The Doctrine of Justification is dangerously corrupted in the Roman Church.

Rom. 3. 24. Being justified freely by his Grace, through the Redemption that is in Jesus Christ.

The Apostle, in these words, (and the following) gives an exact account of the Doctrine of Justification, dictated to him by the Spirit of Truth. And this will be the best ground we can proceed on, to discover the errors by which it is corrupted. That is our present business to which I hasten, only first opening the words by a brief touch upon them.

Being justified] To be justified, is to be freely accepted of God as righteous, so as to have pardon and title to life, upon the account of Christ's righteousness. We cannot be accepted as righteous, till we be acquitted from guilt. The Apostle describes Justification by remission of sins, Rom. 4. 5, 6. And being accepted as righteous, we are accepted to life. (The Apostle calls it justification of Life, Romans 5. 17, 18, 21.) This is upon the account of Christ's righteousness. We cannot be justified upon our own account, for so we are condemned, and cannot but be so, nor upon other account but Christ and his righteousness; for there's no justification without righteousness; and none sufficient but that of Christ, which the Apostle includes in the Redemption that is in Christ Jesus.

Freely by his Grace] The Lord justifies by his Grace, and this acts freely. That which moves him is called, Tit. 3. 4. κωντίν πλασθείσα, Kindness and Love, which, ver. 7. is Grace; (that being justified, σωθήναι, by his Grace) so Justification is χάρις, the free gift, Rom. 5. 16. δοθήναι, the gift by grace, ver. 15. This grace, as it is free mercy, so it acts like it self, ἄπαντα, freely, (the word used, Matt. 10. 8. οὕτως ἰδοὺ, freely ye have received it) he gives it freely to those who have no merit to deserve it: there is none in us, what there was, was in Christ. It is

Through the Redemption. Redemption is deliverance by a price, or valuable consideration. This price was the blood of Christ ver. 25.
The Doctrine of Justification is dangerous

Rom. 5. 9. Eph. 1. 6, 7. His death, Rom. 8. 33, 34. His obedience, Rom. 5. 19. His righteousness, ver. 18.

We may view the Text distinctly in three parts.

1. Believers are justified.
2. Freely by his Grace.
3. Through the Redemption that is in Christ.

Against each of these the Papists have advanced several errors of pernicious consequence; and thereby dangerously corrupted the whole Doctrine of Justification.

1. That a sinner may be saved, the Scriptures declare that he must be both justified and sanctified: the Romanists, as if one of those were but requisite, call that Justification, which in Scripture is Sanctification; and that which in Scripture is Justification, they admit not, as distinct from inherent righteousness.

The Apostle Paul, who most inflicts upon the Doctrine of Justification, delivers these two as distinct things, 1 Cor. 11. and else-where. He ascribes Justification commonly to the blood of Christ, as in the Text, and Rom. 5. 8, 9. Sanctification to the Spirit of Christ, Tit. 3. 5.

However the Papists promiscuous use of the words might be tolerated, if they did not confound the things, and contend that we are formally justified by that which is the form and essence of Sanctification, viz. inherent righteousness. The danger is that which the Apostle would have the Jews avoid, when he expresseth his hearty desire that they might be saved; Rom. 10. 13. For they being ignorant of God's righteousness, and going about to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted themselves to the righteousness of God. The Papists trust to their own righteousness for acceptance and life, and will be justified, in the sight of God, by that which indeed is imperfect and culpable, and so liable to be condemned; and being convinced that they cannot be justified by an imperfect righteousness, therefore they will have their inherent righteousness to be perfect, a not so perfect as it will be in Heaven, but so as to be free from 6 sin, and to answer the demands of the Law, since they know otherwise it would not justify them. And this fancy of a sinner's perfection runs them into many absurd and pernicious conceits.

For they are hereby obliged to maintain, that no corruption in their natures, (after Baptism,) no aversion to God, no inclination to evil, though the habitus justitiae, qua non est peccatum sed vitium, ex malis aetibus contrafus, quale etiam in justitia.

\[\text{a Quod dicebam, mus-justitiam & charitatem in hac vita non esse perfectam comparatione duntaxat ad ilium patriae reputandum est. Domenicus a Soto de nat. & grat. L. 3. cap. 4. p. 134.}\

\[\text{b The Council of Trent calls it Justitiam candidam & immaculatam, Sess. 5. 67. In the Trent Catechism it is Divina qualitas in anima inherens-que animarum vestram omnes maculas delet ea (charitas) sequiendum, est verissima, plenissima, perfectissima, justitia; Bellarm. de Justif. L. 2. c. 16. p. 805.}\]
Corrupted in the Roman Church.

The text is a continuation of the previous pages, discussing the corruption in the Roman Church and the role of Grace and Charity. It mentions the idea that Virtue is obtained by frequent acts of sin; all is sinless that is in the soul, when Grace or Charity is once therein. And so there's no need of mortification, no possibility of it; for there is nothing of sin in them to be mortified, no habit or disposition, natural or necessary, upon which the charge of sin can be truly fixed. And as they leave no need of, no place for mortification; so after they have discarded the Scripture Justification, to make way for a Sanctification to justify them; they deal no better with that neither. Whether it be taken for the first rise of Holiness, which is properly regeneration; or for the growth and increase of it, which is the Sanctification that the Scripture calls for commonly under this notion (they will have it to be a second Justification). As for the first Sanctification, by their principles, it excludes all sin, and is, so far, perfect or nothing, and so indeed it is a meer chimera, such a thing as God never gave, never promised, as no mere man on earth ever had;

Joh. i. 18. Yet this and nothing else must justify them, and make them worthy of eternal life: and thus they will be justified, and saved by a meer fancy, or nothing.

As for growth and increase in Holiness, (which is the Sanctification that the Scripture makes so necessary, and calls for with so much importance) this they make superfluous and unnecessary. No man needs design or endeavour it; for what needs he look after more of that which he hath already in d perfection? They have it in such perfection, as there is no culpable defect in it; it is no lin to have no more, (else it would not be sufficient to their Justification) and what necessity is there to labour for that which it is no lin to want? Their Doctrine of Justification by a righteousness of their own inculpably perfect, obliges them to hold, that what Grace they receive at first, though in the very lowest degree, is all that God commands, and makes necessary (if he commanded more, the want of more would be culpable). So that every degree of Holiness or Charity above the least of all, is only e, sub consilio, meer matter of counsel; which they may neglect without contracting so much as the guilt of a f venial fault.

Thus all progress in holiness is hereby superceded; after the first step they sin not, though they never make another. And all the degrees bits acquired by frequent acts of sin; all is sinless that is in the soul, when Grace or Charity is once therein. And so there's no need of mortification, no possibility of it; for there is nothing of sin in them to be mortified, no habit or disposition, natural or necessary, upon which the charge of sin can be truly fixed. And as they leave no need of, no place for mortification; so after they have discarded the Scripture Justification, to make way for a Sanctification to justify them; they deal no better with that neither. Whether it be taken for the first rise of Holiness, which is properly regeneration; or for the growth and increase of it, which is the Sanctification that the Scripture calls for commonly under this notion (they will have it to be a second Justification). As for the first Sanctification, by their principles, it excludes all sin, and is, so far, perfect or nothing, and so indeed it is a meer chimera, such a thing as God never gave, never promised, as no mere man on earth ever had;

---

443

Joh. i. 18. Yet this and nothing else must justify them, and make them worthy of eternal life: and thus they will be justified, and saved by a meer fancy, or nothing.

As for growth and increase in Holiness, (which is the Sanctification that the Scripture makes so necessary, and calls for with so much importance) this they make superfluous and unnecessary. No man needs design or endeavour it; for what needs he look after more of that which he hath already in d perfection? They have it in such perfection, as there is no culpable defect in it; it is no lin to have no more, (else it would not be sufficient to their Justification) and what necessity is there to labour for that which it is no lin to want? Their Doctrine of Justification by a righteousness of their own inculpably perfect, obliges them to hold, that what Grace they receive at first, though in the very lowest degree, is all that God commands, and makes necessary (if he commanded more, the want of more would be culpable). So that every degree of Holiness or Charity above the least of all, is only e, sub consilio, meer matter of counsel; which they may neglect without contracting so much as the guilt of a f venial fault.

Thus all progress in holiness is hereby superceded; after the first step they sin not, though they never make another. And all the degrees
The Doctrine of Justification is dangerously

The best account I can give of it, in brief, is this, collected out of their chief Authors. They observe in sin the fault and the guilt; and the guilt either as it is the desert of sin, and the offender worthy of punishment; or, as it is an obligation to punishment, and the sinner bound to suffer it. The former is, with them, Reatus culpis; the latter, reatus peana: and all this is taken away by Charity, or infused Grace.

The fault in sin is the aversion, or the souls turning away from God: but Charity, or inherent Grace, brings it back again, and joyns it to him, and thereby the fault is remitted. Now the fault being gone, by virtue of inherent Grace, the guilt must vanish too: for where there is no fault, there is no desert of punishment; and where there is no desert of it, there can be no obligation to it. So that infused Grace having left sin no being, by necessary consequence the guilt is taken away altogether with it. Accordingly, Bellarmine shews particularly how this Charity takes away all that belongs to sin, the aversion from God, the stain of sin, the desert of punishment, and the obligation to it: and the sum of all is this. The formal effect of habitual Charity is the abolishing of sin: and with him and others, remission of sins, and infusion of Grace, are but one and the same motion; whereof these are the two terms: as it is in the diffusion of light, and the dispelling of darkness.
Corrupted in the Roman Church.

So that this Doctrine leaves sinners no hopes of pardon in this life, or for ever: for hereby sin is not pardoned, till by inherent Charity it be quite expelled, which is not in this life: or till the sinner be rendered not worthy of punishment, merely by vertue of such Charity, which will never be.

However, those who understand what pardon is, by the light of Scripture will soon discover that this is not the Gospel-pardon; to go no farther than the Text, it clothes (as I said) with every part of it. For, first, by their account, Pardon is by a phylical, or super-physical act of Charity within us: whereas the first word in the Text, (εὐαφείας,) shews that pardon in Justification is a judicial act of God towards us. The perpetual use of the word in Scripture assures us of this: it implies a judicial proceeding, and is set opposite to condemning or accusing. For a Judge to acquit one at the Barr, accused in order to condemnation, is not to qualify him, (that would be to prevent misdemeanors for the future) but to discharge from what he is accused of, as past: nor can they give any instances in Scripture of such use of the word as will bear their notion. Indeed, it is against the usage of the World, and common sense, that a man should be laid to pardon one, by inducing him with good qualities. Secondly, the pardon in Justification is free. A gift of undeserved Grace (as the next words express it.) But their pardon is not free, neither in it self, nor in that which they make the rise of it (inherent Charity). They deface the freeness of it in both, by a conceit of their own merit; and so transform it into another thing than the pardon of the Gospel is, which shall be made apparent when we come to the second part of the Text. Thirdly, the Gospel-pardon is entirely through the redemption that is in Christ (as the next words represent it): But their pardon excludes this redemption, or leaves it but a minute and remote influence into it, if any at all.

The Lord, by Christ's undertaking, is moved to shew mercy to sinners; he shews it by infusing Charity into their hearts, this takes away the fault or being of sin, and that being gone, the defect of punishment vanisheth, and by consequence the obligation to it. So we must pass several stages before we can discover what the redemption of Christ hath to do in the pardon of a sinner; and when we have gone so far, may be at a loss too, as they order the matter: but that will better be shewed in the last proposal.

Moreover, though they will have their pardon do more than meer remission can do; yet they make it fall short of that which is most proper for pardon to do. It quite dissolves not the obligation to punishment.
The Doctrine of Justification is dangerously

ment, but leaves the sinner, when he is said to be pardoned, to suffer, as if he were condemned. He must, for all his pardon, be damned to a temporary hell, (for such is their Purgatory) and there he must be punished in the severest manner and measure, with the greatest suffering of all, as to lasts (the want of the vilen and fruition of God) and the most exquisite tortures, as to senfe, o such as are equivalent to the torments of hell; and all this it may be for 100 or 1000 years, they know not how long. All the pardoning mercies of God, and the redemption of Christ, cannot secure him from this. Sure this pardon looks nothing so like remission, as condemnation.

Thirdly, what we said last, respects those sins which they call mortal; but there is with them another fort of sins which go under the notion of venial, and which in number exceed the other vastly and incomparably. And these sins by their Doctrine are not pardoned, or need no pardon; and so Justification, the free Grace of God, and the redemption of Christ, are excluded hereby, as needless, and unconcerned in them.

The pardon in Justification frees the sinner from eternal punishment; but they teach, that these sins (all of them together) deserve not eternal punishment: q God cannot justly inflict it for them. It is not due to them. If the guilt of all the sins in the World, of this fort, were charged upon one man; or if there were no covenant or promise of God for pardon, says their great Cardinal, (i.e. if there were no Gospel, no Christ) yet a sinner could not be punished for them eternally. So that there is no place for, no need of the pardon of the Gospel as to these sins. Then for the temporal punishment of them, the sinner either must, or may suffer it himself, and so satisfy for it: if he may satisfy for it, there's no need of pardon: if he do satisfie for it, there is no place for pardon. He that suffers what punishment the Law will have inflicted for his offence, neither is nor can be said to be pardoned. r So that plainly by their Doctrine, venial sins have not, or need not pardon of any sort, either in respect of eternal or temporal punishment.

r Non enim remissur quod totaliter punitor; Bellarm. de Purgat. L. I. c. 7. p. 1559.
And yet these venial sins, which need no pardon, are many of them for their quality, great and heinous; for their number, far the greatest of all. As to their quality, their Cæsarii (who are dictators in this business) make what sins they list to be venial. Whereas, by their common reckoning, there are seven mortal sins; even divers of these, by their handling, are shrunk into small faults. They make covetousness and prodigality two, ambition, vain-glory, glutony and y drunkenness, (if it do but half brutifie a man,) the neglect of the publick worship of God, (of all worship indeed which can be truly called so,) and the neglect of charity and mercy to men; (except in such cases which rarely or never fall out;) also common swearing, great irreverence to the Divine Majesty, abhorring of divine things, yea divers sorts of blasphemy and perjury, murder, with others of like nature to be but venial faults. They affign several waies wherein the highest impieties against God, and greatest outrages to men, may pass under this gentle notion, and so need no pardon. This might be clearly shewed, out of the writings of the leading men amongst them, of several orders, and such as have the chief conduct of their confessions, (though the Jesuites were left out,) but it requires a large discourse, and I must not here digress a little.

And, as these sort of sins are great otherwise, so, that they are the greatest of all for number, is no question. Their Church enjoyns but confession once a year, and presumes that any wicked person may give an account, in a little while, to his Confessor, of the mortal sins he commits in a whole year: but of venial sins no account can be given, being so numerous, that they are beyond remembrance or notice. So that by their Doctrine there are very few sins, in comparison, that need pardon, and so few, that need either the free Grace of God, or the redemption that is in Jesus Christ. These corruptions are dangerous and evidently damnable; I have inlisted the longer thereon, because in this point (about pardon) the Romanists are conceived to come neerer the truth and us than I fear they do indeed.

Proceed we now to the second part of the Text, (freely by his Grace,) When the Lord justifies a sinner, he does it most freely. It's an act of mere Grace; it's no way due to us before he vouchsafed it. He owes it not, but gives it, when he is no way pre-engaged by any defect in us. Merit in us is utterly inconsistent with this gracious act. These two are opposite in their nature; and the Apostle plainly expresseth the opposition, Rom. 11. 6. and 4. 4. If it be due by virtue of any act or work of ours, it is debt; if it be debt, it is not grace, the grace of God herein is no grace. If by grace, then it is no more of works, otherwise grace is no more grace.
The Doctrine of Justification is dangerously
grace; but if it be of works, then it is no more grace, &c. Now to him that worketh, is the reward not reckoned of grace, but of debt. The Apostle's discourse cannot be answered with reason, nor evaded with any conscience. And yet the Papists will presumptuously crowd merits of all sorts into Justification. And by this means too, they corrupt this Doctrine dangerously and intollerably: they do it against all evidence of Scripture; they do it to the soul defacing of the glory of free grace, and the redemption of Christ: they do it with great hazard to their own souls. For if they will not be justified freely, if they will stay till they defere it, they are like to be condemned. Yet they will venture, and stick not to ascribe all that they include in their several justifications to some sort of merit. Inherent grace, and pardon of sin, to congruous merit; title to glory, and increace of Grace, (which they make a second justification) to merit of condignity.

Aquinas himself, Manifestum est quod omne meritiurn repugnat gratiae quia ut Apostolus, Rom. ii. 1, 2. q. 4.
art. 56.

Inherent (which they call justifying) grace, and count it (after the a Council of Trent) unanimously the formal cause of justification, by their Doctrine, falls under merit. They mine it indeed, calling it merit of congruity, but it is big enough, how small so-ever they would have it seem, to bid defiance to the grace of God in the Text.

There are some preparatory works which (they say) must go before Justification b as dogmatical Faith; some sorrow for sin, fear, hope, &c. to which justifying is due in congruity, though not in justice; and this duness they express in the definition of congruous merit. It is, says Navar. (after Aquinas and their common gloss) c a good humane act, of one without the grace of God to which spiritual or temporal reward is in some respect and congruity due. Now if justifying grace be due on our account, before the Lord vouchsafe it; he gives it not freely, but only pays what he owes, and is before obliged by us to let us have; d and Bellarmine says this merit is not founded on the promise of God, but in the worth and dignity of the work.

c De natura &

This sort of merit is generally owned by the Romanists. c Soto tells us it is asserted by Scotus, Durandus, Adrian, and in a manner all the School Doctors, whom they call Nominalists, (and this is one division of their Schools). He f says also, that Aquinas (the leader of the other mas, 2 Sum. d.

27, 28. Opinionem communem inseguntur affirmant; tum quod homo ex natura alius posset se disponere ad grativam, tum quod dispo sitio illa esset meritiurn de congruo. Soto ibid. p. 66.
divers) following the common opinion, affirms it likewise, though he would have us think that he afterwards retracted it. But Bellarmine g not acknowledging any such retraction, together with Aquinas, reckons up to us, by name, the chief of the Schoolmen as of this perswication.

Gabriel, and others, de penitentia, lib. 2. c. 12. pag. 945. S. Clara tells us it is certe communis et recepta sententia Scholarum Dns natura grat. Problem. 21.

P. 125.

It's true, there is some difference among them about the name: Some would not have it called Congruous Merit; but all, as i Bellarmin, k Vega, and after him l Santha Clara tells us, agree in the thing. And it is the thing, not the word that is so injurious to the Grace of God, and where- in the corruption and the danger lies, and therein they conspire.

l. l. c. 21. P. 752. k Relle advertit Vega, de re, non est inter Doctores catholicos quod, p. 1 Itaq; de nomine solum est quaesio an ea debant vocari meritem de congnno Sancta Clara, ibid. P. 19.

I need bring no particular testimonies, to shew, that by their Doctrine, pardon of sin falls under this sort of merit: For pardon and inherent Grace are by them involved together, and made one and the same motion; and I have staid the longer on that which is evidence for both, because some question, whether this congruous merit be commonly owned by their Writers. I think it might as well be questioned, Whether the proper merit of condignity be their common doctrine; for there are some among them who dislike this, and scarce more the other, so far as I can compute the numbers.

As for the other particulars (Title to glory) included in the first, and increafe of Grace, which they call a second Justification, the Council of Trent has made it an Article of their Faith, That good works are truly meritorious of both, and denounced thofe accused who deny it; and their Writers unanimously since understand it to be merit of condignity, as o Aquinas express it before. So that these things are due from God upon the account of their Good works in strict Justice, and not alone in congruity. It is not my business to argue against their Doctrine of merit, only let me suggest this which the Text leads me to.

Their opinion of merit makes the special Grace and mercy of God needless: For if a man by what he doth can make heaven due from God in point of Justice, he needs not his Mercy to save him, so long as he is sure the Lord will not be unjust; he is not concerned to regard whether or not he be gracious and merciful. As in a like cafe, when a mans cause requires nothing but Justice, if he be sure the Judg will do him Justice, there is no need at all to be beholdng to him for his mercy. Thus Grace and Mercy being excluded as needless and superfluous, all oblige- ments to love and gratitude, to all ingenious obedience and worship, are taken off, and all fene of Religion like to be razed out of the souls of G g g men.
The Doctrine of Justification is dangerously men. I may forbear telling you that this is of dangerous tendency.

Come we to the third part of the Text, The Justification of a sinner is, Through the Redemption that is in Jesus Christ.

That Doctrine quite overthrows the Justification of a sinner, which removes from it this redemption: but so doth the Popish Doctrine, and thereby tends to make Christ of none effect. For without that redemption, he is not, he cannot be the Saviour of any man. Their errors here strike deep, and tend to undermine the foundation of Christianity. Let me give you an account hereof in respect of the satisfaction, the merit, and the application of this redemption.

1. The satisfaction of Christ is unnecessary, by their Doctrine, there is no need of it for the justifying of a sinner; he may be pardoned and freed from eternal punishment without it. For if the pardon of sin be the abolishing, and utter extinguishing of it, as they teach, it and it be by infused Grace or charity, that sin is thus abolished, as dark by the approach of light, and one contrary by natural consequence, at the presence of another (which is their Doctrine, if I understand it); then there was no more requisite to free a sinner from guilt and blamableness to eternal punishment, but only that Christ should purchase for him habitual grace. Now to purchase this, his merit would serve, and there would be no need of satisfaction. And there are those who seem to acknowledge the former, when they deny the latter.

Then as to the temporal punishment, they leave no place at all for Christ's satisfaction; this is quite excluded here, (though this punishment be no less in their account than the torments of hell, eternity excepted): the sinner must, or may, satisfie for himself, and therefore Christ did not satisfie: otherwise the Lord would take payment twice for one debt, and require double satisfaction for every sin, and punish it ultra demeritum, more than it deserves, which would be cruelty: yea he would not be satisfied when he had satisfaction, which would be unreasonable. Nor is this my inference only, they do as good as acknowledge it: For they grant that Christ did not satisfaction for temporal punishment.

Bellarmine de Justif. lib. 2. c. 7. P. 783.

Satisfactio mediata pro pena etiam temporali quatenus gratiam praebet per quam ipsi nos Domino satisfacimus, Bellarm. de penitentia, L. 4. c. 15. p. 1076. & de Purgat. 1. c. 10. Non quod immediate ipsius satisfactione toleras penam temporalern nobis debitam, sed quod mediata am tollat, quatenus videlicet, ab ea gratiam habemus, sive qua nihil valuerat nostra satisfactio, p. 1369.
Corrupted in the Roman Church.

nishment, but mediately \ by procuring grace for sinners, that they might satisifie for themselves. And if he satisified no otherwise, he satisified not at all; no more than I can be said to travel 100 miles, when I do not stir out of doors, because I help another to a horse, who performs such a journey.

Thus, by their Doctrine of Jusification and Pardon, the redemption of Christ, as to satiﬁcation made thereby, is reduced in a manner to nothing. For venial sins, to which, they say, temporal punishment only is due; they cannot with any reason pretend that satisfaction by him is necessary. For mortal sins, (a small parcel of the inﬁnite multitude of venials considered), habitual grace (which Christ might merit, though he did not satisﬁse) is sufﬁcient to abolish fault and guilt, and so to procure remission, as to eternal suﬀering.

Or, if habitual Grace were not sufﬁcient for this, yet still they make the redemption of Christ insuﬃcient, and so no satisfaction. For notwithstanding all that he hath done and suffered, the Lord is not appealed to those that believe; he will punish, he will inﬁct the torment of hell, for a time at least; how long, none of them can tell; but, without question, (they say) till his justice be satisﬁed, till that be done by themselves, which Christ alone can do, and that will be long indeed, and not end but with eternity. So that it is plain by their principles, that the Lord is not yet satisﬁed by the redemption of Christ? it was not as much as justice required, it was not enough, and so could not be satisfaction. And therefore a Bellarmine concludes suitably enough to their principles; that of the several opinions which are amongst them concerning Christ’s satisfaction and mans: this is the most probable, that there is no actual satisfaction but one only, and this is ours.

2. The merit of this redemption is also by their Doctrine made unnecessary for the purchasing of eternal life, to which we are accepted in Jusification; for they teach that men may (and must, if they will have it) merit it for themselves. Now there is no need of the merit of redemption, if men can, and do merit Heaven; for merit is the worth of what it is paid to deserve, it must be (by their computation) an equal or proportionable in value to it. Now if Christ bring the worth of Heaven, and we must bring the worth of it too; the Lord lets none have Heaven till he have double the value of it, till he receive twice as much for it as it is worth: so that Heaven, upon this account, will be a very hard bargain, however the Lord declares it to be a gift.

There is no avoiding this, but either by making the merit of Christ needless, or the merits of men. The Papists in this case choose rather to make the merit of redemption unnecessary. And indeed, (when they think it adviſable to speak out) they say expressly that there is no need need of the merit of Christ, that we may; thus Vasquez (one of their most eminent writers) d seeing the merits of a just man (faith he) do condignly merit eternal life, as an equal recompence and reward; there is no need that any other condign merit, such as is the merit of Christ, should intervene that eternal life may be had. But how then must we understand them, when they tell us that Christ did merit eternal life for us? They inform us by their Doctrine of Satisfaction: as Christ satisfied for the temporal punishment due to sin mediate, by procuring grace to satisfy for it on our souls; so he purchased life for us mediate, e in that he was worthy to obtain grace for us, whereby we merit life our selves. But, by this account, he did not merit life for us at all, no more than he can be said to confess or repent of our sins; because he obtained grace for us to confess and repent thereof on our selves. This is but to own the merit of redemption, as a Pelagius owned the grace of God; when he said it was grace, for him to form us with wills able to act sufficiently, and perform the office of grace without it.

Besides, secondly, their principles do not allow them to say, that we have inherent grace by the merit of Christ. And that being with them the formal cause of Justification; if it was not procured for us by his redemption, this is quite excluded from being interested in justifying us. And indeed all the interest of Christ's redemption in our justification (and salvation too) is reduced by them to this one point, his purchasing inherent grace for us, (as appears by the premises). So that if this be disclaimed, there will be nothing ascribed to Christ.

Now it cannot be expected, that while they profess themselves Christians, they should, in plain terms, make Christ a Cipher; but they do it by confecquence too plainly. Their other principles render Christ's meriting inherent grace for us, to be needless: and sure we would not do and suffer so much for a needless thing. By their Doctrine of congruous merit, a man destitute of inherent, (or as they call it) justifying grace, may do that which will make it due to him from God. Now that which a man can make due to himself, needs not at all the merit of:
Corrupted in the Roman Church.

of Christ to make it due. The Lord will certainly let him have his due, without the mediation of any other merit.

Yea, if we should rate the word merit & debitum, or donef too, (as Soto would have it); yet if a man can do that upon which justifying grace will necessarily and infallibly follow, there is no need that Christ should purchase it; for it is altogether unnecessary that Christ should merit that for us, which we can make sure to our selves, so as to have it necessarily and infallibly. Now that a man can do thus much, to make such grace sure to him, the Dominicans (the best friends that the grace of God can find amongst the Romanists) do affirm; Dominicus a Soto (a principal, and the leading man amongst them) afferts it, and that upon the express testimony of Aquinas (whofe conduct they are wont in their divinity to follow as Angelical) brought out necessity, not that of constraint, but that of infallibility; Grace is given to him that prepares himself for it, by some help of God. They hold, that when a man doth his endeavour, God will not deny him grace, (there's their congruous merit) and think theyFalve all, by saying, this endeavour must be from divine assistance; but Pelagius acknowledged, that no less than they and Augustine, with other his opposers, take notice of it: yet because he would have grace to be given according to merits (though by merits was understood, not that which deferred it, but any thing done by a finner, in respect of which grace is given, as d Bellarmine confesseth); they condemned him, as evacuating the redemption of Christ, and the grace of God.

infallibilitatis detur gratia, &c, per auxilium Dei preparantij, de nat. & grat. l. 3. c. 12. p. 165. And this divine assistance, others of them say, a graceless person may merit, Prov. 6:16. longe probabilibus sequitur, per opera bona morali, quibus aliquis ante acceptam gratiam faceret quod mortaliter potest, estenus primam gratiam ex congreso illum mervt, quatenus conveniens, & congruum est, ut cum talis fuerit, quantum in illo statu moraliter potest. Deus eum praefat id quod fuerit etiam potest, hoc eft, si homini auxilia affutura fuerint, quibus adjutos potest facilius gratiam consuefi, atque adeo consequatur si fibi non accipit Gregor. de volent, l. de grat, divin. pars q. c. ult.

c Deceztor per bona opera sua extra charitatem meretur de congreso primam gratiam, ibi eft enim quod dam congruitas, quia fuit quod in se eft, Bonavent. 2 Diff. 27. n. 39.

d De gratia & lib. abitio, l. 6. c. 5. p. 659. Gratiam autem secundam merita nostra dave intelligi pares cum aliquid fuit proprium viribus, ratione eujus dedit gratia, etiam in non fuit illum meritus de condigno.

In fine, if a man by their principles could not merit justifying grace for himself: yet still, by their Doctrine, there would be no need of Christ's merits: For they teach that any other just man may merit it for him de congreso, and do so much on his behalf.

&c. Merito con- grui potest al- quis alteri mer- veri primam gratiam, Aquinas, prima secunda, q. 114. art. Bellarmine will have this past all doubts. Sic- curum eft, non possit unum alteri ex condigno gratiam promoveri, ita non dubium eft, possit id ex con- gruo fieri. De Justificat, l. 5. c. 21. p. 969. Bonaventure will have this to be meritus divini, i Diff. 4. c. 8. Et dignitas cum indignitate securum cum vir jusius meritar pecatoris primam gratiam dignitas enim eft ex parte viri judi, 2 Diff. 27. n. 35.
as it would be indecent and incongruous to the bounty of God, to deny him grace. And this is enough to make him sure of it infallibly; seeing the Lord is as far from acting indecently or incongruously, as he is from dealing unjustly.

I need not tell you these errors are dangerous; unless you need be told that there is danger in making Christ signify little or nothing in the justifying of sinners.

The last thing propounded is the application of this Redemption, i.e. of the blood of Christ, or his obedience or his righteousness, (for those are used by the Apostle, as terms of the same import). If we be accepted as righteous, it must be upon the account of some righteousness; we have none of our own that can acquit us before the Lord's tribunal. That of ours will neither satisfy for what is past, nor serve us for the future; it cannot of itself be a good title to life, which has in it just ground for condemnation. The righteousness of Christ is insufficient for all the exigences of our condition. But that it may be our Justification, (Rom. 5. 18.) it must be our Righteousness: and how can that be? We need no other man to tell us, than Bellarmine himself; a The sin of Adam (says he) is communicated in such a manner, as that which is past, can be communicated; that is by imputation. If the Cardinal had not been a mere servant to his hypothesis, he would have followed this so far as the reason of it leads him; and then it would have brought him to acknowledge no less of the righteousness of the second Adam than of the sin of the first: both are past, and no other way to communicate what is past, but by imputation.

This imputation is it which they will deny, and yet cannot but confess. And in their great Champion, we may see manifestly the evidence of truth struggling with the power of interest and prejudice; and prevailing so far as to force from him three or four acknowledgments of this imputation, in that b dispute, where he sets himself with all his might to oppose it.

There are these several considerations, about the imputing this righteousness: first Substitution; Christ satisfied in our stead, i.e. He tendered that which was due from us. Secondly, Acceptance; the Father accepted what Christ performed in our stead, as performed on our behalf. Thirdly, Participation; we have the fruits and advantages of his undertaking, no less than if we our selves had satisfied. Now, the first of these the Romanists assert, the third they acknowledge, and the second they cannot deny, unless they will deny that the Father accepted Christ's perfect performance, on the behalf of those for whom he undertook it by his own appointment. And as this performance, so stated, is that which we mean, by Christ's righteousness: so this acceptance, as declared in the Gospel, in reference to those that believe, includes all that we mean by imputation. Nor need we contend for more, than they cannot, without something like blasphemy, deny, viz. God's acceptance of Christ's satisfaction.
Then doth God impute the righteousness of Christ to a believer, when he accepts what Christ performed for him, as if he had performed it. As we say, then a Creditor imputes the payment of the debt to the debtor, when he accepts of what the surety pays for him, as if himself had paid it. There is ground enough in Scripture to use this for illustration at least.

And by the light hereof, a a mean capacity may see a clear answer to the greatest objections made by the Papists against Christ’s righteousness imputed. 1. Obj. If Christ’s righteousness be truly imputed unto us, then we might be called, and accounted redeemers of the World. Ans. He might as reasonably say, the debtor may be called and accounted surety, because the surety’s payment is accepted for him, 2. Obj. If Christ’s righteousness be imputed to us as if it were ours, then we ought to be accounted as righteous as Christ. Ans. He might as well argue, the debtor is as rich as the surety, because the surety pays his debt, 3. Obj. If by the righteousness of Christ imputed to us, we may be said to be truly righteous; then Christ, by our unrighteousness imputed to him, may be truly called a sinner. Ans. Which is just as if he should say; If the acceptance of the surety’s payment acquit the debtor; then the surety, because the debt is charged on him, (though he contracted it not) is as bad a husband, and as much a bankrupt as the debtor.

I need bring no particular arguments for this. All the Scriptures, where there is mention of Christ’s dying for us, his sufferings, cleansing us with his blood, his obedience to death, &c. (since it cannot be denied but all this was well pleasing to God, and accepted by him, as it was performed on the behalf of believers) are undeniable proofs, that his righteousness is imputed.

And it is a wonder to me, that any who acknowledg the satisfaction of Christ, should have the confidence to say, there is no evidence for this imputation, in the sense expressed; but their causeless prejudice against the word, makes them it seems so full, that they will not take notice of the things we mean, though they meet with it every where in Scripture.

In short, (I fear I have transgressed already, and must omit much of what I intended) if Christ’s righteousness be not imputed, it is not accepted; if it be not accepted, it is not performed, and so there will be no satisfaction, no redemption in Jesus Christ. This is Bellarmine’s own inference when he is disputing against Ohander; to deny God’s accepting Christ’s righteousness for us, (which is by the premises his imputing it to us) is to overthrow the whole mystery of mans redemption and reconciliation.

Use. For Application. Let me admonish you, as you tender the honour of Christ, and the comfort and happiness of your souls; to receive and preserve the Doctrine of Justification pure and untainted, as the Apostle delivered it. Beware especially of the Popish corruptions, whereby they

D. Justifi. l. 2: c. 2. c. 5. p. 5. 38. from his opinion, says he, Corre sequitur, as Christi justitia, Deus non acceptet, which cannot be admitted, nisi quis velit o. tom mysteriorum humanæ redemptionis & rectificationis eiusmodi.
The Doctrine of Justification is dangerously
they have adulterated, and wherewith they have overwhelmed it. Whereas it is, as delivered in Scripture, the foundation of our hopes, and the spring of our comforts: they have made it a link, into which a great part of their other corruptions do run, and settle; or the source from which they rise, and are fed. I might make this good by an account of particulars: but those I have touched already are too many. They tell you, to be justified, is to be sanctified, and so sanctified, as to need no further sanctification after the first infusion: no growth in grace, no increase of holiness, no progress therein, nor mortification neither, no need of, nor reason for it. Their principles are so indulgent, as to free you from such trouble. But then you must not take notice of the many commands of God which enjoy these, and make them necessary; nor the hazard that attends such neglects. They will assure you there is none under the notion which they represent them.

They tell you, you must be justified by your own righteousness, and that a perfect righteousness within you; that's it you must strive to; and if you think much to be justified, as never any sinner in the world was, and know not how to compass a righteousness absolutely perfect within you: they will inform you, that any degree of charity, the least, the weakest, is righteousness in perfection. Thus you may be justified in their way, if you will but have patience till your inherent righteousness in this world be perfect and spotless; or till the lowest degree of it be absolute perfection. If you think it impossible to be justified upon such terms; they will tell you there is nothing more easy. Any of their Sacraments will help you to it; for they all confer justifying grace, and that by the mere external act. You may have it, though you never mind what you are a doing, when you are at Sacrament, to get it. An easy way to Heaven indeed, if it were as easy to be saved, as deluded.

They will have you believe that their Doctrine of Justification is that which we must approve, since it includes pardon; and yet they have no pardon by their Doctrine, while there is one speak of sin in their souls: and so not in this world, and the other is no world for it. And though they fancy, that fault, and stain, and desert, and the very being of sin, is abolished when they have pardon; and will have none, that is not lawful: yet are they not pardoned for all that, but plainly condemned, and into infernal fires they must go, and be there tortured, (after they are so fully pardoned) till themselves have fully satisfied, and paid the utmost farthing. And if they cannot do that, which Christ only can do, viz. satisfies the justice of God for all sorts of sins, as to part of the punishment due to some, and the whole punishment due to others. Their Purgatory will prove Hell, everlastingness not abated: and they will find themselves damned eternally, and cast into Hell, who, by their Doctrine, were betrayed into that state, under a pretence of being Corrupted in the Roman Church.

Your text: "ing punished there a while, in order to Salvation. And if the demerit of sins, which they call venial, prove greater, than they believe (without and against Scripture) they are in Hell, while they dream they are but in Purgatory; for the partition between Hell and Purgatory, is but the distinction made in their fancies, betwixt mortal and venial sins, as to their demerit.

Thus are they in danger to be pardoned, and no wonder, since there is not one sin in five hundred, which, by their Doctrine, needs Christ or his blood for its pardon; there's no need of the blood of sprinkling for the infinite numbers of their venials. They have a sprinkling of their own will serve, an holy water conjured into such divine powers, as to wash away a world of sins, fault and punishment both. This is the fountain (one of them) which themselves have opened for sin and uncleanness; and the other opened by Christ may be shut up, unless there may be some use of it for another sort of sins, but those very few, in comparison.

Indeed, it is the intollerable injury they offer to Christ, his redemption, and the free grace of God, which makes their Doctrine of Justification most intollerable. To strip the redemption which is in Jesus Christ, of its merit or satisfaction, without which it is no redemption: to make the mercy of God needless, or the free exercise of it impossible, and his grace to be no grace; is the way not to be justified, but condemned. This is to seek pardon of former offences, by new crimes, as if one would not receive a pardon without interlining it with something of treasonable import against him who offers it. Yea, it seems an attempt to blot out of the pardon all that is pardoning; and to affront and deface that upon which all the hopes of a condemned sinner depends, and without which no soul can be justified. When ever the Lord justifies any, he doth it freely by his grace, through the redemption that is in Jesus Christ: they that will not be thus justified, are in danger o be condemned.

H h h SERM.