, and his blessed ordinances; and not only so, but thereby also of their the world, Matt. xvi. 26.

IV. So False Teachers, heretics, and seducers, seldom or never are recovered, and brought back by unfeigned repentance, to the true Church of God: and therefore the apostle Paul saith, "Evil men, and seducers, shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived," &c., 2 Tim. iii. 13.

V. So the last end of false teachers and heretics will be sad and miserable: they are said to "Bring upon themselves swift destruction." "The beast, and false prophet shall be cast alive into the lake of fire, burning with brimstone," &c., 2 Pet. ii. 1, Rev. xix. 20.

THE CHURCH OF ROME, MYSTERY BABYLON.

"And there followed another angel, saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, the great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication," Rev. xiv. 8.

"And great Babylon came in remembrance before God, to give unto her the cup of the wine of the fierceness of his wrath," Rev. xvi. 19.

"And upon her forehead was a name written, MYSTERY, BABYLON THE GREAT, THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS, (or fornications,) AND ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH," Rev. xviii. 5.

"And after these things, I saw another angel come down from heaven,—And he cried mightily with a strong voice, saying, Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every unclean spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird," &c., Rev. xviii. 1, 2.

In the handling of this great subject, it seems needful to give an account of the various opinions, that have, more or less, presented themselves to the world about it, which may be reduced to these four following heads.

I. That it is Jerusalem; and that for two reasons:

1. Because the man of sin, or last beast, that is to head this Babylon, is set forth by St. Paul, "To sit in the temple of God, showing himself to be a god," 2 Thess. ii. 4.

2. Because this city where the beast reigns, and shall slay the witnesses, "is spiritually called Sodom and Egypt, where our Lord was crucified," Rev. xi. 8.

II. That it is the Turkish empire, or power of the Saracens; which Mr. Mede somewhat touches, and in a brief way most learnedly argues against, in his third book, page 644, 645.

III. That it is indeed Rome, the seat of the fourth or last empire, but Rome in its heathen state, under the idolatrous and persecuting emperors: so the Rhemists would have it, if there be a necessity to fix upon Rome to be this Apocalyptical, or Mystery Babylon. For this opinion the present Romanists have no better advocate than Dr. Hammond, who hath done very worthily at other turns. See his Annotations upon the 17th chapter of the Apocalypse.

IV. That it is the present power and church of Rome, who under pretence of the most high and ecclesiastical jurisdiction, doth influence and govern the secular power and state of kingdoms. Of this last opinion were the ancient Waldenses, who felt the bloody power of Rome, venting itself in most horrid and barbarous cruelties against them, and that for a long series of time, as appears by our most authentic, ancient, and modern writers, who give a very ample account of the great persecution of Christians, for many hundred years last past, in all parts of the Christian world; where they have had power. To which opinion of the Waldenses most of our modern Protestant divines agree, of which we shall mention only Cartwright, Fulk, the worthily admired, and learned Mede, not forgetting famous Du Moulin of France; as may be seen in their works at large.

But because we will not take things upon trust, nor refer the reader to many quotations, which he may want books and time to satisfy himself about; it appears needful, that we remove the objections with as much brevity as possible, before we state the Metaphor, and run the parallel.

Now that Babylon in all these new Testament texts cannot be fairly applied to Jerusalem, the Turks and Saracens, nor terminate in the heathenish state of Rome, we offer these following considerations or arguments:—

I. It cannot be meant the city Jerusalem:

1. Because Jerusalem did not reign over the kings of the earth in St. John's time, when he saw this vision, and wrote the revelation, which this city Babylon is expressly said to do: "And the woman which thou sawest, is that great city which reigneth over the kings of the earth," Rev. xvii. 18. Jerusalem having been not only under captivity divers times before, but was then entirely under the power of the Roman yoke, as the whole history of the Gospel doth confirm, and themselves did most plainly confess: "We have no king but Cæsar," John xix. 15.

2. Jerusalem was never in so high esteem with the beast, as to be capable to ride as queen regent upon him, as this woman, whore, or city is said to do; "And the Angel said unto me, Wherefore didst thou marvel? I will tell thee the mystery of the woman, and the beast that carrieth her, which hath the seven heads, and ten horns," Rev. xvii. 7, compared with ver. 2, "So he carried me away in the Spirit into the wilderness, and I saw a woman sit upon a scarlet coloured beast, full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads, and ten horns."—For by the woman sitting, and beast carrying, is undoubtedly signified, influence, power, and dominion, which Jerusalem was far remote from, not only under the Roman monarchy, but also under the three kingdoms that went before it, viz., the Babylonian, Grecian, and Persian; as might be largely illustrated both out of sacred and human history.

3. Jerusalem did not sit upon many waters, which is interpreted to be people, nations, and tongues; that is, had not command or dominion over them, as this woman, whore, or city is said to have: "And he saith, the waters which thou sawest, where the whore sitteth, are peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues," Rev. xvii. 15. The whole land of Judea being under tribute to the Roman government at that time: Luke ii. 1. "And it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Cæsar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed;" and particularly, Galilee, Nazareth, Judea, and the city of David, called Bethlehem, ver. 4.

4. Jerusalem was not capable to enchant and bewitch all the nations round about her, either by her religion and doctrine, or by great gifts and rewards.

(1.) Because the Roman power kept her under, and much in awe, on the one hand not owning nor subscribing to her religion.

(2.) The Christian doctrine and religion blocked up her way, on the other hand that she could not extend her influence to either neighbouring, or remote nations, as this woman, whore, or city, is said to do: "For thy merchants were the great men of the earth; for by thy sorceries were all nations deceived," Rev. xviii. 23.

5. Jerusalem, though she were guilty of much blood, from the beginning of her excellency and glory, in Solomon's time, killing prophets, even all that were sent unto her, murdered John Baptist, and our Lord and Saviour, as also the blessed martyr, St. Stephen: yet in her could not be found that great mass of blood that was shed, and my-they think they are

riads of Christian saints that have been barbarously murdered, by massacre, and public martyrdom, since they were ruined and destroyed by Titus Vespasian, which we find positively charged upon this city Babylon: "And I saw the woman drunk with the blood of Saints, and with the blood of the Martyrs of Jesus, and I wondered with great admiration," as indeed well he might, as shall be shown. "And in her was found the blood of prophets, and of saints, and of all that were slain upon the earth; that is, since the destruction of Jerusalem, Rev. xvii. 6, and xviii. 24.

6. And lastly; not to multiply more upon this head, though Jerusalem was fearfully destroyed, as the history of Josephus shows; yet shall she rise again, be built upon her own heap, be replenished with her own children, which this city Babylon under consideration shall never be, after this catastrophe which John saw visionally coming upon it: "And a mighty angel took up a stone, like a great mill-stone, and cast it into the sea, saying, thus with violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down, and shall be found no more at all," Rev. xviii. 21.

II. It cannot be the Turks and Saracens, for two reasons offered by the learned Mead, lib. iii. p. 643.

1. Because though they did arise to great power, in the world, yet they had not their seat in that great city, which in St. John's time reigned over the kings of the earth, which this Babylon is expressly said to have, Rev. xvii. 18.

2. That they did not rise by apostacy from the Christian religion, which this Babylon with her head, the man of sin, did; for, as this worthy author saith, the Turk, whatever he be, could be no apostate, because he was of a nation that never was Christian.

To which we shall add something for the clearing of this head, that we may discharge that debt we owe to God, to the Church, and the world.

3. It cannot be the Turks, because they are not strangely and wonderfully mysterious, which this Babylon is said to be: "And upon her forehead was a name written, MYSTERY, BABYLON THE GREAT, THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH. And the angel said unto me, Wherefore didst thou marvel? I will tell thee the mystery of the woman, and the beast which carrieth her, which hath the seven heads, and ten horns," Rev. xvii. 5, 7.

What special Mystery hath showed itself to the world from the Turks and Saracens, more than from other common empires or kingdoms, that is matter of admiration to the wisest of men? Is it matter of wonder, that the Turks do own but one true, and most high God? Is it matter of wonder, that they do own Jesus Christ to be a prophet, and a good man? Is it matter of highest wonder, that they prefer Mahomet above Jesus? Is it matter of wonder, that they appear true to their contracts, in matters of civil commerce? Is it matter of highest wonder, for them to endeavour to keep what dominion they have, and to enlarge it, to make slaves and prizes of those enemies they take prisoners? We say, in none of these things is there any high mystery, or matter of greatest wonder, being things common to all places and kingdoms invested with power.

(1.) Did not the great king of literal Babylon own the only true God, yet still held the Church in captivity?

(2.) Did not Israel own the same, and yet kept their idols, after their revolt from Judah?

(3.) Did not Judah prefer Moses above and before Christ, and at that time when Christ was personally amongst them, working most stupendous miracles, which did evince his divine mission? Nay, did they not prefer a common and notorious villain before the blessed Lord of glory, when they desired a murderer to be freed, and pressed hard to have the good and blessed Jesus, the Saviour of the world, killed? And did not this wise apostle know this to be true in fact, and to equal, nay, out-do any thing that the Turks or Saracens ever did, or can be accused of? And if St. John was transported with astonishing wonder, at matters much less than he had seen before, doth it not give good reason to suspect him of weakness and defect, that he should suffer himself to be surprized with the greatest wonder, at far less things than he had seen and known before? Certainly therefore we must conclude, there was something more of mystery in John's vision, than what hath been showed to the world by the great Turk, or any other power; and indeed, undoubtedly, the greatest mystery that ever the world was acquainted with: for the characters of Babylon must either be singular, that is, such as none have besides; or else they must be transcendent, to go far beyond what others had in a lesser degree. Otherwise John might have kept the description of Babylon to himself, there being no clear distinctions, to render the wisest and most discerning men able to make a judgment upon her. The Mystery then that is written upon this woman Babylon, seems clearly to lie in these particulars following.

First. That she doth transact the most horrid wickedness that ever the world was, or is like to be, acquainted with.

Secondly. That under this monstrous guilt, she is prodigiously confident, and without all regret, or show of shame, and most impudently boasts of the highest sanctity and holiness in the world, viz., that she is totally pure, infallibly certain, and cannot err, &c. That this indeed is a Mystery to be wondered at, let it be considered.

(1.) That a Shepherd should be a wolf, and devour that flock which he pretends to be an overseer or pastor of.

(2.) That a professed servant of Jesus Christ, and the meanest of saints, should exalt himself above his Master, and not above his Master only, but above the God of his Master, and all other deputed gods, that are vicegerents to the King of heaven, by slighting and trampling upon the holy scriptures, and laws both of God and princes, dispensing with the breach of them, indulging the highest violation thereof, and setting up his own inventions, traditions, and decrees above them: insomuch that there is a thousand times less danger, in their esteem, in respect of excommunications, and corporal punishments in this world, or of damnation in the world to come, in breaking and violating the laws of God and princes, than there is in the violation or breach of the inventions, traditions, and decrees of Mystery Babylon, and her head.

(3.) That one sitting in the temple of God, pretending himself as a poor apostle, vicar, and successor of Christ, nay, as the successor of a poor fisherman, should wear the highest ensigns of imperial dignity!

(4.) That he should be so lordly, and prodigiously insolent, who was commanded to the greatest humility and abasement, as to tread upon the necks of emperors, kick off the crowns of great princes, and make kings his foot pages.

(5.) That he should pretend highly, yea, most highly, to God, Christ, religion, and holiness, and yet espouse to himself, as the darlings of his bosom, not only the chiefest sons of Belial, but all that will decline sanctity and religion, and embody themselves with those first-born sons of wickedness, that are of the highest magnitude, and engage themselves in such monstrous and butcherly practices, that human nature, as such, could never act in the butchering of brute beasts.

(6.) That the spouse of this prodigious monster should in profession own God, Jesus Christ, and the things of religion, of which justice and charity, holiness and compassion, are not the least part; and yet under this vizard, and in the very time of these pretensions, perpetrate the greatest and most unparalleled villanies in the world: 1. In being the top of pride. 2. In committing palpable idolatry. 3. Fill themselves with excess and drunkenness. 4. To curse, swear, and blaspheme the very name they profess to be sacred. 5. To cast down the truth, burn the Bible, deface the holy books and laws of God. 6. To assume not only a power to dispense with violations of the highest nature, but to pardon and forgive them at pleasure. 7. To commit adultery, and account it a venial crime. 8. To break covenants, drive a trade in perjury, forswear every thing they are justly charged with, and is fully proved against them. 9. To foment wars and broils in every kingdom and country where they have power; contrive the ruin of towns and places, cities, countries, and kingdoms, by fire, sword, and most cruel devastations. 10. To slaughter, kill, and barbarously murder, both men, women, and children, even all that dare make a show of conscience and religion, so far as to abhor and dissent from these villanies.

This is such a scheme of religion, and system of divinity, to come from an apostle, a Shepherd, a vicar and successor of Christ, from a Church, sheep, saints, and the pretended followers of the meek, peaceable, and innocent Jesus, who taught altogether otherwise by his doctrine and example, that it might well be wondered at, and is the strangest Mystery that ever appeared, of which we challenge the whole world to show the like in the Turks and Saracens. For men to swear, lie and forswear themselves, and yet be true men: to contrive rebellion, murder, and treason, and yet be as innocent as a child unborn : to be elevated to the highest pinnacle of pride, even above emperors and kings, above Jesus Christ, and God his Father ; and yet be humble and lowly : to commit gross idolatry ; and yet be the servants of the living God : to be filled with, and make a trade of excess and drunkenness ; and yet be the patterns and standards of sobriety and temperance : to cast down the truth to the ground, deface the laws of God, and burn the scriptures : and yet be the true witnesses to it : to forgive sins ; and yet be the greatest of sinners themselves ; to commit fornication and adultery ; and yet be spotless and pure in heart : to foment wars and broils in every kingdom and country where they have power ; to contrive the ruin of towns and places, cities, countries, and kingdoms, by fire, sword, and cruel devastations ; and yet be as harmless as doves to all mankind, the only sons of peace and quietness : to slaughter, kill, and barbarously murder men, women, and children, that dare not be so wicked as themselves ; and yet to be full of mercy, tender pity, and compassion ; an apostle, shepherd, vicar, and successor of the meek and lamb-like Saviour. And for the dear consort of this impious head, or man of sin, to be not only confederate with him, but a principal in all these unparalleled villanies and most butcherly and rapacious murders ; and yet be the holy Catholic Church of God, the pure and spotless spouse of Jesus Christ, the true sheep, the harmless lambs, the best of saints, and close followers of the Lord Jesus, who always taught the contrary by his holy doctrine, and meek example. We say, these things not being found by secret search, but are written in capital letters upon her forehead, appear in open view, to be read by every one that is not wilfully blind : let any one show us a greater Mystery in the world than this, and we will subscribe to it.

4. It cannot be the Turks, because they are not the mother of harlots, and abominations of the earth, which this Babylon is said to be, Rev. xvii. 5, "And upon her forehead was a name written, MYSTERY, BABYLON THE GREAT, THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS, AND ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH." And here we demand, in excuse to the Turks, this one thing :

From whence did proceed the murders, massacres, and martyrdoms of all the religious professors of Christianity, that have died by violence in the Christian world, for the space of twelve hundred years last past ? and from what people did proceed those horrid oaths, blasphemies, and execrations, that the world hath woefully been acquainted with, most horrid and strangely astonishing to repeat ?

Came these unparalleled degrees of impiety from the Turks ? from the Waldensians, Lutherans, Calvinists, or any non-conforming Protestants ? No, no. Why, whose language then is it ? Whose ! Why, it is the language of the beast of the bottomless pit, and bloody whore, who bare these blasphemous sons of her own body, daily nourishes them at her breast, and strengthens them in their sinful courses, by accounting them the sons, the precious sons of Zion, the true sons of the Catholic Church, the darlings of heaven, the beloved ones of the Virgin Mary, and giving them pardon for these bold and heaven-daring sins, as often as they do commit them, and come to ask pardon for them : so that sin and pardon is as constant and common with them, as breathing and eating. And these things are done to seal and confirm lies, which is the more heavy, heinous, and prodigious ; for if men may lie by allowance ; may kill, and shed innocent blood, without control of conscience, and Church-censures ; may swear and blaspheme, and challenge God himself to damn them ; may burn men for religion, consume cities to ashes, conspire the death of kings, the ruin and overthrow of kingdoms, whore, and murder infants ; and yet be accounted a Church, the members and parts of it, called saints, holy children, and sons of the Most High God : then may we claim a patent, and take a license to change the name of all things, and alter all the ideas of the minds of men ; call and account Beelzebub a good god, and all his black tribe, the pure saints of the Most High ; call the lower regions of blackness and darkness, to which he is confined, the heaven of glory and eternal light. Of which things we ought in justice to clear the Turks, until witnesses of undoubted credit shall come forth, and evidence, that the Turkish state is the mother of as great abominations as these are.

5. And lastly ; the Turks cannot be Mystery Babylon, because they never were made drunk with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus, which this woman, Mystery Babylon, is expressly said to be, Rev. xvii. 6, "And I saw the woman drunk with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus, and I wondered with great admiration." Now let any man show such bloodshed, saints' bloodshed, by massacres and martyrdom, for the professing of Christianity, which must be, if the text be answered in that clause, "Blood of the martyrs of Jesus," by the Turks, either within their dominions, or without, as hath been shed by a generation nearer home, and we shall become like the man without a wedding-garment, wholly speechless, and say not a word about Babylon.

DRUG WITH MASS

III. Now that Babylon in the Apocalypse, is Great Rome, that in former times reigned, and in future times shall be destroyed, is owned by some of the Papists themselves, and is asserted by all Protestants; the difference betwixt them is brought to this narrow point: the one wholly confines Babylon to Rome Heathen, and there totally to terminate; the other brings Babylon down lower, to Rome antichristian, or papal Rome. Now that this work may be to edification, and more full of satisfaction in this great cause, we shall advance to the last and chief secret that is to be opened and considered, namely, whether all things in John's vision or prophecy, that are applied to Mystery Babylon, did completely terminate in Rome Heathen, and come no further!

In answer to this great enquiry, we do, with the body of Protestants, in opposition to the Papists, conclude the negative, viz., that all things in the Apocalypse applied to Mystery Babylon, did not terminate in Rome Heathen. The reasons of which negative are as followeth.

1. Because the beast that Mystery Babylon rides on, is the eighth head, or last ruling power of that city that is seated upon seven hills, which must be Rome Papal, because the whole race of Rome Heathen was gone off, before the eighth head came up.—The sixth head was in John's time; the seventh was to come, and continue but a short space, "The beast that carries the woman," viz., Babylon, "is of the seventh, but is the eighth, and shall be the last; for he goeth into perdition." This being so evident from the letter of the text, needs nothing more to confirm it. Now that Rome Heathen was not the last part of the Romish power, is not only the full and joint consent of all writers upon this subject, but is so evident to all the Christian world, that it would be vanity itself to make a show of proof. The conclusion then is this; if the very last part of the Roman power carries the woman Babylon, and that the Heathen-state of Rome went off before, and was not the last; then Babylon could not terminate in Rome Heathen, but must come down to Rome Papal. See Rev. xvii. 3, 7, 9, 11.

2. If Babylon be totally terminated in Rome Heathen, then the book of the Apocalypse is of little use to the latter ages of the Christian world: for if the whole transactions relating to the persecution of the Church, and the slaughter and destruction of God's enemies, did end in Rome Heathen, then it served only to give a characteristical account of a beast and whore that was grown old, and ready to go off the stage; but hath wholly left us in the dark, and given us no notice at all of that horrible confusion, and bloody persecutions, which have reigned in the Christian world for more than a thousand years last past; which for length of time, numbers of murders, and manner of cruelties, hath outdone all the wickedness of Rome in its Heathen state. Which is not at all likely, that a vision should be given, and a revelation made, and called so, about a state that was almost expired, and the most great and principal part wholly left out, and said nothing to. Who can imagine, that a careful Saviour should be so full in his discoveries to the Jewish church, concerning their sufferings, and the time under Egypt, and Babylon literal; and be so short and lean to his Gospel-church, to leave them altogether without any written prospect, or extraordinary prophet, to inform them what should come to pass in the world, from the going off of the power of Rome Heathen, to the end of all the Church's troubles, which have already lasted above a thousand years? The conceit of which is fit but for two ranks of men to receive, viz., the Roman Catholics, and such Protestants as look for antichrist to come at the end of the world, after the restoration of the Jews to their own land, and building a material temple at Jerusalem, where antichrist shall sit three days and an half, or years, to kill two men called the two witnesses.

3. If this last Babylon was wholly to terminate in Rome Heathen, then there was no cause of wonderment and great admiration for a wise man, to see in a vision an heathenish state, under a diabolical influence, to perform actions suitable to their state, and not contrary to their professions: for what manner of wonderment can it be to feel the wind blow, to see the sea foam, and hear the waves rage and roar when the winds oppose its effluxion? And what cause of great wonderment and admiration for a wise man, to see wicked Heathens oppose and persecute Christianity, when it is so suitable to their spirit, and agreeable to their profession so to do, we cannot yet understand, and we will diligently listen to them who will undertake to inform us, for the thing is true, that a wise man did wonder at the sight he saw, with great admiration, Rev. xvii. 6, "I saw the woman drunk with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus, and I wondered with great admiration." Wonderful! O strange! At what? To see that which was common to all ages, the seed of the serpent, that professed Heathenism, the wicked, even the worst of the wicked, by principle and profession, to plot against the righteous, and gnash upon him with their teeth; idolaters. professed idolaters, to persecute the servants and worshippers of the true God; those that were born after the flesh, and lived after the flesh, to persecute them that were born of the Spirit, and lived after the Spirit. Surely, if our adversaries' opinion was true in this case, that Babylon is only Rome Heathen, St. John had forgotten that Cain slew Abel, and Ishmael persecuted Isaac; and took not so much notice of the course of the world, common to every age, as Paul did, who said, "But as he that was born after the flesh, persecuted him that was born after the Spirit; as it was then, so it is now: and what strange wonder is all this.

4. Rome Heathen never was espoused, married, or united to the Lord Jesus, in a spiritual way, visibly owning his laws, and submitting to his government, as a wife submits to and obeys her husband, and afterwards casts him off and chooses another head and husband; and therefore cannot be Mystery Babylon, or the great whore: for though these heathens were great idolaters, yet were they never charged with spiritual adultery, nor could they, unless they had once, by visible profession, made a covenant with, or espoused themselves to the Lord Jesus, which Rome papal before its apostacy did: therefore Rome Heathen could not be the great whore, or Mystical Babylon.

5. Rome Heathen cannot be the Babylon set forth by John, unless she be guilty of all the Christian blood shed upon the earth since the destruction of Jerusalem: for as the guilt of all the blood shed from righteous Abel, to the death of Zacharias, as by our Saviour fixed upon Jerusalem, and cannot be removed to another people; so the blood of all the martyrs and followers of Jesus, is by this revelation fixed upon the last Babylon, Rev. xvii. 6, "And I saw the woman drunk with the blood of the saints, and of the martyrs of Jesus." Chap. xviii. 24, "And in her was found the blood of the prophets, and of saints, and of all that were slain upon the earth." But Rome Heathen was not guilty of all the Christian blood that was shed upon earth, by murders, massacres, and martyrdoms, since the destruction of Jerusalem: for to look back but for six hundred years last past, in which time we shall find hundreds of thousands of professed Christians most butcherly and barbarously put to death, for their zeal and love to the Christian religion, in the respective nations of Europe, before which the Heathenish state of Rome was gone off about the space of six hundred years. So that if he will regard the full satisfying of this prediction about Mystery Babylon, we must of necessity bring her down lower than the heathenish state of Rome.

6. Rome Heathen cannot be this Babylon under consideration, because the discoveries of other prophecies, relating to the same state, no way agrees to the power of Rome Heathen.

(1.) This state of Babylon is called the Mystery of Iniquity. This no way agrees to Rome Heathen, but fully agrees to Rome Papal. Compare 2 Thess. ii. 7, with Rev. xvii. 7, viz., "For the mystery of iniquity doth already work."—"The angel said unto me, Wherefore didst thou marvel? I will tell thee the mystery of the woman, and of the beast that carrieth her."

(2.) The head of this state Mystery Babylon is called the Man of Sin, by way of eminency, κατ' εἰσιν, not only beyond the common rank of men, but beyond the highest sons of wickedness that went before him. And there is a great truth in this; for if we consider the Pope in respect of pride, hypocrisy, idolatry, and blood, he is the most unparalleled Man of Sin.

(3.) This state, or mystery of iniquity began to work in the apostle's days, which is no ways applicable to the power of Rome Heathen; for that did not then begin, it being at that time in the very meridian of its greatness, and universal sovereignty: Luke ii. 1, "And it came to pass in those days, that there came out a decree from Cæsar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed."

(4.) This man of sin, Mystery of iniquity, or head of this Babylonish state, is said to be let or hindered in his designs: "He that now letteth, will let, until he be taken out of the way," 2 Thess. ii. 7. But now Rome Heathen hath no let or hinderance, either from the word of God, for that declared it, as it was a civil magistracy, to be God's ordinance; nor from any opposite power, either civil or military, they giving laws to the greatest part of the world, and enjoying the supreme government of the best kingdoms in the universe, none being able to cope with them at that time.

(5.) This head of the Babylonish state is said to "sit in the temple of God," which the power of Rome heathen did not do, neither in the temple of Jerusalem, nor in the church, which is more properly the temple of God: for the Jews kept the possession of the literal temple, till it was destroyed; and for the Church of God, the Heathen emperors never loved it so well, as to make their residence in it. But the Bishop of Rome, before he showed himself to be that wicked one, viz., the man of sin, did evidently sit in the Church or temple of God, and so fulfilled this prophecy in the very letter of it.

(6.) He, that is, the man of sin, or head of this Babylonish state, was to rise by apostacy, or falling away from the Christian religion; 2 Thess. ii. 3, "There shall come a falling away first;" exactly agreeing with another prophecy to the same purpose, 1 Tim. iv. 1, "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith," &c. But Rome Heathen did not rise by apostacy from the Christian religion, or a departing from the faith, which they never professed, as is evident to the whole world: ergo, Rome Heathen cannot be this Babylonish state.

(7.) This man of sin, or head of Mystery Babylon, lay hid in the apostle's time, and was not revealed: but the power of Rome Heathen did not then lie hid, or wanted to be revealed: for it stood visible and high, upon a hill, even upon seven hills, 2 Thess. ii. 3, Rev. xvii. 9, according to the Roman poet Ovid, who lived about the very time of Christ's being on earth, in lib. de Tristibus.

Sed quæ de septem totum circumspicit orbem Montibus, Imperii Roma, Deumq; Locis.

That is,

But Rome, which from her seven hills the whole
Earth views around, the place of gods, and rule, &c.

Ergo, Rome Heathen cannot be this Babylonish state.

(8.) This Mystery of iniquity is said to "oppose and exalt himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped," 2 Thess. ii. 4. But this the power of Rome in its Heathen state did not do; for they worshipped, offered sacrifices, and bore a reverence to their gods, which by nature indeed were no gods; and it is only the head of Rome Papal, that runs down all gods but those of his own making; ergo, Rome Papal, and not Rome Heathen, must of necessity be this Mystery of iniquity.

(9.) The rise or coming of this Mystery of iniquity, is "after the working of Satan," 2 Thess. ii. 9. But the rise of the Romish greatness and power, when Heathen, was not after the working of Satan, but was said by Daniel, Chap. vii. 2, 3, to be produced by the providence of God, or the four winds of Heaven; and by the apostle, to be "powers ordained of God," Rom. xiii. 1; therefore, Rome Heathen cannot be the Mystery of iniquity, &c., here meant.

(10.) This Mystery of iniquity is not only said to come "after the working of Satan," 2 Thess. ii. 9, but also with all power, &c. But the rise of Rome Heathen was not after that manner: ergo, &c. To illustrate the first proposition, note, that the term, "all power," marks out the Romish Pope so notoriously, that whosoever runs may read it; for if we do but impartially consider his impudent usurpations upon crowned heads, and his pretences of supremacy over the whole Christian world; his proud imperious decrees, bulls, &c.; his disposal of the kingdoms of princes, and the inheritances, yea, the very lives of private persons, of any rank, that dare disobey him; his pretences to shut and open heaven, hell, and his feigned purgatory; his carrying a symbol of that vast and God-like power, viz., a brace of keys hanging at his girdle; all these will appear as clear demonstrations, that the head of Rome Papal is the head of Babylon, and the grand impostor, or the capital manager of this Mystery of iniquity, he having, most sacrilegiously, assumed to himself all heavenly power of damning or saving, and all earthly power, both temporal or civil, and ecclesiastical or sacred.

(11.) This wicked Babylonish state comes forth with a great pretence of miracles, which are but false signs, and lying wonders, to deceive and cheat the people; and by this means they conquer nations, and carry away their kings to their wicked interest. This Rome Heathen did not do. For though the heathenish power of Rome did conquer nations and countries, with their kings, yet it was by state-policy, and force of arms, not by pretended miracles, false signs, and lying wonders: therefore Rome Heathen cannot be this Mystery of iniquity, or Babylonish state.

(12.) This wicked state, under consideration, is declared not only to depart from the faith by a palpable apostacy, but to forbid marriage, and command a long lent, and many other fast-days, whereon some sorts of meats are prohibited to be eaten; which doth so fully agree to the papal state of Rome, that nothing can be more plain, unless the Spirit had expressly told us, this will be fulfilled by Rome Papal. For these two things we have their canons upon record, the which if none can show the like of the Heathen state of Rome, then Rome Papal shall carry the title of this Mystery of iniquity, and Babylonish state.

7. If the Babylon, under consideration, be only confined to the power of Heathen Rome, then there is a more evident and apparent mystery upon the state or power of Rome Heathen, than upon any power or state that went before it, or should come after it; for so the text imports, Rev. xvii. 5, "And upon her forehead was a name written, MYSTERY, BABYLON THE GREAT," &c. But there did no such mystery appear upon the power or state of Rome Heathen, therefore this Babylon cannot terminate there. What great Mystery appeared upon the power and state of Rome Heathen, more than appeared upon the power and state of the three foregoing monarchies.

8. This Babylon cannot be confined to the power of Rome only in its Heathen state, because Babylon is to continue till the good people shall, with the horns that did support her, which is the last part of the wicked and persecuting power, answerable to the ten toes in Daniel's great image, reward and destroy her, for the injury that she did unto them, according to these three texts of scripture, Rev. xviii. 4, Dan. vii. 22, 26, 27, Rev. xvii. 16, 17. "And I heard another voice from heaven, saying, come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, &c. Reward her even as she hath rewarded you, and deal unto her double according to her works: in the cup that she hath filled, fill to her double: how much she hath glorified herself, and lived deliciously, so much torment and sorrow give her." "And the ten horns which thou sawest upon the beast, these shall hate the whore, and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh, and burn her with fire." Which the power of Rome in its Heathen state felt not, but ended its course, without being destroyed by good people, and the ten horns, which is the last part of the image-government. "And in the days of these kings," viz., ten toes, ten horns, ten kings," shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to another people, but it shall break in pieces, and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever." Which could not be fulfilled in what Constantine did in the time of Maxentius, as Dr. Hammond would have us believe, for these three reasons:

(1.) Because the ten horns, that afterwards the Roman power fell into, were not come up, and so could not destroy the power of Rome in its Heathen state.

(2.) Because Babylon's persecution, misery, and confusion, did not utterly cease, which it must have done, so as to rise no more for ever, if the power of Rome Heathen destroyed by Constantine, had been this Mystery Babylon.

(3.) Because though there might be a body of good people with Constantine, when he overthrew Maxentius, yet the power of the kingdom was not so established in the hand of good people, as not afterward to be left to other, as the text affirms, "And the kingdom shall not be left to another people:" for, as we shall anon show, the kingdom or power that ceased to be in the hands of Heathens, and by a mighty and divine Providence came to be in the hands of a worthy and renowned Christian emperor, came afterwards into the hands of very devils incarnate, who acted all the violence of the Heathen power over again, and indeed out-did them.

9. Those that are for confining this Babylon to the power of Rome in its heathen state, are not well aware what they do ; for if they do demand it, their opposites, who hold it to be Rome Papal, may grant it for argument's sake : but then the remedy is worse than the disease ; for they slip into such a precipice, as neither Baronious, Belarmine, Dr. Hammond, or the Rhemists, can save or deliver them from. The true state of the case is this :

Rome Heathen is Mystery Babylon ; this say the Papists : and the more willing they are to say so, because it is a good argument to prove that Peter was at Rome, he subscribing his first Epistle from Babylon, 1 Pet. v. 13, " The church that is at Babylon, elected together with you, saluteth you," &c., but this being allowed, the worst is come. This Babylon is destroyed, when the power of Rome Heathen is taken away, so as to be no more for ever ; but then what condition doth the state of Babylon fall into ! Doth it become the throne of the Lamb, the city of the living God, the habitation of holiness, and dwelling-place of Zion, the true Church, the place of the holy ones, and saints of the Most High ? O no ! what then ? hearken, and an angel from heaven shall tell you, Rev. xviii. 1, 2, " And after these things," of the horns hating the whore, making of her naked, and burning her flesh with fire, " I saw another angel come down from heaven, having great power, and the earth was lightened with his glory ; and he cried mightily, with a strong voice, saying, Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird." Now, you Papists, if you will needs have Babylon to be Rome Heathen, take it, and much good do you with it ; but then make Rome Papal better than an habitation of devils, if you can.

If it be Rome Heathen, then adieu to Dr. Hammond, and the Rhemists, they have what we desire : if it be, then Rome Papal is a far worse place than Rome Heathen or Babylon ever was ; and then what a fine church the people make themselves ?

10. If the place, seat, and city of Rome was not utterly ruined, so as to be no more for ever as a place of commerce, trade, and human society, when the Heathen power ceased,—then Rome Heathen cannot be this Babylon, because of the ending and downfall of this Babylon ; the place, seat, and city is utterly ruined, so as to be no more a place of trade, commerce, or human society. " And the ten horns which thou sawest upon the beast, these shall hate the whore, and shall make her desolate, and shall eat her flesh, and burn her with fire." And the woman which thou sawest is that great city which reigned over the kings of the earth. " For her sins which God hath remembered, which have reached unto heaven, therefore shall her plagues come in one day, death, and mourning, and famine, and she shall be utterly burnt with fire. For strong is the Lord who judgeth her," Rev. xvii. 16, 11, and xviii. 8, 11, 12, 13. All sorts of merchandize traffic, trade and commerce with human society, shall cease, so as to be no more in her at all, and the good things which she in her fulness enjoyed before, even all things that were dainty and goodly, are now departed from her, and she shall find them no more at all, ver. 13, " For in an hour is she made desolate," ver. 19. And a mighty angel took up a stone, like a great mill-stone, and cast it into the sea, saying, thus with violence shall the great city of Babylon be thrown down, and shall be found no more at all. And the voice of harpers, and musicians, and of pipers, and trumpeters, shall be heard no more at all in thee, and no craftsman, of whatsoever craft he be, shall be found any more in thee ; and the sound of a mill-stone shall be heard no more at all in thee. And the light of the candle shall shine no more at all in thee ; and the voice of the bridegroom, and of the bride, shall be heard no more at all in thee," ver. 21, 22, 23.

But the place, seat, and city of Rome was not so utterly ruined as to be no more for ever a place of trade, traffic, merchandize, and human society, when the Heathen power of Rome ended.

Ergo, Rome Heathen cannot be the whore of Babylon, under present consideration, whose seat or city hath since had a powerful government, reigning in pride and pomp, for some hundreds of years.

1. If Rome papal be Mystery Babylon, the city of pride and confusion, that is set forth by St. John in the apocalypse ; then neither the city of Jerusalem, the seat of the Turks and Saracens, nor Rome Heathen, is or can be the same : but Rome Papal is the mystery Babylon set forth by St. John in the apocalypse—Ergo, neither the city of Jerusalem, the seat of the Turks and Saracens, nor Rome Heathen, can be the same.

The last proposition is thus proved :

If all the marks and characters left us upon divine record, to prove Mystery Babylon by, do more aptly and fitly agree to Rome Papal, than to the city of Jerusalem, the seat of the Turks, or Rome Heathen : then Rome Papal, and not any one of them, is Mystery-Babylon.

But the marks and characters left upon divine record, to distinguish and know Mystery Babylon by, do more aptly and fitly agree to Rome Papal :

Ergo, Rome Papal, and not the other, is Mystery Babylon.

For the clearing up of this argument, we shall distinctly state the character of Mystery Babylon, and run the parallel betwixt her and Rome Papal, in this method following :

Babylon is a woman, which imports either a single person, ranked in the feminine gender; or a body of people related to some head, husband, or public person to whom she is joined in wedlock, by covenant or matrimonial contract, as Eve was related to Adam, and therefore called woman; or as Judah and Israel, who were joined in covenant with God, and therefore called a woman, or as the true Church now is married or joined to Christ, and therefore called a woman. A single person, as Eve was, she cannot be, because the character given of her in respect of her state and actions, doth no way comport with it : she must therefore be a body of people, related to some head, husband, or public person, as Judah and Israel of old was, who are often called by the title of woman; and in like manner Babylon, before her degeneracy, were a people joined in matrimonial contract, by a Gospel covenant and profession, to the Son of God.

METAPHOR.

I. Babylon imports a body of people that was once united to the Son of God; and hence, metaphorically called a woman; "And I saw a woman sit, &c. And the woman was arrayed, &c. And I saw the woman drunk," &c., Rev. xvii. 3, 4, 6.

peace from God the Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ," Rom. i. 6, 7.

II. Babylon is a city, a very great city, so called in a threefold respect; (1.) In respect of power; (2.) In respect of people; (3.) In respect of place and residence, where this power and people is seated; - Rev. xvii. 18, and xviii. 10, 16, 18, 19, 21. City being indefinitely taken for either of these, or comprehending all, as in these instances, Psal. cxxi. Isa. xiv. 31, Acts xix. 28.

be further cleared by argument, &c. The fame of this people as a Church, was great, before the power and chief dominion of the place was joined with it; as appears, Rom. i. 8, "First, I thank my God, through Jesus Christ, for you all, that your faith is spoken of throughout the whole world."

III. Babylon is not only a woman, and a city, but a bad woman, and a city of confusion; for so the word Babel, or Babylon, signifies, viz., evil, or confusion.

tation, either by the bishop himself, his cardinals, or inferior orders, having his humility and self-denial only in words, like those the apostle speaketh of, that "In words

PARALLEL.

I. Rome Papal, or the (church of Rome) is a body, a great body, a famous body of people, and which were, before their apostacy, a true church, by Gospel covenant and profession united to the Son of God, as her public head and husband; "Among whom are ye also the called of Jesus Christ. To all that be in Rome, beloved of God, called to be saints; grace be to you, and

II. Rome Papal, or church of Rome, is a city, a very great city, so called in a threefold respect, 1. In respect of power, which is a twofold, (1.) civil, (2.) Ecclesiastical, signified by two horns like a lamb, Rev. xiii. 1. 2. In respect of people, which are great in number. 3. In respect of place and residence, where this power and great people is seated; and indeed it is as worthily called by way of eminency, a city, as any power, people, or place in the Christian world, because there is nothing so much spoken of, or gives sadder occasion to be so much spoken of, as Rome, in respect of power, people, and place, which shall

III. Rome Papal, or church of Rome, is not only a woman, and a city, but a very evil woman, and a city of confusion: there is the name of the Lamb much spoken of, but his doctrine undervalued and slighted, his laws trampled upon and violated, his example not regarded for imiprofess God, but in works deny him." For under this verbal humility, here is the greatest pride in the world; under this verbal meekness and self-denial, the greatest oppression and cruelty, covetousness, and love of the world; as appears by their pompous garbs, their cruel punishments, and the vast sums of money brought in from all parts of their dominions, by sleights, and cunning and deceitful cheats: besides a mere hodge-podge of principles, one order of fraternity professing that which another writes against, and cries down; which is the more strange to come from a Church infallible: besides the strange mixtures in their visible worship, of traditions, and human inventions, of lying and diabolical tricks, of blessing by a cross, consecrating holy water, and cleansing by it, which are too numerous and tedious to relate, and the less needful, because every man that hath seen their ways, hath an imperfect book of it in his own mind, and can read the truth of what we say within himself. And let any people in the Christian world, pretending to religion, be compared to them, for supernumerary, trifling, and insignificant ceremonies crowded into their pretended worship; nay, let all the people in the Christian world be laid in the balance against the Church of Rome, in this respect, and they will be found inconceivably wanting: for which we have this reason to judge her to be Babylon, and the city of confusion.

METAPHOR.

If there is more confusion, in contrariety of principles, practices, contradicting pretensions, crowding in supernumeraries, and mysteries of unscriptural inventions, into visible worship, in Rome Papal, or the Church of Rome, than is to be found amongst any or all people pretending religion, in the Christian world besides; then is Rome Papal, or the Church of Rome, the great Babylon, or city of confusion.

But there is more confusion, in the fore-mentioned respects, to be found in Rome Papal, or the Church of Rome, than in any or all people pretending religion in the Christian world besides: Ergo, &c.

PARALLEL.

IV. Babylon, is not only a woman, and a city, a city of confusion, but she is a whore, which is a strange word to be applied to a great and famous people; a word that carries in it one of the highest impeachments, but no other than was given to Israel, Judah, and Jerusalem, in the days of old, upon a very good reason, Isa. lvii. 3, and xvi. 17, Hos. iv., and v. 3. For they being joined in covenant with God, to serve him in obedience and subjection, did like to an adulterous woman, break wedlock, and set up other lovers or idols in his stead, and continued so a long time, till a bill of divorce was given, and God proclaimed them not married to him as his wife, but a whore, and divorced, Ezek. xvi. 38, Hos. i. 9, and ii. 2, 5. Yet it is observable, that they used his name, though they worshipped idols, and cried, "The temple of the Lord, the temple of the Lord, are we."

IV. Rome Papal, or Church of Rome, is not only a woman, and a city, a city of confusion, but according to scripture-history, and notorious matter of fact, she is a whore also, and may be justly so called; for in the apostle's time she joined herself to the Lord, by firm ties of a Gospel covenant and profession, and was the renowned spouse of the Son of God, owned and professed him in the time of Heathenism, received the apostles and servants of God amongst them, withstood the fury of the emperors, suffered persecution, had their faith spoken of throughout the whole world; and yet after all this, like Israel of old, she left God, and his holy laws, made idols to herself of saints, angels, reliques, and images, upon which she doated, and forsook the Son of God, upon the working and appearance of the Man of Sin, who exalted himself into the place of Christ, and became her head, by which means she is so far degenerated from what she once was, that she retains nothing, holds fast nothing of what really appertains to true godliness, but the bare names of God and Jesus Christ, having corrupted the true worship of the Son of God, her first husband, and notoriously abandoned obedience to him, taking this vile person to be her head, and chief guide, and setting him in the place of, and dignity above her first head, and true guide of her youth; and yet, like Israel of old, still cries, the true Church, the ~~Catholic Church~~, the mother Church are we; having on her forehead a strange Mystery written, i. e., Christ, truth, verity, infallibility; and next to this there lies nearest her heart, devil, Pope, lying, deceit, perjury, idolatry, and horrible cruelty

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

towards the best of men, professing Christ and religion in uprightness and truth : for which change of her first head, husband, and guide of her youth, for this vile person, with which she commits most abominable lewdness, together with the kings of the earth, she is ranked by the angel amongst the worst of women, and styled, as her type and predecessor of old, a well-favoured harlot, or of the angel, a woman, a city, a notorious whore, which ill and black characters we conclude with this argument.

If there be no body of professing people in the Christian world, that hath so apparently declined or adulterated from what they once were, deserted the holy doctrine, example, and right government of Jesus Christ, and set up another visible and public head of the Church, in room and stead of him, whose power and laws are preferred above and before the authority and laws of the Lord Jesus, as Rome Papal, or Church of Rome hath done : then Rome Papal, or Church of Rome is this whore spoken of.

But there is no body of professing people in the Christian world, that hath so apparently declined, or adulterated, or deserted the holy doctrine, example, or right government of Christ, ut supra.

Ergo, Rome Papal, or Church of Rome, is this whore spoken of.

To reinforce this argument, let it be showed by any man, that any people different from the Church of Rome hath made such a change, in point of religion and headship, and matters thereto pertaining, so as that this black character of whore can more fitly and fully be made to meet upon them, and we must confess our argument not weighty ; but till then, we conclude it carries conviction in the bowels of it.

V. Babylon, this woman, this city of confusion, this whore, is a very great woman, city, and whore : " And the great city was divided." " And the woman which thou sawest, is that great city," &c. " The merchants " stood afar off, saying, Alas ! alas ! that great city, Babylon, that mighty city. Again they wept, saying, Alas ; alas ! that great city, which was clothed," &c. " What city is like unto this great city ? And cried, weeping and wailing, saying, Alas ! alas ! that great city, wherein we are made rich !" &c. " And a mighty angel took up a stone like a great mill-stone, and cast it into the sea, saying, Thus with violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down. I will show thee the judgment of the great whore, &c. He hath judged the great whore," &c., Rev. xvi. 19, xvii. 18, xviii. 10, 16, 18, 17, 21, xvii. 1, and xix. 2. Great in four respects : (1.) Great in name. (2.) Great in power. (3.) Great in multitude. (4.) Great in action, vile actions.

her greatness, is the invincible confidence she hath, that all persons and things are made for her, and given to her, so that all things she doth are allowed as legal and just in heaven : from whence we frame this argument.

Argument. If there be no united body of people, or visible community in the Christian world, that is so great in name, power, multitude, and action, vile actions, as Rome

V. Rome Papal, or Church of Rome, is not only a woman, a city, a whore, but a very great woman, city, and whore ; great in many respects, but chiefly in these four :

1. She hath a great name, no name so great in the Christian world, as the name of Rome. She is called a queen, because joined by contract to a great man, the Man of Sin, man greater than emperors, and temporal princes, who pretends a power to give them their crowns, to set them upon their heads, and kick them off at pleasure.

2. Great in power. She gives rules to kingdoms, advances her ecclesiastical laws above temporal ; sets her head, and the chiefest of her sons, above secular jurisdiction ; makes them unaccountable, and pretends a power to absolve and bless them ; and without controversy, the lesser is blessed of the greater.

3. Great in multitude. There are no people besides, that are in a spiritual united body, and visible community, professing Christianity, comparable to her for multitude, and the vast numbers of her sons and daughters.

4. Great in action, vile actions, such as depositing and poisoning princes, fomenting jealousies, raising wars, setting nations together by the ears, invading rights, making uproars, burning cities, and carrying on dreadful devastations, where she is gainsayed. And that which adds to

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

Papal, or Church of Rome hath been, and still is——Then Rome Papal, or Church of Rome is this great, very great woman, city, and whore spoken of.

But there is no united body of people, or visible community in the Christian world, that is so great in name, power, multitude, and action, vile actions, as Rome Papal, or the Church of Rome is—

Ergo, Rome Papal, &c., is this great, very great woman, city, and whore spoken of.

To reinforce this argument, let it be considered that the Christian world is distinguished or divided into two parts, viz., Papists and Protestants; the Protestants cannot be this whore;

1. Because they own Jesus Christ to be the Head of the Church, and only him.
2. They have never revolted or changed him, so as to set up another in his room, under any title whatsoever, but profess him to be their Lord, and are in obedience and subjection to his laws in all matters purely religious.
3. Neither is their name, power, multitude, or actions, so great by far as the Papists are; they being but small, inconsiderable, and low, in all Papist countries. And when the Protestant religion hath gotten up to be the professed religion of any nation, kingdom, or city, what is that nation, kingdom, or city, in comparison of those nations, kingdoms, and cities, where the Papists reign, and Popery is professed? This every intelligent man hath so full a prospect of, that it appears needless to give proof by instances.

VI. Babylon, this woman, city of confusion, and whore, which is very great, sitteth upon many waters; which is expounded to be peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues; "And he, the angel, said unto me, the waters which thou sawest where the whore sitteth, are peoples, and multitudes, and tongues," &c., Rev. xvii. 1, 15. Which, according to the learned Mede, and a famous French author, is more than a third part of the ten considerable parts, which the Roman monarchy fell into, not long before the Pope, Man of Sin, or head of Mystery Babylon, assumed the imperial seat and crowns, which afterwards became ten kingdoms, with crowned heads, assisting the beast against the Lamb, and persecuting of the saints, distinguished into ten kingdoms or empires. 1. Of Germany. 2. France. 3. England. 4. Scotland. 5. Denmark. 6. Polonia. 7. The kingdom of Spain. 8. The kingdom of Navarre. 9. The kingdom of Hungary. 10. The kingdom of Naples and Sicily. All which Rome Papal had in possession, as our French author saith, in the days of Pope Leo the tenth, which was less than 200 years.

VI. Rome Papal, or Church of Rome, is not only a great woman, city of confusion and whore; that hath set up the Man of Sin, great Belial, her highest son of wickedness, but she likewise sits upon many waters, viz., people, and multitudes, nations, and tongues, which may be illustrated by undeniable instances.

1. She sat upon, or ruled over more than one third part of ten, which was formerly under the Roman empire in its civil state, which, more than one third part, hath since fallen into ten states or kingdoms, under the government of ten crowned heads, and have all agreed to give their power to this last beast, according to what was foretold by Daniel, ch. vii., concerning the little horn, which had a mouth speaking great things, whose looks were more stout than his fellows; by whom three of the first horns of the Roman power in its civil state was plucked up by the roots, and in their place succeeded ten kings, or crowned heads, who have their crowns given them by this last beast. And as they have their crowns given by, and hold their kingship under the Pope, little horn, last beast, or Man of sin, in requital of his fatherly care, to give his sons so great a patrimony, they gave their power unto him, and engage against the Lamb, making war with and persecuting the saints, till the word of God, or prophecy of Daniel, is fulfilled, which ten crowned heads answer to the ten toes in Nebuchadnezzar's image, to the ten horns in this 17th of the apocalypse, that are so concerned in the beast's kingdom, as to be overcome by the Lamb, and turn to hate the whore, that before they supported, and for whose pleasure they did persecute the saints, which ten states or kingdoms are by our French author, in his book, called the accomplishment of the prophecy, p. 345, distinguished to be as in the other column set forth. All which kingdoms, as King James in his learned works makes out, took their

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

rise with Rome Papal upon the division or ruin of the Roman Empire in its civil state, the body of which kingdoms may well be called many waters, viz., peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues, or people of several languages, which were as well known to have been under the usurpation and jurisdiction of Rome Papal, as their being so; which doth fully answer to the very letter of the text, "the waters which thou sawest, whereon the whore fitteth, are peoples, multitudes, nations, and tongues," Rev. xvii. 15.

2. He making all the European merchants rich, that traffic by sea, by the great expense of all commodities which are swallowed up within her territories and dominions, Rev. xviii. 11; which could never be effected unless she had nations and multitudes to contribute to her great pride and luxury.

3. A third instance is, the numberless number of good Christians which she hath drawn in and murdered, for no other cause than their fearing God, and obeying his laws by loving Jesus Christ, and following his example, of which we have a large account in Fox's Acts and Monuments, and other histories; upon which we form this argument:

Argument. If there be no body of people, professed church or state in the Christian world, under any single denomination, that sits upon, commands or bears rule over peoples, multitudes, nations and tongues, as Rome Papal, or Church of Rome, doth: then Rome Papal, or the Church of Rome, is this Babylon treated of.

But there is no body of people, professed church or state, under any single denomination, that sits upon, commands or bears rule over peoples, multitudes, nations, and tongues, as Rome Papal, or Church of Rome doth.

Ergo, &c.

To the establishing this argument, let it be considered, that the whole state of the Christian world consists of but these two parts, as we showed before, viz., the Church of Rome, considered as head and body, and those that dissent from her, and those are so inconsiderable, whether the Waldenses, Albigenses, Hugonots, or other parties of Protestants, that no one party of them, nay if we put them all together, can be said to sit upon, command, or bear rule over, peoples, multitudes, nations, and tongues; to answer the text, the Waldenses and Hugonots, have been and still are, a persecuted people, the Lutherans never got up so high as to command many states, or kingdoms, or places of many languages; Great Britain, though a Protestant state, or kingdom, comes not near to fulfil the text, much less the seven Provinces that of late revolted from Spain. So that if Rome Papal had done so, and no other people that dissent from her could ever do the like, then this proves Rome Papal the whore that fits upon many waters, &c.

VII. Mystery Babylon, or the great whore, is such a Woman, such a city, such a whore, that the kings and great Men of the earth have committed fornication with. See the text, "with whom the kings of the earth have committed fornication," Rev. xvii. 2. i. e. spiritual fornication, or fornication in a mystery, after a mysterious manner, such as Jerusalem of old was charged with, which was a following the same idolatry that this woman Babylon had set up, and was devoted unto; and so great was her fornication, that it is said, she did corrupt the earth with it, Rev. xviii. 9, and xix. 2, Isa. xix. 2.

VII. Rome Papal, or Church of Rome, is such a woman, such a city of confusion, such a whore that the kings of the earth have committed fornication with, and that hath corrupted the Earth with her fornications, fornications after a mysterious manner, by following abominable superstition and idolatry.

1. Hath she adored the Pope as her Lord God, universal head, and Bishop infallible, acknowledged above all laws? So have the kings, and their misguided people, done.

2. Hath she worshipped the Virgin Mary, divers Angels, and many departed Saints? So have the kings and their misguided people.

3. Hath she adored images, the crucifix, and pictures of pretended Saints? So have the kings, and their misguided people.

4. Hath she foolishly debased herself with the adoration of the relicts of known and unknown Saints? So have the kings and their misguided people.

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

5. Hath she grossly and superstitiously worshipped the true God in a false manner, by crowding in an innumerable train of fopperies into his worship and service, which he never ordained, as candlesticks, altars, vestments, spits, oil, holy water, beads, and a world of such like trumpery? So have the kings and their misguided people, not only the emperor of Germany, kings of France, Spain, Poland, Portugal, that are still under her influence; but the kings of England and Scotland too, before the Reformation got ground: upon which we form this argument:

Argument. If there be no body of people in the Christian world, pretending a Church-state, that hath set up idolatry to that degree, and with whom the kings of the earth have complied, as Rome Papal, or Church of Rome hath done. Then Rome Papal, or Church of Rome, is the mysterious whore of Babylon treated of.

But there is no body of people in the Christian world, pretending to the Church-state that hath set up idolatry to that degree, and with whom the kings of the earth have complied, as Rome Papal, &c., hath done: Ergo, &c.

To reinforce this argument, let any man that will become an advocate for the Church of Rome, show, that any people called the reformed, who dissent from the Church of Rome, are guilty of like idolatry, and that the kings of the earth have complied with them in it, as aforementioned, and we will acquit this argument, but if this character doth more fitly agree to Rome, than to the reformed, &c., our argument is good.

VIII. Babylon is such a woman, city, and whore, that hath not only, had kings committing fornication with her, but hath intoxicated the minds of multitudes, and corrupted a great part of the world, or common sort of people, by wicked and false doctrine, "And the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornication," Rev. xvii. 2.

of the devil, as every wicked man is, to be vice-gerent to the most holy Jesus, in the highest transactions that relate to heaven, and the souls of men. Surely if God shut Judas out from his bishopric, because of his wickedness, though an apostle; he is not so far changed since to be fond of a wicked Pope, as to make him immediate deputy to Christ, and to impose a wolf, as shepherd, upon the universal Church.

2. Who saith, that he is an infallible Judge to determine articles of faith, and impose them upon great penalties: so that as a lord he hath dominion over men's faith, and souls too, which the apostles declaimed.

3. Who saith the Church cannot err, though God and the world knows there are not such great errors in principles, nor such villainous enormities, cursed actions, cruel and immoral practices in the world besides, which the poor multitude believes, and kill others that oppose it, and venture body and soul upon it.

4. That says, that a priest, though he be a treacherous villain, a contriver of murder, an abominable adulterer, hath power to absolve his equal and fellow sinner from all his offences, if he come to confession, though the pretended penitent keep his old habit of wickedness still; contrary to what God and Jesus Christ say, that the dauber with untempered mortar, and the daubed; the layer of the pillow under sinful elbows, and the leaner thereon; the blind leader, as well as the blind follower, shall all fall together.

5. That saith, There is a purgatory, this no part of heaven or hell; and that men may be redeemed thence for money: though God saith, the redemption of men's souls is precious, and ceaseth for ever, after the offering of the body of Jesus once for all; that redemption is not with corruptible things, as silver and gold, but with the precious blood of Christ, as a Lamb slain without spot.

5. That saith, that the hands and mouth of a filthy unclean priest, can make not only the bread and wine sacred, but turn both into the real body and blood of the Son

Man's flesh is the letter

1st. 2nd. 3rd. 4th. 5th. 6th. 7th. 8th. 9th. 10th. 11th. 12th. 13th. 14th. 15th. 16th. 17th. 18th. 19th. 20th. 21st. 22nd. 23rd. 24th. 25th. 26th. 27th. 28th. 29th. 30th. 31st. 32nd. 33rd. 34th. 35th. 36th. 37th. 38th. 39th. 40th. 41st. 42nd. 43rd. 44th. 45th. 46th. 47th. 48th. 49th. 50th. 51st. 52nd. 53rd. 54th. 55th. 56th. 57th. 58th. 59th. 60th. 61st. 62nd. 63rd. 64th. 65th. 66th. 67th. 68th. 69th. 70th. 71st. 72nd. 73rd. 74th. 75th. 76th. 77th. 78th. 79th. 80th. 81st. 82nd. 83rd. 84th. 85th. 86th. 87th. 88th. 89th. 90th. 91st. 92nd. 93rd. 94th. 95th. 96th. 97th. 98th. 99th. 100th.

not faith - from not a the let kill the live

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

of God, make whole Christ of a pitiful wafer cake, and after it is eaten, turns to corruption; and before it is eaten, is a fit feast for rats and mice; not only contrary to reason, but the full verdict of all our senses.

7. That saith, That no person, how good and pious soever he be, can be saved, out of the pale of their polluted, ungodly, and devilish church; though the scripture plainly affirms, that in every nation, he that fears God, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him.

8. That says, It is no sin to lie, and forswear, to kill, slay, and murder such as they call heretics, though never so good, if it be for the cause of the church, with a thousand things of the like import, which the people do verily believe: and as they dare not gainsay upon their salvation, so will they embrace and use all opportunities to fight and make wars, overcome cities, and lay waste countries and kingdoms, to kill and slay, by massacre, and all manner of murdering ways, all ranks and degrees of men, that oppose the horrid principles and practices of those cursed children. Nay, they will go boldly to their own death, when convicted, and condemned for villanies, and deny that to-day, that they were convicted of but yesterday, and though never so notoriously guilty, yet will take it upon their death and salvation, that they are as innocent as the child unborn. What can this be, though they drink it down for most sweet and pleasant wine, but an infusion of the rankest and most deadly poison that the lowest cellar of the bottomless pit can afford, the very wine of fornications, and most dangerous drunkenness and intoxication in the world? Which is attended with this aggravation, that the best prepared medicines of the wisest physician will not recover them; for Babylon having made the multitude drunk with this sort of poisoned wine, how rare it is to have any come to themselves, to their right mind again: and to shut up his head, take his argument:

Argument. If no people in the Christian world hath made the multitude, or common sort of people drunk, corrupted, and intoxicated their minds by wicked lies and false doctrine, such as beforementioned, as Rome Papal, or Church of Rome, hath done: then Rome Papal, or Church of Rome, is this Babylon treated of.

But no people in the Christian world hath made the multitude, or common sort of people drunk, corrupted and intoxicated their minds by wicked lies, and false doctrine, such as beforementioned, as Rome hath done:

Ergo, Rome papal, or Church of Rome, is this Babylon treated of.

IX. Mystery Babylon is such ill company, as to let Kings be dishonestly familiar with her, and make the lower and ruder sort of her associates drunk. She is said to sit drunk upon a scarlet-coloured beast, and this beast is full of the names of blasphemy: "And I saw a woman sit upon a scarlet-coloured beast, full of the names of blasphemy," &c., Rev. xvii. 3. So that the woman and the beast are distinct: the woman, the Church, the beast the secular power, or civil state. This appears evident from divers considerations, arising.

(1.) From other prophecies relating to the same thing.

(2.) From the letter of the text.

(3.) From arguments in reason.

(4.) From the confession of the woman, Babylon, or the whore herself.

1. From many prophecies; the latter part of the image is partly

IX. Rome Papal, or Church of Rome, hath not only been ill company to the kings and great men of the earth, in drawing them into her idolatry, abuse of God, his blessed Son, the Christian religion, and blessed books of the Old and New Testament; but she hath made the lower and ruder sort of people drunk too. And it is no wonder; she thinks she may do any thing, having a dispensation from heaven, which the Pope keeps the keys of, and fearing no power on earth; for she hath the beast, the secular power under her; she sits upon him, and rides him, and is not only distinct from the secular power, but above it; so as what of the secular power is still left at Rome, is under the conduct and management of the church; there being no civil administration of justice, or exercise of laws, but what is authorised and allowed by his unholiness, the head: and the cardinals, the shoulders, breasts, and arms of the church, or state ecclesiastical. To make this fully evident, the Pope doth not only exercise a power of appointing seculars in Rome, and near to it; but he claims the like supremacy abroad, in the islands far off. If the secular princes fall off from him, or if they will not be reconciled to iron, and partly clay; two states really distinct, that could never so incorporate as to become one, Dan. ii.

METAPHOR.

2. From the letter of the text: "I saw a woman sit upon a scarlet-coloured beast, full of the names of blasphemy," Rev. xvii. 3. The colours of the royal and imperial vestments, the angel in the next words declares distinct, and the apostle in the vision beheld them distinct.

3. They appear to be distinct from arguments in reason. For (1.) The beast is in the masculine, the whore in the feminine gender. (2.) The whore else did sit and ride upon herself; a high absurdity. (3.) The horns, being of the beast, shall hate the whore; if not distinct, the whore must hate herself, even to ruin and desolation, which is nonsensical. (4.) The beast shall abide, though in captivity, after the whore is thrown down or destroyed. See Rev. xvii. 11, compared with ver. 2, 4, 6, 16.

4. From the plain confession of the woman or whore herself, who saith, "I sit a queen, I am no widow," Ergo, she hath a head or husband, which is the beast, little horn, or man of sin, that Paul declared should rise after the removal of the then present power which did let, which the primitive fathers, as Tertullian, Cyprian, Jerome, and others, understood to be the imperial power, in its, pure, civil, iron, or unmixed state.

Ergo, Rome Papal, or Church of Rome, is the whore of Babylon here treated of.

To reinforce this argument, we challenge any professed Papist, Atheist, or any else to show where any other people or parties are, to whom these characters agree; and then we shall be content to let fall our argument.

X. This beast that Babylon sits upon, commands, and governs, is not only clothed with scarlet, but is full of the names of blasphemy, &c., which may be taken in a threefold sense. (1.) For reproaching the name of God. (2.) For telling lies in divine things. (3.) For ascribing that to creatures which belongs to God. And though we will not excuse the beast from the two former; yet for brevity's sake we shall take the latter, viz., the ascribing that to creatures him, as head of holy church, he will excommunicate and depose them, and dispose of their crowns, thrones, and sceptres from them. That the Pope is a temporal prince, as well as an ecclesiastical bishop, i.e. makes laws, exact tributes, raises soldiers and acts as a monarch, which fairly affords him the title of beast; that his royal robes, chair he sits in, to his very hose and shoes, with the vestments of cardinals, is scarlet, no man can reasonably doubt. That what the civil power claims and the ecclesiastical power exercises, are not incorporated, or entirely mixed; that the princely Pope is in the masculine, and his spouse, the church, in the feminine, is owned by all parties.

PARALLEL.

That the church-state doth sit upon, ride, and govern the secular at Rome, Italy, and all its territories; that the church of Rome owns that she is no widow, but hath a head, called his holiness, or supreme ruler of the church, is so evident, that we cannot find them upon any file or record of controversy. There remains therefore no more to be done at this time, but to frame our argument upon the premises, and leave the reader to prove the weight thereof in the balance.

Argument. If there be no visible state in the Christian world, that doth so apparently sit upon, command, and govern the beast, or a great secular power, clothed with scarlet vestments, as Rome Papal, or Church of Rome, doth: then is Rome Papal, or Church of Rome, the whore of Babylon here treated of.

But there is no visible state in the Christian world, that doth so apparently sit upon, command, and govern the beast or secular power, clothed with scarlet vestments, as Rome Papal, or Church of Rome doth.

X. Rome Papal, or Church of Rome, sits upon, commands, and governs that beast, or scarlet power, that is not only clothed with scarlet vestments, but is full of the names of blasphemy, which appears by his receiving, allowing, and encouraging the ascribing that to creature, which belongs to God, and to his Son, of which we give you but these instances; (1.) When this human, sinful, and wicked head, is called our lord god the Pope, whether this is not blasphemy against God? (2.) When he is called, universal head of the catholic church, which none is but Christ. (3.) When he is called the lamb of God, the light of the world, the root of David, the lion of which belongs to him, that saith

METAPHOR.

 "I am God, and my glory will I not give to another."

the scriptures, which they call a nose of wax, the heretic's ink rule, are perniciously mischievous to the people; whether this be not blasphemy against God that spake, and the Word of God spoken? (5.) When angels, the Virgin Mary, and other unknown saints, shall be invocated with addresses only becoming the Divine Majesty: as if these creatures were infinite, and could hear us at so great a distance as is earth from heaven, which they could not do, if perpendicularly over us, much less from all parts of the world, over which they cannot be; whether this ascribing infiniteness and adoration to the creature, that is only due to the Creator, who is over all, God blessed for ever, be not blasphemy? (6.) To conclude, whether making a god of a piece of bread, and calling the profane priest the maker of the creature, be not ascribing that to the creature, which only belongs to God? Is not this the vilest blasphemy in the world, worse, if possible, than Atheism itself? For as philosophers observe, it is better having no opinion of God, than such an one as is unworthy of him; which we shall close with this argument.

Argument. If no people in the Christian world are borne up and supported by a beast full of names, full of such names or inscriptions of blasphemy, as Rome Papal, or Church of Rome is, then Rome Papal, or Church of Rome, must be this Babylon treated of.

But there is no people in the Christian world borne up and supported by such a blasphemous beast, as Rome Papal, or Church of Rome is. Ergo, &c.

To reinforce this argument, let it be considered, that none can pretend to fix this character or mark upon any Protestant dissenters from the Church of Rome, called heretics, who have no such beast to support them, nor ascribe such blasphemous titles, or adoration to any creature in heaven or earth. For they acknowledge the one God, the object of divine worship; one Mediator between God and man, the Lord Jesus; and God's sacred truth to be the only rule; disowning all principles and practices contradictory thereunto.

Ergo, It is not the Protestant dissenters from the Church of Rome that are here meant.

XI. Babylon, that sits upon a scarlet-coloured and blasphemous beast, is adorned with great pomp, and outward glory, very well fitting that spirit that delights in grandeur: "And the woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet, and decked with gold, and precious stones, and pearl, having a golden cup in her hand, full of abomination, and filthiness of her fornication," Rev. xvii. 4. Which must be such as none of her neighbours can match her in, else no note of distinction.

the highest order of the Jewish priesthood.

and there you shall find the altar and candlesticks, the vessels for oil and pots of purification, as if their predecessors had been at Solomon's temple and had brought a pattern from thence; and yet in this golden cup, or framed piece of gallantry, there is nothing to be found, but foul and adulterated wine, most fitly to be called by the angel, abomination, and filthiness, and the wine of fornication: which we conclude with this argument.

Argument. If no people in the Christian world hath such riches and splendour, such pomp and gallantry in the maintenance and management of their worship, as Rome Papal, or Church of Rome hath. Then Rome Papal must be this gaudy harlot, or whore of Babylon.

PARALLEL.

the tribe of Judah, whether this is not blasphemy against the Son of God? (4.) Whether when the orders of the church, oral traditions, the decrees of councils, are said to be of greater authority than

XI. Rome Papal, or Church of Rome, doth not only sit upon a scarlet-coloured and blasphemous beast, but she is beautified and adorned with great pomp and outward glory, by which she commends herself to that part of the world that delights in her gaudery, being a woman whose worship is filled with detestable doctrine, which she holds forth to them with pictures and gallantry of all sorts. (1.) Look into the holy patrimony of consecrated saints, there you find riches and honour, though not durable riches, and righteousness. (2.) Look unto their garbs and vestments, there you shall find cardinals like splendid princes, heads of parties and provinces in such habiliments, that for riches might have become

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

But there is no people in the Christian world that hath such riches and splendour, such pomp and gallantry in the maintenance and management of religious worship, as Rome Papal, or Church of Rome hath.

Ergo, Rome Papal, or church of Rome must be this whore, or well-favoured harlot treated of.

The Argument is full and clear, and so well fortified, that we think it needs no rearguard to enforce it; and therefore, though it be short, and low of stature, we shall leave it amongst our infantry, and draw up our right and left wings, yet further to assault Babylon.

XII. This woman or city, that is thus adorned with outward pomp and glory, hath upon her forehead a name written, "MYSTERY, BABYLON THE GREAT, THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH," Rev. xvii. 5, which may be true both in a literal and mystical sense, the breeder of concubines, and whores, to gratify the sensual appetites of her treacherous sons; but chiefly in a mystical sense, she breeds, and brings forth spiritual harlots, viz., unclean communities.

and abominations, many abominations, and great and reigning too, "Abominations of the earth," i. e. that large part of the earth, where she is situate, and doth reside. A little unto each of these, as the time and space we are limited to will allow.

A name upon the forehead. If this were not to be read and seen by most Christians and professors, it would not much concern the Christian world for whom it must be calculated; for others that own not the Christian Religion, are not in a capacity to make a judgment upon the case: for if this book of the Revelations were not written for the Christian world, it leaves us not any certainty where the case is to be considered, and the matter to be judged. Now if it calculated for the Christian world, then it must be upon such a people, that is most public and visible, and apparent, which agrees to none so fitly as to the Church of Rome; which, by their own confession, is the most potent and visible in the Christian world, for where have the inconsiderable heretics, so called, whose beings are in corners, such a name, as may be read or known by all, or by the principal part of the Christian world? now to clear these poor innocent, so called, heretics, from being concerned in this character, we imagine at least it cannot refer to them:

1. Because they have no forehead so broad to bear the inscription, which we will engage to make good against any Romanist in the world.

2. Because they are so plain and honest a people, and their principles so easily and well known, that it is wild and ridiculous to call them Mystery Babylon, there neither being any hellish depth nor confusion in what they profess, as might be fully evinced by unquestionable instances; for what confusion or hidden thing can be in this, that there is one God the object of worship, one holy book called the Bible, the rule of worship; and all that act faith, hope, and charity, upon these three great fundamental principles, shall inherit that blessed kingdom, or world to come?

3. Because they are so retired and private, that had they a forehead broad enough for the inscription aforesaid, yet they sit so low that nations cannot easily read it; and if we acquit the poor innocent Protestant, who must we fix these characters upon? if all dissenters from the Church of Rome be clear, then it must unavoidably be fixed upon Rome herself: if any demand for what reason, the answer is,

First; Because, when the Protestants are exempted, then there is none left to bear the inscription, but the Church of Rome.

XII. Rome Papal, or Church of Rome, if she be not concerned here, we will acquit her of being Mystery Babylon.

(1.) Here is a name written in capital letters, and written so as to be read publicly too. It is not written upon any part of the woman, that may be hid or covered with a garment, but on that part which is bare, and is easiest to be seen, her forehead, her public, visible, and known parts.

(2.) Here is Babylon, or confusion, a mixed body, that is far from that good and pure order, which in words she pretends.

(3.) Here is Mystery in the case, and a great Mystery to a wonder, even to the surprising of every wise and thinking man, Ver. 6.

(4.) Here is a mother, a mother of a very spurious, illegitimate, and unclean offspring, harlots,

1. She hath a forehead broad enough to bear Mystery and confusion, for there is not a greater hellish depth and confusion to be found upon any people, than upon the Church of Rome, as will appear in its place.

2. Because the dissenters, with respect to appearance, and the exercise of power, are very small and inconsiderable, in comparison of that overgrown monstrous body of the Church of Rome; for to call the dissenters great, and the Church of Rome small, is as congruous, as to call the ocean a little spring, and the smallest brook the ocean.

Secondly; Babylon, confusion, or a mixed body, is far from that pure order, which in words Rome pretends unto, and can by no means agree to the Protestants; for they are so strict in their discipline, that they admit of no such mixture that deserves the name of confusion, they will receive none into their communion without much caution and satisfaction; and when received, keep them no longer than they appear to walk strictly and holily, according to the principles upon which they first received them; and as for their officers, they are soon summed up, being no more than bishops, or elders, and deacons. But the Roman Church may be called Babylon, or the city of confusion very reasonably, because she so fitly answers literal Babylon of old, that was her type, and from whence she derives her name;

1. In setting up another way for men to go to heaven by, than what God hath ordained and appointed, viz., a tower of their own making.

2. In having so many languages amongst them, which is like the confusion of Babel.

3. In bearing the glory and sway over the kingdoms and countries of the chiefest part of the world, therefore called the lady of kingdoms, which is no way applicable to the poor dissenters.

4. In plucking up, or razing out the true worship of God, which was settled at Jerusalem, and setting up idolatry in the room of it.

5. In captivating God's people, who were carried away into literal Babylon.

6. In their doctrines, principles, and modes of worship, which is such a jumble, mixture, and heap of things, that may go for confusion itself.

7. In their orders, diversity, and long muster-roll of officers, that are so numerous, as well as unscriptural, that if mixture and confusion may be thought to be any where, it is to be found in this Church, where you have popes, cardinals, arch-bishops, abbots, provincials, heads of fraternities, priests, monks, friars, followers of Dominick, St. Francis, Jansenius, Augustine, Capucius, &c., and what not? All which is many times more like to be Babylon, mixture, or confusion, than the dissenters from the Romish Church.

Thirdly; For Mystery, which is in the description, it no where agrees to them, whom they call heretics, but agrees very well to the Church of Rome, in four things:

1. In calling themselves the Church of God, and yet are the synagogue of Satan, that is a Mystery.

2. In calling themselves the pure spouse of Christ, and yet an abominable whore, that is a Mystery.

3. In pretending to be the mother of peace, purity, and charity, and yet the breeder, bringer-forth, and cherisher of division, falsehood, most bloody butcheries, and barbarous cruelties, this is a Mystery.

4. In being queen regent, riding upon the beast in state, and yet being that good woman that fled into the wilderness, and abides there in a suffering condition all the time of the beast's reign, this is a Mystery. See our fourth argument: one proof of their Church is visibility; yet it is evident the true Church, for the space of 260 years, was to be in the wilderness, or in an obscure condition, &c.

Fourthly; Mother of harlots, and abominations, better agrees to the Church of Rome, than to Protestants.

It is against the principles of Protestants, to allow fornication or adultery, in persons of any rank whatsoever, maintaining constantly, that marriage is honourable, but whore-mongers and adulterers God will judge; whereas Rome gives public toleration to notorious whoredoms, and the most shameless and unnatural beastialities, as the whole world knows.

Fifthly; for mother of harlots, in a spiritual sense, she is owned by all her children to be the mother-church. And,

1. Therefore Protestants are exhorted to return into the bosom of their mother.

2. All polluted and national churches in the European kingdoms, sprang from her, as the churches of France, Spain, Portugal, &c.

3. All corruption in doctrine and discipline may call her mother, that is to say, the false titles and errors following, viz., Universal, supreme, infallible head, holy father the Pope, his holiness in the abstract—Our Lord God the Pope, unerring church, priestly absolution, selling of pardons, indulgences, dispensations, adoring the crucifix, worshipping of images, foolish crossing, anointings, and sprinkling with holy water, the adoration of the mass, and many such things, which from the beginning was not so.

4. For personal vices: from whence come horrid oaths and blasphemies, most astonishing perjury, and subtle equivocations, and hypocrisies, all manner of uncleannesses, lying, and adulteries, covenant breaking, and bloody-mindedness; is this allowed and practised by the Protestants? No, no, they are the brats and offspring of this lewd and filthy mother, who indulgeth those abominable pernicious practices, for which she is rightly called "Mystery, Babylon the great, the mother of harlots, and abominations of the earth," Which we conclude with this argument;

Argument. If this same Mystery, Babylon the great, the mother of harlots, and abominations of the earth, doth not so fully and fitly agree to the Protestants, or any other people as it doth to Rome Papal, or Church of Rome. Then Rome Papal, or Church of Rome, and not the Protestants, &c., is Mystery Babylon, the mother of harlots.

But this name Mystery, Babylon the great, the mother of harlots, and abominations of the earth, doth not so fully and fitly agree to the Protestants, &c., as it doth to Rome Papal, or Church of Rome.

Ergo, Rome Papal, and not the Protestants, is Mystery Babylon, the mother of harlots.

XIII. This Mystery Babylon, mother of harlots, and abominations of the earth, is very drunken company; for she not only makes others drunk with the wine of her fornication, and commits adultery herself; but she is a beastly drunken whore, that makes herself drunk after the worst manner of drunkenness, which is, to be drunk with blood, the best blood, the blood of the saints and martyrs of Jesus Christ; "and I saw a woman drunk with the blood of the saints, and the blood of the martyrs of Jesus, and I wondered with great admiration," Rev. xvii. 6.

XIII. Rome Papal, or Church of Rome, if she be guilty here, it is enough to make not only good men, but even angels wonder, to see a woman pretending to be nobly descended, the daughter to the great King of heaven, the spouse of the Lamb, the mother of all peace, purity, holiness, innocency, charity, and chastity; I say, to see a woman by profession, such a drunken beastly strumpet in words and actions: "and if Rome Papal, or Church of Rome be guilty in this point, she is the unhappiest church in the world; for she then gives cause to every good man in the world to abhor her, and indeed she hath very good luck if she escape this charge; for if she be Mystery Babylon, the mother of false churches, and abominations of the earth, there is no avoiding, but she must be this drunken strumpet. But because it is never safe judging a cause before trial and examination of witnesses, we will,

1. Consider what it is to be drunk.

2. What things do necessarily contribute to it.

3. The true and proper signs of it.

4. Whether such things can be fixed upon Rome Papal, or church of Rome? And then conclude this head.

1. To be drunk, is an excessive taking in of such things, as disorder nature in its course and operations. This we take to be a general definition of it, including the proper and metaphorical notations thereof.

2. Such things as necessarily contribute to it; are, (1.) Great and vehement thirst. (2.) Plenty of the thing thirsted after. (3.) The greedy taking their fill of it.

3. The signs of drunkenness are, (1.) When the faculties are so disordered, that they will not submit to the best reason that can be given them. (2.) When they will

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

abuse those whom they are most obliged to love and respect. (3.) When they have cast off all consideration of their own and others good, and forbear no mischief but what they are restrained from by force.

4. That these things are evident in the church of Rome, and cannot be fairly fixed upon her opposites, or supposed heretics, appears,

1. Because she hath shed a mass, a very great mass of blood upon the account of religion, all which was unlawfully shed, of this the whole Christian world is a witness,

2. To clear her supposed heretics from this red and bloody crime.

(1.) It is against their principle to kill men for religion, and this they do avowedly profess, pleading for liberty of conscience, in matters purely religious in all places.

(2.) They have wanted power to do it, in case they had been for it in principle, all power being in the hands of Papists before the Reformation.

(3.) Where there hath since been a Protestant seat or kingdom, governed by laws different from that of the Popish countries, yet they have not made use of their power and laws, to take away the lives of Papists merely for religion; and if it hath happened at any time, that some ecclesiastical persons have been put to death by Protestants; it has been but very rare and seldom, and the cause not for their religion, but for sedition, rebellion, and treason: otherwise they have lived peaceably under Protestant governors, enjoying their civil right in common with other men. And for the confirming of this, we make a challenge to all Christendom to come forth and make it appear, where England, Scotland, and Ireland, the United Provinces, &c., since the Reformation, have, by massacres, murders, or martyrdom, put one thousand, nay, one hundred to death, of men, women and children, only because they professed the Romish religion, or any religion different from theirs: so far have they been from making themselves drunk with the blood of saints, and religious men. And if this cannot be done, then having brought our character within the confines of the Christian world, we must necessarily charge this drunkenness, by blood, upon the church of Rome.

This head we conclude with the following argument:

If no sect of people in the Christian world, be guilty of so much blood, drunk with blood, innocent blood, blood of saints, as the church of Rome is, then the Church of Rome is this woman that St. John saw, to his great astonishment, drunk with the blood of the saints, and the martyrs of Jesus.

But there is no sect of people, &c., guilty of so much blood, or drunk with the blood of saints, &c., Ergo, the church of Rome is this woman, &c.

XIV. Babylon is a church or body of people, that sits upon a beast that hath seven heads, or seven sorts of sovereign governments, 1. Kings, of whom Romulus was the first. 2. Consuls. 3. Military tribunes. 4. Decemvirs. 5. Dictators. 6. Heathen emperors. 7. Christian emperors. Rev. xvii. 9, 10, 11, "And here is the mind that hath wisdom, the seven heads are seven mountains on which the woman sitteth. And there are seven kings, five are fallen, one is, and the other is not yet come: but when he cometh he must continue a short space. And the beast that was, and is not, even he is the eighth, and of the seven, and goeth into perdition!"*

XIV. Besides all that hath been said, we hope to very good purpose, if we find not Rome here, we will let her go for ever: for, (1.) This is the place which hath had seven sovereign governments, five of which were gone off the stage, and the sixth, viz., the heathen empire, was in being in St. John's time. (2.) The seventh was to appear and continue but a short space, viz., the Christian empire: for it cannot be the Papal power, because that was not up in St. John's time, so not the sixth head; and as the Papal power, for that reason, could not be the sixth head, so for a very good reason, could not be the seventh head, because that whensoever that did appear, it was to continue but a short space; which respects not the Papal power, but answers the Christian empire; for the Papal power has continued longer than any of the other sovereignties that went before; and if the Papal power be neither the sixth, nor seventh Head, then it must needs be the eighth, which is one of the seventh, and goes into perdition, or else it must be no head or power at all. But a head and a power it is, a great head and power it hath been, therefore it is the eighth head which carries the whore, according to the express letter of the text, and shall go into perdition. And that by the woman, city, or whore, that sitteth upon the seven mountains, is meant Rome, we have no cause to doubt, because the great sons of Rome themselves, as Baronius, Bellarmine, and many others do confess it; but would defend their mother from being a whore, by putting it off to the power of Rome in its Heathen state: to which we have fully answered already; and do say, that Rome Papal is neither the sixth head, nor the seventh, but the very last beast, or eighth head, in which there is a secular and an ecclesiastical power joined together; which makes up a beast, a most blasphemous beast, and a whore, a most devilish, drunken, and bloody whore, which hath her seat upon seven mountains, on which this city of Rome was built as before. This paragraph we shall shut up with this argument:

* See Mede, Peter de Moulin, &c.

METAPHOR.

Argument. If Rome Papal, or Church of Rome, be borne by a secular power which had seven sovereign governments, seated upon seven hills; then Rome Papal, or Church of Rome, is the very Mystery Babylon, that the apostle John saw in his Apocalyptic vision.

But Rome Papal, or Church of Rome, is borne up by a secular power, which had seven sovereign governments, and seated upon seven hills.

Ergo, Rome Papal, or Church of Rome, is the very mystical Babylon, &c.

This argument shines so clear, that unless our adversaries can assign any Protestant state, by them called heretical, that these characters do better and more fully agree to, it must pass for current coin, and which we shall be ready to receive from them: so we proceed.

XV. Mystery Babylon, is not only a beastly woman, that has made herself drunk with the blood of the saints and martyrs of Jesus, that sits upon a beast that had seven heads, or seven sorts of sovereign governments, and was seated upon seven mountains; that professeth herself the mother of all spiritual power and jurisdiction. But such a woman, and such a city, that in the eye of the vision, had, did, or was, to reign over the kings of the earth, Rev. xvii. 18, "And the woman which thou sawest, is that great city, which reigneth over the kings of the earth."

XV. Rome Papal, or Church of Rome, is not only a beastly woman, that has made herself drunk with the blood of the saints and martyrs of Jesus, that sits upon a beast, or the remains of that power, which had seven sorts of sovereign governments, and is seated upon seven mountains; that professes herself the mother of all spiritual power and jurisdiction. But is such a woman, and such a city, that since the vision and prophecy of St. John, hath for several hundreds of years reigned over the kings of the earth; she hath governed a great part of Italy, if we will believe herself, ever since Constantine, who gave it as a patrimony to St. Peter, she hath had her kingdom over Germany, so long upon France, Spain, Portugal, Poland, England, Scotland, and Ireland; so that their kings have been governed by her; whom she would, they killed; whom she willed, they worshipped, and so became guilty of drinking the wine of her fornication; whom she willed, they set up; whom she willed, they plucked down. What she required, they paid themselves, and made their people pay also. When she willed, they raised arms; and when she willed, they laid them down again. What shall we say, the Church of Rome hath had such power over the kingdoms of Europe, that the power and wills of princes have been controlled and over-ruled, when in any considerable case they have gone contrary to the sense and interest of the Church, and that to such a degree, as they have sometimes made them do penance, resign up their crowns, and then receive them again as an act of kindness, from the chair of St. Peter, which affords us ground for such an argument as this:—

Argument. If there be no great and considerable body of people in the Christian world, that hath so evidently and apparently reigned over the kings of the earth, as Rome Papal or Church of Rome hath done; then Rome Papal, or Church of Rome, is this Babylon, city, or people, that St. John sets forth.

But there is no such great and considerable body, &c.

Ergo, Rome Papal, &c., must be this Babylon, &c.

The major is so undeniable; the minor is so notoriously known to the whole world that

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

the Papists can never avoid the force of it, unless they can produce some Protestant kingdom, or state, that domineered over the kings of the earth in a more eminent way and manner, than Rome is here charged with: but that is impossible. The conclusion is therefore true.

And now having thus in fifteen particulars run the metaphor by way of parallel, betwixt Mystery Babylon, and Rome Papal, as the same is set forth in the Apocalypse, other histories, and known experiences, we shall, before we quit this task, briefly consider, how the acts and progress of the Church of Rome do most fully comport with other types and prophecies of holy scripture, namely, with literal Babylon, that was her type, and from whence she derives her name; from the prophecy of Daniel, concerning the little horn, vile person, or man of sin, which is her head: the prophecy of the apostle Paul, in two remarkable epistles, the first to Timothy, and the second to the Thessalonians; and conclude. The sum we shall cast into one general argument, and so proceed to the various branches of it. The concluding argument is this:

Argument. That people whose acts and progress do most fitly and fully comport with literal Babylon, which was a type, with the prophecy of Daniel about the little horn, and Revelations of the New Testament about the last scene of things, is undoubtedly the wicked and bloody whore of Babylon.

But Rome Papal, or Church of Rome, is that people, whose acts and progress do most fitly and fully comport with literal Babylon, the prophecy of Daniel, and Revelation of the New Testament, about the last scene of things.

Ergo, Rome Papal, or Church of Rome, is undoubtedly the wicked and bloody whore of Babylon.

The truth of this argument we will endeavour to illustrate by this induction of particulars following.

I. As literal Babylon was the head city of the first or Chaldean kingdom, called the glory of the Chaldean kingdom, and great Babylon, &c., Isa. xliii. 19.

II. Literal Babylon had a great head or king over her, called Lucifer, or son of the morning.

III. Literal Babylon had dominion over many countries or provinces.

IV. Chaldea, or literal Babylon, fell under a four-fold circumstance, in respect of her supreme lord, or chief head. As, (1.) that he "was," when in great pride he did insultingly say, "Is not this great Babylon, that I have built, by the might of my power, for the honour of my majesty?" (2.) He "was not," when by the watchers, and the holy ones, he was tossed from his throne, and made to eat grass with oxen, till seven times, or years, passed over him. (3.) Yet "was," when his reason, and the hearts of his nobles returned to him, and gave him a re-advancement. (4.) Went off finally, when God brought the Medes and Persians against his successor, into whose hands the kingdom was

I. So Rome Papal is the head city of the last kingdom, called great Babylon, or the great and mother city, Rev. xvii. 18.

II. So Rome Papal hath a great head or king over her, called the angel of the bottomless-pit, son of the evening, darkness or perdition.

III. Rome, or Mystery Babylon, hath dominion over many countries or kingdoms, no less than the territories or jurisdictions of ten considerable kings, called ten horns.

IV. Rome, or Mystery Babylon, is foretold by the angel to fall under a four-fold circumstance, in respect of her supreme lord, or chief head, the last beast, by her called, "our lord god the Pope." (1.) When he carries the whore in state, makes war with the saints, and overcomes them; when his adherents say, "Who is like unto the beast? who is able to make war with him?" Then "he was." (2.) He "is not," when the horns shall hate the whore, make her desolate, eat her flesh, and burn her with fire." And good men join issue with them, to take away the little horn's dominion, and him into captivity, whose life shall be prolonged for a season and time, even unto the time of the end. (3.) He "yet is," when by virtue of a false prophet, and all the helps Satan the dragon can afford him, he shall make a rally of the careless nations, to bring up against the Jews, after the restoration, to complete the battle of "Armageddon," foretold by divers prophecies. (4.) He shall

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

translated.

against, and slaughter his deceived nations; of whom it is said, "The Lord shall go forth, and fight against those nations, as when he fought in the day of battle," Zech. xiv. 3, which will be so dreadful a fight or battle, as never yet was fought, for slaughter and blood; and so destroy this vile person with the brightness of his appearance, to fulfil 2 Thess. ii., and cast him, as the son of perdition, into the burning flames, to fulfil Rev. xix. 20, "And the fowls of heaven shall be filled with their flesh. And here is the mind that hath wisdom, The beast that was, and is not, and yet is, is of the seventh head, and is the eighth, and goeth into perdition."

V. The first beast, or head of the Chaldean kingdom, or literal Babylon, did invade Judea, besiege Jerusalem, take the city, and trample it under foot, till raised again by an edict from the next great king of Persia.

VI. The first beast or power of the Chaldean kingdom, called literal Babylon, did take away the two olive-trees, that stood before the God of the whole earth.

VII. Chaldea, or literal Babylon, did set up image-worship, commanding, upon pain of burning, the worshippers of the true God to fall down, Jer. i. 38, Dan. iii. 6, "It is the place of graven images, and they are mad upon their idols." "And whoso falleth not down, and worshippeth, shall the same hour be cast into the midst of the burning fiery furnace."

VIII. Chaldea, or literal Babylon, was the place of captivity and spoil; for she carried the servants of God away captive, and made a spoil of their treasures, and rejoiced in so doing. Here we shall find Ezekiel, and Daniel, and thousands more in captivity; here we shall find the spoils of Jerusalem, and the enemy rejoicing in the spoil, Jer. lii. 28, 29, 30, Ezek. i., Dan. i. "Because ye were glad, because ye rejoiced at the destruction, ye are grown fat as the heifers at grass, and bellow as bulls," &c., Jer. i. 11, and li. 35.

their horrid wickedness, as appears in Mr. Fox, Mr. Clark, Sir Sam. Moreland, and others, &c.

IX. Chaldea, or literal Babylon, notwithstanding her great wickedness, yet was the most lofty and proud of all countries besides, called the "Lady of kingdoms, and the glory and beauty of excellency, go off the stage for ever, as the Man of Sin, great opposer of Christ, and son of perdition, when God shall send his Son from heaven to fight

God shall send his Son from heaven to fight against, and slaughter his deceived nations; of whom it is said, "The Lord shall go forth, and fight against those nations, as when he fought in the day of battle," Zech. xiv. 3, which will be so dreadful a fight or battle, as never yet was fought, for slaughter and blood; and so destroy this vile person with the brightness of his appearance, to fulfil 2 Thess. ii., and cast him, as the son of perdition, into the burning flames, to fulfil Rev. xix. 20, "And the fowls of heaven shall be filled with their flesh. And here is the mind that hath wisdom, The beast that was, and is not, and yet is, is of the seventh head, and is the eighth, and goeth into perdition."

V. The last beast, or head of the Roman kingdom, called Mystery Babylon, doth invade Sion, the Gospel-Church; hath closely besieged her and blocked up her privileges, and trampled under foot the holy city for a long space of time, Rev. xi. 2.

VI. The last beast, or power of the Roman kingdom, hath taken away, or endeavoured to slay the two witnesses, that bore up the light and testimony of God to the world.

VII. Rome, or Mystery Babylon, requires worship to be given to the crucifix, the image of the virgin Mary, and other saints, but especially to the idol of the mass; so that whosoever will not own that most ridiculous idolatry, of a piece of consecrated bread, coming out of the priest's unhallowed hands, to be their God and Saviour; shall be burned at a stake; as many blessed men and women, young and old, were in the Marian days. See Fox's Acts and Monuments.

VIII. Rome, or Mystery Babylon, is become the place of captivity and spoil; for it is by her orders, dictates, and influence, that the servants of God have been carried away captive, and their goods and possessions made a spoil of in all parts of the Christian world. In her dominions it was, where we find John Huss, Jerome of Prague, the noble Lord Cobham, and thousands more captivated and destroyed. It is in the gaols we find good men imprisoned; in Popish countries we find the Inquisition, and other cruel usages: for who is it in all the Christian world besides, that imprisons, spoils, and destroys men for their religion, that persecutes the people of God, but the vassals of this sinful city of Rome? Her wicked sons did not only kill and spoil in Bohemia, Piedmont, and other countries, but they rejoiced in the histories of the saint's sufferings, written by

IX. Rome or Mystery Babylon, notwithstanding her great crimes, and most horrid wickedness, yet hath been the most proud of any city or people in the Christian world, who saith in her heart, "I sit a queen, am no widow, shall see no sorrow;" for which haughtiness and pride of for which God doth severely threaten her. "Behold, I am against thee, O thou most proud, saith the Lord God of hosts: for thy day is come, the time, that I will visit thee," Rev. xviii. 7, Jer. i. 31.

METAPHOR.

X. Chaldea, or literal Babylon, was not only a people of great pomp, pride, and covetousness, but of great riches and treasures. "Thou that dwellest upon many waters, abundant in treasures, thine end is come, the end of thy covetousness," Jer. i. 37, and li. 13.

vast revenues settled upon her orders and clergy; she has peeled the people by selling pardons and indulgences, raising Peter-pence, and the like; so horribly covetuous is she, that she is not willing any should go to heaven without the gift of money to Holy Church, by which slight she is grown so exceeding rich, and full of treasure, that she can afford a golden cup to present the intoxicating wine in, to be clothed with scarlet, decked with gold, pearl, and precious stones; she makes the merchants of the earth rich that do trade with her; she hath indeed, as a full answer to her type, Lam. i. 10, stretched forth her hand upon all the pleasant things of those countries and kingdoms where she hath sat as a queen.

XI. Chaldea, or literal Babylon, did spoil the meetings of God's people, made the ways of Sion to mourn, because men could not come to the solemn assemblies, Lam. i. 4, "The ways of Sion do mourn, because none can come to her solemn feasts, or assemblies. All her gates are so desolate, her priests, or ministers, do sigh, her virgins are afflicted, and she is in bitterness," &c.

been afflicted: the faithful pastors grieving, because they might not preach to their flocks; and the people mourning, because they could not hear the pleasant voice of their pastors, by reason of violence, &c.

XII. Chaldea, or literal Babylon, made the worst of men, chief among the nations, and provinces, over which she ruled, suffering none to come to preferment, but such as were enemies to Sion, and the ways of worship by her observed, Lam. i. 5, "Her adversaries prosper, and are the chief," &c.

unless they do own the Pope? Who can be kings, without being deposed or poisoned, that subscribe not to the see of Rome? Who can sit safe as governors over any cities, where she sits as queen, without truckling under the yoke of servitude, that she puts upon the necks of all her vassals? Rev. xiii. 16, 17.

XIII. Chaldea, or literal Babylon, was guilty of starving, or famishing the children of Sion, in the days of her power and reign, which made the prophet cry out Lam. i. 19, iv. 7, 8, 9, 10, and hers, the Lord will remember her with judgment, and severity, when he comes to make inquisition for blood, and avenge upon her the injury done to Sion: Rev. xviii. 7, "How much she hath glorified herself, and lived deliciously, so much torment and sorrow give her," &c.

PARALLEL.

X. Rome or Mystery Babylon, is not only a people of great pomp, and pride, arrayed with purple, scarlet, gold, pearl, and precious stones, but she sits upon many waters, is covetous, as well as proud, and full of treasures: and indeed it must needs be so; for besides the gifts that were first given in the time of Constantine, as is pretended, she hath made a prey upon nations, a spoil upon saints, had the gifts of kings, had the meetings of God's people, the true professors of the religion of the holy Jesus, by driving the Gospel, Sion, or Church, into the wilderness; and oftentimes burning and plucking down their meeting-places, and persecuting her ministers, driving them into corners, fighting and dispersing their auditors, by fines, imprisonments, banishments, and cruel usages; so that her ministers have been made to sigh, her gates become desolate, none being suffered to enter without danger; and their virgins, the best sort of professors, have

XI. Rome, or Mystery Babylon, hath spoiled the meetings of God's people, the true professors of the religion of the holy Jesus, by driving the Gospel, Sion, or Church, into the wilderness; and oftentimes burning and plucking down their meeting-places, and persecuting her ministers, driving them into corners, fighting and dispersing their auditors, by fines, imprisonments, banishments, and cruel usages; so that her ministers have been made to sigh, her gates become desolate, none being suffered to enter without danger; and their virgins, the best sort of professors, have

XII. Rome, or Mystery Babylon, hath made the worst of men rulers, or chief among the nations; not suffering men to bear office in kingdoms, cities, or corporations, nor indeed comfortably to buy and sell, unless they would relinquish goodness and religion, and receive the mark of the beast in their forehead, or right-hands, viz., publicly profess or privately subscribe to such injunctions as were against their consciences, and inconsistent with their religion: who can be cardinals, who can be kings, without being deposed or poisoned,

XIII. Rome, or Mystery Babylon, hath been guilty of the most horrid cruelty, by forcing tender and heavenly born souls, both ministers and people from their dwellings, and that in a most bitter season, driving them up into corners, where they have been kept, till starved to death

METAPHOR.

v. 10, "My priests and mine elders perished in the city, while they sought their meat to refresh their soul; those that were purer than snow; whiter than milk, more ruddy than precious stones curiously polished, became as black as a coal, withered and wrinkled, their skin cleaves to their bones for want of food."

XIV. Chaldea, or literal Babylon, delighted so in burning-work, as that they set on fire and burnt down the very houses and dwellings of the people of Sion, as well as the places of public worship, Jer. lii. 12, 13, "In the nineteenth year of the king of Babylon, came his chief steward, and burnt the house of the Lord, and the king's house, and all the houses of Jerusalem, and all the great houses burnt he with fire," &c.

XV. Chaldea, or literal Babylon was so villainous as to ravish the women in Sion, and the maids in the cities of Judea, declaring their sin like Sodom, Lam. v. 11. "They delighted the women, and ravished the maids in their cities," &c.

XVI. Chaldea, or literal Babylon, delighted in hanging as well as burning; serving God's people, as men serve dogs that they do not think fit to live: as well as used them like dry bones and rotten wood, by burning them to ashes and powder, they hanged them up as well as burnt them, and hanged them up in a miserable manner too, even the best among the people, Lam. v. 12, "Princes are hanged up by their hands, the faces of elders were not honoured," which is the worst way of hanging for continuance of shame and pain.

Here we shall, for the further clearing up of this Mystery, run a brief parallel between the little Horn and the Popes or bishops of Rome, and so conclude.

I. The little Horn rose at the latter end of the fourth kingdom, or when the Roman empire stood upon its last legs, or fell into a division of ten parts, Dan. vii. 7, 8. "And the [Roman, or] fourth beast had ten horns; and behold, there came up amongst them another little Horn."

and the learned †Mede show at large, out of the Roman histories. Upon this diviby much hunger; of which we have a lamentable and heart-breaking relation, in the history of the Irish massacre, &c.

PARALLEL.

XIV. Rome, or Mystery Babylon, hath so much delighted in the cursed trade of burning, that she hath not been contented with burning the bodies of men and women to ashes; but she hath burnt down their meeting-places, wherein they worshipped God; and not only so, but the very habitations and dwelling-places of the faithful servants of Christ, leaving them and their wives and children harbourless; as she did not only to the blessed witnesses of Christ, in the valleys of Piedmont, but to famous and renowned London itself, &c., remember 1666.

XV. Rome, or Mystery Babylon, hath been so beastly villainous, that it is almost beyond belief, taking women before their husband's faces, and maidens before their parent's faces; first ravishing them openly, in the sight of the sun, and then imbruing their barbarous hands in their blood, as divers histories do declare.

XVI. Rome, or Mystery Babylon, hath not less answered her type in this than in many other things; for she hath served the best of men like dogs, that have been counted not fit to live, for besides making them like rotten wood, and burning their bones into lime, dust, or powder, she hath driven a very cursed trade in hanging; and because she would see which was the worst way of hanging, she has hanged some by the neck till dead, and others by the middle, and burnt them by degrees, to lengthen out their pain and misery; others by their tenderest parts; O monstrous barbarity! A shame to have it told in Gath, or published in the streets of Askelon! What was done to the noble lord Cobham, and many others in these parts of the world, is so plain and notorious, as if she had been under a constraint to accomplish the iniquity of her type.

I. The Popes of Rome were kept under by the emperors, who kept a strict eye over them, curbed their insolencies and exorbitances, and at the first appearance nipping their aspiring projects in the very bud; sometimes deposing and banishing some proud prelates, when they showed at what they levelled their designs. But after the power of Rome, which before was entire in one emperor, fell into ten parts and divisions, which happened in the year of our Lord 456, as * Du-Moulin,

* Accomplishment of prophecies.

† Lib. iii. p. 779.

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

sion, and weakness of the empire, the bishop of Rome took his advantage, to make his advance, and rose up to regal power, enacting laws, raising taxes, and levying soldiers; by which means he struck in with parties, and encroached upon Italy, and the parts adjacent.

II. This power arising upon the weakening and division of the old state of the fourth monarchy or kingdom, is called a little Horn, because truly so at its first beginning, Dan. vii. 8, "And behold there came up among them another little Horn, &c.

which began presently after the death of Julian, about the year 365, in which time was a most fearful earthquake, the like never known before, betokening the decay of the fourth kingdom, in its civil state or power, by a division or falling of nations, who set themselves against the power of Rome, and harassed, wasted, and destroyed the provinces thereof, for near forty-five years together. See Mede, lib. 3, p. 659.

III. This little Horn, after his rise to temporal power, plucks up three of the ten horns by the roots. Dan. vii. 8, "Before whom there were three of the first horns plucked up by the roots."

dominions, according to the rules or measure of the compass; as we find in Mr. Mede, lib. 3. p. 658, and famous Du Moulin ubi supra. Upon which three characters of the little Horn, we frame this short argument.

If the Pope of Rome did arise to temporal power, upon the weakening of the Cæsarean dominion, which before did hinder him in his aspiring usurpation, was but little in his first rise and appearance, did enlarge, and grow to a possession of about a third part of the old Roman dominion: then the Pope of Rome is the little Horn, the wicked power and vile person, set forth by the prophet Daniel.

But the antecedent is true:—Ergo, so is the consequent.

IV. This little Horn hath eyes like the eyes of a man, &c.

mouth he utters presumptuous things. a lion, a dragon; but this hath eyes like a man. In which there are three things to be noted: 1. He looks higher; 2. Sees further; and, 3. Is more enticing than those that went before him. (1.) He looks higher, that is, makes a pretence of piety, and design for heaven. (2.) Sees further, that deceit, flattery, and policy, will do more than strength. (3.) Is more enticing to kings and people, than the eyes of a leopard, lion, or dragon, or the former powers in their heathen state.

V. This little Horn hath a mouth speaking great or presumptuous things, above the rate of ordinary men, Dan. vii. 8.

God, above all the kings of the earth. is an incommunicable attribute of the Most High. (2.) That he is infallible, and cannot err, which is an incommunicable attribute of the Most High. (3.) That he is universal head and bishop of the Catholic Church. (4.) He assumes the attributes of "his holiness," and "holy father;" such an oracle has right or power to give laws to the world, to which all ought to subscribe, and yield obedience, and none ought to dispute. Greater and more loftily can no man speak, unless he will say, I am the supreme Being, and there is no God in heaven or earth above myself, which would be so highly ridiculous, that every idiot would be able to detect it.

VI. The little Horn had his looks more stout than his fellows:

II. The Papal power, or bishop of Rome, before this division, was but low and small, being confined to his episcopal power over the Church, till by his arts he had got up gradually to the regal seat, and power of the temporal sword, which he managed with so much craft and policy, that afterwards he enlarged his dominions; but is very rightfully in his infancy styled a little prince, power, or Horn, arising up amongst, or after the rest,

III. The Papal power having gained the temporal sword, though but a little Horn at his beginning, did practice and prosper so, that betwixt the year 365, and the year 456, or soon after, when Rome was sacked by Gensericus, he gained such enlargements, that he came to possess about three parts of ten of the former or old Roman

IV. The Pope of Rome hath eyes like the eyes of a man, the resemblance of a human look, but a heart like the dragon, out of which foul His predecessors had eyes like a leopard, a bear, a lion. In which there are three things to be noted: 1. He looks higher; 2. Sees further; and, 3. Is more enticing than those that went before him. (1.) He looks higher, that is, makes a pretence of piety, and design for heaven. (2.) Sees further, that deceit, flattery, and policy, will do more than strength. (3.) Is more enticing to kings and people, than the eyes of a leopard, lion, or dragon, or the former powers in their heathen state.

V. The Pope of Rome hath a mouth speaking great or presumptuous things, above the ordinary rate of men. This is evident in many respects, of which we shall give you but a few instances out of many. (1.) That he is the highest deputy of (2.) That he is infallible, and cannot err, which is an incommunicable attribute of the Most High. (3.) That he is universal head and bishop of the Catholic Church. (4.) He assumes the attributes of "his holiness," and "holy father;" such an oracle has right or power to give laws to the world, to which all ought to subscribe, and yield obedience, and none ought to dispute. Greater and more loftily can no man speak, unless he will say, I am the supreme Being, and there is no God in heaven or earth above myself, which would be so highly ridiculous, that every idiot would be able to detect it.

VI. The Pope of Rome has looks more stout than the Horns that have been cotemporary with

METAPHOR.

Dan. vii. 20, "Whose looks were more stout," &c.

princes. 3. In asserting himself to be God's vice-gerent, against whom no person, upon any cause or pretence whatsoever, ought to lift up hand or tongue, upon the penalty of a total ruin in this world, and an eternal ruin in the world to come.

VII. The little horn makes war with the saints, Dan. vii. 21, "I beheld, and the same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them, and that for a long time, even to the wearing out of the poor saints of the Most High," ver. 25.

month, or a year, but hath lasted for many hundred years: so that for length of time, numbers of countries, and multitudes of persons, there is no power that ever reigned, hath out-done, or equalized this vile and bloody monster; upon which we frame this argument.

If the pope of Rome may be more fitly said to have eyes like the eyes of a man, a mouth speaking presumptuous things, and looks more stout than his fellows; to have made war with the saints, to have prevailed against them and worn them out, more than any other power that ever yet reigned: then he is the little horn, or vile person under consideration.

But the former is true:—Ergo, so is the latter.

VIII. The little horn is diverse from the rest of the horns, Dan. vii. 24, "And he shall be diverse from the first, and shall subdue three kings."

dinary bishop, before he came to be a temporal prince. (2.) He pretends not to hold his kingdom by inheritance, or gift of the people, as other kings do, but by a special and divine patent. (3.) In his progress to the height of his dignity, by leaving his fixed station, as pastor of a church, and by deceit, treason, and violation of all laws, mounts the throne of imperial grandeur. (4.) He rules by a supreme ecclesiastical power, as well as temporal; pretends to the keys of heaven, as well as the sword of justice on earth, showing himself to be the beast that hath two horns like a lamb, spoken of, Rev. xiii. 11.

IX. This little horn hath so many marks upon him, that they are too numerous to handle distinctly after our usual method; and therefore we shall put the remaining part into a general rank, and conclude this subject.

1. He must change times and laws.

and seasons," Dan. ii. 21. (2.) He has made strange alterations of the laws, orders, and institutions used in the Church, in respect of officers, administration of sacraments, and celebration of days.

2. Continue a long space of time.

3. He is a vile person.

4. Had not the honour he hath, fairly given to him, either by God or man, but gained it by flattery.

5. Removed the preceding power

PARALLEL.

him; which appears in three things: 1. In his terrible bulls, that he makes to roar and stare most dreadfully. 2. In his power and acts of deposing

VII. The pope of Rome hath made war with the saints, and prevailed against them, and that to their ruin, as to liberty, estate, and even life itself; as the true witnesses of Christ have most sadly experienced in many countries, in divers by-past ages, even for such a series of time, that may be properly called a wearing out of the saints of the Most High; for his cruelty ended not in a

VIII. The pope of Rome is diverse from the rest of the potentates in these four respects: 1. The manner of his rise. 2. His pretensions to power. 3. In his progress to his height of dignity. 4. In his management of the power he has usurped.

(1.) He was small or little in his rise, but an ordinary bishop, before he came to be a temporal prince. (2.) He pretends not to hold his kingdom by inheritance, or gift of the people, as other kings do, but by a special and divine patent. (3.) In his progress to the height of his dignity, by leaving his fixed station, as pastor of a church, and by deceit, treason, and violation of all laws, mounts the throne of imperial grandeur. (4.) He rules by a supreme ecclesiastical power, as well as temporal; pretends to the keys of heaven, as well as the sword of justice on earth, showing himself to be the beast that hath two horns like a lamb, spoken of, Rev. xiii. 11.

IX. The Pope of Rome hath so many marks or characters upon him, that are too numerous to be handled distinctly in a little room; and therefore we shall but touch upon them, so far as they show the texts made good, and form an idea of truth in the minds of man.

1. The pope hath changed times and laws in two respects: (1.) He hath set up and plucked down kings, which is called a "changing of times and seasons," Dan. ii. 21. (2.) He has made strange alterations of the laws, orders, and institutions used in the Church, in respect of officers, administration of sacraments, and celebration of days.

2. Hath continued above twelve hundred years.

3. He is as vile a person as any in the world, tolerates all kinds of wickedness, by his dispensations, pardons, &c.

4. Had his exaltation neither by inheritance, lawful conquest, nor rightful gift from rightful donators.

5. He had the help of Phocas, to kill the em-

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

by the arms of a flood.

6. He became strong by a small people.

7. He shall have power over the fattest places of the province, and there scatter his riches.

8. Such as do wickedly against religion, he shall accept.

9. Under him the saints fall by captivity and spoil, by sword and flame, many days.

10. Shall do according to his own will, not accounting himself tied to any laws.

11. He shall exalt himself above every god, and speak marvellous things against the God of gods.

crowns; by his blasphemous edicts and his written laws, &c.

12. Shall not regard the God of his ancestors.

13. Nor the desire of wedlock.

from it too, who are made incapable of spiritual promotion, and censured as heinous transgressors, if married.

14. Nor any god in a pious way.

15. Shall give honour to them that have armed forces.

16. Shall own a strange god, with splendid ceremonies, Dan. xi. 38.

If all these sixteen characters meet no where so clear and evident, as upon the Pope of Rome; then the Pope of Rome is the little horn, and vile person, set forth in the Book of Daniel.

But all the aforesaid characters meet no where so clear and evident, as upon the Pope of Rome, &c.

Ergo, &c.

To these characters we shall add a few more out of the Evangelist Matthew, the 20th of the Acts, the first Epistle to Timothy, and the second to the Thessalonians, and so draw to a conclusion.

Christ foretold that enemies should come in his name, and own him to be the true Christ, with an intent to deceive; that they should appear in sheep's clothing, and under this vizard hide their devouring teeth. And, Matt. vii. 15, "Beware of false prophets, peror Mauritius; and by the help of Goths and Vandals enlarged his power.

6. Because strong by a small people, having only a declining church, and apostate Christians to assist him.

7. He hath power over Italy, which is reputed the garden of Europe, &c.

8. He hath accepted, entertained, and encouraged the people of any nation that would turn wicked, and sacrifice all piety and religion, to serve his interest.

9. Under him the saints have fallen, by flames, captivity, and spoil, many days.

10. He hath done according to his own will, and doth not look upon any laws to be obligatory to him, either from God or men.

11. He, the Pope, hath exalted himself above every god, that is, such as are so accounted amongst men, or gods on earth, by excommunicating, deposing, treading upon their necks, and kicking off their injunctions he exalts himself above God himself, and

12. He doth not regard the God of his ancestors, either the idols of the emperors, or the God of the good bishops that went before him.

13. He hath been remote from the desire of women in a lawful way, nay, and frights his clergy of spiritual promotion, and censured as heinous transgressors, if married.

14. He hath not regarded any god in a pious way; for though he doth name the true God often, and in words profess him, yet in works he doth defy him, and profane his holy name.

15. He gives honour to them who have armed forces, and lends them assistance to carry on his black and diabolical designs.

16. He hath owned a strange god, a mark completely made up in the mass, which is adored with splendid ceremonies. Upon all which we fairly frame this argument.

The Popes of Rome in their succession, have been clothed in sheep's clothing, covered their design with the name of Christ, the true Christ, but with an intent to deceive; for all their pretences of Jesus being the true Christ, have been but as a vizard to hide their devouring teeth; whilst they hid themselves under the notion of Christianity, they have carried on most pernicious which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly are ravening wolves;" that is, have a design to destroy you.

METAPHOR.

abolical doctrines, or destroy them by their holy poison. (2.) If any ministers, or men of parts, have risen up, to set forth God's holy truth, and bless the world with Gospel light, and saving doctrine, they have either choked them with perfections, affrighted them by dreadful fears, or by a ravenous thirsting after their blood, have most wickedly and treacherously destroyed their lives. (3.) If collective bodies of pious congregations of Saints have sprung forth in the world, they have followed them like blood-hounds, and devouring wolves, with fire and sword, fearful massacres, devastations, murders and slaughters, till they have spoiled them, torn in pieces, and devoured them: completely fulfilling that prediction of the apostle, Acts xx. 29, 30, "For I know this, that after my departure shall grievous wolves enter in amongst you, not sparing the flock: also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away the disciples after them." Who can this prophecy so exactly agree to, as the bloody Popes, who at first arose out of the Church, and acted the part of wolves to purpose, 1. By affrighting the flock: 2. By dispersing and scattering them abroad: 3. By drinking or sucking the blood of any of them they could fasten upon, in a most astonishing and prodigious manner?

As for those two eminent Gospel prophecies, viz., the beginning of 2 Thess. ii., and of 1 Tim. iv., we will give a brief abstract by way of parallel, showing how these relate only to the Pope of Rome, and no other.

The apostle expressly tells us, that a man of sin shall arise, who shall be a lawless one, that will lift up himself against God, to sit in the temple of God; that was hindered in his wicked designs by the imperial power; who gets up by a falling away, 2 Thess. ii. 3, &c., 1 Tim. iv. 1. That he was to be so considerable, as to be easily discerned and discovered by the Christian world; that he was to manage a great mystery of iniquity: his coming up was to be by the assistance and working of the devil: he was to have a two-fold power, civil and ecclesiastical, comprehending all earthly power: he was to suggest signs and lying wonders to the people: he was to make use of all treachery, or deceitfulness, and lies; his followers were to be given up to strong delusions; his party was to speak desperate lies in hypocrisy, to have seared consciences; that he should be against matrimony; that he should command a long lent, and to abstain from meats.

PARALLEL.

and destructive designs, showing their wolfish and devouring nature in these three respects. (1.) If there have appeared any kings in the Christian world, that have been piously disposed, they have forthwith endeavoured to pervert them by their diabolical doctrines, or destroy them by their holy poison. (2.) If any ministers, or men of parts, have risen up, to set forth God's holy truth, and bless the world with Gospel light, and saving doctrine, they have either choked them with perfections, affrighted them by dreadful fears, or by a ravenous thirsting after their blood, have most wickedly and treacherously destroyed their lives. (3.) If collective bodies of pious congregations of Saints have sprung forth in the world, they have followed them like blood-hounds, and devouring wolves, with fire and sword, fearful massacres, devastations, murders and slaughters, till they have spoiled them, torn in pieces, and devoured them: completely fulfilling that prediction of the apostle, Acts xx. 29, 30, "For I know this, that after my departure shall grievous wolves enter in amongst you, not sparing the flock: also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away the disciples after them." Who can this prophecy so exactly agree to, as the bloody Popes, who at first arose out of the Church, and acted the part of wolves to purpose, 1. By affrighting the flock: 2. By dispersing and scattering them abroad: 3. By drinking or sucking the blood of any of them they could fasten upon, in a most astonishing and prodigious manner?

As for those two eminent Gospel prophecies, viz., the beginning of 2 Thess. ii., and of 1 Tim. iv., we will give a brief abstract by way of parallel, showing how these relate only to the Pope of Rome, and no other.

If the Pope of Rome be not a man of sin, then Beelzebub is not a devil, as is largely demonstrated in the foregoing sheets; for no divine or human law can set any bounds to his ambition, and spiritual tyranny. That he exalts himself against God, in polluting his pure worship, and against kings, by his usurped supremacy, is before evidenced: that he was hindered by the Roman imperial power, is the opinion and judgment of the learned; and also that he was the monstrous spawn of the great apostacy. That he manages a great mystery of iniquity, in which his grand counsellor, the devil, lends him politics, to a double usurpation, and encroachment upon soul and body; pretends to miracles, and false wonders, acts like the metropolitan cheat and impostor of Christendom: that his followers are strongly deluded, mere liars and hypocrites, with seared consciences, forbidding honest marriage, but allowing canonical whoredom; that he forbids meats, but can dispense with the grossest debaucheries: all these, I say, with those other marks the Holy Spirit gives of him, are so legible upon the Pope, as if the very sunbeams had writ them in capitals upon his brazen forehead. Therefore we dismiss him, with this full-proved conclusion, that he, and only he, is ὁ ἀντὶχριστός, the antichrist, and the very man of sin.

Thus you have had a brief description of Mystery Babylon, and the antichristian beast, who hath been so long a time so great a plague to the world, but more especially to God's Church.

METAPHORS, ALLEGORIES, SIMILIES, TYPES, ETC.,

CONCERNING

SIN AND THE DEVIL.

SIN A THIEF.

"And Jesus answered and said, a certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho, and fell among Thieves, which stripped him of his raiment, and wounded him, leaving him half dead," &c., Luke x. 30.

THIS is generally taken for a parable, though it is not so called, and before I run the parallel concerning Sin and a Thief, I shall very briefly open the whole parable, according to my present understanding, and commit it to better judgments.

1. By this certain man, I understand the first Adam.

2. By Jerusalem, that happy state, and place of peace, and rest, which he enjoyed before his fall.

3. By his going from Jerusalem to Jericho, his departing from God, in obeying the serpent.

4. By Thieves, Sin, and Satan, &c. These stripped him of his raiment, viz., his first righteousness, &c., and spiritually wounded him, leaving him half dead, i. e., though he was alive in his body, he was dead in his soul: "In the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die."

5. By the priest and Levite who had no compassion on him, may be meant the law and Levitical priesthood.

6. By the Samaritan, Jesus Christ.

7. By pouring in wine, the blood of Jesus, that precious fruit of the true Vine; by oil, the Holy Spirit, which those receive who partake of the virtue of Christ's blood, called the oil of gladness.

8. By setting him on his beast, may be intended the doctrine of the Gospel; for that, a doctrine, metaphorically, is said to carry the soul, as a beast does the body; "Be not carried about with divers and strange doctrines," &c., Heb. xiii. 9.

9. By the inn, may be meant the Church of God, for thither the true doctrine of Christ carries believers.

10. By the host, the minister¹ or pastor of the Church.

11. By the two pence given to the host to take care of the poor wounded person, may be meant the gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit; or, as others, the Old and New Testament; but I rather conclude the former.

12. The Samaritan going away, may signify Christ's ascension into heaven, who besides all the divine gifts, graces, and comforts of the Spirit, he bestows upon his faithful ministers here, and to capacitate and fit them to do their work and office, he will when he comes again give them eternal life.

Observe. Sin and the devil are, and may fitly be compared to Thieves and Robbers. If this may not safely be inferred from hence; yet from divers other texts of Scripture it may naturally be deduced, &c., see Rom. vii. 11, 2 Cor. xi. 1, 2, Eph. iv. 22, Heb. iii. 13.

In the opening of this, we shall first show what Sin and the devil robs men of. 2. Show what kind of Thieves and robbers Sin and the devil are.

METAPHOR.

I. A Thief, is one, or more, that in a secret and felonious manner takes away that which is another man's, whether it be goods,

PARALLEL.

I. SIN and Satan strive unjustly to take away, or deprive the sons of men, of their undoubted right to divine things. Adam was invested with a very great estate, he had great abundance of money, &c., and thereby oft-times undo, and utterly ruin their neighbours, depriving them of all those good things they had in possession, or the promise of enjoying, &c.

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

the devil he was robbed and deceived of all, and brought to utter beggary: and since, God hath been pleased in a gracious manner through the Lord Jesus Christ, to invest believers with much spiritual riches, and righteousness; again these enemies strive to rob and deceive them of all the second time; but to speak more particularly, the things which they endeavour to deprive the sons and daughters of, are these:

First, Of their precious time, by telling them that it is too soon, too early to mind the concern of their souls; like as those in Haggai, strove to deceive the people, "The time is not come," &c. 1. Sin and Satan persuade men, that time is not so swift nor uncertain, but that they shall have time and days enough hereafter, whereas on a sudden, time's hour-glass is out, and they are cut down in a moment. 2. By stifling the senses of the poor sinners, insomuch that they cannot judge of their time; they are so taken with other things, sensual things, that they know not at what time of the day it is, they think it is a long while to night, when alas their sun is almost set. 3. By hiding from men the great perils and dangers of the times they live in, they are so blinded by these thieves, that they see not into what a pit they are falling. 4. By persuading them, that a great deal of work may be done in a very short time; that the work of repentance may be done upon a sick-bed, or when old age comes. 5. And then at another while, when they have spent much of their days in pleasure and vanity, this enemy persuades them it is now too late, and the time of their visitation is past, &c.

Secondly, These Thieves strive to rob men of the opportunity of time, I mean those precious sermons, seasons of grace, and holy sabbaths, God is pleased to afford them; by secret craft, these enemies blind the eyes of men after such a manner, that they prefer their worldly advantages and profit, in their shows and callings, above the riches and glorious blessing of the Word and ordinances of God, they prefer earth before heaven, gold above grace, the good of the body above the good of the soul. If the enemy cannot keep men from attending upon the Word, then he endeavours to fill their minds with other things, causing them to be negligent in hearing of the Word preached; that it profits them nothing; or if they should hear with attention, yet this adversary causes them to rest satisfied with a bare hearing, and thereby deceive their souls. hearing 2a 288.

Thirdly, Sin and Satan rob, or deprive men of union, and communion with God, and of the true grace of God, by which this union and communion with God, and Christ is attained; persuading them common grace, is saving grace, and legal conversion is evangelical conversion, and outward reformation true regeneration, &c.

Fourthly, Sin and Satan rob men of peace, not only of peace with God, but also of the true peace of conscience.

Fifthly, They strive to rob men of their precious and immortal souls.

Sixthly, They rob; and endeavour to rob and deceive men of the crown of life.

Lastly, In a word, these enemies strive to rob and cheat men and women of all the saving benefit of Christ crucified, endeavouring to make his blessed death wholly ineffectual to their souls.

II. Thieves many times take and lead poor travellers out of the king's high-way, into some by-place, and then bind them hand and foot, as well as take away their treasure.

bitterness, and in the bond of iniquity," Acts viii. 23. There are three bonds that these spiritual Thieves bind sinners with; (1.) The bond of ignorance, (2.) The bond of unbelief. (3.) The bond of a hard heart.

II. So Sin and Satan, lead sinners out of the true way of God, into by and untrodden paths of Sin and idolatry, and in a barbarous manner bind them with cruel bonds: hence Christ is said to deliver them that were bound, Isa. lxi. 1. The apostle Paul speaking to Simon the sorcerer, said, "I perceive thou art in the gall of

METAPHOR.

III. Thieves do not only bind such that they rob, but many times murder them; they do not only steal, but kill also, and that in a barbarous manner.

There are and have been, some great and notorious thieves: would you not look upon him to be a grand Thief, that robs and craftily deceives a whole city, a whole county, nay, a whole kingdom.

1. Sin a great Thief, if we consider the eminency of those it hath robbed.

(1.) Sin deceived the angels that fell, who were most glorious creatures in their first estate.

(2.) Sin robbed and deceived Adam, who was so highly honoured and dignified by the Almighty, &c.

2. Sin is a bold Thief; which appears, in that it will adventure to steal and deceive at that very time when it is arraigned, and its abominable cheats laid open by the ministers of the Gospel.

5. Sin is an old Thief; no sooner was the world created, but presently we read of this robber, and how he cheated our first parents; O how many ages, how long a time hath this Thief reigned in his wickedness!

4. Sin is a subtle Thief, he robs and steals in the day-time, as well as in the night, and yet it is hard to find him out; he has many secret corners to hide and lurk in, nay he hath got the art to change his name when he is taken, and charged with this and that abomination. (1.) If you search for him by the name of pride, he calls himself by the name of comeliness and decency. (2.) If you search for him under the name of covetousness, he calls his name industry, thriftiness, and good husbandry; nay he is grown so crafty, that some think it is impossible to find him out: under the last appellation, he doth not only change his name, but also prevails cunningly upon men, according as he finds their natural inclination and disposition; some he deceives by the pleasures of the world, some by the profits and riches of the world, and some he puffs up with vain-glory, and the honours of the world.

(3.) Sin deceives by pretending kindness and fellowship to the children of men: Sin and Satan promise a future time, and days to repent: they promise heaven to the vilest sinner, promise life, whilst they thrust the knife into the very throat.

Sin is composed of nought but subtle wiles,
It fawns and flatters, and betrays by smiles;
'Tis like the panther, or the crocodile,
It seems to love, and promises no wile,
It hides its sting, seems harmless as the dove;
It hugs the soul, and hates when't vows most love.
It plays the tyrant most by gilded pills,
It secretly ensnares the soul it kills
Sins' promises they all deceitful be,
Does promise wealth, but pay us poverty;
Does promise honour, but doth pay us shame;
And quite bereaves a man of his good name:
Does promise pleasure, but doth pay us sorrow;
Does promise life to day, pays death to-morrow.
No Thief so vile, nor treacherous as Sin,
Whom fools do hug, and take much pleasure in.

5. That Sin is a crafty Thief and robber, doth appear further, if we consider what fools and mere babes, it makes of worldly-wise men.

(1.) It deceives them of treasure of an inestimable value, for mere toys and

PARALLEL.

III. So Sin and Satan, do not only rob men of all their heavenly treasure, but also kill and murder their souls; Sin kills spiritually, and Sin kills eternally; "Sin, taking occasion by the commandment, deceived me, and by it slew me," Rom. vii. 11.

Sin has deceived and robbed the whole world at once. When our first parents were beguiled, all mankind were beguiled, and what man that ever lived hath not actually been robbed by this Thief? The best of men, have more or less been deceived by him.

METAPHOR.

trifles, it cheats them of most blessed pearls, above sorry pebbles; they like idiots, take brass counters, before guineas and yellow gold.

(2.) It makes them believe strange things, contrary to reason; as first, that though they sow tares, yet they shall reap wheat; nay, though they sow not at all, yet they shall have a great crop at harvest; furthermore, that that work may be done when they are old, and ready to drop into the grave, which is so hard and difficult, that all the days of their life, and the greatest of their strength is too little to accomplish; and that it is time enough to sow their seed, when they should, with others, be a gathering in their harvest. Lastly, It makes such fools of men, as to consent to set the knife to their own breast, and be willing to let out their own heart's blood.

IV. Bloody Thieves and murderers, are a great terror to honest men; and they will avoid them if possible, and provide themselves with suitable weapons to withstand and vanquish them.

IV. Sin is such a bloody Thief and murderer, that all godly men dread it, and endeavour to avoid it, as much as possibly they can; and not only so, but also take unto themselves the whole armour of God, that so they may be able to subdue and overcome it, Eph. vi.

INFERENCES.

I. If Sin be a Thief, a bloody and treacherous Thief and robber, what folly are these men and women guilty of, who are so ready and willing, at every turn, to entertain it as a guest in their houses? Nay, and shall lie in the chiefest room of their hearts?

II. It shows the folly of these men also, who hide their Sin, and desire nothing more than to have their beloved lusts spared? Who would hide, and plead for a cursed murderer, or suffer a bloody and venomous serpent to lie in their bosoms?

III. It shows the folly of such that play and make a sport at Sin. Fools make a mock at Sin.

IV. Take heed you are not beguiled and robbed by it.

V. When you are badly put to it, call for help, cry out, Thieves, Thieves! pray for the help of the Spirit.

VI. Be sure watch against it; you are ready to have a watchful eye over a Thief, nay, over one who is but suspected so to be.

VII. Keep the door shut against Sin. And,

Lastly, Be not so foolish as to believe Sin and Satan's promises.

SIN A DEBT.

“Forgive us our Debts,” Matt. vi. 12.

SIN is called a Debt, οφειλήματα, Debita, in these words, Sins and Debts are used promiscuously, as Luke xi. 4, compared with this in Matt. vi. 12, Luke xiii. 4. Luke was learned in the Greek, and wrote αμαρτίας, Sins; whereas Matthew hath οφειλήματα, Debts. Canin in loc. N. T. page 86, 87.

Now when Sins are called Debts, or said to be forgiven, it is a metaphor from pecuniary Debts, as the Debtor was said luere when he paid his money; and it is generally used of any that are obnoxious to punishment; so the Grecians say οφειλειν δικην, and the Latins pœnas debere; so the Hebrew word חַיַּב, is used both for Debts and guilt, Dan. i. 10, Ezek. xviii. 7, as also for Sin, Exod xxxii. 33. And ενοχος, which is applied to a sinner, James ii. 20, is also frequently used of punishment, as Matt. v. 21, 22. In Sin there is the obliquity and dissonancy from the law of God, and this is not called a Debt, for we do not owe this to God, but the contrary, obedience, and holiness; in Sin there is guilt and obligation unto eternal punishment, and this is called a Debt, &c.

METAPHOR.

I. DEBTS are variously taken, and may be contracted divers man-

PARALLEL.

I. So man by Sin, hath taken away or robbed God of his glory; Adam gave more credit and ner of ways. (1.) A man may rob his neighbour of his good name, defame and wickedly wrong him that way, and thereby make himself guilty, and become a sinner against him, and is as much bound to make him satisfaction, as if he had been his Debtor, by getting away much of his goods, &c.

METAPHOR.

but rather side with, and yield to his cruel enemy, that studied revenge, and to bring him into reproach. And thus man became a Sinner, and made himself guilty, being a Debtor to God, and bound to make satisfaction, or suffer for Sin, if this wrong cannot be made up, or the Debt paid.

II. Man broke a holy and righteous law, and thereby make himself notoriously guilty, and obnoxious to the penalty annexed; and guilt that lies upon him, is commonly called a Debt, he is a Debtor to the law, as well as a criminal.

III. Some Debts, in a common acceptation, are a great sum, many pounds, thousands of pounds.

compared to a debt, but to a Debt of a vast sum, ten thousand talents, which according to computation amounts to £1,500,000, and according to others, £1,875,000.

IV. Some Debts are so great in value, and the debtors so poor, that they are not able to pay them.

V. A Debt exposeth a man oft-times to an arrest, and fills his mind full of trouble; especially, if it be an action upon execution, that admits of no bail.

VI. A Debt doth not only expose a man to the danger of an arrest, but, in case he cannot pay the Debt, or procure bail, to a prison also.

VII. Some men's Debts have been paid by the hands of others, who out of mere compassion, have undertaken to satisfy for all they have owed, and thereby have kept the poor debtors from perishing.

METAPHOR.

I. A Debt among men, only exposeth the body, or bodies of men to external danger, sufferings, or sorrow.

PARALLEL.

rather hearkened to the devil, than to God, and what a reproach was this, as I may so say, to his Maker! Satan shall be believed when God shall not: when a man will not believe, trust, nor give credit to what his neighbour saith, though never so just and upright; what a reproach, and contempt, doth he cast upon him? So what greater wrong could man do to God, the most just and holy One of heaven and earth, as not to regard his word, believe, nor give credit to him;

II. Sinners have broken the holy and righteous law of God, and by this means are become miserably guilty, and palpable Debtors, both to the law, and justice; the law is broken, and justice requireth satisfaction; the penalty is death. A heavy Debt, such a Debt is Sin: he hath violated a just law, and how will he make a compensation?

III. Sin is a very great Debt, every ungodly man may be said to owe many thousands, though never so rich and mighty in the account of men. So Matt. xviii. 24, where our sins are not only a vast sum, ten thousand talents, which according to

IV. Sin is so great a Debt, that a man of himself is not able to make satisfaction to the law, and justice of God for it: he owes ten thousand talents, and hath nothing to pay; so our Saviour himself plainly intimates, Matt. xviii. 24.

V. Sin exposeth a man to an arrest, by death, a serjeant, that will. when he hath received his warrant, take no bail, and this fills wicked men, especially, full of fears; "Who through fear of death, are said, to be all their lifetime subject to bondage," Heb. ii. 15.

VI. So Sin exposeth a man, not only to an arrest, by death, but also to the prison of eternal darkness, out of which there is no redemption; "Verily, verily, I say unto you, he shall not come out from thence, until he hath paid the utmost farthing," Matt. v. 26.

VII. So this great Debt, viz., Jesus Christ, the sinner's friend out of infinite bowels, by one single payment on the cross, or by his active and passive obedience, hath satisfied for, or made a full compensation to the law, and Justice of God, in the behalf of sinners; that so he might thereby deliver them from eternal ruin. See Surety.

DISPARITY.

I. But Sin, this spiritual Debt, exposeth not the body only, but the soul; it brings not the soul, by guilt, to sorrow and misery here; but both the soul and body to sufferings eternally hereafter.

METAPHOR.

II. Debts among men, are oft-times forgiven, without payment or satisfaction made for them, either by the Debtor, or his surety.

Sin itself, so to do: and therefore, what man is not able to do upon this account, Jesus Christ his blessed Surety hath done for him.

First; to make this appear, or further to manifest the truth of it, it will not be amiss to consider the nature of God's threatenings. I mean, legal threatenings, which several divines have well distinguished from Evangelical. Gospel, or Evangelical threatenings, are those fatherly chastisements, which God denounceth, to keep us within the bounds of child-like obedience; and therefore, God hath not only signified, but the nature of the affair requireth, that they should be executed only in case of need, 1 Pet. i. 6.

But legal threatenings, denounce unmixed and unlayed curse and wrath. These two widely differ, not only in their nature, but end. In the first, suppose, that the business of the threatenings be done to God's hand, without the execution of them; it clearly follows, that the obligation of the believer to them, as they have respect to such an end, dissolves and ceaseth; that which is God's intent by them, being obtained without them, the execution of the threatenings, without the least derogation from the truth of God, or impeachment of his other properties, may be suspended.

But legal threatenings being of another nature, and having another end; namely, the vindication of God's holiness and justice upon prisoners and rebels, they are no wise dissolvable, but must of necessity be inflicted, that the perfections and government of God may be vindicated, and sin may be revenged. All sin is contempt of God's authority and government, and casts dirt upon his glory; and punishment is the vindicating of God's honour, in revenge of evil committed.

Let this be noted, that in case of such a proportioned satisfaction, by which the honour and equity of his laws is vindicated, his justice, holiness, and hatred of sin demonstrated, the ends of government attained; he may relax and dispense with the threatening, as to the party offending, which is the case here: for by executing the threatenings upon Christ, and receiving a valuable consideration of satisfaction from him, he hath given as eminent demonstration of his righteousness, purity, and hatred of Sin, and as fully vindicated his law from contempt, as if the offenders themselves had suffered; and therefore, by an admirable mixture of grace with justice, hath released us. These things being premised, I re-assume, saith he, the argument, namely, that the truth of God's threatenings, would not allow him to pardon Sin, and save sinners, but upon the consideration of a satisfaction.

First; God having denounced death, and the curse against Sin, Gen. ii. 17, Deut. xxvii. 26, the veracity and faithfulness of his nature obliged him to see it inflicted: never any entertained a notion of God, but they included in it that he spake truth. Could ever any threatening of God, be of awe upon the conscience of a sinner, should the first and great threatening be made so easily void? Should it be granted, that notwithstanding God's solemn denunciation of wrath, in case of Sin, that yet he hath taken the offender into favour, and pardoned the offence without any satisfaction, or consideration at all? what would creatures imagine, but that God either intended his threatenings for mere scare-crows, or that he were subject to mutability; which apprehension being once received, what boldness would men assume in Sin? believing that the comminations of the Gospel, would be no more executed than those of the law: "But let God be true, and every man a liar."

Secondly; To suppose that God hath abrogated his threatening, is at once to overthrow the whole Scripture; for that expressly tells us, that "not one jot of the law was to perish," Matt. v. 18. "That every disobedience received a just recompence of reward," Heb. ii. 2, Heb. ix. 22, 23. "That without blood there was to be no remission."

Thirdly; If the threatening annexed to the law be released, it is either by virtue of the law itself, or by virtue of the Gospel. It is not by virtue of the law; for that was wholly inexorable, requiring either perfect and constant obedience, or denouncing unmixed and unallayed wrath, Gal. iii. 10. Nor is it released by the Gospel; this the Holy Ghost clearly informs us, Rom. iii. 31, "Do we then make void the law through faith? God forbid: yea, we establish the law." Beza's paraphrase here is very good: Christi satisfactio quid aliud quam legis minas ostendit minime irritas esse, quam illas luere Christum oportuerit? O Christi iustitia, quid aliud est quam legis præstatio? See also Matt. v. 17, 18, "Think not," saith Christ, "That I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets; I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil: for verily I say unto you, till heaven and earth pass away, one jot, or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled." As all the predictions of the prophets were fulfilled by him, and in him; so was the whole law in his keeping the precepts of it and teaching others to do the like, and in his bearing the penalty of it, and fulfilling the types of it. The Gospel is so far from repealing the penalty of it, Heb. ix. 15, 16, "There could have been no testament, but in and through the death of the testator." There could have been no such thing as a Gospel, or a tender of glad tidings and mercy to us, but through Christ's undertaking, as our Surety, to bear the curse of the law; Gal. iii. 13. And so much for the argument from the truth of God's threatenings.

METAPHOR.

PARALLEL.

The sum of what we say and believe about this great truth, is this:

1. That by the sin of our first parents, all men are brought into a state of sin, and apostacy from God, and of an enmity to him, Gen. vi. 5, Psal. li. 5, Rom. iii. 23, and vii. 7, Eph. iv. 18, Col. ii. 13.

2. That in this state all men naturally continue, sinning against God, nor of themselves can do otherwise, Rom. iii. 10, 11, 12.

3. That the justice and holiness of God, as he is the supreme Governor and Judge of all the world, requires that sin be punished, Exod. xxxiv. 7, Josh. xxiv. 19, Psal. v. 4, 5, 6, &c.

4. That God hath also engaged his veracity and faithfulness in the sanction of the law, not to leave sin unpunished, Gen. ii. 17, Deut. xxvii. 26. "Cursed be he that confirmeth not all the words of this law, to do them." In this state and condition all mankind, had they been left without divine help and aid, must have perished for ever.

5. That God, out of his infinite grace and goodness, sent his Son, the Lord Jesus Christ to deliver them.

6. That this love was the same in Father and Son: the Father could not be more gracious and kind than the Son, nor the Son in bowels exceed the Father; but both alike loving, gracious, and compassionate.

7. That the way in general whereby the Son of God, being incarnate, was to save lost sinners, was, by a substitution of himself, according to the decree and appointment of God, in the sinner's room; according to 2 Cor. v. 21, "He hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him." Compared with Gal. iii. 17, Rom. v. 7, 8, and viii. 3, 1 Pet. ii. 24, and iii. 18.

1. That Christ, in saving sinners, hath, (1.) Offered himself a sacrifice to God, to make atonement for sins, Isa. liii. 10, Eph. iii. 2, Heb. ii. 17, and ix. 11, 12, 13, 14. (2.) That he redeemed us, by paying a price, a ransom for our redemption, Mark. x. 45, 1 Cor. vi. 20, 1 Tim. ii. 6, 1 Pet. i. 18. (3.) That he bore our sins, that is, the punishment due for them, Isa. liii. 5, 1 Pet. ii. 24. (4.) That he answered the law, and the penalty thereof, Rom. viii. 3, Gal. iii. 13, and iv. 4, 5. (5.) That he died for sin and sinners, to expiate the one, and in the stead of the other, Rom. iv. 36, and v. 10. (6.) and that God, upon Christ's voluntary susception of his office, as Mediator, and condescension to the work, did so lay our sins, in and by the sentence of the law, upon him, that he made full satisfaction for whatsoever legally could be charged upon them for whom he thus suffered. (7.) And all this, that the justice of God being satisfied, and the law fulfilled, mankind might be freed from the wrath to come, Rom. iii. 25.

III. Among Men, that debt that is paid, or full compensation made for it, either by the debtor, or his surety, cannot be said to be forgiven.

III. But that remission of sins is wholly through the free love and grace of God, is evident; yet not without respect had to the atonement or propitiation, through faith in Christ's blood. "For without shedding of blood, there is no remission." We have redemption through his blood, even the remission of sins," Eph. i. 7. "As God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you," chap. iv. 32. "God hath set him forth to be a propitiation, through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness, for the remission of sins," Rom. iii. 25. It is absolutely free, in respect of all immediate transactions between God and sinners, free on the part of God.

1. In the eternal purpose of it, when he might justly have suffered all men to have perished under the guilt of their sins.

2. Free in the means that he used to effect it. (1.) In the sending of his own Son. (2.) In laying the punishment of our sins upon him. (3.) In his covenant with him, that it should be accepted on our behalf. (4.) In his free tender and proposals of it by the Gospel, without money, and without price. (5.) In the actual forgiveness and pardon of them.

Secondly ; it is free on the part of the persons that are forgiven, in that. (1.) It is given and granted to them, without any satisfaction by them, or a surety of their procurement, they being not able to find any. (2.) Without any merit to purchase or procure it. (3.) Without any penal satisfactory suffering here or hereafter. (4.) Without any expectation of a future recompense, or being once pardoned, they should make or give any satisfaction for what they had done before. And as none of those things would, so nothing else can impeach the freedom of pardon and forgiveness. Whether then we respect the pardoner, or the pardoned, pardon is every way free, namely, on the part of God who forgives, and on the part of Sinners that are forgiven.

If God hath now, besides all this, provided himself a Lamb for a sacrifice ; if he hath, in infinite wisdom and grace, found out a way thus freely to forgive us our Debts, to the praise and glory of his own holiness, righteousness, and severity against Sin, as well as to the magnifying of his grace, goodness, and rich bounty, which he immediately exerciseth in the pardon of Sin : are any men's eyes evil, because he is good ? Will they not be contented to be pardoned, unless they may have it at the rate of spoiling or robbing God of his holiness, truth, righteousness, and faithfulness. Dr. Owen.

Object. But doth not this doctrine set forth God to be severe to his own Son, to substitute him in the Sinner's room, to bear his wrath, and suffer for their Sins ?

Ans. God laid nothing upon his blessed Son, but what Christ offered himself freely to undergo for man's sake ; and had it not every way consisted with his own glory, thus to deliver up the Lord Jesus, to satisfy both law and justice, doubtless he would never have sent him into the world. And if it had been only to make Christ a pattern of humility, and of patience under suffering, that God laid these things upon him which he endured, it might have left some room for men so to speak, in that others might, as indeed many of the goodly have been made examples upon that account.

Object. If God cannot pardon Sin without satisfaction, he is more weak and imperfect than man.

Ans. 1. God cannot do many things that man can do ; not that he is more imperfect than they, but he cannot do them upon the account of his perfection : he cannot lie, he cannot change, cannot deny himself, which men can, and do daily.

2. To pardon Sin without satisfaction, in him who is so absolutely holy, righteous, true and faithful, the absolute, necessary, supreme Governor of all Sinners, the Author of the law, and function of it, wherein punishment is threatened and declared, is to deny himself, and to do what one infinitely perfect cannot do.

3. Why doth not God pardon Sins freely, without requiring faith, repentance, and obedience in them that are pardoned ? yea, as the conditions on which they may be pardoned : for seeing he is so infinitely good and gracious, cannot he pardon men, without prescribing such terms and conditions unto them, as he knows that men, and that incomparable the greatest number of them, will never come up unto, and so must of necessity perish of ever ? Yea, but our adversaries say, this cannot be, neither doth this impeach the freedom of pardon : for it is certain, that God doth prescribe these things, and yet he pardoneth freely ; and it would altogether unbecome the holy God, to pardon Sinners that continue impenitent, and so live and die. But doth not the Socinian see, that he hath hereby given away his cause which he contendeth for ; if a prescription of sundry things to the Sinner himself without which he shall not be pardoned, doth not at all impeach, as they say, the freedom of pardon, but God may be said freely to pardon Sin notwithstanding it; how shall the receiving of satisfaction by another, nothing at all being required of the sinner, have the least appearance of any such thing? If the freedom of forgiveness consists in such a boundless notion as these men imagine, it is certain that the prescribing faith and repentance unto sinners antecedently to their participation of it is much more evidently contrary unto it, than the receiving satisfaction from another, who is not to be pardoned, can to any appear to be. Secondly. If it be contrary to the holiness of God, to pardon any, without requiring faith, repentance, and obedience in them, as it is indeed; let not these persons be offended, if we believe him, when he so frequently declares it, that it was so, to remit sin, without the fulfilling his law, and satisfying of his justice. Dr Owen.

METAPHOR.

DISPARITY.

IV. Oft-times, nay, most commonly, men, as soon as some Debts are paid, or satisfaction made by the Debtor, or his surety, the Debtor may demand a discharge or acquittance immediately from the said Debts, &c.

ment, must immediately, and ipso facto ensue, it is not of the nature of every solution or satisfaction, that deliverance must ipso facto follow. And the reason of it is, because this satisfaction by succedaneous substitution of one to undergo punishment for another, must be founded in a voluntary compact and agreement; for there is required unto it a relaxation of the law, though not as unto punishment to be inflicted, yet as unto the person to be punished. And it is otherwise in personal guilt, than in pecuniary debts: in these, the Debt itself is fully intended, and the person obliged with reference thereunto; in the other, the person is firstly and principally under the obligation. And therefore when the pecuniary Debt is paid, by whomsoever it be paid, the obligation of the person himself unto payment ceaseth ipso facto: but in things criminal, the guilty person himself being firstly, immediately, and intentionally under the obligation unto punishment, when there is introduced by compact a vicarious solution, in substitution of another to suffer, though he suffer the same absolutely, which the person should have done for whom he suffers; yet because of the acceptance of his person to suffer, which might have been refused, and could not be admitted without some relaxation of the law, deliverance of the guilty person cannot answer ipso facto, but by the intervention of the terms fixed in the covenant or agreement, for an admittance of the substitution.

IV. But it is not so here, in reference to this Debt; for though Christ, as our Surety, hath made a full compensation to the law and justice of God, yet Sinners are not immediately acquitted; neither doth it follow, saith the doctor, that on the supposition and satisfaction, pleaded for the freedom, pardon, and acquitment of persons originally guilty, and liable to punishment,

It appears from what hath been said, that in this matter of Sin being called a Debt, and of satisfaction, Sin is not to be considered as such a Debt, and God a Creditor, and the law as an obligation to the payment of that Debt, as some men seem to run it: but Sin is a transgression of the law, and thereby obnoxious and liable to the punishment constituted in it, and by it answerable unto the justice and holiness of another; and God, as the infinitely holy and righteous Author of that law, and supreme Governor of all mankind, according to the sanction and tenor of it. "The substitution of Christ was merely voluntary on the part of God, and of himself, undertaking to be sponser, to answer for the Sins of men, by undergoing the punishment due unto them. That to this end there was a relaxation of the law, as to the persons that were to suffer, though not as to what was to be suffered: without the former, the substitution mentioned could not have been admitted: and on supposition of the latter, the sufferings of Christ could not have had the nature of punishment, properly so called: for punishment relates to the justice and righteousness in government of him that inflicts it; and this the justice of God doth not but by law. Nor could the law be any way satisfied or fulfilled by the suffering of Christ, if antecedently thereunto, its obligation, or power of obligation unto the penalty constituted in its sanction unto Sin, was relaxed, dissolved, or dispensed withal. Nor was it agreeable to justice, nor would the nature of the things themselves admit of it, that another punishment should be inflicted on Christ, than what we had deserved; nor could our Sin be the impulsive cause of his death, nor could we have had any benefit thereby." Dr. Owen. See Surety.

INFERENCES.

I. THIS shows what the nature of Sin is, together with the woeful and miserable condition of man thereby. How few know, or are sensible, how far they are in Debt, and what fearful danger they are in hereby every moment.

II. It may raise our hearts to admire the grace and goodness of God in sending Christ to satisfy for our sins.

III. Let us also from hence be stirred up to cry for pardon and forgiveness of our Sins: "Forgive us our Debts."

Quest. What is it we desire of God in this petition?

Ans. 1. We pray, that God would not require or exact payment and satisfaction for our Sins of us; for if he should pass by millions of Sins, and set down but one hundred, nay, come so low as to charge but ten, nay, forgive us all save only one, that one would sink us down to the lowest hell. Should God require us to make satisfaction but for one evil thought, we should be utterly undone.

2. We pray, saith Mr. Burges, that God would lay our Sins upon Christ, or accept of satisfaction in and through him; for seeing, saith he, God hath declared his will, that man shall die for sin; if we should pray, that he would absolutely forgive our Sins, it would be to pray that he might be unjust. Therefore in this prayer thus we may argue, O Lord, we call not upon thee to repeal any threatening, to nullify thy Word, to become unjust: but thy wisdom hath so found out a way, that we may be pardoned, and thou satisfied, &c.

3. We pray, that through Christ's atonement, or the propitiation of his blood, our daily Sins and infirmities may be forgiven us, and we kept in a state of justification; for if our former Sins should be forgiven, and not our present and future, our case would be desperate; for Sin, like Sampson's hair, though cut, it will grow again. And as we Sin daily, so we ought to pray for pardon, through Christ's mediation; for Sin is not actually forgiven, before committed, nor before we have the true sense and sorrow of it upon our hearts. Where God gives remission, he gives a broken heart, Acts v. 31.

4. We pray, that God would account or impute Christ's righteousness unto us for pardon.

5. We pray for the sense and feeling of the grace and blessing of pardon in our own souls; for it is one thing to be pardoned, and another thing to know, or have the feeling sense of it in ourselves. We are in this case, saith an eminent person, like some heir or prince, that hath many temporal dignities, but by reason of his infancy doth not understand it. We pray principally, 1. For the real exhibition of pardon; and, 2. For the declaration and manifestation of it in our consciences. Some say, that God, from all eternity, hath pardoned Sins past, present, and to come; and that when we believe or repent, our Sins are pardoned declaratively only to our consciences! but now, I say, we pray not only for assurance and manifestation of pardon, but for pardon itself. The reasons are:

(1.) We might by the same rule interpret all the other petitions, in regard of declaration only, and not of exhibition. When we pray for sanctification and glorification, in that petition, "thy kingdom come," it might be as well said, that we are sanctified and glorified from all eternity; and therefore, when we are saved and glorified in heaven, this is but to our sense and feeling. And thus men make the decrees of God to be from eternity, with the execution of them in time. How ridiculous would it be to expound that petition, "Give us this day our daily bread," thus! viz., not that God should give us our daily bread, but make us to see and feel that he hath given it to us.

(2.) A second is from the nature of forgiveness itself; when Sin is pardoned, it is said to be blotted out; now can any think, that blotting out is only in a man's own conscience and feeling? It is more immediately out of God's book, it being a metaphor taken from blotting or crossing Debts out of a book of accounts, &c., and not only the guilt that lies upon our hearts; therefore these are very separable the one from the other. A man may feel no weight or burden of Sin upon him, and yet it stands in red characters in God's book: and on the contrary, a Sin may be blotted out there, yet be very heavy and terrible in a man's feeling and apprehension. So Sin pardoned is said to be covered or hid, not in respect of us, as if it were taken from our sight, but from God's sight; and he is said to cast our sins behind his back.

(3.) This explication, as the whole sense of the petition, would overthrow all other scriptures, which make no pardon of sin to be, but where the subject hath such qualifications as this in the text, viz., forgiving others; &c.

(4.) This which these men say, would make no difference between Sins repented of, and Sins not repented. Where do we read, that God doth, like the Pope, antedate his pardon, before the Sin be committed, or repented of? Burges.

6. We pray, that as God doth forgive Sin, so also he would release the punishment, and take away the wrath that doth belong to it. It is but a mockery which Papists make about pardon, as if indeed God did pardon the Sin, but not the punishment; that abides still, and we must work out a release from that by our ourselves. It is true, God, though he doth pardon Sin, yet he may grievously afflict; but these are only fatherly chastisements, and not judicial punishments. But in this prayer we desire, as the Sin is removed, so also whatsoever troubles, afflictions, or chastisements do remain, they likewise may be taken away; that as the gulf of hell is removed, so every cloud also may be dispelled.

7. We pray not only for pardon, but also for the gracious concomitants and effects of it, which are peace with God, and joy in the Holy Ghost, &c., Rom. i. 5.

From the whole we may infer,

I. That man is a guilty Sinner, nay, that believers are not without Sin, as they are in themselves; man, as considered in his fallen state, is accused and charged by the law, and must plead; and he cannot plead, not guilty, being under the impeachment of his own conscience, Ille noscens se damnat quo peccat die. This might have been the plea of Adam before his fall, but none else, 1 Kings viii. 46, "There is no man that sinneth not," Eccl. vii. 20, 1 John i. 8. Our plea then must be, guilty; and in this case we must plead mercy for the sake of mercy, or mercy for the sake of Christ, or upon the account of the satisfaction he hath made.

II. There is no pleading mercy, for the sake of mercy, for, as one well observes, that were not to plead, but to beg; nor were it at all to be justified, but merely pardoned; it were to be dealt with alone upon the score of grace, and not at all upon the score of righteousness, whereas justification is an act of justice rather than mercy: though it is true, in the salvation of sinners, both grace and justice, as hath been showed, meet together; we are both pardoned and justified. God is, saith one, as merciful as we can desire, and yet as righteous as himself can desire; there is the freest grace, and the fullest justice. As God pardons Sin, he displays his mercy; as he justifies us from Sin, he manifests his righteousness.

Pardon is free to us, but it cost Christ dear; there is a mystery in the remission of Sin; it is not forgiven without atonement, satisfaction, and reconciliation made for it by Jesus Christ. Which appears.

1. In that those who are pardoned, are said to be justified through him, Acts xiii. 39.

2. Because Christ is said to bear our Sins, or the punishment of them, 1 Pet. ii. 24, Isa. liii. 4—6. He died in our stead, for that is the meaning of his bearing our Sin, as might be largely showed from the Old Testament, where we read of persons that God said should bear their own Sins.

3. Because the scripture saith, "Without shedding of blood there is no remission," Heb. ix. 22. And that it is through that one offering of Jesus Christ, that we are both pardoned and accepted, "Redemption, and forgiveness of Sin, is through his blood," Rom. iii. 25.

4. Because Christ is said to reconcile us, and pacify the wrath of God for our Sins, 2 Cor. v. 19, 20, Rom. v. 8.

5. Because Christ is said to be bought with a price; "Christ gave himself a ransom for many," 1 Cor. vi. 20, 1 Pet. i. 18, Matt. xx. 28.

6. Because he is said to be made unto us, "Wisdom and righteousness," &c. called, "The Lord, our righteousness." Our justification consisted in the non-imputation of Sin, and the imputation of his righteousness, that so salvation might be wholly of grace, and all boasting excluded.

SIN A HEAVY BURDEN.

"For my iniquities are gone over my head as a heavy Burden, they are two heavy for me," Psal. xxxviii. 4.

"Let us lay aside every weight, and the sin that doth so easily beset us," &c., Heb. xii. 1.

WEIGHT, Burden, signifies several things; (1.) The greatness of heavenly glory, 2 Cor. iv. 17. (2.) Trouble, or the wrath of wicked men, Prov. xxvii. 3, which often presseth down the godly. (3.) That which is ponderous, things, words, or matters of moment, in opposition to such things, or words, that are light, airy, &c. (4.) Sin, because it presseth down and is grievous to be born, &c.

Note, Sin is a great weight or heavy Burden.

SIMILE.

I. A weight or Burden that bears hard, or lies heavy upon the breast of a person, ready to crush him to pieces, is very grievous, worse to be borne, than a weight upon the legs or arms, &c.

that are tender, or of a soft substance, how sorely will it mar and crush that? So a stony-hearted Sinner, though he hath great mountains of Sin and guilt lying upon him, he complains not, he is, alas! insensible, and to use the apostle's words, past feeling, his heart being like a rock, or the nether millstone; but a poor saint whose heart is tender, God having taken away the heart of stone, and given him a heart of flesh, he is sensible of this Burden, his soul and conscience cannot bear it, he cries out in great anguish and horror of spirit, Eph. v. 19, Ezek. xxxvi. 26, Psal. xxxvii. 4.

II. Some weights and Burdens laid upon some men, are so heavy that they cannot be borne, the strongest man cannot stand under them, &c.

this weight was laid upon the Lord Jesus whom God made strong for himself, how did it crush him, and cause him, if I may so say, to stagger and sweat under it, as if it had been great drops of blood falling down to the ground. It is said his soul was exceeding sorrowful, even unto death, and that he went forward and fell on the ground, Luke xxii. 44. "He bore our Sins upon his own body on the tree." O what a mercy was it, that God laid help upon one who was mighty; though he was able to bear this weight, yet how did it make him to cry out, under the Burden of it, "Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me," &c., Matt. xxvi. 39. There is a two-fold weight in Sin. 1. As it hinders our justification. 2. As it hinders our sanctification. The first respects the punishment that is due to it; and that weight Jesus Christ bore for us, which none was able to do besides himself.

III. A Heavy weight or Burden laid upon a man that is to run a race, is very troublesome, and a great impediment to him, and therefore ought to be cast off, &c. He is a very foolish man that having a long race to run, will carry a great weight or Burden about him: can such expect to win the prize?

SIMILE.

I. SOME heavy weights or Burdens, though they cannot be

PARALLEL.

I. Sin is a weight or Burden, that lies heavy upon the soul of an enlightened Christian, and this is the cause it is so grievous, it presseth down the powers of the noble and superior part of the creature. Lay a weight upon a stone, and that will bear it, and not break or yield under it; but if a great and mighty weight be laid upon such things that are tender, or of a soft substance, how sorely will it mar and crush that? So a stony-hearted Sinner, though he hath great mountains of Sin and guilt lying upon him, he complains not, he is, alas! insensible, and to use the apostle's words, past feeling, his heart being like a rock, or the nether millstone; but a poor saint whose heart is tender, God having taken away the heart of stone, and given him a heart of flesh, he is sensible of this Burden, his soul and conscience cannot bear it, he cries out in great anguish and horror of spirit, Eph. v. 19, Ezek. xxxvi. 26, Psal. xxxvii. 4.

II. Sin is such a Burden or weight that no man is able to bear, it will make the stoutest heart to ache, and the strongest back to stoop; it made David, that mighty man of God, to cry out, "I am troubled, I am bowed down greatly," &c., "All my bones are broken," Psal. xxxviii. 6. Nay, when this weight was laid upon the Lord Jesus whom God made strong for himself, how did it crush him, and cause him, if I may so say, to stagger and sweat under it, as if it had been great drops of blood falling down to the ground. It is said his soul was exceeding sorrowful, even unto death, and that he went forward and fell on the ground, Luke xxii. 44. "He bore our Sins upon his own body on the tree." O what a mercy was it, that God laid help upon one who was mighty; though he was able to bear this weight, yet how did it make him to cry out, under the Burden of it, "Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me," &c., Matt. xxvi. 39. There is a two-fold weight in Sin. 1. As it hinders our justification. 2. As it hinders our sanctification. The first respects the punishment that is due to it; and that weight Jesus Christ bore for us, which none was able to do besides himself.

III. So Sin greatly hinders the saints of God in their spiritual race, it is unto them like a Heavy Burden, and therefore ought to be cast off by them. "Let us lay aside every weight, and the Sin that doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us," Heb. xii. 1. Sin will soon cause a Christian to faint, if he throw it not off by true repentance. See Runner.

DISPARITY.

I. BUT Sin is such a kind of Burden, that it cannot be borne, either whole or apart; that is borne when they are bound up or tied together, yet if severed, some part of them may be borne and easily carried.

SIMILE.

1. For the least Sin being against an infinite God, deserves an infinite punishment.

2. The least Sin being a breach of the law, brings a soul under wrath, and the curse thereof.

3. The least is done away without Christ's blood, nothing but that only can wash it away, or cleanse from it. Now that which makes Sin to be so great a burden to a child of God is, (1.) Because it sets God against the soul, it makes him to become a man's enemy, and to fight against him, &c. (2.) Because it is a Burden unto God himself, hence he cries out, "I am pressed under you, as a cart is pressed with sheaves," Amos ii. 13. Nothing is more opposite to God than Sin, or is more loathsome to him. (3.) Because it wounds, bruises, and lays the soul itself a bleeding. (4.) Because it brings the soul under the dreadful wrath of an angry God, yea binds down under everlasting wrath, causing a final separation from God and Christ for ever.

DISPARITY.

INFERENCES.

I. WHAT insensible creatures are unconverted Sinners!

II. Moreover, what a sore and grievous thing is it to have this burden laid upon the soul!

III. It may stir up such who feel this weight, to cast it off, by repentance of faith: remember Christ hath borne it for thee, that thou mightest go free. "The Lord hath laid on him the iniquities of us all," Isa. liii. 6.

IV. It shows us what a wonderful mercy it is to be freed from this burden. Saints are delivered from the power and dominion, guilt and condemnation of it, through the Lord Jesus Christ, Rom. vi. 14.

SIN A STING.

"The Sting of death is Sin," 1 Cor. xv. 56.

PARALLELS.

I. DEATH is like a venomous serpent, that hath a cruel and tormenting Sting, and this Sting is Sin.

II. The Sting of some serpents, in the flesh, is very painful, it makes such to cry out exceedingly: so such who feel themselves Stung with Sin, cry out, like as those did in Acts ii. 36. The pain and torment of a wounded conscience is intolerable, as many can experience, and the history of Francis Spira abundantly shows.

III. The venom or sting of some serpents is mortal, it killeth the body: so Sin, that venom of death and the devil, killeth both body and soul.

IV. If a serpent biteth or Stingeth any one part, the venom and contagion spreadeth over all the body, and destroyeth the whole man: so the Sting and poison of Sin, which entered by one man's offence, hath infected and killed all the lump of mankind, Rom. v. 15, 18. Moreover, he that harboureth but one Sin in his bosom, it will destroy his whole soul, if this Sting be but in his tongue, it is like the poison of asps, his life must go for it, without speedy help.

V. No salve or medicine could heal the bodies of those who were stung with those fiery serpents in the wilderness, till they looked up to the brazen serpent, no physician on earth could cure them: so no work of man can cure the biting of death and the devil, or Sting of Sin, but the venom thereof rageth and reigneth, tormenting the conscience, until the soul looks up by a true and lively faith to Jesus Christ.

VI. As the Sting of a serpent must be pulled out, before the person stung can be cured; so Sin must be lifted, pulled, or worked out of the heart and life of a Sinner, by the Spirit, before he can be either healed or saved.

VII. As some serpents cannot hurt when they have lost their Sting, so death cannot hurt a soul, whose Sin is taken away by Jesus Christ.

SIN A WOUND.

"My Wounds stink and are corrupt," &c., Psal. xxviii. 5.

"But a wounded spirit who can bear?" Prov. xviii. 14.

"And bound up his wounds," &c., Luke x. 34.

SIN wounds the soul of a sinner, a church or nation. When Ephraim saw his sickness, and Judah saw his Wounds, &c., Hos. v. 13. The word translated Wound in this place is from a word which signifieth colligavit, he hath bound up, either because of the corruption of the body that is gathereth together, or because of the binding of it up with clothes.

PARALLELS.

I. Wounds are either new, which we commonly call green Wounds, or else old Wounds: now sinners have an old wound upon them, which is like a stinking ulcer, which they received above five thousand years ago: in the garden of Eden, when Adam was wounded by his sin, in eating of the forbidden fruit, all his posterity were wounded in him, Rom. v. 12. Also every sinner hath many fresh wounds upon him.

II. Some Wounds are venomous, as the biting or cruel sting of some poisonous serpent, &c. Sin is a venomous Wound, it is the sting of a serpent, the old serpent. See Sting.

III. Some persons have been full of Wounds, wounded from the crown of the head to the soles of the feet, they are, as it were, nothing but Wounds: so sinners are full of Wounds, every Sin is like a Wound, or makes a Wound in the soul: so many Sins a man is guilty of, so many Wounds he hath in his inward man. Every faculty of their soul is wounded: (1.) Their judgment is corrupt. (2.) Their understanding darkened, full of vanity, blindness, incredulity, enmity, and unteachableness. (3.) The will, that noble faculty, is wounded, and fearfully depraved; the mind of a man being corrupt, the will must needs be corrupt: as to a man that hath his palate possessed with a vicious humour, every thing seems bitter according to the humour; so the understanding, reckoning the ways of God both enmity and folly, the will acts accordingly. The will of wicked men acts cross and contrary to God and his holy will in all things, they resist and fight against him, are "not subject to his law, neither indeed can be," Rom. viii. 7. There is much pride, inconstancy, stubbornness, and disobedience in the will, "Our tongues are our own, and who is Lord over us?" Psal. xii. 4. (4.) Their affections are wounded, and very filthy, men naturally love the creature, more than God, nay they love their lusts, horrid Sins, and uncleanness, above the Majesty of heaven. The apostle, giving a character of some men, saith, they are "Lovers of pleasures more than Lovers of God," 1 Tim. iii. 4. (5.) The memory is wounded, being forgetful of that which is good, and like a leaking vessel: men are ready to remember, what God bids them forget, but forget that which he commands them to remember; they are too apt to think of injuries; nay, may be one injury will be thought on more than many kindnesses and years of good service: they are subject enough to remember trifles and vain stories, whereas a profitable sermon, or wholesome counsel, is forgotten, &c. (6.) The conscience of a sinner is wounded with Sin, though not for it, or in a deep and real sense of the evil of it. "Unto them that are defiled and unbelieving, is nothing pure, but their minds and consciences are corrupt," Tit. i. 15. The conscience, which should, like Job's last messenger, bring us word that all the rest of the faculties are dead, i. e., wounded, and corrupted also, is maimed, dumb, or misguided, or grievously distempered, that when it should accuse, it excuseth; it should act the part of a faithful register, to set all our Sins down exactly, but it falsifies in this, and, as saith Dr. Preston, when it should set down hundreds, it sets down fifties, when it should restrain from evil, it is almost asleep, and lets the sinner alone: whom it should condemn, for want of light it acquits: and as a man is wounded in every faculty of his soul or rational part, so likewise he is in his sensitive part: his eyes are full of adultery, his lips are unclean, his throat is like an open sepulchre, the poison of asps is under his tongue, his ears are deaf, and dull of hearing that which is good, Rom. iii. 13.

IV. As some Wounds a man receives are very deep and reach to the heart ; so Sin makes a deep Wound ; man is not only wounded in every part, but very deeply wounded : " This is thy wickedness, because it is bitter, because it reacheth to thine heart," Jer. iv. 18. " Their heart deviseth wickedness," &c. " Every imagination of the thoughts of his heart is only evil continually," Gen. vi. 5. Hence saith God, " Wash thine heart from wickedness," &c. Jer. iv. 14.

V. Some Wounds are corrupt, filthy, and very loathsome, the Wounds sin makes in the soul, are very filthy and abominable, " From the sole of the foot, even to the head, there is no soundness in it, but Wounds and bruises, and putrifying sores : they have not been bound up, neither mollified with ointment," Isa. i. 6. " My Wounds stink and are corrupt."

VI. Some Wounds smart and are very painful, causing the patient to cry out in great anguish : Sin makes such a Wound in the soul, that it causeth such who have their spiritual feeling to cry out ; the pain is so great, that a Christian cannot, without divine help, bear up under the smart and torture of it ; " I have roared," saith the Psalmist, " by reason of the disquietness of my heart ; Lord, all my desire is before thee, and my groaning is not hid from thee," Psal. xxxviii. 8, 9.

VII. Some sores or Wounds are infectious, like plague-sores, or the leprosy, they infect the clothes, and garments of the wounded and diseased person, and not only so, but the very house where he dwells, and the people also that come near him, or converse with him, Lev. xiii. 2—6. Sin is of an infectious nature, no plague more catching and infectious, than the sore or plague of Sin, it defiles all a man's best actions, and makes all our righteousness like filthy rags. If ye daily converse with, or are frequently in the company of some wicked men, it is a thousand to one if you are not the worse for it ; " Who can touch pitch, and not be defiled therewith ?" We are commanded to keep ourselves unspotted from the world ; it is a hard matter to keep clear of those spots and pollutions wicked men are defiled with. Sin is of such an infectious nature that it hath corrupted the earth, " The earth is defiled under the inhabitants thereof," &c., Isa. xxiv. 5. Nay, some conceive, the Sin of man hath darkened, in some respect, the glorious heavens, with the sun, moon, and stars, that they shine not so splendidly as they did at the first, Job xxv. 5.

VIII. Some Wounds are of a festering and spreading nature, whilst the patient is under cure, they grow worse and worse : the Wounds or Sins of some men, though they are under cure, i. e., sit under a powerful and soul-searching ministry, fester as it were ; they, instead of growing better, grow worse and worse, like as the apostle speaks of deceivers, 2 Tim. iii. 15.

IX. Some sores, Wounds, and scabs, bring shame upon such who have them : Sin is such a sore, and so hateful a scab, that it causeth shame and confusion of face. Sin is the shame of any people, and yet how do some glory in it ? " They glory in their shame !" Phil. iii. 19. Sin is the foul disease ; the hurt, nay all the hurt, sorrow, and shame sinners meet with, came in originally by Sin, by yielding to the devil, and by adulterating from God : no running sore, no scab, or no breaking out in the flesh like Sin in the heart and life of a sinner.

X. Some Wounds are mortal : Sin makes a mortal Wound ; " The soul that sins shall die," Ezek. xviii. And, " Unless ye believe that I am he, ye shall die in your Sins," John viii. 21. " If ye live after the flesh ye shall die," &c., Rom. viii. 13. I do not say there is no help, nor cure for these spiritual sores and Wounds ; yet I must say they are incurable, as to man, no man can find by all his skill and art any healing medicine. And upon this account the Lord said of Judah and Israel, " Their wound was incurable," they had brought themselves into such a condition, that none could help them, nor bring them out ; " O Israel, thy destruction is of thyself, but in me is thy help." Indeed some men are so desperately and dangerously wounded, that there is little hope of them, they have all the signs of ruin and eternal death upon them incurable.

Quest. It may be you will say, when may the state of a person be said to be desperate, and almost, if not altogether, past hope, or wounded even unto death ?

Answ. 1. If a man sins, and is sorely wounded, and yet continues in his sinful course, the sting is not pulled, as it were, out of his flesh, I mean out of his heart, nor is he willing it should ; there is little hopes at present of this man. Can a wound be healed and yet the venom sting stick fast in him ? A continual course or custom in Sin, though they be small sins comparatively, may prove deadly.

2. When Sin is in the affection it is dangerous. You know when the heart is wounded and corrupt, there is no hopes of life. If in times of infection you can keep it from the heart you are well enough. Physicians, though they have medicines to keep infection from the heart, yet they have no medicine to cure the heart, if once the distemper gets into it. When a man closes with his Sin, likes it, loves it, and makes provision to fulfil the lusts of it, it is a dangerous sign.

3. When the Wound spreads and increaseth, or a person grows more vain, carnal, and filthy, it is a sad sign. Some men have been for a time cautious, and somewhat tender, their consciences have restrained them from yielding unto Sin, but afterwards they came to grow more hard and bold, and have adventured on this and the other evil, and so by degrees from little Sins make no conscience of greater, till they are notorious in Wickedness, and this after common illuminations; this is a sign they are near hell.

4. When a person is sorely and grievously wounded, and yet is insensible, does not cry out, nor feel any pain, it is a sad sign. Come to some wounded persons, and ask them how they do; they will answer you, very well, I ail nothing, then relations begin to weep: so some sinners, through a custom of sin, grow insensible, they are past feeling, they are not only without pain themselves, but laugh at such who complain of their sores upon the head, and mourn for their sin; of this man you may write in red letters, "Lord have mercy upon him."

5. When a man is dangerously wounded, and nothing that is given him will go down, neither food nor physic; or if he doth take it, yet it will not stay with him, it is a very bad sign: so when a sinner refuseth all good counsel that is given him, and instead of vomiting up, by true repentance, his sin, he vomiteth up the physic and food of his soul that should do him good, and despises all reproof, hardening himself against it, he is near to destruction, Prov. xxviii. 1.

6. And lastly, When a man is wounded, and that balsam, means, or medicine, that seldom fails to work a cure in others, yet will do him no good, but contrariwise, whilst in cure, and under the best means, he grows worse and worse, there is little hopes of him: so when a sinner under a powerful and soul-saving ministry, and divers sore afflictions, is not at all reformed, but grows worse and worse, his condition is bad; it may be that sermon that works no change at all in him, hath tended, through the mercy of God, to the conversion of several souls who were as sorely wounded as he. If a physician gives the best medicine he has, and lays on a most sovereign plaister, and yet the patient saith, sir, that which you prescribed hath done me no good; I wonder, saith he, it seldom fails me, I fear your condition, I must give up, I have done what I can for you, the Lord pity your soul, you are no man for this world; it is an argument that Wound, or sickness will be unto death, when the best preaching, the best means that can be made use of, will not work upon a man's heart; he is under losses and afflictions, and divers melting providences, but nothing will do.

INFERENCES.

I. Is Sin a Wound! or doth it wound the soul, wound the state, nation, and Church of God? We may then infer from hence the folly of men and women who love and hug their Sin. Wilt thou, O sinner, hug a serpent in thy bosom, that strives to sting thee to death? What fools are wicked men!

II. Let us learn from hence to bewail the condition of our sinful relations, let the husband mourn over his unbelieving wife, and the wife mourn over the unbelieving husband; fathers grieve for their unconverted and wounded children, and children grieve for their wounded and unconverted parents, &c. What are they that thou lovest so dearly, and who lie in thy bosom mortally wounded, and wilt thou not be troubled for them? What not one sigh nor tear come from thee for them? Be astonished, O heavens! What a hard heart hast thou.

III. Seek out for help, you that are unconverted, delay not; and let such who are healed, do what they can get to help and cure for their friends. If a husband, a wife, a father, a child, or brother, be dangerously sick, or wounded externally, how ready are you to enquire for some skilful physician, or surgeon! and what speed will you make! and will you not be as tender and as careful of their souls?

IV. Take heed you do not draw others into Sin. What not only Wound thy own soul, but be cruel also to the souls of others! Wilt thou murder thyself, and murder thy friend too?

V. What blind wretches are they that make a mock at Sin? See Fools.

VI. Let it be also matter of caution to all, to take heed they rest not satisfied with slight healing, "They have healed the hurt of the daughter of my people slightly," &c., Jer. viii. 11. This may be done many ways.

(1.) Some rest satisfied, and lick themselves whole with the thoughts of federal holiness, think they are in covenant with God, through the faith of their parents; thus the Jews, "We are Abraham's seed, we have Abraham to our Father," Matt. iii. 9. My parents were godly; and so they might, and yet thou a child of the devil, and be damned for all that.

(2.) Some fly to their godly education; but that will never heal their Wounds; it is not what a godly family thou wast brought up in, and what good instruction thou hadst, but what thou art, and what a change there is in thee, what faith and fear of God is there wrought in thy soul?

(3.) Others apply the mercy of God, when they begin to feel conscience to terrify them, and their Wounds appear, but never consider his justice. Remember God is gracious and merciful, &c., but will "in no wise clear the guilty," Exod. xxxiv. 6.

(4.) Others trust to a partial reformation of life, they are other men to what they were once. Soul, it is not reformation, or leaving all manner of gross, scandalous Sins, but a change of heart and regeneration thou must seek after.

(5.) Some apply the promises of God to sinners, before their wounds were ever lanced, or their sores laid open, and the corruption let out: this is but skimming over the sore, and to leave it to fester and rankle inwardly; the proud flesh must with some corroding plaister be taken down, thou wantest thorough humiliation for Sin.

(6.) Many satisfy themselves, because they are not such great sinners as some are. Remember, "I tell ye, nay, except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish," Luke xiii. 3, 5.

(7.) Some fly to their duties, they sin and are wounded, and they think prayer will make them whole.

(8.) Some boast of their knowledge and experiences, &c., they can discourse and talk well, nay, and will tell you, they are members of the Church too: and this may be, and yet they die of their Wounds, and go to hell. O take heed you are not slightly healed!

Quest. Well, but it may be you will say, What should we do to be thoroughly healed?

Ans. 1. There is but one Physician can heal these Wounds; none but the Lord Christ only has the healing medicine; his blood is the balsam, which thou must apply by faith. And if thou wouldest have a perfect cure, thou must be put to pain: he that would be healed, must suffer his wounds to be lanced, and searched to the bottom.

2. Take the Physician's counsel, and carefully follow his directions: come to him presently, whilst it is to-day, or thou art a dead man.

3. If it be so, that he says, thy right-hand must be cut off, bear the pain; or thy right-eye must be pulled out, submit to him. Whatsoever is dear to thee that hinders the cure, thou must deny thyself of.

4. A purge thou must take, or thy Wounds cannot be healed; the evil humours, or the filth and corruption that is in thy heart, must by the Spirit of grace be purged out.

5. Thou must become a new creature: "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God," John iii. 3.

SIN A PLAGUE.

"What prayer and supplication soever be made by any man, or by all thy people Israel, which shall know every man the Plague of his own heart," &c., 1 Kings viii. 38.

"And it be in the skin of the flesh like the Plague of leprosy," &c., Lev. xiii. 2—6.

By the Plague of leprosy, all expositors agree, was represented the hateful nature of Sin.

Note, Sin may fitly be compared to the Plague, to the Plague of the leprosy, &c.

P A R A L L E L S .

I. The leprosy proceedeth from poisoned and corrupted humours in the body : so sin is nothing else but the poisonous and corrupted humours of the soul.

II. The Plague of the leprosy spreads over every part of the body : so Sin hath spread itself over the whole lump of mankind, and over every faculty of the soul.

III. No disease is more stinking and hateful to men than the leprosy ; so nothing is more abominable and detestable in the sight of God, and sincere Christians, than Sin.

IV. No disease is more contagious and infectious than the leprosy ; the Plague of the pestilence, saith a divine, is not so infectious as the Plague of the leprosy : it infecteth houses, walls, vessels, garments, &c. So nothing is so infectious as Sin. See Sin a Wound.

V. The Plague of the leprosy separated the infected person from the fellowship of all men, whatever they were, if incurable, although kings ; they were utterly and for ever excluded the host, as Uzziah, neither were they admitted to come into the temple, to join in holy things, 2 Kings xv. 5. So Sin unrepented of, separateth from God and Christ, and from the fellowship of the saints ; it shuts souls out of the church, nay, out of heaven itself.

VI. No disease is more painful and mortal, or more incurable ; therefore they were to put on mournful apparel and garments ; it was so rarely and seldom cured, that most carried it to their graves ; so Sin is very painful and tormenting, as we before have showed.

VII. The symptoms of the leprosy agree with the symptoms and effects of sin.

1. There is a debility and weakness of all parts in them that have this disease, because the spirits are exhausted : so Sin makes feeble, weakens, and debilitates the powers of the soul. Hence Jacob, when he blessed Reuben, cries out, "as weak and unstable as water, because of his sin." Saints have weak hands, and feeble knees oft-times hereby.

2. There is in a leper a tumour and swelling in the flesh : so Sin swells a man up in pride, vain-glory, and self-conceitedness.

3. There is in them, saith my author, a burning thirst, through the adust and burnt blood by melancholy, whereof it ariseth : so sin causeth an inflammation and burning of anger, of lust, and vehement thirst after the world, preferment, pleasures, riches, &c. See Poison.

4. There is in them filthy, putrid matter, breaking forth in a most loathsome manner : so such as are greatly infected with the Plague of sin, cast forth nothing but horrid pollution. Hence wicked men are likened to the troubled sea, that casts forth miry dirt.

5. They have a hoarse and weak voice : so sinners cannot pray, or if they do, they cannot be heard. "God hears not sinners," John ix. 31.

6. They have a stinking breath and mouth, and therefore they must cover their lips, lest by their breath they should infect others : so sinners have a filthy breath : their mouths are full of unclean and adulterous speeches, belching forth nothing but vile and abominable oaths, cursing, and slanderous accusations against the godly, and sometimes also against one another ; but these seldom cover their lips.

I N F E R E N C E S .

I. WHAT an horrid disease, and Plague of Plagues, is sin ! every man hath a running Plague-sore upon him. Who is it that is not a leper from the womb ? We were all born with this Plague ; we brought it into the world with us. Every man, as he is in himself, may cry out, "unclean, unclean." Sin hath spread itself over us like a leprosy.

II. Wicked men are miserable, whoever they are, if not cured of this Plague. Sin renders a man more hateful to God, than an ugly toad is to us.

III. It may caution saints to shun the company of a vile sinner, and dread sin, and fly from it, as from the Plague. Nothing that sinners touch, but they defile, infect, and taint it, till they are cleansed, whether earthly or heavenly things ; all creature-comforts and actions are unclean to them hereby : "The very ploughing of the wicked is sin," Prov. xxi. 4, yea, the sacraments, prayers, or alms, all is polluted, so long as they are unconverted. "Unto them that are defiled, nothing is pure," &c. Tit. i. 15.

IV. A wicked man can converse with no man, but, as a leper, he infects him by his ill example ; he endangers the lives and souls of men.

V. It may teach the Saints to bless God, and admire his grace, who hath delivered them from the contagion of sin. "But art thou made whole? sin no more," John v. 14.

VI. None but the high-priest pronounced a person clean from the leprosy: so none but Christ can discern our uncleanness, and pronounce us clean, and wholly free from the Plague of sin.

O what is sin? It is a leprosy,
When scripture so compares it, may not I
Call it a Plague, a wound, a loathsome sore,
That doth corrupt and spread the soul all o'er?
Like to an ulcer, or infectious biles,
Which the whole man most woefully defiles.
O how do men fly from the pestilence,
And shall not we learn wisdom now from thence?
Sin is a plague that kills eternally,
All sorts of men, unless they swiftly fly
To Jesus Christ; no medicine will do good,
Nor heal the soul, but this Physician's blood.

SIN COMPARED TO POISON.

"The Poison of Asps is under their tongues," Rom. iii. 13.

Poison of Asps denotes, 1. Sometimes great punishment, Job vi. 4, and xx. 16. "He shall suck the Poison of Asps," &c. 2. Sometimes corrupt doctrine, and heresies, wherewith men poison themselves and followers. Deut. xxxii. 33, "Their wine is the Poison of dragons," i. e., their doctrine; so Ainsworth, Rev. xvii. 2. "With the wine of her fornication." Which intends venom and poison of the devil, the old dragon; or the detestable superstition and idolatry of antichrist, and Church of Rome. 3. It signifies the cruel malice and rage of men.

Note, Sin in the venom or Poison of the serpent, or the old dragon.

PARALLELS.

I. Poison inflames, heats, and, as it were, sets the body on fire: so Sin inflames, heats, and sets, as it were, a man's spirit on fire. What a heat doth the devil put some men in by stirring up their wrath, rage, and malice, against their neighbours!

II. Poison causeth a great and extreme thirst. Gross or dreggish liquor will not quench the fiery thirst of poison; it drinks, saith one, nothing but pure spirits: so Sin stirs up an insatiable desire or thirst after revenge, as also after the pleasures, profits, and honours of this world, which nothing can allay, but the water of life, which Jesus Christ gives, John iv. 14.

III. Poison gets quickly, saith one, to the spirit, it is subtle and spiritfui, and in a very little time will corrupt the whole mass of blood, &c. So Sin in a little time corrupted the whole lump of mankind. Adam had no sooner sinned against God, but the spiritual Poison and venom thereof struck to his heart, corrupting every faculty of his soul, and not only so, but also the souls of all his posterity. See Wounds.

IV. It is noted by Plutarch, that when an asp stings a man, it doth first tickle him, and makes him laugh, till poison by little and little gets to the heart, and then it pains and torments him, more than ever it delighted him before: so doth sin, it may please a little at first: "Though wickedness be sweet in his mouth, though he hide it under his tongue; though he spare it, and forsake it not, but keepeth it still within his mouth: yet his meat in his bowels is turned, it is the gall of asps within him," Job xx. 12—14. Forbidden profits and pleasures are very delightful to carnal men, and many love to be meddling with these poisoning morsels of sin. Many eat that on earth, which they digest in hell. Men must not think to dine and dance with the devil, and then sup with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, in God's kingdom.

V. Poison in a toad or serpent, suits and agrees well with their nature; but poison in a man's stomach makes fearful work, it being of a contrary nature: so Sin in a wicked man, one that hath no spark of true grace in him, seems to be suitable, and agree well with him, his whole nature being so grievously corrupted, and changed into the evil nature thereof, he having used himself so long in sinful ways, that Sin, viz., open profaneness, superstition, and error, is habitual, and become natural to him, as Poison to a toad. Naturalists say, that if a man take a little quantity of Poison at a time, and so accustom himself to it, it will at length become so natural to him, that he may take it as food: even so wicked men, by a continual course and evil custom in Sin, drink it down as pleasant liquor, like as the fish drinks water. But now Sin to a true Christian, is like much Poison in a man's stomach; it is contrary to that new nature, and divine principle, which is wrought in him by the Spirit of God; he cannot bear nor endure it, he hates every false way: "That which I hate that I do," Rom. vii. 15.

VI. Poison is deadly in its own nature, and of a killing and destroying quality, if not timely vomited up, by taking some fit and proper antidote, &c. So Sin, whether fleshly or spiritual, viz., sensual debauchery, or heresy, will kill and destroy all wherever it is, both body and soul, eternally, except by true repentance it be vomited up. Though men take it down as sweet wine, and are not presently sensible of any harm; yet at last it will bite like a serpent, and sting like an adder, Prov. xxiii. 31.

VII. Oil will expel poison, and it is often given to persons who have taken it, to cause them to vomit it up: so the Oil of Gladness, viz., the Spirit of God, is the best antidote in the world, to expel and work out the Poison of Sin in the Soul. See Oil of Gladness, Book II.

INFERENCES.

I. What do Sinners mean? Will they Poison themselves? Are they void of understanding, to take down the Poison of dragons? Will they wilfully murder themselves? What blindness and folly is in their hearts!

II. O how should this stir up the godly to pity wicked men, and to strive, as much as lieth in their power, to prevent their sinning, and endeavour to turn away their wrath!

III. It may also caution believers to take heed of Sin, and of the venom of an evil tongue, as also the Poison of heresy and error.

IV. Let sinners also learn from hence timely to look out for help. O get a fit antidote to save you from this Poison!

Ah! What is Sin? 'Tis Poison in a cup,
That's gilt without, and men do drink it up
Most earnestly, with joy and much delight,
Being pleasant to the carnal appetite.
Sin's sweet to him whose soul is out of taste.
But long, alas! its sweetness will not last.
Sin's sweet to th' flesh, that does it dearly love;
But to the soul it doth rank Poison prove.
Hast thou suck'd this most deadly venom in?
And dost not see thy vital parts begin
To swell? Art Poison'd, soul? Look, look about,
To get an antidote to work it out
Before it be too late; the Poison's strong,
Don't stay a week, twelve hours is too long.
One drachm of grace, mix'd with repenting tears,
The grace of perfect love, that casts our fears,
Mix'd with that faith that kills all unbelief,
Took down with speed, will ease thee of thy grief;
'Twill purge the soul, and work by vomit well,
And all vile dregs of venom 'twill expel.
Unless thou vomit up each dreg, be sure
No hope of life: one Sin will death procure,
Eternal death: repentance is not right,
'Till Sin, nay, every Sin's forsaken quite.
Not only left, but as a poisonous cup,
Thou must it loath, 'tis hateful, spue it up.

SIN A SICKNESS.

"The whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint," &c., Isa. i. 5.

"The whole need not a Physician, but they that are sick," Matt. ix. 12.

SPIRITUAL Sickness is twofold; (1.) To be sick with Sin. (2.) To be Sick of Sin: as Sin wounds the soul, so it makes sick, and this is man's misery; but to be sick of Sin, viz., to be sensible of the evil and cursed nature thereof, this is a mercy.

PARALLELS.

I. THE causes of natural Sickness are divers, sometimes it arises from some inward, and sometimes from some outward cause; to know from whence the distemper grew or did arise is very necessary, whether it be chronic or acute, i. e., that which hath seized on the patient on a sudden, by heats, cold, or from the corruption of the blood, by an infectious air, &c., which an able physician is diligent to pry and search into. Now as touching the Sickness of the soul, it is evident the original cause thereof, was by eating of the forbidden fruit, which surfeited the whole lump of mankind; or, if you please, it was occasioned by poison, by the poison of the old serpent. Deadly poison makes a man very sick, and corrupts the whole mass of blood: and as it is needful to find out, if possible, the cause of Sickness, so it is as necessary to find out the cause of spiritual Sickness; the cause being discovered, the cure is easy. If a man doth not see what his state is, as considered in the first Adam, nor the evil and damning nature of sin in general, nor the particular plague of his own heart, he is in no hopeful way of help and healing.

II. Some Sicknesses or diseases are epidemical: Sin is a Sickness or disease so universal, and a contagion so catching, that none have escaped, nor are totally free from it.

III. Some are so sick that they have no place free: Sin is a disease that afflicts every part, "The whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint," &c., Isa. i. 5.

IV. The distemper which we call the Sickness, or pestilence, is very mortal, and sweeps away thousands: Sin is such a Sickness, no pestilence like it: Sin is the plague of plagues. That which is most opposite to God, is the greatest evil: but Sin is most opposite and contrary to God, and therefore the greatest evil. That which separates man from, and deprives him of the greatest good, must needs be the greatest evil, or the plague of plagues; but Sin doth this, therefore the greatest evil. That which is the greatest judgment to be left unto, is the worst of evils: but it is the greatest judgment in the world, to be left or given up to the lusts of our own hearts; Ergo, &c., When God designs to bring his severest wrath upon a people, or a particular soul, when he resolves to afflict them to the uttermost, he doth not say, I will bring plague, or Sickness, or famine upon them, but, I will deliver them up to their sins. Israel would have none of me, &c., and what then? "So I gave them up to their own heart's lusts," &c., Psal. lxxxi. 11, 12. Thus he gave up the Gentiles to vile affections, Rom. i. 26, 28. That Sickness, plague, or pestilence, that destroys most, that kills millions, which is so infectious, that none among thousands, nay, millions of thousands, can escape, is the plague of plagues; but such a Sickness is Sin. More shall be damned, than shall be saved; nay, but few comparatively enter in at the straight gate, and so find life. Now all that are damned, are damned or destroyed by Sin, and therefore it is the worst of evils. That which kills or destroys body and soul too, is the plague of plagues; but Sin destroys body and soul too: Ergo, Sin is the plague of plagues.

V. Many of those who have the disease we call the Sickness, have spots upon them, which are of two sorts, one of which are called the tokens; and when they appear, they look upon themselves as dead men: so Sin, this spiritual plague and Sickness of the soul, marks some men out for eternal death: "Their spot, saith the Lord, is not the spot of my children," Deut. xxxii. 5; that is, their Sin is not a Sin of infirmity, such as appear upon the children of God. Any spot is bad, but some are worse, very bad, they are deadly spots, they have the tokens of death and wrath upon them.

1. The Sin or spot of a godly man is rather a scar or wound that is healed, or almost healed: but Sin in some of the ungodly, is like a rotten, putrifying sore in the flesh.

2. The spots of the godly are not so contagious or infectious as the Sins or spots of the wicked. The Sins of the ungodly make their very persons and prayers loathed and hateful in God's sight; now God, though he hates the Sins of his own children, yet he loves their persons, Psal. cix. 7.

3. Sin in a saint is his sorrow, it is that which he hates, it wounds and grieves his soul, he is sick of his sin, Rom. vii. 3, but the wicked love their Sin. Sin is in a godly man's conversation, and that is his trouble; but Sin is in a wicked man's affection, which renders it to be a deadly spot.

4. Sin reigns and predominates in the hearts of the wicked: but Sin, though it may sometimes tyrannize in a saint, yet he obeys it not, he is not the subject or servant of Sin: the one yields and subjects to sin; the other opposes and resists it, every faculty of his soul is set against it; and not only so, but against every Sin.

VI. Sickness brings oft-times utter weakness upon the body: so Sin brings weakness upon the soul: "I am feeble," &c. It makes a Christian very faint. See Leprosy.

VII. Some Sickness is very grievous to be borne: so Sin is grievous to a true Christian, who is made sensible of it.

VIII. A man that finds himself very sick, and like to die, will soon look out for help, or send to a physician: so the soul that is Sin-sick, will seek for help, viz., hasten to Jesus Christ, for none else can cure the sickness of the soul.

INFERENCES.

I. Art thou sick, and ready to die, and insensible of any illness? Doth nothing ail thee? This is sad.

II. Art thou sick, and greatly afflicted? Is thy soul weary of its groanings? Haste to the Physician, go to Christ.

1. The more sick, the more need of physic; the greater sinner thou art, the more need of a Saviour thou hast.

2. The longer thou delayest, the more hard and difficult will thy cure be, besides the danger thou runnest, death may be at thy door.

3. Consider, you must have a cure, and be freed from this Sickness, this stone in the heart, this unbelief, or whatever else the disease be, or else be damned.

4. Christ came from heaven on purpose to be thy Physician: "He came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance," &c., Matt. ix. 13.

5. Soul, let me tell thee, as it was once said to blind Bartimeus, "Be of cheer, Christ calls thee." "Come to me all ye that are weary," Matt. xi. 28, 29.

6. Thou mayest have physic and cure very cheap, Luke x. 30. Though thou hast no money, Christ will do all freely, if thou wilt cast thyself upon him.

7. Christ is able to cure all diseases. Though thou art never so sick, he is able to make thee whole: "He is able to save to the uttermost all that come to God by him," Heb. vii. 25.

8. Christ is willing as well as able. See Matt. viii. 2, Mark i. 41.

9. Christ can do the work, when all other means fail, Mark v. 26, when purposes fail, good desires fail, prayers fail, and good works, and moral righteousness fail, &c.

10. Christ is such a physician, that rather than thou shouldst go without cure, he hath shed his own blood, to make thee whole, and free thee from thy sickness.

11. If Christ undertakes the cure, he will never leave thee, till he hath perfectly restored thee to health again. But remember, there is no cure, but by his precious blood: "He died, that we might live."

Canst thou be sick, and such a Doctor by?
Thou canst not live unless thy Doctor die.
Strange kind of grief! that finds no medicine good
T' assuage the pain, but the Physician's blood.

F. QUARLES.

SIN COMPARED TO VOMIT.

"Moab also shall wallow in his own Vomit," &c., Jer. xlviii. 26.

"The dog is turned to his Vomit again," 2 Pet. ii. 22.

A WICKED man, or one who turns to his old evil and wicked courses, is compared to a dog, and Sin to Vomit which a dog licketh up.

P A R A L L E L S.

I. A Vomit is a very loathsome thing, but a dog's vomit is most detestable: so Sin is a very loathsome thing, but apostacy is the worst of Sins; no Sin is more abominable in God's sight than that.

II. A Vomit is cast up sometimes by reason of the sickness of the stomach: so a Christian being very sick of his Sin, casts it up, or vomits it out by repentance.

III. Some men finding themselves oppressed by means of some obstructions, or by reason of the foulness of their stomachs, take something to make them Vomit, to free themselves of that which otherwise may endanger their health, if not their lives: so a Christian, being sensible of internal obstructions, and pollutions of his inward man, takes a fit antidote of Christ's preparing, by which means he vomits up the filth and pollution of his heart and life, and thereby attains a healthy soul, and flourishes in godliness.

IV. Some men on a sudden are made to vomit, by eating something that offends, or agrees not with their stomachs: so many sinners, by hearing of a soul-searching sermon, and by the rebukes and continual gnawings of their own consciences, Vomit up some of the Sins of their lives; but in a little time they grow more sick of religion than ever they were of their sins, and so, with the dog, they lick up their old vomit again, i. e., turn to their former ways of sin and error.

V. What is more hateful, or causeth greater shame, than to see a man wallow in his own filthy Vomit? So it is hateful to see a wicked and an ungodly apostate, who hath turned his back upon Christ and his ways, wallowing in all his former Sins, and brutish lusts.

I N F E R E N C E S.

Let this teach us to hate Sin and apostacy.

SIN AN UNCLEANNESS.

"From all your Uncleanesses," &c., Ezek. xxxvi. 29.

"In that day there shall be a fountain open to the house of David, and to the Inhabitants of Jerusalem, for Sin, and for uncleanness," Zech. xiii. 1.

"To work all Uncleaness," &c., Eph. iv. 19.

Sin is compared to an unclean thing, and man by reason of Sin is said to be defiled; who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? The Hebrew Tama, as Mr. Caryl observes, comes near the word contaminatum, which is used by the Latins for Uncleaness, and it speaks the greatest Uncleaness, pollution, sordidness, and filthiness imaginable, as of habit, gore of blood, the muddiness of water, or whatsoever is loathsome or unlovely, noisome or unseemly; such an uncleaness is Sin.

Note, "Sin is an unclean thing:" they who see the face of Sin in the glass of the law, see it the most ugly and deformed object in the world: if virtue could be seen, she would attract all eyes to her, and ravish all hearts to behold her, "Virtue is an invisible beauty;" so if sin could be seen, all eyes would turn away from it, and all hearts loath it. "Sin is an invisible deformity." The Spirit of God doth as it were strive for comparisons, to set out the ugliness of Sin, it is compared to the blood and pollution of wretched new-born infants, to the corruption, and putrefaction of a rotten sepulchre, to the scum of a seething-pot, to loathsomeness, stinking, and putrifying sores, to the superfluity of naughtiness, to the leprosy, &c., Ezek. xvi. 13, Rom. iii. 13, Isa. i. 5, 6, Jam. i. 27. All these comparisons show forth the ugliness of Sin, but alas! it is filthy beyond compare.

P A R A L L E L S.

I. Some things are so unclean and filthy, that they defile every thing they touch; Sin is such an Uncleaness: who can touch it, meddle with it, and not be defiled by it? It is an infectious Uncleaness: as good is so much the better, by how much the more it is diffusive, so Sin is so much the worse, by how much it is the more infectious and diffusive. Sin is diffusive two ways; 1. By propagation from Adam to all his posterity.

2. By way of imitation.

II. Some things are full of Uncleaness, they abound in filth and pollution; such a defilement and Uncleaness is sin, it is not in one part only, but in and upon the whole man, it goes quite through; there is not the least part free from head to heel. "They are all gone out of the way and become vile, vile all over." There is a double universality of this Uncleaness. 1. It defiles all men. 2. All of man, not one man in the world but is Unclean by Sin, and not one part in man but is unclean; view him in his understanding, will, judgment, memory, affection, conscience, eyes, hands, tongue, feet, all parts of the body, and powers of the souls are unclean.

III. Some Uncleaness is active, prevailing, and powerful, it increaseth and grows worse and worse, and defiles, and pollutes more and more; such an Uncleaness is Sin, man is unclean as he comes into the world, but this Uncleaness grows and prevails more and more upon him, by actual sin he becomes worse and worse, and is more defiled every day; it strives to captivate and bring the souls of all men under the defiling power and pollution of it, Rom. vii. 23.

IV. Some Uncleaness is so loathsome, that it causes such things to stink as come near it; Sin makes the sinner stink, his person stink, his life stink, and his services and prayers, and all his best actions to stink in the nostrils of God. "The sacrifices of the wicked are an abomination to the Lord," Prov. xv. 8.

V. Some Uncleanesses are inward, hidden, obscure, appear not to the external eyes. Sin is not a spot in the garment, or visible pollution in the face, or rottenness in the flesh, though that is bad, and sometimes the effects of this Uncleaness, but it is rottenness in the heart; all a man's entrails are as it were corrupted. Man, as you heard, and every part of man is defiled, and yet externally this Uncleaness doth not appear, the sinner seems as beautiful and comely to the outward eyes as other men, this Uncleaness is internal. As saints internally are glorious and beautiful, so sinners internally are foul, filthy, and deformed, their heart, liver, and conscience, is defiled, Tit. i. 15.

DISPARITY.

I. What pollution and filth is so fixed and abiding, that all the nitre and fuller's soap in the world cannot wash it off, nor the hottest fire purify, purge it out, or consume it? But such an Uncleaness and pollution is Sin, that all the water in the mighty ocean cannot wash it out; nay, could a man bathe himself in brinish tears of godly contrition, it will not cleanse, or take away the filth of his transgression. "Though thou wash thee with nitre, and take unto thee much soap; yet thy iniquity is marked before me, saith the Lord," Jer. ii. 22. All the fire of hell cannot burn it out; hell fire shall never, as saith Mr. Caryl, consume this filth; those who are not purged in this life, shall never be purged in the next. The wicked shall ever be in punitive flames, but shall not find, as Papists dream, any purgative flames; the fire and brimstone of hell shall never fetch this Uncleaness out of the damned.

II. What Uncleaness, and abominable filth and pollution is ensnaring? Men and women are shy of, and ready at all turns to fly from, and avoid any external, horrible Uncleaness: but Sin is a bewitching and ensnaring Uncleaness. All the bodily beauty in the world did never entice so many, as the deformity and foul face of Sin bath. Beauty and comeliness are the attractives, the loadstone of love; Christ was not loved by many, because he did not appear beautiful, he veiled his glorious beauty: lust is loved, though it be altogether unbeautiful. Christ is the Mirror of beauty; though some see no comeliness in him, he is "fairer than the children of men:" but there is no form or comeliness in Sin, nothing indeed why it should be desired; yet how is it admired, and esteemed by all sorts of men! They dote upon it, and run mad with love to it; it is so bewitching, as the choicest beauty in the world.

III. What filth, Uncleaness, or pollution, is of such a murdering, killing, and destroying nature, as Sin! It is true, some horrid pollution is of corrupting, poisonous, and destroying quality, but not like Sin: this venom, this Uncleaness, is worse than any, more mortal than any; it kills both body and soul too; it destroys eternally. O, there is no finding out the cursed nature of it; there is nothing can save from the killing power of it, nor cleanse from its pollution, but Christ's blood.

INFERENCES.

I. O, what a woeful condition is man in by nature, how Unclean in God's sight! Well might Eliphaz say, "How abominable and filthy is man, who drinketh in iniquity like water!" Job xv. 16. The word רע notes that which is most abhorring to the nature of man; that which is not only so nauseous that the stomach cannot digest it, but so base, that the mind is burdened to think upon it; yea, the words import that which is rejected by all the senses, that which the eye cannot endure to look upon, that which the ear cannot endure to hear of, that which is a stink in the nostrils, and which the hand will not touch; such a thing is man in God's sight, by reason of Sin. Filthy, רע, the word is derived from a root that signifies, corrupt, rotten, putrified, the scum of a pot, the rust of metals, the dung or excrement of man and beasts. There are no words, saith Caryl, filthy enough to express the filthiness of man. The word is found, saith he, but three times in scripture; in this construction, and in all of them, it is applied to show the abominable wickedness of man: the first is this, Job xv. 16, Psal. xiv. 3, and liii. 3, as if this were a word picked out on purpose, as a glass, to show man his face and natural complection in, &c.

II. O what is man, that God should be mindful of him! What beauty is there in him, that the Almighty should set his heart upon him! Job vii. 17.

III. What little reason have wicked men to be proud? And how sadly are they mistaken, who think to adorn themselves with sin? How do sinners pride themselves in their filthy garments, and cloak of unrighteousness? He is no gallant now-a-days, unless he can swear, and curse, and cry, "Damn-him;" and, "Sink-him." Lord, what an age is this! They show their Sin, as Sodom, and hide it not; they glory in their shame.

IV. Let us learn from hence to be fully sensible of our birth-pollution, I mean original sin, that which we brought into the world with us: "Can he be clean that is born of a woman? Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? Not one," Job xxv. 5, and xiv. 4. Can the stream be clean, when the fountain is so unclean? All that are born by natural generation, are unclean. Adam's particular act or breach of the law of God was ours, we being in him; he stood as the common root of all his posterity; it is also by the Almighty imputed to us: the natural pravity or corruption which issueth from thence, passeth from generation to generation.

V. We may infer from hence, that every man and woman hath need of washing; say not therefore with Peter, "Thou shalt never wash my feet," when every part is defiled, &c.

VI. Go polluted soul, go to the fountain, "It is the blood of Christ, that cleanseth us from all Sin," 1 John i. 7.

VII. Bless God, there is a Fountain to wash in, a Fountain opened for Sin and Uncleaness. See Fountain.

VIII. You that are clean, praise the Almighty: ye were filthy as others: "Such were some of you," &c. Saints may be said to be clean four manner of ways: (1.) Clean meritoriously, by the blood of the Lord Jesus. (2.) Efficaciously, by the Spirit uniting them to Christ, and sanctifying their hearts. (3.) Clean instrumentally, by the Word: "Now are you clean, through the Word which I have spoken unto you." (4.) Clean impulsively, and attractively by faith:—"Purifying their hearts by faith."

SIN COMPARED TO GREY-HAIRS.

"Yea, Grey-Hairs are here and there upon him, and he knoweth it not," Hos. vii. 1.

HE knoweth it not, that is, Israel, or Ephraim, viz. the ten tribes. Ephraim may be considered as a kingdom, "I am against the sinful kingdom," Hos. i. 4, Amos iv. 8; or as a church: they were a people in covenant with God, or in a natural church-state, and once youthful and beautiful, but now they are become old and grey-headed, i. e. they had symptoms of decay and ruin upon them.

Grey-Hairs: Some by Grey-Hairs understand heavy judgments; others, some prevailing evils of sins, which were signs of destruction, &c. There may be truth in both.

Note, Symptoms of ruin oft-times appear upon a people, before their ruin comes.

PARALLELS.

I. Grey-Hairs are a sign that a man's best days, his youthful days are gone: so some Sins and judgment upon a people, are a sign that their best days are past away, that their youth and glory is departing.

II. Grey-Hairs are a sign of old age: so some Sins and judgments upon a people, show forth that they are old in wickedness.

III. Grey-Hairs come oft-times by great grief. Scaliger tells us of a young man, who through the extreme trouble of his spirit, was turned Grey in one night: so the judgments and miseries of a people, because of their Sins, make them Grey-headed, and thereby look old and withered, &c.

IV. When Grey-Hairs come upon a man, they bring oftentimes with them feeble knees, and stiffness of the limbs: so Sin makes feeble; the heat of zeal, and vigour of spirit is thereby abated.

V. Grey-Hairs are symptoms and fore-runners of death and mortality: so some Sins and miseries upon a people, are the clear symptoms of spiritual death, or night of darkness.

VI. Some men have Grey-Hairs here and there, and they know not of them: so a soul, nation, or church, may have sad symptoms of ruin upon them, and they be ignorant of them; he knows it not.

Quest. What were those Grey-Hairs that were upon Ephraim?

Answ. One was, "Strangers had devoured his strength." Their support and chief stay, that which should uphold, comfort, and succour them, was gone—wicked men were let in upon them, and such who sought to spoil them of their rights, liberties, and estates; or spiritually, sin prevailed, strange lusts had devoured their strength, Hos. ii. 5. Ephraim was fallen in love with other lovers, his affection was set upon strangers. Saints should keep their hearts close to Christ, or else the love of the world will soon steal away their strength, and make them decay in godliness. The whoredom of Ephraim was doubtless one of those Grey-Hairs he had upon him.

2. The pride of Ephraim was another Grey-Hair: "The pride of Israel doth testify to his face; and therefore shall Israel and Ephraim fall in their iniquity," Hos. v. 5.

3. Their goodness was "as the morning cloud, and as the early dew, it passed away," Hos. vi. 4, which might be another of his Grey-Hairs. By their goodness, doubtless is meant their goodness and kindness to God, and one towards another. They were falsehearted, inconstant, and fickle, like a morning cloud; their words were empty sounds, like clouds without water; they dealt treacherously with God, and deceitfully with their brethren.

4. They were like a silly dove without a heart; they let their dearest enjoyment go, like as a silly dove parts with her young, and did not, like the hen, strive to preserve them: this might be another of his Grey-Hairs. A dove is easily caught with a net: so was Ephraim easily ensnared by his enemies. A dove will keep her nest, though you take it away, and thereby take her captive: O how unwilling are some men to part with their lusts! they will not leave their Sins, or company, though it prove their ruin! They are like the silly dove.

5. The great things of God's law were accounted strange things to Ephraim; though God himself wrote them, yet he liked them not, but rather derided at them that owned, and subjected to them. This was another Grey-Hair.

6. "Ephraim was as a cake not turned," Hos. vii. 8, he was not thorough for God; he stood halting between two opinions, did not know what religion to be of: or he was so perverse, that though he lay under heavy judgments, and was ready to be burned on the coals; yet he sought not to prevent the danger, and escape the fire; he cried not to God in his affliction. And this was another of his Grey-Hairs, Hos. vii. 14.

7. Ephraim was an empty vine; he brought forth fruit to himself: God received but little from Ephraim; all his labour and doing was for himself, to enrich himself, and lay up for himself; he cared not for the interest of God. An empty vine: he had juice and sap enough to bring forth fruit to himself, but was barren towards God. They cannot spare time, nor have they leisure to wait upon his service; they cannot spare money to further the interest of godliness, though they can give two, three, four, or five hundred, nay, a thousand pounds, to such a son, or such a daughter, and maintain them bravely, when some of Christ's ministers want bread: they love, alas! their sons and daughters more than Christ: they are empty vines, they bring forth fruit to themselves. O what a base spirit and principle are some professors of! they are like Ephraim. And this was another of his Grey-Hairs.

8. He was broken in judgment, "He fed on the wind, and followed after the east wind," Hos. xii. 1. He pursued after vanity and the empty things of this world. And that was another of his Grey-Hairs. Many more I might mention, they were indeed thick upon him, he was become very Grey in wickedness.

INFERENCES.

Let us take heed we have not Grey-Hairs upon us, and know it not. Is not England, and the Church of God in England, grown here of late Grey-headed? O what signs and symptoms of ruin are there upon us! I will leave you to find them out. Where is that love and zeal that was once? Is not the world got into the very hearts of professors? Do they not follow after the wind, and pursue the east wind? Are they not like an empty vine? Doth not every one mind his own carnal interest? Have not strangers devoured our strength? Are we not become like a silly dove without an heart? Is not whoredom and superstition amongst us? Doth not our pride testify against us? And is not our goodness like the morning cloud? Where is that love and bowels which should be in us towards one another? Are not some of the things, yea, the great things of God's law, accounted by us as strange things? Search further, and more Grey Hairs will appear. Are we not divided and broken in judgment? Can a nation divided against itself, long stand?—Are there not many faithful ministers snatched away in a short time? Is not this the forerunner of some dismal calamity? Have not we had many fearful signs in the heavens? And are not the evening wolves come out of their holes? Besides all this, let every soul search and see what Grey Hairs he hath upon himself.

THE DEVIL CALLED THE GOD OF THIS WORLD.

"In whom the God of this World hath blinded the minds of them which believe not," 2 Cor. iv. 4.

The Devil here is called a God; not that he is a God, either by nature, or hath this name conferred upon him by the Almighty, in respect of his office; but rather he is called so in respect to wicked men, who serve and obey him as their God, and in whom he rules and works effectually, as in his own people and subjects.

Properly there is but one God. Though there are many who are called Gods, yet they are not God's by nature, "I am God and none else. Unto us there is but one God," Isa. xlv. 22. One eternal, immense, infinite, and incomprehensible Majesty. And this God is either considered essentially, "God is a Spirit," John iv. 24; or else personally, viz., the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit; "there are three that bear witness in heaven, &c., and these three are one."

Improperly, (1.) Idols are called Gods; (2.) The ark, 1 Sam. iv. 7. (3.) Magistrates, "I have made thee a God to Pharaoh," Exod. vii. 1. "Thou shalt not revile the Gods," Exod. xxii. 28; the Chaldee saith, Rab, that is, a master; the Hebrew Elohim, God, as Mr. Ainsworth observeth upon the place, is attributed to judges and magistrates, "I said ye are Gods," Psal. lxxxiii. 6; these are Gods by office. (4.) Satan as in this text, who would be looked upon and worshipped as a God, he is properly an angel, once an angel of light; God created him; and before he fell, he was a good angel as other angels are who kept their first estate; he is called a God! but there is one word that confines his Power and sovereignty, and greatly degrades him, limits him, and spoils his divinity, makes him but a poor petty God; he is but the God of this world, both for extension and duration; he bears no rule above, nor shall he bear any sway in the world to come: if the God of this world, it is by usurpation; he is like an audacious traitor who rebels and strives against his lawful Sovereign, "For the earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof;" Christ is heir of both worlds, though he admits Satan to God it here for a while, he is a false God, an enemy to God, and no God.

DISPARITY.

God is without beginning; the Devil had a beginning: God is an uncreated Spirit; the Devil an angel and a created Spirit, I do not say he was created a Devil, sin made him a Devil. God can do what he pleaseth, he hath an unlimited power; the Devil's power is limited, he can go no further than God permits him. God hath a just and rightful power, Satan hath only an usurped power, &c., God is infinite, immense, &c. But some may say, in what sense is Satan said to be God of this World? What World? &c. The word World is a controvertible phrase, and here I understand it is to be taken for the inhabitants of the World; I mean the wicked, distinct from the godly. He is the wicked man's God, three ways.

1. By devolution, they have fallen off from God to Satan, they have departed from the true God, and his service, and have closed in with the Devil; and so Satan owns them to be his subjects. The whole World is divided into two parts, two bodies, and are under two heads, either subjects of Christ's kingdom, or of the kingdom and power of Satan; they are either of the army of light, or regime it of darkness.

2. The Devil is the wicked man's God by voluntary submission, "His servants ye are, to whom ye obey," Rom. vi. 16. Wicked men are Satan's volunteers.

3. By God's just desertion, as they have cast off God and his service, and desire not the knowledge of his ways; so God hath cast them off, and suffered Satan to possess them, &c.

THE DEVIL A PRINCE.

"The Prince of this world cometh," &c., John xiv. 30.

"According to the Prince of the power of the air," Eph. ii. 2.

"And they had a king over them, which is the angel of the bottomless pit," Rev. ix. 11.

THE Devil is in these scriptures called a Prince, Prince of darkness, Prince of the power of the air, king of the bottomless pit, &c.

PARALLELS.

I. PRINCE is a term that denotes power and sovereignty; Satan hath great power over wicked men, &c. There is also, no doubt, some kind of supremacy or superiority amongst the evil angels; we read of the Prince of Devils, "He casts out Devils by Beelzebub, the Prince of Devils." Also some of these wicked angels are called principalities and powers, which signifyeth eminency of place, above others. What degrees or order there is amongst Devils is hard to find out, whatever order there is amongst them, yet we know he is the master of mis-rule amongst men, &c.

II. A King or Prince ruling and reigning imports a kingdom. For what is a king without a kingdom and dominions over which he reigns? The devil hath a kingdom. There is a twofold spiritual kingdom spoken of, viz., the kingdom of light, and the kingdom of darkness, called sometimes the kingdom and power of darkness. 1. His kingdom is in the hearts of the ungodly men, he rules and reigns there. 2. His kingdom takes in all the confines and territories of anti-Christ, and all other false and corrupt, erroneous, and tyrannical states whatsoever, throughout the whole earth, where his power is owned, and his authority subjected to. 3. He is said to be King of the bottomless pit.

III. The name of some kings puts an awful fear upon men. So the name and power of Satan is such, that it makes many souls to dread and quake at the thoughts of him.

IV. Some kings have been great tyrants. There is no tyrant in the world, nor ever was, so vile as the Devil. True, some have acted like Devils, they seemed more like Devils than men, as Nero, who caused the bowels of his own mother to be ripped up to see where he lay, &c. See Lion and Dragon.

V. Some kings are mighty in power, and their dominions very large. Satan is a mighty king, he hath a power that no mere human force can stand against, hence called the strong man armed; none ever seemed a match for him but the Prince of peace. Besides, he rules over all the nations of the ungodly, and by force or fraud enslaves to his hellish sceptre millions of souls; there is no kingdom, or nation, in the whole universe, but he pretends to some right, supremacy, and authority in it; the world is full of his creatures; nay, there are more souls who are his vassals, than the Son of God hath faithful subjects.

THE DEVIL A HUNTER.

"He will deliver thee from the snare of the Hunter," Psal. xci. 3.

"Deliver thyself as a roe from the hand of the Hunter," Prov. vi. 5.

By the Hunter in these places, I see no ground to doubt, but that the Holy Ghost principally intends the Devil, who is the great Hunter and destroyer of men's souls, out of whose hand, i. e., power, Wisdom advises her Son to deliver himself.

P A R A L L E L S .

I. A Hunter is one that pursues, or eagerly follows after his prey, what sort of beasts soever he hunts, he seems unwearied in his pursuit, his heart is affected with his game, and hence takes great delight in it: so the Devil pursues sinners, nay and the godly too, for they are part of his game, and how eagerly doth he pursue them, it is the only thing he seems to delight in, he is never weary of his work, nor in the work.

II. A Hunter in pursuing after the poor sensitive beast, designs to kill and destroy them, it is to take their lives away, &c. So the Devil in hunting after the souls of men, his grand design is to destroy them, "He seeketh whom he may devour," 1 Pet. v. 8, it is the soul, the life of the soul, he strives to destroy. As David speaks of his enemy, "Thou huntest after my soul to take it," 1 Sam. xxiv. 11; so may every man and woman say of Satan.

III. A Hunter has many devices and cunning stratagems to ensnare the game he pursues: so the Devil hath many snares and cunning wiles to catch and destroy the souls of men. Hence he is compared to a serpent: "We are not ignorant," saith Paul, "of his devices," 2 Cor. ii. 11; and in another place, he exhorts the saints to put on the whole armour of God, that they may be able to stand against the wiles of the Devil. The Greek work signifies such snares as are set to catch a man, "He will deliver thee," saith the psalmist, "From the snare of the Hunter," Psal. xci. 3, meaning, saith Ainsworth, the Devil. Satan hath many devices and snares to draw men into Sin. 1. By persuading the soul it is no great matter, it is, saith he, but a little one. 2. By presenting the pleasure and profit of sinful practices, and hiding the shame thereof, and the wrath and misery they will certainly bring on the soul at last. 3. He lays before a man the sins of good men, O saith he, do you not find that such and such godly men have done as bad as this; was not David overcome with adultery, Hezekiah with pride, and Noah with drunkenness, &c.; but all the while he strives to hide from them their virtue and unfeigned repentance, and utter abhorrence of these sins afterwards. 4. He presents God to the soul, as one made up all of mercy, and that repentance will make all whole again; but afterwards, it may be, when the soul is defiled by yielding to his temptation, persuades souls, the sin is so great, and God so just, that he will not pardon sin, it is little before committed, but great when it is committed, and this way he seeks to ensnare the sinner. 5. Another way he hath to catch his prey with, is by leading the soul into the way of sin, it may be, to the harlot's door, he allures into the company of sinners, and entices the soul to contemplate upon sin, to toy a little with Delilah, as it were, and a multitude of other snares he hath.

IV. A Hunter that he may the better catch his prey, hath not only his snares, but also his dogs, and them of every sort fit for his sport and enterprise, he hath his setting-dogs, and scenting-dogs, his race-dogs, some to start his game, and others to pursue his game, &c. So the Devil, the great Hunter of souls, hath, besides his subtle wiles and snares, fit instruments to accomplish his design; he has his dogs, for so as we have showed you elsewhere, wicked men are called, and them also of every sort, some great ones, and some small ones, some that are like setting-dogs, who watch how they may trepan, and prey upon the godly to draw them into sin, or into sufferings: and others, who are like cruel blood-hounds, who, as being void of mercy, endeavour to tear the saints in pieces.

V. Some Hunters mind little else, save hunting; it is said of Nimrod, he was a mighty Hunter, &c., Gen. x. 9. So the Devil, he is a mighty Hunter, he minds nothing more than the hunting of the souls of men; O the millions that he hath caught and destroyed, he is a most cruel Hunter.

VI. Some Hunters are very swift and diligent in the pursuit of their prey, they will ride over many fields in a day, they will search and beat about with abundance of diligence, to find out their game; they are, it may be, here now, and a few hours hence many miles off, and hardly allow themselves time to eat their meat, &c. So the Devil is a swift Hunter, he is like lightning, as it were, swift in motion, he is a spirit, and so has the advantage to leap suddenly upon his spiritual prey, he has his eyes upon all the ways of men; he is here to tempt this man, and presently in another place to catch unwary and secure souls.

VII. A Hunter is diligent to observe the disposition of the creature he hunts, and also the places where he haunts: so the devil, he observes the dispositions and natural inclinations of men and women, and also all their haunts, that so he may the better prey upon them, he knows what men are prone to lying, and what men are addicted to covetousness, and who are naturally inclined to the lusts of uncleanness, and who are subject to passion, &c., and according to the various tempers and inclinations of persons, he suits his temptations.

VIII. A Hunter seeks to come sometimes, if possible, on his prey unawares, when they are secure, to steal as it were upon them: so the Devil comes upon Christians many times when they are asleep and in a secure state; an enemy hath done this whilst men slept. And hence Solomon's advice is to the sons of wisdom, not to "Give sleep to their eyes, nor slumber to their eye-lids, and to deliver themselves from the hand of the Hunter," &c. Prov. vi. 4, 5.

DISPARITY.

Other Hunters generally hunt for their recreation, it is not out of envy and hatred they bear to the creatures they hunt: but the Devil hunts the souls of men out of that implacable hatred he bears to them, it is not his pleasure, but his malice, which stirs him up to kill and destroy poor sinners, he knows he is miserable himself, and he would make, if he could, all the children of men as miserable as himself.

INFERENCES.

This may serve to awaken all men, to take heed and deliver themselves from this mighty Hunter; soul! fly to Christ, he is able to save thee, who hath promised to deliver thee from the snare of the Hunter, &c. Labour to be like the roe, swift-footed, O labour with David for hind's feet.

THE DEVIL A FOWLER.

"Deliver thyself as a roe from the hand of the hunter, and as a bird from the hand of the Fowler," Prov. vi. 5.

As Satan is likened to a hunter, so he is likewise unto a Fowler, they are both metaphors of a like import.

PARALLELS.

I. A Fowler hath his nets, gins, and many allurements to catch the poor silly bird: so hath Satan to catch the souls of men, some of which we mentioned before.

II. A Fowler having taken divers birds, he makes use of them, in a crafty manner, to bring others to his net: so doth Satan, he this very way seeks to allure sinners, he sets before the eyes of the unwary soul, how many birds he hath got in his snares, and yet they sing most sweetly, and leap about as if they had all joy and enlargements in the world; he would persuade God's children none have so sweet and pleasant a life as the ungodly, who flourish in prosperity, and are not plagued like other men, and by this means, this cunning Fowler oft-times ensnares the souls of men.

III. A Fowler is very cautious how he spreads his net in the sight of any bird: so Satan craftily strives to hide his net and snare, by which he seeks to catch the souls of men, he presents the golden cup, but hides the poison. Thus he deceived Eve, he strove to affect her heart with the choicest and excellent nature of the fruit of the tree, "Ye shall be as Gods," &c. This was the bait, but the net or curled hook is hidden, he seems to court her as a cordial friend, as one that wished her the greatest happiness imaginable; but alas! his design was to catch her in the net of rebellion against God's law, to destroy and undo her for ever; "In vain is the net spread in the sight of any bird," Prov. i. 17.

IV. A Fowler strives to counterfeit the real call of birds, thereby to entice them into the snares and nets he hath spread for them: so Satan endeavours to transform himself into an angel of light, and also teaches his ministers to counterfeit the garb, behaviour, and call of Christ's true ministers, thereby to deceive and draw souls into perdition and destruction, 2 Cor. xi. 14, 15, who more ready to press holiness and self-denial, &c., than some of the grand deceivers of this age, "They come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves," Matt. vii. 15.

V. A Fowler sometimes in the night dazzles the eyes of the poor birds with a great light, and thereby most easily spreads his net over them: so Satan by false lights preys upon the souls of men, who cries out, Light, life, and power, &c., and this hath so dazzled the eyes of people, that many have been taken, and little think where they are, nor the danger they are in; alas! the cunning Fowler has got his net over them.

THE DEVIL A LION.

"Be sober, be vigilant, because your adversary the Devil, as a roaring Lion walketh about, seeking whom he may devour," 1 Pet. v. 8.

CHRIST is compared to a Lion, saith the learned Glassius, because noble, heroic, and unconquerable. 2. Wicked men and tyrants are so called, because fierce, outrageous, and cruel. And, 3. The Devil is called a Lion, because roaring, rapacious, and devouring, &c.

Some of the common epithets of a Lion, as we have under another head noted, are these, viz., bold, stony-hearted, preying, ravening, stubborn, cruel, bloody, terrible, swelling, &c., which sets forth his natural evil, and worst properties, upon which account the devil, as all the learned observe, is compared to him.

P A R A L L E L S.

I. The voice of a Lion is called rugitus, that is, roaring, or bellowing, which is very terrible to other beasts, who when they hear him roar, tremble; he roars when he is hungry and wants prey: so the Devil is said to walk about like a roaring hungry Lion, who is not satisfied with the prey he hath already got, but seeks to devour more souls; for as the Lion is a very greedy and unsatisfied beast, so is the Devil; he would, did not God restrain him, destroy the whole world, not a soul should escape.

II. A Lion is a very strong beast, "What is stronger than a Lion? So the Devil is a strong enemy; and one reason doubtless, why he is compared to a Lion, is to signify his strength, as his being compared to a serpent, doth his subtlety. Hence God hath laid help for us upon One mighty to save, viz., the Lord Jesus, who was able to encounter with this strong and furious adversary, "For to this end was the Son of God manifest, that he might destroy the works of the Devil," 1 John iii. 8. "And destroy him who had the power of death, which is the Devil," Heb. ii. 14.

III. A Lion is a very bloody and tyrannical beast, he will set upon and destroy whole flocks and herds of cattle, he is a great enemy to sheep and lambs, and other innocent creatures:* so the Devil is very bloody and cruel, as appears in Job's case, he took away his cattle, and then all his children, and after that smote his body with boils; he seeks to destroy the bodies and souls of men too; the godly stand in fear of him; for Christ's sheep and lambs, have not a more cruel and bloody foe in the world.

* Topsell, p. 361.

THE DEVIL A DRAGON.

“ And the great Dragon was cast down, that old serpent, called the Devil and Satan,” &c., Rev. xii. 9.

As the Devil is compared to a lion, so likewise to a Dragon. Some are ready to question, whether there be any such creature or no; but it is without any just ground, since the holy scripture speaks of them in so many places. Besides, we have approved histories and historians, which treat of them, as Ælianus, Aristotle, Pliny, Mantuan, Gesner, Ovid, &c.

P A R A L L E L S .

I. The Dragon is a flying serpent, he is described with wings very voluble, and spreading themselves wide according to the quantity or largeness of the Dragon's body; which caused Lucan, the poet, to write in this manner:—

*Vos quoq; qui cunctis innocia numina terris
 Serpitis, aurato nitidi fulgore Dracones,
 Pestiferos ardens facit Africa; ducit is altum
 Aera cum Pennis, &c.*—

You shining Dragons, creeping on the earth,
 Which fiery Africa holds, with skins like gold,
 Yet pestilent by hot infecting breath,
 Mounted with wings in th' air we do behold.

The Devil is said to have wings to denote his swiftness in pursuing his prey. He is like to a furious flying Dragon. No man can get out of the reach of Satan; let them climb up never so high in grace and virtue, Satan hath wings, and can pursue them with his poisonous breath of temptations.

III. Naturalists observe, that Dragons seldom hurt in the day-time, but in the dark night they come out of their holes, and deep caves. So the devil does the greatest hurt in the night of ignorance; he hates the light, like his cursed children; his kingdom is the darkness of this world.

III. Naturalists say, Dragons have cruel teeth, and that they have a treble row of them in their mouths, and that their bite is very dangerous. Teeth, saith Glassius, denote virulence, and an hostile power, because beasts, when they fight, use them as offensive weapons. The wounds the Devil gives to poor sinners by his prevailing power, are venomous and mortal.

IV. Dragons are mortal enemies to mankind, and multitudes have been destroyed by them, in this they fitly resemble the Devil.

V. Dragons have a cruel infectious breath. Those in Phrygia, when they are hungry, turn themselves towards the west, and gaping wide, with the force of their breath, saith my author,* they draw the birds that fly over their heads into their mouths; which some attribute to the infectious nature of their breath. Also they kill with their tails; nay, some say, the strokes of their tails are more deadly than the biting of their teeth. The Devil, like the Dragon, has many ways to wound and destroy mankind. Sin is like the biting of Dragons, and false doctrine in scripture is called Dragon's Poison, it is the poison of this old Dragon. “ Their wine is as the poison of Dragons, and the cruel venom of asps,” Deut. xxxii. 33.

VI. They will fight terribly, and are, as naturalists note, always in war with the elephant, and with divers other beasts, both wild and tame, for he is the cruel enemy of them all. So the Devil makes war with the Lamb, and with all his followers. “ There was war in heaven: Michael, and his angels, fought against the Dragon; and the Dragon fought, and his angels, and prevailed not,” Rev. xii. 7, 8. The Lord Jesus is too hard for this old Dragon.

* Topsell, p. 706.

VII. There are in Ethiopia, and other hot countries, multitudes of Dragons, some greater, and some lesser, also some of a red colour. We read of some that have been found to be nine cubits long, and of a great thickness. Neither it is to be thought, saith Mr. Topsell, out of Gesner, p. 794, incredible, that the soldiers of Attilius Regulus killed a Dragon, which was an hundred and twenty feet long. Dragons, saith he, are certainly great beasts, and there are few or none bigger on earth. So there are many Devils, and by some places of holy Scripture, we may conclude there is a chief or grand Devil, one whose hellish power is above the rest, &c. The earth and air are full of these cursed Dragons, but being spirits, we cannot see them; besides, we may suppose, that they may abound more in some countries than in others.

THE DEVIL A SERPENT.

"But I fear lest by any means, as the Serpent beguiled Eve through his subtlety, &c.
2 Cor. xi. 3.

"The old Serpent the Devil," &c., Rev. xii. 9.

SERPENTS are venomous beasts, that creep upon the ground, or go as it were upon their bellies, which, as it appears from Gen. iii. 14, was laid upon them at first as a just judgment of God: "Upon thy belly shalt thou go;" meaning, saith Ainsworth, in great pain, &c. This creature the Devil made use of to deceive Eve; the Devil spake in or by the Serpent, i. e., opened the Serpent's mouth; for we are not to conclude that that Serpent was the Devil, because the text saith positively, it was a beast of the field, who, as some conceive, it is said to be more subtle than any other beast, by means of Satan's influences; yet all agree, that naturally the serpent, or some Serpents are very crafty and subtle. Aristotle and Galen define a Serpent to be Animal sanguineum, pedibus orbatum, et oviparum; that is, a bloody beast, without feet, laying eggs.

There are divers sorts of Serpents; we read of the adder, asp, dart, dragon, cockatrice, &c. Some affirm, that the cockatrice or basilisk hath wings, from Isa. xiv. 29, "Out of the Serpent's root shall come a cockatrice, and his fruit shall be a flying Serpent." The basilisk is esteemed the king of Serpents, partly for the great strength of his poison, and partly for his stately pace, and magnanimous mind; for he goes upright with his head, near a half a yard in length.

PARALLELS.

I. SERPENTS are a venomous sort of creatures, especially the cockatrice: for his poison. Naturalists affirm, infecteth the air, and the air so infected killeth all living creatures, and all green things, fruits and plants of the earth; it burneth up the grass whereupon it goeth, or creepeth; and the very fowls of the air fall down dead, when they come near his den or lodging: so the venom or poison of the old Serpent, viz., sin, is very deadly, and of an infectious nature, as hath been largely shewed. What creature hath not been hurt and corrupted, more or less, by this poison? It hath disordered the whole creation; the very ground is cursed, and bringeth forth thorns and thistles hereby, Gen. iii.

II. Amongst all living creatures, there is none that perislieth sooner than doth a man, by the poison of a cockatrice, for with his sight he killeth him, the beams of his eyes do corrupt the spirit of a man; nay, saith my author, he kills other Serpents by his sight, such is the venom of his poison: so no creature hath suffered, or received such hurt, as mankind, hath by the poison of the old dragon. Though the sin of man, which is the venom of this serpent, hath been a plague to all creatures, yet man receives the greatest ruin by it, it destroys him eternally. Wicked men, who are compared to Serpents, are destroyed by this old Serpent.

III. A Serpent is a very subtle beast; "Be ye wise as Serpents," &c. The Devil being compared to a Serpent, it principally denotes his subtlety, who hath a thousand ways to destroy and undo the children of men.

IV. Serpents are most envious, implacable, and furious beasts; they are immitissimum animalium genus, a most ungentle and barbarous kind of creatures, saith Mr. Pliny, as appears by the rage of a little snake, one of the least of the Serpent's kind: for when he perceives he is hurt or wounded, he never ceaseth casting out his poison, until he hath done harm, or died of madness. In this he is the very image of the devil, who is so outrageous, and filled with envy to mankind, that he cares not what mischief he doth, though it greatly heightens his own punishment in the end. There is an irreconcilable enmity between the Serpent and the woman, and between his seed and her seed. A man naturally, by a kind of secret instinct, abhorreth the sight of a Serpent; and so doth the Serpent the sight of a man.

V. There is a certain sort of Serpents, that if a man look stedfastly upon them with one eye, with a single eye, they will run away from him: such a Serpent is Satan; for if a Christian face him with a single eye, that is, look upon him with an eye of faith, it will resist him, and make him fly.

INFERENCES.

I. From the whole we may perceive, what the nature of sin is: these evil angels were glorious creatures at first, before they fell; but behold, what vile, cursed creatures and monsters their departing from God, and rebellion against him, hath made them!

II. It may teach all men to beware of the Devil, to watch against him, to avoid sin, and the venom of sin, as they would a Serpent.

III. It may be of use to stir up the godly to diligence and watchfulness, &c. "Be sober, be vigilant," &c.

IV. It may teach us to bless and praise God for Christ, in whom, through faith, we get the victory over this terrible and crafty enemy.

METAPHORS, ALLEGORIES, SIMILIES, TYPES, ETC.,

CONCERNING THE

MEANS OF GRACE, PROVIDENCE AND AFFLICTION.

THE DAY OF GRACE.

"Why stand ye here all the Day idle?" &c., Matt. xx. 6.

"To-Day if you will hear his voice, harden not your hearts," &c., Heb. iii. 7.

THE time that God alloweth men to repent, and provide themselves for another world, is called a Day: "Behold, now is the accepted time, behold, now is the Day of salvation." "I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is Day;" that is, whilst the allotted season lasts, John ix. 4. "To-day if you will hear his voice," &c., that is, before the time allotted you, or the space given you to repent, be expired.

PARALLELS.

I. A Day is a certain time, so many hours, &c. A natural Day is twenty-four hours, an artificial Day contains twelve hours: so God allows a man a certain and prefixed time to repent. Jerusalem had a Day: "O thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy Day, the things that belong unto thy peace."

II. The Day is set in opposition to the night, and it signifies the time of light: so the time of God's patience, whilst the Gospel is preached to men, and God waits upon them, and strives with them, to bring them over to the knowledge of the truth, is the time of light: and when God takes away the means of Grace, and the Gospel, from a kingdom, nation, or particular soul, that is a time of darkness, and then it may be said, the Day is gone, and night is come upon them.

III. It is Day when the sun rises, and night when the sun sets: so it is the sinner's Day, whilst the Gospel sun shines, and the means of grace are continued to them; but night then, when the ministration of the Gospel is taken away, and no more means of grace afforded to them.

IV. The Day is man's working time! labourers in the field, when the Day is ended, go home, they can work no longer: so whilst God affords the Gospel, and means of Grace, sinners should, like faithful labourers, work hard, work out their own salvation, labour for the meat that perisheth not: for when that is gone, no man can work; then the things of their peace will be hid from their eyes, like as it fell out with Jerusalem.

V. The Day brings great light with it, which makes great discoveries of persons and things; whilst the night lasts, men cannot see what is near them, neither the good they may receive, nor the evil they should refuse, and escape from; but the Day discovers all, and makes every thing manifest: so the Gospel-Day brings light, and the light thereof discovers the evil that is in the hearts, works, and lives of men; by this light they see their sins, and the danger they are in thereby, and also the way to be delivered from them. Christ is the Way which the Day-light makes manifest. In the night of Popery, men lost the blessed path to peace, and way of life, and ran to the merits of their own ways, and to Popish pardons, and what not; but the Day of the Gospel in England hath discovered their mistake, and showed them the plain way to heaven, &c.

VI. The Day is comfortable, it is a pleasant thing for the eyes to see the sun: Eccl. xi. 7. So are the means of Grace, and the Day of Gospel light. O, how sweet and pleasant a thing it is to see this Day, wherein the word of God is powerfully and plainly preached amongst us!

VII. The Day sometimes is over-cast, and the light darkened; so the Gospel-Day is sometimes as a judgment upon a people or particular soul, darkened, and clouds seem to cover the glorious heavens, even as at this time. O what thick and black clouds seem to arise !

VIII. Some Days prove stormy, and high winds arise : so sometimes the Day of Gospel Grace proves stormy, and high winds of persecution arise upon a people ; nay, not only winds of persecution, but also strange whirlwinds of delusions abound in it, which make it very perilous.

IX. A Day hath its morning, its noon, and its evening : so hath the day of Gospel Grace in a nation, and to a particular soul, who improves it not. God threatened his people of old, " That the sun should go down over the prophets, and the day should be dark over them," Mich. iii. 6.

X. The Day suits not with some men, they are for the night ; they are said to rebel against the light, they hate the light, the night is for them ; such are the thief and adulterer : " The whorish woman waits for the twilight, even for the black and dark night," Prov. vii. 9. So many sinners love not the Day of Gospel light, they are for the night of darkness and errors. They had rather have Popery come, or any thing come, than to have the Gospel, or the powerful preaching thereof ; it suits best with their carnal hearts, they love that religion that indulges them in their brutish lusts.

XI. There are many ways to know when the Day draws towards an end, and night approaches : As, (1.) when the heat of the sun abates. (2.) When the shadows grow long, or are stretched forth. (3.) When the harvest-men begin to go home apace. (4.) When the evening-wolves begin to lurk out of their holes. Now when these signs are upon a people in a spiritual sense, their state is bad, they may fear night approaches upon them. 1. When the Gospel in its powerful preaching, abates in its heat, and blessed influences upon men's hearts, so that but a few are warmed, and effectually wrought upon by it. 2. When religion is more in show than in substance ; when the shadow is long, and the substance little ; men being more zealous for the form, than concerned for the power of it. 3. When many powerful or painful ministers and labourers are called home. 4. When the Romish wolves, who have lain long in their holes, and dark caverns, or lurking places, begin to come boldly abroad, and impudently show themselves, it is a sign of evening-tide, and that the Day is near expiring. Is not this thy state, O England !

THE MEANS OF GRACE COMPARED TO THE SUMMER.

" The Summer is ended," &c., Jer. viii. 20.

By Summer is doubtless meant that time that God allows men to gather in, and lay up spiritual good for their precious souls. The time of Gospel light, or Means of Grace, is compared to the Summer.

PARALLELS.

I. The Summer is the chief time of the year, that season which generally all men prize, long for, and rejoice in : so the time of Gospel, Grace, and Gospel light, is the chiefest and choicest season in the world. The time of the Gospel, the dispensation of the Gospel, was the time which the prophets, and many good and righteous men of old longed for, and which all sincere, godly persons do prize, and rejoice in.

II. Summer is the season that ripens the fruits of the earth ; were it not for the heat and influence of Summer, what would become of the husbandman's labour ? So the means of Grace, or ministration of the Gospel, ripens the good seed which is sown in the godly man's heart, nay, it maketh all fit and ready for the harvest, and for cutting down. It hath the same effects upon men's hearts, that the sun hath in the hottest time of Summer, upon that which it sends forth its influence.

III. The Summer is the poor man's working time, it is the season in which he is to provide himself for winter with such things he wants. The day of Gospel Grace is the saint's Summer, it is the time in which he works hard, gathers in, and lays up for his immortal soul : he learns of " the ant, who provides her meat in Summer," &c., Prov. xxx. 25.

IV. In Summer every thing looks green : the herbs, grass, plants, trees, and all the fruits of the earth, are in their beauty, and greatest glory : so in the day of Gospel Grace whilst God affords means of much light and knowledge, when seasons, sabbaths, sermons, and ordinances, in a plentiful manner, do abound amongst us, how do the saints flourish, their Grace flourish ! O what beauty and greenness is there upon all sincere Christians !

V. He that is slothful and idle in Summer, as he brings shame upon himself, it is a sign of folly, so he suffers, wants bread, and is exposed to great straits in winter, " He that gathereth in summer, is a wise son ; but he that sleepeth in harvest, is a son that causeth shame," Prov. x. 5. So he that is idle and negligent in the time of Gospel Grace, or improves not the Means God affords, for the good of his soul, as it is a reproach and shame to him, so exposeth himself to ruin thereby. What will he do when death and judgment come ? then he will want, and suffer hunger, &c.

THE MEANS OF GRACE COMPARED TO HARVEST.

" The Harvest is great, but the labourers are few," Matt. ix. 37.

Note, the use of the Gospel Grace, wherein work is to be done, and many souls are prepared and made willing to hear the Word of God, is compared to Harvest.

I. Harvest is the time to work and do business in, and it behoveth men to labour hard then : so whilst there is an open door for the Gospel, or God is pleased to continue the Means of Grace, Christ's ministers ought to labour hard.

II. Harvest greatly tends to the relief of the poor ; they in Harvest-time gather in, and lay up against a time of want and scarcity : so do the saints, whilst the day of Grace lasts, provide and lay up for their souls.

III. Sometimes there is bad weather in Harvest, which doth hinder and discourage the painful and laborious husbandman : so storms arise, and very bad weather, as it were, often attend Christ's faithful labourers, which greatly hinders them in their ministry.

IV. The Harvest is sometimes great, and the labourers but few, so that the work lies very heavy upon some men : so in a spiritual sense, the Harvest is great, i. e., many people are willing to hear God's Word, but there are but few painful preachers, and by this means the work lies heavy upon them ; and when it is thus, we are enjoined to pray to " the Lord of the Harvest, to send more labourers into his Harvest," Matt. ix. 38.

V. The Harvest sometimes proves thin, and comes into a little room ; or it may seem much in bulk, and yet but a little grain : so it is sometimes in the spiritual Harvest, there are many multitudes that hear the word, attend upon the means, they flock into the assemblies ; but alas ! but few are converted ; the corn is little : a small room will hold them, were they severed from the straw and chaff of the fruitless and unprofitable multitude.

VI. When the Harvest is like to be catching, or the husbandman sees clouds begin to gather, and grow black, or they hear it thunder mightily, they work very hard, and hurry in the corn, not knowing when they may have fair weather again : so Christ's servants, when they perceive a dismal day approaching upon them, labour hard, and bring in what souls they can into his barn.

VII. The Harvest sometimes is very long, and sometimes but short ; so God lengthens or shortens the day of Grace, as he pleases. The old world had an hundred and twenty years ; others but a short season. " O that thou hadst known in this thy day the things that belong to thy peace ! But now they are hid from thine eyes," Luke xix. 42, Christ seems to be quick with them. And so it fared with those, Acts xii. 46.

Observe in Summer's sultry heat,
 How in the hottest day,
 The husbandman doth toil and sweat
 About his corn and hay.
 If then he should not reap and mow,
 And gather in his store,
 How should he live, when for the snow
 He can't move out of door?
 The little ants, and painful bees,
 By nature's instinct led,
 These have their summer granaries,
 For winter furnished.
 But thou, my soul, whose summer's day
 Is almost past and gone,
 What soul-provision dost thou lay
 In stock, to feed upon?
 If nature teacheth to prepare
 For temporal life; much rather
 Grace should provoke to greater care,
 Soul-food in time to gather.

Days of affliction and distress,
 Are hasting on apace;
 If now I live in carelessness,
 How sad will be my case?
 Unworthy of the name of man,
 Who for that soul of thine,
 Wilt not do that which others can Do for their very kine!
 Think, frugal farmers, when you see
 Your mows of corn and hay,
 What a conviction this will be
 To you another day?
 Who ne'er were up before the sun,
 Nor broke an hour's rest,
 For your poor souls, as you have done,
 So often for a beast.
 Learn once to see the difference
 Betwixt eternal things,
 And these poor transient things of sense,
 That fly with eagle's wings.

GODLINESS COMPARED TO A TRADE.

"Wherefore, holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly Calling, consider the Apostle and high-priest of our profession, Christ Jesus," Heb. iii. 1.

THE profession of godliness is in this, and divers other Scriptures, compared to a Trade or calling; and it is a very fruitful and profitable metaphor.

PARALLELS.

I. A Trade or calling properly is that art, craft, or occupation, whereunto one hath been trained, or wherein he exerciseth and employeth himself, whatever it be, whether handicraft, or merchandizing, &c. Now Godliness is the occupation of every true Christian, it is that which he hath been trained up in, it is that which he exerciseth and daily employeth himself about. "Herein do I exercise myself," Acts xxiv. 16. "Rather exercise thyself unto Godliness," &c., 1 Tim. iv. 7.

II. A man, when he first sets up a Trade, hath, or ought to have, a stock suitable to what it doth require, in order to the well-managing of it, or otherwise he is not like to do good of it; for the want of a convenient stock hath ruined and utterly undone many new beginners: so every Christian ought to see, when he first begins to profess Godliness, what stock he hath, I mean, what grace, what faith, what love to God, and to his neighbour, what experiences of a thorough change; for without a stock of the truth of grace, and work of regeneration, no man can follow the Trade of Godliness, to make any saving earnings of it.

III. A man that sets up a Trade, ought to know the nature, worth, and value of those goods and commodities his calling leads him to Trade or deal in, or else he may be quickly cheated, and run out of all, by buying counterfeit goods, or bad ware: so every Christian must know what goods he is to trade spiritually in, as also the nature and excellency of them. Now the heavenly commodities are these, faith, love, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, meekness, temperance, pardon of sin, communion with God, joy in the Holy Ghost, &c. Now he ought to know all these things, the true from the counterfeit. And next unto the graces of the Spirit, and the other excellent and rare things he deals in, there are the ordinances of the Gospel, the nature and usefulness of which he ought also to understand, and not to be deceived about them, lest he take the traditions of men for Christ's institutions.

IV. A man who sets up a Trade, ought also to know who he is to deal or Trade with; so ought every Christian; and that is God, through the Mediator Jesus Christ; for without him there is no Trading to heaven. It is by him we believe in God, by him we come to the Father. Christ is a saint's only Correspondent ; he receives all our prayers and duties, and makes returns of mercies.

V. A man who begins a Trade, ought to be well instructed, and to know every particular art and mystery in it : some Trades or professions are hard to learn, they are full of mystery, and very intricate ; and if they understand them not, or are not crafts-masters therein, they will never live comfortably of them, as experience commonly sheweth : so every Christian ought to learn the mystery of Godliness ; this heavenly calling is not easily learned ; there is no Trade that is more mysterious than the Trade or art of Godliness, as we shall fully evince, and make appear,

1. By plain texts of Scripture.
2. By arguments and demonstrations drawn therefrom.

As to the first, see these Scriptures : 1 Cor. ii. 7, "But we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom," &c., compared with Rom. xvi. 25, Eph. i. 9, and iii. 3, 4, Col. i. 26, 1 Tim. iii. 16, "Without controversy great is the mystery of Godliness ; God manifest in the flesh," &c. Godliness is twofold, 1. The doctrinal part. 2. The practical part.

A mystery is a thing hidden, hard to find out, that which few understand, which lies not open to the sight and apprehension of men. Many arts used amongst men are full of mystery. If a man goes into a chemist's shop, possibly he may see there several extractions of minerals, but he may not know how he extracted those spirits, nor doth he understand the nature and operation of them, that is a mystery. There are divers other curious arts and devices very hard to learn, they are so mysterious ; but all come short of these heavenly mysteries. The mysteries of Godliness are exceeding great.

1. These things are hidden things from the eyes of men. See Matt. xi. 25. The Gospel is read daily, every man hath the history of it in his house ; but alas ! very few understand it ; it is a mystery ; it is not known, but by such only who feel its power, and blessed effects and operations of it upon their hearts.

2. The Gospel, and great things of Christianity and Godliness, are the rare contrivance of God's eternal wisdom, and therefore full of mystery. "If any man thinks he knows any thing, he knoweth nothing as he ought to know," 1 Cor. viii. 2. These things are not easily found out.

3. The history of the Gospel, and principles of Christianity and Godliness, could not be known without revelation ; had not God afforded us the written Word, what should we, or could we have known of these mysteries ? What do the heathen know of them, that have not the holy Scripture ? John xx. 31, Rom. xvi. 25, 26. Doth the light within discover the incarnation, birth, life, death, resurrection, ascension, and intercession of Jesus Christ ? Doth that teach the mystery of faith and regeneration ? It is true some have affirmed, that they should have known all things the Gospel reveals, if they had never had the written word : but how false that is, appears to all ; and they themselves have been silenced, by putting one question to them, which is this : it is said in John xx. 30, "Many other signs did Jesus, in the presence of his disciples, which are not written," &c. Now let them show us what those other signs were : but alas ! they can tell us nothing but what the Scripture relates ; neither had we or they known them but by the record thereof.

That which we have the history of, and yet cannot understand, or make our own, unless the Spirit of God opens and explains it to us, is a great mystery : but we cannot understand the mystery of religion and Godliness, without the Spirit's teaching explanation : Ergo, &c. As the history must be revealed by the written word, so the mystery must be revealed by the Spirit : "For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of a man, which is in him ; even so the things of God knoweth no man but the Spirit of God," 1 Cor. ii. 11.

4. That which needs or requires several gradations and mediums, to open and explain it from time to time, is a great mystery : but the Gospel, or mystery of Godliness, requires such several gradations and mediums, to open it unto the children of men. (1.) God under the law revealed these things by divers sacrifices, washings, and other rites, whilst persons remained in their nonage. (2.) It requires the use of divers earthly similitudes, to open and explain it to the understanding of men. God is compared to a Father, to an Husbandman, to a Judge, to a Creator, to a Portion, to an Householder, &c. Christ, to a Lamb, to Light, to an Husband, to a Vine, to a Shepherd, &c. The Spirit is compared to the Wind, to Oil, to Water; and grace, to seed, to gold tried in the fire, &c. The mysteries of religion and Godliness are so hard to understand in their own nature, that God condescends to open them up to us by earthly things: in this God shows what children we are, and how difficult it is for us to understand these things. And though they are thus explained, yet how little is it that we are able to understand of them! Now that which the children of men are not able fully to take in, or comprehend, though God makes use of the best mediums he in his wisdom sees good to make use of, is a great mystery: but the children of men are able to take in but little of the mysteries of the Gospel, notwithstanding these gracious mediums God is pleased to make use of: Ergo, &c.

5. That which the children of men are not able to take in or receive the knowledge of at once, but when God sees necessary to discover by degrees, little and little, notwithstanding all those proper and fit medicines he condescends to make use of, is a great mystery: but the mysteries of the Gospel, and Godliness, God sees the children of men, notwithstanding all those mediums he is pleased to make use of, cannot take in or receive at once, but that there is need for him to open and discover them by degrees, by little and little. Ergo, It is very mysterious, so vast a depth, so great a light, so strange a mystery is this mystery, that God reveals it now a little, and then a little. Adam had the first discovery of it: "The seed of the woman shall break the serpent's head," Abraham had more of it made known to him; Moses had a greater revelation of it than the prophets: And then John Baptist, who saw more than all that went before him, and upon that account was called the greatest prophet that ever arose amongst them that were born of women; and yet he saw but a little of this great mystery, comparatively to what those saw who were in the kingdom of heaven, viz., the Gospel-church, after the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ, Luke vii. 28.

6. That which all the wise men of the world, merely by all their natural wisdom, arts, and sciences, could never find out, nor arrive at the true knowledge of, is a great mystery: but all the wise men in the world, merely by all their arts and sciences, and human learning, could never arrive to the true knowledge of Christ, and real Godliness: Ergo, the principles of true Godliness, and the mysteries thereof, are out of the reach of mere human reason: though not against or contrary to reason, yet they lie above reason: reason must stoop to faith in these things. The Gospel is called wisdom, as opposite to the wisdom of men; and the apostle saith positively, that it was wisdom in such a mystery, that none of the princes of this world knew. Nay, the Spirit, says one, jeers all the learned of the world in this very thing, because of their gross ignorance. Where is the scribe? Where is the wise? Where is the disputer of this world? "Hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world?" Hence the preaching of the Gospel was accounted by the learned Greeks but foolishness, 1 Cor. i. 18, 20. Natural men may understand natural religion; but true Godliness consists in the light of divine truth, and in the life of grace, God manifesting himself in the light of truth, and working the life of supernatural grace by his Spirit in the heart. True Godliness doth not consist in the knowledge of the letter of the Gospel. A natural man may have the historical or notional knowledge of the Gospel and Christianity, he may arrive to the most exact understanding of things as far as letters and words can express them; that is, he may know the true sense and meaning of things in the Gospel, according to what either the history, or tenor of such words will import, and know the grammatical sense of words, better than many true Christians: But this is not the spiritual and true knowledge of religion and Godliness; for that consists in the saving and experimental knowledge of God, and Jesus Christ. The mystery of the Gospel, and power of Godliness, is the discovery of God's glory in itself, and the working of it gloriously in the soul; it lies not in the bare expression, or knowledge of words, nor in the external form of profession of these words; but it lies in the divine glory of God, which is wrapped up in these words, and the gracious conformity, disposition, and affections of the soul to these things. It is an easy matter to confess Jesus Christ to be the Son of God, and to read the scriptures, to pray, &c. but to see the mystery of that glory which is in this, that Christ is God's Son, and to have the powerful influences of it upon the heart, whereby the soul is brought into the image or likeness of Christ's death and resurrection; this is a mystery.

7. That which the most wise and knowing in the same art or mystery, can reach or understand but part of, must needs be a great mystery; as suppose a school-master, nay, the ablest in the world, who professes to know and teach such and such an art or mystery, is forced to confess, he sees and knows but little of it, or sees but in part, it is so hard and difficult to find out; all would conclude, that art or science was a mystery indeed: But so it is here; for the holy apostles, who had as great a knowledge of these mysteries as any ever had in the world, nay, we may modestly conclude, a greater, yet they declare, they knew but in part, and saw but in part, they saw comparatively, but a little way into these mysteries, "For we know but in part.—Now we see through a glass darkly.—Now I know in part," 1 Cor. xiii. 9, 12.—Ergo, these are great mysteries.

8. That which the holy angels desire to pry into, nay, look into with the greatest earnestness and desire imaginable, and are contented, the better to understand, to learn of the Church; and yet, when all is done, do admire, and stand, as it were, astonished at, is a great mystery: but the angels do pry into these mysteries with the greatest earnestness, and are contented to learn of the Church, that they may the better or more fully understand them, and after all, stand and wonder, to behold the depth of this grace, of this love, and the strangeness of this mystery. Ergo, The Gospel, or doctrine of godliness, is a great mystery. Now to make this argument good, pray consider these texts of scripture, 1 Pet. i. 12, "Which things the angels desire to look into." The word, desire, signifies the utmost coveting or longing after a thing which a man cannot be without: "Desire to look into," παρανοῦσαι, this word signifies bowing down to pry heedful and narrowly into a thing. 1. The angels are greatly taken with this mystery, with this grace and love in Jesus Christ, manifested to fallen man; they look and pry into it, according as it was typified of them, by the placing of the Cherubims looking down towards the mercy seat, Exod. xxv. 20. 2. That they are content to learn of the Church, see Eph. iii. 10, "To the intent, that now unto the principalities, and powers in heavenly places, might be known, by the church, the manifold wisdom of God." 3. That they after all stand as it were amazed, and wonder at the depths, see 1 Tim. iii. 16.—"Seen of angels," ωφθῆναι, it is not meant of a bare sight, but a sight which astonishes the understanding, "And takes up the heart: "He was seen with admiration and wonderment." Thus Dr. Sibbs.

9. That which the glorified saints shall admire, when they arrive to a perfect knowledge, must needs be a great mystery: but the glorified saints shall admire at the mystery of this grace and love, in the day of Christ, nay, it will be the matter of their wonder to all eternity. See 2 Cor. i. 10. Therefore the doctrine of Godliness is a great mystery.

10. This will be further manifest, by considering wherein the greatness of this mystery doth consist.

First; Now the mystery of Godliness principally consists in the person of Christ, God manifest in the flesh. Paul determined to know nothing so much as "Christ, and him crucified," 1 Cor. ii. When we know Christ better, we shall understand this mystery better: Christ is the mystery wrapt up in all the Gospel, he is the scope of all the Scripture, the pearl hid in the field; every line is drawn to him, as the proper centre; all the types and shadows point to him, and all the promises run in him. Jesus Christ is really and truly God, and yet very Man, God and man in one person, and is not this a mystery? (1.) Is it not a wonder, that a woman should compass a Man? (2.) That he that made the world, should be born of a woman! (3.) That the Ancient of days should become a child of a day old! (4.) That blessedness itself should be brought under a curse for sinners! "Christ was made a curse for us, as it is written, cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree," Gal. iii. 13. (5.) That he that was the heir of all things, heir of both worlds, should be laid in a manger; (6.) That he who was God over all, should have no where to lay his head! (7.) That he should become poor, who was so rich, and by his poverty made others rich! Is not this a mystery? (8.) He by dying destroyed death; and unless he had died, we could not live; and by death he brought us to life! (9.) And is it not a mystery, that a person should be capable to die, and yet by his own power raise himself up again from the dead? (10.) Is not this a mystery, that the physician should die to cure his patient, nay, and unless he die, the sin-sick soul could not live; and that his blood should be the balsam? Is it not a great mystery, that the offended Saviour should suffer to free the offending sinner.

11. Is it not a mystery, that the nature of man should be so joined to the divine nature of God, that both should make but one Christ? and that our nature should be exalted above the nature of the angels, that man should sit at God's right hand, that man should be very God, and God very man, in one person? O how great is the mystery of Godliness!

12. Is it not a mystery, that Christ suffered according to the decree and determined counsel of God, and yet the Jews did wickedly in putting him to death? Acts ii. 23, and iv. 28.

Secondly: The mystery of Christianity appear to be great, 1. In God's casting off the Jews who followed after righteousness, and in calling the Gentiles, who followed not after righteousness! That God should not be found of them that sought him, and be found of them that sought him not! (2.) That God should choose poor and contemptible ones into his service, and reject the wise, the noble, and the learned! and that by weak things he overcame the mighty, and by folly confounded the wisdom of this world!

Thirdly; There is a great mystery in election, in justification, in sanctification, in renovation, &c. Nay, what branch or part of the doctrine of Godliness is not full of mystery?

Fourthly; There is a mystery in every grace:

I. In faith: as, (1.) That a sinner should believe, i. e., go out of himself, and be carried above himself, to believe things impossible to man's sense, and above his reason; that he should seek for justification by the righteousness and obedience of another! for a man, as one would think, to have a great deal of holiness, and good works, and yet to throw it, as it were, all away, and be dead to it in point of trust and dependence! Is not this a mystery? (2.) To believe, when every thing is opposite to it; to work for life, and to oppose some sin, a natural man is ready to do; but to believe in Christ for life and holiness, to rely upon his doings, his works and merits, this the heart of man is averse to; nay, and Satan opposeth it, the world mocks at it, and accounts it foolishness. (3.) That a man should believe, and not see, nay, believe, as Abraham did, "in hope against hope."

3. There is a mystery in love, that a man should love him with an endeared affection, with a superlative love, whom the world can see no beauty in: nay, thus to love him, whom their natural eyes never beheld, nay, love him, who is able to make great, and save from all misery, and yet suffers his people, and best beloved ones, to lie amongst the pots, and to be hated and persecuted in the world, and to appearance, to be of all men the most miserable! A saint knows the reason of these things, but it is a mystery to others. The love of Christ turns the affections another way, it drives, as it were, Jordan back, it makes the waters ascend, and run up hill. Is it not a mystery, to see a saint, who hath a hundred, nay, it may be five hundred a year, a gracious wife, many sweet and lovely children, enjoying much health, and living in all prosperity; yet if he hath lost the light of God's countenance, or Christ be withdrawn from him, he is cast down, and greatly distressed and afflicted in his spirit, and crying out, Ah! what is all that I possess, since I want the love of Christ, the presence of Christ? . What is an estate, and no Christ? Wife and children, and no sight of Christ? Christ, saith he, is all to me, and all is nothing without him. This is a mystery to carnal hearts, they wonder at it: nay, to see a man, that hath all the comforts of the world, expose himself to cruel mockings, loss of goods, to imprisonment, and death itself for Christ's sake, is a strange thing to worldly men, they think the man is mad, it is a mystery to them, &c.

Fifthly; The effects and operations of grace and godliness are a mystery.

(1.) That God should make men wise, by teaching them to become fools, 1 Cor. iii. 18.

(2.) That the way to become rich, very rich, eternally rich, is to become poor: this is a mystery, yet this mystery is taught us in the person of Christ. David was a king, and very rich, yet cries out, "I am poor;" he was poor in spirit. This poor man cried, "There is that maketh himself rich, yet hath nothing; there is that maketh himself poor, and yet hath great riches," Prov. xiii. 17.

(3.) That the way to have all, is to lose all: and that a man gains most, when he loses most: is not this a mystery?

(4.) That men must die to live, or that the way to live is to die; nay, that God kills by making souls alive, and yet by that killing and death, brings them to life: and is not this a mystery? Sin must die, and we must die to sin: "Sin revived, and I died,"

Rom. vii. 11, yet by that death he revived, and lived. A man must die to^r self, or he can never live himself.

5. God makes men blind by giving sight, and turns that darkness into light; and is not this a mystery?

(6.) The way to honour and exaltation, is to be abased, and suffer ourselves to be trod upon; this is opened also in the person and life of Christ. To enjoy God's favour is first to bear his seeming frowns. And many such life mysteries there are in godliness.

Sixthly; There is a mystery in ordinances, which those who follow this trade should understand, a mystery in baptism, a mystery in the Lord's supper. But these things I cannot enlarge upon for want of room.

Use 1. Let all take heed they do not slight or reproach these mysteries.

2. Let them not think to understand them in their own fleshly wisdom.

3. Let them labour to get the power and operation of them upon their hearts, and then they will esteem them, and say, there is a truth in what we affirm and teach.

VI. He that would drive a Trade to gain by it, or thrive upon it, must follow it closely, he must make it his chief business, nothing will be done in it to purpose without diligence. So every Christian, who would gain by the Trade of Godliness, must keep close to it, he must follow it day and night, and manage it wisely, throughout all his other affairs. Godliness must be followed without intermission, it must be every day's work; the head, heart, hands, feet, time, strength, discourse, contrivance, must be taken up about it. No man can thrive in Godliness, if his heart be not in it. When thy hand is in the world, thy heart should be in heaven.

VII. He that drives a Trade with discretion, must take heed he runs not too far in debt, and that he keeps his books carefully, or else he may soon run out of all: so must a Christian take heed he run not far in debt. Debts will be contracted: "In many things we offend all:" but be sure to see these debts paid, lest the creditor come on a sudden upon thee. "If any man sin, we have an Advocate," &c. 1 John ii. 1. Renew repentance every day, and labour after fresh acts of faith; keep thy accounts even with God, observe the mercies thou receivest from him, and be sensible of thy faults and miscarriages.

VIII. There is no man that follows a great Trade, but ought to see he hath a stock sufficient to trust; he that cannot trust, in some callings, shall have but a poor Trade: so a Christian must be careful to get a good stock of faith and experience; for if a saint cannot trust God, he will never make any earnings of Godliness. It is true, it behoves a Trader to take heed whom he trusteth; So it behoveth a Christian; he must not trust his own heart, nor in his own righteousness, nor put too much confidence in princes. We can never trust men too little, nor God too much.

IX. A man that would follow a Trade to advantage, must be much at home, and keep his shop, and, as the proverb is, his shop will keep him; but he that is more abroad than at home, will soon come to beggary: so a saint must be much at home, and keep his own heart well. Some professors are more abroad, spying faults in other men, than they are in taking notice of their own.

X. A man that drives a Trade, ought to take heed he get not behind-hand, and instead of getting, lose by his trading: so ought a saint to take heed he go not backwards instead of going forwards, and lose instead of gaining. "Thou hast lost thy first love. Remember from whence thou art fallen, and repent," Rev. ii. 4, 5.

XI. Some men trade upon other men's stocks, as factors, stewards, &c. And such Traders are Christians, they trade upon Christ's stock, they regulate their affairs by Christ's advice, they drive on Christ's interest. All that saints have is their Master's money, and it behoveth them to lay it out, that it may bring in the most increase. Remember all your graces, gifts, and temporal goods too, are the Lord's.

XII. Some Trades require great layings out; and if a man is sparing in his layings out, he must expect his comings in will be accordingly: so the Trade of Godliness requires great layings out. A Christian, who will not lay out his strength, time, and parts, and what he hath, for God, will never grow rich in faith and Godliness.

XIII. Quick returns are the life of a Trade, and animate a man in his calling and business exceedingly: so quick returns do enliven and greatly encourage a Christian, when he finds God answer his prayers, as the promise runs, "Whilst they speak I will answer," &c., Isa. lxxv. 24.

XIV. Some men grow very rich by a Trade : so some Christians grow very rich in faith and experience, by Godliness. See the Church the City of God.

INFERENCES.

I. THIS may inform the saints what they undertake, when they enter upon the work and business of Godliness, they must look upon it as their chief and principal calling.

II. How are many men deceived ! they pursue the world as their chief business, and mind religion and Godliness, when they have nothing else to do.

III. Be exhorted, O Christian, to follow thy calling ; dost thou want motives ?

1. Consider, it is an honourable and ancient Trade ; Christ Jesus himself was of this profession, Godliness was his chiefest business ; all the saints and worthies of old followed this calling.

2. It is the best Trade and calling in the world : "For the merchandize thereof is better than the merchandize of silver, and the gain thereof than fine gold," Prov. iii. 14. Heavenly things are rare things, things of great worth. (1.) They cost dear, viz., the price of Christ's most precious blood. (2.) They are durable riches. (3.) O what precious things are pardon of sin, peace with God, union and communion with God ! What a rare thing is heaven ! is not a crown worth trading for ?

3. Consider who you trade with, and that is the great God, through Jesus Christ.

4. You have a faithful correspondent, one that ever lives to make intercession for you.

5. You have goods upon easy terms ; "Ask, and you shall receive." "Come, buy wine and milk without money, and without price," Isa. lv. 1.

6. It is the most profitable Trade : "Godliness with contentment is great gain. It is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come," 1 Tim. vi. 6, and iv. 8.

AFFLICTION COMPARED TO CLOUDS.

"Clouds and darkness are round about him," &c., Psal. xcvi. 2.

"A day of Clouds," Joel. ii. 2.

"How hath the Lord covered the daughter of Zion, with a cloud, in his anger ?" Lam. ii. 1.

Clouds are a moist vapour, exhaled from the earth and sea by the sun, and condensated by the cold in the middle region, and carried by the winds up and down, called the bottles of heaven ; which God, saith one, doth fill with wine and vinegar, with mercy or wrath.

By Clouds and darkness are meant Afflictions and dark providences, under which God oftentimes exercises his own people.

PARALLELS.

I. Clouds are many, "Who can number the Clouds in wisdom ?" Job xxxviii. 37. So the calamities of God's people are many, innumerable evils compass me about, many are the Afflictions of the righteous.

II. Clouds are said to be round about the Almighty, nay, "thick Clouds are said to be a covering to him," Job xxii. 14, and yet he dwelleth in the light, which no man can approach unto. Now when God is said to dwell in darkness, or to have Clouds and darkness round about him, it shows that God's works and ways are hid from us ; so that we are not able to see him, nor look up to behold what he doeth : God's providences are like Clouds, they obscure or hide God's counsel and way of his working from us ; he is in the Clouds though we see him not, those Clouds and darkness which are about him do not hinder his sight of us, though they hinder our sight of him.

III. Clouds are of different kinds, some are said to be thick and very black, when others have a kind of thinness in them, and are, as Mr. Caryl notes, as it were, transparent ; some are more gross and opacous, quite hindering and intercepting our sight of things beyond them : so some of God's dispensations are dark, very dark, and others more bright ; some are so dark and gloomy, such black and thick Clouds are over us, that we can see no light, we cannot see through them, no seeing things beyond them; when others are not so dark, they are like light Clouds, the mind of God may be seen and plainly understood in them. Job was covered with thick darkness, he understood not the reason why God contended with him, he had quite lost sight of the Almighty; "I go forward, but he is not there, and backward, but I cannot perceive him; on the left hand, where he doth work, I cannot behold him; he hideth himself on the right-hand, that I cannot see him," Job xxiii. 9, 10. But it was his mercy, God was hid on the right-hand: for sometimes he hides himself on the left hand from a people.

IV. Clouds make the day dark, dull, and people very melancholy: so some of God's dismal providences make the dispensation in which we live very dark and uncomfortable, and fill us with trouble and sorrow.

V. Clouds are at the commandment of God, he covers the heavens with them, and again dissipates and scatters them at his pleasure: so all the troubles and calamities that attend a people or nation, are brought upon them by the ordering and overruling hand of God's providence: is there any evil in a city and I have not done it? "Who gave Jacob for a spoil, and Israel to the robbers? Did not the Lord?" &c., Isa. xlii. 24. And then he again, sometimes in an unexpected manner, scatters all the thick Clouds in a moment, making the day clear, serene, and comfortable.

VI. Clouds sometimes grow thicker and thicker, threatening a dismal storm of thunder and hail, causing all that are in the field to hasten home: so the dispensations of God's judgments sometimes are such, that all God's people fear a dreadful storm will come upon them; and then those who have strayed abroad and estranged themselves from God, begin to look about them, and hasten home apace, to take sanctuary in God.

VII. Clouds cover the face of heaven; many vapours gathering together rise up and darken the sun, and keep us from the comfortable aspect thereof: "I will cover the sun with a Cloud." The same word that is used for a Cloud, doth signify a multitude: so Clouds, as Mr. Greenhill observes, sometimes signify a multitude of men, a multitude of enemies, as it was prophesied concerning Nebuchadnezzar's army, and of the great Gog, "Thou shalt ascend, and come like a storm, and shalt be like a Cloud to cover the land."

VIII. Clouds are so swift, that they are irresistible; they pour out the rain, and none can let them: so the enemies and other troubles, come sometimes in upon God's people, that there is no stopping them.

IX. Clouds are such plain emblems of misery and Affliction, that the Hebrew word עָנָן for a Cloud, signifies also calamity: so the day of the Lord's wrath in scripture is set out by Clouds frequently: "That day is a day of trouble and distress, a day of darkness and gloominess, a day of Clouds and thick darkness."

Now the reasons why God brings Clouds and darkness upon his people, are many, which I must pass by.

AFFLICTION COMPARED TO FIRE.

"Wherefore glorify ye the Lord in the Fire," Isa. xxiv. 15.

"I will bring the third part through the Fire," Zech. xiii. 9.

"And the Fire shall try every man's work, of what sort it is," 1 Cor. iii. 13.

FIRE is taken in the holy Scripture two ways, either literally, or figuratively and metaphorically; and so it signifies several things, and amongst the rest, these;

1. The wrath of God, Mal. iv. 1.

2. The effects of his wrath, Isa. lii. 4.

3. Any sore and dismal Affliction, trial, or persecution, Isa. xxiv. 15.

Note. Judgments, or sore calamities, are compared to Fire.

PARALLELS.

I. There is a great judgment and terror in Fire let loose upon a people: so when God brings in enemies, or lets loose upon a people, it is a great judgment, very terrible and amazing.

II. There are different Fires: some are a judgment, as before; but others are profitable, as the refiner's Fire: so there are different metaphorical Fires. God's wrath on the wicked is like a devouring and consuming Fire, that burns up all; but the Fire in which he puts his own children, is like the refiner's Fire. Afflictions and judgments upon the godly, are but to burn up their corruption, and make them more pure; they shall not consume them.

III. Some fires break forth suddenly, and unexpectedly: so some judgments break forth upon a people and nation suddenly, when no man looks for it, whether it be plague, sword, or famine.

IV. Fire burns terribly; when it hath gotten to a head, it is hard to stop it: so when the wrath of God breaks forth in good earnest upon the wicked, it is hard to stop it, though wrath hath been quenched by prayer, yet sometimes prayer cannot quench wrath; "Pray not for this people," Jer. vii. 16.

V. The Fire will refine gold, and make it more fit for use; but wood, hay, and stubble it consumeth to ashes: so sincere Christians endure the Fire of affliction, and are made better by it; but all drossy professors and hypocrites the Fire of persecution consumes.

AFFLICTION COMPARED TO A ROD.

"Let him take his Rod away from me," Job ix. 34.

"I will visit their transgressions with a Rod," Psal. lxxxix. 32.

"Hear ye the Rod," &c. Mic. vi. 9.

THE Rod hath divers acceptations.

1. The word שָׁבַת shabat, is taken sometimes strictly, for a bow or sprig growing from the stock of a tree, because a Rod or staff is made of a bough of a tree.

2. It signifies a sceptre, the sceptre of a king, an emblem of power, &c. And because in ancient time, as the learned observe, they were wont to make sceptres of such Rods, and all sceptres have the form or shape of a Rod; therefore the original expresses the Rod and the sceptre by the same word. Gen. xlix. 10. "The sceptre, shabat, the Rod shall not depart from Judah," &c. This sceptre, saith Mr. Caryl, denotes two things.

1. Authority to judge or command, (2.) Power to correct or punish.

3. The word sometimes refers to ecclesiastical or spiritual discipline, or censure of the Church, "Shall I come with a Rod," &c.

4. The word is often used in Scripture to signify punishment or correction, because correction is often given with a Rod, and therefore to be under the Rod, is to be under punishment or Affliction, &c. "The Rod and reproof give wisdom," Prov. xxix. 15. There is a divine Rod of chastisement for the godly, and an iron Rod of wrath and vengeance for the wicked. And in this sense the words are to be taken in the above cited texts.

PARALLELS.

I. A Rod puts to pain, if it be sharply laid on; it makes a person to smart, and cry out, &c. So Afflictions are grievous and painful to flesh and blood; they wound and pain the outward man, whilst the inward man takes pleasure in them: "I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in persecutions, in necessities, in distresses for Christ's sake," 2 Cor. xii. 10. Yet in another place the same apostle saith, "No Affliction for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous," Heb. xii. 11. As the spirit would not do those evils, which the flesh would and doeth; so the flesh would not endure those evils of sorrow and Afflictions, which the spirit gladly yieldeth to. As a believer delights in the law of God after the inward man, when the flesh is vexed and troubled at it: so he delights in the Rod after the inward man, when his corrupt part is most impatient and unquiet under it, "Rejoice when ye fall into divers temptations," Jam. i. 2: that is, into divers Afflictions. The flesh hath its sense, and feels smart; but the spirit is armed with faith, which overcomes the smart. Afflictions were not so much as a Rod, if they did not pain and make smart; and we are not so much as Christians, if we cannot bear the smart with patience, &c.

II. A Rod is used to correct, not to kill. "Affliction is called a Rod, in regard of the hand that useth it; a sword is in the hand of a judge, and a Rod in the hand of a Father. God deals with his people, as a father with his children, in chastising them. When we offend him, he doth not take a sword in his hand to slay us, but a Rod to scourge us."

III. A Rod is used by a father when no other means will reclaim the child: so God never afflicts his people, but when he sees there is need of it, he seeing no other means will do. "He doth not willingly afflict nor grieve the children of men," Lam. iii. 33.

IV. A father hath divers Rods; if one will not do, and make the child bow and submit, and humble himself, another shall: so God hath divers Rods; as sometimes corrects with the Rod of sickness, losses, crosses, &c. Sometimes with the Rod of poverty, sometimes with the Rod of desertion; and sometimes he uses the wicked in his hand, as a Rod to afflict and chasten his own people, which is one of the worst of God's Rods; and therefore David chose rather to fall into the immediate hand of God, than to be scourged with the Rod of the enemy. The Assyrian is called the Rod of God's anger, Isa. x. 5.

V. In using the Rod, the tender father always designs the good of the child: so God in afflicting and chastening his people, designs their great good; "It is not for his pleasure, but our profit, that we might be partakers of his holiness," Heb. xii. 10.

INFERENCES.

I. LET those Christians who are under the Rod, confess they have deserved it: he hath not punished us according as our sins have merited at his hands.

II. Let us from hence also learn to submit to the Rod, and not strive and struggle with God. O how uneasy are some men and women under affliction. O, I could bear, saith the soul, any thing but this. Alas! is it necessary that thou shouldst choose thine own Rod? God will correct us with that Rod he pleases, according to his good pleasure it must be, for the degree and kind of it too; and are you troubled at the Rod, at this Rod? It may be you had rather God should afflict you some other way; but God sees this is the best, and no other will do the work upon your hearts. It may be, if we had committed some other sins, and not such and such a sin, we should have been corrected but with such and such Rods, and not with this which seems most cross and grievous to us.

III. Let us labour to find out what God speaks to us by the Rod; let us search and try our ways, Lam. iii. 40. Many times we may find out our sin by the punishment of it.

IV. Let us confess our faults when we are under the rod: God hearkens to hear what we say: "Against thee only have I done this thing, and in thy sight," Jer. viii. 6, Psal. li. 4.

Quest. Some may say, why does God use the Rod?

Answ. 1. Because believers are his children: fathers will look after the good of their children. To spare the Rod, may be the ruin of the child, Prov. xxii. 15.

2. Because the sins of God's own people are grievous in his sight. "You have I known above all the families of the earth, and therefore will I punish you for your iniquities," Amos iii. 2.

VI. Hear the Rod: "The Lord's voice crieth to the city, and the man of wisdom shall see thy name. Hear ye the Rod, and who hath appointed it."

1. The man of wisdom is one that fears God, Prov. ix. 10. A holy man is a wise man, and a sinner is a fool; holiness is the best wisdom, and wickedness is the greatest folly.

2. He that escapes the greatest evil, and chooses the greatest good, is a man of wisdom.

3. He that prefers the good of his soul before the good of his body, is a man of wisdom.

4. The man of wisdom will hear the Rod. (1.) He will commune with his own heart, to find out the cause of God's anger, the cause of Affliction. (2.) He will tremble at God's judgments. (3.) He will justify God under the Rod. (4.) He is one that finds out God's name in the Rod: He finds out anger in the Rod, mercy in the Rod, wisdom in the Rod, power in the Rod, faithfulness in the Rod, &c.

5. A wise man under the Rod will endeavour to turn away and pacify the anger of God.

There is, it appears, a voice in the Rod, which a wise man strives to understand. (1.) There is a chiding voice in the Rod. (2.) And not only so, but in some Rods an amazing voice. (3.) A threatening voice. (4.) An awakening voice. (5.) A convincing voice. (6.) There is an humbling voice in the Rod.

Quest. Why do so few men and women hear and understand the voice that is in the Rod?

Ans. 1. Because the Affliction or judgment perhaps is general, it is hard for men to make special and particular application of common calamities.

2. Because men are more subject to look to secondary causes in the Rod, than to the immediate hand of God.

3. Because men are so heedless and insensible, they will not trouble themselves to find out the voice that is in the Rod.

4. It is because men are so full of other business, that they have not time to hearken to God's voice in the Rod.

5. It is because they do not see any present effects of God's hands; he is lothe to strike: "How shall I give thee up, O Ephraim:" &c.

AFFLICTION COMPARED TO A FURNACE.

"But the Lord hath taken you, and brought you forth out of the iron Furnace," Deut. iv. 20, Jer. xi. 4.

"And lead in the midst of the Furnace," Ezek. xxii. 18.

A Furnace is either properly, or figuratively.

1. Properly. (1.) For a place which refiners refine their gold in, Prov. xvii. 3. (2.) A place of torment, such as was that which the three worthies were put into, who refused to worship Nebuchadnezzar's golden image, Dan. iii. 6—22.

2. Metaphorically, for heavy and cruel bondage, Deut. iv. 20, Jer. xi. 4. For hell-torments, Matt. xiii. 42. "And shall cast them into a Furnace of fire."

Note. Afflictions, or sore and cruel trials, are compared to a Furnace.

PARALLELS.

I. A Furnace is prepared for gold: "The refining-pot for silver, and the Furnace for gold;" so Afflictions are appointed for the saints, who are compared to gold.

II. A Furnace refines gold, and makes it much more pure than before: so doth Affliction refine, and make more holy, the hearts and lives of godly Christians: "When he hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold," Job xxiii. 10.

III. A Furnace is made sometimes very hot: so Afflictions are sometimes very sore and grievous to the godly. A weak fire will not refine some gold; no more will small trials refine some Christians.

IV. A Furnace melts the gold, and makes it soft, before it is refined: so Afflictions melt or make the hearts of believers soft: "And I will leave you there, (speaking of the Furnace) and melt you," Ezek. xxii. 20.

V. A Furnace consumes tin, lead, &c., and also the drossy part of gold: so those Afflictions and trials God brings upon his people, burn up or consume all loose and hypocritical professors, who are compared to base metal, as tin, lead, &c. And not only so, but also all the filth and corruption of such who are sincere. "Into thy smoke shall they consume," speaking of ungodly ones, Psal. xxxvii. 20. See Christ a Refiner.

VI. Some Furnaces denote great torment; it is an amazing thing, to be thrown into a hot fiery Furnace: so some Afflictions and judgments brought upon an ungodly people, are very terrible, when they are in wrath. The wrath of God is to wicked men like a burning and consuming Furnace: "Who can stand before his indignation? or who can abide in the fierceness of his anger? His fury is poured out like fire," Nah. i. 6. See Furnace, as it respects hell-torments.

AFFLICTION COMPARED TO THE WINTER.

"For lo, the Winter is past," &c., Cant. ii. 11.

SOME understand by Winter, the state of the elect before conversion; but others, in my judgment, upon better grounds, those cruel persecutions the Church of God shall be under during the reign of the tyrannical and antichristian powers of the earth: "The Winter is past, the rain is over and gone," &c. These things, saith Mr. Ainsworth, may be applied to the outward troubles and grievances of this life, by the malice of the world, as when Israel was brought into the bondage of Egypt, and of Babylon, and after was released: likewise to the spiritual Winter, reign, and rage of antichrist; after which the graces and fruits of the Gospel began again to flourish: it may also signify the Afflictions of the soul.

PARALLELS.

I. Winter is a time of cold, attended with snow, frost, storms, and sharp weather: so whilst the spiritual Winter of the Church continues, sharp and bitter storms of persecution frequently arise upon the godly.

II. Winter, though it be sharp, yet it is a profitable and wholesome season of the year, in respect of the body of man, and fruits of the earth: so it is the spiritual Winter of the Church, or soul; the godly can no better be without adversity, than we can be without Winter.

III. Winter-frosts, &c., kill the worms, weeds, and vermin: so do Afflictions, and the frosts of persecution, destroy the weeds of our corruption, and free the Church from carnal professors, who are like worms, and base vermin, that hinder the growth of God's choice grain.

IV. In Winter it is a difficult and hard thing to travel some roads: so it is a difficult thing to travel in the way to heaven, i. e., to keep on in the path of Gospel holiness and obedience, in the day of persecution.

V. In Winter many things look as if they were dead; trees, flowers, and plants have no beauty in them, they are not pleasant to the eye: so whilst the Winter-time of the Church continues, the blessed trees and plants of righteousness seem as if they were withered, and their beauty and glory gone, by means of the tyranny and oppression of the ungodly: but when the winter is past, and the longed-for spring beginneth to appear, they will sprout up, and flourish again gloriously.

VI. In Winter we have now and then some good and comfortable weather: so now and then in the Winter-time of the Church, there is a sweet, serene, and calm time of peace and tranquillity: "Then had the Churches rest throughout all Judea, Galilee, and Samaria, and were edified, and walking in the fear of the Lord, and in the comfort of the Holy Ghost were multiplied," Acts ix. 31.

VII. The Winter makes the spring and summer much more acceptable and sweet: so the storms, tempests, cold frosts, and nipping time of trouble, oppression and persecution, will cause the golden age of the world, viz., the reign and kingdom of Christ, like the spring and summer, to seem much more sweet and acceptable to the saints, and all that fear God. This is signified by the singing of birds, &c. "They shall sing in the heights of Zion," &c. "The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad, and the desert shall rejoice, and blossom as the rose; it shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice even with joy and singing," &c., Jer. xxxi. 12, Isa. xxxv. 1, 2.

VIII. In Winter, frosts, and cold pinching weather usually last not long; they are but for a season; a thaw will come: so the Afflicted state of a godly man, though it be unpleasant, yet it is not lasting, to be sure not everlasting. Though some frosts hold longer than others, yet none hold always; summer will come: and usually where Winter is fiercest, summer for a recompence is pleasantest. Our modern geographer,* having described the sharpness of Winter in Muscovia, concludes thus: "Such is their Winter, &c. Neither is their summer less miraculous; for the huge seas of ice, which in a manner covered the whole surface of the country, are at first approach of the sun suddenly dissolved, the waters dried up, and the earth dressed in her holy-day apparel; such a mature growth of fruits, such flourishing of herbs, such chirping of birds, as if it were a perpetual spring." Even thus, after a cold Winter of Affliction, shall the Church, or a particular soul be relieved by a sweet and comfortable summer of prosperity.

* Heylin's Geography.

INFERENCES.

I. This may help the godly to bear up under Afflictions and sufferings in this world. What though they be pinching and troublesome whilst they last, yet they have a very good effect. Like as frost mellowes the earth, and after it the clods crumble easily; whereas if there was no Winter, no frost, they would be more stiff, and not fit for the husbandman: so thy heart is hereby made mellow, and more meet and fit to receive the good seed. Frost dries up the ill humours of the earth; so do Afflictions those of the soul, &c. The Winter frosts kill the weeds and worms which eat the roots, and hinder the growth of herbs and corn; so Afflictions tend to kill our lusts, those weeds and worms, that breed and grow in our hearts always, hindering our fruitfulness in grace and true godliness.

II. You know fire does well in Winter, to warm the blood, &c. So the fire of the Spirit will warm and heat thy soul in and under Afflictions and temptations; get therefore near it, and labour to experience its powerful operations. See the Word and Spirit compared to Fire.

III. It may reprove such who are discontented under Afflictions; they would not be in such and such a troubled condition, &c. Alas! soul, will a wise man be angry and offended with the Winter? Wouldst thou have all summer and no Winter? all peace and prosperity, and no adversity! Consider how necessary Winter is.

AFFLICTION COMPARED TO DARKNESS.

"Behold trouble and Darkness," &c., Isa. viii. 22.

"And brought me into Darkness," &c., Lam. iii. 2.

"A day of Darkness," &c., Joel ii. 2.

DARKNESS is taken properly, or metaphorically.

1. Properly; Darkness is nothing else but a privation of light; it is no positive creature, it hath no cause in nature, but is the consequent of the sun's absence.

2. Metaphorically, or improperly; it signifies divers things: (1.) The state of nature, or unregeneracy, or deep alienation from the life of God; "Ye that were sometimes Darkness," &c., Eph. v. 8, 11. (2.) Several sins wherein wicked men live. (3.) Desertion. (4.) The grave. (5.) Hell. (6.) Afflictions.

Note: Afflictions, calamities, and spiritual desertions, may be compared to Darkness.

PARALLELS.

I. Darkness is a judgment; thick Darkness was one of the plagues of Egypt; so some calamities and severe Afflictions are brought upon a people or nation, as a just and dreadful judgment of God.

II. Natural Darkness is occasioned by the absence of the sun, and obscurity of the other luminaries of heaven. So some Afflictions and calamities are occasioned by the absence of the light of God's word, and hiding of his face. When the Gospel is taken away from a people, that people is presently involved in thick Darkness, which is a most sore and fearful judgment.

III. Darkness is very uncomfortable, it is a dolesome thing to have no light. So to be under some Afflictions, especially desertion, is the most uncomfortable state in the world.

IV. Darkness causeth a man to lose his way, and wander about, and exposeth him to many dangers. So spiritual Darkness causes a man to stumble. "Walk whilst thou have the light, lest Darkness come upon you; for he that walketh in Darkness, knoweth not whither he goeth," John xii. 35. "Give glory to the Lord your God, before he cause your feet to stumble upon the dark mountains; and whilst you look for light, he turn it into the shadow of death," Jer. xiii. 16.

V. There are degrees of Darkness; Darkness, and thick Darkness, and the blackness of Darkness, &c. One degree of Darkness may attend the day; a day may be dark, but not like the Darkness of the night; and some nights are darker than others, as experience shows. And hence we read of Darkness, and of the shadow of death; "Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil," &c. Psal. xxiii. 4; that is, the greatest Darkness and evil that can befall a godly man. The shadow of a thing in scripture, saith Mr. Caryl, denotes the power of a thing; and to be under the shadow of a thing, is to be under the power of it. To be under the shadow of the Almighty, is to be under the power of the Almighty, &c. To be under the shadow of death, is to be under the power and reach of it. Though I may be so near death, that it may seem to others to be really death, and that it is impossible to escape death, yet will I fear no evil. Some Afflictions threaten death upon God's people, and upon his concerns and interest in the world, and Christians may seem to be under the influence of death. The influences of death are those fears, and doubtings, divisions, distractions, and vexations of heart and mind, cries and confusions, which usually accompany or prepare the way for death, "Let Darkness and the shadow of death stain it," &c., Job iii. 5; that is, such Darkness as dwells with death, such Darkness as fills the house of death, the grave. Such Darkness as this, Heman complained of; "I am accounted with them that go down into the pit, &c.; free among the dead, like the slain that lie in the grave, whom thou rememberest no more, and they are cut off by thy hand. Thou hast laid me in the lowest pit, in Darkness, in the deep. Thy wrath lieth hard upon me, and thou hast afflicted me with all thy waves, Selah," Psal. lxxxviii. 4—7. He seemed to be under the greatest Darkness, so sorely deserted, that he saw no light, he sat in the very shadow of death, viz., deadly darkness, thick Darkness, stifling Darkness, such as in deep pits and mines under the earth, where vapours and noisome damps do many times strike men with death, in the most deplorable state and condition imaginable. It is one thing to have some Afflictions, and some doubtings of mind and spirit; another thing, to be in these great deeps of Affliction and desertion.

VI. No natural Darkness is so thick and dismal, but God can make it worse; he hath power over the Darkness, as well as over the light; "I form the light, and create Darkness; I make peace, and create evil. I the Lord do all this," Isa. xlv. 7. So no Affliction or sorrow is so grievous, but God can make it much greater. Though we may be in Darkness, nay, in night Darkness, yet this Darkness may increase more and more, to a perfect night of Darkness. "I will punish you yet seven times more for your sins."

VII. Darkness is more grievous to such as have enjoyed much light, than to a man that was born blind; for one that hath had his perfect eye-sight, and hath known how sweet a thing light is, how sad and lamentable is it for him to lose his sight, or to dwell in Darkness! So it is more grievous to a Christian, who hath lived in a land of light, and hath long enjoyed the sweet favour and light of God's countenance, to be deprived of all spiritual light and comfort, than it is to a person, who never knew how sweet divine light, communion with God, and the blessings of the Gospel are.

VIII. Let Darkness be never so great, yet God can soon expel it, and bring forth light in the room of it. So it is easy with God to turn our night of sorrow and Affliction, into light, joy, and a good day.

IX. Darkness is many times mixed with light, so that it is hard to say which is most, the light or the Darkness. So sometimes it is with a people, or particular soul. "But it shall be one day, which shall be known to the Lord, not day, nor night. But it shall come to pass that at evening time it shall be light," Zech. xiv. 7. It shall be dark; but at even-time, that is, when thicker Darkness is looked for, and suddenly expected, instead of that, there shall be light. God grant it may be thus with his poor Church in England.

INFERENCES.

I. Bless God for light. O what a sad thing it is to be in Darkness, either to be deprived of the happy fruition of the light of God's countenance, or of the light of God's word and ordinances!

II. Work whilst you have light, lest Darkness come upon you. Is not England threatened at this time with a night of Popish Darkness.

III. But however, there is comfort to the godly: though their day may be clouded, and darkness may invade them, yet it will be light again. "Light is sown for the righteous, and gladness for the upright in heart," Psal. xcvi. 11. Light is like seed hid under the clods, but it shall sprout, and spring up gloriously in a little time.

1. It is sown in the purposes and decrees of God: He hath purposed and decreed to give light to the righteous, and joy and gladness to the upright in heart.

2. It is sown in the glorious attributes of God.

3. It is sown in the faithful promises of God.

4. It is sown in the faith and prayers of the people of God. There is a plentiful stock of seed sown in this respect, and it shall in due time spring up; the prayers of the saint's fallen asleep, are not lost.

5. Light, and a good day, is sown in all the sufferings of the saints; if we suffer with him, we shall also reign with him.

6. Light and gladness is sown as it were in the horrid wickedness of the ungodly. Was not light and gladness sown for the Israelites, in the sins of the Amorites? (1.) In the sin of self-confidence the seed may be said to be already sown, "Behold I sit a Queen, and shall see no sorrow," Rev. xviii. 7. (2.) In the sin of blasphemy. (3.) In their treachery and deceit. (4.) In their bloody cruelty.

AFFLICTION COMPARED TO A STORM OR TEMPEST.

"As fire burneth the wood, and as flame setteth the mountains on fire; so persecute them with thy tempest, and make them afraid with thy Storm," Psal. lxxxiii. 14, 15.

"The east-wind carrieth him away, and he departeth: and a Storm hurleth him out of his place," Job xxvii. 21.

"A Covert from the Storm," Isa. iv. 6.

"When the blast of the terrible ones is as a Storm against the wall," Isa. xxv. 4.

"And the winds blew, and beat upon that house, and it fell, and great was the fall of it," Matt. vii. 27.

By Storms and Tempests are meant two things: 1. The terrible wrath and vengeance of God against the wicked. 2. The fierce wrath of the ungodly against the righteous.

Note. Wrath, whether it respects the wrath of God or man, is compared to a Storm, or terrible Tempest.

We shall speak of this metaphor, Storm and Tempest, principally in reference to the wrath and judgment of God.

PARALLELS.

I. A Storm or Tempest sometimes is looked for and expected, by certain signs which some observe, a considerable while before it comes; by the gathering of the clouds, they see a storm threatened: So the wrath and displeasure of God against a people, or nation, is by some observing men expected and looked for before it comes. There are certain signs, which are like the gathering of the clouds. (1.) When sin grievously abounds. (2.) When the hand of God hath been lifted up, and yet sinners are not humbled. (3.) When many faithful and eminent servants of God are taken away by death. (4.) When there are strange and wonderful signs or prodigies seen in the heavens, or upon the earth, or waters, &c. (5.) When the people of God generally, as one man, do look for it; for God usually goes first upon the hearts of his own people in this respect. (6.) When former afflictions do not humble, nor work reformation in professors, and others.

II. A Storm comes now and then very suddenly, before men are aware: So doth the Storm of God's wrath come oftentimes very suddenly upon a sinful nation and people. It may be the plague this night breaks forth, or a fire, or a war, which men dreamed not of: "When they cry peace and safety, sudden destruction," &c. 1 Thess. v. 3. I only allude to that text.

III. A Storm is sometimes very tempestuous, mixed with thunder, lightning, and great hail, so that it is very terrible, causing horror, and amazement in most men and women: so the wrath of God sometimes breaks forth upon a people in a most sore and dismal sort, so that the mountains, the great ones of the earth, quake at him and all are afraid of his judgments, and cry out to the rocks and hills to cover them: "The Lord thundered with a great thunder on that day upon the Philistines and discomfited them," &c. 1 Sam. vii. 10. The Lord also thundered in the heavens, and the Highest gave his voice, hail stones and coals of fire: Yea, he sent out his arrows, and scattered them; and he shot out lightning, and discomfited them, Psal. xviii. 13, 14.

IV. A Storm and cruel Tempest is irresistible; man cannot withstand it when it comes: so the wrath and judgments of God, when they come in fury upon a people, there is no resisting of them: "Who can stand before his indignation."

V. A dreadful Storm many times makes sad desolation, blowing down houses, and tearing up trees by the roots: so the wrath of God many times makes great desolation: it sweeps away thousands, and ten thousands, leaving towns and cities almost without inhabitants: "Come, see what desolation the Lord hath made in the earth."

VI. God sometimes suffers the devil to raise the wind, who thereby does great mischief, as in Job's case, Job i. 19. So the Démon, and his instruments, are many times suffered to raise a great Storm of persecution upon the Lord's people.

AFFLICTION COMPARED TO A FLOOD.

"The Lord sitteth upon the Flood," &c. Psal. xxix. 10.

"All thy Floods and waves are gone over me," &c., Psal. xlii. 7.

"For the enemy shall come in like a Flood," &c., lix. 19.

"The Floods have lifted up their heads, O Lord," &c., Psal. xciii. 3.

"And the Floods came," &c., Matt. vii. 27.

By Floods some understand ungodly men; others, afflictions; and those principally which wicked men bring upon the saints. Thus Ainsworth, and divers others expound it. Afflictions and troubles, saith Caryl on Job xxviii. 20, are often compared to waters in the Scriptures, &c.

P A R A L L E L S.

I. A Flood is the gathering together of many waters: so the ungodly oft-times gather themselves together against the righteous; "For lo, thine enemies make a tumult; and they that hate thee, have lifted up the head.—The tabernacles of Edom, and the Ishmaelites; of Moab and the Hagarenes, Gebal, and Ammon, and Amalek, the Philistines, with the inhabitants of Tyre," &c. Psal. lxxxiii. 2, 6, 7. And as many enemies combine together against the saints; so oftentimes many afflictions of divers kinds do beset them: "Many are the afflictions of the righteous."

II. A Flood, or many waters meeting together, roar, and make a great noise: so the wicked, combining together against the interest of Christ, roar, as it were, in belching out cruel threatenings against the saints. Thus Pharaoh and the Egyptians made a great noise, as if they would in a moment have swallowed up poor Israel. "The enemy said, I will pursue, I will overtake, I will divide the spoil: my lust shall be satisfied upon them; I will draw my sword, my hand shall destroy them," Exod. xv. 9.

III. A Flood comes many times suddenly: so do afflictions and troubles come upon God's people.

IV. A Flood many times rises very high, overflowing all banks and bounds: so the ungodly rise high in rage and malice against the saints, breaking down all bounds of law and justice, and banks of humanity, making fearful incursions upon the just rights and privileges of God's people, both civil and ecclesiastical.

V. Floods come violently, there is no stopping them: so afflictions come in like manner oftentimes upon the saints; there is no escaping or stopping the dismal providence of God.

VI. Floods of water come successively, one wave following another: so do troubles and afflictions frequently upon a believer; like Job's messengers, one at the heels of another.

VII. Floods many times drive down trees and houses, &c. So afflictions and grievous calamities drive down, and carry away the house and hope of a foolish builder, or unsound professor, Matt. vii. 29.

INFERENCES.

I. WHAT a mercy is it God's people have not been drowned in these Floods, long before this time! it is the Lord only that hath set up a standard against them. As the waters have risen higher and higher, so he hath graciously raised the banks of his divine Providence, and thereby prevented the danger.

II. Let not God's people be afraid, for the Lord sits upon the Floods, &c.

1. He sits upon the Floods as an observer, his eye is upon the wicked, he sees what they are doing in secret, their counsels are not hid from him.

2. The Lord sits upon the Floods, to direct and order their course; Afflictions are ordered by him, both in respect of kind and duration.

3. The Lord sits upon the Floods as a restrainer; He can assuage these mighty waters at his pleasure: "Surely the wrath of man shall praise thee, and the remainder of wrath shalt thou restrain."

4. The Lord sits upon the Floods, as a preserver; he it is that keeps his saints from drowning: "When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee," &c., Isa. xliii. 2.

5. The Lord sits upon the Floods as a glorious Deliverer: "Many are the Afflictions of the righteous, but the Lord delivereth him out of them all."

AFFLICTION COMPARED TO HEAT.

"Where thou makest thy flock to rest at noon," Cant i. 7.

"A shadow from the Heat," &c., Isa. xxv. 4.

"And when the sun was up, they were scorched," Matt. xiii. 6.

THE Afflictions and sorrows of the godly are set forth by extremes, by extreme cold, frosts, &c., and then again by extreme Heat: both are grievous to be borne and endured. Their effects are such, that they aptly illustrate the miseries of the Lord's people in this world. By the Heat, or hot and scorching beams of the sun, in Matt. xiii. 6, our Saviour himself sheweth, is meant persecution, verse 21.

PARALLELS.

I. NATURAL Heat is from heaven, it is occasioned by the scorching beams of the sun, the earth naturally being cold: "So Afflictions come not out of the dust, neither doth trouble spring out of the ground," &c., Job v. 6, 7. Though the meritorious cause of all our sufferings is our sin, and so materially they are from ourselves; yet the Lord is the efficient cause of them: is there any evil in the city and I have not done it?

II. Great Heat, or the continual scorching beams of the sun, are grievous to be borne: so sore Afflictions, and fiery trials, are grievous to God's people, I mean their fleshly part: "No Affliction for the present seems joyous, but grievous," &c., Heb. xii. 11.

III. In a time of great Heat, or in the hottest time of the day, in very hot countries, great labour is unpleasant, and very hard to be undergone: so it is hard to labour and bear heavy burdens in God's vineyard, viz., to stand up for, and maintain the truth, in a time of hot persecution, as many faithful servants of God found by experience in the Marian days, &c.

IV. Great Heat, or the continual scorching beams of the sun, quickly fade, consume, and spoil the beauty of the body: so cruel sufferings and persecutions spoil the outward beauty of the Church, making her look very black and deformed in the eyes of the world, which made the spouse to cry out, "I am black," &c., which she attributed to the vehement and scorching sun-beams of persecution: "The sun hath looked upon me," Cant. i. 5, 6. And as persecution seems to mar the external beauty of the Church and people of God, rendering them the most miserable people in the world to a carnal eye: so likewise other Afflictions have the like effect upon the body: "My skin," saith Job, "is black upon me, and my bones are burnt with Heat," Job xxx. 30. The skin, and external beauty cannot hold its own against the ill effects of a disease, especially if lasting: "When thou with rebukes dost correct a man for his iniquity, thou makest his beauty to consume away like a moth," &c., Psal. xxxix. 11.

V. The scorching Heat of the sun is but for a short time, in the heat of the day; so the persecution lasts but for a short time: "Our Afflictions which are but for a moment," &c. "Sorrow may continue for a night, but joy shall be in the morning," &c.

VI. In the time of Heat, and hot scorplings of the sun, men use to betake themselves to some shadowy places for refreshment: so in the day of Affliction, and hot persecution, the Church of God, and each sincere Christian, hath a shadowy place to retire unto; God affords sweet refreshment to his suffering saints.

VII. In a time of great Heat, the fruits of the earth, and many green things are dried up, and withered away, and a famine many times follows: so by the means of a hot and cruel persecution, many Christians, who seemed zealous for God, and to have much greenness upon them, in a day of liberty and prosperity, are dried up, like the fruitless fig-tree, and wither away; and also sometimes a famine of the word follows.

VIII. In a time of great Heat and drought, those trees that are planted by the water-courses flourish sweetly notwithstanding: so all faithful and sincere Christians, in the hottest time of persecution, shall flourish, and not cease from yielding fruit: "Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord.—For he shall be as a tree planted by the water-side, and that spreadeth out her roots by the river, and shall not see when Heat cometh; but her leaf shall be green, and she shall not be careful in the year of drought, neither cease from yielding fruit," Jer. xvii. 18.

AFFLICTION COMPARED TO WORMWOOD.

"Remembering mine Afflictions, and my misery, the Wormwood, and the gall," Lam. iii. 19.

WORMWOOD properly is an herb well known amongst us, upon the account of its exceeding bitterness; hence a common proverb rises, "It is as bitter as gall or Wormwood," &c.

PARALLELS.

I. WORMWOOD and gall, and other bitter things, are physical, very good in divers distempers: so afflictions are good spiritual physic; the diseased soul receives much profit by them many ways. 1. They purge out the corrupt and noxious humours of the soul. 2. They tend to abate and pull down the tympany of pride. 3. They are good against spiritual deadness. 4. They are against spiritual barrenness; nothing, when sanctified, makes a soul more fruitful. 5. They kill worms, as Wormwood naturally doth, principally the Worm of an accusing conscience, that breeds out of the corruption to the heart and life, &c.

II. Wormwood, gall, or aloes, are not commonly given alone, but are mixed with other ingredients, otherwise it is hard to take them down: so God mixeth mercy with Affliction; in the midst of judgment, he remembers mercy towards his own people. Babylon shall have nothing but gall and Wormwood, it shall be without any composition of mercy and pity; hence said to be a cup without mixture, &c.

III. Wormwood and gall are exceeding bitter, and make such things bitter as are given with them, though sweet in their own nature: so Afflictions, especially some sorts of Afflictions, are very bitter and irksome to the flesh; they also make bitter all our earthly sweets.

Quest. Perhaps some may say, when are Afflictions so exceeding bitter? &c.

Ans. 1. When God strikes us in our best and dearest earthly enjoyments; when he takes away an only son, a husband, a wife; or by a fire, or otherwise, takes away all our earthly substance, stripping us quite naked of everything: then Afflictions may be said to be bitter, like gall or Wormwood.

2. When God brings upon us one Affliction after another: to day thy cattle are taken away, and then presently upon it thy children, by a severe judgment; and after all, thou art struck with a sore and dismal Affliction in thine own body. Thus it was with Job. When God deals thus with a man or woman, Afflictions may be said to be bitter. But then again,

3. When God strips a people, or particular person, not only of all their outward mercies, or earthly good things, but also of all their spiritual good things too, such things as are dearer to them than their lives; then Afflictions may be said to be bitter. Should God at once bring so severe a stroke upon us, as to deprive us of all our civil rights and privileges, suffering an enemy to break in upon us, who would not regard our good and wholesome laws, by which every man's property is secured to him : and not only so, but deprive us of the Gospel, and blessed ordinances therefore, and drive our ministers into corners, or burn them to ashes at Smithfield, and set up Popery, and tyrannize it over our consciences : this Affliction would be bitter, like Wormwood and gall.—Which God in mercy prevent.—

4. When Afflictions are very heavy and sore upon us, and we cannot find out the cause and ground why God contends with us, then they may be said to be very bitter. It was this which made holy Job so much distressed in his Spirit.—“ Show me wherefore thou contendest with me,” Job x. 2. He did not doubt of the justice and righteousness of God in them, but as suspecting some evil in himself, as yet unseen, or not discovered to him.

5. When God afflicts his people, or a gracious soul, very sorely for sin, for this or that sin, which they know they are, or have been guilty of. O this goes to their hearts, to think that they should provoke their heavenly and dear Father against them, to chastise them so severely.

6. When we are under great Afflictions, and God hides his face, or withdraws himself from us, then Afflictions are bitter : this is to be outwardly afflicted and inwardly too.

7. When Afflictions are lasting, or of long continuance, then they are very bitter. A small burden or weight, borne long, will weary a strong man ; but if it be very heavy, and abiding, it is much more grievous.

8. When God afflicts a man in indignation, when he lets fly his tormenting arrows against him, from the fierceness of his incensed wrath, forcing him to drink off his cup without mixture, it being all bitter, and no sweet. Thus God deals sometimes in a way of judgment with wicked men, though never so with his own people, and to such, Afflictions are bitter indeed.

INFERENCES.

I. From hence we may perceive what an evil sin is, that God will not spare his own children, when they offend him. Sin is a bitter thing, as appears by the effects of it ; Afflictions are many times the fruits and effects of sin.

II. It shows us also, that there is a great difference betwixt the Afflictions and miseries of the godly and the wicked.

Quest. But some may say, how may a Christian comfort himself, or get support under sore and bitter Afflictions ?

Ans. 1. Consider, that all your Afflictions, though never so bitter, are less than your sins deserve : “ He hath not dealt with us after our sins, nor rewarded us according to our iniquities.”

2. Consider, that though God chastise a godly man very sorely, yet it is not in a way of wrath, to destroy him, but contrariwise, for his great good and advantage.

3. Consider, there is not one dram of gall in the bitterest cup thou dost partake of, but what God, the most wise Physician, put into it ; and if less gall would do, thy portion should not be so bitter. All our Afflictions are proportioned to us by the Almighty, both for kind and quantity.

4. Consider, thy Afflictions are not so bitter as the Afflictions of many of God's children were, of whom we read, who were far more worthy and deserving than thee or I are : what are thy Afflictions compared with holy Job ?

5. Consider the bitter portion Jesus Christ drank up for thy sake : he never offended, and yet suffered, and his sufferings were intolerable ; no mortal is able to express the nature of his grief and sorrow. Shall Christ suffer willingly for us, who sinned not ? and shall we be troubled at the bitterness of our sufferings, who are so grievously defiled with iniquity, and many times suffer for our sins ?

6. Consider, that all the bitter a godly man meets with, or ever shall, will be in this world. As wicked men have their bitter here, and shall have nothing but bitter hereafter : so godly men have all their bitter here, and shall have nothing but sweet hereafter.

7. Consider, how gracious God is to his own children, in intermixing all their bitter with sweet. It is not like the bitter some wicked men have in this world : “ Hath he smitten him, as he smote those that smote him ? Or is he slain, according to the slaughter of them that are slain by him ?” Isa. xxvii. 7.

8. Consider, all the bitter thou meetest with in this life, will be turned into sweet, “ Ye shall be sorrowful, but your sorrow shall be turned into joy,” John xvi. 20.

AFFLICTION GOD'S ARROWS.

"For the Arrows of the Almighty are within me," &c., Job vi. 4.

"He hath caused the Arrows of his quiver to enter into my reins," Lam. iii. 13.

AN Arrow is a deadly engine, so called in the Hebrew, from its effect, cutting or wounding: taken properly, it is an instrument out of a bow of wood or iron, either for sport or fight; but figuratively, it signifies divers things in the holy scripture.

1. The word of God: "Thine Arrows are sharp in the heart of the king's enemies, whereby the people fall under thee," Psal. xlv. 5, that is, thy words are sharp and piercing.

2. Bitter and reproachful words: "They bend their bows to shoot their Arrows, even bitter words," Psal. lxiv. 3, and cxx. 4.

4. Any evil or mischievous purpose which a man intends or aims to hurt his brother; "When he bendeth his bow to shoot his Arrows, let them be as cut in pieces," Psal. lviii. 7.

4. Any kind of affliction or punishment: "And the Lord shall be seen over them, and his Arrows shall go forth as lightning," &c., Zech. ix. 14.

P A R A L L E L S .

I. Arrows are shot out of a bow by some man; some arm must bend the bow, and shoot the Arrow, or the Arrow moves not: so all Afflictions come from God, who is the efficient cause of them; hence called the "Arrows of the Almighty."

II. Arrows fly swift, and wound suddenly; so Afflictions come very speedily oftentimes with a glance, as an Arrow, quick as a thought.

III. Arrows come expectedly oftentimes, and wound a man: so afflictions come many times upon a person or people unexpectedly: "When they cry peace and safety, then sudden destruction comes upon them."

IV. An archer hath commonly many Arrows; his quiver is full of them: so God hath many judgments: we read of his quiver too; he can send one Arrow after another.

1. He hath the pestilence; this is one of his arrows: "Thou shalt not be afraid for the terror by night, nor for the Arrow that flieth by day, nor for the pestilence that walketh in darkness," &c., Psal. xci. 5.

2. He hath famine; this is another of his Arrows: "When I shall send upon them the Arrow of famine," &c., Ezek. v. 16.

3. He hath the sword; this is another Arrow of the Almighty, and this Arrow God shot at Job; he brought upon him the Sabeans, who slew his servants with the edge of the sword, Job i. 15.

4. He hath thunder-bolts and hail-stones, which are also some of the Arrows of his quiver; and these are in readiness against the day of battle.

5. The withdrawals of God from a soul or people, are also part of the Arrows of his quiver, and these go deepest of all, they go to the very heart: "For thine Arrows stick fast in me," saith David, Psal. xxxviii. 2.

V. Arrows fly secretly, and make no noise; they are felt before they are seen: so many afflictions fly silently upon a man, stealing upon him, and wounding him unobserved and unseen.

VI. Arrows are sharp things, and made sometimes more sharp than ordinary, as the archer sees cause: so afflictions are very sharp and bitter things, and sometimes God makes them sharper than at another time. "I will make mine Arrows drunk with blood," Deut. xxxii. 42. Arrows are instruments drawing blood, and some rebukes and judgments of God are like unto them. "The Arrows of the Almighty are within me, the poison whereof drinketh up my spirit," Job vi. 4. "Job seems to allude to the custom of those cruel men, who, when they pursued the enemies with deadly hatred, and would wound them incurably, used to dip the heads of the Arrows, the tops of their spears, and the point of their swords, &c., in poison, that so every wound might be death. The poison of such Arrows, &c., drinks up the spirit, and corrupts the blood." Job compares the Arrows God shot at him, not to be ordinary Arrows, which kill only by piercing, but to poisoned Arrows, which kill by infecting. Afflictions, like Arrows, put a man to great pain. When a man hath terror without, and terror within, terror coming from the wrath of man, and terror coming from the wrath of God; his potion is bitter. Such Arrows are sharp and tormenting.

METAPHORS, ALLEGORIES, SIMILES, TYPES, ETC.,

CONCERNING

THE WORLD, THE LIFE OF MAN, AND THE FOUR LAST THINGS,

THE WORLD COMPARED TO A WILDERNESS.

"Who is this that cometh out of the Wilderness, leaning upon her beloved?" &c. Cant. iii. 6, and viii. 5.

Wilderness, מִדְבָּר tohu. A Wilderness is properly a wild place, a place without shape or order. Moses hath this word, Gen. i. 1, to express the chaos, "The earth was without form and void."

- I. Metaphorically, it is taken sometimes for affliction, Hos. ii. 14, Rev. xii.
2. For this World, and so understood generally by expositors in this and other places, i. e. for the present state, ways, worships, and pollution of the World, &c.

PARALLELS.

I. A Wilderness is commonly a waste, wild, and barren place, some of which are of a vast bigness; this World is of a vast bigness, and very barren of grace and holiness.

II. A wilderness abounds with briars and thorns; so doth the World with wicked and ungodly men, who are compared to thorns and briars.

III. In a Wilderness are many wild and devouring beasts, so that it is dangerous to dwell in it, or pass through it; so this World abounds with cruel and unmerciful men, who are called wolves, lions, bears, dogs, dragons, &c., by which means God's people are always exposed to great trouble and danger, whilst they remain therein.

IV. In a Wilderness a man may soon lose his way, and wander up and down; so whilst men abide in this World, they are subject to go astray, and wander from the path of peace and righteousness, and therefore have great need of a guide.

V. In a Wilderness commonly grow trees of divers sorts, some good and some evil; so in the World are men good and bad, righteous and wicked.

VI. In a howling Wilderness a wall of fire is exceeding necessary to preserve from wild and ravenous beasts; God upon this account is said to be a wall of fire to his people, whilst they remain in this World, among the sons of Belial, Zech. ii. 5.

VII. In a Wilderness there is no tilling, sowing, nor planting; so in the common field of this World there grows little or nothing, but what the carnal and natural hearts of sinners bring forth.

VIII. A Wilderness is a solitary and dolesome place; so is this World to a godly man.

THE WORLD COMPARED TO A FIELD.

The Field is the World," Matt. xiii. 38.

PARALLELS.

I. THE Field was a broad place; so is the World.

II. In a Field grows wheat and tares, good and evil seed; so in this World there are good and evil men, saints and sinners, which God would have grow together, like the wheat and tares, until the harvest.

III. What is set or sowed, or comes up naturally in a field, ripens for harvest : so the godly and the ungodly, whilst they remain in the common field of this World, ripen for the spiritual harvest.

IV. In a Field, flowers, and other precious things, oft-times receive much detriment from enemies, evil beasts, and many other ways : so the godly, whilst they remain in this World, receive great hurt from Satan, wicked men, and from the corruptions and evils of their own hearts.

V. Part of a Field an husbandman separates sometimes from the rest, to make a garden, orchard, or vineyard of : so God, the good Husbandman, hath taken a little part or parcel of the sons of men from the rest, to be a peculiar people to himself.

THE END OF THE WORLD COMPARED TO HARVEST.

" The Harvest is the end of the World," Matt. xiii. 39.

I. When the Harvest is ripe, it is cut down ; the husbandman sends reapers into the field : so when all the elect are ripe for heaven, and wickedness is grown to full maturity, so that ungodly ones are all ripe for hell, the end of the world will come, and then God will send reapers into the Field, which are the holy Angels ; and they will put down, and gather out of the Field, all things that offend, and them that do iniquity.

II. At the harvest, the reapers divide between the good and evil grain ; they bind up the wheat by itself, and the tares by themselves, &c. So shall those spiritual reapers do, they shall gather all the elect, like wheat, into God's garner, and bind up the tares into bundles to be burned.

III. The husbandman waits with much patience for the harvest ; so God Almighty patiently waits, bearing and forbearing with wicked men, until the end of the world.

DISPARITY.

When harvest is all housed, the husbandman presently tills and prepares his ground again, designing to sow more seed ; but when this harvest is all come home, and housed, God, the good Husbandman, will not till, plow, or sow the Field of the World any more ; no more Gospel to be preached, nor graces or gifts to be distributed, when this harvest is ended.

THE LIFE OF MAN COMPARED TO A SWIFT POST.

" Now my days are swifter than a Post," &c. Job ix. 25.

PARALLELS.

I. A Post rides swiftly, he makes haste ; so the life of man, or time of a man's life swiftly passes away.

II. A Post ought to make no stay ; so the days of man's Life stay not ; the hour-glass of time runs continually, and never stands still.

A Post, says Mr. Caryl, is an excellent emblem of time. There are many considerations in Post-riding, which shows how exceeding speedy time must be, to which it is here compared. " 1. A Post rides upon fleet or speedy horses. 2. He rides his horses upon their speed. A man may have speedy horses, and go softly ; but a Post spurs on. 3. A Post has change of horses at every stage ; so that he may keep upon the speed. 4. He hath horses standing ready for change ; they are not to fetch out of the Field, or to be made ready, when he comes to his stage ; it is but leaping into the saddle, and away. 5. He that rides Post makes no long meals, much less feasts ; he takes a bit, and is gone. 6. He lies not long in bed, he scarce goes to bed till he comes to his way's end. 7. A Post has extraordinary pay for his service, and that to cause him to make the more speed. 8. Sometimes h rides upon pain of death, with a halter about his neck; no Man will loiter when his Life lies on it. 9. All give way to him that rides Post; he must not be hindered. 10. He stays not to salute, much less, like other travellers, to gaze and view the country, towns, buildings, gardens, by or through which he passeth."

All these things laid together, evince, that a Post makes great speed; yet saith Job, ix. 25, "My days are swifter than a Post." A Post may by one means or another be stayed; but the days of Man's Life stay not. The Post may stay whilst he changes horses, &c., but the chariot of time, viz., the sun, stayeth not to change horses. The sun is the measure of time, and that makes no stop, hath no stage, or baiting-place.

THE LIFE OF MAN COMPARED TO A SWIFT SHIP.

"They are passed away as the swift Ships, or, as the Ships of Ebeth," Job ix. 26.

I. Some understand by Ebeth, the name of a river in the eastern part of the world, about Arabia, near the place where Job lived, that runs very swiftly, which adds to the swift motion of a Ship that sails on it. A Ship in a dead water having the wind blowing rightly and briskly, runs apace; but if it hath a swift stream besides, it runs the faster.

II. Others take the word, not as a proper name, but as signifying desire, from abab, to desire with earnestness: and then the sense is thus rendered, "My days are passed away as a ship of desire." That is, a Ship, which being laden with rich commodities, the master and pilot desire earnestly to bring her speedily to her port, that so they may put off their commodities, and make sale of such rich lading.

III. The Chaldee, and others, give a further note upon it, deriving the word abab from ebib, which signifies a stalk growing up early from the earth, and bringing forth the first ripe fruit of any kind: and so it is put for an early ripe summer-fruit, as plums, apples, cherries, &c., and then the sense is, "My days are like a Ship, which carrieth early fruit:" so the vulgar, "like a Ship carrying apples."

IV. There is another sense given by those who derive the word from a root, which signifies to hate and oppose, or to be an adversary; and then it is thus rendered, "My days pass away as a pirate's Ship, or as a Ship that goes to take a prey, or as a Ship that goes out to take prizes upon the sea." Now, such Ships are the swiftest of all others, being prepared on purpose to make way, and overtake other Ships; their lading is not burthen, but ballast, that they may be swift of sail; so saith Job, my days pass away like a Ship; not like some great merchant-ship, deeply laden, which can make no great speed in the sea; but as a Ship of piracy, that hath nothing in her, but weapons, artillery, and ammunition, to oppose those they meet with, which sail with every wind; such as are your nimble frigates, fly-boats, and ketches, which sail with every wind: or gallies, which pass without wind, carried with the strength of arms and oars; all being vessels used to run in upon, and surprize a booty. This also is a good interpretation; and so Mr. Broughton translates it, "My days do fly away as the pirate's Ship," &c. All show, the Life of Man swiftly passeth away.

THE LIFE OF MAN COMPARED TO AN EAGLE.

"As an Eagle hasteneth to her prey," Job ix. 26.

AN Eagle is a very swift creature, but when she hasteneth to her prey she makes the greatest speed. The Life of Man is not compared to an Eagle in an ordinary flight, but as an Eagle that hasteneth to her prey, when hunger adds swiftness to her wings; thus with swiftness our days pass away.

THE LIFE OF MAN COMPARED TO A WEAVER'S SHUTTLE.

“ My days are swifter than a Weaver's Shuttle,” &c., Job vii. 6.

I. A Weaver's Shuttle is an instrument of a very swift motion; and the word, חַלְחַל, which is rendered swifter, signifies that which is fitted for the swiftest motion.

II. When the Weaver hath finished his web, he cuts off the thread: so when a man hath run out the length of his days appointed by the Almighty, his Life is cut off, &c.

THE LIFE OF MAN COMPARED TO WIND.

“ My Life is Wind,” Job vii. 7.

P A R A L L E L S .

I. THE Wind passeth away speedily: so doth the Life of Man.

II. The Wind passeth irresistibly, you cannot stop the Wind: so no Man, be he never so strong, can hinder the speedy motion of his days.

III. The Wind when it is past, returns no more; as you cannot stop the wind, or change its course; so all the power in the world is not able to recall or direct Man's Life; which way the Wind goes, it will go; and so soon as it comes, it is gone: so when a Man's days are gone, there is no recalling of them again: our days pass, and shall not return, by any law or constitution of nature, or by any efficacy of natural causes. “He remembered that they were but flesh, Wind that passeth away,” Psal. lxxviii. 39.

THE LIFE OF MAN COMPARED TO A CLOUD.

“ As the Cloud is consumed and vanisheth away: so he goeth down to the grave, shall come up no more, he shall return no more to his house,” &c., Job vii. 9.

P A R A L L E L S .

I. As the Cloud, such a Cloud as you see hanging in the air, is consumed, or gradually spent: so the days, or Life of Man, by little and little is consumed.

II. A Cloud comes to its height, and then is quickly dispersed, and vanisheth: so Man soon comes to his full strength, and presently is gone.

III. A Cloud is like a bottle full of rain, or sponges full of water; God crushes these sponges, or unstops these bottles, and they are emptied; and in emptying vanish away, and return no more: so Man being emptied of Life, vanisheth away, and returns not again.

Objec. But why then doth Job say, that the Clouds return after their rain? Eccles. xii. 2. How then doth Job say, that the Cloud vanisheth, so Man goeth to the grave, and returneth no more?

Answ. Solomon in that place of Ecclesiastes gives a description of old age, and the sad condition of Man in it; he calleth it the evil day, and wishes men would consider their latter end, before those evil days overtake them: “Before the light of the sun, moon, and stars be darkened, and the Clouds return after the rain.” In old age the Clouds return after the rain thus; as in some very wet time, when we think it hath rained so much, as might have spent and quite exhausted the Clouds, and drawn those bottles dry, yet you shall see them return again, it will rain day after day as fast as ever: so in old age, when rheums distil so freely, that you would think an old Man had emptied himself of all, yet the Clouds will return again, and floods of watery humours overflow. Thus the Clouds of old age return, and in this sense the Clouds of the air return, after they are consumed and spent into rain.

But how doth a Cloud return? not the same Cloud numerically, that Cloud which was dissolved doth not return; the same sun goes down and vanisheth out of our sight in the evening, and returneth in the morning, the same individual and numerical sun. But that numerical Cloud which vanished, comes not again. Thus Man vanisheth and returns as the Clouds return after the rain; that is, after one generation of Men are dead, they return again in their children; another generation springs up, but there is no other returning to Life till the resurrection; they that die shall not live again here; they shall not return to their house; their place shall know them no more.

THE LIFE OF MAN COMPARED TO A FLOWER.

"He cometh up like a Flower, and is cut down," &c., Job xiv. 2.

MAN is compared to a fading Flower. There are many rarities and excellences in a Flower. 1. Sweetness, to please our smell. 2. Beauty and variety of colour to affect the eye. 3. Softness, affecting the touch, &c. But Job speaks not a word of any of these properties, he speaks not of a flourishing but withering Flower; not of its springing up, but of its cutting down, or of its springing up, only in relation to cutting down.

PARALLELS.

I. A Flower comes up in the spring, and seems very beautiful, but its standing is very short, as you may observe in the crowslip and divers other Flowers. So Man comes up, but his abiding here is short; his standing is so small, that it is not so much as mentioned. We are born to die, and we die as soon as we are born; i. e. we are in a dying state.

II. A Flower is oft-times cut down or cropped off in its budding. So is Man; he comes up like a Flower, and is cut down; he is cut down by death; death is the scythe which cuts down this Flower.

1. Natural death. (1.) By sickness. (2.) By age.

2. Violent death. (1.) Casual, when a Man is slain by accident. (2.) Cruel, when a Man is slain by murderers. (3.) Legal, when a Man is slain or cut off by the magistrate.

III. A Flower, if it be not cut or cropped off, yet it soon withers away and is gone. The very sun, the wind, and air consume its beauty. The naturalists tell us of a plant, called ephemeron, because it lasts but one day; as also of a worm, called hemerobion, because it lives but one day. Such a plant and worm is Man. The heathen poet gives his wonder and observation of the rose, that it grows old even in the very budding. The seventy read these words of Job in the same tenor, he decays like a budding Flower; as if death, saith Caryl, did rise early, and watch for this budding Flower to cut it down. And though some of these Flowers stand till they wither, as Solomon in his allegory sheweth; that is, till grey hairs. Yet all the time of their standing they have been falling, Eccl. xii. 5; so that we may well say with the Psalmist, "As for Man, his days are as grass; as a Flower of the field so he flourisheth; for the wind passeth over it, and it is gone, and the place thereof shall know it no more," Psal. ciii. 15, 16.

IV. The owner of Flowers knows the best time to crop them, &c. So God knows the best time to crop off or take away by death any of his choice Flowers. See Man compared to a Flower.

THE LIFE OF MAN COMPARED TO A SHADOW.

"He fleeth also as a Shadow, and continueth not," Job xiv. 2.

"For what is your Life; it is even a vapour, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away," Jam. iv. 14.

THE learned observe three sorts of Shadows. 1. Natural. 2. Civil. 3. Spiritual.

1. A natural Shadow is a dark light, caused by the coming of some thick body between us and the sun. This is a Shadow in a proper and strict acceptation.

2. By civil Shadow we understand protection, defence or safety, Isa. xlv. 25.

3. Spiritual Shadow is taken for a dark and imperfect representation of divine things. So all the ceremonies of the law of Moses are called Shadows.

The whole Life of Man is but as a Shadow. "My days are like a Shadow that declineth," Col. ii. 17, Heb. viii. 5, and x. 9, Psal. cii. 11.

PARALLELS.

I. A Shadow is next to nothing; what is there in a natural Shadow? So what is the Life of Man? he rather seems to live, than lives. A Shadow you know is opposed to a substance.

II. A Shadow is a very uncertain thing. So is the Life of Man. The Shadow, a Man may be under now, may, before he is aware, be gone. A Shadow is as fleeting and uncertain a thing, as any thing in the world. "Our days on earth are as the Shadow," 1 Chron. xxix. 15. How is it there is no abiding, no certainty of our Lives?

III. A Shadow is very swift in motion; what flies more swiftly than a Shadow? as common experience shows. So the Life of Man is gone in a moment, like lightning; a dream, a bubble, the flower of the field, or a flying Shadow. Our days on earth are as a Shadow; that is, they fly swiftly away like as a Shadow, and there is no abiding. A vapour is much of the nature of a Shadow.

INFERENCES.

First, from all these similitudes we may infer, that the Life of Man is very short, his days swiftly pass away.

"Man that is born of a woman is of few days, &c. He comes up like a Flower, and is cut down; he flieth as a Shadow, and continueth not. His Life is like wind, like a cloud or vapour," &c. All swift and fleeting things.

"Behold thou hast made my days as an Hand-breadth," Psal. xxxix. 5. The largest extent of the breadth of an hand is but a span; the lesser extent only four fingers. To which the measure of Man's Life is compared.

I. Man's Life is short in comparison of those who lived before the flood; some then lived near a thousand years.

II. Much shorter when compared with the Life of God, who is from everlasting, without beginning and without ending.

Secondly, This may stir us all up, or be a great motive to us to improve and redeem our time. "This, I say, brethren, the time is short."

I. Be persuaded your days are few. It is easy to say it, but hard to believe it, and live in the sense of it. The child hopes to be a Man; a Man hopes to be an old Man; and he that is very old hopes to live yet many days.

II. Be persuaded thy days are uncertain; when thou liest down, thou knowest not whether thou shalt rise any more or no; when thou goest out, thou knowest not whether thou shalt return any more or no. What a small thing may take away thy Life!

III. Learn from hence to get a true measure of your days. David desired a measure of his days, that he might know how frail he was. Some do not measure their days by the King's standard; they measure their days by the Life of their progenitors. My father and my grand-father, saith one, lived so long, and why may not I live as long as they did? Others measure their days by their present health and strength: Others by the sound and healthy constitution of their bodies. Now these things are not a fit nor lawful measure of your days, but rather those things of which you have heard, viz., the weaver's shuttle, the morning dew, the flower of the field, the early cloud, the shadow and vapour that flieth away.

IV. This may reprove and show the folly of many wicked Men, who like the rich Man in the Gospel, say in their hearts, "We have goods laid up for many years, take your ease, eat, drink, and be merry," &c., Luke xi. 19. "Their inward thought is, that their houses shall continue for ever, and their dwelling-places to all generations." Psal. xlix. 11.

V. It may tend to strengthen the Godly under afflictions. Let them strive to bear up with patience. All their days are but few, and therefore the days of sorrow cannot be many.

VI. It may stir up all to labour to take hold of eternal life. If our days here are few, let us get a well-grounded hope of living in heaven; for they never die, who live in that kingdom.

VII. Let us also endeavour to improve the opportunity of time; I mean those gracious advantages God is pleased to afford us for the everlasting good and well-being of our souls when time and days shall be no more. Men of the world take great care to improve all opportunities to enrich themselves, or increase their outward substance. They will not lose their market-time, nor change-time, nor fair-time. They will be sure to come early enough, and every way to bestir themselves with wisdom and diligence: And shall not we be as wise and as diligent for the enriching our souls? Shall we slight seasons, sabbaths, sermons, convictions, &c. Let all remember, "now is the accepted time; now is the day of salvation," 2 Cor. vi. 2. Now, whilst it is called to-day, or never; now sinners may get an interest in Christ, union with God, the gifts and graces of the Spirit; now they may obtain pardon of sin, and peace of conscience; now there is a prize put into their hands; they may be made for ever, if they look wisely about them, now they may be made heirs of God, heirs of a kingdom, heirs of a crown, of a crown of life, of a crown of glory, of a crown that fadeth not away. But if they lose the present opportunity, they may never have the like again. Time is, but in a very short space, it may be said, time was, nay, time is past. Will it not be sad to hear God tell thee, and conscience tell thee, on thy death-bed, now time is past, it is too late now, these things shall be denied you now, you must perish for ever, and be damned in your sins.

THE BODY OF MAN IN THE GRAVE COMPARED TO SEED THAT IS SOWN.

"Thou Fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die," 1 Cor. xv. 36.

THE apostle compares the body of man that is laid in the grave, to Seed that is Sown.

PARALLELS.

I. SEED that is sown lies some considerable time in the earth before it rises or springs up: so the bodies of men lie some time in the grave before the resurrection, though some lie much longer than others; as such who lived in Adam's, Noah's, and Abraham's days; yet generally all lie, and shall lie some time in the grave, before they rise again.

II. Seed, that it may not abide alone, is first Sown and dies, and then it rises again; "Verily, verily, I say unto you, except a corn of wheat fall to the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit," John xii. 24. So the Body of man must die, or be changed, or it can never arise, nor be made glorious to bring forth the eternal fruit of praise to God. As Seed loses nothing by being Sown: so the Bodies of the saints shall lose nothing by death; death, I mean, will be by no ways to their disadvantage, but contrariwise to their great benefit.

III. The body of the same seed or corn of wheat that is sown, rises again. "Every seed hath its own body," 1 Cor. xv. 38. So the same numerical body that is laid in the grave shall rise again. If it was not thus, the dead rise not; he that denies this, denies the resurrection of the dead: "And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God, whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another, though my reins be consumed within me," Job xix. 26, 27.

DEATH COMPARED TO A SLEEP.

"And many of them that Sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake," Dan. xii. 2.

"Even so them also that sleep in Jesus, will God bring with him," 1 Thess. iv. 14.

DEATH is often called a Sleep in the holy scripture. Sleep is a figure or image of Death, a fit resemblance of Death; as will appear by the following parallels.

PARALLELS.

I. SLEEP is rest, or gives rest to the body: so Death is or doth give rest to the body. And hence Job saith, speaking of Death: "I should have lain still, and been quiet: I should have slept, then had I been at rest," Job iii. 13. We usually say, when a man goes to sleep, he goes to rest. There is a four-fold rest which we obtain in Death. 1. From labour and travel; no work there. 2. There is a rest from trouble and oppression: "there the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary be at rest," Job iii. 17. 3. There is a rest from passion and sorrow: no grief shall afflict us there. 4. Which is better than all, there is a rest from sin, a rest from the temptations and drudgery of Satan, a rest from the law in our members.

II. In Sleep the whole body resteth, but many times the spirits of some men are troubled; though the outward man is at rest, yet the inward man is sorely disturbed, whereas the bodies and spirits too of others are at rest and quiet: so in the death of the wicked, though their bodies be at rest, yet their souls are tormented. It is the opinions of some men that the soul Sleeps with the body, and is wholly senseless of joy or misery until the resurrection. But that doubtless is a great error: for though it be granted that many operations of the soul do cease when it departs from the body, yet the soul sleeps not. There are some acts of the soul which are organical, and there are other acts which are inorganical, or immaterial. The organical acts, that is, whatsoever the soul acts by the members of the body, those acts must needs cease at Death; but the soul can act of itself without the assistance of the body, as we may collect by many experiments, while our bodies and souls are joined together. How often do we find our souls at work, when our bodies lie still and do nothing? When Sleep binds up all our senses, and shuts up the windows of the body close, that we can neither hear nor see; yet then the soul frames to itself, and beholds a thousand various shapes, and hears all sorts of sounds and voices; the soul then sees, and hears, and deviseth, discourseth, grieves, rejoices, hopes, fears, chooseth, and refuseth. All this the soul doth in dreams and visions of the night, when deep Sleep falls upon man. What meditations have some good men had in their Sleep! they have had scriptures wonderfully opened to them, and have been grieved when they waked to find the matter gone from them. God seals up instruction sometimes to his people in their sleep. Also in ecstasies and ravishments the body is, as it were, laid by as useless and instrumental to the soul. "I knew a man in Christ fourteen years ago," so the apostle saith, "whether in the body I cannot tell, or out of the body I cannot tell, God knoweth," &c., 2 Cor. xii. 2, 3. Now, if the soul was not capable of a separation from the body, and in that separated state capable of such divine ravishments, Paul might easily have resolved the case, and said, he was taken up in the body, but he could not tell whether the soul acted with his bodily organs, or without them. He had mighty operations in his soul, his spirit wrought strangely, and then took in such revelations of God and from God, as his bodily organs could never fashion into words, or represent by speech. He heard, quæ fando explicari a quoquam homine non possunt, "Unspeakable words, which it is not lawful," or possible, "For a man to utter." The soul hath an ear, to hear such words that the body cannot find a tongue to express. So John, in his divine ravishment, saith, "I was in the spirit on the Lord's day:" as for his body, that was, as to that business, laid aside and suspended as useless in that day, and his spirit called up to that angelical work, viz., the receiving of visions and revelations from on high, &c. Now, as the souls of good men, whilst they are in this world in Sleep, and in trances, or ecstasies, are capable of such glorious ravishments, &c, so when their bodies die or fall asleep, their souls are with Christ in heaven: and the souls of the wicked they go into chains of darkness, torment, and misery. "The rich man died, and was buried, and in hell he lift up his eyes, being in torment," Luke xvi. 22, 23.

III. Sleep is not perpetual; we Sleep and wake again: so though the body lie in the grave, yet Death is but a sleep as it were: the man will awake and rise again.

IV. The going to Sleep, and Sleeping of some men, greatly differs from others: so the death of the saints greatly differs from the Death of the wicked.

1. In the preparation the one makes to go to rest over what the other doth. Some go to sleep before their work is done: so some die before their work is done. As no Saint dies before his work is done: so there is no wicked person that dies, but he dies or goes to sleep before his work is done. This is our working-day; when the sun of our life is set, no more work can be done. "The time comes," saith Jesus, "when no man can work." All the godly man's care is to be ready, when night comes, to go to rest. But the wicked take little thought about it.

2. Some men fall asleep in a hurry of business, and in great distraction, when others in a sweet manner lay their heads down upon their pillows; so some wicked men die in great distraction, and under sad horror of conscience, when many a godly man dies in a sweet and heavenly manner, declaring to all he hath nothing to do but to die.

3. Some men dread the thoughts of going to Sleep, for that it is dangerous in some cases for some persons to Sleep; so some wicked men dread the thoughts of death, like him who cried out, I am so sick I cannot live, and so sinful that I am afraid to die; but most godly men are delivered from the fear of Death, they go willingly to bed; "Now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace," &c., Luke ii. 29. Saints are many times willing to go to rest, because they are quite wearied out. (1.) Sin wearies them, and even wears them out, and makes them groan. (2.) The world wearies them, and makes them willing to go to bed. (3.) The devil, the god of this world, wearies them with his temptations. (4.) Their bodily weaknesses and disquieting pains weary them. (5.) The absence of Christ also makes them willing to go home.

4. Some men fall asleep in a dangerous place, nay, and sometimes in the midst of their enemies: so wicked men die in a dangerous place, being far from God, and out of the covenant of grace, and besides are surrounded about with evil angels, who stand ready to devour their souls: but a godly man falls asleep in Jesus. O that is a sweet place to Sleep in. (1.) He Sleeps in the view of Jesus; Christ knows his grave, and will preserve his dust. (2.) He falls asleep in the love of Jesus. (3.) He falls asleep in the covenant of Jesus. I am the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

5. Some men's Sleep is much more sweet and comfortable than others, as we showed before, some men's sleep is very troublesome, their spirits are troubled: so the Death of the godly is sweet, they have peace and heavenly joy, being with Christ; but the Death of the wicked is troublesome, their spirits being in torment, whilst the body lies in the grave. I might also show you the great difference there shall be in the awaking of the one, and the other; but that I will leave to its proper place.

V. A man that is asleep, taking his natural rest, may be easily awakened, and called up by the power of man: so the body, when it is dead, can with infinitely more ease be raised up by the power of God; it is but a call from heaven, and we are awakened out of the dust; "The day is coming, when all that are in the grave shall hear his voice, and come forth," &c., John v. 28.

INFERENCES.

I. What a blessed condition are believers in! They are not only happy whilst they live, but shall be blessed when they die; their bodies have not only quiet rest, but their souls also rest in peace and quietness.

II. It may stir up all Christless souls to labour after an interest in the Lord Jesus; for if they are not in Christ whilst they live, they are not like to fall asleep in Christ when they die.

III. We may learn also from hence, what little ground there is for a godly man to be unwilling to die, when his work is done: are any unwilling to go to Sleep at night, that have laboured hard all day?

IV. Let us labour hard whilst the day lasts, whilst we have health and life, that we may have done our work, and be ready to go to Sleep.

DEATH A DEPARTURE.

"Having a desire to depart," &c., Phil. i. 23.

We at Death leave one place to go to another: if godly, we depart from our place here on earth, and go to heaven; we depart from our friends on earth, and go to our friends in heaven; we depart from the valley of tears, and go to the mount of joy; we depart from a howling wilderness, to go to an heavenly paradise. Who would be unwilling to exchange a Sodom for a Sion, an Egypt for a Canaan, misery for glory.

DEATH A REST.

"And I heard a voice from heaven, saying unto me, Write, blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth : Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may Rest from their labours, and their works do follow them," Rev. xiv. 13.

PARALLELS.

I. Rest is a desirable thing to a labouring man : Paul desireth to die ; Death, or to depart, was greatly desirable in his sight.

II. Rest is sweet, and therefore desirable to a weary man : so will Death be to a poor weary saint, one that is weary of sin, weary of the world, weary of the temptations of Satan, &c. See Sleep.

DISPARITY.

I. Some men enjoy Rest but in part, they have no perfect Rest : but a godly man at Death hath perfect rest ; nothing shall disturb or disquiet him any more.

II. Some men have Rest but for a little time, a short Rest : but the godly man's Rest is for ever ; at Death he enters into God's everlasting Rest.

III. Some Rest from labour is not honourable ; it is a reproach to a man to take his rest, when he should be at work : but the rest of a godly man at Death is honourable ; it is a Rest that Christ himself entered into, when he had finished all his work.

THE RESURRECTION COMPARED TO THE MORNING.

"And the righteous shall have dominion over them in the Morning," Psal. xlix. 14.

PARALLELS.

I. The Morning comes after the night is gone : so the Resurrection will come after the night of this world is gone ; the time of this world's continuance is called night in the holy Scriptures : "The night is far spent," &c.

II. The Morning is longed for ; many watch and long for the Morning : so the godly long for the Resurrection ; all the faithful ever waited for, and greatly desired that day.

III. The Morning brings light, and makes things manifest, which lie hid, or appear not what they are in themselves, in the night time : so the Resurrection will make manifest all the hidden things of darkness, which appear not to the sight of men ; that glorious Morning will soon discover all.

1. It will make manifest all the horrid and cursed designs of the ungodly, which they from time to time have contrived, and endeavoured to carry on against the saints and Church of God, many of which God in his gracious providence prevented from taking place, and so they were never known : but the Morning light will discover all those hidden things of darkness.

2. The light of that Morning will discover all the secrets of every man's heart ; all the evil, lust, envy, pride, revenge, &c., or what else hath been harboured in the bosoms of men. See 1 Cor. iv. 5.

3. It will discover all the filthy actions and abominations of the wicked, that are not known to men, nor fit to be mentioned : "For it is a shame to speak of those things that are done of them in secret," Eph. v. 12.

4. That Morning will discover all persons, as well as things ; then it will appear who are God's people, and who are not ; who they were that served God in truth, and who were hypocrites, &c., Matt. iii. 17.

IV. Towards the Morning the Morning star appears, which gives notice the day approacheth : so towards this Morning, there will appear many signs to give warning to the world, that the day of the Resurrection is at hand : "So likewise when ye shall see all these things, know that it is near, even at the door," Matt. xxiv. 33.

V. When the bright Morning is come, the sun rises and shines forth gloriously : so when that morning is come, Jesus Christ, the Sun of Righteousness, will appear in his glory, and shine forth to the amazement of all the world.

VI. The Morning brings joy and gladness with it ; it makes the birds to sing, and send forth their warbling notes : so the Morning of the Resurrection will bring joy and gladness to all righteous ; then shall the saints sing for joy of heart, and be glad in the Lord.

VII. In the Morning men arise out of their beds : so in the Morning of the Resurrection shall all the saints of God be raised out of their graves : " Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise," &c. " The dead in Christ shall rise first," Isa. xxvi. 11, 1 Thess. iv. 17.

VIII. We commonly give a guess what kind of day it will be in the Morning : so by the Morning of the Resurrection, the godly will perceive what kind of day the day of eternity, or glory of Christ's kingdom will be.

IX. In a springing Morning things look fresh and very beautiful, and also send forth a most sweet and fragrant scent : so in the Morning of the Resurrection, the earth will appear in its beauty, and the saints in their glory : " Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun, in the kingdom of their Father," &c., Matt. xiii. 43.

DISPARITY.

In the morning of a natural day here, wicked men receive like benefit with the righteous : " The sun rises upon the just, and upon the unjust : " but in the Morning of the Resurrection it shall not be so ; the ungodly shall not partake with the saints of any of the blessings and comforts of that morning : then that word shall be made good, " The righteous shall have dominion over them in the Morning," Psal. xlix. 14.

In many other respects that Morning will differ from all other Mornings that ever were before it.

THE RESURRECTION COMPARED TO AWAKING OUT OF SLEEP.

" And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth, shall awake," Dan. xii. 2.

PARALLELS.

I. DEATH, we have already showed, is called a Sleep ; and after a man hath had his full Sleep, he awaketh : so when the dead have lain their full time appointed by the Almighty in the grave, they shall be quickened, and come to life again.

II. Some fall into such a sound Sleep, that they must, when there is occasion for it, be awakened : so the dead are fallen into such a fast or sound Sleep, that they must be awakened : " Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the grave shall hear his voice," John v. 28.

III. When a man is thoroughly awakened, he rises up : so when the dead are quickened by the mighty power of God, they shall rise out of the grave, sea, or wheresoever else they lay asleep.

IV. There is a great difference between one man's awaking out of Sleep, and another's ; some are awakened before they are willing, and arise up with great horror and amazement ; when others awake in a sweet, peaceable, and quiet manner, &c. So there will be a great difference between the awaking of the godly and the ungodly, at the last day.

1. The godly shall arise sooner than the ungodly : " The dead in Christ shall rise first," 1 Cor. xv.

2. The saints of God shall awake in Christ's likeness ; their vile bodies shall be fashioned, and made like Christ's glorious body : but the wicked shall appear base and vile in that day : let them lie down in never so great pomp, and external grandeur, yet alas, when they awake, they will appear most vile and contemptible.

3. The godly shall awake with glorious robes upon them, fit for the consummation of their marriage with the Lamb, the Prince of the kings of the earth : but the wicked shall awake in a poor, miserable, and naked condition : what robes shall they have on, unless they be the filthy rags of their own righteousness, with which they were clothed, whilst they lived in this world ?

4. The godly shall have sweet and heavenly company about them, in the Morning, when they awake from Sleep; nay, more than all, they shall enjoy the glorious presence of Jesus Christ himself: but the ungodly, when they awake, shall be in the midst of devils, and damned spirits; they must be their companions for ever.

5. The godly shall, when they awake, have glorious attendants in the day of the Resurrection, viz., the holy angels of heaven: but the wicked shall have no other attendants, than the black retinue of the bottomless pit.

6. The godly, when they awake, are led into the King's palace, to be married to the Bridegroom of their souls, and to receive every one of them a crown of glory: but the ungodly awake, as condemned malefactors, to be led to the place of execution.

7. In a word, the godly shall awake with songs of joy in their mouths; but the wicked shall awake with tears and dismal cries: the one to receive the sentence, "Come, ye blessed of my Father;" the other to receive the sentence, "Go ye cursed," &c., "Some awake to everlasting life; and some to shame and everlasting contempt," &c.

THE RESURRECTION-DAY A MAN'S REAPING-DAY.

"They that sow in tears, shall reap in joy," Psal. cxxvi. 5.

"In due season we shall reap if we faint not," Gal. vi. 9.

The Resurrection-day is a Man's Reaping-Day.

PARALLELS.

I. MEN sow before they reap: so men in this world may be said to sow; either they sow to the flesh, or to the Spirit, and in the Resurrection-Day they shall reap.

II. That which Men sow, that also they reap; they do not sow beans, and reap barley; nor sow tares, and reap wheat: so the very same that all men in a spiritual sense sow, they shall reap; they that sow to the flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption, and they that sow to the Spirit, shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting, Gal. vi.

III. Accordingly to the quantity that every man sows, so they reap; he that sows sparingly, or but a little seed, must expect to reap sparingly, or have but a small crop: so they who do much service for God, or scatter liberally abroad to his people in this world, shall receive much from the hands of God at the end of the world; and he that doth but little for God, though he doth it in sincerity, must expect to reap accordingly in that day. He that improves two talents, shall receive the improvement of two; and he that improves five, the improvements of five. There will be degrees of glory, no doubt, in the day of the Resurrection.

"But this, I say, he which soweth sparingly, shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully, shall reap also bountifully," 2 Cor. ix. 6.

"There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars; for one star differeth from another star in glory: so also is the Resurrection of the dead," &c. 1 Cor. xv. 41, 42.

And, "They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars for evermore," Dan. xii. 3.

IV. A Man's Reaping-time is his rejoicing time. With what joy and gladness doth the husbandman gather in the fruits of the earth: so the saints' spiritual Reaping-Day will be their rejoicing-day. He that sows in tears, shall reap in joy.

V. When the Reaping-time is come, a Man gathers in the fruit or harvest of divers sorts of seed, &c. So in the day of the resurrection, the godly shall reap or gather in the comfort and increase of divers sorts of seed by them sown. They shall then reap the fruit of all the good sermons they have heard, and reap the last fruit of all, the spiritual prayers they have made, the fruit of all the tears of godly contrition they have shed; and all the sighs and groans they have uttered. They shall reap the fruit of all the good thoughts they have had, and of all the good words they have spoken, and all the good works they have; as also the fruit of all the evil, which for Christ's sake they have undergone.

Object. Is not a saint's dying-day his Reaping-day?

Ans. A saint at death gathers the first ripe fruits, as it were, but his harvest is not till the last day.

THE RESURRECTION-DAY THE SAINTS' MARRIAGE-DAY.

"The Marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready," Rev. xix. 7.

THE Resurrection-day is the Saints' Marriage-day; this is their espousal-day: for "I have espoused you to one husband, that I may present you a chaste virgin to Christ," 2 Cor. xi. 2. But that will be the day of the solemnization of their Marriage union with Jesus Christ.

PARALLELS.

I. THERE is, or ought to be, a most endeared love in those parties who intend to marry one another. Nay, they, before the Marriage-Day, mutually give up themselves one to the other; sometimes in a solemn manner, before witnesses, they are espoused:—so the soul of a believer is spiritually united to Jesus Christ whilst in this world. A Saint loves Christ dearly, and Christ a Saint. Nay, and in baptism, in a most solemn and sacred manner, before many witnesses, the soul is publicly espoused to the Lord Jesus; and in the day of the resurrection shall be the solemnization of the sacred marriage.

II. The Marriage-Day is much longed for by those who in hearty affection are espoused to one another; so the godly long for that Day, when the spiritual Marriage shall be consummated between Christ and them.

III. The bride in the Marriage-Day is usually richly adorned; if a princess, or a person of a noble and honourable descent, she is excellently clad and adorned with rare and costly jewels, that the bridegroom may take the more delight in her; so the Church, and consequently every godly Christian, shall in the Day of the Resurrection be most richly clothed with robes of immortality. "The Marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready, and to her was granted, that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white," &c., Rev. xix. 7, 8. "The King's daughter is all glorious within; her clothing is of wrought gold, she shall be brought to the king in raiment of needle-work," &c., Psal. xlv. 13, 14. Some by these white and glorious robes understand the imputed righteousness of Jesus Christ; others, the righteousness of sanctification: some others conclude they are both intended, and not only so, but also those heavenly robes, with which the bodies of the Saints shall be clothed in the Day of the Resurrection, which none are able to describe; however, all conclude the Church in that Day shall shine forth so in glory and beauty, that men and angels shall admire her. No bride ever appeared in such splendour, or so richly clothed and adorned, as the bride, the Lamb's wife shall, when the Marriage of the Lamb is come.

IV. In a Marriage-Day the bride and bridegroom have a full and perfect enjoyment of each other; and there is nothing in the world where there is so full communication of one creature to another, saith Mr. Burroughs, as there is in that condition of Marriage; so in the Day of the Resurrection, when the Church shall be Married to the Lord Jesus, the godly shall have a full and perfect enjoyment of him, whom they so dearly love. the Lord Christ in that Day will communicate of himself to his people in such a manner, that it is inconceivable; whatsoever may delight them, rejoice their hearts, or add to their perfect happiness, he will not withhold from them. They have now only the joy and comforts of his Spirit; but then they shall have the joy and comforts of his person. "Where I am, there also my servants shall be." "I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may be also," John xiv. 3.

V. A Marriage-day is a joyful Day: so will the Marriage-day of the Lamb be: "Let us be glad, and rejoice, and give honour to him; for the Marriage of the Lamb is come," Rev. ix. 6, 7. The bridegroom rejoiceth in the bride, and the bride in the bridegroom; "As the bridegroom rejoiceth over the bride, so shall thy God rejoice over thee," Isa. lxii. 5.

VI. In a Marriage-day the bridegroom and the bride have very great attendance, and are greatly honoured: so Christ and the Church shall have great and glorious attendance in the Day of the Resurrection, viz., all the angels of heaven. He shall come in the glory of the Father with all the holy angels. The same retinue the one shall have, the other shall have likewise.

VII. The bride commonly makes great preparation for the Marriage-day to have all things ready; so the godly make all due preparation for the appearance of Jesus Christ, that they may be accepted of him in that Day: "The Marriage of the Lamb is come, and his bride hath made herself ready," Rev. xix. 7.

THE RESURRECTION-DAY THE SAINTS' CORONATION-DAY.

"Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which God the righteous Judge shall give unto me in that day," &c., 2 Tim. iv. 8.

THAT Day, that is, the Day of the Resurrection, or Day of Christ's coming.

Note, The Day of the Resurrection will be the Saints' coronation day.

PARALLELS.

I. CROWNS properly belong to kings, princes, and potentates of the earth, &c., Saints are kings, spiritual kings, "He hath made us unto our God, kings," &c., Rev. v. 10.

II. Kings are wonderfully honoured on their Coronation-day: so shall the Saints in the Day of the Resurrection; the angels of heaven shall honour them, Christ himself will honour them; nay, they shall be honoured by the Father: "If any man serve me, him will my Father honour," John xii. 26.

III. On a Coronation-Day, some look upon it as their proper work, to set the crown upon the head of the prince who is to be crowned therewith: so in the day of the resurrection, the Lord Jesus will set, as it were, the crown upon the head of his chosen: "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."

INFERENCES.

I. LABOUR to be fully established in the truth of the Resurrection; see that no man deceive you, it is a perilous age, and to confirm doubting Christians in this great principle of the Christian religion, take a few arguments.

1. "If the dead rise not: then Christ is not risen from the dead. But Christ is risen from the dead. Therefore the dead shall rise," 1 Cor. xv. 16, 20.

2. "That doctrine that makes preaching vain, is a false and pernicious doctrine: but such who deny the Resurrection, make preaching vain. Therefore a false and pernicious doctrine," 1 Cor. xv. 2, 14.

3. "If the dead rise not; then those who are fallen asleep in Jesus, are perished. But those who are fallen asleep in Christ, are not perished. Therefore the dead shall rise," 1 Cor. xv. 18.

4. "If the dead rise not: then the godly are of all men most miserable. But the godly are not of all men most miserable. Therefore the dead shall rise," 1 Cor. xv. 15, 19.

Object. The soul of a child of God at death is happy and with Christ, and shall be for ever, whether the body rise or not; and therefore they are not of all men most miserable, unless the soul be mortal and die with the body, as some affirm.

Ans. The life of the soul, as well as of the body, depends wholly upon Christ's Resurrection; and if Christ be not risen, we are yet in our sins; and therefore this makes nothing either to prove Saints happy without a Resurrection, or for the mortality of the soul.

3. If the Saints of God in the primitive time, did believe and were well grounded in the truth of the Resurrection: then the dead shall rise. But the Saints of the primitive time did so believe, and were so established. Ergo. See these Scriptures; "I know he shall rise again, in the Resurrection at the last Day:" "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive: but every man in his own order, Christ the first fruits, and afterwards they that are Christ's, at his coming: for the trumpet shall be sounded, and the dead shall be raised," &c. "For if we believe that Jesus died, and rose again, even so those which are fallen asleep in Jesus, will God bring with him," John xi. 24, 1 Cor. xv. 22, 23, and 52, 1 Thess. iv. 13. "And the sea gave up the dead which were in it, and death and hell delivered up the dead that were in them, and they were judged every man according to their deeds," Rev. xx. 13.

6. If all the Saints of God and holy apostles waited for the redemption of their bodies, then the dead shall rise. But all the Saints and holy apostles waited for the redemption of their bodies, Rom. viii. 23. Ergo.

7. If the chief reward of the godly is reserved to the last day, viz., to the Day of the Resurrection, then the dead shall be raised. But the chief reward of the godly is reserved to the last day, or Day of the Resurrection, 2 Tim. iv. 8. Ergo, the dead shall be raised.

8. If the expectation of the godly martyrs shall not be frustrated; than the dead shall be raised. But the expectation of the godly martyrs shall not be frustrated, Heb. xi. 35, 36, Psal. ix. 18. Ergo, the dead shall be raised.

9. If the bodies of the Saints shall be made like to Christ's glorious body, the dead shall rise. But the bodies of the Saints shall be made like to Christ's glorious body, Phil. ii. 21, 1 John iii. 2. Ergo, The dead shall be raised.

10. If the dead at the last day shall be judged, then they shall rise again from the dead. But the dead shall at the last day be judged, 2 Cor. v. 10, Rev. xx. 12, 13. Ergo, The dead shall be raised.

11. That doctrine that gives the Scripture, Christ and his apostles the lie, is a cursed and damnable doctrine. But those that deny the Resurrection of the dead, give the Scripture, Christ and his apostles the lie. Ergo, The scripture saith, that those that sleep in the dust of the earth, shall awake. Christ saith, all that are in the grave shall hear his voice, and come forth; and we have showed the apostles do affirm that the dead shall be raised, &c., Dan. xii. 2, John v. 28.

12. If that which sleepeth in the dust shall rise, then the body shall rise again; for it is the body that sleepeth in the dust, but that which sleeps in the dust shall be raised. Ergo.

Object. It is not the same body. "Thou sowest not that body that shall be," &c., 1 Cor. xv. 37.

Ans. If the same numerical body rise not, it will not be a Resurrection, but a new creation; therefore that which the apostle there intends, is the manner of the Resurrection, i. e., how the Saints shall be raised. It is not the same in respect of weakness and frailty; "It is sown a natural body, and shall be raised a spiritual body; it is sown in corruption, and shall be raised in incorruption; it is sown in weakness, and shall be raised in power."—Which thing a grain of corn that is sown, teaches.

Quest. Why shall the same body of the dead be raised?

Ans. 1. Because the same body of Christ was raised that suffered.

2. Because the same body that suffered for Christ, shall be glorified with Christ.

3. Because the same body that sinned, shall be punished; if not the same body that sinned, it might reflect upon the justice and goodness of God to punish an innocent body. Besides, those scriptures must be fulfilled, which assert the Resurrection of the body.

INFERENCES.

I. From hence we may infer that there is a world to come.

II. That death is not the last end of man.

III. Prepare for the Resurrection-day; think of it when thou liest down, and risest up in the morning. Thy lying down to sleep, is a figure of thy lying down in the grave; and thy awaking out of sleep in the morning, is a figure of the Resurrection.

IV. Think of the Resurrection in the spring, when thou seest the flowers of the earth bud forth, and spring up; for that is a figure also of the Resurrection.

THE JUDGMENT-DAY COMPARED TO AN ASSIZE.

"For we must all appear before the Judgment-seat of Christ," 2 Cor. v. 10.

"And I saw a great white throne, and him that sat on it," &c., Rev. xx. 11.

AFTER the resurrection comes the Judgment, the eternal Judgment.

NOTE,—The Judgment-day may fitly be compared to an Assize, or general gaol-delivery.

PARALLELS.

I. There is a judge appointed by the king, or supreme power of the nation or kingdom, where an Assize is to be held, who receives his commission and acts by the authority thereof. Jesus Christ is appointed to be the Judge of quick and dead, by the Father, King of heaven and earth. "The Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all power to the Son," John v. 22.

II. The judge likely comes to the bench or judgment-seat with the sound of trumpets: Christ will come to the Judgment-seat with the sound of a trumpet. "The trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible," 1 Cor. xv. 52.

III. There is a known law or laws in a kingdom, by which the judge heareth and determines all causes. So there is a known law or laws, by which Jesus Christ will judge and determine all causes in the great day, viz., the law of Moses, the law of nature, and the law of Christ, called the book of the Gospel. "The Books shall be opened," Rev. xx. 12.

IV. The judge hath many honourable persons that sit on the bench with him. So Jesus Christ will have all the Saints sit with him on the throne of judgment, who shall assent and consent to whatsoever he shall do in that day. Hence it is said, the saints shall judge the world. "He that overcometh will I grant to sit with me on my throne: even as I also overcame and am sat down with my Father in his throne," Rev. iii. 21.

V. A Judge at Assizes, after he hath read his commission and given his charge, calls for the prisoners. So Jesus Christ will orderly proceed, and call before him all nations, all the ungodly that ever lived on the earth, shall be arraigned by him, being brought before his judgment-seat.

VI. A judge having arraigned the prisoner, calls in the witnesses, and then suffers every man to speak what he hath to say for himself. So Jesus Christ will call in witnesses, and indeed every man's conscience should be more than ten thousand witnesses against him; and all mouths shall be stopped, and every ungodly man shall be found guilty before Christ, Rom. ii. 14—16.

VII. A judge, after he hath found men guilty, and cast them for their lives, passeth the sentence. So Jesus Christ will at the last day, after the sentence of condemnation, order the execution of the wicked, and appoint them the place where, and the time how long they shall suffer; the place will be hell, the time will be for ever and ever. See Christ the Judge of all.

VIII. A judge, after the sentence is past, orders the manner, time, and place of execution: so Jesus Christ will at the last day, after the Sentence of condemnation, order the execution of the wicked, and appoint them the place where, and the time how long they shall suffer: the place will be hell, the time will be for ever and ever. See Christ the Judge of all.

THE CELESTIAL PARADISE.

"Verily I say unto thee, this day thou shalt be with me in Paradise," Luke xxiii. 43.

"He was taken up into Paradise," 2 Cor. xii. 2.

"To him that overcometh, will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the Paradise of God," &c., Rev. ii. 7.

PARADISE is taken in the holy Scripture in a two-fold sense.

1. For the garden of Eden; this is earthly Paradise.

2. For Heaven, the seat or place of glory; this is Celestial Paradise.

Now the earthly Paradise being a figure of Heaven, I shall in the opening of this run the parallel principally with respect to the garden of Eden, and the state of Adam in innocency.

PARALLELS.

I. Paradise, or the garden of Eden, was a place of pleasure. So Heaven is a place of pleasure.

II. Paradise was a place created of God, and appointed for man, whilst he stood in the state of innocency. So heaven is created of God, and appointed for all those who obtain, through Christ, perfect righteousness, their primitive glory and innocency.

III. Adam in paradise, had all delight, joy, and pleasure his heart could desire, he wanted nothing to make his life sweet and pleasant to him: so the saints in Heaven, have the fullest joy, pleasure, and satisfaction imaginable; there is nothing wanting they can desire to please and delight them. "Thou wilt show me the path of life; in thy presence is fulness of joy, and at thy right-hand pleasures for evermore," Psal. xvi. 11, and xxxvi. 8. They drink of the rivers of God's pleasures. A river abounds with water; so doth heaven, like Paradise, with divine and sacred pleasures.

IV. Adam in paradise knew no sorrow, he had joy without sadness, strength without weakness, health without sickness, light without darkness, life without death; for death had nothing to do with him whilst he stood in his innocency: so in heaven the godly are delivered from every mixture of evil, "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are past away," Rev. xxi. 4. Here is joy without sadness, strength without weakness, health without sickness, light without darkness, life without death.

V. Adam in Paradise, before tempted by the devil, knew no sin; he was free, absolutely free from the least stain, he had not so much as an evil thought, he was created in the image of God, being perfectly righteous: so in heaven the saints shall be free from sin, perfectly free, not only free from the guilt, filth, power, and punishment of it, but also from the act of it; they shall not be troubled with one evil thought more, they are without fault before the throne of God and the Lamb.

VI. Adam in Paradise enjoyed the sweet and blessed presence of God, he conversed, and had glorious acquaintance and communion with him; God and man lived then in perfect peace and friendship, there was no breach, because no sin, and so God's face was not hid from him: so in heaven, all the godly enjoy the sweet and soul-ravishing presence of God, and of Jesus Christ; "Where I am, there shall my servant be," John xii. 26. "And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you to myself, that where I am ye may be also," John xiv. 3. "So shall we ever be with the Lord," 1 Thess. iv. 17. Saints there have the fruition of God and of Christ, "for we shall see him as he is," 1 John iii. 2; and this is the highest glory man can be raised to, we shall not only see God and the Lamb, but be filled with the joy and delight of God and Jesus Christ. Heaven from hence is called the joy of the Lord, if the perfect enjoyment and participation of the glorious Trinity, or fulness of it, so far as it is capable of communication, can delight and fill the soul with joy and happiness, the godly in heaven shall have it; God's face will never be hid from his children any more, there will be no more a breach between the soul and its Saviour.

VII. Adam in Paradise had the tree of life, and liberty, before he sinned, to eat of the tree of life: so in this Paradise of God, we read of the tree of life, which, as some understand, is Jesus Christ; "And to him that overcometh, will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the Paradise of God," Rev. ii. 7, which doubtless signifies the glorious participation of the life, fulness, and transcendent sweetness of the Lord Jesus, and of the continuance of the life of the saints, in its full strength, vigour, and glory to eternity.

VIII. Adam in Paradise had great knowledge, both of God, and the nature of all creatures; God brought all the creatures to Adam, to see what he would call them, and whatsoever Adam called each living soul, that was the name thereof, Gen. ii. 19. The naming of the creatures, saith Ainsworth, was a sign of sovereignty; it also manifested Adam's wisdom, in naming things presently, according to their natures: as the Hebrew names, by which he called them, do declare: so the saints in heaven shall be perfect in knowledge, they shall know as they are known, they shall know all the patriarchs, prophets, apostles, and all the saints that ever lived, by name, which we may gather by that knowledge, Peter, James, and John, had of Moses and Elias, in the transfiguration of Christ in the mount, which was a figure in heaven.

DISPARITY.

I. ADAM's pleasure and delight in Paradise was much of it earthly: but the saints pleasure and delight in the Celestial Paradise will be heavenly.

II. Adam in Paradise was troubled with a tempting devil: but the saints in the Celestial Paradise shall not be troubled any more with a tempting devil, for he shall be shut up in chains of eternal darkness, to be tormented for ever.

III. Adam soon lost his earthly Paradise, by sin, and was turned out of all: but those who are accounted worthy to obtain this heavenly paradise, shall never lose it, nor be turned out of it, but continue in it for ever and ever, even to the days of eternity.

HEAVEN A CROWN OF LIFE.

"Henceforth is laid up for me a Crown of righteousness," 2 Tim. iv. 8.

"And I will give thee a Crown of life," Rev. ii. 10.

"He shall receive the Crown of Life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him," Jam. i. 12.

THE reward of the godly in heaven is called a Crown, a Crown of life, a Crown of righteousness, &c.

PARALLELS.

I. A Crown denotes any beautiful ornament, or profitable thing; hence a Crown is put for to adorn, and bless with good things, and so make joyful: the saints in heaven shall be beautiful and very glorious, they shall sparkle, and shine forth like the sun, in the kingdom of their Father, plentifully enjoy and possess true blessedness. Prov. iv. 9, and xvii. 6, Psal. viii. 5, and ciii. 4.

II. A Crown is a sign of a kingdom and dominion, saith Ainsworth: the glorified saints in Heaven shall possess a kingdom, and shall be as kings and princes for ever and ever. "Hearken, my beloved brethren, hath not God chosen the poor of this world rich in faith, and heirs of the, (or that), kingdom, which he hath promised them that love him?" Jam. ii. 5.

III. A Crown denotes also victory; Christ warring against his enemies, and overcoming them, hath on his head many Crowns, or diadems: so the saints being Crowned, signifieth that perfect conquest they have, through Christ, obtained, over sin, Satan, death, and hell, &c.

IV. A Crown signifieth glory, honour, and external grandeur: the glorified saints shall be honoured, and appear in eternal grandeur, as kings who have their Crowns on their heads.

V. As there is nothing more rich, glorious, desirable, nor esteemed among men, above a Crown, or kingdom: so the Holy Spirit in setting forth the reward, and everlasting glory of the saints in Heaven, compares it to these things. But alas! there is no earthly thing, how splendid and glorious soever, can sufficiently set out the state of the saints after death, or the glory of Heaven. For pleasure, it is called paradise; for riches and honour, it is called a Crown and a kingdom. A Crown of Life, denoting that saints in laying down their lives for Christ, shall not be at all losers thereby, but only exchange it for a better; a short momentary Life, for an everlasting Life, a Life of joy, for a Life of sorrow; a Life of perfect freedom, for a Life attended with manifold temptations.

DISPARITY.

I. OTHER CROWNS, I mean earthly Crowns, are corruptible: this Crown is incorruptible.

II. Other Crowns are attended with many sorrows, troubles, and perplexities, &c. But this Crown is attended with no such thing, for the condition of the heirs of this never-fading Crown will be so joyful, that look outwardly, there is joy in the society, Heb. xii. 22, if inwardly, there is joy in their own felicity, 1 Cor. ii. 9. Look forward, there is joy in the eternity of it, 1 Pet. v. 10. So that on every side they shall be even swallowed up of joy, Isa. xxv. 10. O! the transcendency of that paradise of pleasure! where is joy without heaviness or interruption; peace without perturbation; blessedness without misery; light without darkness; health without sickness; beauty without blemish; abundance without want; ease without labour; satiety without loathing; liberty without restraint; security without fear; glory without ignominy; knowledge without ignorance; eyes without tears; hearts without sorrow; souls without sin: where shall be no evil heard of to affright them, nor good wanting to cheer and comfort them; they shall have what good they desire, and desire nothing but what is good; their promises shall end in performances; faith in sight and clear vision; hope in fruition and possession: yea, time itself shall be swallowed up in eternity.

To sum up all in a few words, there is no joy here comparable to that in heaven; all our mirth here, to that is but pensiveness; all our pleasures here, to that is but heaviness; all our sweetness here, to that is but bitterness; even Solomon in all his glory and royalty, to that was but as a spark in the chimney, to the sun in the firmament; yea, how little, how nothing are the poor and temporary enjoyments of this Life, to those that the heirs of promise shall enjoy in the Life that is to come?

III. Other Crowns fade away, the prince is in a moment gone from that, or that is gone from him: but this Crown abideth. "It is incorruptible, and undefiled, and fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you," &c., 1 Pet. i. 4.

IV. Other Crowns are gotten many times by usurpation: but the saints shall have the Crown in a just and righteous way; it is a Crown of righteousness, of which saints are true and lawful heirs; this Crown is purchased for them by Christ, and given to them by the free donation of the Father; besides they are born heirs to it by the Spirit. "If children, then heirs, heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ," &c., Rom. viii. 17.

INFERENCES.

I. We may infer from hence, that God's children are not such fools, as they are accounted by the ungodly world; they have made a good choice, in preferring heaven above earth. What is the glory of this world to the world to come? Yea, paradise, or the Garden of Eden, was but a wilderness compared with this paradise. And indeed, if the gates of the city be of pearl, and the streets of gold, what then are the inner rooms, and lodging chambers of the great monarch of heaven and earth, at whose right-hand are pleasures for evermore?

II. Let not the Saints grow weary, nor faint in their minds, when heirs of a crown of glory that fadeth not away; methinks they may be contented to undergo some troubles in this life, since by suffering these things for Christ's sake, they shall be Crowned with glory, honour, and everlasting life; "They shall receive the Crown of life," &c., Jam. i. 12.

HELL A FURNACE OF FIRE; THE PLACE OF THE DAMNED.

"And shall cast them into a Furnace of Fire, there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth," Matt. xiii. 42.

We are now drawing towards a conclusion; it remains only, that we speak something concerning Hell, which is the Place prepared for the Damned, the torment of whom is set forth by Fire, by a Furnace of Fire, and by utter darkness. It hath been a long and ancient controversy, whether Fire here is to be taken properly or figuratively? I shall not undertake to determine, whether it be real Fire or not: doubtless the torment of the wicked will be worse than it is to be cast into any Furnace of elementary Fire. The schoolmen affirm, that the least torture in Hell, exceeds the greatest that can be devised by all the men on earth; even as the least joy of heaven, surpasseth the greatest comforts of this world, &c. There is scarce any pain here on earth, but there is some hope of ease, mitigation, or intermission; but in Hell, their torments are easeless, remediless, and they themselves left hopeless, helpless, and pityless. However, we will run a parallel between a Furnace of Fire, and the Place of the Damned; for in some things there is a fit resemblance.

PARALLELS.

I. A Furnace of Fire, hath been prepared as a Place of torment; the king of Babylon caused a Furnace to be heated exceeding hot, and that whosoever would not bow down to his golden image should be cast into it: Hell is a place of torment prepared for all wicked and ungodly men, who live and die in their sins, Rev. xxi. 8.

II. A Furnace of Fire that is heated exceeding hot, is very terrible and amazing to him, who for his wicked deeds is told he must be cast therein: so Hell is a very terrible and amazing thing to think upon; how lamentable is the thought of it to a guilty sinner, that is awakened, that sees no remedy, but thither he must go!

III. What torment can be greater than to be cast into a burning Fiery Furnace? so what torments can be greater than the torments of Hell?

DISPARITY.

I. A Fiery Furnace though terrible and painful, yet it puts an end to the lives of those that are thrown into it, and the hotter it is, the sooner it dispatcheth them out of their pain; but the torments of Hell put no end to the tortured, neither can the Damned die, but have an ever-dying life, and an everlasting death: it is a death which hath no death, "The worm dieth not."

II. The torment of a Fiery Furnace can reach but the outward man, it cannot destroy the soul: but the torments of Hell reach to the very soul, called the perdition or destruction of ungodly men, both of soul and body.

III. The hottest Furnace in the world may abate its heat for want of fuel, and at length be wholly extinguished; however its terrors and pains are but short and momentary: but the tormenting Fire of Hell never abates its heat, nor ever goeth out, therefore called everlasting Fire; now to add eternity to extremity, and then you will perceive Hell to be Hell indeed.

IV. Other Fire may be quenched: but the Fire of God's wrath, or Hell Fire, shall never be quenched, ut supra.

INFERENCES.

THAT as there is no greater cause of magnifying Christ, than for redemption-mercy, and so of joy unspeakable, and full of glory: so there is no greater cause of sorrow, and intolerable misery, than to live and die in sin, and so to be cast both body and soul into Hell Fire. O! what an alarm may those two Scriptures among many sound in the ears of wicked and ungodly men, "Be not deceived, neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, not effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor railers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God," 1 Cor. vi. 9, 10. But whither then must they go? See Rev. xxi. 8. "But the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with Fire and brimstone, which is the second death."

HELL UTTER DARKNESS.

"—Shall be cast into Utter Darkness," Matt. viii. 12.

"—To whom is reserved the blackness of Darkness for ever," Jude 13.

As the torment and misery of the ungodly is set forth by a furnace of fire: so it is also by Darkness, Utter Darkness, and blackness of Darkness, as the word Σοφῶ signifieth.

PARALLELS.

I. God sometimes hath brought Darkness upon a people, as a great judgment, for sin and rebellion against him: so God in just judgment will cast the wicked into Darkness, into a burning furnace of fire, but such fire as shall give no light, therefore called Utter Darkness.

II. Where there is Darkness, either by want of light, or want of sight to see the light, there cannot be any comfortable enjoyment of any visible object, that might afford them satisfaction and content, as it doth those that enjoy the light: so to be cast into Darkness, nay Utter Darkness, not only such Darkness that is a deprivation of light, or occasioned by want of sight, but a Darkness of terror and torment, reserved for wicked and ungodly men, called the blackness of Darkness: for as the glory of heaven shall abound beyond all comparison with glorious light, called the inheritance of the Saints in light, Col. i. 12, so the horrors and terrors of Hell will consist in that abounding Darkness, beyond all comparison.

III. As to be shut up in spiritual Darkness, is a separation from God, as to his presence in a way of grace: so to be shut up in the thickness and blackness of the Darkness of Hell, is an eternal separation from God, and the enjoyment of him for ever: when once he shall say, "Depart from me," there is a separation from all joy and happiness; "ye cursed," there is a black and direful excommunication; "into fire," there is the extremity of pain; "everlasting," there is a perpetuity of the punishment; "prepared for the devil and his angels," there are the infernal tormenting, and tormented company. And to increase the horror and amazement of the damned, this fire shall not only torment them, not give them any light, but they shall be cast out into Utter Darkness, where there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

DISPARITY.

I. When God brings Darkness upon a land, as he did upon Egypt, as a judgment, it hath been but for a while, a certain time, and after there hath been light again; but those that shall be cast out into the Darkness of the pit of Hell, shall never see light more, neither spiritual, natural, nor artificial. As there will be no need of the sun nor stars in heaven: so the damned shall not have any benefit thereby, whatever their needs and necessities are.

II. Men may be in Darkness spiritually, and they may be enlightened and saved through grace, but to be cast out into the dark and dismal gulf of Hell, it totally and everlastingly deprives of any use of means, for enlightening any more for ever, Gospel light shines not at all in that dark and dismal region, because they hated the light thereof in this world, they must now be cast into utter darkness in the world to come.

III. Men may be in Darkness, and yet enjoy many other comforts, though they be deprived of light: but the damned in Hell are not only in black and thick Darkness, but are also deprived of any other comfort. As they see nothing but Darkness, so they hear nothing but dismal screeches, and amazing dreadful cries, and gnashing of teeth.

IV. Men may be naturally blind, or shut up in a dark dungeon, and yet may have much of the presence of God with them: but the damned that are in the Blackness of Darkness, that is, the Darkness of Hell, shall utterly be deprived of the comfortable presence of God; as they said to God, depart from us: so are they separated with a "depart ye from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, or, into the Blackness of Darkness for ever."

INFERENCES.

I. How might this awaken sinners, and be a means to turn them from spiritual Darkness to light; and from Satan, the prince of darkness, to God: Oh! that these closing, direful, and amazing lines, might turn many to righteousness, to believe, repent, and obey the Gospel, before the Lord Jesus come in flaming fire, rendering vengeance upon all that know not God nor obey the Gospel.

II. How just will the condemnation of such rebellious sinners be, who will neither be drawn by the tenders of mercy and salvation to Jesus Christ, and of an enjoyment of heaven through him, nor be deterred from their sinful course, by all the threatened judgments, nay, though it extend to Hell itself, to the fire of Hell, to the Blackness of Darkness for ever! Oh! were there not eternity written upon the gate of the broad-way that leads to destruction, the damned might have some hope, though it were not till hundreds of thousands of millions of years were expired: but, O Sinners! when once this dark dismal dungeon hath shut its mouth upon you, and you come with the devil and his angels to lie therein, you can never come out more, never see light more, never have ease from intolerable torment more; no father, husband, wife, &c., can come to light so much as a candle, or dip the tip of a finger in water to cool your tongue!

III. Let the redeemed of the Lord rejoice and magnify the God of their salvation, who hath given them good hope through grace, that they are delivered from wrath to come, by being called out of spiritual Darkness into Christ's marvellous light, and by him have escaped that dreadful doom, of being cast into Utter Darkness.

MOSES'S VAIL REMOVED;

OR

TYPES OF THE OLD TESTAMENT EXPLAINED.

ADAM A TYPE OF CHRIST.

"Death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over them that had not sinned, after the similitude of Adam's transgression, who is the figure of him that was to come," Rom. v. 14.

PARALLELS.

I. Adam had no father but God; so Christ likewise had no father but God. They were both in an especial manner called the sons of God; the one by creation, the other by eternal generation.

II. Adam was made heir of the world: Christ is heir of all things, not only of this world, but of that which is to come.

III. Adam was a common or public person, representing all his seed, or natural offspring; hence his sin is charged upon his whole posterity; "By Adam's sin were many made sinners," &c., Rom. v. 12, 14. Christ, the second Adam, is a common or public person, representing all his true seed, or spiritual offspring: so that as Adam's sin was imputed to all his children, so is Christ's righteousness imputed to all his children, through faith, Rom. v. 19.

The first Adam merited death for his seed; the second Adam merited life for his seed.

NOAH A TYPE OF CHRIST.

PARALLELS.

I. NOAH was a saviour, nay, in a good sense, the saviour of the world; for it was through him, and by his means and righteousness, there was a seed preserved from the Flood, &c. Christ is a Saviour, the great Saviour, the only Saviour of the world; hence called Jesus.

II. Noah was a preacher of righteousness, and invited sinners to repentance: Christ was a Preacher of righteousness, and came on purpose to call sinners to repentance. Noah's ministry was despised by the ungodly: so was the preaching and ministry of Jesus Christ, by the unbelieving Jews, and others: those that refused and rebelled against Noah, and his ministry, were destroyed by water; and those that refuse and rebel against Christ shall be destroyed by fire.

III. Noah built an ark: so Christ builds his Church. Noah built the ark according to the commandment of God: so Christ in building his Church, did every thing according to the commandment received from his Father. 3. Noah took many trees to build the ark: so Christ takes many believers, called trees of righteousness, to build his Church.

IV. Some clean, and some unclean beasts were received into Noah's ark: so some holy and sanctified persons, and some unsanctified ones, are received into Christ's Church, though not by Christ's appointment.

V. All that were not received into the ark, perished. So all who get not spiritually by faith into Jesus Christ, or are not true members of the visible or invisible Church, shall be damned and perish eternally.

VI. Noah's ark was tossed upon the rough waves, and yet was preserved: so the Church of Christ is tossed upon the rough waves of a tempestuous world, and yet preserved.

VII. Noah was the great repairer of the world: from him descended all the inhabitants of the earth: Christ is the great and glorious Repairer of the world, and from him proceed all the inhabitants of heaven.

VIII. Noah sent a dove out of the ark, to see whether or no the waters were abated, who returned with an olive-branch in her mouth: so Christ sends forth the Spirit, called a Dove, or, in the likeness of a dove, who brings tidings to believing souls, that the wrath of God is appeased, &c.

MELCHISEDEC A TYPE OF CHRIST.

"Made like unto the Son of God," &c., Heb. vii. 3.

PARALLELS.

I. THE notation of his name Melchisedec, signifieth king of righteousness: Christ Jesus is the only King of righteousness.

II. In his office he was a Type of Christ: (1.) He was king of Salem—king of peace: so Christ was called "the Prince of peace," not only a peaceable Prince, but Prince of peace, one that commands peace at his pleasure in the world, in the Church, and in the souls of men, Isa. ix. 6. (2.) Christ is not only Prince of the world, but peculiarly Prince of Salem, Prince of Jerusalem, viz., the true Church of God. (3.) Melchisedec was not only a king, but also a prince, yea, a priest of the Most High God: so Christ is both King and Priest.

III. Melchisedec was a Type of Christ in his original: "Without father, without mother, without descent, having neither beginning of days, nor end of life," Heb. vii. 3, that is, there is no mention of these things concerning him in the holy Scripture; we have not his genealogy, or story of his life; though none doubt, but he had both father and mother, and descent, &c.; but God on purpose would have all these concealed, that he might be a more express Type of Christ, who was truly without father, in respect of his manhood, or human nature; and without mother, in respect of his God-head: "And who can declare his generation?" &c., Isa. liii. 8.

IV. Melchisedec blessed Abraham, and doubtless the lesser is blessed of the greater; he was a most eminent and renowned person. Some do conclude he was the patriarch Shem, who was without beginning of days, in respect of the world after the flood, and without end of days in respect of the world before the flood; but since God hath concealed who he was, let us be satisfied. But in this, doubtless, he was a Type of Christ, who is greater than all that went before him, great in power, office, and sovereignty, and is sent to bless his people; it is he alone that blesseth all the true seed, and heirs of promise.

V. Melchisedec was a priest, not after the order of Aaron; he was not anointed with material oil, nor received his Priesthood from any other, but only so declared by the mouth of God. His Priesthood passed not to other men: for as he received it from none, so he passed it not to any other: nor did any, as we read of, succeed him; so Christ received his Priesthood from none but God himself, and was not anointed with material oil, but with the oil of gladness only: and as he received his Priesthood from none, so he passeth it not to any other; he hath none that can succeed him, but abideth a Priest for ever in his own person in heaven.

ABRAHAM A TYPE OF CHRIST.

PARALLELS.

I. ABRAM, and Abraham, signify an high father, and a father of a multitude: so is Christ an high and heavenly Father, called the everlasting Father, Father of all the faithful, &c.

II. To Abraham, and to his seed was the promise made : so to Christ and to his true seed, is the promise made.

III. Abraham was king, priest, and prophet in his own family ; so is Jesus Christ in his Church.

IV. Abraham put Hagar and Ishmael out of his house : so Jesus Christ cast out the legal covenant, and fleshly seed, out of his Church ; Hagar being a figure of the one, and Ishmael of the other, Gal. iv.

V. Abraham is called the heir of the world : Jesus Christ is so most properly and truly, Rom. iv. 13.

ISAAC A TYPE OF CHRIST.

PARALLELS.

I. ISAAC was the son of Abraham, the father of the faithful, a promised seed long before he was born ; and so strange was his birth, that though he was born by the strength of nature, yet of Sarah's dead womb, when it ceased to be with her as with other child-bearing women ; insomuch that when the angel foretold it to her, she thought it impossible, Gen. xvii. 12. So Jesus Christ is often called the son of Abraham, yet the only-begotten Son of God by nature, who is the Father of all that are taught, and can say in truth, " Our Father," &c., the only true promised Seed, who was long prophesied of, and expected by all believers ; born and incarnate by the strange and wonderful power of the Holy Ghost, in the womb of the blessed virgin, yea, in such a miraculous manner that when it was foretold her by the angel, she thought it impossible, Luke i. 34.

II. Isaac was mocked, and basely abused by Ishmael, the fleshly seed : so was Jesus Christ by the Jews, who were the children of the bond-woman.

III. Isaac was led as a lamb to the slaughter : so was Jesus Christ. Though in this there was a great disparity ; the one was spared, namely, Isaac ; but Jesus Christ was sacrificed.

IV. Isaac was offered, as it were, and three days dead in his father's mind and purpose, yet died not ; but his father received him as from the dead : so Jesus Christ offered, but in respect of his divinity, died not ; and though his humanity lay dead three days in the heart of the earth, yet it revived again ; so both were, saith Dr. Taylor, delivered from death the third day ; wherein the apostle plainly makes him a Type, Heb. xi. 19. " From whence he received him, as in a figure, Type, or resemblance," &c.

V. Isaac, as the learned observe, was a Type of Christ in his marriage. (1.) He married one of his own kindred : so the spouse of Christ is of the same flesh which he himself assumed. (2.) She was wooed by his father's servant : so is the spouse of Christ by his faithful ministers. (3.) Rebekah resolved to forsake all her friends, and her father's house, to become Isaac's wife : so believers forsake all in affection, and actually, when called thereunto, for the sake of Jesus Christ. (4.) She was decked with jewels, trimmed, and rarely adorned, when she came to meet Isaac : so the spouse, the Lamb's wife, shall be richly decked, and gloriously adorned, to meet Jesus Christ, when he comes " in the glory of the Father, to receive her to himself," Rev. xix. 7. (5.) She came to meet Isaac : so shall the saints meet Jesus Christ in the air at the last day, 1 Thess. iv. 17.

JACOB A TYPE OF CHRIST.

PARALLELS.

I. JACOB was a supplanter, as his name signifies ; he supplanted Esau : so Jesus Christ supplanted, as Guild observes, sin and Satan, &c.

II. Jacob was hated and persecuted by Esau : so was Christ by Satan, and his emissaries. In his great afflictions he saw an angel of God ascending and descending upon him : so Christ, after his temptations in the wilderness, and also when he was in his bloody agony, was comforted by the angels of God ; they administered unto him.

III. Jacob endured great hardship for Rachel, whom he dearly loved ; so Jesus Christ endured many years' sorrow and trouble for his Church, whom he loved so dearly, that he laid down his life for her sake.

IV. Jacob was called a prince with God ; he wrestled long and at last was comforted ; so Christ is a mighty Prince, and prevailed also, " being heard, in that he feared," Heb. v. 7.

JACOB'S LADDER A TYPE OF CHRIST,

Gen. xxviii.

PARALLELS.

I. Jacob's Ladder, which he saw in a vision, stood upon the earth, but the top reached to heaven : so Christ, although he was humbled in shape of sinful flesh, to the earth, as it were ; yet he was the Most High God, reaching so to heaven.

II. The angels went up and down by it ; so we ascend up to God by Jesus Christ, and God descends, as it were, by him also down to us.

III. The Lord stood above it, and made promises of Canaan to Jacob : so God in Christ, and through him, hath made all promises of heaven, and ratified them to us.

IV. In the place which was called the house of God, and of heaven, was the Ladder seen, Gen. xxviii. 19. So in Christ's Church, the true house of God, we get a clear and full sight of Christ.

JOSEPH A TYPE OF CHRIST.

PARALLELS.

I. JOSEPH, signifies increasing ; he was the first-born of Rachel, and Jacob's beloved son : so Christ, in his human nature, in the days of his flesh, grew, and increased in strength, and in favour with God and man ; and so also there shall be of his kingdom and glory in the world, who is the beloved of his Father.

II. Joseph was very beautiful, and also excelled all his brethren in true virtue, Gen. xxxvii. 3. So Jesus Christ is more beautiful than the children of men ; he was full of grace and truth.

III. Joseph was a man of great wisdom, able to expound deep secrets, &c. In Jesus Christ are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge, who is therefore called the great Counsellor, and is that blessed Lamb, who hath prevailed to open the books, and loose the seals thereof ; he hath the Spirit without measure, and thereby opens all the deep mysteries of God, that lay hid from ages and generations, &c.

IV. He is called a fruitful bough whose branches run upon the wall, because out of him branched two tribes, Ephraim and Manasseh, Gen. xlix. 22. Therein, saith Dr. Taylor, he was a Type of Christ, who is not only a fruitful bough, and called the branch, &c., but also a Root, from whom all the tribes of God branch out, and flourish. And whereas those trees are withered, Christ shall see his seed, and prolong his days, and they shall abide to eternity.

V. Joseph was a type of Christ in his actions. (1.) He was sent by his father, to visit his brethren in the wilderness, who evilly treated him there : So Jesus Christ came to visit his poor people, who were wandering in the wilderness of this world ; and when he came hither, was evilly treated by his own brethren, the Jews, who conspired to take away his life ; like as Joseph's brethren sought to deal by him. (2.) Joseph fed his brethren, and all his father's house : so Jesus Christ feeds the Church of God. (3.) Joseph being innocent, yet suffered many hard things : So did Christ. (4.) He did all the good he could for his brethren, who had ill deserved it from his hands : so did Jesus Christ deal by poor sinners, who had abused him, and still daily do. (5.) He taught his brethren the great duty of brotherly love ; " See that ye fall not out by the way." So Jesus Christ, above all lessons, commends to us the new commandment of love, &c.

VI. Joseph was a Type of Christ, not only in the actions of his life, and in respect of those things he suffered, and cruel temptations he met with, &c., but also in his advancement, and great preferment ; he by being abased was raised to honour : so was Jesus Christ. Joseph was made a mighty Lord, and was next to Pharaoh ; so is Christ advanced in power and glory next to God himself. Every man was to bow to Joseph, Gen. xli. 43. Se every one is required to bow the knee to Jesus Christ, Phil. ii. 10. All were to go to Joseph, they were to depend upon his word. " Go to Joseph," saith Pharaoh, " and what he saith to you, do ye," Gen. xli. 55. So God the Father hath given Christ a name above every name; Acts iii. 22, 23. And whatsoever any sinner or believer wants, the Father commands them to go to Jesus, and to hear him in every thing that he shall say unto them. "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him," Matt. iii. 17.

MOSES A TYPE OF CHRIST.

I. MOSES was a Type of Christ in his person: (1.) He was of mean parents and birth: so was Christ in respect of his flesh, or human nature, of a poor decayed and dried stock, being born of a poor virgin. (2.) Moses was no sooner born, but he was exposed to the wrath of Pharaoh, king of Egypt, who sought to put him to death: so Christ in his infancy was sought by king Herod to be slain; but both by God's extraordinary providence were delivered. (3.) Moses was of a meek and sweet disposition, above all that dwelt upon the earth, yet full of zeal and indignation against sin: so Christ was a pattern of meekness and humility. "Learn of me," &c., Matt. xi. 28, 29.

II. Moses in his office and function was a Type of Christ. (1.) He was appointed by God, and sent to deliver Israel out of Pharaoh's cruel bondage: so Jesus Christ was appointed and sent to deliver all the Israel of God from the cruel bondage of Satan, and heavy oppression and burden of sin. (2.) Moses was sent to lead Israel towards Canaan: so Jesus Christ leads us to heaven, the anti-type of Canaan. But in this there is a disparity: Moses led Israel but unto the sight of the promised land; but Jesus Christ leads us quite into heaven, or the land of promise. (3.) Moses was learned in all the learning of Egypt: Christ was learned to admiration; his enemies cried out, from whence hath he all this learning? (4.) Moses gave the law, having first received it from the hand of God: so Jesus Christ hath given us the law of the Gospel, as he received it from his Father. (5.) Moses was mediator of the first covenant, and as so considered, was both King, Priest, and Prophet: Jesus Christ is mediator of the second covenant, and as so also both King, Priest, and Prophet. (6.) Moses wrought many mighty miracles in Egypt, at the Red Sea, and in the wilderness, to confirm the law, and to show Israel that he was really sent of God: so Jesus Christ wrought many strange and wonderful miracles by sea and land, in towns and deserts, to manifest his glory, to show he was sent of God, and to confirm his doctrine. (7.) Moses instituted the passover: so Christ, the true Moses, instituted the Supper.

III. Moses in his faithfulness was a type of Christ; he was faithful as a servant; he did all things exactly according to the pattern showed him in the mount: so Christ in all things was faithful as a Son, Heb. iii. 5, 6.

IV. Moses being to deliver the law, fasted forty days and nights in the mountain alone: Christ being to preach the Gospel, fasted so long in the wilderness.

V. He was a Type of Christ in many particular actions of his life: (1.) Moses married an Ethiopian, a stranger, a black: so Christ espoused the Gentiles, who were strangers to God, and, by reason of sin, as black as hell could make them. (2.) Moses sweetened the bitter waters of Marah, by a tree cast into it: so Christ sweetens all our afflictions by the means of his cross. (3.) Moses led Israel through the Red sea: Christ leads his Church through a sea of tribulation. (4.) As Moses was transfigured on mount Sinai, and seemed so glorious, that the children of Israel could not behold his face: so Jesus Christ also was transfigured in mount Tabor, so as his disciples were amazed, and wist not what they said.

JOSHUA A TYPE OF CHRIST.

PARALLELS.

I. JOSHUA, or Jesus, he was a Saviour, as his name signifies; he saved Israel from temporal and external enemies and calamities: so Christ saves us from all spiritual and internal enemies and miseries, as well he will from all external.

II. Joshua led Israel quite into Canaan, not only unto the sight of it, but into it: so Christ leads us, as we said before, into heaven. What Moses could not do, Joshua did do upon this account : so what the law could not do, being weak through the flesh, Christ, our Joshua, hath done.

III. Joshua was a mighty conqueror : so is Christ. Joshua overcame and utterly destroyed many kings, that so he might give Israel the peaceable possession of the land of Canaan : so Jesus Christ overcame, and totally vanquished divers mighty kings, and enemies of our souls, that so he might give us a certain assurance of the eternal inheritance, viz. (1.) Satan, the great king of the bottomless-pit. (2.) Sin, who, like a cruel and merciless king and tyrant, reigned over all the children of men. (3.) Death, the king of terrors, &c.

IV. All the good promises God made to Israel, were fulfilled by the hands of Joshua : so all the gracious promises of God to his elect, were fulfilled in and by Jesus Christ.

V. Joshua saved Rahab's house, that had the red cord hung out at the window : so Jesus Christ saves all poor penitent sinners, that express faith in his blood.

VI. He accepted also the Gibeonites, who humbly entreated peace of him ; so doth Christ all sincere converts, who wisely seek for mercy.

SAMPSON A TYPE OF CHRIST.

PARALLELS.

I. Samson's nativity was foretold by an angel of God : so was the conception and nativity of Jesus Christ foretold by an angel. (2.) Sampson was sanctified from the womb : so was Christ much more.

II. Sampson in respect of his great strength, as some conceive, was a type of Christ.

III. He conquered a stout lion in the desert, hand to hand, as it were : so Christ overcame the roaring lion, the devil, in the wilderness, and made him fly.

IV. He slew many of God's enemies by his death : so Jesus Christ by death overcame sin, Satan, hell, and the grave.

DAVID A TYPE OF CHRIST.

"As all the kings of Israel were express types of Jesus Christ, the head of his kingdom, and of all the people of God, &c. So were there two of them, that were more manifest figures of him than all the rest ; I mean, David and Solomon, of both which we shall enquire wherein the resemblance consisteth. David was so special a type of the Lord Jesus, as scarce is any thing noted of Christ, but some shadow of it might be observed in David, of which we shall briefly touch upon in the following parallels." Dr. Taylor.

PARALLELS.

I. For his person ; David, the Son of Jesse : Christ, the true Rod out of the stock of Jesse. Both of obscure and low parentage, both out of dry and despicable roots, Isa. xi. 1.

II. David was a king of Israel, and had his kingdom raised out of humility : Christ is a King, King of saints, and King of nations ; and yet at first his kingdom was small, and rose by degrees, much after the manner as David's did, whose kingdom was the figure of it.

III. David was a man after God's own heart, save in the case of Uriah : Christ much more a man after God's own heart, a man without spot. Christ is often called David, "My servant David shall be the Prince among them," Ezek. xxxiv. 24. "They shall serve the Lord their God, and David their king, whom I will raise up unto them," Jer. xxx. 9. "They shall seek the Lord their God, and David their king," Hos. iii. 5. Not the typical David, long before dead, but the Messiah, the true David, the beloved of God.

IV. David was made the head of nations, as he himself speaketh, "Thou hast made me the head of nations," &c. Which was not so fully true in the type, as in the Anti-type ; he spake it figuratively of Jesus Christ ; for literally David was king but of one little corner in Judea; but Christ, the true David, hath, and shall have his dominions from sea to sea, and from the river to the ends of the earth.

V. David was a prophet as well as a King: so is Jesus Christ.

VI. David was anointed about the thirtieth year of his life: so Christ, the true David, was baptized, and then anointed by the Holy Spirit, being about the thirtieth year of his age.

VII. David in his wars had many poor men that followed him, such as were in debt, &c.; so Jesus Christ, the true David, had many poor men who followed him, and became his disciples, who were heavy laden under the burden of sin, which is called a debt.

VIII. David had several brave men with him, who were called his worthies: so had Christ, the true David, his twelve apostles, who were most valiant and noble champions for the truth, besides the seventy disciples.

IX. David had many open, and some secret enemies, as Doeg, Ahithophel, &c. His own son also rose up in rebellion against him: so Jesus Christ had, still hath, many open and secret enemies. The Jews, who were called his own people, plotted against him; nay, and one of his own disciples, that ate bread with him, lifted up the heel against him, and at last treacherously betrayed him with a kiss.

X. David was a type of Christ in his kingdom: 1. In respect of the entrance. 2. In respect of the administration. 3. Of continuation, &c.

1. David entered not without strong opposition, much contempt and disdain: so Jesus Christ was vilified: "The stone which the builders refused, is become the head-stone of the corner," Acts iv. 11. No man was more despised of Saul's courtiers, than David, who was thought far enough from the kingdom: so no man could be more slighted and rejected, than Christ was by the scribes, Pharisees, Priests, and other people of Israel.

2. In his administration, David would judge uprightly, and sing of mercy and judgment; he would endure no hateful person in his sight. Christ, the true David, is the most just and righteous Judge of heaven and earth, who most sincerely dispenseth grace and mercy to all penitent sinners, but feeds impenitent and rebellious ones with judgment, &c.

3. In the continuation of his kingdom, God promised mercy to David, and his seed for ever: which promises are not to be extended to his carnal succession, for the princely dignity is taken from them; but the spiritual seed of the true David was there meant: (1.) Christ himself, in whom his kingdom is perpetuated. (2.) The true Israel, whether Jews or Gentiles, who by faith are engrafted into the Messiah, in respect of whom there shall be no end of his kingdom.

XI. Many things that David speaks in the book of psalms, which some are ready to think he spake of himself, yet, such a type was he of Christ, that they are directly applicable to none but Jesus Christ, &c.

SOLOMON A TYPE OF CHRIST.

PARALLELS.

I. Solomon, or Shelomon, peaceable, the son of David, greatly beloved, and king of Israel and Jerusalem: so was Christ the beloved of God, the true Son of David according to the flesh, King of Israel, and prince of peace, &c.

II. Solomon exceeded all other men in wisdom and knowledge: Christ is the wisdom of God: "In him are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge," Col. ii. 3. But in this there is great difference between them. 1. Solomon had his wisdom by donation and gift; Christ, as God, derived it from none. 2. Solomon by all his wisdom knew not the hearts of men: but Christ doth, he knew what was in man. 3. Solomon could not infuse his wisdom into others, to make them wise: but Jesus Christ is made of God unto us, wisdom; he makes us wise. 4. Solomon in all things he did was not wise; but Christ was in all things wise; in him was no folly.

III. Solomon for his wisdom was admired, and his fame was spread abroad: But much more was the wisdom and excellent speeches, doctrine, and miracles of Christ spread abroad, so that his very enemies confessed, never man spake like him, John viii.

IV. Solomon was a Type of Christ, in that he was a king of the greatest royalty, wealth, and glory, that ever was ; he so enriched his subjects, that silver and gold were as common to them as stones in the street, 1 Kings iii. 13. Christ enriches all his people spiritually, the price of grace being far above gold.

V. Solomon was a Type of Christ, 1. In building ; 2. Dedicating ; 3. Ordering the temple.

1. He built the temple: Christ built or builds his Church: "Upon this rock will I build my Church," Matt. xvi. 18.

2. He dedicated the temple, and consecrated it to the service of God, by which means prayers, and other acts of religious worship, were accepted: so Jesus Christ dedicated his Church by solemn prayer to God, and by his blood and mediation renders all their services, and other acts of religious worship, accepted by the Father.

3. He ordered all things in the temple, appointing the several offices and officers thereof: so Jesus Christ, the true Solomon, orders all things according to his wisdom in his Church, about the public worship of God, and hath appointed all offices and officers that should be therein.

VI. Solomon was a Type of Christ in his administration of justice, which was the glory of his royal throne.

Yet in many things Solomon was no Type of Christ, &c.

ELISHA A TYPE OF CHRIST.

I. ELISHA signifies the health of God. Jesus Christ is truly the health and salvation of God ; it is he that heals all poor sin-sick souls.

II. He succeeded Elijah: so Christ succeeded the second' Elijah, viz., John Baptist.

III. He received the spirit of his predecessor in a double measure: Christ not in a double measure, but without measure.

IV. He cured Naaman of his leprosy, and raised the dead: in this he was a Type of Christ, who cured the leprosy both externally and internally, and in both senses raised the dead also.

V. He had a wicked, ungodly, and covetous servant, call Gehazi: so had Christ a wicked and covetous Judas.

His predecessor was a Type of Christ also in many things, particularly in his ascension into heaven, &c.

JONAH A TYPE OF CHRIST.

I. JONAH, a dove in name: Christ was the same in nature.

II. He was three days and three nights in the whale's belly, yet at last came forth alive: so Christ was three days and three nights in the bowels or heart of the earth, and yet rose again alive.

III. He preached repentance to a wicked people: so did Christ.

ZERUBBABEL A TYPE OF CHRIST.

I. ZERUBBABEL is called the elect of God, Hag. ii. 23. So is Jesus Christ, "Behold my servant, mine elect," &c.

II. The Lord promised to make him a signet, signifying thereby that his dignity and glory should be most excellent, which is only accomplished in Christ.

III. He was appointed to raise up the temple of David ; it was promised that he should lay the foundation, and finish it, &c. So was Jesus Christ appointed to build up and restore the spiritual temple and tabernacle of David ; he lays the foundation, and he finishes it by his Spirit, &c.

AARON A TYPE OF CHRIST.

PARALLELS.

I. AARON, a teacher, or the mountain of fortitude: so is Christ the true Teacher of God's word, and in that respect not only the Anti-type of Aaron, but of all true teachers and ministers of God's word, that went before him, and is also that exalted Aaron, or mountain of invincible strength.

II. Aaron was Moses's mouth to the people, Exod. iv. 30. So is Christ his Father's mouth to men, in declaring his will and mind to them.

III. He was the blesser of the people, Lev. iv. 22. So is Christ the true blesser of his people, in and by him are all the families of the earth blessed; him hath God the Father sent to bless you, &c., Acts iv. 27.

IV. He was the high priest of the Lord: in this he was express Type of the Lord Jesus, who is the true and only High Priest of his faithful people.

V. He died upon the top of the mount: Christ was crucified upon the top of a mount, called Golgotha.

THE HIGH PRIEST A TYPE OF CHRIST.

PARALLELS.

THE High Priest was a Type of Christ, Heb. vi. 1. 1. In his deputation to his office. 2. In his consecration. 3. In his apparel. 4. In the execution of his office, &c.

First; In his deputation to his office.

1. He must be chosen out of the tribe of Levi; Christ was taken from among men of our flesh and bone.

2. He must not be blind, lame, &c., but wholly without natural blemish: to signify Christ should be without sin, "In his mouth was no guile."

3. He was to be a man of knowledge, or no Priest of God: which figured forth that perfect knowledge that is in Christ.

Secondly; as to his consecration, is set down, Exod. xxxix. 1, 1. Washing. 2. Anointing. 3. Sacrificing and purifying with blood, and this consecration to continue seven days together; which in general, shadowed the surpassing sanctity and purity of Christ, above all men and angels, and of his being anointed with the Holy Spirit above his brethren, and of his becoming our High Priest, by the sacrifice of himself, or by offering up his own blood, to atone and make peace, &c., Heb. i. 8. But whereas the High Priest needed sacrifices to offer for his own sins, in that there is a disparity, for Christ having no sin, needeth no sacrifice for himself.

Thirdly; The High Priest in his apparel was a Type of Christ.

1. He was to have on a linen garment, which signified Christ's righteousness, which all that appear accepted before the Lord, must have on.

2. A girdle, which as Ainsworth, and divers others observe, signified that constancy and stability that was in Christ, who is as firm as a rock; as also to show how fixed and stable all God's people should be, being girt about with the girdle of truth and verity, and so prepared, ready, and strengthened to every good work.

3. A bonnet, which signified God's covering and protecting our head from all dangers, and in him, us, that no evil may befall us.

4. The High Priest was to have an Ephod, not of wool, nor silk, but of linen, the matter of which riseth out of the earth, which signifieth, saith Dr. Taylor, that holy flesh of Christ, which veiled his Deity, as a garment; it was a long white garment, signifying the absolute righteousness of Christ; which is long enough to cover all our nakedness. It was adorned with two onyx stones; and in them the names of the twelve tribes engraven, which he carried on his shoulders; signifying that the names of the godly are not lightly written, but engraven in the love and memory of Christ, that Christ should carry his Church and people upon his shoulders, or support them by his own strength: also the two onyx stones, with the names of the children of Israel engraven upon them, and wore upon the high priest's shoulder, was a great ornament to him: so Christ looks upon his people to be as precious stones, and jewels unto him.

5. The high-priest was to have on the breast-plate of judgment, the most precious part of all his garments.

(1.) In respect of the twelve costly and glittering stones, which were to be set in four rows, according to the number of the tribes of Israel: these stones signified the shining grace and holiness of Christ, not only as it shone forth in his own person, but also as it is communicated to all his faithful children, these stones shone gloriously: so do the saints in grace, and true Gospel purity.

(2.) These stones were of great worth and value; signifying what a value Jesus Christ puts upon his church, they are as precious stones, and costly jewels in his esteem, though slighted and contemned by men.

(3.) They were set in the pectoral, and Aaron must carry them on his heart; signifying that Christ hath as much care of his own people, as if they were inclosed in his heart; they lie near him, and are always upon his heart, and in his mind.

(4.) In number twelve, according to all the tribes; noting there is room enough in Christ's heart for every particular saint, he loves them all, bears them all upon his heart, before the throne of God.

(5.) They stood in four rows in a comely quadrangle; signifying the comely order that Christ hath placed in his Church, some in a higher, and some in a lower rank.

(6.) All the stones, and so consequently all the names of the children of Israel, stood in the breast-plate in a narrow compass: so by Christ all the children of God are gathered together, and sweetly veiled through the Spirit in love: in the breast-plate also, was the Urim and Thummim, which the Rabbi David, a Jew, saith, "It is unknown to us what these signify;" it is thought it was the workmanship of no man, but a sacred monument immediately received from God, but all the learned, I have met with, agree they signified Jesus Christ. 1. Their names, say some, signify light; others beauty and perfection; in Christ is all fulness of light, beauty and perfection. 2. Their use, was to receive by them answers from God, in difficult cases, when the priest consulted with him, the oracle by Urim gave certain direction: so Christ is the most perfect rule and direction, shadowed by that. As God spake then by Urim to the priest; so now by his own Son, Heb. i. 1, 2. Those who would have their doubts resolved, must go to the Urim, go to Christ, and to his ordinances, &c.

But to return back, and speak a little further to the robe of the Ephod, and bonnet on the skirts of the Ephod, were fastened, the pomegranates of blue silk, and purple, and scarlet round about; this fruit had a most pleasant smell, sweet in itself, and sweetening other things, and is full of precious juice and liquor, Exod. xxviii. 31. 2. Bells of gold between them round about a golden bell and a pomegranate, &c., this vesture or garment, might signify the righteousness of Christ's human nature, and by the sweet pomegranates, the most excellent savour of his righteousness and obedience, in the nostrils of God the Father, in the behalf of man; which also in a spiritual sense was full of precious juice and virtue, to qualify and abate the raging heat of God's wrath; as the juice of pomegranates doth allay the burning heat of an ague or fever; as also they might signify what a sweet savour Christ's righteousness doth cast upon us, when wrapped, as it were, therein, who by nature are in a stinking and loathsome condition. 3. As to the golden bells they might figure forth the blessed sound of the Gospel; or, as some understand, Christ's visible owning of us now in heaven, and our public owning of him on earth, which must be sincere; we must not only make a sound, but also have good fruit; we must not only have a word for God, but a work for God; a bell, a pomegranate, a word, and a work.

6. The high-priest must be heard when he goeth into the sanctuary; signifying, saith Dr. Taylor, the power of Christ, our High-Priest's perpetual intercession, being entered into the true sanctuary, viz., heaven itself for us.

As touching the mitre, or bonnet upon the priest's head, made of blue silk, and fine linen, like to an half coronet, beautified with a golden plate, on which was written "holiness to the Lord." 1. The mitre might not only signify God's covering and protecting our Head the Lord Jesus, and us in him, but also his kingly dignity. 2. The golden plate in which was written "Holiness to the Lord," figured forth in a most conspicuous manner; that most divine and perfect holiness of the Lord our righteousness, the holiness of his Person; the holiness of his nature, the holiness of all his actions and passions; his holiness, who is the cause, stream, and original of all our holiness, that is accepted of God.

Fourthly, the priest was a type of Christ in the execution of his office.

1. The priest must kill the sacrifices, and none but he; signifying Jesus Christ's voluntary action, in laying down his life for us, none could take it away from him; John x. 18; he was as well the priest as the sacrifice.

2. The priest offered the blood of the sacrifices to God, and sprinkled it on the altar; no man might offer his own sacrifice, but he must bring it to the priest: figuring there was no coming to God but by Christ, who offered up his own blood to atone for our sins; no other can offer any sacrifice to take away sin, but him alone, Lev. vii. 4.

3. The priest prepared the body of the sacrifice, flayed it, divided it into several parts, washed the entrails, put fire unto the burnt-offerings, consumed the fat, cast the filth and dung into the place of ashes, &c., signifying that Christ alone did the whole work of our redemption, he suffered the heat of God's wrath and justice, he puts away all our filth, and covers it in his own grave, and washeth us in the foundation of his own blood, &c., Lev. i. 6.

4. The priest was to teach the people, "The priest's lips must preserve knowledge, and thou shalt seek the law at his mouth;" Mal. ii. 7, this figured forth Christ in his prophetic office, who is the great Doctor and Teacher of God's mind and will to the children of men, it is he who hath the tongue of the learned, so that never man spake like him, it is he who hath the tongue of the learned, so that never man spake like him, it is he who hath the words of everlasting life, Psal. xlv. 2.

5. The priests were to preserve the oil for lights, and the incense, and for the daily meat-offering, and the anointing oil, &c., signifying that Jesus Christ is the Preserver of all grace, in and for his church, he only watcheth for the safety of his people, he preserves the light of his grace and good works in us, and the oil of gladness from decaying in our lamps and vessels, Luke xxiv. 50.

There were some actions more peculiar to the high priest.

1. He must daily dress the holy lambs and lights, morning and evening, before the Lord, to preserve the light from going out: so Christ preserves the light of his word and Gospel from being put out, though men and devils with all their might have endeavoured to do it, Lev. xxiv. 2, 3.

2. He must weekly make the shew-bread, and set it before the Lord continually, and, more expressly, every sabbath he must set on the table twelve loaves, according to the number of the tribes of Israel, and take the old away, &c., Exod. xxv. 30. In this he was a type of Christ, who sets himself continually in the ministry of the word, as the substance and anti-type of the shew-bread, before the children of men, especially to feed and strengthen his own children, nay, and brings forth fresh food, new bread for them every sabbath.

3. He must yearly, and that in the day of expiation, go into the holy of holies, to make an atonement for himself, for his house, and for all the people, but not without blood; signifying that Christ by one alone sacrifice of himself, hath opened the sanctuary of heaven, and by his ascension hath made entrance into it on our behalf, and there appears before God once for all to make intercession for us. The priest went alone without any attendants: so Christ hath trod the wine-press alone, no competitor, no companion hath he in this work, and now pleads alone, as our own, and only Mediator, by virtue of his own blood, at the Father's right-hand; "There is one," that is but one, "Mediator," between God and man, &c.

4. The high-priest continually was to decide the highest controversies, he must judge between the clean and the unclean, he must put the one out, and receive the other into the congregation; signifying that Christ only, Christ alone is the supreme Judge of all controversies, it is his word only that can decide the case, who is clean, and who unclean, who is to be put out, and who to be taken into his Church, Exod. xxx. 10, Lev. xvi. 2, Heb. x. 12, 19.

THE TABERNACLE, AND WHAT IT WAS THE TYPE OF.

THE Tabernacle in some respects, according to the learned, was a Type of Christ's human nature.

(1.) It was exceeding glorious within, all the inward parts thereof were overlaid with pure gold. This might signify how the human nature of the Son of God was covered with the Deity; that being the true tabernacle that God hath pitched, and not man. St. John saith, the word dwelt, or tabernacled amongst us, speaking of his being in our flesh, or taking upon him our nature, it being conceived by the Holy Ghost, and not erected by man.

(2.) The Tabernacle was the place where God met with his people; now God meets with his people in Christ, it is in and through him, we come to know or have the true revelation of his will, and enjoy his gracious presence, &c. Those who would be accepted with God, and worship him aright, must wait at the door of this spiritual Tabernacle.

Others understand by the Tabernacle, the Church, or mystical body of Christ, wherein God graciously dwells, and hath promised also to meet his people.

1. It was moveable, signifying the troublesome state of God's people whilst they pass through the wilderness of this world.

2. The Tabernacle had three places. 1. The outward court, where stood the brazen altar. 2. The holy place. 3. The holiest of all. In the first, it typifies forth the visible or outward form of the Church, in respect of the external exercise of religion and worship, hither the common people may come. The second typified out the spiritual state, or more close and holy fellowship of the Church, which none have admittance into, but sincere and sanctified persons, who feed upon the spiritual and true shew-bread, Jesus Christ. The third typified heaven itself, or the Church of God triumphant, where Christ is set down in glory, at his Father's right-hand, to intercede for us.

3. The entry to the holiest of all, was by the holy place, and to the holy place, was by the outer court, &c. So our entry into heaven, is by being members of the visible Church, through faith, and a good conscience. He that would enter into the holiest of all, must first be holy; and he that would come into a state of true holiness, and communion with God and his people, must learn to know where the candlestick and true shew-bread stands, which is the invisible Church.

4. You read of the fixed pillars of the holy place; they might signify the holy apostles of Jesus Christ, and his faithful ministers, who help to support the spiritual structure, the Church, as pillars do support a house, &c.

5. The divers ornaments and instruments thereof, might signify the diversity of spiritual gifts and graces in the Gospel-Church; the Tabernacle was exceeding glorious within, and all the inward parts thereof were overlaid with pure gold: so inwardly, the Church of God is very beautiful, the king's daughter is all glorious within, Exod. xxxv., Psal. xlv.

6. The several coverings thereof, typified the Lord's sure and safe protection of his Church, by his own immediate power and gracious ministrations of angels.

7. Gold within, and skies without; might signify, though the Church is glorious within, yet outwardly, to the sight and view of carnal men, she hath no beauty, but is looked upon as contemptible.

8. The Tabernacle and all the instruments thereof; yea, the very ash-pans, and snuffers of the candlestick, must be made according to the pattern showed in the mount; which figured forth, that the Church of God, and all the exercise of worship that is therein, whether doctrine or discipline, must be exactly according to the express written word; nothing must be added to, nor diminished from, no alterations one way or other must be made, Exod. xxv. 40.

8. The voluntary oblation of the people to build the tabernacle, signifies how willing Christians should be to contribute of their outward substance to uphold God's Church, and the public worship thereof.

10. The glorious door of the tabernacle, might be a figure of Christ, who saith, "I am the door," John x. 7; it is by him we enter into the kingdom of grace and glory.

THE VAIL OF THE HOLIEST, AND WHAT IS FIGURED FORTH, Exod. xxvi. 31.

I. It was glorious, of embroidered work; this saith Guild, signified the body of Christ, filled with the fulness of God, or beautiful with all the most excellent and heavenly graces of the Spirit, Heb. vii. 26.

II. It was replenished and wrought full of cherubims! noting thereby that serviceable and ready attendance of the angels on Christ's natural and mystical body, John i. 51.

III. It was borne up by glorious and costly pillars, overlaid with gold, on sockets of silver; to show that the humanity of Christ, especially in his sufferings, should be borne up by his Deity, which his manhood overvailed.

IV. By the vail only, there was entry into the holiest place of all: so by the Vail, that is to say, the flesh of Christ, which was rent, as it were, upon the cross, a new and living way is made for us to the Father, Heb. x. 20.

THE ARK A TYPE OF CHRIST.

I. THE Ark was an assurance of God's presence amongst his people: so Christ is the cause and assurance, that God in a gracious way is present with us.

III. Where the ark was, there it was lawful to offer sacrifice, and no where else: which might show that our acceptance in God's sight, is through Jesus Christ. If Christ dwell not in our hearts by faith, if we have not the Ark with us, Christ with us, God will not accept of our prayers nor service.

III. In the Ark was the pot of manna; to show that in Christ is the life, comfort, and spiritual nourishment for our souls.

IV. The Ark had a crown of gold around about it; signifying the majesty of Christ's kingdom, or his regal power.

V. The two tables were in the Ark, the Ark kept them; which might signify Christ's keeping the law perfectly for us, and deliver us thereby from the curse of it.

VI. When the Ark was set in the temple of Dagon, Dagon fell down and broke to pieces: so when Christ, and his truth, are set up in a man's heart, or a nation, sin and idolatry will go down.

VII. Where the Ark was, there was the glory of God; and when that departed, the glory of God departed: so where Christ's blessed truth and Gospel is, there is the glory of God, but when Christ leaves a people, takes away his Gospel, the glory of God goes from that people.

Some run a parallel between the Church and the Ark; others between the public worship of God and it; but in my judgment, it more clearly was a Type of Christ, which may comprehend much of what they say in respect of other things.

THE MERCY-SEAT, A TYPE OF CHRIST, Exod. xxv. 17.

I. It was called the Mercy-seat, or as Ainsworth gives it from the Hebrew word, a propitiation-covering; this, saith the apostle, applieth to Christ, called God's propitiation; it is in Christ, mercy is truly seated; and it is he that hath made a propitiation for our sins, 1 John ii. 2.

II. It was the cover of the ark where the two tables lay. So Christ is the true cover, the Deliverer from the curse and accusation of the law, Rom: iii. 22.

III. It was of pure gold, noting the spotless holiness of Christ.

IV. Upon the mercy-seat were two cherubims; these cherubims signified the holy angels, they stretched their wings on high, covering or shadowing so the mercy-seat. This word is used for protection or defence from evil, saith the learned Ainsworth. And doubtless, it might signify the usefulness of angels in Christ's spiritual kingdom; they looked down on the Mercy-seat, signifying the mystery of Christ's incarnation, or God manifested in the flesh, "Which things the angels desired to look into," 1 Pet. i. 12. Hence the apostle saith in another place, "He was seen of angels," seen with delight and admiration. Some by the mercy-seat and cherubims, understand the holy Trinity in unity, viz., by the mercy-seat, being a figure of Christ ; and the two cherubims, the Father and the Holy Ghost ; and by the two cherubims at the end of the mercy-seat, they understand Christ's standing between God and the rigour of his justice, God looking on the law, through Christ, as fulfilled by him, for us ; and from hence communing with us : but that the Father should be represented to us in the figure of one of the cherubims ; I see no ground for it, forasmuch as we read of no similitude of the Father, save the person of Christ only, so Dent. iv. 15.

THE TABLE OF SHEW-BREAD A TYPE OF CHRIST.

I. It was covered over with gold, and a crown about it ; noting, saith Guild, the purity of Christ's humanity, with the glory of his Deity, and majesty of his kingdom.

II. It had food, called Shew-bread, set upon it, which none were to eat of but the priest ; only signifying that spiritual nourishment which is in Christ, the Bread of Life ; which none receive or partake of, but believers only, or the royal priesthood of the faithful.

III. The Bread was always to be upon the table ; signifying, in Christ there is food continually for our souls.

IV. There was much Bread, twelve cakes, or square loaves, &c. : signifying, in Christ there is food and nourishment enough, for all who see a necessity of him ; or it doth show how plentifully God feeds his elect ; his poor shall not want bread, his Table is always spread, always richly and abundantly furnished.

THE CANDLESTICK A TYPE OF CHRIST, AND OF HIS MYSTICAL BODY.

I. It was the only thing that held the light, which enlightened the sanctuary ; so from Christ all the light of grace and spiritual gifts come, for the use and benefit of his Church.

II. It had seven lamps, to signify that perfection of light that is in Christ.

III. It was placed in the sanctuary : so is Christ as a glorious light placed in his Church, or spiritual sanctuary ; " Out of Zion the perfection of beauty, God hath shined." Some by the lamps, understand the ministers of the Gospel were signified.

IV. It had an upright stem, which bore the many branches that issued or proceeded from the same : typifying Christ Jesus, that true and blessed stalk and fountain of light, from whom all light floweth, and who bears up and keeps constant in the truth, all the branches, and true light-bearers of his word, Rev. i. 20.

V. The branches were adorned with bowls, knobs, and flowers, &c. So are the ministers of his Gospel, or true spiritual light-bearers, with many rare and most excellent graces, and gifts of the Holy Spirit.

VI. Aaron dressed those lamps, and renewed their oil daily ; so our high priest Jesus Christ, is the only enlightener and fitter of his faithful ministers. That they may shine more clearly, and be the greater ornament to his Church, it is he that supplies them continually with his Spirit, and the saving graces thereof.

VII. The Candlestick had snuffers, and snuff-dishes of pure Gold ; which might figure forth the good and godly discipline of the Church, whereby those evil persons who hinder the peace and glory of it, are taken away by excommunication.

THE ALTAR OF PERFUME A TYPE OF CHRIST.

Exod. xxx. 1—10.

I. THE Altar was made of shittim, Greek, incorruptible wood, or wood that never rots, overlaid with gold, and having a crown about it, as had the ark: this Altar signified Christ in both his natures, his Deity yielding glory to his humanity, and now crowned with glory and majesty at God's right hand, where he abides for ever incorruptible, &c.

II. The Altar had horns on the four corners thereof; overlaid with gold, which were not only for ornament, but to keep things from falling off the Altar, for the horns were upwards, Ezek. xlii. 15, Heb. ix. 4. And horns usually signify power and might; these four horns, saith the learned Ainsworth, signified the power and glory of Christ's Priesthood, for the salvation of his Church, gathered from the four corners of the earth.

III. The incense was only to be offered upon this altar; to show that all our prayers and services must be performed in Christ's name, or offered up upon the golden Altar of his mediation, Rev. viii. 3—5.

IV. The incense was to be first beaten, made fit, and well prepared, before it was to be put on the Altar; noting how our prayers, which are compared to incense, ought to proceed from an humble, contrite and broken spirit, which we offer up in the name of Jesus Christ, Psal. xli. 2, and li.

V. The incense was kindled by fire upon the altar: so must our prayers be holy and fervent: we must pray with much zeal, or to be set on fire by the Spirit and powerful heat and operation thereof, if we would have them accepted upon the golden Altar, &c.

VI. The incense was offered up by the priest: so are the prayers of all the saints made acceptable to the Father, through the oblation and intercession of our High-Priest, Rev. viii. 3—5.

VII. No strange incense was to be offered upon this Altar. This figured, the prayers of the saints must be according to the will of God, by his Spirit, and in faith, not in a vain or formal manner, after the tradition of men: we must not intermix them with any superstitious and idolatrous devices, or human inventions, we must offer up no strange prayer, no prayer to saints nor angels, Matt. xxi. 22, 1 John v. 14, Rom. viii. 26.

VIII. The perfume was to be perpetually before the Lord; which signified not only the continual exercise of prayer, which daily we should use, but also the perpetual intercession of our Saviour, in the heavens, for us, Heb. vii. 25.

IX. The High-priest only made this perfume, and it might not be applied to any other use, than to burn before the Lord; teaching us that Christ only gives direction how we should pray, and that we should in prayer only design the glory of God.

X. After the clearing of the lamps of the Candlestick, evening and morning, then the incense was burnt, showing that all our prayers and duties must be according to the directions of God's word and Spirit.

XI. The incense was made of divers spices: so must the prayers of the godly be seasoned with divers graces, viz., true repentance, lively faith, and unfeigned love, Psal. li.

XII. The incense was offered up in the holy place, without the vail of the holiest, near to the testimony before the mercy-seat: so we must always have an eye to Christ in our prayers, who is the true Mercy-seat, we must come to God by him, &c.

XIII. Once a year the Altar was sprinkled with the blood of the expiatory sacrifice; signifying how Christ is, by shedding of his blood, consecrated our blessed Mediator, and that no prayer is acceptable to God, but through faith, in the blood of Christ.

THE ALTAR OF BURNT OFFERING A TYPE OF CHRIST.

Exod. xxvii. 1—9.

PARALLELS.

I. Altar, in Hebrew, Mizbeach; in Greek, Thusiasterion; so named of sacrifices offered thereon; it was anointed, dedicated, sanctified, to be most holy, that it might sanctify the gifts offered thereon: this Altar and sacrifice, signified Jesus Christ, sanctifying himself for his church and people, that so he might sanctify them.

II. This Altar was but one, and in one place, and the sacrifice only to be offered upon it; signifying thereby that we have but one altar of redemption and salvation, viz., Jesus Christ alone; who only once, and in one place offered up a sufficient and unrepeatable sacrifice for the sins of mankind.

III. This Altar hath four horns also. See altar of Incense.

IV. It had a brazen gate in the midst of it, which let the ashes and like things fall through, &c., whereon the fire was put, which might signify two things: 1. The humanity of our Saviour, who bore the fire of God's wrath for our sins; thus Guild, Isa. liii. 12. 2. It signifieth, saith Ainsworth, the place wherein the holy fire always burneth; that is, the heart which sustaineth also the sacrifices, and where all ashes and excrements of corruption are inwardly conveyed away, as they are discovered by the Word and Spirit of God; as also our sanctification by affliction, 2 Tim. i. 3, Rom. i. 1, 2, Heb. vii. 14.

V. In that the Altar was to be made of shittim wood, and overlaid with brass, that it might endure the fire; it might figure out the human nature of Christ, supported or sustained by the Deity, to endure God's wrath for our sins.

VI. They that served at the Altar, lived of the Altar: so they who preach the Gospel, should live of the Gospel.

DISPARITY.

THE Altar was one thing, and the sacrifice another: but Christ is both the Altar, Sacrifice, and Sacrificer too; he offered up his body by the eternal Spirit, as a Sacrifice acceptable to God the Father.

THE BRAZEN LAVER, WHAT IT WAS A TYPE OF.

Exod. xxx. 18 to 25.

I. THE Brazen Laver served for the priesthood to wash their hands and feet in, before they ministered before the Lord; typifying that inward washing by Christ's blood, wherewith all the holy Priesthood of Christ must be sanctified in heart and life; before their services can be accepted in the sight of God; and that none ought to minister the word of life but godly persons, who are washed in the Laver of regeneration: "Unto the wicked God saith, what hast thou to do to take my words into thy mouth," &c., Psal. l. 16.

II. After the priests had washed themselves clean, and arrayed themselves, they entered into the holy place: so after the godly are inwardly washed by the blood of Christ, and have received by faith his righteousness to adorn them, they become fit members of the true Gospel church.

III. "They shall wash themselves," saith the Lord, "Lest they die," to show that all persons must be purged by faith in Christ's blood, or die eternally, Mark xv. 16.

IV. He that toucheth, or washeth, in the Laver, it being anointed with the holy oil, as all other things in the holy, and most holy place were, shall be holy, saith the Lord; signifying, that all they who by faith touch the Lord Jesus, who is anointed with the oil of gladness above his fellows, shall be spiritually sanctified, accepted, and accounted holy before the Lord likewise.

THE SACRIFICE OF BEASTS A TYPE OF CHRIST.

I. THE Beasts that were appointed for Sacrifice were to have horns, signifying the kingly and priestly office of Christ; horns, as we have elsewhere shown being a symbol of power, &c.

II. They were to be of a tame sort, not wild and savage Beasts, who by force are brought to the slaughter; signifying the meekness and mildness of Jesus Christ, who was patient, like a Lamb led to the slaughter, Isa. liii.

III. They must be a male-sort, which generally are the strongest; signifying the excellency and strength of Jesus Christ.

IV. They ought to be without blemish, and the best of the flock or herd, and presented of voluntary will; noting two things, (1.) That Christ should be perfectly holy, and that he should willingly lay down his life. (2.) That we should dedicate to God the best of our days, time, and strength, and not offer unto the Lord a corrupt thing; and also perform all our services to him with a free and willing mind.

V. They were to be presented at the door of the tabernacle, to be slain; signifying, that Christ's blood makes our entry into the Church of God here, and into heaven itself hereafter.

VI. They must lay their hands upon the head of the Beast, who brought him; noting thereby, our sins being laid upon Jesus Christ; and that we must lay the hand of faith upon him, if we would have benefit by his death.

VII. Then the burnt offering was slain; signifying, that so it behoved Christ, the great Anti-type, to be slain or crucified for our sins.

VIII. The blood thereof then was sprinkled about the altar; noting the all-sufficiency of Christ's death, and plenty of his bloodshed, with the large spreading or preaching thereof universally throughout the whole world, Mark xvi. 15.

IX. The skin thereof was plucked off, and the flesh cut in pieces; thereby showing the grievousness of Christ's sufferings.

X. The body, the head, and the fat, and all was laid on the fire; signifying how Christ should suffer for us both in body and soul; "My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death," Matt. xxvi. 38, Isa. liii. 12.

XI. This burnt-offering was called a sweet savour unto the Lord, which in Christ's death is solely and only accomplished; for it is thereby God's wrath is appeased, and his justice satisfied.

XII. The ashes were to be carried without the host, and put into a clean place; shadowing thereby, how Christ should be buried without the gates of Jerusalem, in a tomb wherein never man lay, and that his body should not see corruption.

XIII. The fire which consumed the burnt-offering came down from heaven; signifying, that that wrath which seized on Jesus Christ in the garden, and on the cross, came from heaven, or that it was God's wrath, due to us for our sins, that consumed him. Or, as others, it may be on better reason, give it, that that which moved Christ to suffer for mankind, was wholly his heavenly, sacred, and divine love.

XIV. This fire was to be continually upon the altar, signifying the unchangeableness of Christ's love to his elect, and recent virtue of his death and merits.

THE BURNT-OFFERING OF FOWLS A TYPE OF CHRIST, Lev. i. 14.

I. THE Fowls that were appointed for Burnt-offerings, were to be turtles or pigeons, signifying the meekness and innocence of Christ.

II. The neck of the Fowl was to be pinched with the nail, that the blood might go out, but not that the head should be plucked off from the body; signifying how Christ should die and shed his blood, yet thereby his Deity, as the head or principal part, should not be divided from his humanity; nor yet by his death should he, who is our Head, be taken from his Church, but should rise again, and be with them by his Spirit for ever, John xiv. 3.

III. The blood thereof was strained or pressed out at the side of the altar, before it was plucked, and laid upon the altar to be burned; signifying thereby the straining or pressing out of Christ's blood in his grievous agony in the garden, before he was taken, and stripped to be crucified, &c., Luke xxiv. 44.

THE DAILY SACRIFICE A TYPE OF CHRIST.

I. The daily Sacrifice was a lamb: so our Saviour, not daily, but once for all, was offered unto the Father himself, as a Lamb without spot.

II. It was slain in the morning, and in the evening; to show that Christ was a Lamb slain from the morning of the creation, or in the decree of God, from the foundation of the world, though not actually till the evening of the world, or latter days.

III. It was to be offered up with fine flour, beaten oil, and wine; to show, that Christ by his death and oblation becomes not only a redemption for us, but also spiritual food, gladness, and cheering comfort.

IV. Where this sacrifice was offered, the Lord promised and appointed to speak unto Israel, and show himself: signifying, that in Christ, and through his death and blood-shed, the new appointment, or covenant of his grace, and manifestation of his love and favour, is established to his Church, and faithful people.

THE SIN-OFFERING A TYPE OF CHRIST.

I. THE blood of the Sin-offering was to be poured out; showing how the blood of Jesus Christ, our true Sin-offering, should be poured forth.

II. "The priest," saith the Lord, "shall dip his finger in the blood of the beast, and sprinkle thereof seven times before the Lord;" shadowing the perfection of that expiation and satisfaction for sin, which Christ should make, in the virtue, quality, and perpetuity thereof; the number of seven being the number of perfection, Heb. ix. 11.

III. The priest shall bring in the blood of the bullock into the tabernacle of the congregation; showing thereby, how Christ should enter into heaven, by his own blood, having obtained eternal redemption for us, Heb. ix. 12.

IV. The priest was to take some of the blood, and put it upon the four horns of the altar; signifying thereby, that the preaching remission of sins by the atonement of Christ's blood, should be proclaimed to the four corners of the earth, Mark xvi. 15, Matt. xxviii. 19.

V. The bodies of those beasts, whose blood was brought into the sanctuary by the high priest, was burnt without the host, or camp; signifying, that Christ should suffer without the gate; teaching us also to go forth into a public profession, and bear his reproach, Heb. xiii. 11, 12.

VI. The Priest was to eat the sin-offering in the holy place, whose blood was not brought into the tabernacle of the congregation; signifying, that Jesus Christ doth not only reconcile us to God, but also feed and nourish the souls of all his royal priesthood, unto eternal life.

VII. "The priest shall make an atonement;" still is this repeated, always signifying that it is Christ, our High-priest, and his sacrifice only, that makes a real atonement and reconciliation for our sins.

THE MEAT-OFFERING, WHAT IT WAS A TYPE OF, Lev. ii.

THE Meat-offerings, as Ainsworth observes, were nine, and all of them came to the altar: (1.) The poor man's Meat-offering, Lev. v. 11. (2.) The jealousy offering, Numb. v. 15. (3.) The Meat-offering of initiation, which every priest offered when he first entered into his service, Lev. viii. 26, 28. (4.) The Meat-offering, which the high priest offered every day, Lev. vi. 20. (5.) The Meat-offering of fine flour. (6.) The Meat-offering baked on a plate. (7.) In a frying pan. (8.) In an oven. (9.) Wafers.

1. The minchah, or Meat-offering, saith he, primarily a figure of Christ's oblation, "Who gave himself for us, an oblation and sacrifice to God, for a sweet-smelling savour," Eph. v. 2. "Sacrifice and oblation," Minchah, "thou wouldst not; but a body hast thou prepared me, &c. Above, when he said, sacrifice and oblation, and burnt-offerings for sin, thou wouldst not, &c. Then saith he, lo, I come to do thy will, O God, &c., by which will we are sanctified through the offering of Christ once for all," Heb. x. 5, 8, 9, 10. So that in the oblation of Christ's body, this legal service was accomplished and ended.

2. It figured, saith he, the persons of Christians, who through him are cleansed and sanctified, to be pure oblations unto God.

3. It figured, saith he, the fruits of grace and good works, that Christians are to perform both towards God and men. (1.) Towards God: "Let the lifting up of my hands," saith David, "be as the evening" minchah, or "oblation," Psal. cxli. 2. So when God told the Jews, "I will not accept a," minchah, or "meat-offering, at your hands;" he addeth, "For from the rising of the sun, even to the going down of the same, my name shall be great among the Gentiles, and in every place incense shall be offered unto my name, and a pure meat-offering," Mal. i. 10, 11. Which is fulfilled when "Men pray every where, lifting up holy hands," &c. (2.) Towards men; see Heb. xiii. 16, Phil. iv. 18.

4. All the meat-offerings were of wheaten flour, except the jealousy-offering, and the waved sheaf, yea, and ought to be of fine flour; signifying the purity and perfection of Christ, as also that we should offer our best things to the Lord.

5. Oil and incense was put thereon; the oil, saith he, signified the graces and comforts of the Holy Ghost: and the incense or frankincense showed how acceptable saints and their services are unto the Lord, Eph. v. 2, Rom. xii. 1.

6. It must be brought to the priest, and he shall bring it to the altar; shadowing, that it is by Christ, and in his oblation, that we and our works and duties are accepted of God.

7. That which was burnt thereof was a memorial, and sweet savour before the Lord; signifying, that the death of Christ, and his merits, should be an eternal memorial before his Father, to be merciful unto us.

8. It must be without leaven, to show, that Christ was without sin, and that we must worship God in sincerity, without malice in our hearts, and without hypocrisy, 1 Cor. v. 8.

9. All meat-offerings were to be seasoned with salt, signifying thereby, that as salt seasoneth, and keepeth from corruption; so Christ seasoneth us, and all our services, and makes them acceptable to God; and that his grace preserveth us from spiritual corruption.

10. "The priest and his sons shall eat," saith the Lord, "of the meat-offering in the holy place, without leaven." Thus, saith Ainsworth, the meat-offering signified the maintenance and livelihood of God's ministers. This is to be understood of the meat-offering alone; but the meat and drink-offerings added to the other sacrifices, were not to be eaten, but burnt, and poured out upon the altar, &c., before the Lord; which figured forth saith he, the graces and good works whereby we honour Christ, and relieve his poor saints; as also our communion with Christ and his people in his house, and blessed participation of his death.

11. It must have no honey in it: though honey be sweet, and contrary to the nature of sour leaven, yet being much eaten, it breedeth loathsomeness, and is not good, but turneth to choler, &c. Both these were forbidden in this sacrifice, viz., both leaven and honey; to signify the perfection of Christ, and the excellent state of believers in him, as they are sincere, and without guile, before the throne of God and the Lamb. Besides, it may signify, that there is enough in Christ alone, without the sweets of carnal delights, to satisfy a gracious heart.

THE PEACE-OFFERING, AND WHAT IT WAS A TYPE

O F. Lev. iii.

In many things this Offering was alike with the rites of the burnt, or sin-offering, and much of the same signification; and therefore we shall only speak to it wherein it differed from them.

His oblation, or his korban, which the Greeks translate gift; and so korban is by the evangelist expounded, Mark vii. 11, Peace-offering, or pay-offering. So Ainsworth, (Hebr.) a sacrifice of payments, or of pacification, &c., whereby men paid unto God confession and thanks for their peace and prosperity; "Thy vows are upon me, O God, I will pay confessions unto thee," Psal. lvi. 12. These sacrifices were of sundry sorts, either for confession or thanksgivings, Lev. vii. 11, 12.

1. The Peace-offering was to be eaten the same day, which might signify how it becometh us to hasten, and not delay to come to Christ, and keep God's commandments; or as Ainsworth hath it, with speed, whilst it is called to-day, to be partakers of Christ, eating his flesh by faith, and every day to be thankful to God for all his mercies, Psal. cxix. 60, Heb. iii. 12, 13. "If any of the Peace-offering be eaten at all on the third day, it shall not," saith the Lord, "be accepted, neither shall it be imputed to him that offereth it ; it shall be an abomination, and the soul that eateth it, shall bear his iniquity." Which may show us what a dangerous thing it is to defer or put off a hearty closing-in with Christ to an after-time, &c. On the third day, what remained was to be burned, which Ainsworth saith, chiefly signified Christ's rising from the dead on the third day, to abolish all legal offerings.

2. The Peace-offerings were to be eaten with cakes of leavened bread, and yet with bread unleavened, the bread brought with the sacrifice of confession, as you have it in Maim's Treatise of offering, was thus prepared : he took twenty tenths, or bottles, of fine flour, and made of them ten bottles leavened, and ten unleavened ; the ten that were leavened, he made of them ten cakes ; and the ten that were unleavened, he made of them thirty cakes, equally of every sort, viz., ten cakes baked in the oven, ten cakes hastily fried, &c. And the priest took one of all four cakes, one of every sort, &c. Leaven, as it figured corruption of nature, hypocrisy, or malice, as it is noted by Ainsworth, was usually forbidden in all sacrifices ; but yet leaven in the sacrifice of thanksgiving or confession was accepted, which might hold forth God's gracious acceptance of us in Christ being sincere, signified by the unleavened cakes, notwithstanding our manifold corruptions and infirmities, figured by the leavened cakes. Or, as the learned author* notes, to signify how careful we should be to prepare ourselves, leaven being used sometimes in a good sense, denoting grace, and also to teach us to temper our joys with sorrow and afflictions in this life ; as the prophet's heart, saith he, was leavened, Psal. lxxiii. 21.

3. "If any unclean person," saith the Lord, "eat of the flesh of the Peace-offering, he shall be cut off from his people," Lev. vii. 20, signifying the fearful destruction and punishment that attends all carnal professors, who dare adventure to rely upon, or partake of Christ, and yet lead an unclean and wicked life, 1 Cor. xi. 29.

4. The offerer shall bring the sacrifice with his own hand ; teaching us, that every one is to have a particular faith in God for himself, in order to his being accepted in Jesus Christ, and to be himself truly thankful unto God.

5. The heave-offering was so called, because it was separated from the rest, and heaved up towards heaven, and after given to the Lord ; signifying all our acknowledgments, that all good things come down from God ; and to show that all our ways should tend heaven-wards, according to that of the prophet, "They shall dwell on high," Isa. xxxiii. 16, and of Paul, "Our conversation is in heaven," &c., Phil. iii. 20. Others understand, it signified Christ's being lifted up upon the cross.

THE SOLEMN YEARLY SACRIFICE OF THE BULLOCK AND HE-GOAT A TYPE OF CHRIST, Lev. xvi.

I. Of the two He-goats it was by lot that the one was taken, and the other escaped, &c. The manner, saith Ainsworth, was thus : they had two lots, the one had written upon it, "for Jehovah ;" and on the other, "for a scape-goat." Now God by these lots showed which of the two he would have die ; figuring clearly unto them, how that Jesus Christ, the lively Antitype of them, was to die by God's decree, or according to the determinate council of his own will, that we might escape eternal damnation thereby, Acts iv. 28.

II. He on whom the lot fell, was made a sin-offering for the people ; to signify that Christ should by God's decree become an offering or sacrifice for our sins.

III. The blood of the He-goat, as also the blood of the Bullock, was brought into the vail, and was sprinkled upon the mercy-seat, on the east side, which was towards the people. So are the merits of the blood of Jesus brought within the holiest of all, viz., heaven itself, before the throne of mercy, pleading for us, Heb. ix. 21.

IV. The priest was to make an atonement for the holy place, because of the uncleanness of the children of Israel, "And so he shall do for the tabernacle of the congregation," &c., Lev. xvi. 16. This showed the horrible nature of sin. For though the people never came into the holy place, much less into the most holy place ; yet such was the power of their iniquities, that the holy altar, ark, and sanctuary itself was defiled in the sight of

* See Ainsworth on Lev. vii. 3.

God, and could not be cleansed without blood. So our sins do defile God's Church, and his most holy ordinances therein performed, so that neither we, nor any of our best services, can meet with acceptance, but by the means of Christ's blood and merits.

V. No man was to be in the tabernacle, when the high priest went in to make atonement, only the high priest himself, &c., plainly signifying, that Jesus Christ, our High Priest, hath no partner with him in working our salvation. "He, his own self, bare our sins in his body on the tree," &c., 1 Pet. ii. 24.

VI. The altar of incense was sprinkled with the blood of the killed goat, shadowing, that Christ, through the shedding of his own blood, should be consecrated our Intercessor, and by the means and merits thereof our prayers should be accepted, Heb. viii. 6.

VII. The high priest was to cast off his glorious garments, when he made this atonement; signifying, that Christ should be abased, and lay aside, as it were, his glorious robes, or veil his Deity, and appear in the form of a servant, that so he might finish the work of our redemption, Heb. viii. 4; Phil. ii. 6.

VIII. The day of atonement shall, saith the text, be a sabbath for ever; shadowing thereby, that through the atonement and expiation of Christ, he hath obtained everlasting rest for us; and that in his death, all typical sacrifices should end.

IX. Once only in a year this atonement was made; to show, that not often, but once for ever, without repetition, Christ should make a perfect atonement for us by his own blood, and thereby enter into the highest heavens, to appear in the presence of God for us, Heb. ix. 24.

THE SCAPE-GOAT A TYPE OF CHRIST.

Lev. xvi. 20, &c.

I. THE Scape-goat, called in Hebrew, azazel, that is, the Goat gone away, &c., was so called, because he escaped alive; representing Christ Jesus alive in his divine nature, though put to death in his human nature, or alive after he rose again from the dead.

II. He was presented alive, that by him reconciliation might be made, and this after the other Goat was sacrificed; signifying, according to the learned, two things: (1.) The resurrection of Christ. (2.) Our rising with him, from the death of sin, to a life of grace, by the operation of the Spirit, &c.

III. "Aaron shall put or lay both his hands upon the head of the live goat, and confess over him all the iniquities of the children of Israel, &c., and he shall bear them," Lev. xvi. 21. Figuring thereby, how Christ should bear all our sins, viz., the punishment due to them; "The Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all," Isa. liii.

IV. And so the He-goat was sent into the wilderness, or land not inhabited, which the Greek calleth abaton, wayless, or inaccessible: figuring the utter abolishing of our sins by Jesus Christ, both from the face of God, that so they may not appear before him against us, to condemn us, or be imputed or charged upon us, not have any dominion or power over us.

V. They were to confess upon the head of the goat all their iniquities; signifying if we would have our sins carried away, and for ever be forgotten, we must confess them, &c. By this, saith Ainsworth, it appeareth, that as the killed Goat figured Christ killed, or put to death, for our sins; so this living Goat figured him also, "who bore our griefs, and carried our sorrows," Isa. liii. 4—6. And because Christ was not only to die for our offences, but also to rise again for our justification; and because these two things could not fitly be shadowed by one beast, which the priest having killed, could not make alive again: therefore God appointed two, that in the slain beast Christ's death, and in the live beast his life and victory might be shadowed. See the like mystery in the two birds, for the cleansing the leper.

THE SACRIFICE OF THE RED HEIFER A TYPE OF CHRIST.

NUMB. xix.

I. THE colour of this beast was red. As other Sacrifices of beasts prefigured Christ; so this, saith Ainsworth, in special figured him. Red signified his human nature, and participation of our afflictions, and the bloodiness of his agony, and grievous passion.

II. She must be without blemish, and upon whom never yoke came. This signified the perfect holiness of Christ, who never bore the yoke of sinfulness, nor was subject to the laws or precepts of man.

III. The Heifer was burned without the host, and her blood sprinkled seven times before the tabernacle of the congregation, which signified Christ's suffering without the gates of Jerusalem, Heb. xiii. 11, 12.

CIRCUMCISION, WHAT IT WAS A TYPE OF.

I. CIRCUMCISION was the cutting off the foreskin of the flesh; signifying the cutting off the lusts of the heart and life, or parting with the corruption of nature, which rebels against the Spirit, Col. ii. 11.

II. Circumcision puts the body to pain. So those who come under the Circumcision of the heart, are sensible of much spiritual pain upon the account of sin, Gen. xxxiv. 25.

III. As that part cut off was never set to the body again, but was taken quite away, so in this spiritual Circumcision, sin must not be parted with for a time only, but must be cast off for ever.

IV. The Circumcised person was admitted into the Church and family of God. So he that is spiritually Circumcised becomes a fit person for baptism, and so to be admitted into the Church of God.

V. Such who were not Circumcised, were not to be admitted to the privileges of the Church, and outward worship of God. So the Uncircumcised in heart and life ought not to be admitted unto the spiritual privileges of the Gospel, and communion of the saints.

VI. The Uncircumcised person was looked upon by God's people as an hateful person; see with what contempt David beheld Goliath upon this account, "This Uncircumcised Philistine," &c., 1 Sam. xvii. 36. So those who are not Circumcised in heart, are hateful to God.

VII. Circumcision was a sign of the righteousness of faith: so the spiritual Circumcision of the heart, i. e., putting away the body of sin, &c., is a sign of the truth of grace, and of an interest in the righteousness of Christ Jesus.

THE ROCK WHICH WAS SMITTEN, OUT OF WHICH CAME WATER, WAS A TYPE OF CHRIST, EXOD. xvii.

"And that Rock was Christ," viz., a Figure of him, 1 Cor. x. 4.

I. It was a Rock, which in appearance is dry and barren, and a very unlikely thing to afford water. So Christ in his outward state, in the days of his flesh, seemed very unlikely to carnal eyes, to afford such spiritual waters of grace and salvation.

II. It seemed wonderful, that it should send forth water in such abundance. So Jesus Christ to the wonder of men and angels, sends forth the water of life in abundance to all those that believe on him.

III. That Rock sent forth its water to the people of Israel, when they were ready to perish for thirst, there being no way to relieve them. So Christ refreshes the souls of poor sinners that come unto him, when they can find no help, comfort, or refreshment any where else, but without him must perish eternally." "If ye believe not that I am he, ye shall die in your sins," John viii. 24.

IV. The Rock was smitten before it yielded water. So Jesus Christ was smitten of old, and crucified, that his precious blood might be poured forth, to consummate the redemption of our souls.

V. The Rock was smitten for a rebellious people, who murmured against God, and who deserved no such grace and favour from him. So Christ was slain for us, who were rebels and enemies to him by evil works, who deserved nothing but his eternal wrath and displeasure.

VI. The water out of that Rock followed the children of Israel, through the wilderness, over all hills and valleys, unto Canaan; all the dryness of that dry and barren desert could not dry it up. So the Waters of life streaming from Christ, that sacred Rock, follow the true Israel of God, quite through the wilderness of this world, until they come to the heavenly Canaan; yea, all the persecutions and temptations in the world, whatsoever, cannot dry it up.

THE PILLAR OF CLOUD AND FIRE A TYPE OF CHRIST.

Exod. xiv.

I. THE Pillar of Fire was a certain guide to the Israelites, while they passed from Egypt to Canaan. So Jesus Christ is our true guide by his Word and Spirit, till we come to the heavenly Canaan, or land of immortality, Numb. ix. 15—17.

II. It was a guide to them by night, that they might not lose their way; so Christ is our guide, in the dark night of trouble, temptation, and desertion.

III. The Pillar of Fire was not only a guide to them, but it also afforded them much light, which made their journey comfortable to them: a person may have a sure guide in a night, and yet be in darkness, or have but little or no light. So Jesus Christ is not only a guide to his people in their passing through the night of mortality, but also a light; a light to them that sit in darkness, as well as a guide for their feet into the way of peace; he is upon this account the comfort and joy of God's Israel, Exod. xiv. 20.

IV. The Pillar of Fire was darkness to the Egyptians, though it gave light to Israel; so is Christ's salvation, joy and comfort to the godly, but a stumbling-block and stone of offence unto the wicked.

V. The Pillar of Fire did not afford the Israelites light only, but heat also (as a worthy writer observes) by which means they were kept from the piercing cold of the night. So Jesus Christ, the anti-type of this fiery Pillar, affords us much spiritual heat, by his Word and Spirit, which are compared to fire; by which means we are kept from the cold and luke-warm temper or frame of heart, which God's soul hateth, and thereby preserved fervent in spirit, burning in love and divine zeal to God, his saints, and to holiness.

VI. This Pillar, in going behind, between the camp of Israel and the Egyptians, was a blessed defence and protection unto them. So Jesus Christ is the defence and safeguard of his people, Exod. xiv. 20.

VII. The Pillar of Fire, if the enemy had strove with it, or made resistance against it, would have burned and consumed them together. So all that rebel against Christ, or resist him, shall be devoured. "Who would set briars and thorns against me in battle? I would go through them, I would burn them together," Isa. xxvii. 4.

THE PILLAR OF CLOUD.

I. THE Pillar of Cloud was a great refreshment to the children of Israel by day, during their long journey in the wilderness, the sun in those countries shining sometimes very hot, which might, had it not been for this cloudy pillar, have been very destructive or grievous to them, during so many years' travels. So Jesus Christ, as Mediator, is as a Cloud or screen between the hot beams of God's wrath and poor believers. It is he who keeps us from being consumed by the wrath of him, who is to the wicked "a consuming fire," Heb. xii. 29.

II. It was a fire and a cloud, yet both but one pillar: so Christ is God and man, and yet but one person; and the same Christ, who is a Saviour to the truly penitent, will destroy all ungodly and impenitent ones.

THE PASSOVER A TYPE OF CHRIST.

"Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us," 1 Cor. v. 7.

THE Passover, or paschal Lamb, was a most lively figure or Type of Christ; nay as a worthy divine observes, this one legal sacrament preached, not obscurely, to the ancient Jews the whole doctrine of the Gospel. This will appear in five things: (1.) In the choice of the sacrifice. (2.) In the preparing of it. (3.) In the effusion of the blood, and actions about it. (4.) In the eating, and the conditions therein. (5.) In the fruits and use, Eph. iii. 21.

PARALLELS.

I. IN the choice of the sacrifice. The Lord appointed it to be a lamb: notably signifying Jesus Christ, who the Baptist called, "The Lamb of God taking away the sins of the world."

II. It was to be a lamb without blemish; signifying the most absolute perfection of Jesus Christ.

III. The paschal lamb was to be taken out of the fold; signifying that Christ should be "Taken from amongst men, or from among his brethren," Dent. 15; one of the seed of Abraham according to the flesh.

IV. The lamb was to be a year old, and also it must be slain; signifying, that Christ in his full vigour and strength should be put to death.

V. The lamb was to be roasted with fire; which might signify the manner of Christ's death: he was crucified and pierced; he endured the fire of afflictions, and the fire of God's wrath that was due to us for our sins.

VI. The lamb was roasted whole; to signify, saith Dr. Taylor, that Christ bore the whole wrath of God, both in soul and body. Not a bone of the lamb was to be broken; to show, that not one bone of Christ should be broken, John xix. 36.

VII. The blood of the lamb was to be saved in a bason; it must not be shed upon the ground, not trodden under foot; signifying the preciousness of Christ's blood, and that great esteem God the Father, and all true Christians have of it.

VIII. The blood of the lamb must be sprinkled upon the lintel, and sides of the doors of the Israelites: which held forth, that the blood of Christ must be applied by faith; for our justification stands not only in the shedding of Christ's blood, but also in the sprinkling of it on our consciences.

IX. It must be sprinkled upon the posts and doors, so as the Israelites could neither go out of doors, nor come in, but they must see on all sides the blood of the Lamb: signifying, that they and we should, both at home and abroad, going forth, and coming in, and on all occasions, have the passion of Jesus Christ before our eyes, in holy meditation and contemplation.

X. It was not enough for the Jews to have the lamb slain, and the blood shed within the house, but the blood must be sprinkled without doors; signifying as some observe, if Christ's blood, i. e. the merits of it, be received into our hearts for justification, the sprinkling of it will appear, and be seen outwardly in a holy life, and real sanctification.

XI. The blood of the lamb was to be sprinkled with a bunch of hyssop dipped in it, Exod. xii. 22, which might signify, that such who would be sprinkled with Christ's blood must obtain true faith; for hyssop bears a resemblance to faith in three things: (1.) It is a ground, low, and weak herb: faith in itself, and as it is in believers, is weak, and teacheth humility. (2.) It will grow on a rock or wall: so faith roots itself in Christ that true spiritual Rock. (3.) Hyssop hath a cleansing and healing quality: so faith purifies the heart and life of a sinner, and heals all the sores of a wounded conscience.

XII. They were to eat the flesh of the lamb: to signify, that we must spiritually feed upon Jesus Christ, viz. to believe on him, which is called an eating of his flesh, and drinking of his blood.

XIII. Every particular lamb was to be eaten in one house; signifying the unity of the church of God, or the spiritual conjunction and agreement of all the faithful, in one bread and one body, 1 Cor. x. 17.

XIV. Only Israelites, and not strangers, were to eat of it; to show, that none but the true seed, viz. believers, have right to Christ, and the blessed rites of his house.

XV. They were to eat it with bitter herbs; to signify, that repentance and godly sorrow for sin, ought to be in those who come to receive and partake of Jesus Christ, and that they should remember with grief of soul what their sins brought upon their Saviour, and what the filthy and bitter nature of sin is.

XVI. They were to eat it with unleavened bread; to signify that those who come to the true Passover, should keep that feast with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth, hating false doctrine, hypocrisy, and every evil work.

XVII. They must eat in remembrance of their deliverance out of Egypt: so those who come to the true passover, ought to remember how God hath by Christ's blood delivered them from wrath and hell.

XVIII. They were to eat it with their lions girt, and their staves in their hands, and their shoes on their feet; to show, that we who feed upon our Passover, should have the girdle of truth, and our feet shod with the preparation of the Gospel of peace, and that we are but strangers and pilgrims here.

XIX. They were not to eat the paschal lamb, until they had purged all leaven out of their houses; which shows what care every Christian should take, to purge out the leaven of malice and wickedness out of their hearts. The Jews were to search for leaven, and not suffer a crumb or small morsel to remain in their houses; so careful should all those be to purge out every sin, and let no iniquity remain in them, who come to the Lord's table.

Wherein the brazen serpent was a type of Christ, of also the manna, and divers other types, we have shown. And the parallels of the first and second temple we have insisted upon under the head of metaphors concerning the church of God, to which we refer you.

And finding to what a bigness this work is swollen, I must be forced to break off, and leave these my poor labours to the blessing of God, praying they may prove to the advantage of his despised and afflicted church; desiring, what profit any Christians may receive herefrom, they would not forget to give the honour to God, who only deserves it: to whom be glory in the church, by Christ Jesus, throughout all ages, world without end. Amen.

A TABLE

OF THE TEXTS ILLUSTRATED IN THE FIRST BOOK.

ch. ver.	Page	ch. ver.	Page	ch. ver.	Page
GENESIS.		DEUTERONOMY.		JOB.
i. 3	54	viii. 3	43	xxxviii. 5	31
ii. 3	57	ix. 1	17	28	65
iii. 4	34	xi. 12	42	xli. 29	90
9	51	xvii. 6	5	PSALMS.
15	60, 192	xxi. 17	3	ii. 12	53
22	31	xxiv. 26	13	viii. 3	46
iv. 10	91	xxviii. 5	15	5	97
14	42	63	50	x. 1	63
vi. 2	97	xxx. 15	13	17	43
11	16	xxxii. 30	56	xvi. 6	6
vii. 1	15	37, 38	31	9	12
viii. 21	62	xxxiv. 5	5	11	41
x. 9	146	JOSHUA.		xix. 1	93
xi. 1	5	xiii. 33	17	xxii. (title)	76
xii. 3	30	JUDGES.		6	77
5	11	v. 20	92	8	34
xiii. 16	190	viii. 2	133	27	16
xv. 1	12	x. 16	49	xxiii. 4	26
3	7	xiv. 14	197	xxiv. 3, 4	17
xviii. 18	4	1 SAMUEL.		xxxv. 10	89
21	50	xxii. 17	6	xxxvii. 11	124
xix. 15	7	xxviii. 14, 15, 16, 20	23	13	52
xxii. 2	33	2 SAMUEL.		xl. 6	45
12	50	vi. 5	11	xliv. 6	26
xxvi. 35	12	20	34	23, 24	63
xxviii. 12, 13	181	1 KINGS.		li. 10	3
xxxi. 42	25	xviii. 27	32	liii. 5	25
xxxvii. 19	34	xx. 10	191	lvi. 8	56
2	4	xxi. 10	30	lx. 9	33
xlii. 38	19	2 KINGS.		lxv. 11	71
xliii. 18	170	ii. 9	3	12	93
xliv. 21	5	iv. 10	13	lxx. 4	14
27	4	NEHEMIAH.		lxxii. 9	24
xlvi. 14	83	iii. 15	121	lxxiii. 9	17, 89
11	90	ESTHER.		lxxvi. 12	60
18	12	i. 13	21	lxxvii. 16	93
24	129	JOB.		lxxviii. 6	167
1. 20.	52	i. 5	30	lxxxiv. 6	126
EXODUS.		ii. 9	30	lxxxv. 10	97
vi. 8	27	iii. 20	104	lxxxix. 51	48
x. 17	13	v. 16	20	xc. 11	8
xiii. 21	41	x. 3	56	xciii. 1	73
xvii. 15	74	xii. 2	32	cii. 18	99
16	45	7	52	cx. 1	46
xxiii. 18	23	xiii. 26	59	3	107
xxviii. 14	99	xxix. 11	89	7	118
xxix. 1	90	xxxii. 7	20	cxli. 5	88
xxx. 23	79	xxxiv. 21	42	cxvii. 5	89
xxxii. 1	18	PROVERBS.		cxix. 8, 9, &c.	191
9, 10	61, 65			13, 14, 15	56
LEVITICUS.				cxl. 8	26
xxiii. 11	182
NUMBERS.				vi. 32	14
xi. 17	3			viii. 5	14
xxiv. 17	84			xvii. 7	5
xxviii. 2	72			xxiv. 23	9

PROVERBS.		JEREMIAH.		MATTHEW.
ch. ver.	Page	ch. ver.	Page	ch. ver.	Page
xxv. 15	5	xxxi. 20	46	ii. 6	17
xxvi. 15	47	xxxii. 17	44	8	34
xxviii. 26	14	xlvi. 18	15	11	20
xxx. 19	77	xliv. 9	138	iv. 3	35
				4	44
ECCLESIASTES.		LAMENTATIONS.		v. 29	191
xi. 9	34	ii. 1	114	vi. 1	7
xii. 2, &c.	9	iii. 7	11	vii. 6	151
		v. 1	52	15	178
CANTICLES.		EZEKIEL.		x. 34	6
i. 4	10			xi. 8	178
2	53	iii. 24	35	xii. 47	166
13, 14	79, 80	vi. 9	49	xv. 13	133
		viii. 17	43	24, 25, 26	33
ISAIAH.		xx. 39	32	xvi. 18	86
i. 18	20	xxi. 3	23	23	100
ii. 4	28	10, 13, 27	75	25	11
10	33	xxiii. 18	66	26	191
14	125	xxiv. 16	25	xxii. 13	21
iv. 2	78	xxviii. 3	32	16	34
vii. 20	59	xxxv. 26	3	xxiii. 2	26
viii. 6	121	xxxvii. 1	3	xxiv. 20	28
8	153			xxv. 35	17
20	107			xxvi. 45	32
ix. 6	158
x. 27	20
27	136
xi. 10	79
xiii. 5	24
xiv. 12	103
29	153
xvii. 3	32
xviii. 1	143
xx. 5	25
xxviii. 10	167
xxix. 1, 2	147
xxx. 27	44
xxxiii. 19	5
xxxviii. 18	16
xl. 12	46
12	59
xliv. 13, 14	53
xlvi. 3	46
11	153
xlvi. 10	113
xliv. 23	28
li. 1	130
liii. 10	18
liv. 11, &c.	130
lvi. 10, 11	9
lviii. 1	6
lx. 5	5
lxiii. 7	46
9	42
10	49
lxvi. 1	68
JEREMIAH.
iv. 29	17
vi. 8	66
ix. 17	28
x. 17	28
xi. 13	13
16	135
xii. 9	153
21	67
xv. 7	60
12	129
xviii. 17	44
xxi. 19	28
JEREMIAH.
iv. 29	17
vi. 8	66
ix. 17	28
x. 17	28
xi. 13	13
16	135
xii. 9	153
21	67
xv. 7	60
12	129
xviii. 17	44
xxi. 19	28

ROMANS.		2 CORINTHIANS.		2 TIMOTHY.
ch. ver.	Page	ch. ver.	Page	ch. ver.	Page
iv. 16	18	xii. 9	68	i. 6	3
vii. 7	13			6	112
9	96			iv. 10	10
viii. 2	2	GALATIANS.
6	14	vi. 7, 14	158
xi. 17	136			TITUS.
xii. 2	3	EPHESIANS.		i. 12	24
xv. 16	181	i. 10	41	ii. 14	17
1 CORINTHIANS.		22, 23	41
i. 21, 25	23	ii. 14	171	HEBREWS.
iii. 13, 14, 15,	110	iii. 18	80
iv. 9	16	iv. 23	3	i. 3	72
13	127	vi. 15	160	iv. 13	42
19	10	PHILIPPIANS.		x. 7	156
32	3	iii. 8	127	xi. 15	10
vi. 4	36	19	98	JAMES.
20	56	COLOSSIANS.		i. 17	81
x. 17	184	i. 24	17	1 PETER.
xi. 3	41	ii. 9, 17	41
10	19	14	175	i. 9	23
19	33	iii. 3	162	20	70
29	7	14	178	1 JOHN.
xv. 29	146	1 THESSALONIANS.		iii. 1	7
32	146	v. 7	108	20	80
2 CORINTHIANS.		19	3	REVELATIONS.
i. 22	70	23	3
ii. 17	137	2 THESSALONIANS.		i. 4, 8	69
iii. 6	2	ii. 2	8	10	3
13	195	1 TIMOTHY.		v. 5	76
iv. 4	24	iii. 16	180	xi. 4	136
4	98	iv. 2	112	xxi. 22	87
v. 16	8	vi. 16	81	xxii. 16	84
21	18
21	8
x. 12	33
xi. 4	18

INDEX.

A

Aaron, a type of Christ, 980.
Abba, meaning of, 241.
Abraham, a type of Christ, 973.
Adam, a type of Christ, 972.
Advocate, Christ an, 408.
Afflictions, Christ sympathizing with his saints under them, 328. Compared to clouds, 937. To a fire, 938. To a rod, 939. The nature, kind, and cause of them, 940. To a furnace, 941. To winter, 942. To darkness, 943. To tempests, 945. To a flood, 946. To great heat, 947. To wormwood and gall, 948. When said to be very grievous, ib. To arrows, 950.
All in All, Christ is, 488. Who he is that makes him so, 490. Why a saint makes him so, 591. How a saint makes him so, ib.
Altar, Christ compared to an, 441. Of perfume, a type of Christ, ib., 985. Of burnt-offering, ditto, 441, 986.
Ambassador, Christ compared to, in eighteen particulars, 434.
Ambassadors, ministers of Christ, why so called, 850.
Angels, 642. Compared to watchers, 643. Their work and office, ib. Called morning stars, and sons of God, 645. God's host, 647. To the face of a man, &c., 649. Compared to the wind and flaming fire, 643. Compared to horses white and red, &c., 654.
Anchor, hope compared to it, in five particulars, 620.
Antanacsis, figure of, 202.
Antiphrasis, of words, 30.
Apostle, word explained, 413. Christ why so called, ib.
Ark, a type of Christ, 984.
Arm of God, what, in eleven particulars, 301. None like it, 303.
 — of the wicked soon broken, 303.
Armies raised at God's pleasure, 648.
Arrows, afflictions compared to, 950. God's, what more particularly are, ib.
Attributes of God, a saint's repose, 252. Compared to a wall of fire, 306. In Christ, 333. Shine forth in the Gospel, 533.

B

Babylon, the church of Rome proved to be the mystery of, negatively, 863. 1. By whore of Babylon is not meant Jerusalem, ib. 2. Nor the Turkish empire, 864. 3. Nor Rome Heathen, 867. 4. Nor Protestants or any denomination, 880. That by the whore or mystery of Babylon, is meant the present state and Church of Rome, clearly evinced, 882.
Babes, saints why so called, in eighteen particulars, 721.
Baptism and the Lord's supper, glorious ordinances, 629—639.

Baptism, how taken, 629. Why called a burial, ib.
Beauty of Christ, ten particulars, 541.
Beasts, the sacrifice of, a type, 987.
Believers, how called God's children, 723. Christ their Friend, 399.
Bitter, afflictions, how a saint may be sustained under such, 948.
Blind, men are so naturally, and therefore need a good guide, 524. Wicked men showed to be so, in five particulars, 803.
Blasphemous notions of the Church of Rome, concerning the priesthood of Christ, 368.
Body of man, in the grave, compared to seed sown, 957.
Book, the Gospel, why so called, in eight particulars, 524.
Branch, Christ the, why so called, 377.
Brazen laver, a type, 987.
Bread of life, Christ compared to, in sixteen particulars, 415.
Breast plate of righteousness, what, 605.
Bridegroom, Christ so called, 323. More excellent than any other, in six particulars, 329.
Builder, God so called in fourfold respect, 260.
Builders, the parallel between God and such as are earthly, in nine particulars, 260. The excellency of God above all other, in twelve particulars, 262. Ministers of the Gospel, why so called, in ten particulars, 346.
Bulls, wicked men, why so called, 808.
Burden, sin a, even the least to a tender conscience showed in three particulars, 905.
Burnt-offering of fowls, a type of Christ, 988.
Bush, burning, the Church compared to, in six particulars, 693.

C

Candle, spirit of a man compared to, 658.
Candlestick, golden, 705. A type, 985.
Canons, or rules expounding types, 233.
Captain, what kind of, Christ is, 460.
Captives, wicked men, why so called, with the nature of their state opened, 777.
Cedars, saints compared to, in five particulars, 760.
Celestial Paradise, 966.
Christ, a Mediator, 314. A Surety, 218. A Bridegroom, 323. The express image of the Father, in seven particulars, 331. A Physician, 331. A Testator, 341. Compared to an hart, in fifteen particulars, 344. To a Door, in fourteen ditto, 348. The Servant of God, in eleven particulars, 350. To a Lion, in seventeen ditto, 353. The true Manna, 356. A King, in twenty particulars, 359. A Priest, in sixteen ditto, 364. A Prophet, in seventeen ditto, 370. A Shepherd, in nineteen ditto, 374. The Brauch, 377. The Way, in ten particulars, 378. A Rock, in twelve ditto, 380. A Fountain, in sixteen ditto, 382. The Head, in seventeen particulars, 386. A Garment, in twelve ditto, 389. A Lamb, in ten ditto, 392. The Pearl of great price, 394.

- Precious ointment, in ten particulars, 396. A Believer's Friend, in twenty-four ditto, 399. The Rose of Sharon, in eleven ditto, 405. An Advocate, in twenty-seven ditto, 408. An Apostle, in nine ditto, 413. The Bread of Life, in sixteen ditto, 415. The Sun of Righteousness, in thirty-four ditto, 418. The Root of David, in nine ditto, 424. The True Vine, in ten ditto, 427. The Lily of the valleys, in five ditto, 430. An Apple-tree, in eleven ditto, 431. An Ambassador, in eighteen ditto, 434. A Witness, in ten ditto, 438. An Altar, in eight ditto, 441. The Heir of all things, in eight ditto, 442. The only Foundation, in eleven ditto, 445. The Corner-Stone, in fourteen ditto, 450. The wonderful Counsellor, 454. A Hen, in nine particulars, 458. The Captain of our salvation, in twenty-three ditto, 460. A Refiner, in fifteen ditto, 465. An Eagle, in sixteen ditto, 468. A Bundle of Myrrh, in seven ditto, 470. The Wedding-Garment, in seven ditto, 472. The Bright and Morning Star, in eighteen ditto, 476. A Thief in the night, in six ditto, 480. The Judge of all, in eleven ditto, 482. The brazen Serpent, in thirteen ditto, 486. Is All in All, in twenty-one ditto, 488. His Person glorious, 538. His Godhead, in nineteen particulars, 539. Very beautiful, 541. His love wonderful, 542. Very rich, 543. Our Passover, 639. Children, saints compared to, 723.
- Church*, City of God, why so called, in twenty particulars, 666. Compared to the moon, 675. The Antitype of Solomon's Temple, 676. The Antitype of the second Temple, 678. To an Olive tree, 680. To an Inn, ib. To a Vine, 682. To a dove, 683. To a Body natural, 685. To a Vineyard, 686. To a Virgin, 689. To a Wife, ib. To a Bush on fire, 693. To a Mother, 695. To a Garden, 968. To a Lily among thorns, 701. To a Merchant Ship, 703. To a golden Candlestick, 705. To a flock of Sheep, 706. To an House, 709. To a Family, 711.
- Circumcision*, a Type, 993.
- Comforter*, properties of, in fifteen particulars, 492.
- Conscience*, what it is 659. A Witness, in ten particulars, 660. A dreadful Tormentor, 662. A good one, how known, 663. A good one, the excellency of it, 674.
- Conversion*, Christ all in, 488.
- Convictions*, lay upon the heart, 256.
- Courage*, of saints, in five particulars, 734.
- Council*, what Christ gives, in eleven particulars, 456. The Gospel covenant, the contrivance of, 534.
- Crown* of life, Heaven a, 968.
- D
- Daily* Sacrifice, a Type of Christ, 998.
- Dangers*, the Holy Spirit in the Word gives notice of eight imminent, 524.
- Darkness*, divers significations of, 943. Affliction so called, ib. Hell a Place of utter darkness, 70.
- David*, in ten things, a type of Christ, 977.
- Death*, compared to sleep, in three particulars, 957. Of the body compared to seed sown, ib. A departure, 959. A rest, 960.
- Debt*, sin why so called, 897.
- Debts*, how satisfied for and yet freely forgiven, largely, openly, 899. Of sinners espoused unto Christ, are discharged, 328.
- Debtors*, wicked men, why so called, 793.
- Deceivers*, their many ways laid open, 861.
- Defend*, the righteousness of Christ, does so four ways, 390.
- Defence*, God is of his people, 271.
- Definition*, of a type, 225. Of a parable, 238.
- Deity* of Christ proved, 539.
- Design* of God, in sending Christ, showed in six particulars, 535.
- Destruction* of man is from himself, 456.
- Devil*, wicked men compared to, 826. Why called the god of this world, 920. Why called a prince, 921. A hunter, 922. A fowler, 923. A lion, 924. A dragon, 925. A serpent, 926.
- Dew*, word of God compared to, in five particulars, 595.
- Dialogism*, figures of a sentence, 203.
- Dignity*, of ministers great, 832.
- Disease*, sin is a, 910, 914.
- Divination*, or angury, 8.
- Division* of types, 228. Of an historical type, 231. Others of ditto, 232 of parables, 239.
- Divine* authority of the holy Scriptures asserted and vindicated ix—xxiv.
- Dogs*, wicked men compared to, in sixteen particulars, 805.
- Door*, Christ compared to, in fourteen particulars, 348. What, into the Church, 349.
- Dove*, Holy Spirit compared to, in six particulars 522.
- Doves*, saints compared to, in thirteen particulars, 769.
- Duty*, whence of men and angels, 363.
- E
- Eagle*, properties of, in sixteen particulars, 468.
- Eagles*, saints compared to, in ten particulars, 727. Wicked men compared to, 825.
- Earthquake*, the natural cause of it, 500.
- Earnest*, of the Spirit, opened in ten particulars, 505.
- Elisha*, a type of Christ, 979.
- Elohim*, meaning of, 270.
- Enemies*, misery of Christ's, 863.
- Erotosis*, Figure of, 210.
- Error* of the Church of Rome, concerning priesthood, 368.
- F
- Faith*, a Shield, 609. More precious than gold, 611. True, how known, 614. Necessity of it, 616. Difference between weak and strong, 617.
- False Teachers* compared to Wolves, 858. To Foxes, 859. To wells without water, 860. To Clouds without rain, ib. To deceivers, ib.
- False Church*, Mystery Babylon, 862.
- Family*, the Church compared to a, 711. The nature and excellency of its government, 713.
- Father*, its various acceptations and significations, and how God is the Father of believers, 241. The parallel between an earthly, and God, in twenty particulars, 242.
- Father*, the disparity between God and an earthly, in eight things, 245. Corollaries, ib. His glory shines in the Gospel, 534.
- Feast* of tabernacles, 183.
- Field*, the world compared to, 951.
- Figures* of a word, 191. Of a paronomasia, 201. Of antanacsis, 202. Of a sentence in logism, 203. Of an erotosis, 210. Of a sentence in dialogism, 212. Of other schemes of sentences, and amplifications, 213.
- Fire*, God a consuming, 297. God a consuming one to five sorts of persons, 300. God a wall of, 306. The Spirit compared to, 501. The word of God compared to, 577.

PROVERBS.		JEREMIAH.		MATTHEW.
ch. ver.	Page	ch. ver.	Page	ch. ver.	Page
xxv. 15	5	xxxi. 20	46	ii. 6	17
xxvi. 15	47	xxxii. 17	44	8	34
xxviii. 26	14	xlvi. 18	15	11	20
xxx. 19	77	xlx. 9	138	iv. 3	35
ECCLESIASTES.		LAMENTATIONS.		4	44
xi. 9	34	ii. 1	114	v. 29	191
xii. 2, &c.	9	iii. 7	11	vi. 1	7
CANTICLES.		v. 1	52	vii. 6	151
i. 4	10	EZEKIEL.		15	178
2	53	iii. 24	35	x. 34	6
13, 14	79, 80	vi. 9	49	xi. 8	178
ISAIAH.		viii. 17	43	xii. 47	166
i. 18	20	xx. 39	32	xv. 13	133
ii. 4	28	xxi. 3	23	24, 25, 26	33
10	33	10, 13, 27	75	xvi. 18	86
14	125	xxiii. 18	66	23	100
iv. 2	78	xxiv. 16	25	25	11
vii. 20	59	xxviii. 3	32	26	191
viii. 6	121	xxxix. 26	3	xxii. 13	21
8	153	xxxvii. 1	3	16	34
20	107	DANIEL.		xxiii. 2	26
ix. 6	158	viii. 10	102	xxiv. 20	28
x. 27	20	HOSEA.		xxv. 35	17
27	136	ii. 6	60	xxvi. 45	32
xi. 10	79	15	126	MARK.
xiii. 5	24	21, 22	94	v. 29	10
xiv. 12	103	iv. 8	18	ix. 49	110
29	153	11, 18	13	50	131
xvii. 3	32	xi. 8, 9	48, 51	x. 21	11
xviii. 1	143	JOEL.		xiv. 35	22
xx. 5	25	ii. 13, 14	49	LUKE.
xxviii. 10	167	AMOS.		i. 35	88
xxix. 1, 2	147	iv. 4, 5	32	i. 46, 47	3
xxx. 27	44	6	27	78	83
xxxiii. 19	5	v. 16, &c.	28	ii. 30	12
xxxviii. 18	16	MICAH.		48	23
xl. 12	46	i. 5	13	ix. 62	139
12	59	NAHUM.		x. 4	28
xlii. 13, 14	53	ii. 3	11	xi. 14	12
xli. 3	46	HABAKKUK.		xiv. 26	11
11	153	ii. 6	12	xv. 12	13
xlvi. 10	113	ZEPHANIAH.		xvi. 22	159
xliv. 23	28	i. 12	59	29, 31	4
li. 1	130	ii. 2	65	xxii. 17	16
liii. 10	18	HAGGAI.		36	29
liv. 11, &c.	130	ii. 7	25	xxiii. 31	78
lvi. 10, 11	9	23	179	JOHN.
lviii. 1	6	ZECHARIAH.		i. 9	105
lx. 5	5	iv. 14	136	iii. 6	3
lxiii. 7	46	xii. 3	130	8	94
9	42	MALACHI.		30	24
10	49	iv. 2	82	v. 19	61
lxvi. 1	68	ACTS.		vi. 33	15
JEREMIAH.				44, &c.	60
iv. 29	17			53	40
vi. 8	66			63	2
ix. 17	28			vii. 38	119
x. 17	28			viii. 56	22
xi. 13	13			xiv. 6	87
16	135			xv. 1, 5	79
xii. 9	153			xvii. 21	16
21	67			xix. 14	35
xv. 7	60			xxi. 25	191
12	129
xxviii. 17	44
xxx. 19	28

ROMANS.		2 CORINTHIANS.		2 TIMOTHY.
ch. ver.	Page	ch. ver.	Page	ch. ver.	Page
iv. 16	18	xii. 9	68	i. 6	3
vii. 7	13	GALATIANS.		6	112
viii. 2	96	vi. 7, 14	158	iv. 10	10
6	14	EPHESIANS.		TITUS.
xi. 17	136	i. 10	41	i. 12	24
xii. 2	3	22, 23	41	ii. 14	17
xv. 16	181	ii. 14	171	HEBREWS.
1 CORINTHIANS.		iii. 18	80	i. 3	72
i. 21, 25	23	iv. 23	3	iv. 13	42
iii. 13, 14, 15,	110	vi. 15	160	x. 7	156
iv. 9	16	PHILIPPIANS.		xi. 15	10
13	127	iii. 8	127	JAMES.
19	10	19	98	i. 17	81
32	3	COLOSSIANS.		1 PETER.
vi. 4	36	i. 24	17	i. 9	23
20	56	ii. 9, 17	41	20	70
x. 17	184	14	175	1 JOHN.
xi. 3	41	iii. 3	162	iii. 1	7
10	19	14	178	20	80
19	33	1 THESSALONIANS.		REVELATIONS.
29	7	v. 7	108	i. 4, 8	69
xv. 29	146	19	3	10	3
32	146	23	3	v. 5	76
2 CORINTHIANS.		2 THESSALONIANS.		xi. 4	136
i. 22	70	ii. 2	3	xxi. 22	87
ii. 17	137	1 TIMOTHY.		xxii. 16	84
iii. 6	2	iii. 16	180
13	195	iv. 2	112
iv. 4	24	vi. 16	81
4	98
v. 16	8
21	18
21	8
x. 12	33
xi. 4	18

INDEX.

A

Aaron, a type of Christ, 980.
Abba, meaning of, 241.
Abraham, a type of Christ, 973.
Adam, a type of Christ, 972.
Advocate, Christ an, 408.
Afflictions, Christ sympathizing with his saints under them, 328. Compared to clouds, 937. To a fire, 938. To a rod, 939. The nature, kind, and cause of them, 940. To a furnace, 941. To winter, 942. To darkness, 943. To tempests, 945. To a flood, 946. To great heat, 947. To wormwood and gall, 948. When said to be very grievous, ib. To arrows, 950.
All in All, Christ is, 488. Who he is that makes him so, 490. Why a saint makes him so, 591. How a saint makes him so, ib.
Altar, Christ compared to an, 441. Of perfume, a type of Christ, ib., 985. Of burnt-offering, ditto, 441, 986.
Ambassador, Christ compared to, in eighteen particulars, 434.
Ambassadors, ministers of Christ, why so called, 850.
Angels, 642. Compared to watchers, 643. Their work and office, ib. Called morning stars, and sons of God, 645. God's host, 647. To the face of a man, &c., 649. Compared to the wind and flaming fire, 643. Compared to horses white and red, &c., 654.
Anchor, hope compared to it, in five particulars, 620.
Antianacclasis, figure of, 202.
Antiphrasis, of words, 80.
Apostle, word explained, 413. Christ why so called, ib.
Ark, a type of Christ, 984.
Arm of God, what, in eleven particulars, 301. None like it, 303.
 — of the wicked soon broken, 303.
Armies raised at God's pleasure, 648.
Arrows, afflictions compared to, 950. God's, what more particularly are, ib.
Attributes of God, a saint's repose, 252. Compared to a wall of fire, 306. In Christ, 333. Shine forth in the Gospel, 533.

B

Babylon, the church of Rome proved to be the mystery of, negatively, 863. 1. By whore of Babylon is not meant Jerusalem, ib. 2. Nor the Turkish empire, 864. 3. Nor Rome Heathen, 867. 4. Nor Protestants or any denomination, 880. That by the whore or mystery of Babylon, is meant the present state and Church of Rome, clearly evinced, 882.
Babes, saints why so called, in eighteen particulars, 721.
Baptism and the Lord's supper, glorious ordinances, 629—639.

Baptism, how taken, 629. Why called a burial, ib.
Beauty of Christ, ten particulars, 541.
Beasts, the sacrifice of, a type, 987.
Believers, how called God's children, 723. Christ their Friend, 399.
Bitter, afflictions, how a saint may be sustained under such, 948.
Blind, men are so naturally, and therefore need a good guide, 524. Wicked men showed to be so, in five particulars, 803.
Blasphemous notions of the Church of Rome, concerning the priesthood of Christ, 368.
Body of man, in the grave, compared to seed sown, 957.
Book, the Gospel, why so called, in eight particulars, 524.
Branch, Christ the, why so called, 377.
Brazen laver, a type, 987.
Bread of life, Christ compared to, in sixteen particulars, 415.
Breast plate of righteousness, what, 605.
Bridgroom, Christ so called, 323. More excellent than any other, in six particulars, 329.
Builder, God so called in fourfold respect, 260.
Builders, the parallel between God and such as are earthly, in nine particulars, 260. The excellency of God above all other, in twelve particulars, 262. Ministers of the Gospel, why so called, in ten particulars, 846.
Bulls, wicked men, why so called, 808.
Burden, sin a, even the least to a tender conscience showed in three particulars, 905.
Burnt-offering of fowls, a type of Christ, 988.
Bush, burning, the Church compared to, in six particulars, 693.

C

Candle, spirit of a man compared to, 658.
Candlestick, golden, 705. A type, 985.
Canons, or rules expounding types, 233.
Captain, what kind of, Christ is, 460.
Captives, wicked men, why so called, with the nature of their state opened, 777.
Cedars, saints compared to, in five particulars, 760.
Celestial Paradise, 966.
Christ, a Mediator, 314. A Surety, 218. A Bridegroom, 323. The express image of the Father, in seven particulars, 331. A Physician, 331. A Testator, 341. Compared to an hart, in fifteen particulars, 344. To a Door, in fourteen ditto, 348. The Servant of God, in eleven particulars, 350. To a Lion, in seventeen ditto, 353. The true Manna, 356. A King, in twenty particulars, 359. A Priest, in sixteen ditto, 364. A Prophet, in seventeen ditto, 370. A Shepherd, in nineteen ditto, 374. The Brauch, 377. The Way, in ten particulars, 378. A Rock, in twelve ditto, 380. A Fountain, in sixteen ditto, 382. The Head, in seventeen particulars, 386. A Garment, in twelve ditto, 389. A Lamb, in ten ditto, 392. The Pearl of great price, 394.

Precious ointment, in ten particulars, 396. A Believer's Friend, in twenty-four ditto, 399. The Rose of Sharon, in eleven ditto, 405. An Advocate, in twenty-seven ditto, 408. An Apostle, in nine ditto, 413. The Bread of Life, in sixteen ditto, 415. The Sun of Righteousness, in thirty-four ditto, 418. The Root of David, in nine ditto, 424. The True Vine, in ten ditto, 427. The Lily of the valleys, in five ditto, 430. An Apple-tree, in eleven ditto, 431. An Ambassador, in eighteen ditto, 434. A Witness, in ten ditto, 438. An Altar, in eight ditto, 441. The Heir of all things, in eight ditto, 442. The only Foundation, in eleven ditto, 445. The Corner-Stone, in fourteen ditto, 450. The wonderful Counsellor, 454. A Hen, in nine particulars, 458. The Captain of our salvation, in twenty-three ditto, 460. A Refiner, in fifteen ditto, 465. An Eagle, in sixteen ditto, 468. A Bundle of Myrrh, in seven ditto, 470. The Wedding-Garment, in seven ditto, 472. The Bright and Morning Star, in eighteen ditto, 476. A Thief in the night, in six ditto, 480. The Judge of all, in eleven ditto, 482. The brazen Serpent, in thirteen ditto, 486. Is All in All, in twenty-one ditto, 488. His Person glorious, 538. His Godhead, in nineteen particulars, 539. Very beautiful, 541. His love wonderful, 542. Very rich, 543. Our Passover, 639. Children, saints compared to, 723. Church, City of God, why so called, in twenty particulars, 666. Compared to the moon, 675. The Antitype of Solomon's Temple, 676. The Antitype of the second Temple, 678. To an Olive tree, 680. To an Inn, ib. To a Vine, 682. To a dove, 683. To a Body natural, 685. To a Vineyard, 686. To a Virgin, 689. To a Wife, ib. To a Bush on fire, 693. To a Mother, 695. To a Garden, 968. To a Lily among thorns, 701. To a Merchant Ship, 703. To a golden Candlestick, 705. To a flock of Sheep, 706. To an House, 709. To a Family, 711. Circumcision, a Type, 993. Comforter, properties of, in fifteen particulars, 492. Conscience, what it is 659. A Witness, in ten particulars, 660. A dreadful Tormentor, 662. A good one, how known, 663. A good one, the excellency of it, 674. Conversion, Christ all in, 488. Convictions, lay upon the heart, 256. Courage, of saints, in five particulars, 734. Council, what Christ gives, in eleven particulars, 456. The Gospel covenant, the contrivance of, 534. Crown of life, Heaven a, 968.

D

Daily Sacrifice, a Type of Christ, 998. Dangers, the Holy Spirit in the Word gives notice of eight imminent, 524. Darkness, divers significations of, 943. Affliction so called, ib. Hell a Place of utter darkness, 70. David, in ten things, a type of Christ, 977. Death, compared to sleep, in three particulars, 957. Of the body compared to seed sown, ib. A departure, 959. A rest, 960. Debt, sin why so called, 897. Debtors, how satisfied for and yet freely forgiven, largely, openly, 899. Of sinners espoused unto Christ, are discharged, 828. Debtors, wicked men, why so called, 793. Deceivers, their many ways laid open, 861. Defend, the righteousness of Christ, does so four ways, 390.

Defence, God is of his people, 271. Definition, of a type, 225. Of a parable, 238. Deity of Christ proved, 539. Design of God, in sending Christ, showed in six particulars, 535. Destruction of man is from himself, 456. Devil, wicked men compared to, 826. Why called the god of this world, 920. Why called a prince, 921. A hunter, 922. A fowler, 923. A lion, 924. A dragon, 925. A serpent, 926. Dew, word of God compared to, in five particulars, 595. Dialogism, figures of a sentence, 203. Dignity, of ministers great, 832. Disease, sin is a, 910, 914. Divination, or angury, 8. Division of types, 228. Of an historical type, 231. Others of ditto, 232 of parables, 239. Divine authority of the holy Scriptures asserted and vindicated ix—xxiv. Dogs, wicked men compared to, in sixteen particulars, 805. Door, Christ compared to, in fourteen particulars, 348. What, into the Church, 349. Dove, Holy Spirit compared to, in six particulars 522. Doves, saints compared to, in thirteen particulars, 769. Duty, whence of men and angels, 363.

E

Eagle, properties of, in sixteen particulars, 468. Eagles, saints compared to, in ten particulars, 727. Wicked men compared to, 825. Earthquake, the natural cause of it, 500. Earnest, of the Spirit, opened in ten particulars, 505. Elisha, a type of Christ, 979. Elohim, meaning of, 270. Enemies, misery of Christ's, 363. Erotesis, Figure of, 210. Error of the Church of Rome, concerning priesthood, 368.

F

Faith, a Shield, 609. More precious than gold, 611. True, how known, 614. Necessity of it, 616. Difference between weak and strong, 617. False Teachers compared to Wolves, 858. To Foxes, 859. To wells without water, 860. To Clouds without rain, ib. To deceivers, ib. False Church, Mystery Babylon, 862. Family, the Church compared to a, 711. The nature and excellency of its government, 713. Father, its various acceptations and significations, and how God is the Father of believers, 241. The parallel between an earthly, and God, in twenty particulars, 242. Father, the disparity between God and an earthly, in eight things, 245. Corollaries, ib. His glory shines in the Gospel, 534. Feast of tabernacles, 183. Field, the world compared to, 951. Figures of a word, 191. Of a paronomasia, 201. Of antanaclesis, 202. Of a sentence in logism, 203. Of an erotesis, 210. Of a sentence in dialogism, 212. Of other schemes of sentences, and amplifications, 213. Fire, God a consuming, 297. God a consuming one to five sorts of persons, 300. God a wall of, 306. The Spirit compared to, 501. The word of God compared to, 577.

First fruits, 182.

Flower, man's life compared to a, 720.

Floods, afflictions compared to, 946. In what respect God sits upon them, 347.

Fools, wicked men, why so called, 786.

Forgiveness, none without the blood of Christ, 903.

Foundation, Christ laid for the church, in the pursuit of his prophetic office, in four particulars, 371.

Foundation, Christ the only one, in eleven particulars, 445.

Fountain, Christ one, in sixteen particulars, 382. The excellency of Christ as a, 384. Christ a, improved, 385.

Fowler, Satan is, in five particulars, 923.

Foxes, wicked men compared to, 814.

Friend, Christ the believer's, 399. Christ excels all others, in nine particulars, 403.

Friendship, four things necessary to it, and of the properties of a true friend, in twenty particulars, 400.

Friends, how they are procured, 403. Happy state of Christ's, 402.

Fruit, God expects from his people, 257.

Fruitful, the humble soul most so, 257. Great pains to render his people so, ib.

Furnace, afflictions compared to 941. Hell compared to, 969.

G

Garden, the Church compared to, 698.

Garment, of sanctification, in twelve particulars, 389. Christ as a, cannot be put on until our own filthy rags are put off, 390. Christ's righteousness exceeds all others, in seven particulars, 391.

Garments distinguish one person from another, 393.

Garble of truth, in ten particulars, 601.

Glass, the word of God compared to, in eight particulars, 586.

Goats, wicked men compared to, 816.

God, a Father, compared to, 241. Comprehensive of all spiritual good, 244. A portion, 245. Gives like himself, ib. An Habitation, 250. An Husbandman, 254. A Builder, 260. A Man of War, 264. A Strong Tower, 269. A Giant, 274. A Lion, 278. A Leopard, 281. A Bear, 282. A Moth, 288. A Refuge, 286. An Householder, 289. A Potter, 296. A consuming Fire, 297. The Arm of, what, 301. A Shield, 304. Compared to a travelling woman, ib. A Wall of Fire, 306. A Judge, 308. A Hiding-place, 312. Hath many armies, 647. Of the world, why Satan so called, 920.

Godliness, a trade, 931. A great mystery, 932.

Godly, safe in the worst of times, 271.

Gold, Word of God compared to, 572. Why faith compared to it, in seven particulars, 612. The excellency of tried faith above it, 614. The Godly compared to, 768.

Gospel, glorious, in respect of the Author, the law, and in itself, 529. Excels the law, in fourteen particulars, ib. In respect to the names given to it, in fourteen particulars, 532. In respect, of the time when contrived, 534. In respect of the revelation made therein of the blessed Trinity, ib. In respect of the manifestations made therein of the Father, ib. Of Christ, 545. Of the Holy Ghost, 546. Of grace, 554. Of the offers of grace, 555. Of reconciliation, 556. Of pardon, 558. Of ordinances, 559. Of peace, ib. Glorious in respect of the manifestation of the promises therein, ib. Why Satan endeavours to hinder it, 566.

Government, Christ doth three things at the entrance of his, 360. Of the church, in twelve particulars, 712.

Grace, the excellent nature of it, 554. Day of, what, 928. Means of, compared to summer, 929. To harvest, 930.

Grey-Hairs, sin and judgment, why so called, in six particulars, 918.

Grey-Headed, England now is, 920.

H

Habitation, God a, is showed in fourteen particulars 250.

Hammer, the word of God compared to, 582.

Happiness, Jesus Christ necessary to man's, 417.

Hardness, Christ's soldiers must endure, 735.

Hart, Christ compared to an, 344.

Harvest, day of grace so called, 930.

Head, Christ the, fourfold sense, 386. Enlarged by seventeen particulars, ib. Anointed in consecration, 387. Mostly struck at, ib. Christ, as such, pities his people, ib. His excellency as such, 338.

Heart of flesh, what, and how known, 771.

Heat, affliction compared to, 947.

Heaven, why called a Paradise, 966. A Crown of Life, 968.

He-goat, type of Christ, 992.

Heifer, red, a type of Christ, 993.

Hell, why called a furnace, 969. Utter Darkness 970.

Help, how Christians may others, 248.

Heir of all things opened in eight particulars, 442.

Heirs of God, why saints are so called, 726.

Hen, nature and properties of, 458.

Hiding-place, God an, 312.

High-Priest, a type, 980.

Holy Ghost, a Divine Person, 546.

Holy Spirit, a Comforter, 492. Compared to wind, 497. To Fire, 501. To the Oil of Gladness, ib. To the earnest of an inheritance, 505. To a Seal, 508. To a River, 511. To Water, 516. To a Witness, 519. To a Teacher, 520. To a Dove, 522. To a Guide 523.

Hope, an helmet, 618. Definition of, ib. An anchor, 620. Sure ground of, in seven particulars, 622.

Horn, little, Dan. vii. proved to be the Pope, 890.

Householder, parable of, opened, 289. Parallel between God and others, in thirty particulars, 290. God most excellent, 294.

Husbandman, God is, 254.

Hunter, Satan so called, and why, 922.

Hypocrite, God hates such an one, 280.

I

Image, Christ the express, of the Father, 381.

Imitate, saints do God, 725.

Institution, none of God's to be used but as he requires, 358.

Interest, in God, makes the soul value him, 234.

Isaac, ditto, 974.

J

Jacob, a type of Christ, 974.

Jacob's Ladder, do, 975.

Jewels, saints why compared to, 773.

Jonah, a type of Christ, 979.

Joseph, ditto, 975.

Joshua, ditto, 976.

Judgement-day, compared to an assize, 965.

Judge, properties of him, 308.

Justice, God's must be satisfied, 899. No man or angel can do it, ib. Only satisfied by a sacrifice, 901.

K

King, the title explained, 359. Christ is attended by angels, 360. The privileges and excellencies pertaining to Christ as such, ib. Christ as such excels all others, 362.

Kingdom of God, the church, why so called, 532 why the Gospel is so called, ib.

Kisses, of Christ's mouth, opened in four particulars, 567.

Knoweth, Christ, the causes of distempers and disorders, 336.

L

Labourers, ministers, why so called, 830. Christ's ought to be provided for, 831.

Lamb, how Christ may be so called, opened in ten particulars, and practically improved, 392.

Lambs, what meant by, in a large place, 769.

Leaven, word of God compared to, and why, 585.

Life of man, compared to a swift post, 952. To a swift ship, 953. To an eagle hastening to her prey, ib. To a cloud, 954. To a weaver's shuttle, ib. To the wind, ib. To a flower, 955.

To a shadow, ib.

Life, spiritual, how we may know a man who has the principle of it in him, 802, 803.

Light, Christ as such exceed all others, 424. Sown for the righteous, 960. The word of God compared to, 534. Various acceptations of, ib.

Lily, the Church compared to, 701. Of the Valleys Christ compared to, 430.

Lion, strange story of his justice, 279. Of his sight and voice, 278. Why Christ compared, 353. And Lioness, revenge the death of their young upon a bear, 279. Reqnites kindness, ib.

Lions, Saints compared to, and why, 765. Wicked men ditto, 810.

Locusts, out of the bottomless pit, 719.

Love compared to death and the grave, 625. To coals of fire ib. Christ's compared to wine, 627. Of Christ glorious, 628.

M

Man, a brittle creature, 296. By nature in debt, 793, 897. Compared to the earth, 716. To a worm, 717. To a flower, 720. The heart of, like a rock, 823.

Manna, a type of Christ, 356. Christ excels, 258.

Marriage-day of the Saints, 963.

Means of grace compared to the summer, 929. To harvest, 930.

Meat, strong, what, 576.

Meat-offering, a type, 989.

Mediator, necessity of, first, in respect of God; 2ndly in respect of man, 315. Christ fully qualified for, 316. But one, 318.

Melchisedec, a type, 973.

Member, Christ judgeth between one and another, 375.

Men, Christ the Light of, 422. Captives, 777. sluggards, 783. Fools and idiots, 786. Painted sepulchres, 790. Compared to swine, 791. To debtors, 793. To the rod of God, 796. To tares, ib. To chaff, 798. To thorns, ib. To mountains, 799. To a troubled sea, 800.

Are said to be dead in sin, 801. Wicked men blind, 803. Beside themselves, 804. To dogs, 805. To bulls, 808. To lions, 810. To foxes, 814. To goats, 816. To thieves, 817. Wicked men naked, 820. To vipers, 821. They are poor and miserable, 822. The heart of a wicked man compared to a rock, 823. To eagles, 825. To devils, 826.

Merchant, spiritual, saints are, 747. 604.

Mercy-seat, a type of Christ, 984.

Milk, word of God, why so called, 575.

Ministers, of Christ compared to angels, 828. To stars, 829. To labourers, 830. To watchmen, 834. To trumpeters, 836. To spokesmen, 837. To clouds, 839. To fathers, 841. To stewards, 842. To planters, 843. To builders, 846. To shepherds, 849. To pillars, ib. To ambassadors, 850. To rulers, 854. Work hard, 824.

Ministry, of the Gospel, necessary, 857. Christ all in it, 489.

Moon, the Church compared to, 675.

Moral suasion insufficient to convert, 551.

Morning, resurrection compared to 960.

Moses, a type of Christ, 976.

Mother, why the Church so called, 995.

Mountains, wicked men compared to, 799.

Myrrh, seven properties of it, 470. A Bundle of, what meant by it? ib.

Myrtle Tree, a type of saints, in seven particulars, 761.

N

Naked, wicked men are, 820.

Name of God, what, 272. Of the Lord, a strong tower, 269. Of Christ, like precious ointment, 396. Excelleth all others, 398.

Necessary, the Lord Jesus, universally, 417, 418.

Net, the word of God compared to, and why, 570.

New man, what, 15.

Noah, a type of Christ, 972.

O

Oil, nature of it, in seventeen particulars, 501. Of Gladness, its nature and excellency, ib. Anointing the head in consecration, 387.

Ointment, Christ's name as precious, in ten particulars, 396.

Olive Tree, the Church compared to, 680.

Operations of the Holy Spirit, glorious, 549.

Order, of God, in the building of the first and second creation, 261.

Ordinances, Christ all in them, 489.

P

Palm Trees, the godly compared to, in nine particulars, 753.

Paradise, celestial, 966.

Paranomasia, figure of, 201.

Passover, a type, 995. Our Christ, is, 639.

Peace-offering, a type, 990.

Plague, sin is, 910. Of the leprosy, a figure of sin, 911.

Planters, ministers, why so called, 843.

Plough, the word of God compared to, 588.

Poor, wicked men are, 822.

Portion, God is, in twelve particulars, 246. Considered in a fourfold sense, ib. 1st. Its nature, 2dly. Extent. 3dly. Signification. And, 4thly, Its usefulness, ib.

Poison, sin compared to, 912.

Pray, a Saint must always, 740.

Prayer, special seasons for extraordinary, 740. A great ordinance, ib. What hinders it in saints, 741.

Precious, Christ is, and to whom, with ten marks of trial, 452, 453. The way to find Christ so, 454.

Priest, Christ one, 364. Christ, as such, succeeds the Jewish high-priest, in nine particulars, 367.

Priests, saints are, 777.

Priesthood of Christ, and Gospel government, exceeds that of the law, 368, 380. The notions of the church of Rome about it, 368.

Prince of darkness, the Devil so called, 921.

Privilege, great, of that soul who is let into Christ at the door, 349.

Promises, of the Gospel, glorious, 559. 1st. In respect of him, in and through whose name they are made, ib. 2dly: In that they suit all conditions of the soul, and tend to answer all objections a poor sinner, or weak believer, can make, 562. 3dly. In respect of the firmness of them, 565. glorious above those of the law, 531, 561.

Prophet, Christ one, in seventeen particulars, 370.

Prophets, foretell things to come, 371. Christ exceeds all others, 373.

Prophetical office of Christ layeth a foundation for the Church to build on, 371.

Providence, of God, wonderful in preserving his people in these days, 694. Compared to clouds, 937.

Q

Quench the Spirit, how, 579. Cause of, 580. A wicked thing, 581.

R

Race, spiritual, what a man must do who would run it, 742.

Red-heifer, a type, 924.

Refiner, who and what, in fifteen particulars, 465.

Refuge, import of the word, 286. None like God, 287. Cities of, under the law, 289. Way made plain to, 288.

Register, God keeps one against the great day, 311.

Rest, God the soul's, 252.

Resurrection, compared to the morning, 960. to waking out of sleep, 961. To a reaping-day, 962. To the saint's marriage-day, 963. To the saints coronation-day, 964.

Reveal, the Gospel reveals, 1st. the glory of Christ's person. 2dly. His offices. 3dly. His love. 4thly. His riches. And, 5thly, His power, 533, 543.

Righteousness, Christ the Sun of, 418.

River of God, excellency of it, 514. Holy Spirit compared to, 511. The Spirit an overflowing, 512.

Rock, Christ one, in twelve particulars, 380. A sinner's heart compared to, 323. Smitten, a type of Christ, 993.

Rocky heart, five marks of, 824.

Rod, of God, wicked men are, 796. Afflictions so called, 939. What voice in it, 940.

Rose of Sharon, Christ compared to, 405.

Root of David, Christ in nine particulars, 424. And stem of Jesse, how Christ is, 426.

Rulers, ministers of the Gospel, why so called, 854. Good, their qualifications, how chosen, and how they govern, 855.

S

Sacrifice of beasts, a type of Christ, 937.

Saints compared to babes, 721. To children 723. To heirs, 726. To eagles, 727. To sheep, 729. To soldiers, ib. To runners, 742. To salt of the earth, 746. To merchants, 747. To pilgrims, 749. To palm trees, 753. To wheat, 756. To light, 758. To cedars, 760. To myrtle trees, 761. To willows, 762. To vessels, 763. To lions, 765. To gold, 768. To doves, 769. to lambs, ib. To stewards, 772. To lively stones, 773. To jewels, ib. To kings, 775. To priests, 777. Heart of, why called an heart of flesh, 771.

Salt, grace compared to, 599.

Salvation, common, why so called, 380. Christ, the Captain of, in twenty-three particulars, 460. Only by Christ, and how, 536. Glorious in sixteen particulars, 564.

Sampson, a type of Christ, 977.

Sanctuary, God the only one, 251.

Sarah and Hagar, 974.

Satan's Subtlety in warring against the soul, 732.

Scape-Goat, a type of Christ, 999.

Schoolmaster, the law why so called, 167.

Serpent, of brass, a type of Christ, 486.

Servant of God, Christ is in eleven particulars, 350. As such Christ excels, 352.

Sharon, Christ, the rose, of 405.

Shepherd, Christ a, in nineteen particulars, 374. Great, why Christ is so called, 376.

Shepherds, Christ excels all others, 376. Ministers compared to, 849.

Ship, the Church compared to, 703.

Sin, compared to a thief, 894. To a debt, 897.

To a heavy burden, 905. To a sting, 906.

To a wound, 907. To a plague, 910. To a deadly poison, 912. To a sickness, 914. To an abominable vomit, 915. To uncleanness, 916.

To gray-hairs, 918. God punishes gradually in his own people, 284.

Sin-offering, a type of Christ, 989.

Sins, Christ bore our, what meant by it, 904.

Singing of Psalms, an ordinance of God, 694.

Sleep, death compared to, 957. Difference between that of the godly and ungodly, 959.

Sluggards, wicked men so called, 783.

Soldiers of Christ, who, 729.

Solemn yearly sacrifice, a type, 991.

Solomon, a type of Christ, 978.

Soul of man, compared to a ship, 655. To a candle, 658.

Spirit, Holy, a Comforter, 492. A divine person, 496. Compared to wind, 497. To fire, 501.

To the oil of gladness, 501. To an earnest, 505.

To a seal, 508. To a river, 511. To water, 516.

To a witness, 519. To a teacher, 520.

To a dove 522. A guide to saints, 523.

Spirit of a man, why called the candle of the Lord, 658.

Spokesmen, ministers of Christ are, 837.

Star, Christ, the morning, in eighteen particulars, 476.

Stewards, saints are, and why so called, 772. Ministers are, and ditto, 842.

Summer, means of grace why so called, 929.

Sun of righteousness, Christ is in thirty-four particulars, 418.

Supper, the Lord's, 632.

Suretyship, of Christ, in ten particulars, 318. Difference between his, and suretyship among men, 320.

T

Tabernacle, a type, 983.
Table of shewbread, a type, 985.
Tares, wicked men compared to, 796.
Teacher, Spirit of God, a sacred one, in eleven particulars, 520. The saints' best, 522.
Teachers, better to lose all others than the Spirit, 522.
Teachers, false, Compared to wolves, 858. To foxes, 859. To Wells without water, 860. To Clouds without rain, ib. To deceivers, ib.
Teaching, who have the Spirit's, 522.
Temple of Solomon, a type, 676.
Terrible, Christ is as a Judge in a threefold manner, 485.
Testator, Christ is, in fifteen particulars, 341. As such excels, 343. A fivefold testimony to Christ as such, ib.
Thief, in the night, Christ's coming compared to, 480.
Thief, a, why sin so called, 894.
Thieves, wicked men compared to, 817.
Thorns, wicked men compared to, 798.
Trade, of the city of God excellent, 665. Godliness a, in thirteen particulars, 931.
Traffic, all heavenly by the Spirit, 669.
Treasure, Gospel compared to, in eight particulars, 596.
Tree, apple, Christ compared to, 431. Olive, Church compared to, 680.
Trees, palm, saints compared to, 753.
Trinity, the persons of, made known by Christ six manner of ways, 334.
Trumpeters, ministers, why so called, 836.
Truth, word taken variously, 601. Excellency of it, 604.
Types, definition of, 225. Prophetical, 228. Of an historical, 231. Rules for expounding, 233.
Typical and symbolical actions, 228.

V

Vail of the Holiest, a type, 984.
Vessels, saints, earthen, 769.
Vine, Christ the true, in ten particulars, 427. As such excels, 429.
Vineyard, the Church compared to, 686.
Vipers, wicked men, why so called, 821.
Virgin, the Church compared to one, 689.
Visions, prophetical and typical, 229.
Vomit, what meant by turning to the old, 916.

U

Unclean, nothing more than sin, 916.
Uncleaness, of man, by nature, 917.
Union, present time to be improved in order to obtain it, 460.

Universe, happy state of, 363, 364.

W

Wall of fire, God is about his people, 306. God as a portion, frees from fear of, 231.
War, why God declares against a people, 266. God gives warning before he makes, 267.
Warriors, God excels all others, 266.
Watchmen, ministers, why so called, 834.
Water, the Spirit compared to, 516. The nature of, 517. Of life, free to all, 518. Excellent nature of, sacred, ib.
Way, to the Cities of Refuge made plain, 288. Christ the, in ten particulars, 378. To the Father, Christ is, 379. What kind of, Christ is in ten particulars, ib.
Wedding garment, what, 472.
Wells without water, false teachers, 860.
Wheat, saints compared to, 756. Trial of, from tares, 758.
Whore, the great, shall be burned, 300.
Wilderness, this world is, in eight particulars, 951.
Will of man, how it acts, and how acted upon, in conversion, 551.
Willow trees, saints compared to, 762.
Wind, properties of it, 497. Spirit compared to it, in twenty particulars, ib. How to know which way that of the Spirit blows, 499.
Witness, Christ is, in ten particulars, 438. In the day of judgment, who and what, 484. The Spirit is, in eight ditto, 519.
Witnesses necessary for a Christian, 484.
Word of God, compared to light, 526. To kisses of Christ's mouth, 567. To a net, 570. To gold, 572. To milk, 575. To strong meat, 576. To honey, ib. To fire, 577. To a hammer, 582. To the sword of the Spirit, 583. To heaven, 585. To a glass, 586. To a plough, 588. To seed, 590. To rain, 592. To the dew of heaven, 595. To treasure, 596.
World, had a beginning, 290. A Wilderness, 306, 951. A field, 951. End of the, why called a harvest, 952.
Works, Christ's undoubted right to all those of God's hands, showed in five particulars, 363.
Worm, man compared to, 717.
Wormwood, afflictions compared to, 948.
Wound, sin is, 907. When it may be said to be deadly, 908.
Wrath of God, terrible, 298.

Y

Yearly sacrifice of the bullock, a type, 991.

Z

Zerubbabel, a type of Christ, 979.

INDEX

OF THE MOST REMARKABLE WORDS EXPOUNDED IN THE FIRST BOOK.

A		Brook	111	Dregs	137	Glory and strength	18
Action	PAGE 26	Brutes	89	Drink, to	168	Goats	152
Affections	25	Bubble, to	123	Drops	127	God	18
An age, ages,	21, 189	Build, to	57	Dung	127	God, to forget	18
Air	85	Builder	66	Dust	127, 128	Gold	128
All	185	Bull	150	E		Gold and silver	11
Allergories	192	Burden	177	EARNEST	70	Grasshoppers	68
Altar	147, 180	Butter	145	Ears	43, 89, 157	Grave	16, 173
Ancestors	4	Buying	56	Earth	16, 86, 90, 121, 127	Grief	49
Angels	97	C		East	187	Grinding	140
Anger	7, 50	Calling	55	Eat, to	142, 168	Gulch down	143
Anoint	60, 183	Camphire	80	Elohim	97	H
Answering	55	Canaan	179	Elias	179	HAIR	116
Aquaticles	155	Candle	111	Empire	125	Hammer	176
Argument	19	Carcases	189	End	23	Hailing	160
Ariel	147	Carmel	15, 125	Enemy	177	Hand	6, 46, 48, 158
Arm, arms	44, 158, 174	Chaff	140	Enjoy, to	168	Hand-writing	175
Armour	70	Chair	26	Ephraim	188	Hardness	164
Arrows	59, 70, 174	Chamber	173	Evening	108	Harvest	23, 38, 139
Ashes	128	Character	72	Eunuch	190	Haste	14
An ass	150	Chariots	70, 174	Exalted	192	Hatred	50
Author	186	Chattering of birds	153	Eyes	42, 89, 157, 191	Head	40, 156, 188
Axe		Chernob	99	Eye-lids	92	Heal, to	161
B		Childhood	166	F		Health	161
BAAL	167	Chords	178	FACE	41, 157	Hearing	62, 164
Back	159	Christ	17, 18	Fan, to	60	Heart	14, 17, 46, 141
Backward, to go	170	Circumcision	182	Father	67, 166	Heaven	17, 100, 135
Bald	58	City	17, 95, 172	Fear	25	Hedge	60
Banner	74	Clothing	73	Feast	23	Heel	144
Baptism	184, 188	Clouds	114	Feast of tabernacles	183	Heifer	150
Barak, to bless and		Coals	111	Feed, to	152	Hew, to	58
curse	30	Commanding	55	Feed, to	160	Hide, to	57
Bars	172	Conscious	8	Field	138	Hiding-place	86
Bind up, to	57	Corn	139	Fight, to	169	Hill	124, 126
Bite to	142	Corner	172, 188	Finding	64	Hind	76, 150
Biting	161	Cover	177	Fire	85, 109, 157	Hissing	52
Bitterness	164	Counsellor	65	Finger	46	Hold, to	57
Beam	134	Creation	98	Firebrand	111	Hook	59
Bear, a	148	Creatures	146	First-born	67	Hope	25
Bear, to	58	Crown	175	Fir-tree	11	Horn	78, 140
Beget, to	167	Crying	53	First-fruits	182	Hornets	154
Behold, to	143	Cup	16, 71, 175	Fishers, Fishing	155	Horse, horsemen	150, 174
Belly	98, 144	Cure, to	161	Flame	111	Hour	22, 198
Blackness	163	Cut off to	60	Flax	153	House	15, 173
Blast or blowings	85	D		Flesh	145	Hunger, to	168
Blindness	163	David	179	Flourish, to	133	Hunt, to	146
Blood	19, 91, 145, 161	Day, Days	21, 69	Flow, to	123	Husband	166
Blot out, to	58	Dead	105, 188	Flower	133	Husbandman	66
Body	41, 155, 187	Death, to die	91	Fluctuating	118	I
Boar, a	148	Debt	90, 162	Fly, to	78, 143	Idols	98
Bonds	178	Den	176	Foot-stool	68	Ignorance	51
Bone, a	144	Deriding	126	Forehead	157	Infants	165
Bones	89, 145	Desire	52	Foreknowledge	69	Inheritance	71, 175
Book	71	Desert	15, 127	Forgetfulness	52	Iron	129
Bow	47, 159	Devil	25	Fortress	86	Islands	15
Bowels	70, 174	Devour, to	24	Foundation	171	J
Branch	46, 89	Dew	58, 142	Fountain	85, 120	Jealousy	50
Brands	78, 123	Diamond	116	Fox	149	Jerusalem	180
Brass	161	Dimension	130	Fruitify, to	153	Joy, to	14, 49
Bread	11, 129	Direct, to	80	Fruit	133	Judge, to	11
Break, to	72, 141	Dirt	58	Furnace	71	Judgment	7
Break forth, to	58	Distil, to	127	G		K
Breathing	123	Divination	125	GARDEN	135	KEY	172
Bridegroom	52	Do, to	8	Garment	177	Killing	90
Bridle	67	Dog	11	Gate	172	Kingdom	125
Brimstone	150	Door	151, 192	Gird, to	57, 169	Kissing, to kiss	27, 53
Bring forth, to	131	Dove	172	Gleaning	138	Knee, knees	27, 160
	169		154	Glory	12

Know, to	8	Ophir	16	Seraphim	109	Throat	6
Knowledge	50	Orphan	167	Serpent	152	Throne	67
L		Overflow, to	123	Servant	157	Thunder	115, 190
Labour	56	P		Shade	88	Time	21, 69, 106, 187
Lamb	76	PALACE	6	Shadow	38, 82, 103	Tongue	5, 89
Lamentness	150	Part	187	Sharon	69	Tooth	143
Leap	85, 111	Passing through	64	Shave, to	177	Touching	63
Lantern	171	Passover	23, 183	Sheath	152	Tower	87, 172, 190
Largeness or Latitude	111	Peace	67	Sheep	67	Treasure	73, 175
Laugh, to	27	Phrase	190	Shepherd	70, 174	Treasure and treasurer	38
Laughing	52	Place	67, 178, 187	Shield	16, 173	Tree, a	134
Leaf	132	Plague	162	Ships	160	Truth	181
Leanness	162	Plant	78, 133	Shod, to be	158	Try, to	58
Leaven	38, 141	Please, to	14	Shoulder	58, 140	V
Lebanon	125	Plowing	138	Sift, sitting,	55	VALLEY	126
Lees	137	Pluck up, to	134	Silence	129	Vessel	177
Left-hand	170	Poison	162	Silver	7, 18, 20, 96	Victory	13
Leopard, a	149	Portion	71	Sin	180	Vine	70, 136
Leviathan	90, 135	Pour out, to	58	Sion	27, 33, 63, 165	Vineyard	136
Levites	181	Power	13	Sit, to	62, 164	Vintage	138
Life	13, 161	Prescience	69	Sleep, to	112	Vision	96
Light	20, 81	Priest	181	Smell, smelling,	147	Visitation	64
Lightning	116	Prince	17	Smoke	116	Uncircum	148
Lily	80	Prison	173	Snare	164	Ungird, to	58
Live	6	Prize	174	Snow	179	Voice of blood	91
Lion	76, 147, 148	Promise	18	Softness	166	Void, to make	58
Lip	5, 44, 89, 143	Propitiation	180	Solomon	187	Vomit up	190
Loin	159	Q		Son	161	W
Looking-glass	177	QUARRIES	130	Soul	4, 31, 40, 151	WALKING	63
Lord	167	Quiver	174	Soundness	161	Wall of fire	86
Love, to love	11, 261	R		Speaking	44, 81	Wall	171, 188
Lot	71	RAIN	116	Spear, a glittering	70	War	169, 190
M		Rams	152	Species	185	War, man of	66
MAGISTRATES	91	Razor	177	Spirit	153	Wash, to	57, 123
Manhood	166	Reapers	140	Spider's Webs	12	Water	85, 117
Marks	161	Rebuking	55	Spouse	177	Waves	118
Marrow	163	Redness	163	Sprinkling	183	Way	58, 87
Measure	176	Rejoice, to	14	Staff	74, 174	Weapons	70
Meet, to	64	Reed	135	Star	84, 102, 103	Weight	177
Men	173, 179	Reins	51	Step or Stair	171	Well, a	121, 122
Mercy	36	Remember, to	10, 52	Steps	46	Whales	155
Metaphor	3	Remembrance	49	Sting	155	Wheat	139
Meteors	114	Repentance	57	Stipend	86, 129, 175	Wheels	71
Milk	145	Rest	64	Stone	118	Whip	176
Ministry	160	Returning	50	Steam	172	Whiteness	163
Moles	163	Revenge	71, 175	Strings	140	Whitestone	175
Money	7	Riches	150	Strong-hold	131	Whole	186
Moon	94	Ride, to	64	Sulphur	38, 82, 94	Widowhood	166
Morning	107, 188	Riding	45, 170	Summer	23	Wind	94
Mountain	124	Right-hand	64	Sun	184	Windows	71
Mouth	5, 43, 142, 158	Rising up	181	Supper	143	Wine	137
Mother	166	Rites	38, 119	Swallow, to	60	Winepress	138
Mud	127	River	77	Sweep	151	Wings	78, 143
Munition	86	Roaring	86, 120	Sweetness	164	Winnowing	140
Myrrh	79	Rock	74, 178	Swine	164	Winter	28
N		Ropes	79, 132	Sword	151	Wipe, to	57
NAIL	172, 188	Rose	80	T	6, 26, 70, 174	Wit, to	55, 67
Name of God	17, 29	S		Tabernacle	173	Wolf	148
Name of man	29	SABBATH	183, 188	Table	15, 176	Wood	135
Names of countries	16	Sabbath-day	28	Tail	144	Woman	165
Navel	159	Sadness	49	Take, to	169	Work	8
New-man	15	Salt	130	Target	70	Workman	66
Nest	15, 154	Satan	100	Taste, tasting	63, 164	World	15
Net	147	Schoolmaster	167	Tears	59, 157	Worm	77, 153
Night	108	Scorpions	153	Tempest	115	Wortwood	135
Noon	108	Sea	15, 118	Temple	87, 180	Write, to	69
Nose	43	Seal	60, 73	Theatre	16	Y
Numbering	56	Search, to	59, 64	Things	90	YEARS	21
O		Se, d	131, 192	Thinness	162	Yoke	151
Oil	20, 72, 136, 190	Set, g	61, 162	Thirst, to	168	Youth	166
Ointment	20	Seeking	64	Thorus	134	Z
Old age	166, 194	Selling	56	Thoughtfulness	52	ZEAL	50
Olive-tree	125	Sense	24, 162	Threshing	140	Zerubbabel	171
Open, to	57

IRELAND:

Printed at the BONMAHON INDUSTRIAL PRINTING SCHOOL, Established October, 20, 1851, by DAVID A. DOUDNEY, Curate of the Parish of Monksland, County of Waterford.

THE BONMAHON

Infant, Embroidery, Printing, and Agricultural Schools,

CO. WATERFORD.

CITY PRESS, 1, LONG LANE, LONDON, JUNE 30, 1855.

Having recently returned from a visit to my friend, the Rev. D. A. DOUDNEY, at Bonmahon, it has occurred to me that a brief narrative of what I saw and learnt, during my sojourn, might prove of interest to the friends of the BONMAHON INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS, and, at the same time, be productive of good to the great work of improvement now in progress there. Under this impression, I venture to relate, in a plain manner, the facts which came within my observation, either as relates to the Schools themselves, or the peculiar circumstances out of which they have arisen, and are now surrounded.

To those not immediately interested in such a matter, a visit to Industrial Schools, in one of the wildest regions of the South of Ireland, would present features more interesting than many remoter and more celebrated scenes; but to those who have aided, by personal endeavours and sacrifices, a work so eminently in accordance with the teaching of Him who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me," the facts of the case, as seen by a visitor, must, I think, have a peculiar and pleasing value.

I left London on Monday morning, May 26th, and, after experiencing the usual trial of a passage from Holyhead to Kingstown, arrived in Dublin the same evening. On Tuesday morning I proceeded by railway to Waterford—a journey occupying about seven hours. A pleasant drive of two hours, and I reached Bonmahon. On entering the village I found that my arrival had been expected; I saw the flag waving above the Printing School, and the lads gave me an Irish welcome.

Bonmahon is a retired, out-of-the-way nook on the coast of the county of Waterford. It is built irregularly, in the bight of a small bay, between Tramore on the east, and Dungarvan, a small port on Dungarvan Bay, on the west. The sea view is bold and open, the cliffs rugged and picturesque. To the south-east lies the wide expanse of St. George's Channel, dotted with white sails in the distance, and with rude fishing-boats near the shore. The village itself lies in a valley, which runs down by a sandy slope to the sea, forming a magnificent strand, from which rises, at the distance of half a mile, a splendid wall of dark majestic rocks. Northward the valley runs back from the village, and terminates in the green slopes of the Commeragh hills, which enclose the scene on the land-side with a charming panoramic background. The hills are ten or twelve miles off, but to me they appeared much nearer.

Adjoining the village are the mines of Knockmahon, the property of the "Mining Company of Ireland." These mines are noted for the excellence of the ore which they furnish, and afford the chief employment of the inhabitants of Bonmahon, which is strictly a mining village. The name, Bonmahon, is from two Irish words, signifying the heel or foot of the river—Knockmahon implying the hill of the river.

Though the land is barren, and the constant drift of sand and sea-spray renders farming difficult, all the elements of worldly prosperity are to be found here. The population does not much exceed 1500 souls of all ages. Amongst these the mines distribute a weekly sum of £350 in wages, while the tillage of the land contributes something additional to the common resources of the place. A weekly expenditure of £350 in so small a village should produce far more comfort than is visible here; and for the cause of the destitution and vice which exists, we must doubtless look to that power which has desolated so many of the fairest portions of the earth.

But at Bonmahon, as elsewhere in Ireland, the capability for something better exists, as my recent visit proved to my satisfaction.

On Wednesday morning I visited the Schools. There are five of these. First, the Infant School; second, the Embroidery School; third, the Printing School; fourth, the Agricultural School; fifth, the Parochial School.

Each of the Schools is conducted in a separate building, situate at an easy distance from each other, and all presenting a pleasing scene of busy life.

The School buildings are substantial and roomy. There is the Industrial Printing School, with its five young women employed in the binding department, two compositors, five pressmen, fifteen boys, and three presses, full of bustling activity, yet as orderly and business-like as a London Office.

The Infant School interested me exceedingly. It was a pleasing sight to see fifty infants so well trained, and apparently happy, and to hear them sing, in that dark, Popish village—

"We won't give up the Bible, God's holy book of truth," &c.

Now comes the Embroidery School. Here forty-seven girls are taught and employed, many of them earning Five to Eight Shillings per week, and producing work of a high order of merit. I was soon convinced that, though at first unable to thread, or even to hold a needle, such teaching as they obtain here would soon enable them to earn their bread honourably, wherever their future lot may be cast. This School, conducted by a competent Mistress, is under the immediate superintendence and control of Mrs. DOUDNEY. In the same building is opened a Bible Depository, for the sale of Bibles and Testaments at a reduced price.

Having had some experience in Printing matters, it may be supposed that I should readily detect any short-comings in the mechanical arrangements of a Printing School. The intelligent perseverance in the teaching of these lads is well rewarded in the order and activity of the establishment—the completeness with which industry and skill combine their forces for the production of a noble result, afford a reflection of that presiding mind, which, under God's blessing, has wrought so successfully in the projection and establishment of this admirable institution. The lads are very skilful, not in the manual labour only, but in those departments which require judgment, shrewdness, and care. The overseer brought me a proof-sheet of the reprint of "Keach's Metaphors," which had been read, and was about to be given out for correction in the usual way. It was as clean and perfect as the work of any ordinary compositor, though the production of boys who, but a short time previous, had neither seen printing-type nor press—such is the change effected by culture and kindness. There are in these various Schools one hundred and fifty young persons who enjoy these advantages, and thus far removed from the debasements of poverty and a vagabond life, and placed in a position to acquire useful handicrafts.

Any one who will open the pages of DR. GILL'S COMMENTARY, or AMBROSE SEARLE'S CHURCH OF GOD, and criticise the character of the typography, may see to what perfection of skill the hand of an Irish peasant may be brought under opportunity and tuition. Dr. Gill's work contains nearly 47,000,000 separate letters, covering about 6,000 pages of close and beautifully clear letter-press. Previous to the 12th of October, 1851, when the only suitable building came into the possession of the indefatigable Curate of Monksland not one of these lads had seen a printing-type; yet by the January following, they had produced one part, of about 240 pages, of the Commentary, containing 1,200,000 letters, mixed with no small amount of Greek and Hebrew quotations—the Bishop of Cashel witnessing the printing of the first sheet. Who can say how many lads were rescued from the dark apprenticeship of vice by the timely opening of these Schools?

On Thursday evening I attended the weekly lecture, held in the building used for the Infant School. To this Thursday evening lecture, and the usual Sunday services, all the children are free to attend, though it is a rule, essential to the success of any Protestant movement here, that they should not be requested to attend; nor is attendance ever made a condition of employment. A little incident occurred in my presence, illustrative of the policy of such a course. One of the guardians of the poor meeting Mr. Doudney and myself in the public street, mentioned the case of one of the girls belonging to the Embroidery School, who, having become a dependent on the parish funds, alleged that she could earn five shillings a week, but, having refused to attend the Protestant services, she had been dismissed. "Oblige me by going over to the School, and hear the reason for her dismissal, from the lips of the mistress herself," said Mr. Doudney. "No," said Mr. —, "I do not wish that; your word is sufficient that the girl's story is false." Mr. — at last consented to go up into the work-room of the Embroidery School. Mr. Doudney at once put the question to the whole School:—"Did I, or Mrs. Doudney, at any time ask one of you to attend any of our weekly or Sunday services?" A universal "No!" was the response. Again Mr. Doudney put the same question, and the same answer, "No!" was repeated in a distinct, truthful, and unmistakeable tone, at which the guardian became still more satisfied, and then was informed of the real cause of the child's dismissal, viz., idleness, unwillingness, and conduct injurious to the School generally. Such is the craft of babes under Popish teaching and example!

It was with much pleasure that I walked over the grounds of the Agricultural School, in company with my friend, the Rev. D. A. Doudney. This School has only recently commenced operations, and the land at present in a preparatory state. The object of the School is to teach practical husbandry, in combination with a sound course of mental training. The Boys attend four hours at their lessons in-doors, and four hours are spent in tillage. They are taught to ridge, furrow, and drain the land; learn to preserve the strength of the soil, and to adapt the crops to the seasons, &c. Some of these will be fitted for service as gardeners, or for other similar capacities; while they will be taught to cultivate, profitably, the patch of cottage ground—an art here at present comparatively unknown! Indeed, the need for such training is evident enough in the wretched aspect of the land, which recalls to one's mind the painful narratives of the Times' Commissioner. The soil is overgrown with weeds, undrained, badly ploughed, and planted over and over again with potatoes, till, from utter exhaustion, it literally refuses to produce a scanty crop. The hedges run wild, and eat up large tracts of land with briars and thorns, while ditches are suffered to roam at will, for want of slight repairs to their banks, converting fields into noxious quagmires, the home of filth, fever, and vermin. Manure is not thought of till they are about to quit their tenancies; then they cover the land with sea-weed, which extracts the last miserable relic of its strength, and ruins it completely for the succeeding tenant. Barns, cottages, and homesteads fall into decay, and as they fall so they remain: there is no energy to repair, no desire to make things better. Everywhere one sees destitution, spiritual degradation, and ruin—ruin stalking over the land, and before which the people seem perishing from the soil—perishing of bodily and spiritual exhaustion. The aspect of the land, the broken mud walls, the stagnant, fever-producing pools, the wretched crops that scarce pay the labour of reaping, and the besotted superstition which darkens over all, speak plainly enough of the nature of that dark shadow under which Ireland pines and withers, and to dispel which there is only one light that can be effectual—the light of the glorious Gospel. May similar blessings attend the progress of the Agricultural School as have followed in the wake of the Printing, and Embroidery, and Infant Schools, already established!

On Thursday morning the monthly packages of the Gospel Magazine were made up, and despatched, by post, to the Subscribers. I have heard, with pain, the frequent complaints of friends that they do not obtain their copies until many days after the time when they should be delivered. Now I saw and understood the cause of delay—another of the many impediments to industrial and Protestant progress in Ireland. To save the village postmaster the usual labour of stamping, and the messenger the additional labour of carrying a large number of Magazines, Mr. Doudney despatched them, in the care of a lad, with a donkey-cart, direct to Kilmacthomas (a distance of five miles,) the post-town of the district. The boy returned after having delivered his parcel of stamped Magazines, and the question was asked him, "Have the Magazines gone forward?" "No, please," said he, "the man said there was no room for them on the car, but they'll go to-morrow." The next day the lad was sent again, and returned with the same answer—"No room on the car—they'll go to-morrow." From day to day this is repeated; the stamped papers lie at the post-office, during the pleasure of Hibernian caprice; the subscribers waiting in anxious expectancy, annoyed at their non-arrival, while the Editor has to bear the blame for unpunctuality. Here is the secret of the delay—There is no room on the car for the conveyance of Protestantism!

I left Bonmahon on Friday morning, and proceeded from Carrick-on-Suir direct for home.

I may suitably close this letter with a few remarks on the nature of the labour in which Mr. Doudney is engaged, and the results which, up to this time, have flowed from it.

It may truly be said that he found this place a desert, and has made it a garden. Yet he owes his success, under God, to those who have aided him by sympathy and means. The income arising from contributions has, up to this time, averaged nearly £300 per annum; but the Schools are not all—some of them cannot be—self-supporting. The difficulties of instructing a rude peasantry, the outlay for implements, the difficulty of finding a market for all the goods produced, tend to increase the expense far beyond the limit of production.

He is, moreover, surrounded by adverse influences. Priests terrify the parishioners by cursing him from the altar; false reports are in constant circulation:—Now that he is in possession of untold wealth—now that the scheme is a failure, and must be abandoned for want of funds. He is, in fact, just in that position in which it has been said no man should be who is "not prepared to die by bullet or by fever."

The feeling of party jealousy, which pervades all classes in Ireland, manifests itself with terrible malignity and power when any, however laudable, attempt is made to turn back the tide of ruin in which the country has been so long immersed. Before the first press was landed at Bonmahon, the curse of the priest had gone forth, and the people had ejaculated "Amen." But when the first portion of material arrived, a storm of opposition showed itself; the country around was alarmed, and the altars rang with expressions of bitter and unscrupulous jealousy. Eight-and-forty hours had not elapsed after the arrival of the steamer at the quay of Waterford, ere the so-called liberal newspaper of the place denounced the Industrial School as a proselyting scheme, and the assistants as braggarts and scoundrels! The inhabitants were cautioned to shun it, and to withhold their children from the work and instruction offered them. Yet the cherished ignorance of the Romish Church was successfully baffled, and the most promising scholars of the Parochial School, and afterwards many belonging to the National or Roman Catholic School, were initiated, and the presses were set going. The difficulties which the friends of the movement anticipated sunk into nothingness before the real difficulties that had to be conquered. Only stout hearts, supported by hope and faith, could have performed a labour such as this. If the storm without raged fiercely, the labour within doors was indeed no trifling task. What the excellent friend of Ragged Schools (Joseph Payne) said of the children received into London Ragged Schools, applied with double truth to these; for they might well be described as "precocious, and ferocious, and mendacious, and capacious; and odd in attitude, but great in gratitude—always tameable, but never irreclaimable."

The Schools of Bonmahon have been established a period of nearly four years. In this brief space, spite of obstacles, the presses have thrown off a mass of sound works of so high an order of typographical excellence, that many London houses would be glad to point to them as specimens of their work. Those acquainted with the mechanical details of the printing art, will best know how to appreciate the production of that superb Commentary which, while it is an imperishable monument to the learning, labour, and piety of its great author, Dr. GILL, is, in its present form, a noble and enduring proof of the genius of Irish peasant boys, when brought under wise and kindly instruction.

Of this great work, two thousand two hundred and fifty complete sets, or thirteen thousand five hundred volumes, were produced in two years and two months. Of this stock, only a few remain on hand, and there is little or no probability that so voluminous a work will be again reprinted, at least for another half century. Those who desire copies should therefore secure them forthwith.

The great Commentary was followed by a reprint of two thousand five hundred copies of Dr. Gill's Exposition of the Canticles, a work which is considered to be the author's masterpiece for savour and power. Following this, came a reprint of Dr. Hawker's Morning and Evening Portions, of which five thousand copies were completed in a few months. Four-fifths of this large impression have been sold already. Other works were simultaneously put in progress, and the presses sent forth successively an edition of one thousand copies of a reprint of the Rev. B. Keach's Key to Open Scripture Metaphors. This work had become so exceedingly scarce, that the edition was sold in about three months, and orders for quantities refused. It is now in course of reprinting, and is expected to be ready early in October. One thousand copies of Harl's Hymns were ready immediately after the completion of Keach's Metaphors, and but few copies of the Hymns now remain.

Next came the print of two thousand copies of Ambrose Serle's Church of God (to which is added Christian Husbandry), a choice work of established reputation. An edition of two thousand five hundred copies of Dr. Gill's Cause of God and Truth—"a sterling work, that plucks up by the roots the Arminian heresy"—is just published, and, in its beauty of typography, affords a pleasing instance of the capabilities of the Irish peasant boys, when directed to definite and beneficial purposes. Since November, 1852, the Gospel Magazine has been produced at Bonmahon. The Gospel Cottage Lecturer, Dr. Hawker's Sermons and Tracts, and other sound and valuable works are in progress; and Bonmahon—all shrouded in sin and darkness—now shines forth among neighbouring sister villages, and sends into many corners of the world the bright rays of spiritual truth.

But though so much has been done, the position of the Projector of this enterprise is by no means free from anxieties and difficulty—he has about one hundred and fifty mouths to feed! A scheme which distributes nearly £1200 a-year among the poor of a remote Irish village, often taxes its Manager severely to provide the necessary means of support. Yet, if the sale of goods is slow, Mr. Doudney dares not discharge superfluous hands. It is a machine which, once set going, it is dangerous to stop. In this district, there is no outside sea of labour into which the hands would flow—seeking employment elsewhere, as in any of the large towns in England. Once out of the walls, they must go back to hereditary vagrancy, to afford real grounds, in place of those imaginary ones, out of which the Romish clergy have wrought their bitter anathemas—the more bitter from the conviction that industry and enlightenment are the death-blows to the priestly power of the Papacy.

To continue the scheme in its present or increasing success, it is necessary that a market should be found for the goods produced. There are few who cannot purchase, or who do not purchase, Books and Embroidery. The lady friends have so often shown their earnestness in the support, that it may be superfluous in me to call their attention again to the fact, that the ready sale of the needlework is vastly beneficial, and promotive of the welfare of those humble but useful Irish children who produce it.

The sale of the work produced, is, of course, the primary source of income; but the Schools are not yet self-supporting, and therefore contributions are respectfully solicited, both from friends who have not hitherto subscribed, and from those who have already so liberally assisted.

Though priestly influences work in opposition, though they dread the spread of that light which blinds and confuses them, there is little fear that this good work will come to a pause. Glad hearts and ready hands have helped, so far, the energy of the Promoter, who started the enterprise at his own risk and peril; such hands and hearts are as vigorous as ever; the band of instructors are strongly knit together with their hearts in the work, and, with God's blessing on all their efforts, we may look forward to the realization, at the lone village of Bonmahon, of the conversion of the thriftless, the untaught, and the spiritually benighted, to a knowledge of the amenities of civilization, and the blessings of the Gospel.

My letter has already run beyond the limit—I will therefore subscribe myself,

Your's faithfully,

WILLIAM HILL COLLINGRIDGE.

Price £3 18s., six royal 8vo. vols., cloth, of 1000 pages each, and Portrait of the Author (the Old Testament may be had separately, 4 vols., price £2 12s.); calf grained, 5s. per vol. extra.

An Exposition of the Holy Bible; by JOHN GILL, D. D., containing the Old and New Testaments. In the former are recorded, the Origin of Mankind, of the several Nations of the world, and of the Jewish nation in particular; the Lives of the Patriarchs of Israel: the Journey of that People from Egypt to the land of Canaan, and their settlement in that land: their Laws, Moral, Ceremonial, and Judicial: their Government and state under judges and kings: their several Captivities, and their Sacred Books of Devotion: in the exposition of which it is attempted to give an account of their several Books, and the Writers of them; a summary of each Chapter, and the genuine sense of each Verse; and, throughout the whole, the Original Text, and the Versions of it, are inspected and compared; Interpretation of the best Notes, both Jewish and Christian, consulted; Difficult Passages at large explained; Seeming Contradictions reconciled; and various passages illustrated and confirmed, by testimonies of writers, as well Gentile as Jewish. In the New Testament, the Doctrinal and Practical Truths are set in a plain and easy light; and whatever is material in the various readings and several Oriental Versions is observed. The whole Illustrated with Notes, taken from the most ancient Jewish Writings.

* * * This work contains nearly 47,000,000 letters, and was composed, or put in type, by a little band of Irish lads.

It is clearly and beautifully printed in Royal octavo, and will, when completed, form a very handsome edition.—Earthen Vessel.

It is elegantly printed—good paper.—Zion's Casket.

We have no hesitation in saying, that it will bear comparison with any of the beautifully-printed books of the day; and when we consider the deeply-interesting circumstances connected with the Irish nativity of the work, our hearts are wholly rejoiced. We see here a beautiful instance, redeemed from the darkness, of the singular capacity of the human family to wait at the posts of learning, and become—not the ravens of Israel—but the honoured instruments of telegraphing the truth. Wherefore, let us not fear to take children by the hand, for we know not what they can do; but rather let us derive a lesson from the wild sea-washed village of Bonmahon. The Work is worthy of the Publisher, the Printer, and the Purchaser.—Pot of Manna.

The republication of Dr. Gill's Commentary of itself constitutes quite an epoch in the history of literature; there are circumstances connected with this new edition which invest it with peculiar interest; they are such as prove the projector to be possessed of marvellous fortitude, patience, and perseverance.—Spiritual Magazine.

The Editor is doing this under circumstances of peculiar difficulty, being in a remote part of Ireland, and obliged to avail himself of the services of raw Irish Lads, whom he is kindly instructing into the mysteries of the printing-office.—Gospel Standard.

To have so elaborate and important a work issued from an Infant Printing Establishment in the wild mining village of Bonmahon, in this county, and that for the greater part by juvenile hands, which but a few months before were totally unacquainted with either type or printing press, is what may be truly termed an astounding fact.—Waterford Mail.

For a sound, consistent, Scriptural Exposition of the word of God, no Commentary, we believe, in any language can be compared with Dr. Gill's.—The Editor of the present edition has, in the face of most arduous and numerous difficulties, been favoured with health, strength, and perseverance, to surmount them all, and to bring his laborious undertaking to a successful termination.—Gospel Standard, third notice.

We welcome the appearance of this well-known and incomparable Exposition of the Holy Scriptures. Sincerely do we rejoice that such a work is rendered available to nearly all who love the truth as it is in Jesus.—Pot of Manna, second notice.

A scheme noble in intention—admirable in principle—and worthy of imitation, is the Industrial Printing School. Distant from any immediate source of supplies, and raw Irish lads for his assistants, the productions of his press are lasting records of his Christian perseverance. First and foremost was a splendid edition of Gill's Commentary on the Bible, and latterly a complete and well-printed edition of Hawker's Morning and Evening Portions, and Hart's Hymns.—Zion's Trumpet.

In the March Number of our Magazine during the past year we welcomed the appearance of the first part of this well-known and incomparable Exposition of the Holy Bible. We then stated that in the present day, when the great principles advocated by the renowned John Gill are, to a great extent, cashiered and denounced, it has been a matter of deep regret that the expensiveness of his invaluable Commentary, and the scarcity of the work, should render it impossible that vast numbers of ministers and others, who revere the memory, and appreciate the writings of Dr. Gill, should be in possession of so rich a treasure. The difficulties, however, which have prevented a more general acquaintance with this great work are about to disappear. The desideratum will be supplied in the completion of the present correct and handsome edition of the entire Commentary, at a cost which will place it within the reach of most of those whose limited means have hitherto precluded the hope of such an acquisition to their libraries. In noticing the completion of the project, we cannot but rejoice that the worthy Editor has been enabled to overcome the great and apparently insurmountable difficulties which at times threatened his work. That, situated in a wild district of Ireland, and with the help of but little manual assistance, he should have been enabled to give to raw and ignorant Irish lads such a knowledge of the printing art as enabled him to issue, in the space of a few months, a six-volume work of near 1,000 pages each, reflects the highest credit upon the zeal, industry, and devotedness which he has displayed on behalf of those residing in his district, who had been previously neglected and forsaken. Even did our limited space admit of a lengthened notice of this valuable work, the Exposition is too well known, and too highly appreciated by all who love the distinguishing truths of which the learned Gill was so able an advocate, to render such a notice necessary. We must therefore content ourselves with giving the work our warmest commendation, and trust that many ministers and heads of families will avail themselves of the opportunity to become possessed of this valuable work. The whole six volumes, bound in cloth, may be procured for £3 18s.—Yet there are, doubtless, many devoted and faithful ministers in our churches who would rejoice in the possession of such a work as Dr. Gill's Commentary, but whose limited means preclude the possibility of their becoming themselves the purchasers of it. Surely there are to be found many in their several churches who might be found willing—by a contribution to a special fund for that purpose—to present this Exposition of the Holy Bible to their beloved Pastor as a testimony of their friendship and esteem. We trust the suggestion here thrown out will be cordially taken up, as we are confident that the people themselves would reap the advantages of such an act of kindness and respect, from the increased light and knowledge which, under the guiding influences of the Holy Spirit, the study of a work of this nature would enable their Pastor to bring before them, in his frequent expositions of divine truth in their midst.—Gospel Herald, July, 1853.

Take any of the volumes of Gill's Commentary. Let any one fully know the labour of printing, and be made acquainted with the expensive routine of book publishing, and then will there be astonishment at the cheapness of the article produced.—Pot of Manna, third notice.

We are glad to see a new edition of Gill's Commentary, and our pleasure is enhanced by the manner in which the one now under notice, has been produced. The purchaser of this work will be indirectly contributing to the advancement of the social and religious welfare of the sister isle. We sincerely rejoice in the labours of Mr. Doudney, and trust he may long be spared, and be rendered still more signally useful.—Gill's general learning was of the highest order. In the languages, in the writings of the fathers, in ecclesiastical history, in pagan literature, and in Christian theology, his attainments were stupendous. * * His Commentary remains in our opinion, a monument of solid learning, of indefatigable laboriousness, and of fervent piety; a becoming tribute, in short, to that holy volume, the meaning of which it is intended to illustrate.—Primitive Church Magazine.

This herculean task is perfected, and deserves the patronage and support of the whole church of God. * * Dr. Gill's Commentary is well adapted to instruct those who are seeking after truth.—Earthen Vessel, Aug. 1854.

I was resident in Bonmahon from the commencement of the work on the 11th of October, until the 2nd of December following, and had daily proofs of its satisfactory progression. Every care has been taken to render the work worthy of the extensive support which it has already from the Christian public.—H. H., a Correspondent of the Gospel Standard, under date, March 6th, 1852.

We have previously noticed the appearance of the preceding volume of this extraordinary production; we do not merely mean extraordinary in its literature, its piety, its acumen, its industry, and its research; those qualities of the invaluable Commentary of Dr. Gill are generally known; but for the circumstances of its projection, its execution, the excellence of its mechanical workmanship, and its wonderful accuracy.

Those technically acquainted with the many accessories necessary to the well-printing of a voluminous work like the present, containing numerous placita, references, marginal notes, and Latin, Greek, and Hebrew quotations, even in places where competent workmen and all the needful appliances are available, will wonder most that, in a wild village of the Irish sea-shore, by the hands of the village boys, through the energy of a village Curate, such a work should be produced. Each succeeding volume increases our admiration of the perseverance and faithfulness of the Rev. D. A. Doudney, to whose exertions the foundation of the Bonmahon Printing School and this extensive work owe their origin. That the Rev. Gentleman's endeavours to diffuse Gospel light in the moral wilderness in which his lot is cast, and that health and strength may be given him for the labour of love in which he has engaged, must be the wish of all who desire to see enlightenment and faith spread in the dark regions of Romish idolatry and superstition.—Morning Advertiser, July 18, 1853.

On Monday, the 6th of February, a purse of one hundred and fifty sovereigns, and a silver tea-and-coffee service, were presented to the Rev. D. A. Doudney, upon the completion of the printing of Dr. Gill's Commentary on the Holy Scriptures, at the Bonmahon Industrial Printing School, Waterford, Ireland. The whole of these six large volumes were set up and printed by 'raw Irish lads,' who, two years ago, had never seen a printing type.—Gospel Herald, March, 1853.

Price 6s., Royal 8vo., cloth; grained calf, 9s. and Portrait of the Author, uniform with "Dr. Gill's Commentary," (if bound up with Dr. Gill's "Cause of God and Truth," 1 vol., cloth, 10s. 6d.; calf grained, 4s. extra), Dr. Gill's Exposition of the Book of Solomon's Song, commonly called Canticles. Wherein the authority of it is Established and Vindicated against Objections, both Ancient and Modern; several Versions compared with the Original Text; the different senses both of Jewish and Christian Interpreters considered; and the whole opened and explained in proper and useful observations.

* * * This work is considered to be DR. GILL'S master-piece for savour and power.

The work before us is not a portion of his voluminous Exposition of the Old and New Testaments, but an independent publication, comprising the substance of a hundred and twenty-two sermons.—Baptist Magazine.

Among the genuine editions of scarce and precious books now issuing from the Long Lane Theological Book Depot.—Christian Cabinet.

A reprint of a very spiritual Exposition of this divine Song, and what was a very scarce book.—Baptist Messenger.

The Doctor maintains, and, we think, clearly-proves that it is canonical, and of Divine inspiration; they cannot doubt its inspiration to whose hearts the Holy Ghost has applied its glorious and animating declarations concerning Christ and his Church, with sacred power and unction.—Gospel Herald, Aug. 1854.

A neat octavo volume just issued from the Bonmahon Industrial Printing School, and in every way supports the credit of this Institution.—Pot of Manna.

Mr. Doudney has immortalized his name in the best of causes, by republishing the voluminous writings of the learned Gill. He has laid the Church of Christ under lasting obligation by reprinting the works of this able Divine. With prayerful solicitude we have often thought of the tremendous undertaking of the earnest Editor; and can only say, our heart's desire is, that his labours may be crowned with abundant success.—Biblical Messenger, July, 1854.

Mr. Doudney has done the Church of God right good service. His arduous undertaking of publishing the voluminous work of Dr. Gill, at such a low rate as to be within the reach of all, has been, under the divine blessing, crowned with success. None can fully enter into the great difficulties he must have had to contend with, but those who are acquainted with the Press. Had he been surrounded with first-rate talent, still his position would not have been an enviable one; but when we recollect his master mind had to grapple with circumstances (relative to the poor Irish boys who had never seen types or presses) that would have paralysed many a strong nerve; we again repeat, aye and again, that the Church of God is greatly indebted to the untiring energies and perseverance of Mr. Doudney, for a work that cannot fail to prove highly beneficial and truly useful to all the spiritual seed of the house of Jacob. The Exposition of Solomon's Song by the late learned Doctor, in our opinion, ranks pre-eminent among his valuable works.—Lion's Trumpet, Aug. 1854.

We trust that the Publisher will meet with the encouragement which his enterprize deserves.—Primitive Church Magazine.

It is enriched in learned lore, and in the delineations of experimental and practical religion; and, although partaking of the diffuseness and quaintness which characterised the times in which it was written, we envy not the person who could rise from its perusal without having received much spiritual profit. The excellent James Hervey was a great admirer of this work, and in his "Theron and Aspasio," describes it in the following eulogistic terms:—"It has such a copious vein of sanctified invention running through it, and is also interspersed with such a variety of delicate brilliant images, as cannot but highly entertain a curious mind. It presents us also with such rich and charming displays of the glories of Christ's person, the freeness of his grace to sinners, and the tenderness of his love to the church, as cannot but administer the most exquisite delight to the believing soul. Considered in both these views, I think the work resembles the paradisaical garden described by Milton, in which "Blossoms and fruits at once of golden hue Appear'd, with gay enamell'd colours mix'd."

—The Freeman (Religious Newspaper), Aug. 1, 1855.

Price 6s., royal 8vo., cloth; calf grained, 10s. 6d.; with Portrait of the Author, uniform with the "Commentary," (if bound up with Dr. Gill's "Exposition of Solomon's Song," 1 vol., cloth, 10s. 6d.; calf grained, 13s. 6d.), Dr. GILL'S Cause of God and Truth.

"A sterling work, that plucks up by the roots the Arminian heresy."

This work contains the result of a vast amount of study and of learned and laborious investigation, of the writings of the early fathers on the Calvinistic and Arminian controversy, and published originally at a time when the nation was alarmed with the growth of Popery. Its republication at the present is, therefore, most seasonable. The learned Doctor has herein laid the axe at the very root of the tree—Arminianism and Pelgianism—the very life and soul of Popery. This new edition is published marvellously cheap.—Baptist Messenger, July, 1855.

To say the least, none of our Ministers should be without a copy.—Primitive Church Magazine, July, 1855. Its elaborate expositions of debated passages of Scripture, its admirable quotations from the writings of the early fathers, and the force with which evangelical truths are stated and defended, all entitle it to warm commendation.—The London Freeman.

1 vol., 700 pages, large type, cloth, price 3s.; eight copies for 21s.,

Dr. HAWKER'S Morning and Evening Portions, being a Selection of a Verse of Scripture, with short observations, for Every Day in the Year; intended for the use of the Poor in Spirit, who are Rich in Faith, and heirs of the Kingdom.

Precious treasures to the Christian, and will remain so as long as they are printed. We notice this edition to recommend them for their cheapness.—Bucks Chronicle.

The Editor has laid the poor of Christ's flock under great obligations, by furnishing this very neat and useful edition to Subscribers at the low price of half-a-crown.—Gospel Herald.

Calculated to incite to close self-examination, and to lead to an humble and holy walk with God.—Freeman.

* * Order "COLLINGRIDGE'S" edition.

The "Morning and Evening Portions" may be had separately, 1s. 6d. each, cloth.

Dr. HAWKER'S Sermons and Tracts [65 Numbers]. Price 1d. each, 30 sorted (post free) 2s., or 6s. per 100.

- | | | | |
|--|---|---|---|
| 1. The True Gospel | 20. An Essay on the Various Fears to which God's people are Liable. By A. M. Toplady. | 36. Jesus the Eternal Life of his People | 48. A Prop against all Despair |
| 2. Vessels of Mercy | 21. The Doctrine of the Holy Trinity | 37. The Fellowship of the Mystery | 49. The Potter's House |
| 3. The Adopted Child | 22. Jehovah's Pleasure in his People | 38. The Lord's People the Lord's Portion | 50. The Strayed Sheep |
| 4. The Mystery of Iniquity | 23. Watchman, What of the Night? | 39. The Followers of God as dear Children | 51. The Heirs of Promise |
| 5. God's Will and Man's Shall | 24. The Personal Sufferings of Christ for the Salvation of his People | 40. The Faithful God | 52. Abba Father |
| 6. The Knowledge of Salvation by the Remission of Sins, the sure Proof of the Gospel | 25. The Heirs of Promise | 41. The Horror of Great Darkness which fell on Abraham | 53. The Immoveable Kingdom |
| 7. Good News from a far Country | 26. The Last Saturday Night of Time | 42. All Mourners in Zion Comforted by the Lord | 54. The Royal Family |
| 8. My Birth-day | 27, 28, 29. Sacramental Meditations | 43. The Difference of Sickness between the Renewed and the Unrenewed | 55. The Best of Remedies |
| 9. The Children of the Resurrection | 30. The Village Apprentice | 44. The Commemoration of the first Open Display of the Holy Ghost on the Day of Pentecost | 56. On Sanctification |
| 10. The Glory of God | 31. The Child Baptized | 45. The Iniquity of the Land of Israel Removed by the Lord of Hosts in one Day | 57. The Friend that Loveth at all Times |
| 11. Death Abolished, and Life and Immortality brought to Light through the Gospel | 32. Jesus the Resurrection and the Life | 46. Eternal Redemption obtained for the Church in the Entrance of Christ | 58. The Brother Born for Adversity |
| 12. The Cottage Funeral | 33. The Combined View of the Infinite Greatness of Christ | 47. The Lord casting up the Way of his People | 59. The Plant of Renown |
| 13. The Washing of Regeneration | 34. The greatness of Christ's Glory in the Work of Salvation. | | 60. The Mystery of the Kingdom |
| 14. God's Witness | 35. Jesus Touched with the Feeling of our Infirmities | | 61. A Fragment on Grace |
| 15. The Solemn Demand of Christ | | | 62. The Servants of the Most High God known in Showing the Way of Salvation |
| 16. The Traveller | | | 63. The Unsearchable Riches of Christ |
| 17. The Mystery of Godliness | | | 64. The Everlasting Distinction between Nature and Grace |
| 18. Sweet Morsels for Hungry Souls | | | 65. The Child's Catechism on Prayer |
| 19. The Unceasing Warfare | | | |

Price 12s. 6d., royal 8vo., cloth; calf, 5s. extra, unabridged, 1032 pages, new Long Primer type,

A Key to Open Scripture Metaphors. In Four Books. To which are prefixed, Arguments to prove the Divine Authority of the Holy Bible; together with Types of the Old Testament. By the Rev. BENJAMIN KEACH.

The pleasure I have anticipated the last three months in the perusal of the work, has been fully realized; and every time my attention is drawn to it, only enhances its value. I think it needs only to be known, to be generally appreciated by the Clergy. To say the least of it, it is an extraordinary cheap book.—Rev. T. R. Valpy, Hingham.

The book is well worth waiting for, and is published at a very low price.—E. G., Barnstable.

A book without which no Christian Minister's Library can be complete, and which may be very useful to every attentive reader and lover of the Word of God.—De oetlogan.

I know not of any work that has treated the subject to such an ample extent.—Gibbons.

A work of great labour and learning; abounds with the most interesting truths.—Benjamin Francis.

* * This invaluable work for Ministers and Bible Students had become so scarce, that a copy could seldom be bought under £3.

Price 2s., cloth, calf grained, 4s. 6d., uniform in size with "Hawker's Portions,"

AMBROSE SERLE'S Church of God: Essays upon some descriptive Names and Titles, given in the Scriptures, by God the Holy Ghost, to the General Assembly of all True Believers in God the Son, or the God-man Jesus Christ; and denoting the Nature and Means of their Salvation, through the Everlasting Covenant made, by God the Father, with those Divine Persons in the One Jehovah. To which is added, CHRISTIAN HUSBANDRY; or, a Companion for the Christian in his Field or Garden.

It must recommend itself to every spiritual reader by its own sweet, savoury spirit, and the mellow gospel tone of its voice.—Royal Diadem.

In purchasing, our readers will help forward a great philanthropic work.—Bucks Chronicle.

A truly precious wedge of Ophir's gold.—The Little Gleaner.

The Church of God is here contemplated under nearly forty different Scripture characters or descriptions, and the various illustrations are generally interesting, instructive, and profitable. The second part of this volume, respecting the seasons, is also well worthy of an attentive perusal.—Gospel Herald, July, 1855.

Another reprint of some sterling divinity, executed by the Irish lads. We rejoice in the success which has already attended the foundation of this excellent School, and trust that it may long be continued in existence, and that it may be the means of training up many Irish lads to habits of industry and application. The work before us is full of the very marrow of the gospel, and indicate that their author was a man full of faith and the Holy Ghost. It is written in an earnest and pious strain, and would form an excellent companion for the closet. As to the style in which the work is executed, we can speak with the highest satisfaction. The printing is clear and distinct. It is a credit to the lads who printed it.—Primitive Church Magazine, July, 1855.

It is full of "grace and truth."—Baptist Messenger.

The present volume is a beautiful description of the Church of God from the first moment of her generation till safely housed in glory. The author commences by expounding on the signification of the word "Church," dwells on the ceremonials of the Jewish Tabernacle and Temple, and at last launches forth with great sublimity, on the various characteristics of the regenerated family of God, not leaving them till he bids them farewell in their ultimate glorification. Part II, under the title of "Christian Husbandry," is a comparison of the various seasons of the year with Christian experience. It is well printed; and Mr. Doudney deserves great commendations for his laudable efforts in bringing out some of the choicest works ever penned by Christian writers, and, by the low prices charged, placing them within the reach of those whose means forbade their purchase in their original forms.—Zion's Trumpet.

Pocket Companions. By "ALFRED" [REV. D. A. DOUDNEY], 1s. 6d. each: HEART-BREATHINGS.—MUSINGS.—SONGS IN THE DESERT; OR, BIBLE
GLEANINGS.—HEART-SIGHS AND HEART-SONGS.
THE GOSPEL PREACHED TO BABES. Price 1s., with nearly 50 Wood-cuts.
CONVERSATIONS BY THE WAY. Price 9d., cloth.

Established in the year 1766. Published on the 1st of every month, 6s. a year, Stamped, and issued direct from the Bonmahon Printing School, Co. Waterford,

The Gospel Magazine and Protestant Beacon.

EDITED FROM JUNE, 1840, BY THE REV. DAVID A. DOUDNEY.

 Back Numbers and scarce Volumes may always be had. A New Series commenced January 1, 1855.

In 1d. Nos. (each containing one Lecture), and Monthly Parts, containing Five Lectures, 3d., Or Two Copies, Post-free, for 6d., the GOSPEL COTTAGE LECTURER, addressed to the Spiritually Poor.

By the Rev. GEORGE D. DOUDNEY, Incumbent of Charles Chapel, Plymouth.

The Broken Heart. By the "Gospel Cottage Lecturer." 1s. 6d. cloth.

Noon-Day Meditations; being Reflections on a Portion of Scripture for every Day in the Year. By ELIZABETH SEARLE. 2s. 6d., cloth.

The Pathway of Providence; or, the Recollections of my Pilgrimage. By the same. Price in limp cloth, with Steel Portrait, 1s. Post-free.

Free Grace, as exhibited in several Tracts: "Nothing to Pay," "Fruits & Effects," "Causes & Effects," "Triumph of Truth," "Prayer & its Answer," &c. 6d.

A Little Book for a Little Child. By the Author of "A Page for a Child." Price 3d., or Five for 1s., post-free.

Just Published, (being a Reprint from an old Divine), price 1s. 6d., Post-free,

A Treatise Concerning the Lord's Supper. By THOMAS DOOLITTLE.

Gospel Tracts, of a Scriptural and Spiritual character (200 sorts).

Price 1d. each, or 6s. per 100,

A Gracious God and a Glorious Gospel.

Talk under the Hedge about the Blessed Bible.

Wisdom without Learning.

A Plea for Parents in Particular. Nothing to Pay (7th thousand.)

Fruits and Effects; being an Addenda to "Nothing to Pay."

A Page for a Child.

The Dying Pensioner; or Jesus Speaking Peace.

Old Jonathan at School. A Narrative of Facts.

An Essay on the Various Fears to which God's People are Liable, By the Rev. A. M. TOPLADY.

Price One Halfpenny each, or 3s. per 100; post free, 3s. 6d.

A King's Son Set to Mend Shoes. Do you know the Road? Tears of Joy. Prayer and its Answer.

Causes and Effects.

The Triumph of Truth.

Musings

Head versus Heart.

Who is Right?

Recollections of a Young Disciple.

The Contents of the Bible, by William Huntington, S.S.

HAWKER'S (Dr.) COMMENTARY ON THE NEW TESTAMENT, 4to., cloth, 12s. (published at 30s.) LUTHER'S HYMNS OF THE REFORMATION; with LIFE; 1s., neat cloth (published at 2s. 6d.) Hart's Hymns, complete, 6d. and 1s. cloth gilt. Luther's Table Talk, 1 vol. Cloth, 3s. 6d.

Works by AUGUSTUS TOPLADY, at one third of the Original Prices, Post Free.

Doctrine of Absolute Predestination, 1s. 6d.

Sermons and Essays, 3s. 6d.

Select Works, 3s. 6d.

The Liturgy of the Church of England Explained and Vindicated, 4d.

Memoir, 1s.

Caveat against Unsound

Doctrines, 6d.

Historic Proof, or a Concise

Martyrology, 7s. 6d., 2

vols. Jesus seen of Angels,

God's Mindfulness, 6d.

The Doctrines of the Church of England proved to be the Doctrines of Christ,

6d.

Joy in Heaven over one

Repenting Sinner, 6d.

Orders from this List sent FREE BY POST, to any part of the Kingdom, Catalogues gratis, free for a Stamp. W. H. Collingridge, City Press, Long Lane, London; or, the Industrial Printing School, Bonmahon Co. Waterford.

UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

17 341 163

21883

SWIFT LIBRARY

BS 537
.K25

UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

17 341 163