SERMON XLI.

Saul's Conversion.

Астѕ іх. 22.

But Saul increased the more in strength, and consounded the Jews which dwelt at Damescus, proving that this is very Christ.

T T is an undoubted truth, however paradoxical it may feem to natural men, that "who loever will live godly in CHRIST JESUS, shall suffer persecution." And therefore it is very remarkable, that our bleffed LORD, in his glorious fermon on the mount, after he had been pronouncing those bleffed, who were poor in spirit, meek, pure in heart, and fuch like, immediately adds (and spends no less than three verses in this beatitude "Blessed are they who are persecuted for righteousness sake." No one ever was, or ever will be endowed with the forementioned graces in any degree, but he will be persecuted for it in a measure. There is an irreconcileable enmity between the feed of the woman, and the feed of the ferpent. And if we are not of the world, but shew by our fruits that we are of the number of those whom JESUS CHRIST has chosen out of the world, for that very reason the world will hate us. As this is true of every particular christian, so it is true of every christian church in general. For some years past we have heard but little of a public persecution: Why? Because but little of the power of godliness has prevailed amongst all denominations. The strong man armed has had full possession of most professors hearts, and therefore he has let them rest in a false peace. But we may affure ourselves, when JESUS CHRIST begins to gather in his elect in any remarkable manner, and opens an effectual door for preaching the everlasting gospel, persecution will stame out, and Satan and his emissaries will do their utmost (though all in vain) to stop the work of God. Thus it was in the first ages, thus it is in our days, and thus it will be, till time shall be no more.

Christians and christian churches must then expect enemies. Our chief concern should be, to learn how to behave towards them in a christian manner: For, unless we take good heed to ourselves, we shall imbitter our spirits, and act unbecoming the followers of that LORD, "who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, threatned not; and. as a lamb before his shearers is dumb, so opened he not his mouth." But what motive shall we make use of to bring ourfelves to this bleffed lamb-like temper? Next to the immediate operation of the Holy Spirit upon our hearts, I know of no confideration more conducive to teach us long-fuffering towards our most bitter persecutors, than this, "That, for all we know to the contrary, some of those very persons, who are now perfecuting, may be chosen from all eternity by Gon, and hereafter called in time, to edify and build up the church of CHRIST."

The perfecutor Saul, mentioned in the words of the text, (and whose conversion, God willing, I propose to treat on in the following discourse) is a noble instance of this kind.

I fay, a perfecutor, and that a bloody one: For fee how he is introduced in the beginning of this chapter; "And Saul yet breathing out threatnings and flaughter against the disciples of our LORD, went unto the high priest, and defired of him letters to Damaseus to the synagogues, that if he found any of this way, whether they were men or women, he might bring them bound to Jerusalem."

"And Saul yet breathing out." This implies that he had been a perfecutor before. To prove which, we need only look back to the 7th chapter, where we shall find him so very remarkably active at Stephen's death, that "the witnesses laid down their clothes at a young man's feet, whose name was Saul." He seems, though young, to be in some authority. Perhaps, for his zeal against the christians, he was preferred in the church, and was allowed to sit in the great council or

Sanhedrim: For we are told, chap. viii. ver. 1. " That Saul was confenting unto his death;" and again, at ver, 3. he is brought in as exceeding all in his opposition; for thus speaks the evangelist, "As for Saul, he made havock of the church, entring into every house, and haling men and women, committed them to prison." One would have imagined, that this should have satisfied, at least abated the fury of this young zealot. No: being exceedingly mad against them, as he himfelf informs Agrippa, and having made havock of all in Yerufalem, he now is resolved to persecute the disciples of the LORD, even to strange cities; and therefore yet breathing out threatnings. "Breathing out." The words are very emphatical, and expressive of his bitter enmity. It was as natural to him now to threaten the christians, as it was for him to breathe: he could scarce speak, but it was some threatnings against them. Nay, he not only breathed out threatning but flaughters also (and those who threaten, would also flaughter, if it were in their power) against the disciples of the LORD. Infatiable therefore as hell, finding he could not confute or stop the christians by force of argument, he is refolved to do it by force of arms; and therefore went to the high priest (for there never was a persecution yet without a high priest at the head of it) and defired of him letters, issued out of his spiritual court, to the synagogues or ecclesiastical courts at Damafeus, giving him authority, " that if he found any of this way, whether they were men or women, he might bring them bound unto ferufalem," I suppose, there to be arraigned and condemned in the high priest's court. Observe how he speaks of the christians. Luke, who wrote the Ass, calls them "disciples of the LORD," and Saul stiles them "Men and women of this way." I doubt not but he reprefented them as a company of upftart enthusiasts, that had lately gotten into a new method or way of living; that would not be content with the temple-service, but they must be righteous over-much, and have their private meetings or conventicles, and break bread, as they called it, from house to house, to the great disturbance of the established clergy, and to the utter subversion of all order and decency. I do not hear that the high priest makes any objection: no, he was as willing to grant letters, as Saul was to ask them; and won-Vol. VI. derfully K derfully pleafed within himfelf, to find he had such an active zealot to employ against the christians.

Well then, a judicial process is immediately issued out, with the high priest's seal affixed to it. And now methinks I see the young persecutor finely equipped, and pleasing himself with thoughts, how triumphantly he should ride back with the "men and women of this way," dragging them after him to Yerusalem.

What a condition may we imagine the poor disciples at Damaseus were in at this time! No doubt they had heard of Saul's imprisoning and making havock of the saints at Jerusalem, and we may well suppose they were apprised of his design against them. I am persuaded this was a growing, because a trying time with these dear people. O how did they wrestle with Gon in prayer, beseeching him either to deliver them from, or give them grace sufficient to enable them to bear up under, the sury of their persecutors? The high priest doubtless with the rest of his reverend brethren, flattered themselves, that they should now put an effectual stop to this growing heresy, and waited with impatience for Saul's return.

But "He that fitteth in heaven laughs them to scorn, the LORD has them in derifion." And therefore, ver. 3. "As Saul journeyed, and came even near unto Damascus," perhaps to the very gates, (our Lord permitting this, to try the faith of his disciples, and more conspicuously to bassle the designs of his enemies) "fuddenly (at mid-day, as he acquaints Agrippa) there shined round about him a light from heaven," a light brighter than the fun; " and he fell to the earth (why not into hell?) and heard a voice faying unto him, Saul, Saul, why perfecutest thou me?" The word is doubled, " Saul, Saul:" Like that of our LORD to Martha; " Martha, Martha;" or the prophet, "O earth, earth, earth!" Perhaps these words came like thunder to his foul. That they were spoken audibly, we are assured from verse 7. "His companions heard the voice." Our LORD now arrests the perfecuting zealot, calling him by name; for the word never does us good, till we find it spoken to us in particular. " Saul, Saul, Why perfecutest thou Me?" Put the emphasis upon the word wby, what evil have I done? Put it upon the word perfecutest, why perfecutest? I suppose Sand thought he was not perfecuting; no, he was only putting the laws of the coclefiastical court into execution; but Jesus, whose eyes are as a flame of fire, faw through the hypocrify of his heart, that, notwithstanding his specious pretences, all this proceeded from a persecuting spirit, and secret enmity of heart against GoD; and therefore fays, "Why persecutest thou me?" Put the emphasis upon the word me, why persecutest thou me? alas! Saul was not perfecuting CHRIST, was he? he was only taking care to prevent innovations in the church, and bringing a company of enthusiasts to justice, who otherwise would overturn the established constitution. But Jesus says, "Why persecutest thou me?" For what is done to CHRIST's disciples, he takes as done to himfelf, whether it be good, or whether it be evil. He that touches CHRIST's disciples, touches the apple of his eye; and they who persecute the followers of our Lord, would persecute our Lord himself, was he again to come and tabernacle amongst us.

I do not find that Saul gives any reason why he did persecute; no, he was struck dumb; as every persecutor will be, when JESUS CHRIST puts this same question to them at the terrible day of judgment. But being pricked at the heart, no doubt with a fense not only of this, but of all his other offences against the great God, he said, ver. 5. " Who art thou, LORD?" See how foon God can change the heart and voice of his most bitter enemies. Not many days ago, Saul was not only blaspheming CHRIST himself, but, as much as in him lay, compelling others to blaspheme also: but now, he, who before was an impostor, is called Lord; "Who art thou, LORD?" This admirably points out the way in which God's Spirit works upon the heart: it first powerfully convinces of fin, and of our damnable state; and then puts us upon enquiring after JESUS CHRIST. Saul being struck to the ground, or pricked to the heart, cries out after Jesus, "Who art thou, LORD?" As many of you that were never fo far made fenfible of your damnable state, as to be made feelingly to feek after Jesus CHRIST, were never yet truly convicted by, much less converted to, God. May the Lord, who struck Saul, effectually now strike all my christless hearers, and set them upon enquiring after Jesus, as their all in all! Saul faid, "Who art thou,  $K \ge$

LORD? And the LORD faid, I am Jesus, whom thou perfecutest" Never did any one enquire truly after Jesus Christ, but CHRIST made a faving discovery of himself, to his soul. It should feem, our LORD appeared to him in person; for Ananias, afterwards, fays, "The LORD who appeared to thee in the way which thou camest;" though this may only imply CHRIST's meeting him in the way; it is not much matter: it is plain CHRIST here speaks to him, and says, "I am JESUS, whom thou perfecutest." It is remarkable, how our LORD takes to himself the name of Fesus; for it is a name in which he delights: I am Jesus, a Saviour of my people, both from the guilt and power of their fins; "a JESUS, whom thou perfecutest." This feems to be spoken to convince Saul more and more of his fin; and I doubt not, but every word was sharper than a two ed_ed fword, and came like fo many daggers to his heart; O how did these words affect him! a Jesus! a Saviour! and yet I am perfecuting him! this strikes him with horror; but then the word Jesus, though he was a persecutor, might give him some hope. However, our dear LORD, to convince Saul that he was to be faved by grace, and that he was not afraid of his power and enmity, tells him, "It is hard for thee to kick against the pricks." As much as to say, though he was perfecuting, yet he could not overthrow the church of CHRIST: for he would fit as King upon his holy hill of Zion; the malice of men or devils should never be able to prevail against him.

Ver. 6. "And he, trembling and aftonished, said, LORD, what wilt thou have me to do?" Those, who think Saul had a discovery of Jesus made to his heart before, think that this question is the result of his faith, and that he now desires to know what he shall do, out of gratitude, for what the LORD had done for his soul; in this sense it may be understood; *and I have made use of it as an instance to prove, that faith will work by love; but perhaps it may be more agreeable to the context, if we suppose, that Saul had only some distant discovery of Christ made to him, and not a full assurance of faith: for we are told, "he trembling and assonished," trembling at the thoughts of his persecuting a Jesus, and assonished at his own vileness, and the infinite condescension of this JESUS, cries out, "LORD, what wilt thou have me to do?" Persons under soul-trouble, and sore conviction, would be glad to do any thing, or comply on any terms, to get peace with God. "Arife, (fays our LORD) and go into the city, and it shall be told thee what thou shalt do."

And here we will leave Saul a while, and fee what is become of his companions. But what shall we fay? Gop is a fovereign agent; his facred Spirit bloweth when and where it lifteth; "he will have mercy on whom he will have mercy." Saul is taken, but, as far as we know to the contrary, his fellow-travellers are left to perish in their fins: for we are told, ver. 7. "That the men who journeyed with him flood, indeed, speechless, and hearing a consused voice;" I say, a confused voice, for so the word signifies, and must be so interpreted, in order to reconcile it with chap. xxii. ver. q. where Saul, giving an account of these men, tells Agrippa, " They heard not the voice of him that spake to me." They heard a voice, a confused noise, but not the articulate voice of him that spake to Saul, and therefore remained unconverted. For what are all ordinances, all, even the most extraordinary dispensations of providence, without CHRIST speaks to the foul in them? Thus it is now under the word preached: many, like Saul's companions, are fometimes fo struck with the outgoings of God appearing in the fanctuary, that they even stand speechless; they hear the preacher's voice, but not the voice of the Son of Gop, who, perhaps, at the same time is speaking effectually to many other hearts; this I have known often; and what shall we say to these things? O the depth of the sovereignty of Gon! it is past finding out. LORD, I desire to adore what I cannot comprehend. "Even so, Father, for so it seemeth good in thy fight!"

But to return to Saul: the LORD bids him "arife and go into the city;" and we are told, ver. 8. that " Saul arole from the earth; and when his eyes were opened, (he was fo overpowered with the greatness of the light that shone upon them, that) he saw no man; but they led him by the hand, and brought him into Damafeus," that very city which was to be the place of his executing or imprisoning the disciples of the Lord. "And he was three days without fight, and neither did eat nor drink," But who can tell what horrors of K 3 conscience, conscience, what convultions of soul, what deep and pungent convictions of fin he underwent during these three long days? it was this took away his appetite (for who can eat or drink when under a sense of the wrath of God for fin?) and, being to be greatly employed hereafter, he must be greatly humbled now; therefore, the LORD leaves him three days groaning under the spirit of bondage, and buffeted, no doubt, with the fiery darts of the devil, that, being tempted like unto his brethren, he might be able hereafter to fuccour those that were tempted. Had Saul applied to any of the blind guides of the Fewish church, under these circumstances, they would have faid, he was mad, or going besides himself; as many carnal teachers and blind Pharifees now deal with, and so more and more diffress, poor fouls labouring under awakening convictions of their damnable state. But God often at our first awakenings, vifits us with fore trials, especially those who are, like Saul, to shine in the church, and to be used as instruments in bringing many fons to glory: those who are to be highly exalted, must first be deeply humbled; and this I speak for the comfort of fuch, who may be now groaning under the spirit of bondage, and perhaps, like Saul, can neither eat nor drink; for I have generally observed, that those who have had the deepest convictions, have afterwards been favoured with the most precious communications, and enjoyed most of the divine presence in their souls. This was afterwards remarkably exemplified in Saul, who was three days without fight, and neither did eat nor drink.

But will the Lord leave his poor fervant in this diffres? no; his Jesus (though Saul perfecuted him) promifed (and he will perform) that "it should be told him what he must do. And there was a certain disciple at Damascus, named Ananias; and unto him, said the Lord, in a vision, Ananias; and he said, Behold, I am here, Lord." What a holy samiliarity is there between Jesus Christ and regenerate souls! Ananias had been used to such love-visits, and therefore knew the voice of his beloved. The Lord says, "Ananias;" Ananias says, "Behold, I am here, Lord." Thus it is that Christ now, as well as formerly, often talks with his children at sundry times and after divers manners, as a man talketh with his friend. But what has the Lord to say to Ananias?

Ver. 11. "And the LORD faid unto him, Arife, and go into the street, which is called Straight, and enquire in the house of Judas, for one called Saul of Tarsus;" (See here for your comfort, O children of the most high God, what notice JESUS CHRIST takes of the street and the house where his own dear fervants lodge) " for behold, he prayeth;" but why is this ushered in with the word behold? what, was it such a wonder, to hear that Saul was praying? why, Saul was a Pharifee, and therefore, no doubt, fasted and made long prayers: and, fince we are told that he profited above many of his equals, I doubt not but he was taken notice of for his gift in prayer; and yet it seems, that before these three days, Saul never prayed in his life; and why? because, before these three days, he never felt himfelf a condemned creature: he was alive in his own opinion, because without a knowledge of the spiritual meaning of the law; he felt not a want of, and therefore, before now, cried not after a Jesus; and consequently, though he might have said or made a prayer (as many Pharisees do now-a-days) he never prayed a prayer; but now, "behold! he prayed indeed;" and this was urged as one reason why he was converted. None of God's children, as one observes, comes into the world still-born; prayer is the very breath of the new creature: and therefore, if we are prayerless, we are christless; if we never had the spirit of supplication, it is a fad fign that we never had the spirit of grace in our souls: and you may be affured you never did pray, unless you have felt yourselves sinners, and seen the want of Jesus to be your Saviour. May the LORD, whom I ferve in the gospel of his dear Son, prick you all to the heart, and may it be faid of you all, as it was of Saul, behold, they pray!

The LORD goes on to encourage Ananias to go to Saul: fays he, ver. 12. "For he hath feen in a vision a man named Ananias, coming in, and putting his hand on him, that he might receive his fight." So that though Christ converted Saul immediately by himself, yet he will carry on the work, thus begun, by a minister. Happy they, who under soultroubles have such experienced guides, and as well acquainted with Jesus Christ as Ananias was: you that have such, make much of and be thankful for them; and you who have them not, trust in God; he will carry on his own work without them.

Doubtless, Ananias was a good man; but shall I commend him for his answer to our LORD? I commend him not: for tays he, ver. 13. "LORD, I have heard by many of this man, how much evil he hath done to thy faints at Jerusalem: And here, he hath authority from the chief priests to bind all that call upon thy name." I fear this answer proceeded from some relicks of felf-righteoufnefs, as well as infidelity, that lay undiscovered in the heart of Ananias. "Arise, (said our LORD) and go into the street, which is called Straight, and enquire in the house of Judas, for one called Saul of Tarsus; for behold, he prayeth!" One would think this was sufficient to fatisfy him; but fays Ananias, "Lord, I have heard by many of this man (he feems to speak of him with much contempt; for even good men are apt to think too contemptuously of those who are yet in their fins) how much evil he hash done to thy faints in Jerusalem: And here, he hath authority from the chief priests, to bind all that call upon thy name." And what then, Ananias? Is any thing too hard for the LORD? Who made thee to differ? Could not he who converted thee, convert him also? Surely Ananias here forgets himself, or perhaps fears, lest this man, who had authority from the chief priefts to bind all that call upon CHRIST's name, should bind him also, if he went unto him; but the LORD silences all objections, with a "Go thy way, for he is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before the Centiles, and kings, and the children of Israel. For I will shew him how great things he must suffer for my name's sake." Here God stops his mouth immediately, by afferting his fovereignty, and preaching to him the doctrine of election. And the frequent conversion of notorious sinners to God, to me is one great proof, amongst a thousand others, of that precious, but too much exploded and fadly mifrepresented, doctrine of Gop's electing love; for whence is it that fuch are taken, whilst thousands, not near so vile, die senseless and stupid? All the answer that can be given, is, they are chosen wessels; "Go thy way, (fays God) for he is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name beforc the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel: For I will show him how great things he must suffer for my name's fake." fake." Observe what a close connection there is between doing and suffering for Christ. If any of my brethren in the ministry are present, let them hear what preserment we must expect, if we are called out to work remarkably for God: not great prebendaries or bishopricks, but great sufferings for our Lord's name sake; these are the fruits of our labour: and he that will not contentedly suffer great things for preaching Christ, is not worthy of him. Suffering will be sound to be the best preserment, when we are called to give an account of our ministry at the great day.

I do not hear, that Ananias quarrelled with God concerning the doctrine of election; no, (O that all good men would, in this, learn of him!) "He went his way, and entered into the house; and put his hands on him, and faid, Brother Saul;" just now, it was this man; now it is brother Saul: it is no matter what a man has been, if he be now a christian; the same should be our brother, our sister and mother; God blots out every convert's transgreffions as with a thick cloud, and so should we; the more vile a man has been, the more should we love him when believing in CHRIST, because CHRIST will be more glorified on his behalf. I doubt not, but Ananias was wonderfully delighted to hear that so remarkable a persecutor was brought home to GoD: I am perfuaded he felt his foul immediately united to him by love, and therefore addresses him not with, thou perfecutor, thou murderer, that camest to butcher me and my friends; but, "brother Saul." It is remarkable that the primitive christians much used the word brother and brethren; I know it is a term now much in reproach; but those who despise it, I believe, would be glad to be of our brotherhood, when they see us sitting at the righthand of the Majesty on high. "Brother Saul, the LORD (even IESUs that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest) hath fent me, that thou mightest receive thy fight, and be filled with the Holy Ghost." At this time, we may suppose, he laid his hands upon him. See the confequences.

Ver. 18. "Immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales, and he received fight forthwith;" not only bodily, but spiritual fight; he emerged as it were into a new world; he saw, and selt too, things unutterable: he selt a union of soul with God; he received the spirit of adoption; he could

Now was he filled with the Holy Ghost; and had the love of God shed abroad in his heart; now were the days of his mourning ended; now was Christ formed in his soul; now he could give men and devils the challenge, knowing that Christ had justified him; now he saw the excellencies of Christ, and esteemed him the fairest among ten thousand. You only know how to sympathize with the apostle in his joy, who, after a long night of bondage, have been set free by the Spirit, and have received joy in the Holy Ghost. May all that are now mourning, as Saul was, be comforted in like manner!

The scales are now removed from the eyes of Saul's mind; Ananias has done that for him, under God: he must now do another office, baptize him, and so receive him into the visible church of Christ; a good proof to me of the necessity of baptism where it may be had: for I find here, as well as elsewhere, that baptism is administered even to those who had received the Holy Ghost; Saul was convinced of this, and therefore arose and was baptized; and now it is time for him to recruit the outward man, which, by three days abstinence and spiritual conslicts, had been much impaired: we are therefore told, (ver. 19.) "when he had received meat, he was threngthened."

But O, with what comfort did the apossle now eat his food! I am fure it was with fingleness, I am persuaded also with gladness of heart; and why? he knew that he was reconciled to God; and, for my own part, did I not know how blind and flinty our hearts are by nature, I should wonder how any one could eat even his common food with any satisfaction, who has not some well-grounded hope of his being reconciled to God. Our Lord intimates thus much to us: for in his glorious prayer, after he has taught us to pray for our daily bread, immediately adds that petition, "Forgive us our trespasses;" as though our daily bread would do us no service; unless we were sensible of having the forgiveness of our sins.

To proceed: Saul hath received meat, and is ffrengthened; and whither will he go now? to see the brethren; "then was Saul certain days with the disciples that were at Danascus." If we know and love Christ, we shall also love and defire to be acquainted with the brethren of Christ: we may generally know a man by his company. And though all are not faints that affociate with faints, (for tares will be always fpringing up amongst the wheat till the time of harvest) yet, if we never keep company, but are shy and ashamed of the despised children of God, it is a certain sign we have not yet experimentally learned Jesus, or received him into our hearts. My dear friends, be not deceived; if we are friends to the Bridegroom, we shall be siends to the children of the Bridegroom. Saul, as soon as he was silled with the Holy Ghost, "was certain days with the disciples that were at Damaseus."

But who can tell what joy these disciples felt when Saul came amongst them! I suppose holy Ananias introduced him. Methinks I fee the once perfecuting zealot, when they came to falute him with a holy kifs, throwing himfelf upon each of their necks, weeping over them with floods of tears, and faying, "O my brother, O my fister, Can you forgive me? 66 Can you give such a wretch as I the right-hand of fellow-" ship, who intended to drag you behind me bound unto Fe-" rusalem!" Thus, I say, we may suppose Saul addressed himself to his fellow-disciples; and I doubt not but they were as ready to forgive and forget as Ananias was, and faluted him with the endearing title of "brother Saul." Lovely was this meeting; fo lovely, that it feemed Saul continued certain days with them, to communicate experiences, and to learn the way of God more perfectly; to pray for a bleffing on his future ministry, and to praise CHRIST JESUS for what he had done for their fouls. Saul, perhaps, had fat certain years at the feet of Gamaliel, but undoubtedly learned more these certain days, than he had learned before in all his life. It pleases me to think how this great scholar is transformed by the renewing of his mind: What a mighty change was here! That fo great a man as Saul was, both as to his station in life, and internal qualifications, and fuch a bitter enemy to the christians; for him, I say, to go and be certain days with the people of this mad way, and to fit quietly, and be taught of illiterate men, as many of these disciples we may be sure were; what a substantial proof was this of the reality of his converfion!

What a hurry and confusion may we suppose the chief priests were now in! I warrant they were ready to cry out, What! is he also deceived? As for the common people, who knew not the law, and are accurfed, for them to be carried away, is no fuch wonder; but for a man bred up at the feet of Gamaliel, for such a scholar, such an enemy to the cause as Saul; for him to be led away with a company of filly, deceived men and women, furely it is impossible: we cannot believe it. But Saul soon convinces them of the reality of his becoming a fool for CHRIST's fake: for straightway, inflead of going to deliver the letters from the high priests, as they expected, in order to bring the disciples that were at Damascus bound to Ferusalem, " he preached CHRIST in the synagogues, that he is the Son of God." This was another proof of his being converted. He not only converfed with christians in private, but he preached CHRIST publicly in the tynagogues: especially, he insisted on the divinity of our LORD, proving, notwithstanding his state of humiliation, that he was really the Son of GoD.

But why did Saul preach CHRIST thus? Because he had felt the power of Christ upon his own foul. And here is the reason why CHRIST is so seldom preached, and his divinity fo flightly infifted on in our fynagogues: because the generality of those that pretend to preach him, never felt a faving work of conversion upon their own souls. How can they preach, unless they are first taught of, and then sent by Gon? Saul did not preach CHRIST before he knew him; no more should any one else. An unconverted minister, though he could speak with the tongues of men and angels, will be but as a founding brass and tinkling cymbal to those whose senses are exercised to discern spiritual things. Ministers that are unconverted, may talk and declaim of CHRIST, and prove from books that he is the Son of GoD; but they cannot preach with the demonstration of the Spirit and with power, unless they preach from experience, and have had a proof of his divinity, by a work of grace wrought upon their own fouls. God forgive those, who lay hands on an unconverted man, knowing that he is fuch: I would not do it for a thoufand worlds. LORD JESUS, keep thy own faithful fervants pure, and let them not be partakers of other mens fins!

Such an instance as was Saul's conversion, we may be asfured, must make a great deal of noise; and, therefore, no wonder we are told, ver. 21. "But all that heard him were amazed, and said, Is not this he that destroyed them who called on this name in ferusalem, and came hither for that intent, that he might bring them bound to the chief priests."

Thus it will be with all that appear publicly for Jesus Christ; and it is as impossible for a true christian to be hid, as a city built upon a hill. Brethren, if you are faithful to, you must be reproached and have remarks made on you for Christ; especially if you have been remarkably wicked before your conversion. Your friends will say, is not this he, or she, who a little while ago would run to as great an excess of riot and vanity as the worst of us all? What has turned your brain?—Or if you have been close, salse, formal hypocrites, as Saul was, they will wonder that you should be so deceived, as to think you were not in a safe state before. No doubt, numbers were surprized to hear Saul, who was touching the law blameless, affirm that he was in a damnable condition (as in all probability he did) a few days before.

Brethren, you must expect to meet with many such difficulties as these. The scourge of the tongue, is generally the first cross we are called to bear for the sake of Christ. Let not, therefore, this move you: It did not intimidate, no, it rather encouraged Saul: says the text, "But Saul increased the more in strength, and consounded the Jews who dwelt at Damascus, proving that this is very Christ." Opposition never yet did, nor ever will hurt a sincere convert: Nothing like opposition to make the man of God perses. None but a hireling, who careth not for the sheep, will be affrighted at the approach or barking of wolves. Christ's ministers are as bold as lions: it is not for such men as they to see.

And therefore (that I may draw towards a conclusion) let the ministers and disciples of Christ learn from Saul, not to sear men or their revilings; but, like him, increase in strength, the more wicked men endeavour to weaken their hands. We cannot be christians without being opposed: no; disciples in general must suffer; ministers in particular must suffer great things. But let not this move any of us from our steds: thees in the gospel: He that flood by and strengthened Saul, will also stand by and strengthen us: He is a God mighty to save all that put their trust in him. If we look up with an eye of faith, we, as well as the first martyr Siephen, may see Jesus flanding at the right hand of GoD, ready to affist and protect us. Though the LORD's feat is in heaven, yet he has respect to his faints in an especial manner, when suffering here on earth: then the Spirit of CHRIST and of glory rests upon their fouls. And, if I may speak my own experience, " I never enjoy more rich communications from God, than when despised and rejected of men for the sake of Jesus Christ." However little they may defign it, my enemies are my greatest friends. What I most fear, is a calm; but the enmity which is in the hearts of natural men against CHRIST, will not fuffer them to be quiet long: No; as I hope the work of GOD will increase, so the rage of men and devils will increase also. Let us put on, therefore, the whole armour of GoD: let us not fear the face of men: " Let us fear him only, who can destroy both body and foul in hell:" I say unto you, let us fear him alone. You fee how foon God can stop the fury of his enemies.

You have just now heard of a proud, powerful zealot stope in his full career, struck down to the earth with a light from heaven, converted by the almighty power of efficacious grace, and thereupon zealously promoting, nay, resolutely suffering for, the faith, which once with threatenings and slaughters he endeavoured to destroy. Let this teach us to pity and pray for our Lord's most inveterate enemies. Who knows, but in answer thereunto, our Lord may give them repentance unto life? Most think, that Christ had respect to Stephen's prayer, when he converted Saul. Perhaps for this reason God suffers his adversaries to go on, that his goodness and power may shine more bright in their conversion.

But let not the persecutors of Christ take encouragement from this to continue in their opposition. Remember, though Saul was converted, yet the high-priest, and Saul's companions, were lest dead in trespasses and sins: And, if this should be your case, you will of all men be most miserable: for persecutors have the lowest place in hell. And, if Saul was struck to the earth by a light from heaven, how will you be able to fland before Jesus Christ, when he comes in terrible majesty to take vengeance on all those who have perfecuted his gospel? Then the question, "Why persecutest thou me?" will cut you through and through. The fecret enmity of your hearts shall be then detected before men and angels, and you shall be doomed to dwell in the blackness of darkness for evermore. Kiss the Son, therefore, lest he be angry: for even you may yet find mercy, if you believe on the Son of GoD: though you perfecute him, yet he will be your Jesus. I cannot despair of any of you, when I find a Saul among the disciples at Damascus. What though your fins are as scarlet, the blood of CHRIST shall wash them as white as snow. Having much to be forgiven, despair not; only believe, and like Saul, of whom I have now been speaking, love much. counted himself the chiefest sinner of all, and therefore laboured more abundantly than all.

Who is there among you fearing the LORD? Whose hearts hath the LORD now opened to hearken to the voice of his poor unworthy fervant? Surely, the LORD will not let me preach in vain. Who is the happy foul that is this day to be washed in the blood of the Lamb? Will no poor sinner take encouragement from Saul to come to Jesus Christ? You are all thronging round, but which of you will touch the Loan IESUS? What a comfort will it be to Saul, and to your own fouls, when you meet him in heaven, to tell him, that hearing of his, was a means, under God, of your conversion! Doubtless it was written for the encouragement of all poor, returning finners; he himself tells us so: for " in me Gop shewed all long-fuffering, that I might be an example to them that should hereafter believe." Was Saul here himself, he would tell you fo, indeed he would; but being dead, by this account of his conversion he yet speaketh. O that God may speak by it to your hearts! O that the arrows of God might this day. stick fast in your souls, and you made to cry out, " Who art thou, LORD?" Are there any fuch amongst you? Methinks I feel fomething of what this Saul felt, when he faid, "I travail in birth again for you, till CHRIST be formed again in your hearts." O come, come away to Jesus, in whom Saul believed; and then I care not if the high-priests issue out never so many writs, or injuriously drag me to a prison. The thoughts of being instrumental in saving you, will make me sing praises even at midnight: And I know you will be my joy and crown of rejoicing, when I am delivered from this earthly prison, and meet you in the kingdom of Gop hereafter.

Now to God, &c.
