

---

This is a reproduction of a library book that was digitized by Google as part of an ongoing effort to preserve the information in books and make it universally accessible.

Google™ books

<https://books.google.com>

312a/1
H. P.

1877

The Pourtraiture of M<sup>r</sup>. Joseph Symonds Late Vice Provost of Eaton Colledge Etat Sue 50.

SIGHT
AND FAITH, OR Meditations
UPON
2 Cor. 5. 7.

---

BY
Joseph Symonds, C. E. S.

---

LONDON, Printed by J. Macock, for Luke Fawne, and are to be sold at his shop at the sign of the Parrot in Pauls Church-yard. 1651.

---

Do not we day-day see before our eyes
The Rich & poor & simple and & wife
& learned & docters and the greatest judges & lustful gallant with & painfull druggs
Each one thogs sinfully things he takes they pain
Feel death thons waiting with his furious death
Then happy is he & his love & life of peace
That in Heaven he may have a dwelling place

TO HIS EXCELLENCY
The Lord General
Cromwel, &c.

MY LORD,

AS the motion of the body is maintained
by the spirits, and
the spirits by breathing; so the motion of the Soul is by the affections, and affections from thinking: And these have a reciprocal influence upon each other;
thoughts beget affections,

The Epistle

and they beget thoughts, and both multiply by motion. I often think of the communion of the spirits of men which certainly is more than many are acquainted with. Though we act one upon another in our present state by the help of sense, yet we are wrought and designed to a more excellent way. Angels, and the spirits of just men made perfect, converse and trade in a mutual communication not without sense, but without such sense as ours. This,
as

Dedicatory.

1

as eternal life begins here, is found in some degrees in this mortal state, though not in so visible appearances as to lie open to much observation. Angels good and bad do act upon our spirits, and our spirits hold converse with them, and with the Father of spirits, which may be discerned in secret parties, and discourses betwixt them and us. Much of this appears in Davids Psalms. And there passeth not onely an inward speech, but there are invisible

The Epistle

sible approaches, entertainments, and touches, which Paul found when bound in the spirit, and under the working of God, which wrought in him mightily, Col. 1. 29. It is also most certain that our Souls are not mute, and shut out from all mutual traffique with each other, except what they have by the mediation of our senses. Instances are found, that as they say of two Needles touched with the Loadstone, the spirit of one at a distance

*stance hath found it self affected with the motion and use of another: And this we are all sensible of, that there is a strong desire in us
 for communion of spirits,
 and that because the way most ready and convenient to our bodily state is by sense, we are carryed with much inclination to maintain intercourse of our minds and spirits by sense; but as being made to a better way,
 our Souls are not satisfied with this present way, as being, both painful and A short*

The Epistle

---

short. We cannot give an exact Copy of our apprehensions, desires, designs, delights, and other affections, by those two great mediators of communion, the Eye and the Ear. But because we are in so great a measure confined to this course, our Souls, as it were, stand in these two gates, to send and receive mutual embassies each from other. Which way, as it is short in it self, so it is much shortened by distances, disaffections, impotencies, and dispa-

disparities. From the last of these my minde hath often taken its rise of judging greatness usually to be not an ascent, but a descent,
and some removal from the true Happiness of men :
for it separates from persons lower, which commonly are best ; as rocks stand often aloft, but mynes are placed low. I know that greatness and happiness
may well agree, for he that is greatest is best, David,
a man after Gods own heart, was great ; but his

A 2 great-

---

The Epistle

greatness did not carry him into a recluse from all, but as he was in his throne as a King, so could condescend to men of low degree: I am a companion of all those that fear thee, and keep thy Commandments, Psalm 119. And In the Saints on Earth and the excellent is all my delight, Psal. 16. 3. And had I not known you of such a mold, for which now you are honored and loved highly of the Saints, I should not have yeelded to the impulse

Dedicatory.

pulse of my spirit to communicate these thoughts to you. But blessed be God who hath kept you in the way of communion of Saints, for this is more true honor and advantage then to command Armies, yea the World: Saints have a door in heaven, and a door on earth, at which they are allowed entrance: They keep also open doors to Christ, and to all his. That which moved me to present this to Your Excellency, was not because you are in

A 3 Power

The Epistle

Power, but because you are in Christ, and I found myself under the attractive force of Christ dwelling and appearing in you

But if it be asked why I offer this little book, my answer is, It was not because I did esteem it as mine (for I know how poor I am) but because it is a Collection of Meditations given in upon Prayer, and in a time of straits. I know the harmony of these things to your spirit, and do hope that in your day of hardships they

Dedicatory.

*hey may be, as they were to ne, a refreshment, and that much more abundant : And do beseech God, as he hath breathed upon some former poor Papers of mine to the good of many, so that even these also may be a blessing unto many. I know I am among the lean of the Flock,
but the unspeakable bonds
of Christ upon me, with the entreaties of divers, have provoked me, and the rather, because I feel the shadows of the Evening upon me. In my spirit I serve the*

A 4 Lord

The Epistle

Lord Jesus and his Saints, but my hand is short. I humbly reach this to you, as a matter of thoughts to receive a farther perfection in your minde, then it could in mine; That from thence may flow forth yet more of the Spirit of holiness and heavenly-mindedness upon you, that you may be strong in the Lord, and the power of his might: For these do more in Soldiers then weapons of the flesh. Glorious appearances of God in the hearts and ways of men are

a

Dedicatory.

a dread to the World: We have had strange experiences of this. My Lord, I am not very brief; for I know that your goodness doth relish well a Christian Diversion from whurries of action, which though duties, yet are rather as ways for travel, then pastures to feed in. It is very hard not to lose even in doing good; where, though the end be good, the matter of it holds not a neer affinity with our spiritual state. But as David was kept alive by frequent visits of the

The Epistle

the Spirit, which drew him off from his encumbering affairs; so I am perswaded you sweeten your great employments with holy retirements, and finde Christ by his Spirit present with yours, and others sent by him often to envite you into his bosom.

Among them I have interposed, not by an humane impulse, but by an higher force, which hath overruled me against my own propensity: For indeed I love not the shadow of flesh-ly

Dedicatory.

ly Courtship, and my meanness in my person and abilities did rise up against me: I suffered a real contest about the matter. But now though my cross pleas have had a full hearing, and are owned as true, yet other arguments have overcome. And I am enabled to hope that this little thing shall be clothed with power, and go forth with the blessing of the Almighty.

But I must bound my self, who by affection could easily overflow my banks.

My

| The Epistle

My Lord, You are in Service for Christ and his people, and they are with you: I cannot say all; for the flock of Christ is divided; some sheep are sadly hurried by the unquiet spirit, and they drive untowardly. Their anger will be their own hurt, not yours; and for this I have both grief and joy. They are sheep, therefore let them be loved for the Shepherds sake, at least, whose they are. Some having an evil design, which is well known, would use

Dedicatory.

use the distemper and un-
quietness of these, as a cloke,
to hide what, in the spirit of Meekness and Love to Christ, I call acting against Christ, and opening a gap
to confusion, darkness, and profaneness. We bear these men as our burthen and grievance before the Lord.
And I most humbly beseech
you to set your self against such practices, as to Your great Honor, and our great rejoycing, you have done :
I will say no more of this here, having expressed some-

| The Epistle, &c.

*Something of them in the close of this Book. Nor will I adventure to add more but this, that You are in our hearts and prayers;
and our hopes are for You,
in You, and above You, and the rest of those precious ones under Your Command;
and that I (which adds nothing to Your Excellency,
yet is my Duty to be) am,*

My Lord,

Your Excellencies most humble and true Servant,

JOSEPH SYMONDS.

The Contents.

- CAP. I. Pauls Sighs for Sight. Pag. 1
- Cap. 2. Of the Sight of the Glorified Eye in Heaven. Heaven hath delights for Eyes, a Sense most extensive, affective: Eye glorified, in a glorified Body, acted by a glorified Spirit. 9
- Cap. 3. Glorious Objects of a glorified Eye. Heaven, Saints, of neer relation, in Happiness, all together. Christ, our Friend, universal, best, always present. 23
- Cap. 4. Sight of a glorified Minde. Mental Vision excelling Ocular. Nobler faculty, reacheth farther. Imperfection of knowledg, it is by relation, the faculty indisposed. 55
- Cap. 5. Enjoyment of Objects of Sight. Enjoyment an act of Life, Understanding, and it is the Souls Rest. Enjoyment lieth in three things. 73
- Cap. 6. Sight and Enjoyment of future Blessedness is the portion of them that have the Image of God. This gives title and Grounds of Hope, Sympathy, Similitude, Indigency, Expectation. It gives also power of accepting, conveniency, understanding; power of enjoying, a disposition

The Contents.

- sition to live in, and to subject to God. 109
- Cap. 7. Pauls desire to be with Christ, is transcendent to the common pitch of Believers, yet our pattern. Paul exceeded in sundry things. Divers arguments that Faith is not Assurance. 119
- Cap. 8. All Saints desire to see and enjoy Christ, and the glory prepared; by efficacy of God Love, Principles implanted. 137
- Cap. 9. Unbelievers cannot desire to see God and Christ: they have lost Sight, Similitude, Love. 145
- Cap. 10. Saints desire, yet loth to go hence. Lothness noble, ignoble, not to desire to be with Christ, a sin against Nature, Gospel. Desires are discoveries of temper, and. 161
- Cap. 11. Kissions and Enjoyments of Faith. 192
- Cap. 12. Office and Operation of Faith. 210
- Cap. 13. All Faith always, and to the utmost: Its excellency; spiritual, sweet, doth strange things, hath an universal and effectual influence into Holiness. 215
- Cap. 14. Saints Estate sure and great. Live by Faith always, onely, to the full. Faith hath its Sights, Degrees in Heaven. 241
- Cap. 15. A Christian Plea for Scriptures and Ordinances. 321

2 COR.

2 COR. 5. 7.

For we walk by Faith, not by Sight.

---

CHAP. I.

Pauls Sights on Earth for Sight in Heaven.

Here are the two great things of a Christian, Sight and Faith. This word Sight is diversly rendered; Some render it Per Speciem, by Shew or Appearance, in opposition to Sincerity, Truth, and B Reality

Reality ; but that is too heterogenious to the Apostles scope. The Fathers, divers of them, if not all, and many others, render the word by appearance, or form of the thing hoped for. Our latter Divines, as Calvin, Beza, Piscator, and others, render the word, by Sight, per aspectum, by beholding, or looking on: so our Translation renders it, so the Belgick Bible renders it, and so the French by Deodat, and so the Syriac. This is sure, that however there may seem a difference in the Translations of several Times and Places, yet they all meet in one sence ; for they that render it by [appearance] do render the force of it thus ; We are conversant by Faith, and not in the things themselves. Ambrose gives it thus ; We are with Christ by Faith, not in presence ; and this is the true and proper meaning of the words, and suits exactly with the Apostles scope ; who had said in the words before the Text, We are absent from the Lord. And the Reason of this speech in the Text, We walk walk not by Sight, is to shew wherefore he was so dissatisfied with his present state, that he so groaned, and so strongly desired to be changed, and to be possessed of that state, which he beleev'd and hoped for; because, saith he, We walk not by Sight.

And this word Sight, although in some Scriptures it's rendered in another sence, yet in John 5. 37. you shall finde it used in a like sence to what we now speak of, for the appearance of the thing it self; You have not seen his shape. So then this is the meaning of the word, We walk not by Sight, that is, not in beholding, not in the presence, not in the enjoyment of that which we beleve, and which we shall one day have, according to the Promise.

Ours is not a visible.

The words you see then hold forth to us the two great Springs of a Christians Life, Faith, and Sight; Faith on Earth, and Sight in Heaven. The Apostle takes no notice of other things; these two alone he reckons to be these two Pillars, the onely Pillars of the Peace, Refreshing, and Comfort of the Saints. See how he overlooks the World. We walk not by Sight, saith he; surely he saw the World, and the glory of the World; but we walk not by this: Indeed he was not much possessed of it, and yet he had much of the Comforts of this Life in despite of the World; but had this World been to him, as 'tis said of the Mount of God, that in it is no Serpent, nor devouring beast, yea had he been in Paradise, and had this Promise which now he had, he would have said still, we walk by Faith, not by Sight.

It's a holy Complaint which the Apostle breathes in these words; He was comforted indeed by Faith, but not satisfied; satisfied in point of Security, but not in his Desire: Here we are (saith he) absent from the Lord; We walk by Faith, not by Sight; He means not onely, That the things he look'd for were not seen by him, as he speaks 2 Cor. 4. 17. we look on the things that are not seen. But when he saith saith, we walk not by Sight, he means, That these things fall not under any sense, or apprehension of ours. It's an old Rule, That the Sight comprehends all the Senses, both the internal and external Senses: So that the Apostle, when he saith, We walk by Faith, not by Sight, he looks upon himself, as one from home.

*In sepe Vi-sus Sensus
complecti-
tur omnes.*

A Prince in a strange Land sits down sadly, complaining because he hath not the Sight of his Father, yet mingles his Tears with Hopes, and is comforted that he hears from him, and receives some Tokens of Love from him; and this joy, though it be not able to fill him, yet keeps Life in him, and upholds him that he sinks not; but yet he longs, and thinks every day a year, till he be at home, in his Fathers Arms, and sit down on his Fathers Throne, crown'd with his Fathers Honor and Glory. So Paul, while he was in the World, had his eye upon Christ, as far as he could reach him; and when he could not pierce the Heavens, he sits down and mourns, O, I cannot see my Lord and Saviour, I would fain behold him; I am a Stranger on Earth, a Pilgrim in this World; I am not where I would be: Comforted he was by the Promise (which should bring forth at last) but yet waiting; and there is pain in Hope, as well as pleasure. And if you observe the Text, there be divers things that add weight to the Apostles Complaint, to the sadness of his Spirit, and to the sharpness of his Desire and Longing.

One is this, That he was absent from that which he most desired; but deed, he was very much taken (not with the World, but) with his Work in the World, and with what he had from the Lord; while he was in his Work; but yet it's best for me (saith he) to be with him; I had rather be at home, if I might be my own Carver.

I have an House above, but I am not in it. Never did man long so much to be at home, in the enjoyment of

of an House fitted and filled for him, as Paul did. This was an House above, an House in Heaven, not made with hands, whose Builder and Maker God is; and he knew that this House was like the Builder; that it was raised and made out of the greatest Wisdom and highest Love; and an House, to shew the Honor, and Riches, and Glory of him that made it; and was a House likewise Eternal: We have a House above, not made with hands, eternal in the Heavens.

Again, He was absent from that, which was very sure to him, as sure as God could make it; for we walk by Faith, saith the Apostle; Nothing is surer then what we hold by Faith, nor Possession it self; for the one hath been lost, the other cannot. The Title a Man hath by Faith is Everlasting.

And he adds farther, that this his absence was not for a little time, but for his whole course, as long as his life should last. A Prince may be content to be from home, upon some present service, but he would be loth to be from a tender Father, and from the enjoyment of the Honors and Pleasures of his Court, all his days.

And he adds likewise, That while he was in this waiting state, he was in no satisfying condition; He looked for a House, but where was he in the mean time? he saith, in a Tabernacle; the word imports a Booth made of a few boughs and leaves, or such poor materials, a sorry Habitation, a very poor Covert, that exposeth a man to many inconveniences: Therefore Paul, though his Hope were in Heaven, and he had pitch'd his Anchor within the Veil; yet because he was not there too, though he walk'd by Faith, yet because he had not the Sight of things, he was not at Rest. So that the words thus being opened, you may plainly see these two things that they hold forth to us:

1. That those that believe, shall have the Sight of the things they do believe, though now they have it not.

2. They

Explain.

2. They that walk by Faith, cannot be quiet, till they be in the Sight and Possession of those things. Faith begets Longing after Seeing and Enjoying.

They that beleve shall have Sight of what is layd up for them in the Promise; that Life which is hid with Christ in God shall be brought forth in open view.

CHAP. II.

Of the sight of the Glorified Eye in Heaven.

Sight in Scripture is taken in a double sence:

Properly and Improperly.

Properly, it's taken for the apprehension which a man hath of a thing by the internal or external Senses.

Improperly, it's taken for the enjoyment of the thing it self, as we shall see in time.

Sight

Sight taken properly is Ocular, or Mental. First, of Ocular Vision; there is a great deal in that also, which the Apostle was much taken with, and which every man, that hath had some glimpses and tastes of, cannot but be taken with. Heaven to the Saints is not merely a place of Contemplation and Mental Speculation, but there are Sights also which their Eyes shall have; Wherefore else shall there be a restoring of the Eye from the state of Death? This is sure, That as in Hell a great part of the misery and punishment of men, cast off from God, is conveyed by the Eye; So a great part of the Life of the Saints in the World to come, comes in that way.

That heavenly and glorified state alters indeed the objects of Life, but doth not destroy the natural way of Life; it doth not remove, but perfect it. God intends as well the good of our Bodies, as of our Souls: the Bodies of the Saints are chosen of God, are redeemed of God, are sanctified of

of God, as well as their Spirits; and therefore there is a Blessedness allotted the Body of the Saints, not only by way of sympathy with the Soul, nor only by way of subserviency under the happy reignement of the Soul in glory; but the Body shall have its proper lot and portion, as the Soul hath hers; that as the Spirits of men shall be fed chiefly by things of a spiritual nature, and invisible; so the Eyes of men shall feed themselves upon things visible, which God hath there prepared. And indeed the Life of the outward man comes in chiefly by Sense; and among the Senses none conveys so much as Sight; Sight is the most noble and most excellent Sense, for it's both more Extensive and more Effective than the rest. It's more Extensive, for it takes in more than other Senses do; other Senses are more confined, they have a narrower compass to move in, as the Ear hath only to do with Sounds; but the Eye derives refreshment and delight to men by many things which do do offer themselves to it, not onely by the Colours of things, but their Figures, Motions, Quantities, &c. Other Senses are sooner filled, but the Eye and Ear is never satisfied, as Solomon speaks in Eccles. 1. 8. Prov. 27. Hell and destruction are not filled, no more is the Eye satisfied with Seeing. Other Senses have their fix'd stations and places; the Eye hath the most compass of any, it can move it self to and fro, to take in more then other Senses; You see how with the turning of your Eye you can fetch in the whole compass of the Hemisphere round about you, and that in an instant: The reason and end of this discourse is, That God having provided a Life for the outward as well as for the inward Man, therefore the Eye must have its place, as being the chief conveyance of Life to the outward Man.

Again, it's the most affective Sense; no Sense runs quicker and stronger into the spirits of men then Sight doth, whether it be of things good good or evil. Mine Eye, saith the Church in her sad condition, both afflicted mine Heart. And it's made a very great aggravation of the misery of a wicked man; Job 21. 20. That his Eyes shall see his destruction: Destruction shall not onely come upon him, but it shall come upon him in his sight. They shall be mad, saith Moses, Dent. 28. 34. for the sight of their Eyes. And we know it was a great favor shewed to Josiah, 2 Chro. 34. 28. Behold, saith God, I will gather thee to thy Fathers, and I will gather thee to thy grave in peace; and thine Eyes shall not see all the Evil that I will bring upon this place.

Evil in the Eye is very piercing, so good things that strike upon the Eye affect very deeply; therefore Jacob, when he heard of Josephs being alive, though he beleaved it, yet could not be satisfied with bearing it; but, saith he, I'll go and see him before I dye. And likewise when he did see him, see how he was taken; And Israel said to Joseph, Now let me dye, since I have

Lam. 3. 51
עַל לֵב
לְנֶפֶשׁ
Causa fuit.
Pagn. De-
love affect.
Ar. Mont.

עֵינַי Obstufes-
cit. Mont.

Gen. 45.
48.

Gen. 46. 30

have seen thy face, because thou art yet alive. And old Simeon, when he saw Christ, breaks out, Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, for mine Eyes have seen thy Salvation. The sight of the Eyes, saith the wise man, is better then the wandering of the desire. And saith Christ to his Disciples, Blessed are your Eyes, for they see those things, which many Prophets and righteous men have desired to see, and have not seen them. And the Evangelist Luke adds, Many Kings have desired to see, in the tenth Chapter of his Gospel. Therefore I say, there will come in a great part of our Life by Sight, because Sight is so affective, and Comprehensive. The Levelness and Happiness of this Ocular Vision, which they that believe shall have in the other World, may more fully appear :

1. By considering of that state in which men shall see those things that shall be there presented to them.
2. By considering of the things them-

Sight of a Glorified Eye. | 81

themselves which they shall behold.

In both respects the Apostle was exceedingly taken, and those of his time: You see he sighs and groans to have a Sight of the things that are there to be seen; he had them in the Promise, and that doth not satisfy him, but he longs to see the things themselves; and not onely so, but he prefers that Sight before Faith, for he speaks here complaining and mourning, we walk by Faith, not by Sight; as if he should say, This is our Unhappiness, that we walk not by Sight, though it's some peece of Happiness to us, that we walk by Faith. And surely they in those times had seen very excellent Sights; they had seen the Creation of God, they had seen the glory of Providential Transactions in many Particulars, they had seen the glory of the Temple, they had seen the effusion of the Spirit of God upon his People; they had seen the Conversion of many to the Faith; Some had seen Christ in his Person, Con-

Converlation, Doctrine, and Miracles, Transfiguration, Death, Resurrection, and Ascension; and yet they reckoned not upon all these, in comparison of that sight, which they looked for.

But according to what I have propounded, let me shew you what an excellent Sight that will be: And first by the Consideration of the state of men at that time, when they shall have those Sights.

In the first place; The Eye of many, that Faculty by which he shall see, shall be glorified: Glorification adds a singular Excellency to the Faculties. Sanctification doth not change the Faculties in themselves, but orders them in their Motions and Actions; it neither makes the Ear more quick in Hearing, nor the Eye more quick in Seeing; onely it puts the Senses under a due government towards their last end; but Glorification advanceth the Faculties, and raiseth them to a higher pitch of Excellency; so that a Glorified Eye is as different from the Eyes

Eyes we have here in this World, as the Sun in its brightest glory is different from what it is, when under a dark Cloud, and much more; Glorification adds a great capacity to the Eye: In the state of Glory there dwells a fulneſſ of Light and Perfection. Now you know Sight in the World is a most pleasant thing, and the more clear the Eye is, the more excellent is the Sight. A man of a clear Sight sees more things, and more of every thing, then a dark Sight doth: so a glorified Eye sees more of things, then our Eyes now can see: And we have reason to think, that more things are visible to a glorified Eye, then to our Eyes here. As the Understanding, when it is glorified, will receive things then, which now it is not capable of, and cannot receive; so the Eye in its Sphere shall be enlarged to take in Objects, which now it cannot receive.

Neither is this all the Excellency of a glorified Eye, but it shall receive also ſtrength, by which it may be

C

*Excellens Objectum
destruit
Sensum.*

be able to live upon its Objects. In this state here, wherein we are mingled with so much darkness and weakness, every Sense we have is apt to be destroyed by excellent Objects; and the more excellent and transcendent the Object is, the more it hurts and destroys the Sense; as we see the Sun by its brightness darkens the Eye; and so mighty sounds bring deafness upon the Ear. Paul had indeed a Vision of Glory, but because his Faculties were not glorified, he was he did not know how, whether in the Body, or out of the Body, whether alive or dead, he did not know: Certainly the Sight of the Glory of the other World would amaze, distract, and destroy us, if we had a sight of it as we now are. But Glorification adds strength to the Faculties, both to the internal and external; so that the Eye shall be able to look on those Glories, not with difficulty, but with contentment; That as the Eye in this natural infirm state hath great pleasure in beholding moderate Light; so

so it shall then have great pleasure in beholding the brightest Light, because it shall be advanced to the highest pitch of strength. The Apostle takes notice of this, 1 Cor. 15. 43. The Body is sown in weakness, but shall be raised in power: our state here is a state of weakness, not onely our state of Death, but of Life it self; but when we come to be raised again in Power, we shall be so strengthened, that we shall be able to grapple with mighty things.

• And in the next place; As the Eye shall be glorified, so it shall act in a glorified Body, which will make the sight of these things more glorious and excellent; as among other respects, so in this, That the things which we shall look on in the other World, shall leave more sweet, enlivening, and powerful Impressions upon our Nature, then those things would do, if now we looked upon them: For there the impediments, that hinder the conveyance of divine Influences from those heavenly Objects

jects, are removed. To illustrate it, Let the most excellent Sight be set before a man that is defective in his bodily state, and it doth not take him; What should a sick man do with such things? He makes nothing of the most pleasant Gardens, nor of the most glorious Sights that are. When he is sick, they are but sick things to him, and of none effect. But in Heaven the Body shall be glorified, and strip'd of all Corruptions and Imperfections, that there shall be no bar unto the Influences of those things, which are there to be seen.

And again, As the Body when 'tis glorified shall have these bars removed, so it shall have an enlargement of a receptive Power. We see old men, and children, though in the best state of health for their time, yet do not receive that from things seen, which Nature in her vigor doth. Mark what Barzillai saith, I am this day eighty years old; and can thy servant discern good or evil? or taste what I eat, & what I drink? or hear any more the voice of singing singing men and singing women ? &c.

2 Sam. 19
35

There is not that delight and content from things seen, or any Object of the other Senses whatsoever, where the Body is straitened in its natural Power, which in Heaven shall be enlarged.

As there shall be a glorified Eye acting in a glorified Body, so it shall be acted by a glorified spirit; The Eye is but the Organ or Instrument of Sight, and without the spirit would convey no more then a glass doth; it is the spirit of man that gives Life to Vision.

Things appear to be what they are by the inward Light which is in a mans minde; this is the Interpreter of all Vision, this is that which discovers things, and sets them forth in their worth, in their vertues, and ends, in our propriety in them, without which the Sight of things were but dark. Now in Heaven the spirits of men shall be glorified, and so enabled to perform all these Offices in Perfection; so that when a man shall look on the Man Christ Jesus, by vertue of a glorified spirit, he shall see more, know more, and taste more, then another can. As a man of understanding, when he looks on a Diamond, or a wedg of Gold, hath other apprehensions of it, and a further touch upon his spirit, then a beast hath, or a childe in the Cradle: So where the Sight of the Eye is aided by a glorified minde, it takes in more from the sight of every thing which is to be seen (unexpressibly more) then what can be done here by the most sanctified spirit in the World.

And it will add very much likewise, That a spirit in glory is filled with Love; and a heart filled with Love, when it sees what it loves, how is it taken? Thus then the Sight which we shall have in that other World is very excellent, and conduceth much to our Blessedness, if you consider the state in which the Saints shall be there.

CHAP.

• CHAP. III.

The Glorious Objects of a Glorified Eye in Heaven.

SECondly, Consider the things that are to be seen there; it may be I shall not tell you all, nay no man can: I am sure there are these three things at least, which they that get to Heaven shall see.

1. They shall see Heaven it self, their Fathers House, and their Habitation; A blessed Sight it must needs be, to behold the place where God dwells, the place which he hath designed for the most glorious and everlasting manifestations of himself.

David was very much taken with the Sight of the glory of this world; see how he wonders at it, and at God by reason of it: How excellent is thy Name, O Lord? How glorious are thy

Psal. 8.

C 4      works?

Plal. 84

works? But this World is nothing to that other World; This World is made for a common Inn, where all sorts of Mankind come; but Heaven is the Palace of the great King, a place provided for Friends, where none but chosen ones, and called ones, have admittance. And if David were so taken with something that was higher then the meer Fabrick of this World, the Tabernacles of God, How amiable are thy Tabernacles, O Lord God of Hosts? How much more glorious must Heaven it self be? The Kingdom of Grace, in this World, is but the Portal and entrance into the celestial Temple, that glorious Structure, that blessed place. Every place is excellent, according to the things wherewith it is furnished in this World; There be many things indeed, but they are all narrow pipes, by which God conveys himself to us, and therefore they are so many. We receive a little by the Sun, and a little by the Stars, and a little by the Moon, and a little by other Crea- tures :

tures : And God hath provided these small Conveyances, because he intended but little for man here. But now what shall Heaven be ? and what shall those Conveyances be, by which God intends to communicate the fulness of his Glory and Love ?

Places are so much the more delightful, as they are suitable. Egypt was a good place for some, but a bad place for the Israelites, they groaned in it. The world here is a good place for most men, but bad for some that have seen into the other World ; they sigh and groan to be there. Now there will be a perfect harmony and agreement between the Desires of the Chosen of God, and that place and state, in which they shall be set ; the place is fitted for them, and they shall be fitted for the place : So that as Creatures, formed and fitted to live in their proper Element, are there wholly satisfied ; so the Saints, who are wrought for this very thing, as in Vers. 5. of this Chapter, shall be fully satisfied in the beholding of that state.

And

And this adds to the sight of that place and palace, the propriety that they have to it, which are in it. Strangers, when they look on Princely Palaces, or Lordly Mansions, are taken with them; but the Heirs of these are more taken with them by far. To see things of worth, is but a cold sight, in comparison of seeing things of worth, and mine too: To see Heaven a glorious place, and my place, this makes it a blessed Vision indeed. Here is an emphasis upon the Apostles Expression, We have a House above; it is our House, and therefore we sigh and groan: That's one thing which the Saints shall see in the other World; they shall see Heaven, a House whose Builder and Maker is God, a City that hath foundations, and their own top.

A second Sight they shall see in the other World, in Heaven, is this, As they shall see the House, so they shall see the Heirs and Inhabitants of the House, the chosen of God made perfect, and this will be an excellent Sight.

Sight, I'll but put these three Considerations briefly to you, to shew, That it is a most excellent thing to behold the Saints in Heaven.

First, We are all taken with the sight of those that are near to us, those whom we love; how is the Mother taken with the sight of her Childe! and the Childe with the sight of his Father? Now in Heaven we shall meet with all, Brethren and Sisters, all Friends, neerer then the nearest relations here below; And Friends that are most amiable, and so most delightful, being filled with the Image of Jesus Christ and their Father; Friends that are most loving, in whom Love is perfect, to all compleatness, and all consistency; not subject to those clouds and interruptions that Love is here below: Friends of Gods making, and made on purpose to add Solace, and Comfort, and Refreshing to us in that Kingdom; Persons picked and chosen out of the World from Eternity, by the Eye of God in his Counsel; and fitted of God, that so we

we might live in them,, as Friends filled with the best love, such love as God bears to his people.

Our Love in this World is a muddy mingled Love, wherein there is much bitterness, but that Love is all sweetness; So that as we say of our Knowledge here, in comparison of that Knowledge we shall have, it is but Darkness; So our Love here is but unlovingness, in comparison of that Love which shall be in the Saints in Heaven.

Nor are they only ours, but Christs Friends; and surely the Sight of them that are the Friends of Christ will be very sweet: That's one Consideration, That those whom we shall see there are Friends.

Another is this: It will be a Sight of our Friends in Happiness, in Glorry. What a sight was it to Jacob to see his beloved Son Joseph, and Joseph a Prince? So to finde in Heaven those who are our Friends, and not onely Friends, but Princes, having a fire of Love burning in their hearts hearts towards us, and a Crown of un-withering Glory upon their heads;

when they shall be all like Stars
shining in our Eyes; Certainly this must needs be a blessed Vision.

You account it a great Sight to see
one King among ten thousand people; but if you should see a hundred thousand Kings at once, and all in their pomp and glory, you would think that a glorious sight indeed; so it shall be in Heaven: That's a second Consideration; That if the Sight of the Saints in an afflicted Condition be sweet, it will be much sweeter in glory. How did Paul desire, greatly desire to see them? in 1 Cor. 2. 17. and in Cap. 7. Vers. 6, 10. But he will be more taken with the sight of them, when they shall be not only in a state of Grace, but of Glory too.

A third Consideration, to illustrate the excellency of the Sight of the Saints in Heaven, is this; That they are seen together, none shall be missing: Jacob was glad to see his Sons
when they came home; and when he saw

Πλειστο-
τέρους ἐαυτοῦ
δάδαυεν
τὸ πλε-
στον ὅμως ἰδεῖν
ἐν πολλῇ
ἀνδραγαθίᾳ.

saw Benjamin, he was more glad; yet missing Joseph still, it renewed his trouble and grief; but what joy was it to him, when he saw them altogether? So when we shall see Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and Paul, and all, and none missing; when we shall see all the Saints together, that general Assembly of the first born, mentioned in Hebr. 12. 22. What a joyful Sight will this be? So then there are great Sightings to be seen in Heaven, and yet I have not told you the greatest; the greatest Sighting is yet behinde, of the Man Christ Jesus.

The third Sighting, which the Saints shall see in Heaven, is the Man Christ Jesus: And this is that which the Apostle in this place so much longs for, that he might be present with the Lord, that he might behold him. Job was much affected with this, Job 19. 27. With these eyes shall I behold him: And, saith the Apostle, we shall see him as he is. Now we see him as in a glass, then we shall see him face to face. This Sighting transcends all other Sightings.

1 Joh. 3. 2

1 Cor. 13.
12.

Sights, as Christ is more excellent then all.

I'll instance in some things that make Christ the most glorious Object of the Saints Sight in that state of Glory.

First, He is our Friend, and our best Friend; the sight of a Friend is no barren Vision, it is no empty spectacle. There are two things which the Nature of man is very much taken with, when he meets with them, (and both are conjoyned here;) Excellency and Propriety. Christ is our best Friend.

Τὸ ἰδεῖν
τὸν καλὸν
καὶ τὸν ἰ-διωτὴν.

1. He is our Universal Friend, he is our Friend in all cases, our Friend in all places. The Mother may be in one part of the House, and the Child in another, and suffer by it. But Christ by his infinite Immensify fills Heaven and Earth, and is present with all his. What he said to them, he says to all, Lo, I am with you to the end. There are some things, wherein the best Friend in the World comes short, as to us; our case oftentimes is

is

is such, that we finde them short, either in Power, or Love; There is not Love enough in Angels to serve our turn, we need so much; nor Power enough in any or all the Creatures, to work that for us which we need.

The Angels are full of Light and Glory, but cannot spare us one drop of Oyl out of their burning Lamps. We are not set to live, nor do we live, upon any Cistern, though filled to the brim: It is Christ himself onely who is the Fountain that we live upon, even Christ who is all in all, and unto all, Colos. 3. 11. Abraham knows us not, and the best may forget us, Isai. 63. but Christ carries all our names on his Breast, as the High Priest did bear the names of the twelve Tribes. A Mother may forget her Childe; the Scripture supposeth it (though very hardly,) Can a Mother forget her Childe? Yet I will not forget you. So that all the good we have is from him; and what a Sight will that be, to behold him in whom all our Life is center'd, to behold that blessed bleſſed wellſpring that fills the capacities of all Angels and Saints.

Isai. 49. 15

An universal Friend he is, not only by a general Benevolence to the whole Body of the Elect, and by a gracious and effectual influence of his goodneſs unto the whole, but by peculiar and personal Application of his Love and Favor unto every one, which doth much endear him to us. What ſwarms of people will run after a King that is good to his Country, where his Subjects live like Friends, and are beloved of him, though it may be thousands of them never ſaw his face, nor ever had converſe with him!

But Jeſus Chriſt is not only as the Sun, whoſe influence reacheth every where, nor as a Prince that is good to all; but he hath ſpecial converſe with every one of his: So that Paul had his peculiar portion, and Peter his, and every one of Chriſts hath his proper portion from him.

Chriſt is ſo a Friend to every one, as if he were a Friend to none beſides;

D

and

and hence it is, that they not onely said, Our Lord, and our God, but my Lord, and my God: So said Elizabeth to Mary, Why doth the Mother of my Lord come to me? So said Thomas, My Lord, and my God: and so Paul, My God shall supply all our wants.

Phil. 4.19

*Tu mihi
qui conjux
pariter,
fraterque,
paterque;
Tu Domi-
nus, tu
vir, tu mi-
hi frater e-
ris. Ovid, Τὸ το κα-
τ' ἐν, καὶ ἀ-δελφὸς καὶ
συζυγὸς, Arrian. in Epicte-
tæis.*

Yea, He is such an Universal Friend, as that he supplies the place, and fills up and acts the Relation of every Friend; He doth to us the part of a Lord, and a gracious Lord; the part of a Father, of a Brother, of a Husband, of a Head, of a Root; He is every thing to us. Now a man that knows this, that hath any lively impress upon his spirit of the Friendship of Jesus Christ, as he is thus universally a Friend, cannot but have exceeding great joy and enlargedness of heart when he beholds this Friend.

Again, He is our best Friend, for he is our first Friend: First, in order of Time; when we had no Friend, then was he our Friend; when none knew knew us, then he knew us : From everlasting to everlasting thou art our God, saith David ; and thou art our habitation from generation to generation. Christ, when we had no place to rest in, gave us place in his own heart : He is a dwelling place for us, when we are harborless and desolate. And in Prov. 8. 21. He saith, I rejoyced in the habitable parts of the Earth, and my delight was with the Sons of men. Before we had any Being in the World, Christ saw us, and his heart was towards us ; before we were Friends to him, He was a Friend to us ; He was our first Friend in Time, and our first Friend likewise in Dignity. Not to speak of the Dignity of his Person, but of the Dignity of his Amity, Love, and Friendship ; his Love is beyond all Love, it's transcendent unsearchable Love, it passeth all Knowledge, as the Apostle speaks.

He hath given the highest Demonstration of his Love that possibly could be ; Greater Love then this can

Psal. 90. 1

Eph. 3. 19

Ioh. 15. 13

no man shew, that a man should lay down his Life for his Friend. Christ, when we were dead, dyed for us.

1 Ioh. 4. 16

And he is our first Friend likewise in respect of causality, by causing and working of all Friendship towards us in others; There is not a glance, or favorable propensity, in any spirit in the World towards us, but it's wrought by Christ: The bowels of Love in our natural Parents towards us, the kindness of the dearest Friend towards us, are fruits of the Power and Love of Christ; He hath layd up such a proportion of Love in one, and such a proportion in another for us: He it is that is the Root of all, and therefore it is said, that He is Love, the Cause and Root of all Love: and being the Fountain of all Love, he hath Love enough for all; a Cistern may be emptied, a Spring cannot; He loves unchangeably. Water Brooks, Pools, and Pits are sometimes dryed up, but Springs and Fountains are lasting; So the Love of Christ is everlasting, unchange-changeable. This great Friend is he, whom we have ~~never~~ seen. Who hath his Heart touched from above, that doth not think that the Sight of him in Glory will be exceeding precious, and eminently glorious?

A second thing that makes the sight of Christ so excellent in Heaven, is those Excellencies which do all meet and center in him. There is a two-fold Excellency in Christ, there is the Excellency of his Office and Employment, and the Excellency of his Qualities and Endowments.

1. The Excellency of his Office, that makes a glad sight to those who shall behold him; He hath a name and place above every name and place, he is lifted up above Principalities and Powers.

And they that beleeve, shall have not onely the Sight of him upon whose shoulders the Government is layd, but they shall see with their eyes the Administrations of his Power, and them clothed with such glorious circumstances, that the beams thereof shall mightily refresh and fill their Souls with joy. For in the Administration of this Power consider him partly as coming from Heaven to that work, in that great Day; and partly in his return to Heaven again, when that work is over; both of these surely will be most glorious sights.

To see the Son of God coming forth to the view of the World; to see him with Trumpets sounding before him, causing all the dead to awaken, and by his Almighty Power summoning in condemned and Apostate spirits, to appear before him; to see him with all his glorious attendance, coming in glory, as himself speaks, with all his holy Angels, to see the Throne set, and he in the brightness of his Majesty, even the Man Christ Jesus sitting upon the Throne, and the World round about him, his Friends on his right hand, on his left hand the World; What a sight will this be at that Day, if you can get to sit at his right hand? Surely this must needs be a glorious Sight. And

Matth. 16.

27

to

to see Christ doing, what then he will do, bringing about that great Restitution of all things: Here things are out of Order, Princes go on foot, and servants ride on horseback: Gold and Jewels are cast in the dust, and dust is put into glorious Cabinets: The Elect of the Kingdom of the other World pass up and down clothed with infamy here, and the vilest of men are gilded with Honor in this World: But then all things shall be set right, the dust shall be swept away, and the Jewels shall be gathered up; then the goats shall be driven into the desert, and the sheep brought into the fold; then we shall see rich men, wise men, great men, Princes and Monarchs, and the Tyrants of the Earth; we shall see these pass away like vapors, hiding their heads before the brightness of his glory; and poor Lazarus, that lay at the door among dogs, we shall find in Abrahams bosom, and the contemptible ones of the Earth shall be at the right hand of Christ; What a sight

Ἀποκα-
τάσις.

will this be, for a man to behold the Saints thus; and himself amongst them, appearing not ouely by a summons, but with Commission, not ouely to be judged, but to be Judge, sitting down on the Throne of the Son of God, to judg Angels and the World; to behold the World trembling; and to see the light of the countenance of the Saints in the presence of the Lamb; this will be a Sight of Sights, the most glorious Sight that ever was.

Dost thou not remember when thou hast been at the feet of Christ in this World (and wer't glad to be there) to take in those droppings that fell from him now and then, and didst account it better then the Feasts of Kings? If Christ have but darted some beam of light from his face upon thee, and but whispered to thy Soul the forgiveness of thy sins, what joy hadst thou? But what joy shalt thou have, when thou shalt see thy self in the Arms of Christ, and receive words of life from the mouth of Christ.

Christ, in the face of all the World! What a thing will this be, when Christ shall pass a sentence of Death on the rest, and speak words of Life to thee? when thou shalt see him frowning upon the World, (O those frowns will break the heart!) and shalt behold him smiling in the fulness of his Love upon thee? That Christ at such a time should be delighting thee with the embraces of Love, surely thy heart cannot but be much taken with this, and the sight of it. Christ comes to be admired in all that believe: and indeed the thing will be very wonderful.

2 Thes. 1.
8

Nor is this all that you shall see then; but when Christ hath done his Work with the World, and sent them away, you shall see him like a faithful Shepherd conducting all his Flock to their Fold, which was designed for them from Eternity. When you shall see him going with all his Troops following him with Crowns on their Heads, this will be a very glorious Sight; and this you

John 14

you shall see, Christ hath said it; If I go away, I'll come again, and take you to my self, that where I am, you may be also. O those songs of joy, and shouts of praise, that will fill the World at that day!

And now methinks I see the blessed Company of the first-born in Christ, the chosen and called of God, entering into those everlasting Habitations, now making towards their Fathers House; and what joy think you will then be, when they shall there meet with all their Friends, such as they have parted with in this World with sadness and heaviness, shaking hands with one another in mourning and so dropt into the place of silence, where they see not each other any more? Now for these Friends to meet together in the midst of Paradise, and to be blessed in the presence of Jesus Christ, and to behold not onely those they have known, but those also that they never saw, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and all the rest of the chosen
of

of God at once; if a man have any sense, he must acknowledg that this will be a Sight worth ten thousand worlds.

Again, When the Saints shall now see their own Bodies, which were once torn from them, and layd in the dust; when they shall see these given to them again, conformed to the likeness of the glorious Body of Jesus Christ, what a Sight will this be?

And now think you what welcome entertainment the Angels will give these new guests? If there be joy in Heaven at the Conversion of one sinner, what joy will there be at the Glorification of all the Saints? and what welcom will Christ give them? these things are no fictions of mans brain, but Truths and Realities; and as they are true and real, so they are exceeding full of joy and sweetness: All the Excellencies of this World are but a Dream in comparison of them; even the Sun in its brightness is but darkness, in comparison of this sight; Christ in the midst of his people in Heaven, and all there at once. Thus you have seen the glory of Christ in respect of his Place and Office.
in

Secondly, He is glorious in respect of his Qualities and Endowments, in which he is above the Angels; in all things he hath the prebeminence. The Excellencies that are in Christ are in perfection, not onely in respect of the subject, (so the Angels are perfect; they have as much as they can hold, or wish; their capacities and desires are filled) but in respect of the Object also; there is as much of Happiness in Christ, as Happiness is; what ever belongs to Glory is in him: there is fulness and completeness in Christ; In him dwells all fulness. And those Excellencies that are in Christ, are not onely thus in perfection, but in connexion; they all meet together & rest in him: that will make the Sight of Christ exceeding precious, especially taking in this, That those Excellencies are seated in our Nature. A Father glories in his Child

Queri-
tur Ti
bialisor,
Resp.
Thales.
Sids.

Col. 1. 19

Childe of singular qualities and endowments, but a Stranger meddles not with his joy, it is to himself. Christ having taken on him the seed of Abraham, all those that are with him in Glory have a great share in what Christ himself hath. This also is the great security that the people of God have in Heaven, That they shall always finde gracious acceptance, and Fatherly entertainment with God in Christ; because He hath taken their Nature. He and they are one. Observe what security the men of Israel give to David, and how they express themselves: Then came all the Tribes to David, and said, We are thy bone, and thy flesh. As much as if they had said, Therefore our Hearts are strongly inclined towards thee, and dearly knit unto thee, because thou art one with us. And the Apostle hath a very excellent passage; So ought men to love their wives, as their own bodies; He that loveth not his wife, loveth not himself: No man ever hated his own flesh, but nourished
ed.

Heb. 1. 6.

2 Sam. 5. 1

Eph. 5. 3

ed it, and cherished it, even as the Lord the Church. The Church is to him as his own flesh, for we are Members of his Body, of his flesh, and of his bone: And as a man cannot destroy himself, nay cannot withhold from himself any good in his Power; no more can Christ withhold from those who are his, whatsoever he can do to make them happy, because they are both of one bone, and one flesh. So that thus the sight of Christ will be very excellent, as He is our Friend, and our best Friend; and as there are these Excellencies both of place and quality in him.

In the third place, The sight of Christ will be very glorious, in that He will be always present with the Saints; present, not as sometimes things that are not seen are present, but his presence shall be conspicuous. When he was in the World, his glory was veiled, and covered under a mean outside; the Carpenters Son, a man in a poor and low condition; He was like a bright light in a dark lan-lantern, and there were very few that knew him: But now at that day he shall be as a Cabinet opened, as a light set upon a Table, not as a light put under a Busbel: He shall not be as the Sun under a Cloud, but as the Sun in his full glory: we shall know him, as we are known, and behold him face to face: we shall see him, as he is, as the Apostle speaks.

1 Joh. 3.2

And hence it is, that that great Day is called a Day of Revelation, because how ever Christ be something opened in the Gospel, yet he is in a great measure shut up from mental Sight, and altogether shut up from our Ocular Sight; But then He shall be open both to the sight of our Mindes, and of our Eyes. Nor will he then be onely conspicuous, but his presence shall be vital: A Stone may be with us, and seen clearly, but there's little in the sight of that; the sight of a Friend is much better, who can act kindness upon us, and reciprocate Visions with life and refreshing. We shall look on Christ

1 Pet. 1. 3

Christ, and Christ will look on us ; and there's a mighty Power in the Eye of Christ : when he looked on Peter, it went to his Heart ; and when he shall look on his people in Heaven in the midst of Glory, what influences will that Sight have upon them ?

And besides, He will not onely be present in a conspicuous and vital way, but his presence shall be fixed ; He shall not be as one passing from us, but abiding with us, and living for ever with us. What running was there after Christ, while he was in the World ? some getting on hills, and others on trees, that they might behold him when he passed by ! and did they so snatch at a transient view of him ? What then, think you, will the Sight of Christ be, when he shall be always in our eye, and never out of our sight, but we shall be always satisfied with his presence ?

Lastly, I'll but hint to you something in a word, in a way of comparison ; If the sight of Christ in the Pre-figurations of him, in Types and Promises, mises was so sweet, what will the sight of Christ himself be?

Abraham saw my day a farre off, and was glad, saith Christ: But do you think Abraham would not have been of Simeon's minde, if he had seen Christ himself? Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation. If when you see a friend a farre off at Sea, coming towards the shoare, you are glad when he is come to land, and you are in each others Armes, how much more sweet is this?

Again, if the sight of Christ in the History, where he is but spoken of, and whete you have some relations of him, be so taking, (and certainly, there is no History, but its like a dead thing to a good man, in comparison to this) what will the sight of Christ himself be?

If to behold him in his Image, and his people, who are but dark representations of him, be so sweet; If a vision of Christ have been so taking, is to ravish a man out of himself:

E

what

what shall the view and presence of Christ himself be? If by the light we have here, by a few beams darted on us by the Spirit of Illumination, we be transformed from glory to glory; What shall we be in that day, when we shall have a glorified sight of Christ both inward and outward together.

2 Cor. 3.

If the sight of the person of Christ when he was in a poor condition as he came into the world, and continued in it, and as he went out of the world; if the sight of Christ I say in this world did so work when as the Prophet expresseth it; there was no forme or comlyness in him, that we should desire him; How taking will the sight of Christ be in that day when he shall be crowned with glory and fully blessed: so that you see it will be a most blessed sight to behold Jesus Christ in Heaven.

Isa. 5. 3.

Object.

But some may say, how shall I know that I shall see Christ in glory?

Answ.

In a word; do you see him now? they shall never have that ocular sight of

of

of Christ hereafter; whereof we are now speaking, that have not a mental sight of him here.

Are the eyes of your understanding opened to behold him as he is the express Image and character of his Father? are you now able to behold him, the chiefest of ten thousand; so that nothing indeed is dear to you in the world in comparison of Christ? Then blessed are your eyes, for they see a little now, but they shall see more hereafter.

But if indeed there be no operation of the glory of Christ upon thy heart, if thou doest not now see that he is the most glorious object in all the world, and worthy of all thy love; if the sight of him now doth not conquer thy heart to himself; the Lord be mercifull to thee while thou art in the world and change thee; but at present thou hast no evidence that thou shalt see him to thy comfort in that great day. But shall not the world see Christ? doth not the Scripture say, every eye shall behold him,

Num. 23.

17.

True indeed, every eye shall see Him, but not in Heaven. I shall see him but not now; I shall behold him, but not nigh: was the speech of that wizard Balaam; and the sight that the world shall have of Christ shall not last; Christ shall come indeed, and set himself before every creature, and every eye shall see Him; but they shall not always see Him; he shall come as a Judge in the midst of a multitude, that comes to do his work, and when that is done, condemned persons see Him no more; Christ will turne his back upon the world, and bid them an everlasting farwell, they shall never see Him more; that will be a sad sight to them, when they shall see Christ going and never to come again; when he hath once turned his back upon them, he will never turn his face toward them more; me think this should go to your heart; It is said of those of Ephesus, that they sorrowed most of all, for the word which Paul spake, that they should see his face no more, that He went

Acts 20.

went away from them, and was never more to returne to them, this made them sorrow most of all: This is the case of the world, and of unbelievers in the world, that after they have looked on Christ with a great deal of dread and terrour and amazement, they shall never more behold His face; but the impressions of the terrible presence of Christ shall abide on them for ever; think what shame and amazement the sight of Christ will bring upon them, Gen. 45. 3. It is said Joseph knew his Brethren, and they knew him; but they were ashamed to look upon him, because of the evil they had done against Him: So every one will be ashamed to look Christ in the face, that have so despised Him here; Him that is set so high in power by the Father, and whom thou hast no more regarded: what a shame will this be to thee, that He that is set higher then the Angels, should bee made lower by thee then a worme; thou that hast made more of the Idols of

Marth. 13.
38.

thy heart then of Him, and hast honoured the vilest of things more than Christ; this will be thy shame; and when you shall hear Christ pronouncing them to be His friends, who were despised by you, when you shall see these embraced by Him, and Christ bringing them forth before you, cloathing them in Robes of glory before your eyes. What a sight this will be, Christ expresses, they shall knock and say, Lord, Lord, open to us; and He shall say to them, I know not whence you are; then they shall begin to say, we have eat and drunk in thy presence, and thou hast taught in our streets, &c. But He shall tell them, I know you not, depart from me, all you workers of iniquity; there will be weeping and gnashing of teeth. When you shall see Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and all the Prophets in the Kingdom of God, and your selves thrust out, this will be a sad sight. It is good to think now how much it concerns you to look after the knowledge of Christ

Christ in this world, that you may not be denyed this glorious sight of him in the other world.

CHAP. IV.

Sight of a Glorified Mind.

MAN hath a double eye, an outward eye, and an inward eye; the inward eye is that which the Apostle speaks of in Ephes. 1. 18. where he prays that the eyes of their understandings may be opened, that they may know, &c. And we have reason to conceive that the Apostle how much soever he did put in the Ocular sight of things which are visible in Heaven; yet he did not overlook this sight of the Mind; and I will give you two Reasons for it.

First, The excellency of the mentall sight above the Ocular sight; every faculty hath its proper worth, & according as it is in honor & in worth, so it is designed to a more excellent Object; There are more excellent things to be seen by the Eye of the Mind, then by the Eye of the Body; we can see something of the creation by the Eye, but not all; but the mind reacheth every thing that is in it, yea the mind reacheth to him that made it; God is invisible and yet the mind sees God. It is said of Moses that he saw him that is invisible; now as God doth communicate by every faculty something of himself, so he conveys most of himself by that which is most excellent; he conveys more by the internall senses, then by the externall senses; and as nature hath a desire implanted in it of the exercise of the Acts of all its powers, so it must desire to act in those which are most transcendent and excellent, and which brings in most of good, therefore the Apostle could not while he was thus measuring his condition, over-look the sight of the mind; while he desired to see, he could not over-look this seeing of the mind, because that that there is so much more to be conveyed by the Mental, then by the Ocular Sight. And besides, it is the Sight of the Minde that gives lights, vigor, and worth to the Sight of the Eye; take away the inward light, and the light of the external Sense is but Darkness and Death, as concerning any true and real efficacy that it hath.

Heb. 11.
27.

And besides, there be diverse things that the eye of the minde reacheth to in things seen, which the eyes of the body cannot discern; and those things are the very excellency of the things themselves; as for example, The Eye can see a thing, but not the worth of it: A Beast looks on Gold as well as a man, but the sight and knowledg of the worth of it is by the internal light of the mind; and though a mans Eye were set upon the Man Christ Jesus in glory, without the Eyes of his Understanding, it would be no more to him then Gold in the eyes of an unreasonable Creature; The end of things is not apprehended

ed

ed by the Eye: A Child looks on a Tool in the hand of a workman, but sees not what the use of it is, as a man of Reason doth, that hath internal sight to judge of it. Neither can the Eye see the propriety of a thing; A Beast doth not like his Pasture the better, because it is his, but because it is a Pasture, and well furnished. Now we know that the worth, and the use, and the propriety of a thing, are the very essence of the things themselves, and this the eye of the mind conveys, and not the eyes of the body. It is said of Joseph, that he saw his Brethren, and knew them, but they knew not him; This was the Reason why Joseph was so exceedingly taken at the sight of his Brethren, that his bowels wrought with joy and a kinde of compassion towards them; but they were before him as common strangers; Though they saw Joseph their Brother a Prince, yet they were taken no more with the sight of him, then of any other man, because they knew him not. And in Job. 20.

13, 14.

Gen. 42:
7, 8

13, 14. you have Mary weeping at the Sepulchre for her Lord, whom they had taken away; and Jesus Christ appeared to her, saying, Woman, why weepest thou? whom seekest thou? she supposing him to be the Gardener, not knowing him; said, Sir, If thou hast taken him hence, tell me where thou hast layd him. Here she saw her Lord whom she sought, and yet wept, and was full of heaviness, because she knew him not; but afterward, when Jesus Christ made her to know him, she was full of joy. It is the knowledge and inward sight of the minde that gives vigor to the sight of the Eyes; therefore if the Apostle so breathed after the sight of the Eyes, he had this much more in his minde, that he might have an inward apprehension of those things that were layd up for him; that is one Reason.

Another lies in this; That Sight and Knowledge, which the Saints shall have in this World, is imperfect knowledge, and cannot satisfy; and I will give give it you in these two Evidences.

Nothing made forth to us by relation is so fully apprehended, and satisfyingly known, as that which we see in it self: Present Sight, or knowledge of the Object in presence, is the best Sight. Now there is a double present Sight of the Minde: First, Intuitive, when the minde directly receiveth the form of a thing from it self, this is most satisfying, and most effectual to all purposes. Now saith the Apostle, We have not here such a Knowledge, we see as in a glass, or through a glass; and you know the sight of things in a glass is very imperfect, doth not represent the whole; you may see one side of a thing, but not the other; you may see your face in a glass, but you cannot see your back. We see as in a glass darkly, or in a riddle, as the word signifies, a dark saying, wherein a man may understand the word, but not have the Understanding of the thing fully. Things that are represented by narration, are more dark in our know-

1 Cor. 13
12

Ev. αἰσθηματι.

Nowledge, then things we see: No Narration of a thing can be equal to the Sight of the thing it self; no de- scription is compleatly equal to the discovery of a thing by Sight. After that the Apostle had spoke so much of the glory of Christians, in 1 Joh.
 . 3. He adds this; It is not manifest
that we shall be: We know not things
 by words so fully; words are not vessels of so large extent, as to convey the Understanding so much as the sight of things themselves; but serve rather to give us hints and tastes of them; as those two words, Jesu- christ, short in themselves, what infinite vastness do they comprize?
 The Queen of Sheba had a relation made to her concerning Solomon, and like enough as exactly as Princes use to hear of forraign States; yet when she came to see Solomon her self, she professeth; that not the one half had been told her of that which her self saw: and so it will always be, that relations fall half way short of the things themselves; So that this Intui- tive

1 King. 10
 7

trive Knowledge, that is, the Eyes of the minde beholding the things themselves, hath more perfect conceptions and apprehensions of them, then the Minde hath, or can have, by the narration or relation of them.

There is another Sight of the Mind, and that we call the Sight of Experience; that sight or knowledg of things, which a man hath by Experience.

A Philosopher may look on the spirits of water, and other things, and study the nature of them; but he that tastes and drinks of them hath another manner of knowledg of them.

A man may see a Country in a Map, but He knows it otherwise that hath travelled in the Land. Now the manifestation of the things of Faith in the Gospel is like a Description of the Land of Canaan in a Map; but Paul was not satisfied with this, but desires to see the Country it self, that Kingdom that was prepared for him: He was not content with a verbal Description onely, but would fain have the

the Experience of that Blessedness, which is indeed the more excellent knowledg.

A man by relation may know that Cicero was an excellent Orator, but He that heard Him, or hath read Him, hath another kinde of knowledge of Him. It was this which Paul longed for, when He saith, He accounted all things loss and dung, that He might know Christ, and the Power of his Resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings being made conformable to his death; that is, that he might have experience of that Power, that it might so communicate it self unto Him, as to work upon Him to all the ends of it; So the Apostle therefore desires that He might have a mental Sight of Jesus Christ above what He had before, because that which He had came so short. All the sight and knowledg of things we have in this World, is either a taste of what we enjoy, or what we hope for; but both serve not to satisfie, but to sharpen our desires more after them.

If

Phil. 3.10

If there be any Comfort in Love, if any sweetness in Communion with God and other things, which are parcels of our Blessedness; this is so short of what we shall enjoy, that it doth not fill nor content the Soul. If there be any taste of sweetness in hope, and the expectation of things in the Promise, as they lie in the Promise; this is nothing to the presence of the things themselves, when there shall be an immediate and perfect conjunction of the minde, and that Object that doth make blessed.

Another Evidence of the shortness and imperfection of our Knowledge here, is this; That all Sight is according to the Faculty of Seeing: Now our very minds themselves are in such a state, as that they cannot extend themselves to perfect Vision, and apprehension of the things of God.

There is a three-fold Evil upon the Understanding of Saints in this World.

First, Darkness, and slowness to understand and conceive. The minde of

of man was sore shaken by the fall, and that bruise and blemish which it had by the fall, though it be curing in this time of our sanctification, yet is not perfectly cured; but as it is said of the blind Man that he saw men walking like trees, so we see things very darkly and confusedly. The light we have here, the Apostle compares to the light of the day dawning, a light mingled with darknesse; now Paul knew when he came to Heaven, there would be perfect light, like the light of the noone-day; that there would be no clouds in Heaven to abate his light; but that both light and sight should abide in a full and unchanging glory.

2 Pet. 1. 19

Again the minde here is narrow and incapacious, it cannot extend it self to receive much; the Apostle 1 Cor. 13. compares our state to the state of Children, that can receive but little; no more can we. Another evil that hangs upon the minde here, is that fluidness and unstableness by which the understandings of men are apt to lose themselves in their work, and be turned off from the thing on which they are set, sometimes by the intervening of other things: So we oftentimes have Heaven out of our sight, because the world is so much in our eyes, and so begets an uncomfortable Eclipse.

F

apt

And sometimes there is a withdrawing of the things that should be seen, God sometimes hides himself from his people, and often we withdraw through want of affection, our love is low, therefore our minde is no more steady; but now in heaven all this shall bee removed; but while these things do remain, our sight is very much darkened and hindred; therefore we may wel conceive that the Apostle (apprehending himself a stranger here, and not having the sight of the things he hoped for) did not mean only an ocular, but also a mental sight.

One word for comfort to the people of God that walk by faith against the present want of sight; even they that walk by faith, are oftentimes in much much darkness; and here is the root of their misery, and the foundation of all the unhelines and uncomfortableness that attend the Saints; and if you lay your ear to the brest of any man whose heart is fixt by faith in God, you shall have his sighes not so multiplied or enlarged for any thing, or all the things in the world, as the want of light and want of knowledge of the things of the world to come; our knowledge, that it is, is but shaking; but in heaven we shall be out of doubt, when we have the possession it self; our knowledg what it is, is much weakened: Indeed we live by guesse; we are told of a crowne, a Kingdom, an inheritance, that cannot wither, &c. But we have those things, but as represented by relation; guessing is not a certain knowledg of the things themselves; but then we shall know them when we enjoy them: But how often is our interest in this clouded? but then men shall fear no more when they have the things in their hands, whence once

F 2                      they

they are entred into that House which God hath built, all their fear shall be shut out, and they shall rest in peace and joy for ever.

There are these comforts to a good man while he is mourning, waiting and praying after light and knowledge: First, that the thing is sure; our life is hid with Christ in God, Col. 3. 3. A thing hidden is out of sight, but it is out of danger too; though thou dost not see what is laid up for thee, yet it is safe, that is, kept for us, saith the Apostle, & we are kept for it.

1 Pet. 1. 5.

Again, though you know it not, yet our Lord is in Heaven; it satisfies a child though he know not what the purchase is that is made for him, that his father knows it; and though your judgments cannot weigh these things, yet our Lord who is our life knows that portion fully that is prepared for us.

Thirdly, You shall know it: For the things that are laid up in the promise, are not to lie there alwayes, but to be brought out; and the promise that is full and pregnant with spiritual blessings, must must bring forth in the time thereof, and then you shall know what that is which is provided for you. Wherefore is the House built, but that when your work is done, you might go home? That City whose builder and maker is God, why was it raised? but that when you have done your work here, you might be blessed in the enjoyment of it.

You must needs have a sight of these things from the very end for which God hath appointed them. What is the end of the things promised? It is that we may be blest in the enjoyment of the Father and Jesus Christ, and the rest of that family; Now it is the knowledge of these things by which the blessedness that is laid up in them, is conveyed and given forth. An Infant that is the Childe of a Prince, hath not that princely rejoycing, that one of years and knowledg hath. Now this is the state of your Infancy; but you are the children of the King of Kings, & when you are at age you shall know your inheritance, and when you are at your full growth, you shall have the spirit of Princes. The poor childe knowes not what his father is, but saith the Apostle, we shall see him as he is, and that will be a blessed knowledge and sight of God indeed; it will be a perfect sight, not only in degrees as farre as we can apprehend, but in the operation of it, it shall spread it self and its vertues throughout the wholeman. We see that the beames of the morning light do something; the light of the day dawning in the spirits of Saints doth change them into the likeness of God; but what will the light of the day in its perfection do, when the Sunne of righteousness shall appear upon them with all his glory!

Ioh. 15.
1, 2.

Again, it is a knowledge and sight that is perfect at once. In one instant you shall have the fulnesse of all knowledg. And it is a light that shall never be put out, you shall see God for ever: So that there is cause of rejoycing to Christians even against the want of knowledge, that doth so much oppresse them.

But

But as for those that walk not by faith, here is not one drop of all these comforts belongs unto them; as they care not to see God now, so they shall not see him hereafter; that is with such a sight as this which we have spoken of. They shall see God and Christ, and know something of the blessednesse of Saints; doubtless, it cannot be otherwise; much of it will appear to the world, to men and devils when they are ready to be condemned from the appearance of the Lord Christ on his throne of Glory, and from those smiles and kinde entertainment, and fatherly imbrace-ments which he will give to his, upon his right hand, and from that light of joy, that shall cover the faces of Saints before his throne; Certainly they will know something of it from the very misery that themselves shall endure; in that very darknesse there will be some beames of light to discover to them in the midst of their torments, the blessednesse of the Saints. O how happy they are that are not as they are ! and doubtless the very awakenings and stirrings of conscience will represent to them something of that blessednesse: Now men will remember what hath been formerly told them of the grace of God and blessedness of Saints ; now they will sit weeping and mourning, because they have lost that golden day which was vouchsafed to them, something they will know surely from that notion they have of God, and they cannot but reason thus; If God in his wrath make them so miserable: what then is that blessedness which by that mighty God, and out of so great love is given to his own ? Thus it will be when men that have lived without God in the world, shall know in those caverns of darkness, and in the bottom of Hell, while they sit in the dreadful society of men cast out from God, so much of the blessednesse of Saints as shall adde bitternesse to their soules in the midst of their sufferings, and adde heat to the flames of that fire wherein they roar and must abide for ever ever. Great is the joy then that they shall have which beleeve; because they shall see and have such a sight as shall make them blessed.

CHAP. V.

Of Enjoyment of the Objects of sight.

HAVING shewed you that the Apostle here, and the Scripture in other places frequently put sight for enjoyment, I shall now speak a word in generall concerning enjoyment, and then shew you wherein it consists. In generall thus.

Enjoyment here is to be conceived in the most perfect sence; there are very many kinds of enjoyments, and many of them imperfect; indeed none of them are perfect in this world; But this is the most perfect enjoyment that is imaginable, Ile shew it you in two or three things.

I. This

1. This enjoyment is a visall Act, it's a life in union with the beatificall object, with that which makes blessed; it's the satiating of the desire of the soul; a stone is carried towards the center by a force that moves it, its own naturall poysse, and it is kept there by the same thing: for the same thing is the cause of rest, that is the cause of motion: But it doth not enjoy rest, as a man enjoys his home and habitation, because it wants life. This enjoyment is the acting of life, and of the highest life; there is a great difference between the enjoyment of things by men, and the enjoyment of things by beasts; because the life of man is of a more noble nature, then the life of beasts; yea, there is a great difference between mans and mans enjoyment of things; as any man is of a more raised and enabled frame, so his enjoyment of all things is more excellent.

2. This enjoyment is an act, not only of life, but of an understanding will; It is true the creatures have some some poore enjoyment of things that strike upon their sense; but the knowledge they have of things is exceeding little, and nothing can enjoy more then it knows. I say their knowledge is exceeding scant; for they knew not the universall good, they know good indeed, but not the universall good; all their knowledg is of particular good things; the Ox knows hay and grasse and rivers, and such things as these; but he knows not him that made all, that is the fountaine of all that good which he picks up among the severall creatures he trades withall; but this is an enjoyment of that good which is universall, of him that is all good, and so it is the acting of an understanding will; and indeed you may see also the narrowness of the knowledge of other creatures beneath man; they know something, but not the thousand part of things; nay man himself as concerning the latitude of his knowledge is very short here; but that knowledge which he shall have in Heaven, will be another man-

manner of thing. Inferiour creatures look but upon the surface of things they know; but the outside of them, so far as their sense reacheth, but they know not whence they come, they know not their nature, they know not their end, they know not the interest that they have in those things, all which things make exceedingly to the perfection of enjoyment, that a man knows what he hath, and that he hath that which is of worth, that it is his own, so that it is an enjoyment with an understanding will, reason and judgment.

3. This enjoyment of good, is the rest of the soul in good; the soul rests, sleeps, reposeth, and contents it self in the things it hath. This especially is seen in enjoyment of the last end; some contentment we have in subordinate good things, but not full contentment, because they point us forward; and till we come to that which is last of all, though we have something, yet more is wanting; and while there is want there is motion, the

the soul of man never stands still till it comes to enjoy all that it is capable of; this enjoyment then is the souls living in its last end, the supream good, him that ~~is~~ all. So much in the generall concerning this enjoyment; Now particularly to shew wherein it consists, It lies in these three things.

1. That the thing we enjoy be ours, that we have a propriety in it.

2. That we be possessed of it.

3. That we have the fruition and reception of the fruits of it.

If any of these be wanting, there is not an enjoyment; suppose a man have right to a thing, yet if he have not the possession of it, he doth not enjoy it; we are now heires of a Kingdom as the Apostle James speaks; but we are not inheritors. Suppose a man have right and possession, yet if he have not fruition, he enjoys not the thing; as a sick man, though he have never so much wealth, he enjoys nothing of it, because he receives not the

Jam. 2. 5.

the sweetness and fruit of it: There must therefore be a concurrence of all these. Now Beleevers when they are come home, they come into an estate that is their own, which they have a good Title and a sure right to. A begger may look on a Mine of gold as well as a Prince that ownes it; but the sight of the one is but a cold and and languid vision to the sight of the other; the reason is, because though the thing be the same in its own nature, yet it's not the same in relation; it's gold to both; but the one is owner of it, and not the other. The title and interest, that they which beleeve shall have, (and have now) in eternall life, is such a strong foundation as upon which they may build the greatest joy, and it's a full fountain of all streames of blessedness; For take it but in these two or three considerations and you shall see it so.

1. The title they have is free, there is no burden in it; some inheritances are so charged and clogged, that though the inheritance be rich, the heire heire is poor, and can hardly live upon it; because though he receiv much, yet much goes out again; but here is no charge nor burden at all of any kind. When God promised the land of Canaan to his people, he burden'd the gift; he laid upon them a yoke and a burden, which neither they nor their fathers were able to bear, but it wearied them all: But now this Canaan that is above, is such an inheritance that is absolutely free; it is true there be some things enjoyned that are due to God, not onely here, but to eternity; some things go out; but if you consider what those things are, they are rather gains and receipts then payments or disbursements.

God requires indeed love; that is the sum of all; and although love in it's actings in this world is not without burden, yet that is not from the nature of the thing, but by accident; by reason of our weaknesse and the unsuitableness that is in our depraved natures to that work; you know that
acts

acts of life are very pleasant, yet sometimes by accident they are not so; a man in health eats with contentment; but eating is a burden to a man in sickness.

Put our Natures into their rectified state, and then all that God calls for at our hands will be sweetness and life, not work but wages: But the difficulty and painfulness that we endure, in working our selves to the discharge of that wherunto we are called, is from the sickness and weakness of our natures. There is then nothing charged upon this portion, that is laid up with Christ in God, but what is a piece of the portion it is self. Heaven would not be so sweet a place, were it not for the work that lies upon those that are in it. I may truly say, Heaven would not be the picture of Heaven, if the love of God were not in full vigour to eternity there.

Again, take in this consideration of this Title, That it's sure, that's a comfort; he that feels the ground wherewhereon he stands to tremble, will tremble too; There can be no more firmness of a thing that rests on another; then there is firmness in the Basis, the thing on which it rests; where a thing is not sure with fulness of security, there is room for fear; and where there is fear, there is torment; all fear hath torment, saith the Apostle. Hope in the greatest misery is a degree of happiness; fear in the greatest happiness is a degree of misery. Now the Title of Believers to their inheritance is a sure title; its a sure, immutable and unchangable title. There is none of those things in the other World, whereby Titles are broken, and the right of men lost to things in this world. Here a man loseth his right to what he enjoyed sometimes by Law, he being found a transgressor; the Law strikes him off, and divides between him and his estate; because that he hath offended. But now here is no such thing, no case of forfeiture; no such plea against a man once admitted. There was an inditement formed against him; but Christ interposed and became his Advocate, to plead his Cause, and the person was quitted by the Judge, so that he stands free, and there is nothing to be alledged against him why he should not live in the enjoyment of his estate: It's a cryed Case, and hath had it's final determination from the great God. In Law sometimes a man is deprived of his estate, because His Title is not good, He hath a right, but not upon a sure foundation; But now if you beleeve, your interest is as full as can be; your Title is upon all the grounds that can be: It comes by gift, and the gift of him that never repents, it comes by Purchase, it comes by vertue of your relation, being adopted, and begotten again to God; If children, then heirs, saith the Apostle: It comes by vertue of your Union with Jesus Christ, As the Spouse hath right in her Husbands estate, so all Beleevers have a right in that which is Christs portion.

G

was

Rom. 8.

In

In the world men lose their Right, as by Law; so sometimes by violence and fraud; there is none of this imaginable to be in that world; they that would, have no power; and he that hath power, hath no will to do any such thing; The devil envies asmuch (and will after that great day at the happiness of Beleevers) as he doth now, and much more; we have reason to think so: But though he be full of malice, yet his power shall be chayned; God who hath all power in his hands, hath engaged himself upon all bonds, that he shall never molest his people in that which is theirs; but they shall enjoy it fully, peaceably, eternally.

In the world men lose their Right by death, sometimes by the death of the person, and sometimes by the death of the thing it self. Neither of these is there. There the hoire lives, and the Estate lives; the Heire lives and his life is everlasting; Death is swallowed up of life, (as the Apostle speaks in the words before the Text)

so that there is nothing of it left. Put the case, there be never such force in a poysenous potion; if it be all taken up by one, there is no danger now left to others; so it is here, mortality is swallowed up, that there is no power left to it, to hurt any more.

And as the Heire lives, so the Inheritance abides; we have seen goodly Houses, which have been the portion of some men, turned to ashes, and heaps of dust; this hath been often seen in the world.

Great revenewes, great lands have been subject to inundations, or to be swallowed up of Earthquakes: So that though the heire be left alive, yet his Estate may be dead. But in Heaven both the one and the other lives; and as the Heires are immortall, so is the inheritance immortall for them; and as their life is subject to no withering, so their portion is always fresh, safe, and in its full strength; the Apostle makes all sure in that one expression of his.

1 Pet.

1 Pet. 1. 4. The inheritance is reserved in Heaven for us who are kept, &c. that is kept, and we are kept; Its called a Kingdom that cannot be removed; it is not subject to any such concussions as shake to pieces the the greatest and mightiest Kingdoms in this World. So then the right that the Saints have, and their propriety to that inheritance which is reserved for them, is full, which may make their hearts exceeding glad. That is one thing that belongs to this inheritance.

Another is, That we have it in possession; Abraham by a promise that God made to him of Canaan, had a right to it, but Abraham never enjoyed it; he was not possessed of it; the Scripture expresses possession by a very significant word, which signifies not only to have, but to have a thing in hand, and to be at our feet; Deut. 11. 6. And what he did to Dathan and Abiram sons of Eliab, and of Reuben, how the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up, and their tents, and all the substance that was in their possession, in the Margine you have it, that was at their feet, that is word for word according to the Original.

Heb! 12.]
28.

A thing is said to be at our feet, when it is so before us that we have free access to it; it is not hedged or locked, or hid from us, nor we from it; but it lyes open to our enjoyment. Not to dwell upon this: This possession which the Saints shall have, will be also another ground of their blessednesse, a spring of blessednesse that will fill them for ever.

For in the first place; This possession is of all good, Heaven is not parted by lot as Canaan was that is a type of it; but comes all unto all, and all to every one, as all enjoys the light of the Sunne, and it is not given to this or that person; but every one enjoys its light: So in Heaven we shall have a very large portion, for it is that which Christ hath thereto live upon, who is their and

Lord

Lord of all. And it is so the possession of all, that it comes not gradually but at once; a man comes to possess his own often by degrees, something one year, and something another year; but all that whole lump of blessedness, all that greatnesse of glory that is there prepared, comes at once into the possession of Believers when they are taken into that other world.

And again it is such a possession, that it is not only possesse of all, but by all, by the whole man. The soul possesseth, and the body possesseth: the whole man is instated in it.

Its far otherwise in the things of this life: here the possession of things reacheth not home, throughout.

Besides, that possession is not merely a legall possession, that the Law accounts so; but it is a more reall and close possession: You know a man may be possessed of lands, which he never saw in all his life. He is said in Law to possess them, though he never was upon them; but the possession of the things which are prepared for the Saints is more close; it is as the possession of what we eat, and of the garments which we wear, &c.

And further this possession is given them in the most glorious way; for it shall be given them by the hand of Jesus Christ himself: Who shall come from Heaven to conduct them into Heaven; it shall be given them in the view of all the world; Men and Angels shall see what their portion is, whither they go, shall see them go to take possession. It shall be given them in their best state when they are most qualified, fitted and raised to that condition which is suitable and proportionable to their state. It is impossible that we in the state wherein we now are, should be possessed of Heaven, of that portion. But that shall suffice for the second thing that belongs to this enjoyment, namely possession.

The last thing which belongs to
- enjoy-

enjoyment, is fruition, or reception of the fruits of that portion; it is not merely to have the Land of Canaan; but to reap the fruits of Canaan, to eat of those rivers of Oyle, and those fat things which that Land yeildeth; indeed what a man doth not so enjoy, is not in a sort his own. In Deut. 28. 41. Observe the language of the Holy Ghost, Thou shalt beget sons and daughters; but shalt not enjoy them, for they shall go into captivity; thou shalt not enjoy them; in the Margine it is, they shall not be thine; You know children cease not to be their Fathers in point of propriety, because they are carried away captive; but because a man hath no fruition of his children, God accounts it as if he had them not; In Heaven there will be a fruition of good things throughout; you shall not only be in Paradise, and have the tree of life in the midst of it; but you shall eat of the fruit of the tree of life; you shall not onely be with Christ, but you shall enjoy Christ as a man enjoys his friend: you shall not only see the Well of life with your eyes, but drink of the waters of life and know their sweetnesse; this fruition is that which also contributes in the highest to the blessedness of that state, you shall see it in the consideration of these two things.

The good things of the life to come are exceeding great; We shall not only enjoy the things of God, but God himself: God doth not cut out a life for his people out of himself as fathers do to their children; but he reserves himself to his people as a spring of life, and the great object of their blessedness; such an one he is that hath the greatest varieties of contentment, because he is all good; you see you pick up your life in this world from many things; you receive from your garment something, from your food something, from your friends, &c. every thing contributes something towards your life: Now God is all that, which
all

all these are severally, and much more then all; And though he be but one good, yet he yeilds infinite variety of contentment, that as you have some content in one thing, and some content in another thing in this world, so you have many contentments, and all in one God. Your reward is great saith Christ, or manifold, the word will bear both; it is great in excellency, as well as in variety; We see there is an order of good, there's many degrees of it in this world, and one excels another; and what ever we account best, that yeilds much to us; But now what an infinite disproportion is there between these things, and him that is goodness it self, that puts drops of goodness into every thing, that made the light good, and every creature good? There must needs be an excellency and transcendency of goodness in Him; for He that made all so, must needs be more Himself. And there is a greatness in quantity, there's but little here; put all together, it comes

Mat. 10. 5.
τολως

Psalms 16. 7

comes to little; and the truth is, when you have plucked many fig-leaves, you can but make up a patched garment to cover you: No man is content with what he hath, because he hath not enough; But in that state is full contentment, there is abundance; At thy right hand is fulness of joy and pleasure for evermore; yea, this great object of our blessedness shall not only be present with us, but will so pour out himself upon his people, that there will be his gracious and glorious presence, with a sweet and plentiful effusion of himself upon the spirits of his own; as the Sunne is not only in our eyes, but it communicates and sends forth his influence to us, and to every thing for us; good lies here in the creature as gold in the Myne; it must be digged out, and we come with a great deal of difficulty to get the kernell. There is no relation in the world so happy, but there must be something done to fetch out the sweetness of it; there is no condition

but it puts men to labour to take it yeeld them fruit; all things
 e like the Earth that must be marred and ploughed; But goodness
 God is like water in the fountain, and like light in the Sunne, that we do not fetch out, but it comes forth, gives forth it self freely; God will e eternally filling with streames of oodness His people whom he will make blessed in the enjoyment of life with himself: We see he gives out something here, and that little that his people have in this World, Oh how sweet is it? David had rather sit on the threshold of the House of God, and pick up those crumbs that fell from Heaven, and take in the drops and dewes of those rivers of joy, then sit as a King upon the throne in the midst of all his glory.

We have something now as the Apostle sayes, We are partakers of the benefit. Something we have of that good here, but exceeding little,
 but for the state of our Minority,
 As

1 Tim. 6.

As the children of Princes have but what is convenient and suitable, and proper for the education of the children of Princes; But what difference is there between a fathers communication of good to his child, when he is come to a fulness and perfection of age, and his giving out himself to his child when wrapt in clouts, and in the Cradle; This is our condition, here we are but Infants; therefore if what we receive in this world, be better then all the world besides, if it were ten thousand times better then it is: how excellent will that effusion of God upon his people be in the world to come? Great is their reward, because he on whom they live is so great every way; and as he is great, so they shall be great also. The capacities of the Saints shall be raised and enlarged, and there will go exceeding much more by farre, to fill them there, then what is needful to fill them here; Their passive capacities, that is the powers by which they receive what is

is.

is communicated and tendered to them, that are as vessels that may be filled, these capacities are enlarged: there is a narrowness and scantiness in them in this world, which shall be removed there.

And in their active capacities, they shall be enlarged too, so that we shall be able to draw more; our desires shall be higher, fuller, stronger then they are in this world, or can be; we shall suck stronger of the breasts of consolation: what a happiness will this be, when the streams shall run full, and the capacities of men in the state of glory shall be enlarged to the full? Indeed as I have said in the other point, God hath prepared things so great, that he is put to it, to make His Creature anew, because those old bottles cannot hold that new wine, who hath wrought us to that very thing, saith the Apostle: So that there the fruits of their possession which they shall receive every way considered, are very great; the comings in of the Saints in that state of theirs in the other

other world, are very glorious.

And as they will be great, so they will be continuall; and that is a great addition to their blessedness, that it shall continue without alteration. A mans inheritance oftentimes degenerates, and land that was good, growes lean and faint; the same tree yeelds not so good fruit one year as it doth another: But here is no alteration, but the fruit is always full and in perfection; and whatever it is that flows from God to his People, it shall be all the same without all change.

Again, it shall be continuall without intermission, not like lands and trees that bear one year, and not another, but faile sometimes: But here, if you get to Heaven, your in comes shall be without all stop and failing: Nothing is more constant; in that, Revel. 22. 5. which divers understand of the Church in this world, There shall be no night there. You have light here, but not without intermission; you have day, but you have night too: but there shall be
all

all light, one constant state of blessedness. And again though this their state shall be continual, yet there shall be no nauseating satiety; as you know the Children of Israel loathed their Manna; What nothing but this light Manna? this light bread? their soul loathed it. Here in this world we are sometimes apt to be wearied with things, from their own emptiness, and from the difficulties that are mingled with the enjoyment of them; that though there seem at first to be contentment in them, yet when the whole matter is cast up, they are rather incumbrances, because there are so many hardships hang upon them: But Heaven is a state that is full of happiness, there is no mixture of bitter and sweet; there is no darkness in this light, but all is good and pure, as God Himself is.

Here in this world, we are sometimes wearied of things, by reason of the vanity and impotency that is in ourselves; so that we change when the things change not; hence it comes to passe, that that pleaseth us one day, that doth not please us another day; because of that mutability and fleetingness, that is in these unstable natures of ours: But in Heaven our bodies and spirits shall be tuned to that condition and state, so that there shall be a perfect harmony eternally between the Saints and their portion; So that they shall be always full, and that fulnesse shall be sweetness; they shall be hungry, and yet without pain; hungry, and yet always full.

H

the

So you see now what the enjoyment is, and wherein it lies; viz. in three things. Propriety and a right to the things; this propriety is free and sure. It lies in possession, and a having of the things themselves, having all, and all at once; a having of them with the whole man, a having them without all change and interruption: Likewise it lies in fruition, and reception of fruits, which are great and continual.

Me

Methinks it should be a great sadness to hear of so great things, without some comfortable evidence, that they shall be ours. We have heard a great deal of what things the Saints shall know, and their eyes shall see; and you have heard now what enjoyment they shall have of the things that are prepared: Is not this better then the world? better then your lusts. Shall there be any amongst us, like prophane Esau, that sold his birthright for a mess of pottage, that shall bid farewell to God, and to eternity? that shall say to Christ, keep up thy portion to thy self and for thine own; let who who will live with thee and with Angels in thy Kingdom; Let my portion be among the swine in this world, that I may feed on bushes with them. This is the case of men, that will walk in the counsels of their own hearts, and seek the fulfilling of their own irregular desires; This is that which will barre them out of this blessed enjoyment, which is prepared for those that by faith have an interest in Iesus Christ.

CHAP. VI.

*The Sight and Enjoyment of future Blessedness is the Portion of them
that have the Image of God.*

Luke 12.

20

NOW then, as in another case it was said, whose shall these things be? So it is seasonable and necessary for us to put the question, Who shall enjoy those things that we have spoken of? it being a Question that is seldom put, and more seldom answered. Many never so much as ask themselves upon what they shall live in the other World; and many again, though they cannot avoyd the question, yet shift the Answer, and can be contented to leave the matter undecided; and so live dubiously, and dye anxiously, and perish eternally.

nally. Now then the Question is put, and I'll give you the Answer to it; Who they are for whom these excellent things are prepared?

In a word, take it thus. They who are conformed unto God, and who have received the Image of God. The receiving of this Image gives two things, which secure a man that hath it of that eternal Life.

One is, a Right and Title to it.

The other is, a meet power for the receiving and enjoying of it.

1. A Right and Title, that must be; for Heaven is not given to any, but to those who have a Right to it. Now the Image of God gives this; for by this we are his: and it is the Apostles reasoning, 2 Cor. 3. All things are yours; for you are Christs, and Christ is Gods: And if Children, saith the Apostle, then heirs. In unequal Relations Nature hath put the inferior parts in a state of dependancy upon the superior, and hath put upon the superiors a Law of Obligation towards the inferiors. Among all Relations natural, that of the Father and Childe is the closest. And where relation is neerer, there the bond is the more firm: So that a Childe, as a Childe, hath naturally, and not by the voluntary disposal of the Father, an Interest in the Fathers Estate. So when we become Children by being born again, and so conformed to God by receiving his Image, this doth confer on us a Title and sure Right in the Inheritance. A Father stands obliged, not onely in point of Honor, but by the Law of Nature, to receive his Childe: And because the Contemplation of this is matter of much refreshment, let me tell you there be these four things that are as so many Springs of Comfort, and do secure those that beleeve, that have received this Image concerning their Inheritance.

Rom. 8.17

1. Where there is this Relation between God and Man, there is a sympathy between them, a mutual sympathy: As the Childe hath imprinted upon him a tender sense of the the Fathers favor, disfavor, presence, absence; so the Father also hath imprinted upon him such affections and dispositions as are suitable to the state of the Childe. What Father is there, that, if his Childe be well, is not rejoyced? if ill, feels not sad impressions of his Childs sufferings? It was the speech of Bernard, No Father is like our Father, nor hath that goodness that he hath. It is true, that Passion and Affection are not properly in God; but we say he is angry, when he doth that which one that is angry doth: so he is said to be compassionate, when he doth those things that Compassion in Nature doth produce, and in this he is transcendent: in all their afflictions he is afflicted. There is a sympathy that attends the Nature of Man toward all of his kinde; pharaohs Daughter, when she saw Moses a Childe, and a stranger, and weeping, had compassion on him: But there is a stronger sympathy between the Father and the Child, and there is the strongest sympathy

*Tam pius
nemo, tam
pater uquo.*

Isai. 63. 10

Exod. 2. 6

pathy in God; for Reason tells us, that qualities are active according to the subject in which they are: Fire in Straw is not of that strength as fire in Steel: The Nature of Man is not capable of that Compassion that is in God: And Reason tells us, That those things which are in the Subject by nature, are more eminently there, and in a more transcendent way, then those that are by Participation.

God is the Fountain of all Love, and of all Compassion, it is by Nature in Him; Love is his Nature: In Men and Angels it is onely by Derivation; yea the Man Christ Jesus hath it by Derivation, as the Apostle Heb. 2. 17. that Hemight be a merciful High Priest: The Latin Translation hath it, That Hemight be made a merciful High Priest: But God is so by Nature, merciful, full of compassion; that is, His Name, and Nature are all one, therefore it is more abundantly and transcendently there. So that thus we may

Ἰνα ἐλεή-
μων ᾖ
ταί.
ut miseri-
cors fieret.

may reason: God should not enjoy himself, nor be blessed, except those who are His, and to whom He bears such Compassion, be blessed too. He will their good, and if it be not well with them, He hath not His will.

A second thing is, That between the Father and the Childe there is a great Similitude: Similitude is not always the cause of Love, but it is always a thing fit to be loved, and a thing that is apt to move Love. God loveth not first love, because He findes those whom He loves to be like Him, but He makes those like Him whom He loves; and He loves them whom He hath conformed to Himself. There is not that similitude between the Father and the Childe, as is between God, and those whom He hath gotten to Himself: In a Childe there may be many things wanting, which belong to the perfection and excellency of the Father; the Father may be wise, strong, rich, &c. and these things may be wanting in the Childe. But now whatsoever it is (that

(that makes to the perfection of the Creature) that is in God, there is something answerable to it, some Image and Similitude of it, in those that are begotten of Him; and if a natural Father likes his own Image, and loves it, in the Childe who is begotten of Him; how much more doth God like the Image of Himself in those which are begotten to Himself! That's a second thing.

A third is. That in the very nature and state of a Childe there is indigency: We come naked into this world, saith Job. No Creatures more destitute then the children of men; and who should relieve that poor Infant that is not able to help it self, but He by whom it had its Being? There is no Creature that is more impotent, then a Childe by nature. Will God bring forth into Being a new Creature? Will He form such a thing in a state of impotency and indigency, and not look after it? Nature hath taught all Creatures to be active in this: and the Apostle tells us, That
He

He is worse then an Infidel that provides not for his own: How much more shall the blessed God, the Father of Glory, take care of the well being and blessedness of those whom He hath begotten? And not onely take care of them, but in proportion; and that not onely to their necessities, but to their state and relation. A Prince doth not discharge the duty of a Father in meer feeding and clothing His Childe; but He wrongs His Childe, if He do not maintain Him in a state suitable to His Relation. It is the Glory of God, and the unspeakable Comfort of Believers, that God is obliged to His poor Creature, the thing that He hath begotten, to maintain it, not onely in Being, and well-being, but in such a state as is answerable to the relation of a Childe to the blessed God.

A fourth thing is, There is in a Childe expectation: The life of a Childe is a life of Hope, He walks by Faith indeed, by a natural Faith and

2 Tim. 5.8

and dependance upon His Father: Such an expectation it is, as is not meerly a looking for, but a wisful and heart-affecting expectation from His Father, such as strikes home upon the Fathers bowels. What heart of a Father is so obdurate, as not to be pierced to the quick with the earnest looks of His Childe in misery? yea, though He do not speak, but by signs craves and begs something of those mercies that are His, and are layd up in His Fathers Heart for Him? Now the life of those whom God hath begotten to Himself, is much more a life of Hope and expectation: He hath not begotten us in this World to the possession of that fulfess, which He hath layd up for us, and intends to give us, but He hath (saith the Apostle) begotten us to a lively Hope.

See this in the very Beasts of the field; when the young one cries after the Dam, the Dam understands the language of that little Creature; and is under the force and power of natural rural affection to give out to the substance of it : How much more shall not God, having placed His people in such a way of Hope, in a begging condition, refuse to open when they knock ? He cannot shut his Ear when they call. I may safely say, He cannot deny them when they speak, nor withhold when they come to Him ; for He stands in the Obligation of a Father to his Children. Now here is the end of that which I speak, to put you upon the Consideration of this thing ; Whether you have received that Image and conformity to God ; for Heaven is given to none else. Take things that are in a degree beneath you, or in a degree above you, and these cannot be Heirs to your estates. Angels cannot, they are above you ; Unreasonable Creatures cannot, they are beneath you : both are incapable. So that only those that bear your Image, that have the same Natures you have, can inherit your Estates : Nor can any enjoy that portion which God hath prepared in the World to come

come, but those who are conformed unto him, being made partakers of the Divine Nature.

A second thing that it brings, is, a power both of acceptation and enjoyment of those things; both are necessary; so necessary, that Enjoyment is impossible without them. There must be a power of acceptation, and meet acceptation, that is with joy and thankfulness: God stands upon this; you have an Example of it in them: in Acts 2. 41. They received the Word gladly, with all their Hearts: So 1 Tim. 1. 15. This is worthy of all acceptation, saith Paul: As when one that is most welcome, and most in Honor, comes, he is received into the whole House, all the Servants of the House attend him; what ever is in the house is at his service; He hath all acceptation and entertainment that is possible. Such must be our entertainment of the Promise of Eternal Life; it must not onely be received, but embraced, as the Apostle speaks of them in Heb. 11. 13.

*Acq<sup>u</sup>ies
Ind<sup>ic</sup>ed
p<sup>ro</sup>p<sup>er</sup>.

*Am<sup>er</sup>ica
p<sup>ro</sup>p<sup>er</sup>.

God

God gives these spiritual Blessings, these everlasting good things, to his people, not as we lay Gold or rich Colours upon wood or stone, which have no appetite or desire to them, no sense or use of them: But he gives them out, as we give Bread to those that are hungry, and as we give Gold to those that are in want, who desire it, and close with it, and thankfully accept and entertain it. Indeed if these things be not look'd upon as things worth the having, and the heart be not called out after them, they would not be matter of Happiness, nor things upon which our life could be maintained with Blessedness. So neither could his love to him, by which he aymes at his own exaltation, nor his Love to the Elect, which intends their greatest Joy, be satisfied.

There must be not onely a passive, but an active receiving of them, as you have the Example of those in Heb. 11. 11, 17. at vers. 11. Through Faith Sarah received strength to conceive

ceive seed: Sarah received strength, but she received that not by any act of hers, nor by any power that she had; she received it as a thing given her by divine Power; she was onely the subject of it, she did nothing towards it; but it was meerly the work of divine Power in her, when she was quickened in that dead state by reason of years. And at vers. 17. it is said concerning Abraham, That He received the Promise: He was not here meerly as a vessel, wherein water, or any such thing, is poured; but he had an active power given him, by which he closed with the Promise that was set before him: So God expects there should be such an active closing of the Will with the things prepared in the World to come. God deals with us as with Understanding Creatures; He overcomes us, and draws us by those Loadstones, the goodness and excellency of those things, which he proposeth to his people; that so by the sight of their need, and the worth of the things themselves, there may

may be a rational and vital motions of their spirits towards them. God gives not Heaven to any against their wills, as Hell giveth; all that come to Hell, come against their Wills; but none go to Heaven against their Wills, but it is that which they accept with all acceptation. Now we cannot accept of these things, except we be born again, and have the Image of God upon us; there must be a new Nature: For there are these two things necessary to the receiving of these things.

The first is a conveniency and agreeableness between our Natures and the things themselves: for where there is contrariety, there is repugnancy; no entertainment, but opposition: We fly from that which is against us, or suits us not. There is a certain compass of things, which are the life of every Creature, beyond which it cannot extend it self; only in that compass lies things suitable: out of it all things are unproportionable and unanswerable to the state of
I that

*Contraria
se mutuo
expellant.*

that Creature. Put a fish out of the water, the proper bounds that God hath set for it, and there is nothing above it, or beneath it, but what is unsuitable, yea destructive to its state and nature. Now there is an unsuitableness in the nature of man being corrupt, a disagreement to the matter of blessedness; Blessedness, as is in the enjoyment of God; and no man can be willing to receive it of himself. We do not reason thus, This man never did so, therefore he cannot do so; But thus we may reason, No man ever did such a thing, therefore no man can.

Another thing that is necessary to that acceptation we speak of, is understanding, a right understanding; for this Acceptation is an act of judgment, and so requires a power to discern and judge, and to fetch the reason of its motion from the nature of the thing. A man when he hath an offer of gold made to him, receives it; but if you tender him a serpent, he refuseth it; because he acts out of judgment, yet discerns between things and things, what is good for him, and what is not. So that a man must have understanding, and that we have not of our selves: The natural man saith the Apostle, receives not the things of God, but they are foolishness to him, 1 Cor. 2. 12. Why so? Because either he doth not beleeve that there are any such things as the Gospel speaks of, and nature stirs not after things that are not believed, its a folly to perswade it; Or if they do beleeve that there are such things, they are not convinc'd of their worth, they cannot acknowledge their excellency, though they do their being: So that they account it a foolish thing for a man to adventure himself to the displeasure of the world, and to all the consequences of it for things that will not profit. True knowledge is the gift of God, 1 John 5. 20. He hath given us a minde to know him. And the new Creature is created in knowledge, or unto knowledg, as the Apostle speaks
acts

Ἀνακα-
ταλύει
τὴν εἰ-
κόνα.

in Colos. 3. 10. That so it may be able to act with reason and judgment towards its proper object. Thus then, till men have this image of God, they cannot receive, and give Acceptation to the things of the Gospel, which are the portion of Beleevers.

The other power that this Image of God gives to Beleevers, is a power of enjoyment; the reason of this, and the impossibility of mans being able to enjoy God without it, you had before in the grounds of the former discourse: But only this I'll add; There be two things necessary to the enjoyment of that blessedness.

One is a disposition to live in God, a nature fitted to live in God, as the Child lives in the Father. In the Father the Child hath food, rayment, safety, it hath all in the Father, and the Father is to him his life. Now as nature hath formed the Child to this kinde of life in the Father, so the new nature formes those that are begotten of God, to live

live upon God: So that what others have by here and there, They that believe have all in God; they look on these things while they are amongst them, as of use to them; but they apprehend the departure of these no loss, because they see they have all in God: Now this no man can do, that hath not received this Image.

A second thing necessary to this enjoyment, is, a spirit fitted to subject to the law of that state. There is no condition, no good dispensation in this world to the Creature, but under some law: And that most visibly appears upon rationall Creatures, Angels and men; they have a law which attends all their good, whether they have it in band or in hope, and it is a high law, a law of the highest, obliging and binding them to duty, in the enjoyment of their greatest good: we are obliged here to all obedience and well pleasing; but our obligations will be multiplied in heaven when we come to a more full and perfect enjoyment of God : So it is not possible that he that is not formed to a subjection to the law of that blessed state, should come to enjoy it ; he that is in the flesh, saith the Apostle, cannot please God, Rom. 8. 8. and it is not only because God will not be pleased with him ; but because he hath no disposition to do the will of God ; The wisdom of the flesh is not subject to the will of God, neither can it be, Rom. 8. 7. This shall suffice for that rule of judgment by which you may see whether you are such as shall enjoy this Inheritance, that have a well grounded hope of enjoying that blessedness which is reserved, if you have received this Image of God ; without which it is impossible to enjoy blessedness ; and it is impossible also with it to miss of it, because God hath so inseparably conjoined the one and the other.

CHAP.

CHAP. VII.

Pauls vehement desire to be with Christ, is transcendent to the common pitch of Beleevers; is therefore their pattern, not standard.

THe second thing expounded is, That all that beleeve have a desire after the enjoyment of those things that are prepared of God for them.

This riseth from the very scope and spirit of the Apostles discourse in this place; he saith in vers. 2. In this we groan earnestly, desiring to be clothed upon with our house in Heaven: And gives this the reason of his dissatisfaction of spirit in his present state: that though he walkt by faith, yet he be had not the sight of things.

All that believe desire this: It is to be acknowledged, that the instance in that Text is very high, and may in all likelihood transcend the measure that Christians ordinarily attain to: Notwithstanding I shall make it appear, that he is no Christian, nor hath a spark of Faith, that hath not a sincere desire of this: The instance I say is high, if you consider the expression the Apostle useth at verse 2. we groan, the word hath weight and force in it; it is used in Scripture sometime to express desire, and vehement desire; so in Rom. 8. 23. We that have received the first fruits of the spirit, groan for the adoption of the sons of God, that is, we earnestly desire it; sometimes the word in Scripture is used in case of beaviness, and grief, as in Heb. 13. 17. the Apostle bids them have a care to walk so, that they that had the oversight of them might fulfill their work with joy and not with grief. The Apostle was so filled with desire, that he might be in the other

Εν τῷ
σερδῶ-
σῳ.

Μὴ σαρ-
δῶτες.

other world with Christ, that he sate grieving, that he was here below; and that he was not made as blessed as Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, by being in the presence of his Lord: yea the word is used sometimes to import displeasure: as in James 5. 9. grudge not one against the other; it is the very word here; the Apostle was not pleased to be in the world, it was a thing that suited not with His spirit; but that which pleased Him and liked Him most, was to be with Christ; and the Apostle doth not only use such a word, but He heaps words; He saith afterwards, we groan being burdened, which is rendered in 2 Cor. 1. 8. by being pressed; we were pressed above measure: the Apostle apprehends himself in the case of a man in a very great strait, and he had such a desire after Christ, as a man hath when his soul is straitned and pressed with pain in an evil condition. This word burthened imports a charge also, any thing that is heavy: That the Church be not bur-

Μὴ στενά-
ζετε καὶ
ἀλλήλων.

1 Tim. 5.
16
Μὴ βα-
ρύνετε τὴν
ἐκκλησίαν.

burthened, not charged; it is the very word in the Text.

That as a man that lives at a very great expence, is weary of his condition, and poor man he sighs and groans, to have more enlarged means, that he may not thus go burthened with care and sorrow; So the Apostle desired that He might come to live more sweetly, as He knew He should if He were with Christ, &c.

The Apostle addes, we are rather willing, or approve and like of it better, or are better pleased with this; to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord. The force of it is this, I have considered well of the thing, I know and have seen something of the glory of this world, I know I must passe through great straits, through death it self, I must have this body torne and rent off from me: Notwithstanding upon the whole matter considered, we are rather willing to go out of these bodies that we love so dearly, that we may be with the Lord. The Apo-

Εὐδοκῶ-
μεν μᾶλ-λον ἐκδη-
μῶσαι ὅτι
τὸ σῶματι, καὶ ἐν-δημῶσαι
πρὸς τὸ
κύριον.

postle was of a very excellent and sed spirit, the man was swallowed of Immortality, he was exceedgly taken with Jesus Christ; This instance is set here not as our standard,
it as our patternes; not as that by hich Believers shall be judged, but which to provoke themselves; It is them what they should be, and their measure, what all are that do believe; It is good to look at our rules and patterns, not only as they are presented with great indulgence, when we are upon self judgment; but to look on them in their highest elevation, when they are propounded for imitation. As this instance here, is not set as a scantling,
by which all Believers are to be try-ed; yet every one is obliged, and upon many reasons engaged to have a very diligent eye upon it, as upon other examples and patternes of the like raisednesse. Ile give you a breif touch of the great advantage and necessity of casting and keeping our eyes upon these transcendent patternes.

This

— This is a most effectual way to discover our poverty, and low condition, when we look upon the fulness of God, and the raisedness of spirit in the most eminent Saints upon record. When Christians compare themselves only with those beneath them, they may soon work themselves into a fools paradise, and think themselves something, when they are next to nothing: A little hill compared with a Mole-hil seems very great; but compare that with a great swoln Mountain, and that is but as a Mole-hill to it.

Further, the minding of the highest patterns and examples gives us great encouragement; because it shews, there is a possibility of so excellent a state to be attained by us. What would a good man rather chuse then this, to be so separated from this present world, that he might live in God, and to have that victory over himself, and those things that were wont to be snares and temptations in his way; that he might walk with ed with a perfect heart? Now these examples and patterns are set before us in the Scripture, that we may know it is possible that we may be raised to such a condition.
God

Besides, This will keep us from falling in that whereto we have attained to. We read of some that would not sleep when they thought of the Trophies of other worthies that went before them: The highest examples are very quickning, and provoke strongly to imitation; Observe the Apostle, Therefore as ye abound in every thing, in Faith, in patience, in knowledge, and in all diligence, and in love to us, see that ye abound in this grace also: I speak not this by commandment, but by occasion of the forwardness of others, and to prove your sincerity, and the truth of the naturalness of your love.

The Apostle enforceth on them the example of the Macedonians, who had in a very high degree expressed their charity to the poor Saints at Jerusalem, and saith he, took occasion

2 Cor. 8. 7

1100 8. 9

1100 8. 9

from thence, to whet them unto the like mercifulness; And he doth not leave them there upon that example, but he winds them higher in the words following, For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he were rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that you through his poverty might be made rich.

Take ye
up your
eyes.

He would have them look upon the excellency of the Spirit of Christ, and faith, herein I give my advice, for this is expedient, or profitable for you. Nothing is more advantageous to men, then to look on those appearances of God, which are in eminent examples, upon record: They keep men from resting in that whereto they have attained.

Again, it will be an Argument of our uprightness, when we are willing to lay the highest patterns before us; Truth aims at the highest, sincerity doth not bound it self; The Apostle in Philippians, cap. 3. had his heart and dispositions so enlarged, that by his good will, he would rest

no

nowhere, till he attained to the resurrection of the dead; that is, to live their lives, and to have the same affections and dispositions which they have in the other world.

Further, The serious beholding of these excellent Patterns, leaves behind them the seeds of life; Good men when they look upon the examples of Christ, and those that tread in the steps of Christ, do not look upon them as meer liveless statues, but vigorous objects; upon such things that are appointed as an Ordinance for the conveying of spirits to quicken and strengthen them; Looking unto Jesus, saith the Apostle Heb. 12, 3. He propounds that as a means to strengthen them in the midst of all their sufferings; As the Israelites looked to the brazen serpent, being a divine appointment for the conveying of good to those that beheld it, and it restored them to health: so this looking to Christ and to these worthies of Jesus Christ, doth also leave a quickening and enlivening
• upon

2 Cor. 3
latter end

upon the spirit, it is of great advantage for you; you shall gain this way; by beholding the glory of the Lord we are transformed, saith the Apostle, from glory to glory; And the more you get, the better it is for you, your way will be the sweeter; it is the disproportion of strength that makes a mans work heavy. A sick man makes his journey with much difficulty; a man in strength sids in his travels: The more you have of God, the greater will be your testimony; things small in being speak little of a tender thing that is coming up; you scarce know what it is, what to make of it; when it is grown, then you know; when things are tender, you can scarcely distinguish one plant from another.

Once more, we owe the utmost of all that conformity to the minde and will of God, in all our ways which either the primitive state or our rule in their greatest height, or any patterne or example set before us, in their highest perfections, do call for
at

at our hands ; I say, we owe all this to God, and therefore we should be casting our Eyes upon those things, whereby we may work our selves day by day into more fitness to fulfil that whereto we are called.

The Example in this place is transcendent, therefore I shall pass it over as a thing transcendent ; onely I'll give you this account, That there were these four things, which the Apostle had, that made him outstrip and go beyond the common size of Christians ; if not then, yet at least in these days : I say, if not then, because that in those days there was a more plentiful effusion of the Spirit upon Believers then there is now, in so much that frequently God sealed up the acceptations of men by an extraordinary portion of his Spirit given to them. The four things are these :

The first is Light : in this the Apostle excelled ; He expresseth it thus ; who hath abounded toward us in all wisdom and Understanding. God had largely and liberally given out the Knowledge of Himself to him. Now we know that the more the things of Eternity are revealed, the more effectual and powerful they are in their attraction and drawing of the heart to them; for they move not the heart at all, but by the meditation of divine Light. It is all one to a blinde man, whether there be a Crown and a Jewel of incomparable worth before him, or a chip and peece of earth; but it is the discovery of things that makes them take hold according to their nature and worth.
K largely

The second thing is, the deep taste that the Apostle had of the things of the World to come; it is that taste and sense of things which the Apostle speaks of, That you may abound in all knowledg, and all judgment; that word may be read in all sense. When as God communicated Mysteries that were of high concernment to Balaam, he had no taste, or not an effectual taste of them; but he delivered them as Cooks do meat, which they

Phil. 1. 9.
Εν παντι
αἰσιν.

they dress for the Master of the Family, and Friends, and children; but themselves taste not of it. But the Apostle Paul had a deep taste in his spirit of the things that were revealed to him; and the taste was the better, because he had them at the well-head: for he had the knowledge and discovery of things by immediate Revelation; which as it had much light, so it had influence with strength.

3. Besides that, He had a high degree of Sanctification. Sanctification is the fitting and forming of men in this life to a state of glory; Who hath formed us to this very thing, saith the Apostle in Vers. 5. of this Chapter. Now as a thing is more formed to its end, so the propension of it is more abundant towards that end: A Child, the more it is formed and perfected in Nature, the more strongly it makes after the things of a man. You see that the fruit in the bud by degrees it breaks the bud, and comes to blossom, and it throws off the flower, and puts it self forth in its own form, and ceaseth not till it comes to its end. The little seed in the ground lies for a time like a dead thing; but as it is fitted in Natures work-house for its end, so it breaks the shell and the earth, and forceth its way out, and so hath a tendency increasing towards its end.

The more holy any man is, the more strongly he is carryed out after God, because Sanctification is the fitting and forming of him for God; and herein the Apostle abounded.

The fourth thing is Assurance; the Apostle excelled in this. Concerning Assurance, if I may speak my Heart, I do it with grief and sadness; It is a thing that is much talked of, but little know; so that I am persuaded there is not one good man of forty, that hath attained to an Assurance, that his name is written in the Book of Life, and that Heaven is his Portion. I may in due time take an occasion and season to speak of that state, in which God holds his people here beneath the fulness of that persuasion.

swasion and assurance, so that they lie laboring, tugging and toying under, longing indeed for it, but yet under the pressure of many fears.

But at present let me but hint, that there is a very great mistake certainly, to think that Faith is Assurance, which some assert. Will you see a little into the thing? and I'll touch it very briefly, but as a thing by the way.

1. Without Faith no man can be saved, but without assurance it is possible. God never said, Except thou be assured that I will pardon thee, I will not save thee: but he hath said, Except thou beleeve, thou shalt be damned. Heman and others, recorded in the Scripture, were sometimes in their way without assurance; and had they dyed in that state, had gone to Heaven.

Further, If you should say, that Faith is Assurance, a full perswasion that my sins are forgiven, then it thwarts the Scripture; for the Scripture saith thus, We are justified by Faith: it doth not say; We are justified by Assurance; because if this Faith (be it what it will be) stand in the place of the Cause of our Pardon, so that we must beleieve, and then shall be pardoned; to say, that Faith is Assurance, is to make Faith to be the believing of a falsehood; because a mans sins are not pardoned, till he beleieves. If Faith then be made to be an Assurance of my sins being forgiven, it would suppose that I must beleieve that which yet is not. And it is that argument which some Papists have urged upon our Writers, which frequently have given that for the definition of Faith, a full perswasion of our sins being forgiven us.

Besides, the foundation, and rise, and strength of Faith is one thing, and that of Assurance is another: Faith builds upon the Authority of God speaking in the Promise, Assurance builds upon the Evidences of our Interest in the Promise; therefore one cannot be the other.

But

But further, Faith admits of Degrees; your Faith grows exceedingly, saith the Apostle 2 Thess. 1. 3. And he told them, he desired to see them, and to be with them, to supply what was lacking to their Faith: but there is no degrees and growth of Assurance; for it being a full perswasion, it admits of no degrees. If you suppose but one doubt, the least doubt, it ceaseth to be Assurance. A man is never assured that hath an intermixture of the least hesitation, or doubting.

Faith is an act, not onely of the Understanding, but of the Will; for it is not onely a beleeving, that what God saith is true, but a receiving and accepting of those things and truths, or a relying upon God for the accomplishing of his Promise. But Assurance is an act onely of the Understanding, being a full Perswasion, and certain Conclusion, that they are blessed.

Further, Faith cannot be lost; it is among those things that are immortal. Assurance is a thing that is subject to change, and oftentimes ceaseth; and he that denies that, denies common experience: for we know this, that the rejoycing of the Saints is subject to clouds and damps; yea even those that have been most eminent, have been brought under fears.

To add no more but this; There be many Christians that have not those things that are the proper effects of Assurance; therefore there be Christians that are in the state of grace, and shall be saved, and yet not have Assurance.

What are the proper effects of Assurance but high Joy, and all Joy, always rejoycing? What is it, but walking with all courage, all patience and long-suffering, with joyfulness? What is it in effect, but a cheerful strong resigning of a mans self, and an abiding vehement propension of the Soul after God, and the enjoyment of his presence? such as the Apostle here speaks of, a groan-

groaning, earnest groaning, even as a man that is burthened to be in Heaven?

In vain do any speak to me of their Assurance of Heaven, and are not in this World but with patience and longing, more then for life it self, to be in that Blessedness that is with Christ in Heaven: but all Christians have not attained to this height.

CHAP. VIII.

All Saints desire to see and enjoy Christ, and the Glory prepared for them.

BUT after all that hath been said, grant that which must be granted, That this Scripture, which is the breathing of the Apostles spirit from so excellent and high a degree of grace, that is something transcendent to the ordinary pitch of Believers, notwithstanding the Point stands good, That all that beleeve, do desire & wish in their hearts, that they were with Christ Jesus; it is made in Scripture a mark of Christians; Henceforth is layd up for me a Crown of righteousness; and not for me only, but for all Saints; but he doth not say so, but for all that love the appearance of Jesus Christ.
of

2 Tim. 4. 8

This is sure, it is a distinguishing mark upon men: If a mans Heart come not up to this Rule, that he can truly say that he desires to be present with Jesus Christ, truly he knows not the Lord.

For, in the first place, consider the efficacy of Divine Love; the love of man is such, that it doth not always work so, as to make himself beloved where he doth love; there is a weakness in it, saith the Apostle, Though the more I love you, the less I am beloved of you. But Gods Love is of that power and force, that it doth work those whom he loves to a love of him again

2 Cor. 12.

15

again: we love him, because he loved us first; that love begets this. Now what a man loves (and so strongly as Christ is loved of those that know him) that a man cannot but desire to enjoy; nay what a man loves, he cannot but wish to have in all his communications; he would not only hear of his Friend, but see his Friend. A Christian would not only hear of Christ, but see him face to face; and you know this is the very natural work of Love. The Love we should have to Christ is an ingenuous Love; it is not a Love that can be content to be without him; it is not a love only to the things of Christ, and that happiness of the condition and state which we have by Christ; but above all to Jesus Christ Himself. Therefore, as where there is ingenuity and Love without corruption, there is a desire to have the enjoyment of the things beloved; so every man that believes in Christ, and loves Him, desires to be with Him: where a mans treasure is, there will his heart be also; they are the

the

the words of Christ. There will his Heart be ; What's that ? Not only that a man will be thinking of them, but the desire of his Soul will be upon that thing ; the heart will be lodged there, and his desires will be working towards it, that he may be possessed, and have the enjoyment of that which he loves.

Again, All things have a propensity to the place from whence they came. Take a peece of earth, that you know will work downward as much as it can, till it come to the place whence it was taken : So fire or ayr, that come from a higher place, will work upward, and you shall not be able to keep them down, but they travel with a perpetual tendency to the places whence they were taken. This is most evidently seen in things that have life, especially that have the best life ; the Lamb hath naturally a propensity towards the Dam from which it sprang, and cannot be quiet without it. The little Infant naturally lives in the presence of its Mother : but how

how much more when this life is raised to a life of Reason and Understanding? and how doth one friend long to enjoy another? so that as all Rivers flow from the Sea, and return to the Sea; so it is with those that believe: That divine or godly nature in them, being from God, leaves in them a tendency towards God.

Again, all things (we know) in nature tend to their Center, and end, beyond which they cannot move: What ever the happiness of men is conceived to be, after that men do make, and cannot but make after it; for though the will move arbitrarily towards this or that good in particular: yet it moves necessarily towards that which is to a man his chiefest good. So that a believer being convinced that his happiness lies in the enjoyment of God, he cannot but breath after that very thing, and there is nothing in the world that they can esteem like it. There is a harmony in all Saints, and an agreement in their spirits, with that of the Psalmist. Whom have

have I in heaven but thee? and what is there on earth in comparison of thee? and whoever is not of this Consort, is none of Christs, because he is not convinced, nor hath received light, to see that his happiness is in God.

And further, all that believe love the beginnings of that state, which is reserved for them; the first fruits are very sweet, and very precious, and by the same reason, the Crop and the whole harvest must needs be better. If a Christian so prize the sprinkling of that water of life upon him, that he would not part with it for all the world; if when the evidences of these things are hid from him he cannot rest, but he cries & prayes, and ceaseth not, till he recover himself into his former estate, much more must his heart be carryed out after the full enjoyment of the things themselves: If the sight of heaven be so drawing, then heaven in the enjoyment of it much more.

You know the Saints in the former world, I mean of the Jews, longed longed after the day of Christ on earth, Abraham desired to see his day, he saw it a far off, and was glad, now judg, if the spirit of God in these holy men made them so long after Christ in the flesh, how much more doth the same spirit make those that are his long after Christ in glory? Now have the Saints prized these glances and representations of Christ, which have been afforded them? You know how David expresseth himself in ps. 63, 94. Pl. That his heart panted after God, nothing was dear to him like his being in the enjoyment of the Ordinances wherein he beheld God. If the sight of God and Christ in these discourses, representations and shadows of him, be so precious in the eyes of Saints, how much more precious is God and Christ himself? He say no more of it but this; The same Spirit that is, and was in Christ on earth, is in all the Saints; the Scripture says so, Every man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his. It is the same spirit that moveth, and acts in the foet.

John 8, 56

177 pro siti
clamavit.

Rom. 8, 9.

feet, that acts in the head ; Look then, what ever the Spirit of Holiness in Christ did work, it doth work the like effects in proportion in those that are his. Now Christ when He was in the World , did long to be with his Father ; rejoyced very much when the time came ; You know how He prayed, and often expressed himself in this : Therefore judg of your selves by this ; If any man have the Spirit of Christ, he must in some measure also desire to bee with Christ.

This shall suffice for the demonstration and setting off of this truth, That every one that believes in Jesus Christ, doth desire to enjoy him ; every one that hath received Faith, desires the enjoyment of that blessedness which is prepared.

CHAP.

CHAP. IX.

Unbelievers cannot desire to see and enjoy God and Christ in Heaven.

L Et all men be perswaded to write by this Copy, to endeavour to walk in the steps of the Apostle, and to be like him, that they may say as he said; We desire, and as men burthened, so we groan after the enjoyment of God in the world to come. A very unwelcome counsel it is to the world, who love not to be raised an inch higher then their naturall pitch; we do but speak as to men that dream, when you counsel them to breath after the other world, who have pitched their Tabernacles here below, and desire no other portion then they have in hand.

Indeed it is impossible for a man as he is unreduced to his Primitive state, and as he stands in a state of separation from God, to come to any mature, fixed, and effectual desire of enjoying God in blessedness. But this sad contemplation is most necessary, He lay you down these few foundations of it.

L

on

Use.

First, that men have lost the sight of God: Man was formed in Light, but not keeping that standing, sunk into a state of Darkness, and is become quite another thing; the Scripture calls men in their natural state children of darkness, not only because they walk in darkness, but because they have the Original of that unhappiness, which now they are, in from Darkness. As the people of God are called the Children of Light, because that divine light is their Parent, the root of that life and blessed state whereto they are restored, so the children of darkness, because they are molded and formed by darkness into that unhappy state wherein now they are, are so called; the Apostle in the 1 Col. 12. speaks of this power of darkness, who hath delivered us saith he from the power of darkness, and translated us into the Kingdom of his dear son : indeed the power of darkness is very great , and the effect and consequence of darkness are more infallible , and more constantly seen than those of light. The Angels were all formed in light , but that which is the proper effect and fruit of that state of life which they fell from doth not appear , but darkness infallibly draws with it its consequences and effects. As it is with all privations, they are little in being, but strong in effects, the strongest bonds we can lay upon the body of a man, do not set him at that distance from action as an Apoplexy, or some such disease, which deprives him of the power of motion ; it is not any covering of the eyes, that puts a man so far from sight as the extention and breaking of that Organ, whereby a man is deprived of the power of sight : a man naturally is under the power of darkness ; and as the loss which is sustained by privation is irreparable in nature, for we say there is returning from privation to a habit,
and

L 2

but

but by a divine power; so man having once deprived himself of that state of light in which he was, abides in it; so that what was said of them, 1 John 2. 9. is true of all, they abide in darkness even till now: and as light is the spring of all motion, divine light in the spirit of a man is the fountain of all motion towards God, so darknes or not seeing of God is the spring of death, it is that which binds up the whole man in cords, in chains. And as in the world things are busie in the Day-light, and in the night all are at rest, except some ravenous creatures, whose life is most in the night; so it is with this state of man, there being darkness spread over his soul, he sleeps in this night, and is at rest, and moves not toward God, only there are ravenous irregular brutish passions, affections, and propension, these are acting and working in him.

*Non dantur
pure
tembra.*

It is true indeed, as we say in nature, there is no perfect darkness, there is some light in man by nature, a night-light, such a light as hath lost its Regiment,

giment, and is out of Government, because it is fallen from that height in which its power lay : a less light then that which a man was formed in, will not suffice to govern him, as a less light then that of the Sun, will not suffice to the quickening of the world, and preserving of things in that state in which they are ; So that though Man have some glimmering sight of God, yet this works not his heart to a propension towards God; he doth doth not desire the enjoyment of God rightly, because he is in a state of darkness. The wise man hath this Speech; That the Soul be without knowledge, is not good; the words may be read, and by some is, and the original favours it; without knowledg the mind is not good; good, that is, is not what it should be, in no fitness to its end ; as we say a knife is good, and any thing is good when it is able to produce its proper work : The Soul is not good without knowledg, it cannot do the thing to which it was appointed: Nothing is more natural to man, ac-

Prov. 19. 2

גמבלא

דעת

נפש לא

טוב

according to his Creation, then to seek after God, and now nothing is more difficult and impossible for him to do, having lost his knowledg, his mind is not good. The Apostle expresth this fully. Ephes. 4. 18. Having their understandings darkened, being alienated from the life of God, through the ignorance that is in them. Alienated from the life of God is through ignorance: There is a double Alienation.

One is an Alienation of a thing in Law, that is, when a thing passeth from one hand to another, when it passeth from the right of one, and is transferred to another, so that it becomes another mans; so man is alienated from God, that whereas by nature he was in a state of intimate relation, and was a peculiar thing to God, now he is become another, and fallen under another power.

There is another Alienation, and that is natural, an alienation in nature, when a thing passeth from one state to another, as when a thing is corrupted, corrupted, it is altered and changed from the former state of its being; now darkness is the cause of this Alienation, that a man is past from that state wherein he was, and sunk into a worse; another state, a contrary condition: so that this is the misery of men, that they cannot desire after God. There is not one man in all the world, that hath not received a new nature, and light from above, that can breathe after God as the Apostle did, and say, I desire to be dissolved and to be with Christ.

2. Consider that man by nature hath lost his Conformity unto God, and this Conformity was the rise and fountain of that Complacency and contentment which a man hath in God, and was the spring of all their motion towards God.

Man as he cometh out of Gods hand, lives in a perpetual and delightful prosecution after God, in a contentful and joyful Communion with God: Harmony is the basis of contentment; the suitability and agreeableness of things to us, to our appetites, is that which makes us contented and satisfied in the enjoyment of them. A nature conformed to God doth center in God, and lives in God; there is an attractive and a retentive power in likeness, a power that draws and holds the spirit to it; Now man having lost this, he is become unlike to God, and is fallen into another state: and as a man cannot desire that in which he cannot rest, there is no motion naturally to that, whose end is not rest: So no man can desire after God naturally, because he cannot find nor enjoy contentment and blessedness in God; Though God be good and goodness it self, the fountain of all good, yet there is a great disproportion and unsutableness between God and man, so that man cannot desire God as his happiness. There is a two-fold incongruity in things.

L 4

thing

The first is an incongruity of meer convenience and unsutableness; The other is of contrariety? The life of the Angels had an inconvenience in it

it to the state and nature of a mortal man : there is an excellency in an Angelical state and life , that suits not to the nature of mortal men.

But now there is incongruity of contrariety in the life of Serpents, Toads, and such like things to the nature of man ; the nature of man abhorres such a life, as that there is not only an incongruity of inconveniences and unsutableness, that is come between God and man , but an incongruity of contrariety, so that as light is contrary to darkness, so man is contrary to God ; you know contrarities beget fights and flights, a man always shuns that which is contrary to him, Nature doth so, and it cannot but use all possible means to the utmost to keep it off.

The Flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit lusteth against the Flesh, and these two are contrary. Indeed that and is as much as for they are contrary, therefore there is a contest and a war between them. The war between tween the Flesh and the Spirit, is the war between God and man; Mans nature riseth up against God, and all that is of God; so that there can be no effectual propension in the nature of man towards God, because of unsuitableness and contrariety.

Naturally then all the affections, and all the out-goings of the Soul are blind and brutish, all are aberrations and wanderings from God; so as they set men every moment at a further distance from God, and men think to make themselves blessed without God. This men may easily conceive, If it were possible for a man to sink out of the nature of a man into the nature of a beast, all his actions, motions and affections would be brutish, such as beasts are; A man is so changed, as if he were become a beast indeed, sunk from the state of holiness, from the image of God, into a state so depraved, as sets him in a greater contrariety and distance from God, then the nature of Beasts is to the nature of man.

There

There is something in God, men may say, that nature likes, but it is a mistake, man naturally doth not like God; something of God, which men may mold and form to themselves, they may seem to like, but not as it is in God: The mercy of God which seems to be the nearest to their liking, take it as it is in God, and men like it not: take mercy, as it is a just, holy mercy, as it is in God, in communication with all his divine excellencies and glories, and there is nothing that the nature of man doth more luctate against, then that.

Thirdly, That which a man fears, that he doth not desire, we hate that man whom we fear; all fear hath torment, and that is contrary to men: As a man would be rid of that which vexeth him, so he would be rid of that which he fears. There is a fear that is from disproportion, and that is not always a burthen; So the child fears his Father, because he is so beneath him, and depends upon him; there is a transcendency in the Fathers relation

and

Oderint
qu'm me-tuunt.

and qualiries, and power, above the childs : And so the best men fear God most.

But then there is a fear that is from suspicion, or knowledg of disaffection towards us in him whom we fear, and this is in all men by nature towards God. Conscientiousness of sin, and knowledg of the law, which is but the expreſſion of the purpose and counſel of God, and represents God as one angry, and prosecuting ſin to death, cauſe men to fly from God in all their thoughts, and labor to ſhelter themſelves from him; and they no more can deſire to live in God, then a man can deſire to live in the fire : Yea the truth is, that it is the proper and naked wiſh of every mans heart, as he is by nature, that there were no God. Nothing is more natural to a man, to wiſh now in his ſtate of depravation, then that He were not, or that God were not; but more ſtrongly he wiſheth that there were no God; So that men cannot come up to this, to deſire bleſſedneſs in the enjoyment of

of God, till they be changed; much less can men desire to be blessed in the enjoyment of God in Christ. This is certain.

For no man naturally is sufficiently convinced of his need of such an one as Christ is, nor can by any light of Nature be convinced that he needs such a Saviour. The sinfulness of sin, and our misery, doth not appear, but by a light that is supernatural: when the Law came, saith the Apostle, sin revived, &c. that is, when it came on the wings and beams of Divine Light: for he knew the Law before; but when he had it in a spiritual and supernatural understanding, then he saw sin to be exceeding sinful. And this is that which every man hath naturally in him, Not to lean upon another, when he can stand by himself. There is a strange disposition in the heart of man, to be self-sufficient; he will not borrow while he hath enough at home. A man cannot see his need of Christ till it be revealed to him, therefore he cannot come

Rom. 7. 23
 ἵνα ᾧται καὶ
 ὑπερβο-λὴν αἰμαρτῶν.

to desire after God in Christ.

Besides, The Nature of man is full of self-flattery; and observe it, whether you have not found in your selves such a thing as self-flattery: as for example, Some men have pleased themselves with this conceit, That the actions we do here below are not much taken notice of by so great a God: That such an infinite and glorious One stoops not to take notice of every word and action that a man doth here below; but that is a self-flattering Opinion, and a lie against God; who, by reason of his Infiniteness and Omniscience, and His concurrence to all actions, must needs know them. Again, Though I finde my self out of order, and live not regularly, yet there is infinite goodness in God, and I hope I may finde grace in his sight. It is true indeed, the apprehension of divine goodness is a just ground of hope, but no ground of Hope to a man that purposeth to continue in sin; for that were not goodness for God to indulge men in evil

Epicureans

Non tantum bonum esse, malo quod indulget.

evil; that were not goodness which acts against God himself: but God should act against Himself, if He should allow thee or me in the evil of our hearts and ways. A most wretched disposition this is in the Heart of man: an example of it you have in Micah 3. 11. The Heads thereof judge for reward, and the Priests preach for hire; yet will they lean upon the Lord, and say, Is not the Lord among us? no evil can come upon us. They had an apprehension of God being engaged to them in Covenant, and they had experience of God being good to them; and so they rested and leaned upon God, though they walked in the evil of their own hearts. But mark the therefore that follows: Therefore shall Zion for your sake be plowed as a field, and Jerusalem shall be an heap, and the mountain of the house as the high places of the forest. So that if a man say, God will be good to me, therefore I will walk in the ways of my own heart, the wrath of God and his jealousy shall smoke against gainst that man, and he will strike out his name from under Heaven; as in that dreadful place, Deut. 29. 19.

But because of these self-flatteries that are naturally in men, and their not being convinced of the necessity of Christ, it is impossible for a man, as he is in himself, to desire the enjoyment of God in Christ. Yet notwithstanding we must not cease to perswade, and call upon men, to do as the Apostle did; it is as well our duty as it was his, be our case what it may be: Suppose we are sunk into as deep depravation as ever mortal men in this World were, yet this ceaseth not to be our duty, [what bindes one, bindes all,] To breathe after God, and to seek Blessedness in the enjoyment of Him. And no man can fall short of this, but he runs himself upon the Wrath of God, and plungeth himself into the depth of irrecoverable Misery, and casts himself into the state of Devils, if he do not desire to be blessed in the enjoyment of God.

CHAP.

CHAP. X.

*Saints desire, yet are loth
to go hence; and its Causes, with Arguments to quicken Desires.*

BUT the Exhortation lies more neer, and in the greatest possibi- lity to them that beleeve; they must
and they do desire after God, and now
see by Faith the things of the World
o come. There are these two things to name no more) that carry such in lesires after things not seen, and the njoyment of God in the state and ondition of those in the other World.

1. The present state, in which they re, is a state in which there is a com-
ixtare of love and want; they nei-er have out of the things that are eir life sufficient to live upon, nor ve they of the things themselves
M that that which they desire. As their love doth not answer to the excellency of the Object, so their Enjoyment of it doth not answer to their Love. No man that hath most of God, hath that which answers to his affections to God. Now you know when a mans heart lays up much in a thing, of which he enjoys little, it goes much after it. A man that hath little wealth, and strongly desires to be rich, his Heart moves strongly and constantly after it. So a man that hath but little of God (as this is the case of all men, of the best men) as his Heart is fixed upon God, so he is in a constant desire after God. When I say [constant] I allow for those interruptions that are inevitable, and those infirmities that befall even good men themselves. That men have but little of God here, the Scripture speaks to; it is but a taste, the first fruits, the earnest: and you know all these things are but little, in comparison of those things to which they are referred. What's a taste to the

Feast?

Feast? and what's the first fruits to the crop? and what's the earnest to the Inheritance, or the Purchase? Love is impatient of want; therefore they that do beleeve, desire they may be blessed in the enjoyment of God.

In the next place, They are drawn; their hearts go out after God because they are drawn by God; not onely by his divine Excellency as it is an Argument, but by God as an Agent, one that exerciseth his Power upon whom he loves, as the Apostle speaks of the power of God working in Beleevers: All excellency of goodness is attractive, but it hath not always force to draw to the enjoyment of it self; sometimes it draws out our Hearts to admiration onely, but not to a desire of enjoying: but now that which is in God is such, as that it draws the Heart of a man that knows God in desire of enjoying Him; Whom have I in Heaven but thee? &c.

Eph. 1. 19

And God draws as an Agent, and his attraction is the stronger because

M 2

it

it is out of Love, and the highest Love. God draws the Hearts of his people to Himself because He loves them much, and therefore He intends to make them blessed in that which only can make them blessed, even in the Enjoyment of Himself; So that though they would have their hearts remaining in the World as others do, (as Lot would stay in Sodom,) yet God leads them forth.

Again, This Love acts upon a subject fitted for it; He works us for this very thing: When there is a drawing of a thing that is apt to go, as when we draw a thirsty beast to the water, and a hungry man to his meat, this drawing is the more effectual, because the attraction suits with the condition and propensity of the person. God draws, having first wrought a disposition in the Hearts of his people toward Himself, therefore they are certainly moved toward Him. Some conceive there is a Magnetick Power in the Heavens, that when a man is at such a height they

they will keep him there. Certainly there is such a power in divine goodness, that it draws those to whom it makes known it self: My Soul, saith David, follows hard after thee; or is glued to thee; I cannot go from thee; there is a close knitting of my Soul to thee: Whence is this? Thy right hand upholds me. This drawing is in all the Saints universally, but not equally; it is not alike in degree; some excel, and some come short; some desire after God with more alacrity, more vehemency and constancy, then others do; nothing is more apparent: What a great difference was there between Hezekiab and Paul? Hezekiab, when he was told he should dye (it is likely he had a great respect to the state of things which he was leaving) mourns like a Sparrow on the Housetop, and chatters like a Swallow; and compares himself to many sad things: But Paul, when he looked Death in the face, I fear it not so much, saith he, as I wish to be with Christ.

Psal. 63. 8

There is a lothness to dye that may consist with this desire, (it could not but be in your thoughts all this while, that I have been treating of mens desire to be with God,) but that there is a visible lothness in those that beleeve, to go out of this World.

There is a double Lothness; One that proceeds from an Excellency of of Nature and Disposition. Another from weakness and infirmity.

There is a Lothness proceeding from an excellency of Nature, and a nobleness of spirit; that is, when though a man knows that His Portion is in God, yet He is so far against his own good, that for the good of others he is contented to stay below: though He knows it were better for Him to be in Heaven, and wishes with all his Heart He were there; yet in consideration of others, and for their service, He is contented to stay till the time appointed, as long as God shall see good to use him.

This was the Apostles case, Phil. 1. 23. To be with Christ is far better, then

then to stay here; nevertheless to abide in the flesh is more needful for you. Having this confidence, I know I shall abide and continue with you all, for the furtherance of your Faith and joy. This was all that Paul aymed at: He tells you at Vers. 20. It was all one to him whether Christ were magnified in his body by life, or by death. If by life, He was contented, if by death, that was well too; nay, his desire was rather to be gone hence; onely for their sakes he was contented to stay here. This is an excellent state, when a mans life in this World is an act of patience and contentedness; when our life here is by necessity, not of choyce; when a man is contented to stay till he hath finished his course, and his glass be run, but his Hearts desire is to be out of this World, and to be with God.

There is another sort of Lothness that is more ignoble, the causes whereof are more inglorious and mean: So we shall finde that among Beleevers there is a withdrawing from the other World; partly from fear of such things as lie between us and that, and partly from an inordinate cleaving to present things: even those that beleeve oftentimes have a sad and secret drawing back from God, upon a sad apprehension of three things, that have a frightful visage, and so a sad influence upon their spirits.

The first is Dissolution; Nature shakes at this, to have the bond of Union between the Soul and the Body broken; to have one rent from the other. Men are loth to dye; and indeed Death is of all evils the worst, for it comprehends all: And what particular evils do, one by one, Death doth all at once. God hath set this in our way, and it cannot be removed: He is immutably fixed in his Purpose, That whosoever comes to Heaven shall pass through Death. We cannot have a House above, but by pulling, yea and tearing down too oftentimes of this earthly Tabernacle. It is appointed for all men

once

Τῶν φοβε-
ρῶν φοβερῶτατον.

once to dye ; God hath layd this up as a Decree that shall never be reversed, a Decree that subjects all unto Death. And the Apostle Paul sets forth Death in the state and power of a King ; Death reigned, saith he ; it playd the King over us ; so that all fell before it : And Death being King of Terrors, Nature starts at this ; And the Apostle Paul saith himself, that though he were so desirous to be in Heaven, not that he would be unclothed, that is a thing impossible to be desired for it self, being so repugnant to the Nature of man ; but yet Paul had overcome the dread of Death, and therefore saith in the words following the Text, we are willing rather to be absent from the body ; although there be a very great league between us and the body, yet rather, saith he, then to be without Christ, I would be without my body ; and if there be no way to come to Heaven but by Death, I am rather contented to dye to be there, then to live to be absent from the Lord.

An

Hebr. 9. 27
Ἀπὸ θανάτου.

Rom. 5. 17
Ἐβασίλευσεν.

Iob. 18. 14
i. e. most terrible.

*Veritatem
in cineres,
veritatem
esse patet.*

1 Cor. 15.

Psal. 16.
9, 10.

*Another evil that is in our way is corruption: it is not merely death that we taste of, but we must taste also of corruption, when this body of ours shall be made vile, and be turned into dust, and become the meat of worms. Nature sticks at this, to think that the body that she bears, which is so dear to us, should be thus dishonored to be made the most loathsome thing in all the world; it is sown in dishonor saith the Apostle, yea in dishonor with a witness; And nature sticks at this: Christ himself shewed what affection he had to his substance and the being of his body; therefore my heart is glad, and my glory rejoiceth; my flesh also rested in hope, for thou wilt not leave my soul in hell (or the grave) nor wilt thou suffer thy holy one to see corruption. And surely if the Lord had pleased, it would have been gladness to all the sons of men, that we might have escaped that sad and heavy change, to have our bodies moulded into dust and filth, but it must not be.*

And

And there is a third evil and that is judgment, or appearing in person before the great God : when none shall be with us we slip out of the body, and no creature sees us when we are gone but one step out, nor know they whither we go ; Dust and Ashes shakes, when it considers the infinite greatness and majesty of that God before whom it must appear, and when it considers the irresistible power of that sentence, the sudden and inevitable effects of it, that by a word a man lives or dyes to all eternity ; especially the guilt of sin oppressing, and conscience not fully quieted, by the sprinkling of the blood of Christ ; this makes good men even those whose names are written in the Book of Life, to hang back and to startle, that they dare not pass this way ; fain they would be in Heaven, they like that well ; but as it lies in this way, and is attended with such things as these, that they like not : these things are like that Sword in the hand of the Cherubin, which you read of in Gen. 3. last. standing in

in a mans way to Paradise, and frightening him, but this is a weakness, a lothness from impotencie: there is another lothness and that is from an inordinate affecting of our present state; good men are too apt to fall in love with this present world; they are so pleased with their relation, their habitation, and possession, that they are loth to depart hence. It is a most sad thing to be thus, what ever a man sets his heart on, to that he subjects his self; such a Christian as this, such an earthly spirited Christian shall pay dear for it; this is his temper, he is divided between two, knows not well which is best, he thinks it better to enjoy God; but to enjoy God upon these terms, there he sticks, he comes off hardly there, a most unchristian temper; What, shall we rather chuse to live in Babylon, then go to Sion? Are we so in love with rags, that we cannot be contented to put them off to be clothed with robes of Glory? are we set here to pass through the world, and do we root our selves in the the earth? This is to fall beneath the dignity of our state, and not to walk worthy of the calling wherewith we are called.

My exhortation is to all; That you will endeavour to be cast into the Apostles mould, that your affections might be upon the wing, and that you may make his flight, and steer his course toward heaven, toward things not seen, toward the world to come. I shall direct my words first to such as believe not, and then to those that believe. For those that believe not, who account this same change dreadful, and cannot hear of it, so much as a motion to be made of it without discontent, that so like to have their root fastned on earth, that the very thought of a change troubles them, and they could wish that their Eternity were here; I could say three words to such.

First, What ever thou art, thou sinnest against nature, and those sins are the worst sins; Man was so made, as that the natural propension of his spirit

Spirit was toward God; as he had the Image of God upon him, so he did naturally wheel and move toward God: It is so through the whole Creation, every thing inclines to that whole Image it bears: remember, remember whence you are, and whose off-spring; have you one whom you call Father in Heaven, and are you content always to live from home? is that the spirit of a child? When will the world say in themselves, as the Church in another case, I will return to my first husband, for it was better with me then, then now? You cannot tell how well it was with you when you lived with God, and when you had always communion with him.

Hos. 2. 2.

Man hath lost not only the Sight, but the Remembrance of that, and cannot guess at it now by any light of his own; But shall it never be in the heart of man to make toward his Primitive state? and to return to that God from whom he hath departed?

Let none plead Impotencie as an excuse, excuse; thy weakness is not want of power, but want of will and a contentedness of heart in things without God, which grows on thee every day; And the more thy heart is fixed and nayed to this earth, the more difficult will thy return be.

Again consider, It is a sin against the Gospel; for what is the voyce of the Gospel but God in Christ Jesus calling you to believe, that you may have life from Christ? and not only to live upon him, as a Prince lives upon his Fathers honor and greatness in a strange Land, but you are called by the Gospel also to come unto Christ, you are invited to come and be where he is: And a right answer to that word of life, and tender of grace, imports no less then this, that you should follow the Lamb where-soever he goes, and not to be with him only in Spirit in this world, but to be with him in person in the world to come. So the Apostle exhorts, That you walk worthy of God, who hath called you to his Kingdom and Glory; you are not

1 Thes.
12.

not only called to the obedience of the truth, but to a glorious state in the world to come; now then if you imagine to your selves such a coming to Christ, to subject your selves to him in obedience, but to live here without any inclination of your hearts to an enjoyment of him in his Kingdom; you mistake the matter: this is not to answer the meaning of the Gospel, and the import of that voyce that speaks to you to come to Christ; we must not in our closing with Christ do as Beggars that come to a door, but care not to enter; if they have their alms they are gone, and care not to see the Masters face: you must come to Christ as the Sponse of Christ; and doth not the Wife desire to be where her Husband is? that must be your Spirit that David speaks of in Psal. 45. Hear O daughter and consider, forget thy friends and thy Fathers house; this must be your disposition, lay down your selves and your present interests in this world to enjoy Jesus Christ, but now when your your hearts stick fast below, you sin against the Gospel, and continue standing out against the voyce of it.

And think of this in the third place, that your desires are discoveries of your nature and end: every creature suites with that Element in nature that is answerable to its composition & frame; so we see fishes desire to be in the water, and fowls in the ayr, there is a bias upon them, a peculiar nature that carries them to their own good.

When thy heart is hanging toward the world, what saith this, but that there is a suitableness between thy heart, and the world; and that thou art earthly and worldly, of the nature of this world? Yea, the propensions of men shew not only their natures, but their ends; Every man may read his doom in his dispositions, excepting only the intervention of the free grace of God that can come in to hinder when he pleaseth; But we speak of the natural effects of the dispositions in men. God hath designed to all his creatures places convenient and suitable

N

ble

ble to them, and hath cut out to every kind their proper portion. He hath not provided hay and grass for mans food and subsistence, nor hath he allotted Learning, Honor, and Wealth to be the portion of unreasonable creatures, but hath appointed to every one according to their natures.

Now thou mayst know thy end by thy dispositions. If thou hast no dispositions to the other world, it is a sign thou hast no portion there, because there is a suitableness between that place, and those that have their portion in it. It is a sad thing for a man to live in such a state, wherein he cannot desire the things of the other world, but hath his heart cleaving and fastned to present things.

Now let me speak a word to them that believe; it much concerns you to have such a spirit as is always breathing after the presence of Christ in Heaven, your relations are there there is your Father, and your Eldest Brother, and there are many of you Brethren, there is your Interest, you

estat

ad hoc fratres dilectissimi
avidam curpiditate
perperamus
ut cum his cito esse, ut
ad Christum
venire con-
temur op-timis.
Cyp. de mortal.

estate is there if you believe; where a mans treasure is, there his heart is saith Christ; Will you have your hearts and your estate so far asunder? and will it not cause this jealousy in your own spirits; that in Heaven your treasure is not, because your hearts are here in the Earth?

Mat. 6. 21.

It is best for you to be there; why do you then hold back so much? It is best for me, saith Paul, to desert Christ, that is best of all, for there is the best rest. Will you chuse trouble and weariness to your selves, when rest is provided for you? There is the best place. Will you live in Egypt rather then go to Canaan? There is the best company. Will you be content to live in Asshur, and to dwell in the tents of Kedar, when you may be with Angels, and the Spirits of just men made perfect, and with Jesus the Mediator of the new Covenant, and with the living God? There is the best State and Condition of things: Will you rather chuse to continue in the world sickly, and poor, and miserable, in a

Cum vide-
re Christum
gaudere sit,
nec possit
esse gaudium
nisi
cum vide-
rimus Chri-stum, quæ
cæcitas
animi, quæve dementia est
amare
pressuras
& pœnas, & lachrymas mundi & non fe-stinare potius ad
gaudium
quod nun-quam po-
test aufer-
ri. Cyp.
de mortali.

N a ragged

ragged and tottered starr, in shaking and broken Tabernacles, rather then to have the house above, not made with hands, eternal in the Heavens?

Know this also, That the more God works your heart to the desire of the other world, the better is your estate in this world; your staying here will be the better, when you are once wrought up to this pitch, to long for your appearance before God in Zion; for then the things of this world shall be in subjection to you. What an unhappiness is it to a man, when he is under the power of present things? What is more visible then this, that a man is cast by them into a thousand forms, and carried in a wearisome and restless motion, with infinite varieties? and all is but vanity and vexation. For whatsoever it is that gets your heart, that will command you; and what will those commands be, that are from things empty, fluid, and vexatious and uncertain? Truly so far as you are in love with the world you are like drowned men, it is the

Apostle

Apostles similitude, 1 Tim. 6. 9. If the streams of contentment, and your accommodation in this world run over your heads, you are in a state of death, like dead men: beware, saith the Apostle, of worldly lusts that fight against the Soul, Jam. 4. 4. Now what peace can you have, rowling up and down in a troubled Sea, that is always moving, and never at rest? to be subject to the change of things, and severall forms and appearances; to have your hearts sometimes raigning like Princes, and sometimes in a state of Beggars, according as your condition is changed, as you have your Winter and your Summer, and your spirits depending on the presence of these things: but if your desires be set on the other world, you will be in a state of freedom, and command over them; when Christ and Heaven is in the heart, the world is at our feet; this is our victory, that we overcome the world; how much better is it for men to raign as Kings in the world, then to be in subjection, and a condition of bondage? to be tossed like feathers in the Ayre, or bubbles on the face of uncertain waters? wherefore is the state of grace called a Kingdom, but because of its Royalty, Dominion, and Sovereignty here, and the fulness of that portion that is prepared for the Saints? see what you should be, the Apostle tels you Col. 2. 3. Set your affections on things above, and not on things beneath, for you are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God. If Christ be in Heaven, and your life is there, and shall not your hearts be there too? Your standing will be the better here, because it will be free, and all things will be better then when your hearts are streaming toward the other world; what a sweet condition is that man in, that dwells in Heaven, and hath his eyes continually looking to that house above, that while he enjoyeth contentment here below, doth intermingle his joys with the joys of Heaven, and if God fill his cup for him in this world, he doth sweeten it by causing it to overflow with streams streams of the well of Life; surely a man that walks with his head and heart in Heaven, tastes better the things of this world; Heaven is the best Sauce to all our enjoyments and conditions here. Paul was a man of the other world; our conversation saith he is in Heaven: all his Interests, Relations, and Businesses, and Estate, was there: A man reckons himself to be where his Country is; although he be in any other forraign land, yet his conversation, in the Apostles sense, is in his own Countrey at home; He minds those laws and priviledges of that place whence he came: Surely when a man doth so, it makes every condition better to him. I beseech you consider, you are bound, invired, and called to this; Shall Christ come and knock at the doore of your hearts from day to day? Shall his voyce be to you as it was to John in the vision. Come up hither? And shall we answer our Lord and our friend, as the Spouse in her state of drowsines, I have put off my clothes, how shall I put them

1 Ioh. 5. 4.

Ἡμεῖς
πολίτευ-
μα.

on? I have washed my feet, how shall I defile them? shall Christ be sent from the bosom of his Father to invite us to that Kingdom? and shall we no more regard that voice which speaks to us? I would put every one of you, that knows the things of your peace, and have been visited from on high, in mind of the peculiar pulsations and divine attractions that you have felt; what is the fruit of them? hath Christ said long ago, come away my friends? Hath he said long ago, come from that world? and are your hearts and affections still rowling and grovelling below? Are you not weary enough? have you not sinned enough, nor sorrowed enough yet? do you desire to be beaten more, to be more trampled upon? and to be a scorn to devils in all your deviations from God? shall we never groan our selves out of this house of bondage, but desire there to fix our Tabernacles, where we shall be held always to hard labor and service? my friends, our affections should make more

more after the other world, then this ; you do ill when you cut out such large shares for your selves in this World. Is it enough now and then to give a glance toward Heaven ? now and then to have your hearts and spirits moving thither, when the vigor and strength of your spirits should be there ? Things below should have but their refuse, their leavings. Let me tell you this ; If you come not up to this Rule, if you walk not thus, you are greatly in fault ; not only because you do not that which is called for, but because there is evil in the Causes of your neglect herein : There is a great evil in the cause of that temper of spirit that hangs so much in things below, and hangs off from Heaven : Therefore you desire the sight of Heavenly things no more, because you walk not by Faith. A man may have Faith, and not walk by it : A man may have Bread, and starve, if he feed not on it. It is not the having of Faith, but the using of it, that gives Life. This is sure ; If your Hearts

Hearts be not in the other World, your Eyes are off from the Promise, you are strangers to the Covenant of Grace, you forget the great God and your Redeemer; you exercise not your selves to an effectual application of the things of life, to lay hold on them for your own; you study not to lay a sure foundation of that Comfort, without which you can never know how to live, nor how to dye. I know there is a voyce in every mans Heart, that tells him, He doth not pant and breathe after Eternal Life, and the Enjoyment of the things prepared, as he should. I know there is a voyce in every mans Heart that consents to this. These are sins and fore evils, their nature is scarlet and bloody sins; the hands of these sins are full of blood: These are the destroyers of thy peace, and the stiflers of thy love and thankfulness. The beginnings of all the sad distempers of thy spirit, thy not conversing with God, not minding of Jesus Christ, thy not closing with the Promise, thy
not

not appropriating to thy self the things that are prepared and presented to thee, are murdering sins; such as no Saint, no Christian, ought to allow himself to live in; no, not for an hour.

Would you say that you would fain come to this pass? Then use Faith, and live more in the beholding of Christ, and receive more of the things that are tendered to you. If any say thus, I confess that I am loth to go out of my present Being, God hath made my life sweet to me, I have a vigorous, strong and healthful state of Body; I enjoy Friends and manifold contentments, and I know not well how to overcome my Heart herein. I pray think on it: This is to prefer dust to gold, to sell Heaven for nothing: It's such a peece of blasphemy, as in truth, if it were rightly understood, it would make one tremble; for if you are not willing to let go your present state for a place in Heaven, what is the voyce of this, but that there is no such worth in Heaven? that that there is no such glory and beauty in that state? Is not this to blaspheme God? to make a clod of earth better then that blessed state? to account the presence of the Creature better to thee then the presence of God, and of Jesus Christ?

Doth that stick with you? That you could be content to go to Heaven, but you are loath to dye? Indeed Death is a gasty thing to sense; but if you live by Faith, Faith strips Death of its sting; Faith dethrones this King of Fears: What is Death but the cutting off your Desires? Now if your Desires be strong in Heaven, Death doth not break, but perfect your Desires; if they be toward the other World, Death accomplisheth the Desires of your Soul. As for the state of Corruption, indeed that is a very hard peece, a lowre bit to swallow, that is sure; But should not you be willing to have this life swallowed up of Death, that mortality might be swallowed up of immortality? You are not unwilling to batter batter and break vessels of Gold, when you have projected for them a better form. If it must be so, that this flesh must fall in pieces, and worms eat it; if from this God will raise a glorified body, conformed to the body of his own Son; set one against the other, and then this state of corruption will be sweet. If thy spirit dread the Judgment that follows, and to appear before God, then thy way must be, not to hide thy self from God here, nor to hang fast in this World, but to make thy peace with God, and to keep that peace. Shouldst thou not be afraid to live in that state in this World, wherein thou art afraid to dye? (and Death may seize upon thee every moment.) You will never live comfortably, nor walk triumphantly; you will not live like the members of that Head Christ Jesus, till you come to this, to have your Hearts wishing and travelling within your selves to be with Christ. Do but think what the glories are that are antecedent to such a state; There must be, a divine Light, a living and working Faith, Heavenly mindedness, confidence of Hope, &c. And think what are the glorious Consequents of such a state; Meekness, Moderation and Thankfulness, a Heart fired, burning and flaming with Love towards God. Well, I'll tell you what the pitch is you are bound to come up unto; you must never rest till you have worked your selves to it; and God will work his people to it as he loves them, and as he hath intended much for them: it is this; You must so desire that state of the other World, as that your stay here must be, not by choice, but by command; to be here below, not because you would be here, but because you are ordered so: Remember it, and pray over these counsels coming upon you, that God would form your Hearts into their moulds.

be

And further, you must so desire that other world as to hasten your work, to do all you can, that you may shorten (as much as may be) your time: you must so

so desire it as to entertain the Symptoms of dissolution, of parting with your present state, with joy, and not with grief; not to go mourning up and down, because I have a consumption, or this or that weakness upon me, but rather rejoyce that God is about that work, to unpin and take down this house, that I may be built up again, this is it you are to come to, to use the world as if you used it not; so to enjoy house, and wife, and substance, as if they were no such things, but have all your enjoyments in the other world. So that you may call others, provoke and incite others to come to Heaven, and to be on the wing; O my friends make haste to Heaven: the Apostle hath this in that word, looking for, and hasting to that day, and coming of our Lord; and indeed if once the Lord so breath upon our hearts, that we be brought under the power of the things of that invisible world, then we shall do so. This world is but a shadow and a dream, a colour of something that it is not, but
if

2 Pet. 3. 12

if our Hearts be brought to this, to wish and desire to see and enjoy the things of the other World; now you walk by faith, and you are not far from the Kingdom of Heaven; now you will bless that God that hath shewed you such mercies, to pluck you out from among men; and that did not suffer you to be strangers in his house, but did bespeak your hearts to come and knock, and to take a room in that place above.

CHAP. XI.

Visions and Enjoyments of Faith.

WE walk*] When the Apostle saith, we walk, he means, we run our race, have our abode in this present world, and our conversation with men; we pass on through all things which divine providence presenteth, or divine command enjoyneth eth, good and evill, light and darkness, and through death it self; we are not stopt, nor stayed, or not diverted and perverted, but we hold on, and our course is maintained to the end.

To understand this rightly, take into consideration these four things.

1. When it is said, we walk by Faith, we are not to understand meerly, the habit, power, and ability in men to rely upon God; but as acted, and working, and putting forth it self in those fruits of it, desire, hope, joy, &c. For it is hope and expectation of blessedness that is the nerves and sinews of the inner man, and Faith gives spirits to these nerves, and sinews: Hope looks upon things promised, Faith gives life to hope, that it may improve the promise; so that it is not meerly Faith, but Faith as spreading it self and blossoming, and bringing forth hope and joy, by which we walk.

*Spes dat
animum.*

The Devils have a Faith, but because it ministers not hope, it yields no refreshing, but is tormenting to ○ them,

Iam. 2. 19.
 Φρίσσει,
 An hideous fear,
 like the Sea raving.

them, they beleive and tremble; they would put out that light if they could, because it doth not refresh, but scorch them. The Gospel is known of them, but not as offered to them; they know something of the things of the world to come, but see not these things tended to them: therefore have no hope; so their Faith ministers no good to them, but vexeth them; but the Faith which the Text speaks of, is such a Faith, as strengthens, supports, and bears up a mans heart in the world, and doth it by working hope, expectation, and joy.

1 Thes.
 5. 8,
 Πνευ-
 μαλια,
 which covereth the whole
 head.

Heb. 6. 19.

Hope is called an Helmet; Put on for an Helmet the hope of Salvation: indeed, as an Helmet secures the head, and makes a man able to go through blows and dangers; so Hope hardens and steels a mans spirit, that having once taken hold of eternal life, and seen his Interest there, he is stronger then all things that can come against him. The Apostle calls Hope an Anchor sure and stedfast, and which enters within the veil. As a Ship, although

though it be in the midst of rowling Seas , and under the pressure of great and tempestuous winds, yet having an Anchor sure and stedfast, is secure ; so the spirit of a man is quiet and secure within , when once he hath pitched his hope within the vail. Faith acted supports ; Food nourisheth not by having it, but by eating, and digesting it : so it is the using and acting of Faith that strengthens and comforts the Soul.

2. This Faith is nothing in it self, either in habit, or Act, but in communion with the object. One man hopes for a peny, another hopes for crown, and it may be the hope of both is as equally reall and sure ; but there is more strength in the one , then the other , because the thing wherein it is set is of greater moment.

There are two objects of Faith.

The object or thing upon which Faith is set, and pitched through Hope, and that is that blessedness and life, which is hid with Christ in God.

All the preparations of the other world, that hidden treasure which God hath laid up for those that love the appearance of Jesus Christ, Faith having pitched upon this, receives strength from it. Nothing is greater then these things, they are no less then the fruits of the eternal and everlasting love of God, that love that passeth all knowledg; this love acts like it self, and hath allotted to us Peace, that passeth all understanding; unsearchable riches of grace, an exceeding great weight of glory; when Faith falls in with this, the heart is filled, and another spirit comes on a man, by the darting of the beams of these glories upon the Soul.

2Pet. 1. 4.
 Τιμία καὶ
 μέγιστα
 ἐπαγγελ-
 ματα,
 the great test that can be.

These things are most excellent, in their nature, in their fountain, and in their end, being things for which the promises are called exceeding great and precious; as a Cabinet that holds the Jewel, as a paper that contains a royal Deed of gift, hath its worth from that which it conveys.

The Scripture gives this Reason, of the provision made in Heaven, to make

make God admired; when God proposeth a state to his people to make himself to be wondred at by the world, how great will that be? when he appears, he comes to be admired in all that believe. If a Prince would make himself admired, that must be transcendent by which it is to be done; how great then is that which shall make God and Christ admired of all?

2 Thes. i.

To make the Saints blessed and happy, surely that must needs be great blessedness, that shall make happy a people full of unhappiness, that fills so many empty vessels at once, that shall give blessedness to such as have so great a capacity, that shall give sufficient estates to such as are in so high and near relation to himself: for that will not serve a Prince, that serves a private man. Now when Faith hath pitched its eye, and laid its hand upon these things so glorious, there is such a strength derived into a mans heart, that now he could make his steps by the brink of hell; he could walk, and rejoyce, and sing for joy, even in the vally of the shadow Death ; now nothing is too dreadful to him, when Heaven is so amiable, and brought so near him. Thus Faith receives strength from this object.

There is another object of Faith, and that is the object by which Faith acts; the promise by this Faith becomes able to catch at the thing promised; the promise is faiths warrant; it is the life of Faith, as Faith is our life. Had the things promised been only known to us; there might have been desire, but no hope of them; nay, we fell at that distance from God, when we sunk from our state of Creation, that it had been presumption to have hoped so great things; but now God having entred into promise, and brought himself under a Law, Faith stands upon strong Foundations. A man standing upon those immortal Pillars, is able to lay hold upon the joy that is set before him. By two immutable things, whereby it was impossible

Heb. 6.18.

ble God should lyo., we have strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold on the hope set before us. We have now that warrant and encouragement to lay hold, which before we had not.

3. It is not faith in any of these considerations alone, not as an habit, nor as working and acting of faith; not faith in conjunction with the promise alone : but faith with the witness of the spirit, that doth enable a man thus to walk on in his way. Faith comforts and strengthens the heart two ways.

'As it gives us Interest in the things of life.

As it witnesseth to us our Interest in those things.

Now the witness that Faith gives is too weak and insufficient to give satisfaction, and the utmost security to a mans spirit, in matters of so great importance; therefore there is a necessity of the witness of God himself, the witness of the Spirit, and that is it that Paul speaks of. Now he that

2 Cor. 5. 5.

bath wrought us for the same thing is God, who also bath given us the earnest of his Spirit; therefore we are always confident, &c.

God puts a man out of doubt by this Testimony of his Spirit. Faith without this security will save us, but not cheer us; it will carry a man through his way, but not without much fear and painfulness. A man shall be enabled to fight that doth believe, but he will fight with fear, not with triumph. But when Faith is able to speak out, and clearly to utter her message, which lies in two words, This Promise is of God (and so, is true) and this promise is mine; when Faith, I say, is able to deliver her message completely through the Testimony of the Spirit, now is a man set amongst Angels, and treads the world under his feet; he passeth through the greatest hardships and hazards as a Conqueror, and is brought into an happy state; he is like a Ship in the Harbor, like Noah in the Ark; Though men and all creatures are perishing without, out, and the world breathing out its last gasp, yet all is quiet within; Noah and his company are secure.

4. The Faith the Text speaks of is not every Faith, not a Faith of our own contrivance and forming, but of Gods: This is certain, That as a man works himself to the believing of any History he reads, of Cesar, or any other; so a man may be wrought also to a Faith and Credence of the Gospel: But it is not a Faith that stands upon any humane foundation, or that is raised after the manner by which we beleeve other things; but a Faith wrought of God. We are wrought to this very thing by God (saith the Apostle) that we be able to have our inward man relieved when our outward man perisheth. This the Apostle calls the gift of God; we are saved by Faith (and that not of our selves) it is the gift of God: And it is called the Faith of the operation of God; Buried with him in Baptism, and risen again through the Faith of the operation of God, who quickens the dead.

What

Eph. 2. 8
Col. 2. 12
Πίστις τῆς
ἰσχυρίας
αὐτοῦ,
Of the efficacy and force of God.

What need we any other Testimony, that they do so, then what the Text speaks? We do walk by Faith, saith the Apostle. Read that Martyrology of Heb. 11. By Faith Noah, Abraham, Moses, and the rest, did so and so. If you would further know, how it comes about, that the Saints are made so strong; besides what hath been spoken of the Objects of Faith, consider this:

Faith is a divine thing, it is something of God planted in men, and therefore carries with it vigor and strength. But besides that, Faith is designed to this employment and service, to be the staff and stay of a mans spirit that is beloved of God, that he may walk stedily in this present World: the power of it lies not in it self, but in being appointed to such an end.

The Rod divides the Sea, and Rams horns sounded cast down the walls of Jericho, and spittle and clay give the blinde man sight, if not eyes, (as some think:) And so Faith, though though a feeble thing (as indeed it is amongst the feeblest things of the World,) yet because it is designed of God to this end, shall effect it. It is a wonder how the Ark of Noah, floating up and down, should secure it self, and how all should be well within, being filled with such store of Creatures; yet because it was Gods appointment, it did secure all in it.

Besides, there are divine influences that come unto the actings of Faith; Faith acts by the power of God: the Apostle speaks of a glorious working of the power of God in Beleevers. And if the power of God put in with any thing, though never so weak and feeble, it shall prevail. And there are influences that come in by the actings of Faith; God comes in upon our Beleeving, and through it; He having appointed the things promised unto Faith, the Faithfulness of God, when ever the Soul acts Faith upon the Promise, ~~will~~ shew it self. As the weak actings of life in a child

Eph. i. 19

to-

Psal. 119.

55
 -אנני חן

toward the Nurse move her affections, and cause the breasts to be drawn forth to it ; so our feeble actings of Faith cause the breasts of Consolation to be drawn forth unto them that come to him. I remembered (saith David) thy Judgments of old, and I was comforted ; or, I comforted my self, even as a Childe refresheth it self when the breast is given to it : I say this is the way to derive strength, by acting Faith upon the Promise : I remembered thy Judgments of old ; I believed, and thou wast as good as thy word : When I knock, thou openest ; and when I let down my bucket, thou dost fill it.

Then I beseech you consider, that here is the great difference between man and man ; The Saints walk by Faith, not by Sight ; and the world walks by Sight (not by Faith,) but it is not such a Sight as the Apostle means. The World walks by Sight of Lands, Honors, Pleasures ; and when these are ~~lost~~ of Sight they are in darkness, and have nothing to live on :

on: If a man cannot see his Dwelling, Health, Liberty; if such things be hid, and out of sight, the man is at a loss, and dead. The Life of Saints is on high; they live by Faith, and Faith lives in Heaven; they have an Anchor within the Vail. Indeed a man beloved of God, whom God hath taken out of this World, and made one of another world, is taught of God to see what state he is in by Nature, that he is in a state of Apostasy and ejection from all good. Now when the Judge that might pass sentence against him brings forth words of Life, and faith, O thou poor Soul thou hast lost all, but here is thy all again, and better then thy all: When he saith to the condemned man, O man, thou hast forfeited thy life, but here is thy life again; He accounts this worthy of all acceptance; He receives the Word gladly, as the Jews in Acts 2. that were pricked at the Heart: Nothing is more welcom to him then this news; now he kisseth and embraceth the Pro-

Promise, takes God upon his Word, and glad he hath him there in such a case.

But others, that never saw their misery, and never knew their condition, and the worth of that other life, are not moved at all. If there be a Promise of Pardon, he that is innocent mindes it not, but the poor condemned man harkens after it; as for this World he sees it a dead thing, and himself a dead Creature; and were it not that this way of relief is come from Heaven, he is undone to Eternity.

Do you finde your selves in such a case as this? The Word we hear every day will judge us. If you have not thus judged of Eternity, you have not the spot of Gods People on you: Blessed are they whom God hath enlightened, and awakened to accept the Promise: These walk by Faith here, and shall come to walk by Sight hereafter.

But some may say, We hope we walk by Faith.

But

But can you say, you are confident? Every man will be ready to say, I now I must dye, and appear before the great and terrible Judg; But canst thou say, I am confident, and upon such terms as the Apostle here? Dost thou desire to be clothed upon? to be out of this World, and to be with Christ? Thou dost not love him that thou dost not desire to see him; and if thou dost not love him, thou dost not beleve on Him; For Faith works by Love. A Crown of Righteousness is layd up for me, saith the Apostle, and all that love the appearance of Christ. The Traveller longs to be at home, a person betrothed longs for the day of Marriage, the Husbandman desires the time of Harvest, Princes desire the day of Coronation; and have you no Longings after the appearance of Christ? Can the Spouse not desire to see her Husband? What Childe is that which hath not a Desire and Longing to see his loving Father? What is Christ to you, if you desire not his appearance?

2 Tim. 4. 8
 ὁ ὢν ἔσται
 μοι, ἰσ appointed and safely kept for
 me.

ance? Whence is it that you desire Riches, Honors, &c. but because you love them? and have you no desire to see Christ?

Or can you say this with the Apostle? I desire (the word is, I ambitiously desire) whether present, or absent, to be accepted of him. O that Christ would own me, and be one with me, that I might lie in his arms, and walk in his presence. If you beleeved that Christ dyed, and is now at the right Hand of Glory, and hath all Power in His Hand to judge the World, and that we must all appear before Him; then you would finde this effect in you, that the Apostle found in himself, a desire to be ever acceptable and gracious with Him, such as may finde favor in His sight. David desired this; Remember me, O Lord, with the favor that thou shewest to thy people; O visit me with thy Salvation: That love thou shewest to them that are dear to thee, shew to me; and thou that so rejoycest the Hearts of many with the light of thy coun-

φιλοτιμί-
α.

Ενδεύσει.

Psa. 106. 4

נצח

עמך

countenance, making them see their Pardon and their Life, so do to me. If thou hast Faith, thou canst not but do thus. It is possible a man may wish this, that hath no saving Faith: But if you come not to this, ardently and ingenuously to desire Acceptance with Christ, you have not Faith. But it is not this onely that I mean, when I say, you will desire to be accepted; but to be made pleasing to Him, according to his minde, conformable to Christ; none but such as beleieve can desire this.

Enders.

Again, Can you say this? That you live under the power of the love of Christ: so the Apostle did; The love of Christ constrains us, shuts us up; we cannot squander as the World doth; we are beset and confined like men besieged; we are acted by the Love of Christ so strongly and effectually, that nothing can stop us. Can you say, you walk evenly in your way? and when you are out, you come in again? and that through the power of the love of Christ. If we

2 Cor. 5.

24 Συνήχθη
μῆς.

P

be

be strangers to these things, and have not this Image on our Hearts, we are without Faith.

CHAP. XII.

Office and Operation of Faith.

One thing more I would say, to exhort you to get Faith; Labor to close with the Promise: as you hope to live, have your eyes upon your state. This Chapter lays us all out for dead: this is thy state and mine, We are dead by Law, through a sentence justly past; and not onely so, but formally we are without spiritual Life. Now in this condition we are in an incapacity of being saved, onely by Faith in Christ we are made alive again. The Promise is offered, O come. Where are the Hearts of men so many years of their lives, when Heaven calls after them to come?

come? and Jesus Christ calls from day to day, O thou dying Soul, why dost thou not look to me, that thou mayst have life? He offers all grace and measure to men, and follows them without ceasing; and yet how few are effectually touched in their Hearts with these things? Where have your Hearts been all this while? If Christ come to save us, and we will not harken to Him, what shall we expect from him when He comes to judge us? If mercy be rejected by us, how do we think to speed at last, when out of deeps of misery we come to make suit for mercy? But that is not all.

When this is done, you must add Faith dayly, in way of Meditation, as David, I remembered thy Judgements, &c. In way of Argumentation; thus Abraham reasoned himself into a willing subjection of himself unto God in that great Tryal; He accounted God able to do for him as He had promised. So be you frequent in arguing; Is my Anchor within the

Psal. 119
52

Heb. 11. 19
As if he said, &c.

Vail? and is the Faithfulness of God that by which my Anchor is held? Then I am sure and safe. Hath God said, Thy sins are forgiven thee? be of good comfort, I have taken thy name into my Book; and I will give thee Eternal Life? Then, O my Soul, be satisfied, return unto thy Rest. Thus a man should argue from the Promise, and plead it upon his own Heart, and unto God; to God in Prayer, and upon himself in meditation and argumentation. Be quiet, O my Soul, and return to thy Rest, for the Word is gone out of his mouth. Upon this ground the Apostle exhorts, Let your Conversation be without Covetousness, and be content; for He hath said, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee: So that we may boldly say, The Lord is my helper, I will not fear what man can do unto me.

Heb. 13. 5

Because acting and living by Faith is a work of so great importance, consider well what enforcing Reason doth assault you.

It is of absolute necessity; for there is no other way to live, but by Sight and Faith: Sight is reserved for the other World, Faith only is appointed to bring Life and us together in this World.

The Ordinance of Bread to be the staff of Life, hath not imposed that absolute necessity of the use of it. There are times in which Nature is not obliged to Bread, but no times in which we who enjoy Understanding are left free to the use of Faith, i. e. to use it, or not to use it.

Bread is onely to maintain Life, but not to give what we need by Clothes, Arms, Fortifications, &c. But our Life of all kinds comes in by Faith: the Life of Holiness, of Peace, of Hope, of Love, of Joy; all spiritual Life is maintained by Faith.

God hath left Himself more free to hold up natural Life by, or without Bread, as he maintained Moses, Elias, Christ forty days without it; but he will not communicate himself to us; but by Faith.

When therefore we act not Faith, we depart from Life, and are destroyers of that which is better than our Being. Our substance is beneath the dignity of Life. What a despicable deformed thing is an apostate Angel, stripped of the Life of God? A living Dog is better than a dead Lion: for Life is a state of Hope, Knowledge, and capacity of good; but a dead thing is in darkness, and shut up from good.

What a sad thing to deny sustenance to thine own Life, the Breath of God in thee? What shall be done to him that starves a Princes Child? What have we of like worth to spiritual vigor, agility, courage, and peace of Soul? and shall we, who have a door of Life, at once offer contempt to divine Goodness, and violence to our own Life, by not using what God hath put in our hands for our relief?

What weakness and sadness come in when faith lieth dead? What horrid rid rid contradictions are we found in ?

We pray and cry for Life, yet we reject the counsels of Life : we beg to be made to live, yet we destroy our Life.

CHAP. XIII.

Act Faith always to the utmost.

A Third excellency of the life of Faith is, That it is the means,
the onely means, which God hath appointed for the life and support of his people upon the face of the Earth :
As I urged this before to the necessity of Beleeving, so now to the excellency of Faith. There are but two ways of Life :

By { Enjoyment.
{ Expectation.

Our life here is not maintained so much by the things we enjoy, as by the things we look for : We are saved

P 4

by

by Hope. The Apostle Paul certainly had received much, and yet saith, We walk not by Sight, but by Faith. This argues a great excellency in living by Faith, That God hath appointed this for the relief and support of his people in the World; of his people whom he loves dearly as a Father, whom He loves with the same love with which He loves those that are now in his Kingdom, with that love wherewith He loves Jesus Christ; as the love is the same to the Body, and to the Head.

Were there not then an exceeding great excellency in living by Faith, God would not have taken this course with His People for their support in the World, where are so many difficulties to be wrestled with, where a man carries about him such a weight of sin as is able to break the strength of any Creature; He would never have left them to this way of relief and subsistence, were there not an excellency in it.

Indeed as there is imperfection in the

the life of Faith, in that it hath not yet attained its end; so there is this glory in it, that the end is sure: Faith and its end are linked together by an immutable Decree; and a Promise that stands fast to Eternity. Suppose a Prince should give one thing to his Son (to whom He wisheth all good) as that which should be all things to him; that this should be food to him, and his attire, and Armor for his defence, and counsel for his guide; that one thing must needs be excellent. Everything is so much the more precious, by how much it is the more comprehensive. There are sparks of goodness in several things, but in such things there is but little goodness severally; but when there is a comprehension of much goodness in one thing, that one thing is exceeding good. There is some worth in a piece of brass, and a piece of lead, &c. but there is the worth of all these connected in a piece of Gold, or in a precious Jewel; this makes it so much the more excellent. So Faith is is the more excellent, because God hath collected all the beams of goodness into this one grace, Faith in Christ.

Faith is the staff of a mans Soul, the key that gives him admission into the Kingdom of Heaven, to stand in the sight of God; the wing and spring of all solacious actings, the Helmet and Breastplate in War, the Anchor at Sea, the evidence of things hoped for. Now when all these excellencies are comprised in one thing, this must needs make it exceeding excellent; therefore the Apostle Peter calls it [like] precious Faith.

2 Pet. 1. 1.
Iob 14. 1.
15. 17.

Every thing that is a means to an end hath an excellency in it, as it conduceth to that end more abundantly, and according as that end is in worth. Now here is the greatest and highest end proposed to Faith, and Faith endued with the greatest sufficiency for the attaining of that end; such a sufficiency, as that it overflows to give life and strength to every thing that contributes in the least toward eternal life.

If

If you consider the promises which are very excellent, and which indeed are pillars on which the Soul stands; what makes them our support, but Faith? for separate faith from the promise, and the promise as to us is weak. The word profited them not, which the Apostles, because not mixed with Faith in them that heard it. The word which is set before us, which was the great encouragement of Christ, the strength whereof he endured the Cross, and despised the shame; his joy hath its reviving power and virtue towards us from Faith. For further than it is believed, it is as a wing that is not, and of that which is of nothing comes. Yea the very nature of God, the thoughts whereof are so great a cordial, his wisdom, goodness, graciousness, compassion, readiness to forgive and to help, &c. these, even these things, which are so many springs of life, convey not one drop of solid comfort to us, but by the mediation of Faith in Christ, that is, except we believe, not only that these things

Heb. 4. 2.

Μη ουκ

εσθ

αυτος τῇ

πιστει τοῖς

ἀκούουσιν.

Heb. 12. 3.

Non enim

nulla est

operatio.

things are so, but believe them as presented in the promises, we can derive to our selves no effectual comfort and relieve to bear us up in our way in this world. Yea, all the actings of the new man, by which any consolation is wont to come in, are all ineffectual, and become as pits without water; like dry trees and withered branches that yield no fruit, except that Faith gives heat, life, and strength to them. As for example,

Meditation, though it be set upon the highest object, God in Christ, God as the fountain of all life flowing forth; yet, what is this exercise of the mind upon God, but a poor and liveless work? an uncomfortable wandering of the Soul about the fountain of life? except Faith come in to give a man interest in these things, an hungry man hath but a fruitless and tormenting gazing upon meat, that he cannot compass.

Prayer is a great relief to a man, it is the bucket of the Soul, by which it draws water out of the wells of Salvation,

vation; but without Faith you may let down this bucket again and again, and never bring up one drop of solid comfort; prayer is but an anxious pouring out of the Soul about an uncertain good, desire mixt with much trembling, the Soul making a sad pursuit after that it cannot reach. It is Faith that brings a man to the enjoyment of those things which are the life of all such actings; so that Faith certainly hath a very great excellency in it. I have given you some tastes of it, but had nothing of this been said, or could nothing of this have been thought on; yet this had been a sufficient argument of the excellency of Faith, That it is a thing appointed of God for so high an end.

A fourth excellency of Faith lies in the nature of Faith, and the actings and workings of it: I'll give it you in three or four considerations.

1. It is spiritual, which carries much in it to perswade us to live this life of Faith; it is spiritual, therefore most excellent; all the actings of the spirit

Spirit bring in more toward the good and welfare of man, then the actions of the body; you have more by the looks of the mind, then of the eyes; you receive more by the internal then by the external sense: inward a~~ct~~ings which are spiritual, are incomparably of greater concernment to us, then all outward a~~ct~~ions: but that is not all.

The a~~ct~~ings of Faith are spiritual, therefore more independent, they depend not on so many things as external a~~ct~~ions do; you cannot speak or move in way of prayer, or exhorting one another, but there must be a concurrence of instruments, of season and fitness of place, &c. but in spiritual a~~ct~~ings, there is not such a dependance; but a man is more free, he may do them in any place or time; if thou hast the life of Faith upon these wings, thou maist mount up into the highest Heavens at any time. As the object of faith is invisible, and no eye sees it, so the way of Faith to the soul in conversing with God is

invisible ; so that while thou art with men, thou mayst converse with God, and they not see the Motion ; thou mayst ascend up by the strength of Faith in a fiery chariot of love, and they never discern it ; while thou art treading on the earth, thou mayst be walking with Christ in his Kingdom with the Apostle and Spirits of just men made perfect ; and while thou art standing still as men think, thou mayst be walking over all the other world, and betaking a view of the promised land ; while thou art sitting at table, thou mayst sweeten thy meat, and sugar thy cup with such influences of Faith, as may make thy table better to thee then the tables of the greatest Princes in the world ; when thou art at thy work, thou maist by Faith draw down Heaven to thee, thou mayst sweeten all thy labors by the Actings of Faith, and make all thy ways, as the ways of Angels ; there is no place, no season, nor condition wherein thy faith may not be acting ; that's one excellency in the

the nature of Faith and the actings of it, they are spiritual.

Again, as they are spiritual, so they are sweet; they are not onerous and burthensome, the actings of Faith lay no burthens on us; a man that lives by Faith, lives at no expence, he parts with nothing: nay it is a most gainful life; the more Faith puts forth, the more it fetcheth in. When a Prince saith to a man in poverty, Take, and take as much as thou wilt from such a Mine, this is no burthen to the man; such is the working of Faith, it is feeding, taking in, drinking of the well of life, putting on the robes of glory, receiving the things of the promise. It should therefore be a very great encouragement and provocation to us, to put our selves upon this work, the acting of Faith. You do but close with the gift that is freely given you; Faith is a piece of the thing promised, you are not onely blessed by Faith as the means, but blessed in believing also.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, Faith acts in the strength of the highest reason, it draws spirits from that which is most glorious, for it acts from the vision of God; so far as a man lives by Faith, so far he lives in the sight of God, of his wisdom, goodness, power, faithfulness, &c. it must needs be so, because these things are the foundation upon which Faith builds; and by the sight of these things, Faith is set on work: what is more excellent, then for a man to see almighty armes of power reached forth to embrace him? to see infinite wisdom coming to direct him, and infinite goodness to relieve him? all the glories in God do contribute that to Faith, by which it is born up in its work; Faith is maintained upon excellent things, it feeds upon no less then God himself, and acts in the strength of God.

Again, Faith closeth and fastneth upon the greatest good: faith is that which sets all that is in a man on work, the work of every grace is not alike, as it is in a great house, where are many servants, every ones work is not alike, though all of them be employed about their Masters work. Some Graces, though they act for God, yet act at a distance from God: Patience is acted about trouble, Repentance upon sin; Justice is acted towards and amongst men, Temperance about meats and drinks; but Faith acts upon God himself.

Q are

It is true indeed, there are other Graces besides Faith that have their attendance upon God, and act near unto him, as Hope, Joy, Love, &c. but Faith hath this excellency above them all, that it is that by which these are brought in and admitted into the divine presence. Joy could not come in, except Faith opened the door; there could be no Love standing there, if Faith did not bring it in: Hope lives upon faiths charge; it lives by faith, and is maintained upon its Object in the strength of faith; so that herein is the excellency of Faith; that it is that which acts upon God himself, and by which all graces are brought brought in, that do act neer unto God: we have access to God through Faith. We are filled with joy, but how? by beleeving: faith acts on God, and there it lives, and rests it self; yea, it acts upon the best (if a man may say so) of God.

Eph. 3. 12
Rom. 15.
13

Faith lives upon God, not as a man lives upon his food, or as a beast upon his pasture, but as a friend lives on his friend: as a Wife lives on her Husband, as a Child lives on his Father; so Faith lives on the Love and sweetness of God, which sweetens all that God is to him.

Again, Faith is not limited, all that God is belongs to it; The Love of God, which passeth all understanding, is faith's rich portion: And faith hath no time set, she may come when she will to this, every hour of the day, nay many times all day: Indeed, it is not because we have not opportunity, but because we have not Hearts, that our faith is so much from home; else we might be more in Heaven, though we are upon the Earth. Neither is faith limited for the continuance of this life, but hath days of Eternity; it is such a life as never ends; for in Vision faith doth not wholly cease.

Q 2 ther

Now to live in a constant Aspect, and under the beams of the Sun of Righteousness; to live at the head of the Well of Life, to live in the midst of divine goodness; what a life is this? and this is the life whereto you are called: O that it might be considered, and that we would study more to live this life of Faith.

Fourthly, Faith acts upon things so, that it engageth God: that's a very great glory indeed, That thou, by so beleeving what God hath said, as that thou acceptest of the Promise tendered, shouldst engage God to thee: yet so it is; yea thou engagest God strongly, and to the utmost. Though thy faith be weak, yet if it be true, God accounts Himself as strongly bound to thee, as to Abraham or Isaac, to the Prophets or Apostles; yea as to the Angels themselves selves, or the spirits of just men made perfect.

God accounts Himself bound likewise, as in the highest and strongest manner, so to all things: If thou live this life of Faith, God is not free concerning any good thing towards thee; there is nothing He hath but it becomes thine. This is a most excellent state, wherein the mercy and goodness of God compasseth us about: We may have Hearts indeed sometimes to go out from our Happiness, but God will hold us, and life shall be with us. Mark what David saith; Surely mercy and goodness shall follow me all the days of my life. As the Rock followed them in the Wilderness, and gave them water continually; so life and goodness attends thee continually.

Psal. 23 6

Fifthly, Consider what strange things Faith will do; it makes things that are impossible to be possible: That which all the Power of Angels, yea all created power cannot bring about, thy Faith shall; All their

Q 3 power

x Joh. 5. 4.

5

power cannot conquer one sin, thy faith will conquer all thy sins; faith conquers the World: Faith will make that which is done, as if it were not done: to thy sins that are done and committed against God, upon thy believing are done away, and made meer non-entities and nullities; in respect of their guilt and power to hurt thee, they shall be as if they never had been done: And faith will make that to be done, which never was done; so Abraham did offer Isaac, and yet Isaac was never offered by Abraham; God taking it as if the thing were done, because Abraham was willing: And so David is said to build God a house, though He did it onely in his thoughts and desire: Solomon built the House, yet God accounts it as if David had done it.

Faith makes great things little, very little, indeed nothing: That which the World accounts exceeding great, Estate, Honors, Pleasures, and the accommodations of this life; faith, when

when the season is, desires nothing of all these. The Apostle made no reckoning of all these things: as if He should say, When I make an Inventory of my Estate, I put not these things into the account; I reckon not what I have in this World, as Friends, Houses, Lands, &c.

Again, Faith makes little things to become great: A little mercy, that which an ungracious wretch would account nothing, faith will so greaten it, that a man will see Heaven and all blessings in that mercy: Indeed there is much layd up in every thing which we receive from God as the fruit of his Love, and nothing but faith spies it out.

Faith makes things that are absent to be present; so that though thou art yet in this World, if thou livest by faith, thou shalt be as if thou wert in Heaven: And indeed faith will make thee reckon thy self to be one of that City, as Paul did; Our conversation, saith He, is in Heaven; Thou wilt reckon thy Estate there,

Q 4

and

Act. 20. 24
Οὐδένος
λόγον
ποιῶμαι Nullam ra-tionem fa-
cio. Vulg.
Nihil bo-
rum vereor
facio.
Montan.

and thy Heart will be there; and the strength and stay of thy life thou wilt reckon there; so that it is a most excellent life to live by faith.

I have now done with these four excellencies of Faith; but I will tell you, that those that do live in the flesh can no more understand what the life of faith is, then a Plant can understand the life of a Brute, or then a Brute can understand what the life of a Man is. A man in the flesh cannot understand what we speak of the life of faith; but it is as if we spoke things in a strange language. But this is sure, That if a man favor not these things, and his understanding do not reach to discern these things declared in the Scripture, and if his Heart be not provoked to live this life of faith; that man is dead, and separated from God.

Another excellency of the life of Faith is, That it hath an influence unto Holiness; The more you live by faith, the more holy you will be; Holiness is the best thing, it differs but

but in name from Happiness; for what is Happiness, but to be as God is? and what is Holiness, but the Image of God? What is the Honor of a man above a beast, but the Image of God upon him? It is the superscription and image upon a little piece of Coyne that gives it its value. Holiness is the capacity of the Spirit of a man to communion with God: As by our humane Nature, which we all partake of, we have a capacity to communion with men; so by the divine Nature communicated to the Saints, they are raised to a capacity of communion with God. Holiness is the life of men, without which we can do nothing at all towards our life, nor take in any thing of that which is set before us, wherein lies our Blessedness. Holiness is the title of a man to Heaven; As the Image of the Father upon the Childe doth entitle him to the Inheritance of the father, so the Image of God upon his People makes them Heirs.

Faith hath an universal influence,
and

and an effectual influence unto holiness.

Faith hath an universal influence; indeed all holiness springs from Faith: he purified their hearts by faith, Acts 15. 11.

It is true, that all grace, and Faith it self is the fruit of the spirit, but as the vigor and spirits in the root doth form and thrust out all the branches; so the spirit of God, from Faith as the root, doth thrust out all those fruits, which we call so many graces, as fear and love, joy, &c. This is life eternal to know thee (saith Christ) and him whom thou hast sent. Life eternal lies seminally in the true knowledge of God in Christ.

John 17.

Observe how the Scripture doth Epitomize and contract all into love, Love is the fulfilling of the Law, and Faith worketh by love. Love serves Faith, doth the work of Faith; as the powers of a man act by the spirit that is in him, so faith acts by love; so that as you live by faith, such are your graces, such is your repentance & mourning for sin, such is your fear of God, such such is your exactness of walking throughout. It is not for a man to think thus, when he finds his weakness, and that he hath slipped, He do so no more; for he will never recover himself and be set right, till his Faith recover.

Gal. 6. 5.

Faith is the common Cistern from whence every grace is derived, it is the Cistern that is filled from the fountain, and from thence every Pipe hath its supply; so that you will never be able to keep your selves right, or to repair your selves when you are out of order, but by raising your selves to this life of Faith.

As Faith hath an universal influence through all and upon all; So it hath an effectual influence into all. Faith engageth every member (as I may say) of the new man, it is that which not only gives spirits and life to all, but layes Commands upon all; it sets every part on work; we believe, therefore we mourn; we believe, therefore we rejoyce, therefore we hope, &c. Faith hath the leading, conduct, conduct, and command of all.

Now what an excellent thing is it for a man to be engaged to live this life of Faith? This is the undoing of men, that they come to God upon some present convictions, but they fly off again, because they are not under bonds; and it is not the bonds of fear, or the bonds of a Covenant that will hold them, but it is the bond of Faith; if Faith be maintained and kept up, that ties a man unto God, roots him and fastens him in ways of obedience.

To make it appear briefly as I can, Faith presents the most conquering arguments to overcome the heart, it layes the most effectual plaisters to work the cure. I'll instance in four.

1. Faith presents God as he is: look what faith presents, it doth it with this double advantage; It presents it as a thing that is true and real, and as a thing that hath actual and present being; when Faith acts, it hath an actual sight of God; now the sight of God is the greatest Argument to work upon the heart: observe what the

the Apostle saith; He that sinneth hath not seen God, neither known him; the strength of the Apostles reasoning is from the absence of the proper effect of the knowledge of God to argue no knowledge; and he saith, that where ever God is known; that man sins not; that is, in the Apostles sense, he doth not sin as his trade, and as that under the power whereof he is captivated; because he knows God. Indeed Ignorance is the root and strength of all sin: what makes children so bold to waken a sleepy Lion, but because they know not what that creature is? and what makes men so bold with God, but because they know not what God is?

Again, Faith presents God as he is to us, and this addes to the strength of the other, to know what God is in relation to us, our Lord, our Father, &c. Relations we say are but small things, but they are of great force, as Faith shews what God is, as in relation, so in affection; it presents his love, that he loves us from eternity to eternity;

1 John 3.6

Relationes sunt minima entitatis, sed maxima efficitur.

2 Cor. 5. 14

nity; the bonds of such love are strong, constraining faith the Apostle. Faith presents what God is to us, as in affection, so in action; it seeth what he will do for us, and so presents him the great and glorious fountain of all the streams of good that flow in upon us: this is of great force, therefore the Apostle urgeth by the promises, that we should abstain from all filthiness of flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God.

2 Cor. 7.

How can a man but say, shall I deny God any thing that hath given me all things? Shall I joyn in confederacy with the powers of Darkness against him that hath enrolled my name among Angels, and the spirits of just men made perfect? Shall I prefer my self to him who hath not denyed his Son for me? Shall I not do any thing for him, who hath done, and will do all for me?

Again, faith presents the Communion between Holiness and Happiness; it sets its seal to that word, that without holiness no man shall see the Lord;

it

Heb. 12. 14

it concludes on the one side the impossibility of a mans enjoyment of God without holiness, and on the other side, the infallibility and certainty of a mans enjoyment of God with holiness; and so faith forms a Reason from the bowels of blessedness, from all that God hath laid up in his promises, and all that he will be to his people to eternity; faith makes all this a pressing argument upon the soul that it may give itself to God.

Again, faith gives all encouragement to the Heart in all the sad thoughts of it; I have been a sinner faith the soul, and that is a sad thought in a Saint, great intermixtures of sin have stained all my Actions; but faith faith, God will pardon and accept thee, though thou offer to him with a palsie hand; If thou have none but the sick and the lame in thy flock, he will accept them; for he accepts according to what a man hath, and not according to what a man hath not, if there be first a willing mind. But a man may think, my way is straight and

2 Cor. 8. 12

and narrow, and I have abundance of corruption hanging on me, that I am not able to make straight steps towards the Kingdom of Heaven; I know not how I shall be able to walk and hold out to the end.

Faith takes up the words from the mouth of Christ, Lo I am with you to the end of the world; indeed, if you walk'd alone you might have cause to fear, but now faith Christ, I will walk step by step by you, and not leave you till you have run your Race.

But alas, I have so many conflicts, and have been so long turmoyl'd, that I am even weary, and my soul is burthened. Now Faith fetches life from the well of life; Yet a little while, and he that shall come, will come, and will not tarry. Thus I have given you a brief touch of the influence that Faith hath into holiness.

They that know what holiness is, & that know what sin is, and an incapacity of communion with God, cannot but think this an excellent life, to live by

Heb. 20.32

by Faith, if by Faith we may be sanctified.

CHAP. XIV.

Saints Estate Sure and Great.

THen, upon all these considerations, I beseech you learn to live this life; this I may safely say, if not that few do thus, yet sure that many do not thus; yea many do not live this life of Faith; that profess Faith in Christ: What speak those despondencies of soul, those weights of fear that sink, those floods of grief that overwhelm? How is thine anchor fixed within the vail, if thou be thus tost in a tempest? All fear is not against faith, nor all sorrow; Christ had both: but what ever tends to the distorting, and perverting of thee; what ever weakens thee, as to thine end, that thou runnest not the race that is before thee, thee,

R

thee, that is from want of faith. When the Disciples were afraid at Sea, Christ being with them, saith he, Why are you fearful? How is it that you have no faith? Mark 4. 40. Inordinate affection of things present shews that the heart is not born up by Faith as it should; the nature of faith is to center the heart in God, to pitch it upon that fountain of all happiness; when therefore you are carried in an over eager prosecution after earthly things, or when you lay hold too pertinaciously on any state, that you think there is no living for you, but in such a way, and that you are not willing to drink of every cup that God is pleased to temper for you, you live not by Faith.

Again, That want of love to God and Christ, which is generally to be seen, shews plainly the alienation of your hearts from God, and that men are strangers to that high life of faith: what should I speak of the common profaneness of the world, whose neglect of God, and manifest forgetfulness

fulness of the things of their eternal state, is a palpable demonstration to every eye, that they live not by faith, but are dead in trespasses and sins, and without God in the world?

I'll then draw up the Exhortation that is so needful; I will draw up the sense of it in these three things.

1. That you would live always by Faith, not by fits to be mounting up to Heaven, not once a week, or once a day to lodge your souls with God; your bodies are not so refreshed: you are continually in the service of this life; you should much more be intent upon the work of faith, which is the life of your souls, and your eternal welfare. Oh foolish and unwise! that they that might live with God, and walk in the midst of Paradise, will rather wander like sheep on the tops of Mountains, and in desolate places; that they that might go like Princes, will take contentment in covering themselves with rags; and they that might sit on Thrones with Christ, will rather rowl themselves in the dust.

Consult your own experience; when you lean on God, are you not best at rest? O thou poor creature! why dost thou not then always rest and lean upon him? Thou sayst his bread is sweet, and his cup is pleasant, how amiable is his presence? Thou hast never done wondering at him; what sweet impressions of all this are sometimes upon thee? Why dost thou not then always live in thy Fathers house? and always solace thy self with these things, that are ten thousand times better then all the world? thy idle hours, and thy spare time, how richly might they be layd out, if Faith might come in and take up that room which trifles do, that leave nothing behind, but vanity and vexation of spirit?

It is said of one, that he did eat, drink, and sleep Heaven: he was so taken up with the other world, that he was accounted one rather there, then here: so it should be with us. Whence is it, that you are like dry leavs in the wind?

unstable

unstable in your spirits and in your walkings, but because you do not fix your selves by faith, and work your selves into a composed and settled state, which Faith gives? David had this fixedness of heart; saith he, My heart is fixed, my heart is fixed. That passage in Psal. 37. 3. And verily thou shalt be fed; *some read, feed thou on Faith: indeed a man should ever be feeding, there is always hunger and want, there should ever be then a taking in.

Psal. 37. 3.
 גרעה אמונה pasce veri-
 tatem, pag.

It is true, this which you are exhorted to is a matter of some labor, but it is lothfulness of spirit that undoes men: thou hadst rather live poor, then take pains to be rich; and rather then thou wilt be at some cost to get to Heaven, thou wilt lie grovelling, mourning, and wasting thy self on the Earth.

2. Live only by faith. Many live by Sense, by their Estate, and their Interest in this present world; Job denies that his heart was satisfied, and delighted, when wealth came in; if I

R 3

rejoyce

Iob 31. 25. rejoyce because my wealth was great, and because mine hand had gotten much. Many live by their present comforts, and if they have but some tastes, some weak sights and hopes of the life to come, it contenteth them; if they have some enlargements in Duties, and some impressions under the Ministration of Ordinances, this contents them; such live exceedingly below their present comforts.

Some live upon the former actings of their faith; and saith one, I know that my Redeemer lives, I remember the day when my soul did cleave to him; It is well if ever thou didst cleave to him, but thou shouldst not live upon that act, once done, but shouldst constantly be acting thy faith upon him; because thou hast come to him and closed with him, thou shouldst therefore close with him again and again; as Paul saith, rejoyce, and again rejoyce. The first Act of Faith enjoyns thee to a second, and engageth thee the more to live by Faith.

Faith, if thou hast indeed received the life of Faith.

Others live by the Testimony of others : to be well thought on, where men dwell, even by those that are wise and godly, sometimes proves the greatest evil that can befall a man; for such a testimony and good opinion of others oftentimes covers hypocrisie at the bottom of the heart.

3. That which is comprised in the Exhortation, is ; that you act Faith to the utmost, and not to rest in some feeble operations of it ; weak actings of Faith leave a man exceeding dubious and weak ; he will not be able to withstand strong assaults, that acts not his Faith with the utmost of that strength he hath received. We see other creatures go to the utmost in their life, every one takes their fill ; men that are covetous would be very rich, and they do much for it ; would you be rich in all spiritual blessings ? here is your way to live by Faith, act it to the utmost, seeing nothing better nor greater can be set before you. My meaning

R 4

meaning, when I say, A& Faith to the utmost, I'll express in these few things.

1. Enlarge and expatiate your understandings to an effectual contemplation of all that God hath laid up in his promises: do not only cast your eyes upon one branch of the tree of life, but take in the whole; look upon all your portion, measure the whole land of promise; as heirs, when they come to view their estates, will see what they have in goods, and what in lands; what land and how stock, &c.

2. Endeavor to work your spirits to a full assurance of the truth and certainty of these things; there are many that hang as it were between believing and unbelief, they neither firmly assent to the truth of the promise, neither do they directly deny it, but rest in a certain kind of weak assent, which rather is dissent; and in a true interpretation, a denial of the promise, rather, than a confirmation of it. Bring your hearts by all possible means means to this, that you may look on the promises without all hesitation, that you may put the matter out of question, that this is the word of truth.

3. You must also endeavour a clear and through application of all that is in the promise, that you may be able to say, I know that my Redeemer lives; and as the Apostle, We know that if this earthly Tabernacle be dissolved, we have a house above, not made with hands, eternal in the Heavens. Though Faith be not assurance, yet assurance is the end of Faith, and the end of the promise; therefore God deals with us by promise, that we might come to an assured state, and live without anxiety and dubiousness: you cannot live in doubtings, but there will be torment; all uncertainty is vexatious. He that seeks not for assurance, is not good; to be content to live without assurance of his Interest in God, is to have a mind content to be without God.

Furthermore, act Faith to the utmost,

most, that is, so live by faith, that you attain to the highest fruits of Faith, not onely to love God and Christ, but to love them with a burning love, with a mighty love, such a love as lies in the most vigorous prosecution after Jesus Christ, and in the most faithful resignation of your selves to God; such a love, as works the most delightful aspects of God, that makes a man to behold God with all cheerfulness; such a love as works a man to extoll the praises of God; in these things lies the strength of love. Also in a strong longing after the presence of God, that's a greater duty then is thought of; what kind of Christians are we, if we always live so in the world, as never to desire to be at home? what kind of Members are we, if our head be in Heaven, and we not desire to see our head? what child can desire always to live from his Fathers house? If you did more live this life of Faith, you might bring your selves more into such a state, wherein you should answer the Law of Faith, and walk as becomes Christians and Heirs of Eternal Life. That's one of the high fruits of Faith, acting highly high Love.
of

Another is, quietness and calmness of spirit in all a mans ways, let God do what he pleaseth; walking in a holy dependancy and indifferency, as Christ walked; Not my will, but thy will be done. Thus David leaned on God, I lie layme down and sleep: If you lived by faith, it would work in you a holy silence; Be silent to the Lord, or wait patiently for God; that is to be so, as that a man hath nothing to say; Though God dash his Hopes, and make his Desires abortive, yet He is so satisfied in what He sees by Faith, that He is content.

Psal. 4.

Psal. 37.6

A third fruit of faith acted to the utmost, is, boldness, when a man can carry Himself with confidence; we are always confident, saith the Apostle in the words before the Text; whence was that? because He looked on things that were not seen; To be confident

Rom. 4.20
 Ἐπεσθαι
 μὴ τῷ
 θέν.

Heb. 4.16
 Προσ-
 ἔρχεσθαι
 μὴ παύ-
 εσθαι.

sident in Tryals, not to be broken with difficulties, not to be detetred from any thing that God puts you upon, by the saddest appearances that Men and Devils can present. Thus Abraham in that great difficulty gave glory to God; He beleaved, and being strong in Faith, gave glory to God; or being strong by faith. Indeed faith gives a man strength, above the strength and power of all things, to have courage and boldness, so as to laugh at trouble, as Job had, cap. 5. 22. Faith gives a man boldness in access to God; so that a man comes before God with all cheerfulness, notwithstanding that infinite disproportion between him and his God: This is called for, that we come with boldness to the Throne of Grace; the word signifies to come with free and open expressing of our selves, speaking without fear.

Another high fruit of Faith acted to the utmost, is, Joy, that we are also called unto, to have joy, all joy; Your pattern is Joy unspeakable and glori-

orious. And faith unto rejoycing, and not onely to have high joy, but
ways; Rejoyce in the Lord alway,
as I say rejoyce; not onely in a clear day, but when clouds are black-
 t. We rejoyce in the hope of glory;
 and not onely so, but we glory in tribu-
tion: and that you will never be able to do till you live highly by faith, as the Beleevers in Acts 9. 31.
 [whom it is said, They walked in the consolation of the Holy Ghost. * Now I beseech you consider what it is, that God calls you to such a life as this;
 He might have called you to live a life of fear and dread; He might have called in all his Promises, that you should have had no share in these things; but now he speaks to you, that you may walk so, as ever to be filled with joy and peace in beleeving.
 I'll shut up all with a word of mourning over the World: The Saints walk by Faith, how doth the World walk? not by faith, they have
 it not; nor by the sight of Heaven,
 for they are not there; they are far thence.

Rom. 5. 3
 Κανχαι-
 μεθα.
 Non modo
 equo & moderato
 animo su-
 mus, sed
 cum magna letitia per-
 fusus, &c.
 Beza.

thence. What do they walk and live by? It is the irrational practice of men that are strangers to God to dream of the expectations of life; their Hopes are with the greatest contradiction that may be, contrary to divine Truth: God hath said, He will not save that man that doth not repent, and come in unto Him; yet they live in their sins, and hope to be saved: And they hope for that which they refuse always; What a contradiction is this? God every day saith to the World, Here's Pardon and eternal Life for you, I'll be your God, what say you to it? And they say, we will have none of it. This is the condition of men that live without Faith, without Christ, That what ever else they walk by, it will not fail them only, but destroy them. What God hath set for you to live upon, you may safely take; but you must not be your own carvers; This makes the Creatures vain and vexatious to men, because they lay a weight on them which God would not have layd.

layd. A man seeks Happiness, and this is the Reason why men love Honor, and Riches, and Pleasures, because they think they shall be happy in the Enjoyment of them; now thou layst a weight upon the Creature which it cannot bear, and this destroys the Creature, and makes the Creature vexatious to us.

Nay, it destroys thee; for if that be broken whereon thou reposest thyself, how canst thou stay and bear up thyself? If thou canst say, as too many can, My comfort lies in my Estate, my Friends, Lands, Pleasures, &c. if this be thy case, thou art in a miserable state, having nothing to shew for the other world, one whom Christ will not own: There's no entrance into that Kingdom, but for him who hath the Promise to shew; and how canst thou plead for that which thou hast refused?

I'll conclude with that description which the Lord makes of his people Israel: Thou hast offended in thy blood which thou hast shed, and hast polluted

Ezek. 22

lured thy self in thine Idols which thou hast made, and thou hast caused thy days to draw neer, and art come even to thy years. This is the case of most: If they be not come to a full end of their time, yet they are neer it, when there shall be an everlasting separation between God and them.

Because man is since his Apostacy brought under ignorance and insensibleness of spiritual Happiness, and after some light and life restored are yet apt to fall under discouragements or into sloth, I shall set before you the excellencies of this walking by Faith, to provoke them that have received this grace, that they may not suffer it to lie dead, as Beleevers too much do: they live beneath and beside their portion; they have wings by which they may soar aloft, but they lie grovelling in the dust; they have Pillars to support them, but they lie down under their burthens, because they make not use of their faith.

In the first place consider this, That though though the Text opposeth walking by Faith unto walking by Sight, yet Faith is not without its Sights. The Text doth not intend to exclude all Sight: Faith is a grace that hath both its birth and life in light, and in that light it sees light. Faith is not onely an Hand, but an Eye to the Soul; and hath its sights both in way of Aspect and Prospect, not onely to look on things immediately before it; but to look on things far hence, and to come; it can see things that are invisible.

Some things are invisible in respect of their Nature; so God is, and so Spirits are. Some things are invisible, in respect of their distance, that are not yet present with us, but are things to come: Faith can see both these. It is true, we have not the sight of sense, but we have a sight as noble, yea and in some respects more excellent, then that of sense. The Sight of Faith is more full and certain then that of Sense. We have indeed not a perfect Sight, but we have such a Sight which God hath vouchsafed to his poor ones in the World, that by the power of it they may be enabled to walk through all conditions, how dark and sad soever : the Apostle tels you the power of this Sight ; Though our outward man decay, yet our inward man is renewed day by day : How ? while we look not on the things that are seen, but the things which are unseen. So that things that are unseen to Sense, are seen by Faith ; and the sight of these things is the reviving of a man in a dying state.

S

have

2 Cor. 4

Faith is presented with many excellent Visions.

1. Faith hath a sight of the greatness and excellency of that state that remains and waits for us. Three glasses there are, by which faith hath its Prospect into the other World, and by which it takes a measure of the greatness and glory of that World.

The first glass is spiritual sense. That you may abound in all understanding and sense. By the sense of things

Phil. 1.9.
'Niduen.

things that are heavenly and spiritual Faith hath a sight of the greatness and excellency of the Life to come. As the grapes, brought by the spies
 from the Land of Promise, discovered
 the excellency of that Land; so those tastes and first fruits, which we receive of that other life, discover to us the excellency of it. A man that indeed is actually in a believing state, will, or may, and should, reason often thus, to the enlarging of his Heart: If those tastes and impressions that come so seldom be so sweet,
 how sweet will that day be, when I shall sit down with Abraham, Isaac,
 and Jacob, and Christ Himself at the upper end, and the Cloth never taken away to all Eternity? If a few drops of that River of Joy be so exceedingly taking, and give me such a new life in this World, in the midst of many deaths; what time will that be, when I shall sit down and drink
 my fill in Heaven? If that which I receive now be so sweet in the midst of many afflictions and troubles; what will that be which I shall receive in full, when there will be no sorrow, but all tears shall be wiped away? If a little of that comfort falling on my dull spirits, a Heart so insensible and stupid as mine is, and so hard to be wrought upon, be so enlivening; what shall my comfort be when my Heart is in the fulness of Life? when all the Saints are in the perfection of their Joys, and I shall have my fill with them? If God be so good while we are children under age and strangers, while we walk (or rather wander) in the way; what will he be to us at our full age? when He hath brought us to his House, when all the Children of the Kingdom shall meet at once, and the Father of the family be in the midst of them, and bidding them welcome, and bringing forth his precious treasures?

Another glass is the Promise; The Covenant of Grace is as a Book of survey, tells you where the inheritance lies, and what it is, as Maps do Countries, which we may behold in them.

Great

Great and precious Promises, saith the Apostle, are given unto us, yea exceeding great. God can make no greater Promises to the sons of men, then He hath made to his People; He hath not gone to the utmost in any thing, but in his Love. No man dares say He hath gone to the utmost of his wisdom and Power, either in his works of Providence or Creation; but He hath gone to the utmost in his Grace, Favor and Mercy promised to His People. He hath so enlarged Himself this way, that there could no more be done; He hath done things so great, that He hath no greater, having given His own Son and Himself.

As the Children of Israel while they were in the Desert sent Spies into the Promised Land to discover what they could of it; so a man, upon the wing of a lively faith, will be darting his thoughts, and sending out his spirit, to see what discovery he can make of that life which is hid with Christ in God: He will walk about
S 3
that

that City, and tell the Towers of it, he will be looking upon that Paradise, to see the plants of God that are there; he will look on every branch of the tree of life as far as he can. This spirit the Apostle speaks of, Of which salvation the Prophets have enquired, and searched diligently; The words are very emphatical, one of them imports much, but both of them much more; It is such a search as hunters use to make, that never cease till they have their game; such a search as is of men that dig in Mines, that cease not; but if they reach not the Mine to day, try to morrow, and do not give over till they have found it; or as a wise Judge, that hath a cause in hearing, will sift and handle the matter, and search and enquire diligently to find out the true state of the business, before he hath done; such a kind of search and enquiry it is that a living Faith will put you upon, that you be not like those creatures that lap and away, that cast a glance and a transient eye upon that other

1 Pet. 1. 10
 ἡ ἐξέτιν-
 σαρ, καὶ ἐξ-ηετύνασιν

other world ; but study and look narrowly upon it , that you may find relief and strength to your Souls.

An beir , when he hath great lands left him , will delight to go and view them , and in his view what pleasant and refreshing sights hath he ? There he sees a goodly Mansion , and hence appears a pleasant wood and Grove , there also are delightful Rivers , in another place appears a rich Myne . So it is in this view of Faith , there appears this comfort and that vision ; every one like the wise men from the East , that came to Christ with offerings in their hands , all present something to revive and cheer the heart .

Faith being acted doth enlarge a mans thoughts and apprehensions about eternal life , while he is led forth by the conduct of the promise to behold things themselves ; the reasons thus , surely the things promised are larger and greater then the letter of the promise , and indeed so they are , for the promise is a word spoken , but these things contained in the promise.

mise are things that cannot be uttered. God speaks of the things of the other world, sometimes under the highest similitudes that the whole Creation affordeth, but these similitudes represent them only in some measure, but are not adequate and full to the things that are prepared for the Saints; sometimes he speaks indefinitely of the life to come, and tells us that the reward is exceeding great, and that the riches are unsearchable: yea a man that looks well on the thing, will be forced to reason thus; The joy of the Saints falls short of the things promised to them, no mans joy riseth so high as the object of it, and yet the joy of the Saints is sometimes unspeakable in this world, therefore how much more unspeakable are the things themselves which are the matter of that joy; and indeed the word of the promise is fitted rather to be proportionable to our understanding, then to be adequate to the things themselves, of which it speaks; for the things of eternal life cannot be uttered in a language language intelligible to us, they are things that cannot be expressed in a language that we know; This is another glass by which Faith is enabled to look upon the things that are prepared.

A third glass by which Faith hath its prospect, is the original of the things looked for; Faith acts by way of Reduction, it reduceth things to the fountain from whence they flow: the sight of our life as it is in God, is indeed the life of our sight; the greatness of whose happiness the Angels desire to know. Mark what a strain the Apostle is in; That the God of our Lord Jesus Christ (this is his prayer) the Father of glory, would give you the spirit of wisdom and revelation, in the knowledge of him, that the eyes of your understandings may be enlightened, that you may know what is the hope of his calling, and what is the riches of his glorious inheritance in the Saints. The more a man comes to a knowledge of God and of Christ, the more he sees the Excellency of those things that God

Eph. i. 18

God hath prepared for them that love him. For as a man is, so is his strength, and so he Acts. If God set himself to make a Creature happy, that happiness must needs be great. If a King say to one, I'll make thee a man, what a man will such an one be among men? how much more if God say, I will make thee blessed, what blessedness will that be that is answerable to his greatness? Ahasuerus made a feast according to the power of a King: when you look on God as the contriver, builder, and maker of that City which you expect, you must needs think that to be very glorious, which so glorious and blessed a God undertakes. In God will I praise his word, saith David. [In God] Certainly the sight of the word of promise, as it is in God, is much raising.

2. Another sight of Faith is, That it sees these things thus, not only to be of worth, high, and glorious, but stable, firm, and lasting; it looks on the streams in the fountain, and then you know as the fountain lasts, so shall

Eth. 1. 7.

כ"ר

המלך

Secundum

manum

Regis.

Psal. 56. 4.

shall the streams; God is a living fountain, God is my shepherd (saith David;) what then? Therefore I shall not want; because he is my exceeding great reward, and he is God all-sufficient.

Psal. 33. 1.

If there could be any hope in hell, there would be some comfort; and if there could be any fear in Heaven, there would be grief; this gives a man rest, that his state is sure to eternity, and that he shall never want. The nature of man is such, that He is as much taken up with the thoughts of continuance in a good state, as with the thoughts of sufficiency of good. If a man were a Prince, and had a Sword by a twined thred continually hanging over his head, he would but little enjoy himself. If a man be never so great in the world, and be in a tottering state; all his greatness will not so much comfort him, as his grief afflicts him: but the Saints, beholding the streams thus in the fountain, are always refreshed by these living waters.

As Dances.

3. Faith

3. Faith hath this sight, It beholds the infallible security of the things of the promise, that he that shall come, will come, and will not tarry; when Faith is in life, it will be working: indeed, it is of its own nature a working thing, when set upon a strong object, it is still acting the understanding of a man in a spiritual way, and upon spirituall principles, and with spiritual reasonings; so that Faith by this discoursing doth fix and enlarge it self in a state of peace and joy: By its perpetual motion and working, it doth fetch in something from all the means that God is pleased to contribute towards its welfare, and from all that God is and doth. Faith is very discussive; God is true saith Faith, this therefore which he hath promised shall come to passe; he hath said, I shall have a place in his house, and that I shall live in his sight, therefore it shall be so to me.

What a blessed life is this? if we would be at the cost to live it, we should live in the hope of Heaven, as
in

in the possession of it: Paul lived at this estate, and observe the working of his hope; he hath set us in heavenly places
with Christ. A man reckons his bonds is money; so should you say of the promises; here is my estate, and inheritance. As Saul had another spirit given him when he was made a King,
 so if we did keep our eyes upon the things of the promise, it would beget
 a Princely Spirit in us. Judas went mourning to his death, (it may be his mourning kild him;) whence was it,
 but because he was so full of fears, and had so full an assurance of his everlasting condition. Paul went triumphing; what was the Reason? because he knew him whom he had trusted to be faithfull, and that which was laid up for him certain, and would not fail
 him; My conversation is in Heaven.
 Now saith he his heart was so secure
 about the other world, and he so taken with it, that he was more in Heaven, then on earth; It is a sweet word
 when God saith to a man, I'll do this for thee O man, and a man can say again,

Eph. 2. 6.

Phil. 3. 10.

again believingly, Lord I know thou wilt. There is no difference betwixt Heaven it self and this harmony, between the voice of the promise and the voyce of faith, save only this; the man is not in Heaven, but he is near, he is within hearing of those songs of joy; Though he sit not at the Table, yet he eats of the meat, and though he do not enter, yet he is at the Door; These sights of Faith are precious. Wisdom in Heaven simply considered, hath not that Certainty, as the sight of faith hath; for the Angels had it and fell from their standing, and held not their habitation; but what you see by Faith is sure; so the Apostle, Therefore it is of Faith, that it might be of grace, to the end the promise might be sure to all the seed. That which is by Faith is firm, because God is bound, and hath now denyed himself that liberty which before he had.

Rom. 4. 16

And if you would live thus, you should see yet more certain security of these things, that they shall certainly come to pass, because you look
on

on them in the love of God which is the highest love, and the Conceptions of the strongest love cannot be abortive. I may safely say (to the honor of that grace and mercy) that God cannot be Happy if he should not make them Happy whom he loves, because then He should not have his will, for his Will is, that they should be Happy with himself. If he have done the greater courtesy for him, He will do the lesser; if He hath pardoned thee, He hath done more for thee, then merely to give thee a place in Heaven: It is less to put thee into possession, then to make preparation of an inheritance for thee. God hath given us his Son, how shall he not with him give us all things also?

Rom. 8.

When you are under the actings of Faith, you will be ready to say, It shall be well with me, for God stands bound not only in point of promise, but by Law; for having begotten me to a lively Hope, He is bound to provide for the Child he hath begotten, and to give me a portion; He that that wrought in me, and regulated mine heart to stand right towards himself, and to forsake all, will not leave me; He will not fail me, because I have resigned my self to him. He that bid Abraham go from his Fathers house, and out of his own country, will surely be his exceeding great reward. Christ laid down his life to purchase Heaven for us; so he rose, ascended, and did enter into Heaven for us; he went before to take up places for us: You may reason thus; There is no bar to plead against the accomplishing of the promise, nor my unworthiness and sinfulness, because the promise is, that he will blot out all the iniquities of his people: nor is it want of power that can be pleaded, because he is God Almighty that is engaged; My God shall supply all your wants, according to his riches in glory, by Christ Jesus: He hath promised nothing but that He can make good. There is another sight that Faith hath, it sees the certainty of these things to come.

Heb. 6.

Phil. 4.

4. By

4. By Faith you may see the proximity (or nearness) of the things laid up in the promise. Indeed the promise speaks of things as future; God takes a day for the payment of his bonds, but it is a short day. Yet a little while, and He that shall come, will come, and will not tarry; And the Apostle Peter calls it a small moment.

Heb. 10.
37.
Τὸ γὰρ
μικρὸν
ὅσον ὅσον.
1 Pet. 1. 6.
Ὀλίγον
ἔστι.

As it is the torment of men going down to perdition, to think how near they are to it, so it is the rejoycing of a man that walks by Faith, to see how near he is to his salvation; Your Salvation is nearer then when you first believed. The Judge is at the Doore, the coming of the Lord drawes near; The Lord is at hand, hard by.

Rom. 13:
Iam. 5. 8.
Phil. 4. 6.

If you thus considered the promise, you would be abundantly relieved; and therefore are your spirits so low, because you do not exercise your fight; for though we walk by Faith, yet fight is not excluded.

One excellency more of walking by Faith is, That Faith is not only a

T

grace

grace of expectation onely, but of enjoyment; there are many things received, as there are more promised.

If you believe you are pardoned, that is a great thing; the weight of sin unpardoned is too strong for any creature, it broke the back of Angels, it will turn the stoutest spirit in a moment into a Sea of bitterness, and make the strongest heart like a rowling thing before the wind: when Dauids pardon, and the grace and favor of God was hid, he was like a man whose bones were broken, day and night pouring out tears, his moysture turned into drought; but what is sweeter then a pardon? Blessed is the man whose sins are forgiven; pardon it self makes an everlasting separation between you and death, and an everlasting conjunction between you and Heaven; he that believes shall not enter into condemnation, but is passed from Death to life.

And as you have your pardon, so you have the presence of God; For this is the promise, If any man love me, my

Psal. 32.

Iohn 3. 8.

Ioh. 14. 23

Μολὼ

πρὸς αὐτὸν

πορεύο-

μεν.

my Father will love him, and we will come and make our abode with him; God will keep house with that man, and if God be with him, surely he is a blessed man.

Yea, you have also the Image of God on you; if a man believe, he is born again, and so is wrought into the likeness of God, yea he hath also the beginning of that life and glory which is laid up for him; he hath, as the Apostle saith, the first fruits of the Spirit. We have the first fruits of the Spirit, some render it the tastes of the Spirit, such a taste of a thing as a man is wont to give his friend, when he would commend it to him, to draw him to desire it; The word ἀπαρχή, that signifies first fruits, is not to be taken in the sense of the Law; for their first fruits were offered to God, but these first fruits are presented and given to us; We have the first fruits of the Spirit: that portion of the Spirit which we have received, is not only for security to us, but it is given us as food whereon we are to live; He hath

Eph. 4. 23.

Rom. 8. 23
τῷ ἀ-παρχῇ τῆς πνεύ-
ματος.

2 Cor. 5.
Tēr aīfā-
ßōra.

given us the earnest of his Spirit; it is not a pledg, for that signifies something borrowed to be restored; God borrows not of us, but this earnest is a thing to abide with us, it is part of that promise that is made over to us, the beginning of glory, and security for the rest.

You have also by vertue of your Faith a Right of Dominion over the Creatures, not only a liberty and freedom to use them, but an excellent power so to do; it is true, other men may use the world, while they are in the world, and sin if they do not: because if they do not, they cross the end whereto they are appointed; for if God will have a man to live, he will have him use the means of life; but the use of them to the Saints, and to others, is in a far different way. That which the Saints have, is from the love [the eternal love] of God, and they have these things as part of their portion, that in the help of these things, they may be carried to eternal life; others must pay for all they have,
and

and give a severe account for it ; I might add, that by Faith you have access to God , power with God , and right to all good.

Now then , see what an excellent thing it is for a man to walk by Faith that hath received so much, especially seeing that the more a man lives by Faith , the more visible future things are , and all things are more sweet to him ; as a man lives by Faith , so the whole Creation , this world and the other, yea, God himself, open themselves to give out their hidden treasures to him ; there is a sweetness of things, not only in their natures, but in their office put upon them , which is to signify and seal to us , that we shall have other treasures , and be yet more blessed ; and this office they perform best when Faith is most living and acting.

Now I shall present to you the Comfortable and Happy estate of the people of God , in that they walk by Faith ; indeed , there is a great deal in it ; I'll hint but at three things, which the nature of the work, and which the Context doth suggest to us.

T 3

the

1. That the life of the Saints is invisible; among all Creatures, and all things that are, those things are best, which are least seen, in the Earth your rich Mynes lie hid, when pibbles and things of little worth shew themselves in full view. You think there is a great deal of glory in the world, who would deny it? but there is a glory than no eyes see, that casts darkness on all this, a glory so great, that in comparison of it all the glory of this world is nothing. Man is the best of all visible creatures, but take man in all his accomplishments, internal and external, with whatsoever may be an ornament and advantage to him, yet man is lower then the Angels, and that part of man with which the world is so much taken, and which men are so apt to regard, that part of man that we see is the least part of man; his best part is invisible: so are the things by which the Saints live, they are invisible in respect of their nature:

ture; those things wherein our happiness lies and consists most, they are no ways subject to any sense, but far above all; the Apostle calls them things not seen, that no eye can behold; and it is not manifest (saith the Apostle) what we shall be. Neither is the life of the Saints (the things by which they live) invisible only in respect of their nature, but in respect of their Existence and being; that is, they are things not present, but in expectation, and so out of the reach of sense.

1 Cor. 4.
17.

1 Joh. 3. 2.

This, however it may seem to detract from the Happiness of the Saints, yet in truth argues a very great excellency in those things by which they live; they are things to come, which the world is not able to make judgment of: believers themselves do oftentimes mistake themselves, but if the world did know the things that are reserved for them, they would see that they had cause to account the condition of believers exceeding blessed.

For consider, First, It is not want T 4 of

of love in God that their blessedness is hid with Christ in God, and that it is not present with them; the deferring of this I say is not from want of love: for as the love of God is the fountain from whence these things flow, so that love admits neither of intention, nor of remission, it changeth not, but is always one, it is the same love that God hath to those that are now in glory, God could have put you into present and perfect possession, so that the Kingdom of grace and the Kingdom of glory might have been one, but the wisdom of God hath seen it good so to order them, that one should be set at a distance from the other; so that first we must enter into the Kingdom of grace, and abide some time in that state, before we enter into the Kingdom of glory. For there is not one of us but God hath appointed something for us to do; we come not into the world to abide here, but to pass through, but yet not as meer Spectators, but as Messengers, as servants on our Masters errand and business.

business, every one of us have something to do. Christ himself saith, he had his day & that set, & he had a work to do in that day: the Apostle Paul had a course that he likewise must finish, and David served his Generation, and so every one hath something to do, which God hath allotted and designed to him. If Abraham had been taken to Heaven as soon as he was taken into the state of grace, what had become of Isaac and Jacob? if this root had been transplanted, as soon as it was quickened with life, what had become of those excellent branches that sprang from it? If Enoch had been translated from Earth to Heaven, as soon as he passed from life to death, and was changed from his natural into a spiritual estate; what had become of Noah (the third from him) Noah that upright man, the best man of the world in his time? Therefore I say there is great Reason, why those that believe are not presently put into possession of glory, why they that are sanctified, are not immediately glorified.

This

This also should be considered, that the time of believers abiding in this world, is to fit them for the state of the next world. 'Tis true, if God had pleased, he could at once have cast his people into such a mold, that in an instant they should have been in an exact fitness for that state of glory. He made Adam Happy in an instant, a perfect man and a good man in a moment; but God works usually by degrees, in all things it is his usual course to proceed gradually, from imperfection to perfection.

Look into the whole frame of the Creation, and you may observe, that all the works of God (since that time) have been compleated by degrees and steps; A Tree is first a seed, and then a little sprig, and afterwards comes to its full state, and so it is with a man, it is so with every thing; so God will have his spiritual work in the new world, that new Creature, to proceed by degrees, from one degree to another, from Faith to Faith, from strength to strength, till till at last it come to perfection.

Again, That you may see it is not want of Love, but that God acts according to wisdom, yea and much goodness, to those whom He brings to Faith; they lose not by continuing in the world; if it were a meer continuance, then it were a loss, but their continuance is to their advantage; for this the Scripture holds forth to us, That a mans wages and his reward shall be according to his work; the longer God holds any in his service, and the more He employes them, the more He will reward them. The Scripture is frequent in this, that God recompenceth every man according to his work, which is not to be taken onely thus, that God will in kind recompence, that they that do well shall fare well, and they that do evil shall suffer for it; as the Apostle speaks in that sence, Gal. 6. 7. whatsoever we sowe, that we shall also reap: For he that soweth to his flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption, but he that soweth to the spirit, shall of the spirit reap life everlasting. But

Rom. 2. 6.

But when God saith, He will reward every man according to his work, he means that he will proportion one to the other, the reward to the work; so that he doth not speak onely of the kind, but of the degree of Compensation.

I know that it is questioned by many, whether there be degrees of recompence in the other life or no. But methinks the Scripture is very clear for it, what though (as they say in the objection) that one Christ bought all? that all our portions are bought by the blood of Jesus Christ? yet as a Father, that buyes an inheritance for all his children, may not allot to every one a like portion; so neither is it necessary that the inheritance purchased by one Christ should be divided in equall portions, to every one. And the Apostle saith freely, He that sows sparingly shall reap sparingly, and he that sows bountifully shall reap bountifully; and fers a mark on these words, and saith, Remember this: as if he should say, to what I said said before, I add this; Christ indeed purchased all, and our recompence comes not by way of our merit, but as purchased by the blood of Christ; and so it is according to the Compact made between him and his Father, that eternal life should be measured out according to the work, service, and faithfulness of his people. Surely, there is as well reason to plead for equall degrees of grace, and other good in this world, as for equall degrees of glory in the other world; why may not there be an inequality in the one, as well as in the other? and Heaven surely being a place of order, it is there as it is in all Bodies, the capacity of every part is not equall, the portion of every Member is not alike; the foot is not equall with the head, nor the hand with the eye; so it is there sure. There is Order amongst the Angels, and there will be Order among men in Heaven, there could not else be comfortable society and contentment; The very supposition of Order, supposeth

inequali-

inequality and disproportion. As in Musick, the strings of an instrument must not be all equall, so here.

This is it that I say then, That Believers have an Advantage by their not being presently translated from this world into the other, and so put into an actual possession of the things prepared for them; It is not want of love in God to them, but upon very high reasons.

*Spes habet
aliquid
miserie,*

2. Consider this, that though the things prepared for the Saints be future, yet the things themselves are so great, that they swallow up the pain of hope and expectation of them. If a husbandman think not much, when he casts his seed into the ground, to wait till the time of the year come that he may have his harvest, because that is his life, how much more should a man account that time nothing (though much more then that) wherein he waits for a Crown and Kingdom, suppose it to be Monarch of the whole world? It is said of Jacob, when he served for Rachel so many many years, that it seemed to him a small time; so if a Christian could believe the excellency of that state that remains for him, he would see himself abundantly recompenced for his waiting in the greatness of the things; That look as it is in the matter of judgment, God doth recompence his delaying and slowness, to punish with the greatness of the punishment when it comes; so likewise in the distribution of good, especially of that good, the great and transcendent glory of that state doth abundantly and transcendently recompence all our stayings for it: saith the Apostle, Our momentary and light afflictions work for us a far more exceeding weight of glory, while we look not on the things that are seen, but on the things that are unseen.

Add to this, That that time which God hath proposed between grace and glory is very little in it self. You know what the Scripture speaks of it in comparison to eternity, that in reference unto God, a thousand years is but

Tarditatem supplicii gravitate compensat.
Val. Max.

2 Cor. 4. 17
Καὶ ὅτι
περὶ βολῶν
οὐκ ἔστιν ὀνείδισμα
βλαβερὸν ἀλλὰ
ὡνιον βάρος
δόξης καὶ
κατεργασίας
ἡμῶν

1 Cor. 7. 29
Συνεστῆτε
μῦθον.

Heb. 10.
37.

but as one day, but indeed it is very little in it self; the time of our life is but a few days, a span of time. The Apostle compares it to a thing wrapt up: the life of man was at first spread out like a sheet or Sail in its full compass, but now God hath contracted it, and wrapt up the time of mans life, and it lyes in a very small bundle and compass; the Apostle calls it a little season: Yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry. It is such an expression that we know not how to render it word for word, it imports an exceeding little time. Now then seeing the time that intervenes between the state of grace and glory is so little and short as it is, surely there is reason that we should not think our selves to suffer any detriment, because we are not presently settled in the Kingdom, when we are called and anointed to it.

I'll add but one thing more, If we stay a little in expectation of Happiness, God deals with us but in just proportion, nay we cannot say altogether in

in a just proportion; my meaning is this, God stayed; it is reason then that we should stay: how long did God stay? it was about four thousand years before he had the price, agreed upon for our redemption and inheritance, paid him; he was content to stay all that time: How long doth God stay for those who are called to be heirs of glory before they give up their names to him? All the day long he presseth them and follows them, and sometimes their time is well-nigh gone before they give up themselves to him; no wonder therefore if God will have us to wait a little for the full enjoyment of our eternal Happiness. That is the first thing that I observe, that the portion of Saints is a thing future, and so invisible, because they expect it by Faith.

Secondly, As it is future, so it is certain. I will not urge whatsoever I can, but I will from his discourse of the Apostle shew out the certainty of these things to come.

V

First,

Rom. 4. 16

First, Observe, the Text saith, we walk by Faith; now though that life be not full, yet it is a sure life; it's surer then the possession it self, because the possession hath been lost, but this life by Faith cannot be lost, because what is by Faith, is by promise: And it is by promise, that it may be sure.

Heb. 6. 18.

What is the promise of God? It's but the declaration of his purpose; and the purpose of God the Apostle calls a thing immutable, that cannot change; therefore observe what the Apostle saith in the words before the Text, we have a house above not made with hands, &c. It is not present, but future; yet saith he, we have an house above, because it was promised, and so was sure and certain.

And see what the Context speaks for your security, it sayes this, the promise is of things (not to be made ready, but) already prepared; it is true, there are some things yet to be done, but the greatest things are already fitted and wrought. If a man promise another a dwelling, whereof there there is not a stone yet laid, and the cost is yet to be issued forth, there may be some reason for doubting of such a promise; but where the thing promised is already prepared, and all charges already born, there is great cause of assured expectation.

Now the Apostle speaks of the Saints portion as already prepared, and indeed, as Christ saith, it was prepared before the foundation of the world; the first work that God did, was to make that place, that City, whereof himself is the builder, for the entertaining of his people.

Again, the Text saith, our Lord is here; for, saith the Apostle, we are absent from the Lord; what's the reason? because we are on Earth, and He is in Heaven: Is Christ there? here the thing is sure; for do but consider from the Scriptures, how Christ is there, he is gone before, but now? as our forerunner, as our pacesetter; what is that? One sent before to prepare Lodgings, and all conveniencies, for some that are to come

V 2

Mat. 25.

Heb. 6. 9,
Πρόδρομος
μὲν ἔστι
ἵνα ἐν-στύλῃ.

John 14.

come after ; so Christ is gone before to prepare all things : as He saith, I go to prepare a place for you, and I will come again, that you may be where I am. As an Harbinger, when he hath prepared all things, goes forth to meet those for whom he hath provided ; so Christ saith, he will come again to bring us to his Fathers house, which He hath made ready.

Eph. 2.6.

Again, he is there as a common person, one in our stead ; to our behoof as our head : As a Father takes possession of Lands for all his children, so Christ is gone to Heaven to take possession for all his ; with whom, saith the Apostle, we are set in heavenly places.

Rom. 12.

We are set in heavenly places together with him : as when a mans head is crowned the whole man is crowned, so Christ being in Heaven, his body hath a sure Interest in that glory wherein he is. If the first fruits be holy, so is the whole lump. And saith the Apostle, Christ is the first fruits of them that sleep ; and as in Adam, the head of all mankind, all fell ; so in the

the Second Adam, Christ Jesus, all that are in him live; and Christ hath what he hath for them.

Yea, and the Scripture sayes, he is there as our Lord; so the words before the Text, we are absent from the Lord, that is, he is there, one in Authority and Power, to give the things of that life, which he now possesseth and holds. As the Father hath life in himself, so he hath given the Son to have life in himself, and to quicken whom he will. All things are put into the hands of Jesus Christ, and he hath power over all.

Ioh. 15. 21

Now then, if Christ being the Lord of life, would part with his life: when Christ, I say, having dominion over life, and being in the possession of it, did not stick to part with it for our sakes, how much more will he give out that which is committed to him, (as a great Lord and Steward) according to the purpose of God? so that Christs being in Heaven is the great security to those that are on earth, that they shal come to that state.

Karisyā-edukā-
hūās ēs
āulā tūto.

And further, the Text saith this, That we are wrought; God hath wrought us to this very thing, in verse 5. of this Chapter? if a Vessel be formed, it is formed to some end, and what doth not attain its end is vain and lost. God would not form and make this new work, but that the end is sure to be attained. A man may make a thing useless and short of its end, because the thing is ill made; a man may mistake in the forming of it, but it's God that hath wrought us to this (saith the Apostle.) Or a thing may come short of its end, because a man may change his mind, but God hath wrought us to this very thing, and he changeth not, therefore the thing is sure. Some things, when men have formed them, they will by no means deprive of their end, as things that are curious and costly; the more a man layes out of himself about any thing, the more certain that thing is of its end. To what purpose doth a man form Vessels of gold, but to have them for his use? as for ordinary

nary Utensils, they are thrown about the house, the meanest place in the house will serve for them; but for curious Arras and Tapestry, they are stored for, and sure of the best Room.

Now this workmanship, which the Apostle speaks of, being the best of all that he hath wrought, is too good to be left in this world, therefore God hath designed it the best place, where of it shall be sure. If thou cleave thy self from these things, thou shalt be a vessel sanctified and meet for the Masters use and service; vessels made meet for him, are sure to be used like vessels of gold in great houses. In a great house are vessels of gold, and vessels of wood, &c. some for honorable, some for dishonorable uses; those for dishonorable uses are often cast away, but those of great worth are preserved. All things indeed are made by God, and wrought by him, by his power and wisdom, but how? not as the subject of these, but effects; that is, though they all be made by wisdom, yet they are not all made wise.

Eph 2.10.
ἀντὶ τῆς
χρηστέως
τοῦ σώματος.

2 Tim. 2.
21.

But now this workmanship of God, the new Creature, hath a communication of the divine nature, the wisdom and goodness of God in it; so that as the Father is in the child, because of that Image of the Father communicated to the child, so God is in us, because of his Image stamp'd upon us; and as the Father loves the child that is molded and cast into his Image, and will certainly give him an Estate; so also God loves those that believe, and cannot deprive them of glory, because being made children, they are heirs, and have a right & title to their Fathers Estate. This is a consideration of great comfort to believers; what though we be so and so sinful, and have great reason to judge our selves vessels of no worth? Yet God having put into believers that which is of invaluable worth, the vessel shall be saved for the things sake. Jewels of great worth are many times put into cabinets of small account, and the cabinets are preserved for the Jewels sake; so because God hath made his people people his habitation, though they be poor cottages, and little worth, yet because he is in them, they shall be safe. It is God that hath wrought us for this very thing: a man may work a thing to an end, and yet by some accident, or violence offered, it may come short of that end: a goodly building may be raised for an habitation, and yet may be burnt or thrown down by winds, and so never come to its end; but this work in believers is wrought of God, and cannot be demolished; the work is strong like the workman.

There is a strength in things sometimes from the nature of them, and so Rocks are strong, and there is a strength that is not in the nature of the thing, but from external power, as a Venice glass may be so put in a Rock that it may be secure from all danger; so we being wrought of God, &c. though we are but as vessels in the hand of a Potter, poor, weak, and feeble things, yet the power of God preserves and keeps us so, that this thing that God hath formed formed hath more strength then the ~~angels~~ when they were in Heavens, for they fell. Though our strength be but the strength of ~~worms~~, yet we are kept by the mighty power of God through Faith to salvation. God looks to this work, that none shall destroy that good work that he hath begun in any, but ~~he wil finish it~~. That good work that he hath begun he will carry on to perfection, so that there shall want nothing of it; but it shall attain its end. He hath formed us to this very end, his ~~intentions~~ admit of no ~~frustration~~; if he have formed us to glory, certainly we shall never be deprived of it; this is the Glory and Happiness of those that believe in Christ.

1 Pet. 1.

Phil. 1, 6.

Furthermore, for the security of believers, the Text saith, God hath given us the ~~earnest of his spirit~~. There is nothing more disagreeing, then the thoughts of God towards his people, and the thoughts of his people towards themselves; they oftentimes plot lies against themselves, and enter themselves as ~~for among the dead~~, but their Father

Father in Heaven hath written their names in the Book of Life; and intends no hurt; but all good to them; and this is the sign of it, the earnest of his Spirit. If he intend a thing; he will not go from his purpose; for with him is no shadow of change; he is not like unto man that moves from one purpose to another; there is no motion in God to and fro; but he is equitable, constant; and one in all his inclinations, doe yea and nay, but yea.

He that gives earnest upon a promise or bargain, loseth his earnest if he do not make it good; if God hath given himself in earnest, here is the greatest bond that can be; he hath given us the earnest of his Spirit.

Eph. 1. 14

An earnest is lost where either the bargain is repented of; and God cannot repent; or where the thing that is engaged is beyond the power of him that promised it; now it's no more hard for God to do, then to say, it's as easie for him to perform as to promise; or an earnest may be lost, where it's not much regarded, being of no great great value; but what hath God greater to give then his Spirit? So that this also shows the certainty of the happy estate of those that believe in Christ.

And yet there is another thing, and that is, the desire of blessedness that is in the Saints; the Apostle speaks much of it in this Chapter; it is true that all desire of blessedness doth not oblige God, for then the Devil would be blessed, but all desire of blessedness upon promise doth oblige him; when God hath held forth eternal life to his people in a promise, and they make desires after it, this binds him: if Hope defer'd be the sickness of the Soul, what is Hope frustrated? If the Soul in pursuance of the chiefest good fail, whither will she fall? this is the fire of hell, that men always hope for what they shall never have; it would have been a hell to the Saints, and they would have been the most unhappy men in the world, if God had put them upon thirsting desires, hungry and strong longings after himself, and blessed-

bleſſedneſs in the enjoyment of him; their deſires ſhould be in danger to be fruſtrated: deſire without Hope, or with uncertain Hope, is tormenting.

And one thing more from the Text the Apoſtle ſhews, that all Bars are removed; nothing can be pleaded why thoſe that believe ſhould not be ſaved; for faith he, we were all dead, but Chriſt dyed for us; then though we have ſinned, yet Chriſt hath ſatisfied: nothing remains a bar in our way to life: Therefore they have great cauſe to rejoyce much, and to walk as Princes; and though they be here in a ſtrange land, yet they are near unto the things promiſed, and after a ſhort time ſhall be received to their Fathers houſe. That is a ſecond thing concerning the Happineſs of the Saints, which the diſcourſe of the Apoſtle ſpeaks of in this Chapter.

Thirdly, It is very great Happineſs, and truly that is a comfortable addition, it had need be great; our deſires are large, our capacity is great, if our portion portion were not very great, it would not be enough to satisfy us; all this world will not hold so much as a mans heart can contain, nay ten worlds will not fill one mans heart; therefore here is so much misery, because there is not enough to satisfy us, but that which is laid up for the Saints is great, exceeding great. I'll illustrate this by divers things observable from this Scripture.

1. The things of their life are made over to them by promise, and the promise of God; God by his promise comes under bonds, that he will do this: Will a Prince give his bond for trifles? What must that be for which the greatest Prince in the world enters into bonds to his dearest friend, upon the mediation of his dear, only, and beloved Son, and when he doth this before all? This is the case.

God at the Mediation of Christ enters into Bond, in the sight and presence of Angels, to his chosen and beloved ones, that he will give them
that

that which will make them blessed. But what Prince would enter into bonds and take time for payment, if it were not for some very great matter? This shews the things promised to the Saints are exceeding great, because God takes time for payment, and hath appointed a day, when all shall see what he will give them.

2. It is that whereto believers are framed, they are wrought to this; you know the capacity of man is large, but it seems that will not serve, man in his present condition is too narrow-mouthed, too small a vessel, to receive in that grace and mercy that is treasured up for him, he must be new-made up to be a vessel of mercy.

There is a double capacity in things, as hath been said; One Passive, and so empty vessels are capable of what you will pour into them, though they can do nothing towards it. The other is Active, and so an empty stomach is capable of receiving any thing into it, yea it will urge and press, and draw for its food. Now

God

*L'atramen Stomachum
bene lenit
&c. Hor*

God hath made his people anew, that they may have a new capacity, that they may have a mind able to see him and know him, and that they may have a will meet to entertain him, and accept of and live upon the things that are prepared for them; Therefore being God hath put himself to a new creation of man, to put him into a fitness for that state, what must that be that shall be bestowed upon him? A man is fit here for any thing that this world hath, but he must have a new fitness confer'd on him for that which God hath laid up in that other world; there is not onely a new work upon the Spirits, but there is also a new work upon the bodies of Saints; they must be new-molded and transformed, and so brought into a Conformity to the body of Jesus Christ, as the Apostle speaks in Phil. 3. The bodies of men would be no fit Company for glorified Spirits, if they were not new made; therefore God will form their Bodies anew, as he did form the body of Christ, that was fitted to do that great great service, which no Body besides could do. If the Israelites could not behold Moses his face, when he had been conversing with God in the Mount, because of that glory that shined upon him, how shall these eyes of ours behold Christ himself now in glory? How shall we behold the glory of that Kingdom, if we be not anew formed and framed; and except these bodies, now natural, be made spiritual? A fish cannot live in the Ayr, except its nature be changed, no more can our bodies live in Heaven, if they be not spiritualized.

1 Cor. 15.

3. The greatness of the blessedness of believers appears in this, that the Spirit of God is the earnest of it; as before I told you it shewed the Certainty, so now it shews the greatness of the thing promised them.

And surely the things of the Spirit are very precious; life and light, peace and joy, &c. these are more precious then all the World, and yet these are but an earnest: Joy unspeakable and glorious, and Peace that passeth all understanding; these are but the earnest of what they are to have. We know the earnest is but the least part of the purchase, and yet the earnest of the Spirit is exceeding great; what then is the thing it self that God will bestow upon them? if you see a great summe of gold given in earnest for security, to ratifie an agreement upon promise, what then may you conceive the full summe to be?

4. The Scripture saith, the Inheritance is in Heaven; we have a house above, not made with hands, eternal [in the Heavens.] That which we look for by Faith, and walk in Hope of, is in Heaven; Heaven is the place of Gods habitation, the throne of his glory; If such precious and full streams of goodness flow forth from God in this World upon the Earth, which is his footstool; what is that then which is reserved for his children in Heaven, which is his throne? This World is but a passage to that, and if there be so much to be had in the Porch, what is to be expected in the Palace?

Palace? This is but as the desart, so the promised land, and if here be such showers of Manna, the Cloud and pillar of Fire; if here be so much of God to be enjoyed, what enjoyments of him will there be in Canaan? If a Prince be richly and royally provided for in a strange land, what entertainment will he have when he comes to his Fathers Court? If we find so much in these Cottages, what may we expect to find in the Palace of the great King? This World is but the lower house; you would think, if you find plenty & varieties of things precious in the Celler and Vault, surely there are high expectations in the upper Roomes; if this house below hath so much, what is in that above?

3. The Text saith, that the things we wait for by Faith are eternal, and therefore great. Things are lasting two ways.

1. Either, because they are strong, & so able to withstand anything that might remove them from their being.

2. Or because they are full, and so the fountain is full of living water; such a place is Heaven, the blessedness of the Saints there is as long lasting as Eternity. If a man have enough for all the days of his life, and those days be many, that man is rich; if he have much for every day, and to the end of his days, that must needs be very much that he hath; but how great is that then that is enough, abundantly and superabundantly enough, to Eternity.

There is a certain special excellency in all that God hath made everlasting: Hol is an everlasting thing, and therefore that Misery which is there is eminent and transcendent, extreme misery; these sorrows here below are less, and so pass away; all their tears shall be dried up: but when God makes a sorrow indeed, that the creature shall feel through and through that sorrow is everlasting. So the blessedness of the Saints carries the excellency and transcendency in it that it is everlasting; no good is like that good that abides for ever. W say houses, lands, mony, and such things as this World hath are good, and we say true; but all these things are going away, and to be turned out of sight; but there is something that is eternal, and that's excellent, that's good indeed. Think of it, if God pull his people out of the enjoyment of this world, and strip them of these things, to bring them into another state, where is life for ever, that must needs be a great and excellent state.

6. It must needs be very great, because the way to it is exceeding sad; for the Apostle says, we must be unclothed, stripped of these bodies. And if the bodies of believers, which are the Temples of the Holy Ghost, if these Temples must be demolished, that there must not be a stone left upon a stone, what shall that state be into which these shall be made up again? If God be so full of tenderneſs towards his people (whom he loves dearly) that he will not touch them with his finger, nor lay the least chastisement upon them, but for their profit;

X<sub>2</sub>

profit; Then surely when he lays on them the comprehension of all evils, Death, the profit and advantage must needs be very great. If we must pass by the King of seas to the King of glory, if we must pass to our inheritance through that which of evils is the greatest evil, surely then our way leads us to that which is of goods the greatest good. If a man have vessels of gold, and he batter and melt them, what is it that he may utterly spoy and deface them? Nay certainly, but to make them up into a better form? A

We are now clothed upon with bodies redeemed by the blood of Christ, these must be torn in pieces, and turned into rottenness? what bodies must they be then that God hath provided for us in their stead? We use to say that men of wisdom cloath their children according to their state; if God now uncloath us, that He may cloath us anew after the fashion of Jesus Christ; what must our state and portion be? If God so pull
all

all down, that he destroyes all those Affections, whereby we live on Creatures; if he so destroy them that we shall be as Angels in Heaven, that we shall not covet, or desire any of those things that are the matter of our desires now; surely then it is to plant them upon a greater good: The very way therefore that God takes to bring his children to glory shews, that the things prepared for, and which they look for by Faith, are exceeding great.

7. The things wee look for are such things as our Lord Jesus Christ lives upon; for the Text saith, he is there, and there lives; and he hath no other provision made for him then what is laid up for believers: They all eat of one bread, and drink of one cup; and if there be that which is suitable to him who hath a name above all names, who is King of Kings, and Lord of Lords; surely it is very great. If there be that joy which answers to all his former sufferings, which were the greatest sufferings that ever were, surely it is very great joy. And if there be that glory which Christ hath prayed for to his Father, that we may have it; Father, I will that those whom thou hast given me be with me where I am, that they may behold [that] my glory; surely then it is very great glory.

Ioh. 17. 24

Phil. 4. 8.

8. The Text saith, they are things which the Saints long to enjoy; Paul saith he did so: think on it a little, Paul had much already, great revelations, abundance of the Spirit poured on him, he had very precious and excellent consolations; he saith himself, that he was full, and abounded and wanted nothing; And yet though it were so well with Paul here, he longed to be in Heaven, at home, enjoying his full portion.

It is no wonder if a Prince, being abroad in a strange country and be hardly used, have this in his heart, O that I were at home, in my Fathers house, to sit with my Father upon his Throne in glory: but when a man is so full as cannot be exprest, and yet breathing and reaching after that other life, surely he must have large Apprehensions concerning the greatness and excellency of that life: well, saith the Apostle, notwithstanding all that I have in this world, I desire to be dissolved and to be with Christ; I am weary of this place, I long to be at home, which is best for me. He was a Ship that carryed rich lading, and did drive an excellent Trade, his Sayls filled with Heavenly gales, his provisions Angels food; yet he chose rather to be at home.

ver

He knew too that he could not come to Heaven but he must pass by the gates of Death; He knew he had a dark vally to pass through, before he could come to the inheritance of the Saints in light; and that was hard. Nature abhorres death; the best man that ever was, was loath to dye; what saith Paul? Not that we would be unclothed, but if there bee no way to life but through death, I'll through faith He; we are rather willing, we approve it, and Phil. i. 23.

Vers. 8.
Εὐφραν-
σθε μάλ-
λ' ὅτι
Rom. 15.
26.

Εὐφ' οὐ-
δυνα.

and like it rather; it pleaseth us better: the like word is used by the Apostle; It pleased them of Macedonia to make a contribution for the poor; Sec. This, then, the Apostle saith, this pleaseth me; I am not pleased with dying; but I am pleased to go through death to life; and I rest in it; it is the same word with that Mat. 3. in the voice from Heaven, This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased; for in whom I rest.

Again, consider further concerning this desire in the Apostle, it was very high; we groan: groaning is a complaint of a man in pain, it is an expression of very deep passion; and he addes, desiring to be clothed upon with our house from Heaven; the word desiring signifies a strong desire, it is rendred sometimes longing; so 2 Cor. 9. 14. Sometimes it is rendred great longing, Phil. 1. 8. God is my witness, that I have great longings for you: it is called a great desire, in 1 Tim. 3. 4. and in Jas. 4. 5. It is put for lusting; The spirit that is in us

as tasterh unto envy. It imports that this desire in him was a very strong and high desire; that he might be possessor of that which he so much hoped for.

He addes further, we grow [being burthened,] as a man under a heaue burthen grows to haue it taken off; truly saith the Apostle, we find so much euill in our selves, and in the World, that I long to be at home, I am a stranger in this World, and they use me hardly; but I find God useth me kindly, so that I would faine be at home, that I may enjoy his love, and the things that he hath promised.

And he saith not so ~~once~~ lonely, but He repeats it again and again, neither was it a fit, but an abiding temper of Paul.

There are some things that are lost which were of old; Christians are sunk till God raise them up again. We have lost much of that fight, assurance, and fulness of holiness which Primitive times enjoyed.

○

O how inferior are we in desire to be with Christ.

Paul in his Epistle to Philip, Chap. 1. 23. saith, I desire to be dissolved; the word is, I have a desire, which is observed by some to have more in it then to desire; it is an actual, strong, and constant desire, like that phrase, which is rendered their great desire, having had a great desire many years to come unto you; Such was this desire in Paul to be in Heaven, and the time of his Epistle to the Philippians, being some years after that to the Corinthians, sheweth that he was fixed in this desire.

Lastly, the Text saith this, that what is laid up in the promises is that by which the Saints walk; We walk by Faith, it is our strength, and our great support here; It is not a meer empty life, and continuance of being that the Saints live, but it is a life saith the Text that is with confidence, We are confident, and always confident, so we should be,

This is Suppl.
Exor.
Zanchie,
Rom. 15.
23.

if our hearts were more taken up with God, and if we did not separate our selves so much from Jesus Christ; if we were not such strangers to the things of the other World, we should not be so shaken, but bold and confident; as the Apostle here, He durst undertake any thing for God, not fearing the power nor frowns of any creature, when God said to him, Go, he went.

This confidence Faith begets in those that live by it, being always confident saith the Apostle, and He repeats it twice. And then again, it is not onely such a life as is accompanied with confidence, but with love; a living Love and a living Hope do so sweeten the Spirits of a man toward God, that he is overcome in the power of them. Paul forgot himself, he was no more Ruler over himself, but we desire saith he, whether present or absent, to be accepted of the Lord, to be such as he may like, and such as may suit his desire.

Nei-

Neither was it a love mixt with fear and care, least he should be prevented, but a love of gratitude; the love of Christ constraineth us, vers. 14. neither was it a love to God onely, but to men also; for saith he, Knowing the Terror of the Lord, we perswade men: A man that hath got into Heaven, would fain draw others thither, like the Woman of Samaria, when shee had found Christ shee invited her countrey-men, Come and see saith she, I have found the Messias, and he tells me all that ever I did: so it is the nature of men that know and enjoy God to be spreading their knowledge, and improving it; knowing the terror of the Lord, We perswade men: the terror of the Lord, what's that? Not onely the power of God to punish, &c. neither is it the displeasure of God simply considered, but it is the displeasure of God aſſing to a separation from himself: this is the terror of the Lord, that he separates sinners sinners from himself, &c. If this be such a renewal, then what a comfortable condition is the enjoyment of the the presence of God? Paul knew both the one, and the other, and therefore saith he, we perswade men, and He was happy in perswading; for God joyning with him, he overcame many.

If the things expected bee so sweet in the promise, what are the things themselves? If being at such a distance, they convey such mighty influences, what will they be to a man when hee is in the possession of them? Therefore, O ye Believers, once lift up your heads, get above your selves, and above this world; if your names and portions be in another World, happy you. Why are your hearts groveling on the Earth, when you have treasures in Heaven provided for you? why do you sit mourning and consuming your selves with the cares of this World, if there be a Kingdom prepared for you, a Kingdom

2 Thes. 4.
17.

dom that cannot be shaken? Speak therefore words of life to your hearts, and discourse from the promise with your selves, and so from those Wells of Salvation draw forth water of Life, and drink abundantly; And not onely so, but help one another. I'll shut up with that of the Apostle, Comfort one another with these words: tell one another, our time and trouble here is but short, let us hold up our heads a few days.

You should draw out your Faith to the relief of others, and know that thy Faith was not given thee for thy self onely; and thou dost not use thy Faith aright, if thou dost not improve it to revive the fainting Spirit of thy Brother.

---

CHAP.

CHAP. XV.

A Christian plea for Scripture-Ordinances.

Seeing Saints walk here by faith, I hope I may be allowed to take occasion to say a little in way of vindication of some things, whose honor some, in these sad times of defection, have endeavoured to lay in the dust.

} Scriptures.
} Ordinances.

What unspeakable indignity do such men offer to the grace of God, and what horrid violence do they practise upon themselves? Next unto Jesus Christ, and the spirit of grace, what hath divine mercy appointed unto man equal in worth to these which are the light and stay of our souls, the means of our coming to, abiding with, and growing up in God? Yet these and all these are cast away as things of no real worth, or of no necessary use.

First for the Scriptures. How many are the controversies that have, by the subtilty of the evil and envious

Y

one

one, been raised against this Book of God? but above all, this that casts them away as not necessary is the worst, and is complicated and commingled with many injuries, yea blasphemies against God. Before I come to argue the great usefulness & necessary subserviency of the Scriptures, & the other things mentioned, let me offer a few things to consideration.

1. That though the not-receiving the Scriptures be dangerous in the nature, causes, and effects of it, yet to deny and reject them is more hainous. As not receiving of Christ reveal'd leaveth men eternally miserable; but refusing and despising him adds much more to their suffering. In a civil state not to own and submit to laws, is not without danger, but to strip them of authority, wisdom, justice, and to set up other laws to ones self is a crime of an higher nature: so not only not to receive the Word of God, but to proclaim it, either not his word, or not our rule, is a sin of high degree.

2. They that put the Scriptures from

from the throne are forced to set up some thing else in place, and herein they see not what deceit the great deceiver doth practice on them; his intent is to set up the will of the flesh and of the minde, but he thinks it convenient not to be expresse and open in his design, therefore he falls in with men according to their temper, and sets up to some one, to some another. Men that are not raised above Nature he flatters with dreams of a civil course, and to these he crieth up the Laws and light of Nature, but such as have written their names among the Saints he cheats with an opinion of a very sublimated state, and to these he cryeth up the light and Regiment of the Spirit. Both ways he leads men to perdition, taking away that which is perfect, sufficient, and infallible, and substituting that which is imperfect, insufficient, and fallible, as I shall shew anon.

3. God hath abundantly witnessed against the sin of men in treading under foot the Scriptures, by outward evidences of his wrath, and by inward strokes of displeasure; histories of former times, and experience in these times tell us of inward horrors and amazements, of mindes engulphed in darkness, and of hearts set free from righteousness, and shewing another law written in them by the transcript of them in most dissolute and abominable conversations, attended with impudency, and dedolency, two sad marks of a soul reserved in chains to the judgment of the great day.

4. These men are under this delusion, that they think this deformed and impious conceit of theirs to be by the darrings of a new light upon them, and glory as having escaped from the usurpation of false principles. Whereas they have left the truth indeed, to embrace darkness, and are but new tables receiving the impress and image of an old character. These very imaginations are old delusions of a new edition; Ancient records tell us such things, which were often practised in Luther's time time in a sort of men called spirituals, or men of the spirit; and now in our days the grand impostor revives and plays over his old tricks, which if it startle not the world, yet gives hope to the Saints, that he hath done his worst, and that his work is almost finished.

5. Let this poor deceived generation compare themselves with those who are led by the spirit to keep close to Scriptures, Ordinances, and Duties, and judge whether such have not a more blessed witness of God dwelling in them, then they themselves have. Alas, the Apostacies and witherings of souls that wander from these things are conspicuous, and deplored of the children of light. They that shake hands with the Scriptures, are inevitably put upon this dilemma, either to deny the whole mystery of godliness, that precious word of Faith, which opens a new and living way to life and glory, or they must substitute something in all respects equivalent in its use towards our enjoyment of God with the Scriptures; at least they must propound some rule that may sufficiently instruct us unto life. The former of these men will not own; but it's too manifest, that this is the bottom of the matter. But the day will judge all.

For the asserting of the necessity of the Scriptures, and if God will for the undeceiving of men, I will urge these things.

1. That the matter and objects of Faith are knowable by no ordinary way but the Scriptures.

2. That we could not have any warrant and reason to believe and hope but from them.

3. That Faith and Hope had not had any life and strength, but by the promise.

4. That we could not have found the way to the things of Faith and Hope, but by the Scriptures.

When these four truths shall have justified themselves, then they will be sufficient witnesses of the necessity of

of the Scriptures, which are by many in a various way, and in different degrees, weakned and rejected.

The first of these is scarcely liable to any misbelief. I understand not by matters of Faith, all things spoken by God; for though they are to be believed because he saith them, yet some of them may be known otherways, as the beginning of the world is knowable by reason, though more fully by the word; Heb. 11. 3. Divers things concerning Christ are presented in other histories both Gentile and Jewish, but the revelation of the mystery of Christ is onely in the Scriptures. By matters of Faith I mean things in their nature above reason, and without the knowledge of which there is no salvation, Some things are necessary to be known and believed, onely because revealed by God, as all the history and prophecies, and many great secrets besides; some are necessary in their nature. I might without danger have been ignorant how many Wives and Concubines Solomon had, &c. But I could not without danger have been ignorant of Christ, and the way of life by him. Now this great thing is onely knowable by revelation, and though God can, and it may be doth teach this mystery without the word, where the word is not, (as it is not with Indians, with Infants and persons without reason, or in any invincible incapacity of receiving the word) yet where the word is, by it alone is the knowledg of these truths. As though a light was given to Peter in the prison, Acts 12. yet it was because it was night, and the fountain of light was absent.

That these truths may in part be guessed at by reason, is not to be denied; as because God is good, Nature might hope hee was reconcilable when offended; that sin being so infinite a wrong to the infinite God, it was fit that satisfaction should be made; that that which is to satisfy should hold proportion with the offence; and therefore should be more
then

then man. But all these are but guesses, which are fallible in their event, and could not give footing strong enough to Faith and Hope. The knowledg that God would be reconciled, and by whom, and upon what terms, and the knowledge of all the streams of divine grace that follow, is onely by the Gospel. They are such as neither eye hath seen, nor ear hath heard, neither have entred into the heart of man; 1 Cor. 2. 9. But because we have to do with Anti-Scripturists, we will not urge Scripture.

All knowledg of things is either naturall or acquired; the knowledge of these things is not natural, for then all men would share in it, but experience sheweth that the greatest part of the world knoweth nothing of them; knowledg acquired, if by natural means, is either by sense, but it is evident these things hold no commerce with any sense; or by discourse, which is an investigation of things in their causes or effects; the cause of this mystery totally and absolutely shuts shuts up the things of our Faith from all created knowledge, not onely of men, but of Angels also; for the great original is the counsel and will of God: and as no man knoweth the things of a man, but the spirit of a man, and he to whom he reveals them; so could not these ~~men~~ <sup>men</sup>, these deep things of God be known but by his word, which is the onely Interpreter of the mind.

Seeing then the hope that is set before us is our life, and that hid with Christ in God, and onely known by the word by which he hath brought life and immortality to light, we see what an inestimable jewel the Gospel is, too precious to be trodden under foot.

The second consideration is, That the written word is the onely reason and warrant of Faith and Hope; as God and the riches of his grace in Christ are objectum quod, so the Gospel is objectum quo; God is the ultimate object of Faith, the word is the reason and ground. If eternal life had not been revealed, all its worth had not had the least attractive touch upon our spirits, for there is no operation of that which is not; and there is the same reason (as to action) of things that appear not, and things that are not. And if this life had been revealed, yet if not offered, it could not have drawn out our Faith and Hope.
not

1. As it is ordained of God, it was no fit matter of our desire; For it had been a strange boldness in us to desire, that the Father would lay upon his own and only Son the burthen of our iniquities, subjecting him to shame, the cross and contradiction of sinners, and to cast him into the bonds of death, that we who are but dust, and had without a cause departed from God, and plunged our selves thereby into a gulph of misery, might be freed. Who durst deal so with his Prince? And if it was unfit for us to wish this, it was no more agreeing with reason to hope it. But by the Gospel they that were without hope in

in the world, are allowed and invited to Hope.

2. Of things absolutely depending upon the will of God, there can be no solid hope, but by intimation of a propensity in God to give them. As a beggar hath no hope to be heir to a man of wealth, except he have some knowledge of a willingness and disposition in him to it. But it had simply been beyond all imagination in every creature, that God would incline to open a way to life for us by the blood of his Son, if he had not declared it himself to the wonderment of Heaven and Earth.

3. There were great and dreadful bars against Hope, which nothing but the gracious manifestation of the good will of God could take away : a dread and fears upon the soul, whose nature was to beget wrath and enmity against God, as it doth in the Apostate, and secluded Angels. And this fear, that it might be as the Cherub with the flaming sword to beat off from the tree of life, received its killing

ing power from the conscience of guilt, the displeasure of God, and the sentence of death, which like three fierce torrents would have carried away all hope of life. At best we had been put to the vain and destructive shifts of Pagans, who in sense of danger seek to pacifie God with provoking and detestable sacrifices. For what better expectations could we have had, except God had open'd the door of life, that was both hid, & shut from us?

Add unto all this, That a man in whom the candle of the Lord shineth could not have rested in covering his wound with fig-leaves, nor quietly have leaned upon, not only a weak, but an imaginary reed. He could not have stilled the stormings of his spirit, except he had seen as real ground of hope, as of fear.

4. The nature of hope is to regulate and subject the will to all conditions and means of that which he expects, & cannot consist with an universal and vigorous warring against all things that may lead him to his desire. But except

except God had both revealed and offered in his word a restitution of man, he could not have been overcome to deny himself, and to subject to God in all things: Because there had been wanting that reason, which onely is of force to such a thing.

Therefore I conclude, that in this respect also the Gospel is absolutely necessary, that we might have a foundation of Hope, by the manifestation and offer of life by Jesus Christ. And because partly they that are begotten again to a living hope need still nourishment from that of which they are begotten, and partly because the world is a perpetual succession of men, born in misery, and without hope; it was necessary that there should be a standing mercy-seat erected in the written word, that from generation to generation there might be a door opened unto sinners.

The third consideration. Faith and Hope had wanted nerves and sinews, if we had not had the express promise of God. Revelation presents life as desire-

desirable, the offer as haveable; but in both these the soul attains not rest, till the promise lay on the top-stone of security and confidence; this alone is the sure anchor-hold, and foundation of strong consolation. Heb. 6. 18. Call in all things which in imagination may seem to contribute to our peace, and upon examination they will affirm it's not in them. The power of God to save whom he will is a little door of Hope: a poor man hath some hope because he seeth it is in the power of a rich hand to help. But though Nature be apt to catch at any thing in straits, yet it is not at rest, but where it is satisfied. These thoughts will leave a man distracted, and divided: for as it is true that God may save if we will, so it is as true that he may destroy if he will; and this latter will have the strongest force, because carrying a great probability. For it is more likely that he that is highly offended with one that hath offered violence to all righteousness, and is himself of no worth, but fraught

fraught with an evill disposition and enmity, will, having all power, rather cut off, then spare.

If we consult the goodness of God, reason will form batteries against hope from this; he may be good, though he do not good to me; if good, then he hates evil, and I am altogether evil. If good, then most good to himself; and will not endure his creature to act against him, &c.

If we call in nearness of relation, we being of him, this will not yield sufficient refuge: were not the Angels that fell nearer then we? yet he spared not the Angels, i. e. he sorely punished them. We were near him by creation, and doth not this make sin out of measure sinful? And seeing, though we were near him, he spared us not when we offended, is it not in it self more near to reason that he will not save us, being now condemned and cast out from him?

If it may be thought the offer of mercy speaks better things, as well it may, yet even this hath not filled its hand

and to a compleat relief, for though t put life into their reach that will ay hold on it, yet that that life shall ontinue, is not secured but by the promise. And we have two shaking xamples of sad changes, Adam and he Angels. It is certain, all the ground hat falls within the compass of any nderstanding, of security of a contiued possession of a free gift, is the eclared and engaged favour of the Donor, especially in this case where he Donor is Almighty. The Angels heaven, and the spirits of just men
 ade perfect, have no other ground
 f their lasting blessedness. Even
 e se live by Faith in the promise, hat they shall hold to eternity what ey have. Therefore it's great weak-ss to cast away that which is the illar of our assurance, when we ar-ve at assurance: do men cast away
 e foundation, because the house is o? or because men have their evinces of lands written in their arts, do they put away the writings emselves? Who lives the life of

Z

Faith,

Faith, that finds not his heart made glad in beholding the harmony between the promises which by Faith he makes to his soul, and the promises which God makes to Faith? And seeing the lines of divine intimations of favor, in our hearts are so apt to be blurred, and made illegible to us, is it not our great advantage to have the good will of God in a transcript of his own forming and appointment, to which we may always have recourse? Surely nothing can safely be committed merely to our custody, we are apt to corrupt all that is within us, and have need of a standing and unerring rule, by which to correct our conceptions. They therefore that plead a needlessness of God Indentures written, forget, that though they have received the Spirit, yet they are but men, though in part restored, yet not without corruption.

The fourth consideration. That we neither could find nor keep the way that leads to enjoyment of things promised, but by the Scriptures;
hence

hence they are called the rule, the light of our feet, and lanthorn to our paths, &c. But two sorts of men have in these dayes endeavoured to turn this Sun into darkness, by introducing two other lights, each of them chosen as their Pharaoh's to guide them to the Harbor.

1. One sort cryeth up the light of Nature.
2. Another cryeth up the light of the Spirit.

This is sure, that as every creature hath not onely sayles of appetite and propension, but a Pilot or directive principle to order that propension to its end; so much more hath man, whose nature is more excellent, and end sublime, and whose miscarriage would redound to the greatest unhappiness.

Let us then examine these pretended guides concerning their sufficiency to conduct us to our end.

First, For the light of Nature, that lumen radicale, though it have a fair name, yet it is but as the Apples of

Sodm, which (they say) turn to dust if touched; It was indeed more glorious at first than the Sun in all her lustre, but it is a thing changed, and sunk beneath its primitive dignity. Philosophy tells us of occasus Solis, & occasus Luminis, a setting of the Sun, and a setting or ceasing of its light; and experience sheweth it, that after the Sun is out of sight, and gone beneath our Horizon, a little wasting light remains, which soon gives place to the darkness of the night. Such a thing there is in man, after that his day was gone, some shadow of the day remained, and this is still called light of Nature, which rather deserves the name of night of Nature.

To shew the insufficiency of this light, and how unable it is to do what a rule requireth;

1. Suppose it to have received no detriment by the fall of man, nor by all after sins; yet it is not able to contribute sufficient help. For it was formed to the use of man as he was when he first came out of the hands of God,
and

and so could sufficiently prompt and point at all necessary ways to life. But it was not invested with a power to shew him how to return to life from death, for it hath no cognizance of a life after death. As the light of the Sun is the guide of the body all his way on this side the grave, but cannot shew one step of the way from the grave. The great mystery of Salvation by Christ crucified, was a secret to the Angels themselves.

2. It is certain that this light received loss by the fall; if then it had been too weak in its full strength, how much more when it is fallen into a state of weakness? Two great disadvantages are come upon it.

1. It is diminished in its lustre, though it see, yet its sight is neither so extensive nor so intensive, it neither seeth all it did, nor so distinctly into any thing; we may take a hint of this from that deficiency in knowledge of things pertaining to this life, in which the beasts do as far exceed man, as a wise man doth a fool. But we have reason to think, that though it might have been allowed to beasts to excell men in some particular excellencies, as strength, swiftness, &c. which are recompensed (as the Philosopher speaks) to man by reason, which is instead of all to him, yet that man should be inferior in that which is his proper excellency, and in those actions which so much concern his conservation, is not to be supposed. And whereas all knowledge was present to man, yet with what difficulty do we attain to it? Art is but a degree of what we had: and Plato may thus be taken well, when he saith, that our science and art is but a remembering; and study is but a kind of enforcing of Nature to some advancement towards what she had before. But as for God, and the things of God, we are so dark, that the Scriptures call us children of darkness, and darkness it self.

2. It is consequently weakened in its vigor, it was at first anointed to the government of man, and was able to have have discharged its office, but now it cannot; but notwithstanding it, man wanders in many exorbitancies; we have Rom. 1, an example of men who had not onely this light, which every one that is born into the world hath, but also much accession to it by study and education; yet they became vain, and walked in the practice of things against Nature.

The impotency of this light will appear the greater; if you take into your thoughts,

1. That the mind of man fell under the curse, and if the orbe in which this light was placed was smitten of God, the light must needs be impaired. The curse was Gods withdrawing from man, and leaving him to effectual means of certain and utter ruine. Mans light was not a thing planted in him as light in the Sun, but as light in the ayr which depends upon a continual efflux from the Sun: now as when the Sun departeth, darkness fills the ayr, so it was with man upon Gods departure from him, who is the fountain of light. And as when the Sun is gone, the ayr is filled with noxious vapours, so with darkness comes in a world of evil into the nature of man.

Upon the mind of man came many evils, not onely darkness, but inconsistency, and forgetfulness. And all these evils increase upon man by continuance in sin, till by the just judgment of God he come to have νῦν ἀνομιμον, a mind without judgment.

2. Mans nature is now less tractable then it was; I will but touch the particulars. Now he is more insensible of the touches of reason, he is grown like a dead-mouth'd horse that feels not the bit. He is grown also more refractory, for he hath now received another guide, which the Apostle calls the wisdom of the flesh. Rom. 7. and hath many lusts and inordinate affections, and they multiplying and enlarging by their continued actings, and by the consociation of the powers of darkness, and all in that that subserviency one to another, that by their complicated influencies man is become, next the devils, the unruliest piece in the world. And is emblemed by Wolves, Bears, Tygars, Lyons, and other the most untractable creatures.

Therefore to reduce us to natural light, is to reduce us to the state of Heathens, and to the wofull state into which the curse of God for sin hath thrown us.

I do not take care to say all about this, but enough; and sure this doth enough shew, that natural light is not fit to be esteemed a sufficient guide, to lead so indocible and inswiftable a creature as man to his first happiness.

Let us now put the other supposed guide upon his triall; the light of the Spirit in persons born again to God. This is a thing of incomparable worth. But we shall not dishonor it by saying what it hath not, if we deny not what it hath; Gold is a thing of value, but you lessen not its honor honor if you do not ascribe to it more then it is made for, it hath excellencies enough, though not all. And this spiritual light is transcendent in its dignity to all things, but yet it is cloathed with this honor, to be a sufficient guide to man without the word. And they honor not it, but dishonor the truth, that assert, that this makes the Scriptures needless.

For, 1. The Spirit, which in himself is perfect, in us is imperfect, because not communicating himself, or putting forth his operations in perfection; they say in Philosophy, that animæ sunt pæres, the souls of children and fools are equall with the souls of men, and wise men; but the souls in children and fools, what degree soever of perfection they have in themselves, do not put forth their acts so compleatly in them, as in wise men. Not to be curious about the Spirits being in us, it is sure we have received it but in a measure, and in such a measure as leaves us in much want, as may be seen in the defect of our knowledge and

d its power to govern and to rule. What innumerable misapprehensions and short apprehensions have we of spiritual things? And even here there is no error in the sight of things, yet an impotency in it discovers it self by those weak and ineffectual impressions which they have upon our hearts towards God. By this, the insufficiency of that renewed nature in man, to be a compleat rule to us, may appear.

The great end of our new Creation is to make us capable of the truths in the Scriptures, and of their influence, that we may have a sound mind instructed, and an holy heart subjected unto God.

2. If we had been left to this Spirit thus imperfectly acting us, we had been left under many uncertainties. For though the Spirit can evidence his presence, and distinguish his inspirations from all other, yet the subtil workings of Satan would have carried such an appearance; as if we had not had a standing rule to judge by, we might might have bin much mistaken: and if we believe the Scriptures, we may see that God doth not put us to depend only upon the testimony of the Spirit concerning it self, but puts us upon trial of it by the word. 1 John 4.1. Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God. He subjects every spirit to triall, yea though any should pretend to have the spirit of God, yet he would have them and others to try it; and that we see that he is willing to put his own spirit to the touchstone, he gives a character and mark from the matter and scope of the Scriptures, vers. 2. Hereby know ye the Spirit of God, every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh, is of God; and vers. 3. Every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh, is not of God, and this is that spirit of Antichrist. And Christ himself could as well have given testimony of the Spirit in him, even by its own presence, as the Sun doth evidence it self by his own light; but he thought good rather to take

se the way which is appointed us to ve recourse unto the Scriptures. Ioh.
39. Search the Scriptures, for &c. they are they which testify of me. And when
e preached and exhorted, though
e could have taken another course, et how frequently did he cite the criptures? this he did to men and evils.

And not to dwell here, sure holy onversations and affections had waned means of convenient and needful
pology, were it not for the Scripures; but now having a fixed and visible rule, we have a way to hold forth
the reason of our practice.

And what a door had been open to all impieties, if we had not had a written word? how could we with convincing force have beaten down the pretensions of men, if there had been no rule to judge the spirits that are in men?

How against all reason is it to lay
by that which is by divine inspiration of infallible verity, incomparable authority, so miraculously preserved, harmo-

harmoniously composed, sanctified to this end, to make the man of God and every christian perfect: The study whereof is the praise of Saints, the command of Paul, and that to Timothy, and of Christ himself.

Ordinances of the Gospel come next to hand, offering themselves to triall, being charged in these unhappy times, as things without authority, and of no necessity, especially to grovvn beleevers. I will (if God will) a little plead the cause of two great appointments of Christ, which he hath left as a charge, and sanctified means, to the edification of his body. Instituted Signs, and Ministry.

Instituted signs and seals, or Ordinances for to represent and ratifie spiritual things to the Saints, or by what name or title soever they be known to us, are first to be heard. I pity the quarrelling spirit of some, who fall out about the names of these things: If we can agree upon the thing, let us not contend about the names, which for the most part are not onely proper to the nature of the thing, but are given by the Spirit expressly to things of the same family and kindred, and at least virtually to these. When Christ gave Commandment concerning these, and when they are said to be given and set in the Church, doth it not suit with reason to call them Ordinances, Institutions, Appointments? &c.

But to the thing: we find Baptism and the Lords Supper ordained of Christ, and that in express terms, Mat. 28. 19. Go and teach all Nations, baptizing them, &c. These were the last words of Christ, and not now first instituting this Ordinance, but repeating the Law, which before was made and observed; and the Disciples were bidden to teach All men to observe this and all other things commanded by him. vers. 20. And Christ to lay a greater weight upon their spirits, addes, Lo I am with you to the end of the world: i. e. To observe how I am observed, and to keep, guide, strengthen, and bless with success; and

and addes this seal, which hath the force of an oath, Amen.

I am loath to spend time to improve all this in setting out at large the force of this argument; Sure it were to go about to prove it is day when the Sun shines in the eyes of all that are not blind, nor is it needful to urge any other Scripture in the case.

And for the Supper, Paul calls it the Lords Supper, which imports Christ the author, as indeed he was, as the Evangelists do witness; and Paul also delivers it as that which he had received from Christ, 1 Cor. 11. 23. For I have received of the Lord that which also I have delivered unto you, that the Lord Jesus, &c. And as Christ bad the Disciples to do this, so Paul delivers the sense of Christ as reaching to those of Corinth, and bids them do this; and that it might appear to be no transient, but a standing Ordinance; he enjoyns the use of it, till the Lord come: which can not be meant of his coming in the Spirit, for so he was already come according

according to his promise made before he departed from the World. And whereas we look for a great appearing of Christ before the great day, (let now no question be about the thing, its time and mode) sure I may confidently say, there cannot be expected a coming more glorious for degree, what ever may be for continuance and extent, then was at the ascension of Christ; and if they then did live in the use of these Ordinances, how much more should we? And can we with any reason flatter our selves so grossly, as if there were so rich an effusion of the Spirit upon us as doth it us above those Ordinances, which such as were filled with the Spirit, saw Christ in visions, were taken up into the third Heavens, did judge themselves bound to use?

It is no derogation from a Gospel-state to have such institutions, for they are bequests of Christ dying, or is there any inconsistency betwixt such enjoyment of the Spirit, and the use of them; For as the most eminent

A a

ment in that kind that ever the earth bare did use them, so it is to be remembred that though any should possibly be so deceived as to think they need not these things, yet the things are appointed not onely for our advantage, but for Christs honor; that he may by this solemnity be had in remembrance in the publick assemblies of the Saints: for Christ said, do this in remembrance of me. If then you will not deny that worship which Christ demands, and the publick asserting of your communion with him and with his body, which also is another end of this Ordinance; 1 Cor. 12. 16. depart not from the use of this Ordinance, which with Baptism hath been in honor with all the Churches in all ages.

But because the number of those that deny the necessity of this Ordinance expressly is not great, and they also so sadly and signally marked of God, I leave this and them to him to whom judgment belongs, and who hath the sovereignty over the spirits of men.

Onely

Onely give me leave to bewail the great neglect of this duty among such, who bear record to its authority and usefulness.

Some forbear it as not resolved about the manner of its ministration.

This hath something of a Christian candor, but I fear some are not far from a snare which draweth into a sinfull contentedness, to want what out of duty to God and self-Interest they should vehemently pursue. If I should say the business is clear enough, and hath not in it so great matter of doubt; I should seem to make myself a measure and standard to others. But this I may freely say, that if we acknowledge the thing, and are dubious about the manner, more prayer and inquisition would do well, and would not want its blessing. But to sit down in a despondency of mind, pretending waiting, if industry be not used to put the question out of doubt, is to pretend a renderness of offending, when we are willing to offend. And let me add this, that there is great odds in the case of taking up of Ordinances, and laying of them down again. And whatsoever force a doubt hath to suspend an action, yet we should work out our way with fear and trembling, for all doubts are not of God. Some indeed tend to perfect and reduce a mans actions to a more exact conformity to the rule, but others carry a man to more deformity, and into greater distance from God.

Practical doubtings that are from God are the effect of beams of light darted by God upon the conscience; these both will work unto more clearness, and thereby settling the judgment in the truth, and will also fill the heart with more of God; for all true, spiritual, and saving light, hath in it a spirit of divine life. Dear friends, as I know your thoughts center with me in this, so let us judge others by it; by prayer and study, with faith and love, endeavour without ceasing to be rooted in knowledg. For a Pyrhonian and Sceptick spirit in a Christian is not without great loss, loss, and greater danger.

Others are grown cold to Ordinances like Ephesia, Apoc. 2. Time was, when they loved the Sanctuary to see the outgoings of God, and to converse with Christ crucified in this blessed Ordinance, but now are grown indifferent, and are either easily diverted from it, or made strongly stupid in it.

Like the men of Galatia, who at last despised Paul as much as at first they esteemed him. Let me ring this sad knell upon these sick, if not dying spirits.

Think whither this tends, sure it takes hold of the chambers of death, and think whence is this change. I will suggest the most likely causes. It may be Christ is less loved, love will hunger after communion, and rejoyce in all seasons and means of it. But alas is Christ become so a dead thing to thee that died for thee? Was he lovely, and is he not? what is he, and what is his name that hath crept into the bed of love, and cheated thee into a disloyalty most unhappy, but more sinful.

But I cannot stay here to mourn for thee, I will do that at home, and indeed thy case calls for tears from thee, and all that know thee; go then and weep thy self friends with Christ, and beg the breathings of thy neglected spouse to blow up that little spark of love in thy heart which is ready to dye.

Or else the cause of this languor of thy chilled spirit may be from discouragement; it may be thou sayst, why should I eat and drink that any more, which addes no spirits and vigor to my soul? I seek Christ, but I find him not, but live a mournfull stranger to the power of the Cross, of my crucified Lord, &c.

This is an heavy case, discouragements enervate endeavors, and extinguish affection. But thy case O man is deplorable, both for the effects and the causes of thy discouragement; the effect is a practicing upon thy self the greatest evil of death, by starving and executing executing of that heavy doom of excommunication from Christ: with such a spirit to be in the use of that Ordinance, or out, is much at one.

 But cast thine eye upon the cause that makes thy knees feeble, and thy hands hanging down. Thou mayst mistake Christ, as Mary that saw him, and yet complained she could not find him; or if thou dost not find him, wilt thou charge him with unfaithfulness, and make the promise of Christ of none effect? Shall Christ have no use of his dominion and wisdom to communicate himself in manner, degrees, seasons, as he pleas-eth? If thou seek and find not, yet seek and wait, for he said it, and he cannot deny himself; seek and you shall find. But may not Christ withdraw that thou mayst see the sadness of his absence and be ashamed, who in the sweetness of his presence wast found unthankful? Say then, I am evil, but Lord thou art good; thy withholding from me, condemneth my neglecting of thee. Or hast got thou abated in thy first works? If thou be not careful to live in an holy preparedness to holy Ordinances, no wonder if they profit thee not, though conversant in them.

I fear to be too copious, who intend but short touches. Let him that hath an ear, hear what the Spirit saith unto him. Shall we consent to this, that these things are ordained of Christ? The Lord perswade our hearts in the truth. Then let me propound two Corollaries.

1. I must use them in Faith, and my Faith must stand upon these pillars. That all divine designs attain their end; if then they be appointed to sign, and seal, and advance enjoyment of Christ, which the Scriptures affirm, then I may and must expect to see, taste and have more of Christ by the holy use of them.

Again, all divine promises shall be fulfilled, but all Gospel Ordinances are attended with promises, yea are of the nature of promises, as when according to Law a rule is given to the

the purchaser, there is a giving of possession.

Add this; all divine gifts carry in them a strong tendency to fill us with the fulness of God; but these are gifts of divine grace. Oh that we knew and minded what advantage God hath put into our hands, that we might come to Ordinances with more confidence of hope; if we lived more by Faith, we should find these sweet breasts more fully flowing.

2. I must esteem them necessary; some things are necessary in their nature, as love and fear of God; some only by a Law are necessary to our life, so all institutions of Christ, he that denies the necessity of them, denieth their institution so far. But why doth man dispute with God? doth he appoint helps, and shall we say we need them not? It is to be observed, that God in his indulgence hath had ever respect to the utmost weakness of man, therefore though his promise had been sufficient, i. e. more than which we could not without

our sin have asked, yet he ex abundant is pleased to add more, Heb. 6. 16. In this exuberance of tender mercy he hath taken pleasure to vouchsafe visible signs in confirmation of his declared purposes of grace; so to Abraham, to the Jewes, and to us Christians, yea to man when in a state of purity, to Adam he gave the tree of life, yea he leaves not the spirits of just men made perfect, and the Angels themselves without this help; is not he that was given for a sign now in their eyes, with whom he still abide for ever as a sure token of everlasting blessedness? Take heed of saying in thy heart; I have no need of these; divine Institutions are Pillars of Faith, and incentives of desire in the Saints after them. Live then above these things; but not without them; you cannot want them willingly but you will be Losers, for Christs Appointments are not in vain.

Having a little stayed upon these two Ordinances, Baptism and the Lords Supper, let us not pass altogether

ther in silence by that ordinance of the ministry. This hath not escaped in these rowling times, but hath been by most extremely slighted, and by many highly assaulted, as if it were an humane usurpation, or innovation, and not a divine institution. There be divers degrees of the actings and judgements of men about this matter, which I cannot deal with distinctly in so small a volume.

Some think a Church may do well without men set apart and designed by solemn call to the dispensation of Ordinances, these are the fairest opposers of the office, and if we can convince these, the more explicate, and high opposers may much more see reason to fear, that fighting against instituted ministry, they fight against God. Now though the gifts of Christ be to be honored in all Saints, and are given for the good of the body, yet let it be well weighed, whether the publick use of gifts by office have not an hundred fold more clear footing in the

the Scriptures; then the publick use of the same gifts in others. And I have much wondred and lamented our unadvisedness, in causing those things to war against each other, which Christ hath ordained unto a peacable agreement; If Christ have blessed other brethren with knowledge, utterance, wisdom, and holiness, it was remotest from his thoughts that these should be used as they are; he gave them for the good, not the hurt of ~~the~~ the body: but if they by our misguided spirits be set up as a battery against any Ordinance of Christ, are not we in this injurious to Christ, and to ourselves? And yet in this many of us have been so precipitant, that we have cast a discountenance upon the richest endowments of Christ among us in Ministers, while we have not without contention, and unbecoming fervor, cryed up abilities of a far lower degree in others, yea in persons, whom, all circumstances considered, Christian prudence and a well-ordered spirit spirit would rather have cherished to a diligent improvement, then a publick exercise of their gifts.

Yet, as I was saying (though I honor the gifts and graces of all, and not only allow, but rejoyce in their use, when according to order) the Scriptures speak more expressly and abundantly an hundred fold for a ministration by solemn office, then for the publick exercise of the gifts of private Christians. How frequently do we read of the distinction of Pastors and flocks? we finde rules for the qualification of Ministers, 1 Tim. 3. Tit. 1. we find that the Primitive Churches had their Pastors and Teachers; so we read, when they had ordained them Elders in every Church, Acts 14. 23. What need I mention the Church in Philippi, in Ephesus, with the rest of the Asiatic Churches and others, whose Angels, Bishops, Pastors, are spoken of in the Scripture? We find that some had the charge of this work upon them, Acts 20. 28. Take heed to your your selves, and to all the flock over which the holy Ghost hath made you overseers.

Col. 4. 17. Say to Archippus, take heed to the ministry which thou hast received in the Lord, that thou fulfill it.

1 Pet. 5. 2. Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof. &c.

In these and many other places we have an instituted ministry so clearly presented, that I count it among one of the greatest wonders in these times; that any pretending to knowledg and goodness, should so much as whisper, I will not say with their tongues and pens, but in their thoughts against it.

But that I may, if God please, convince men of a very partial dealing, let them call to minde all Scriptures that give countenance to the preaching of others that are not in office, and see if any more can clearly be asserted in its defence, then 1 Thes. 5. 20 despise not prophesying, which cannot rationally be understood of that, at least necessarily and alone; and 1 Cor. 14. which place how much subject to

to question it is, whether Paul speak of ordinary and extraordinary gifts, is well known; and that example of the members of the Church at Jerusalem who went up and down preaching; concerning which, I need not much to minde men what is said to disable it from being a warrant to the practice of our days. It is known what is said of the necessity of those times, and of the extraordinary spirit which they had, and that some mentioned were more then believers, persons obtaining an extraordinary commission from above, &c. I do not intend by what I say to plead against a due use of gifts in private Saints, but to give occasion to my dear brethren and friends, soberly to consider how well they have done to carry themselves either positively, or negatively unfriendly to an Ordinance which Christ hath given, Eph. 4. 8. and set in his Church, 1 Cor. 12. 28. pleasing themselves in such a way of applause and countenance of others gifts, as favors of a spirit wanting

ing judgment in the Scriptures, or unwilling to subject to the mind of Christ; or, which is worse (which I crave leave to speak) having an ill design, in which I fear some godly ones, as they heap sorrows upon our hearts, who should not be grieved by them; so they lay up matter of grief for themselves by striking hands with a party that cry down Learning, and Ministry, and Ordinances, and Sabbaths, and Duties, and almost what ever belongs to us as Christians, or as men.

Let us set our selves a little farther to bring the matter to a rational enquiry. The Apostle compares the Church to an organical body, now in that the great functions of life are appointed to some particular instrument fitted by Nature to its performance for the good of all. And in the great body of the Creation, though every creature hath its proper spirit, yet there be some ordained to attend and serve all. In a civil body, though all act in their sphere, yet the superintendent and directive part is reserved reserved to some select and called ones.

Yea, All practicall professions have some that are given and dedicated to an attendance upon each. Navigation, Physick, Law; yea the meanest trades; and it is strange that men that will not commit a fute, nay not a shoe to be made by any but such as by addicting themselves to that art are made skilful, would not have that work, which of all is the hardest, and of greatest concernment, to be allowed an attendance and special application, of the time and abilities of men to it. If none should attend this work as being set apart unto it, what a world of inconveniences would ensue? the Churches might miss their ministrations; for what is every mans work, usually proveth no mans, and whom shall the Church blame? for if some have not the charge, then all are free. If it be thought that some one or other may stand forth to serve the Church, yet let such impartially think whether they are not like to be at loss, wanting the work of him who by prayer and meditation is bound to Christ and them to provide, and now having only what the parts of one (it may be weak enough) shall suddenly afford. And what way of improvement is that people in, who shall be supplied with the gifts onely of one, whose education or employments, or both, are so strong hindrances to this service. This also is certain; though a blessing may be expected, and should from other brethrens works, yet a greater blessing should be expected from the right discharge of men, not onely coming in the priviledges of all Saints, but also in the power of a special Institution of Christ. And sure it is the great honor and advantage of the Church to be served by men (and as they should be of the best of men) chosen and appointed, and by vertue of their office obliged to attend them, that they may serve their just affairs secured in the meantime, that provision for their souls is is dared for. I mean not hereby to induce an unchristian devoting of men to the affairs of this life, with a casting off of care upon their Pastors, as if they should be fed onely like children with the spoon.

If the work of the ministry lie as a Common, will not as much follow concerning Magistracy, which certainly (if it be lawful to compare Ordinances) as it hath not more full tendency and influence into the spiritual good of others, then the ministry; so it lieth more level with the spirits and abilities of men, then this. I honour Magistracy, but am perswaded they that bear it, shall much wrong it and themselves, if they do not uphold ministry which is so strongly conservient to the end and being of Magistracy. And let them look to it, for as if men have got a little of a Christian, they are often apt to say what need the Minister; so when men have gotten something of power and ruling principles, they will be as apt to say, what need the Magistrate? And doubtless both are struck at, though the craft of the enemy is to strike first at that which hath least of worldly strength to secure it self. If Moses suffer Aaron to be destroyed, he loseth him that is instead of God to him. The spirit of this age is strangely propense to confusion, and under pretence of casting down the pride of man, they level at all excellencies inward and outward, civil or holy, and all that is of God.

It is to be acknowledged with pain of spirit, that there hath been much sin and heedlessness in the choyce and calling of Ministers, and in Ministers spirits, performances and conversation, but let us not so set our selves to kill the disease, as to kill the body too. How much rather should we pray that God would teach us his ways, and not by unadvised neglect of Christs Ordinances provoke Christ himself against us? If we would have more of Christ among us, let us act more more for him. It is a strange stratagem of some to better the Ministry by starving it, and to cry down Schools, and make them poor; is not here an intention of a feast to Mammon? I would enlarge upon this, but that I grow too prolix. I am a dying man; but in hearty love to Christ, his people and my country, I beseech them in authority, and that in all humility and earnestness, to mark those among us that decry these things, and who, if their design should take, would bring us into a state of barbarity and confusion. I will say but this, if God bless the Seminaries of Learning, sanctify men qualified to the work of the Ministry, the civil government will be lift up in honor, and crowned with more happy success, the souls of people shall know and enjoy more of God, all parties shall be reduced into a more happy unity, and betwixt the shoulders of these two Ordinances (as it's said of Benjamin. Deut. 33. 12.) the Lord Jesus will delight to dwell.

Verily, they that walk by Faith have need of Teachers, and Monitors, and Watch-men, that they may be delivered from darkness, forgetfulness, and the many evils which compass us about. And these begotten of God, do find refreshing influences from this nursery of Christ; and know it to be more happiness for the flocks of Christ to enjoy their Sheep-herds, then to possess all the treasures of the World. And sure that promise is of most sweet relish, Thine eyes shall see thy Teachers. And I will give them Pastors after mine own heart. Let my lot O. God be with those where the people wait for Christ in his Ordinances, and where their Pastors dispense the things of Christ with knowledg and faithfulness, bearing their flock in their bosomes, as those that must give account unto Christ the great Shepherde; and Bishop of our souls.

F. T. N. I. S.

371511

LIBRARY USE ONLY

rBS2675

S8

Symonds, J.
Sight and faith.

ISAAC FOOT COLLECTION

THE LIBRARY OF THE
UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA
DAVIS

